niker 'Die Metopen der Nordostecke des Parthenon' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1911 xiv. 149 fig. 136 photograph, M. Collignon Le Parthénon Paris 1912 p. 29 pl. 39, 25 photograph. In this familiar scene (literary and monumental evidence in Overbeck Gall. her. Bildw. i. 626 ff. Atlas pl. 26, 2 ff, Baumeister Denkm. i. 745 ff. fig. 798 f., R. Engelmann in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1970 ff. figs., H. W. Stoll ib. ii. 2786 f. figs. 4—6, E. Bethe in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 2832, 2835), especially as represented on the fine red-figured oinochóe from Vulci now in the Vatican (fig. 893=Mus. Etr. Gregor. ii pl. 5, 2[a], Overbeck Gall. her. Bildw. i. 631 f. pl. 26, 12, Baumeister Denkm. i. 745 f. fig. 798, P. Weizsäcker in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1800 f. fig. 3, J. H. Huddilston Lessons from Greek Pottery New York 1902 p. 86 f. fig. 16, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 347 no. 7 (by 'The Painter of the Epinetron from Eretria in Athens')), Eros is already so far detached from Aphrodite that he signifies, not the love felt by the goddess, but the love caused by her in the heart of Menelaos. We are well on the way towards later conceptions of the love-god.

In Hellenistic times the favourite types of Eros were those of a boy (e.g. Ausgewählte griechische Terrakotten im Antiquarium der königlichen Museen zu Berlin Berlin 1903 p. 17 pl. 20, Winter Ant. Terrakotten iii. 2. 325 fig. 6 a flying Eros, said to be from Pagai in Megaris, now at Berlin, holding grapes in his raised right hand and other fruits in a fold of his chlamýs: height 0·275[m]) or a mere child (e.g. O. Rayet Monuments de l'art antique Paris 1884 ii pl. (40), 7 with text, L. Heuzey Les figurines antiques de terre cuite du Musée du Louvre Paris 1883 p. 21 pl. 35bis, 5, M. Collignon in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 1607 fig. 2188, E. Pottier Les statuettes de terre cuite dans l'antiquité Paris 1890 p. 129 fig. 44, Winter Ant. Terrakotten iii. 2. 320 no. 12 b a walking Eros, from Tanagra, formerly in the Barre collection (no. 449), now in the Louvre, with his chlamys drawn over his head: height 0·07^{m}) or even a babe (e.g. L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1864 p. 202 f. Atlas pl. 6, 2, Winter Ant. Terrakotten iii. 2. 313 fig. 4 Eros clinging on to the neck of a swan, found at Kerch and now in the Hermitage at Petrograd: height 0·075^{m}); and it is usually assumed that his progressive diminution in size was the natural outcome of fourth-century art with its well-defined penchant for youth and beauty (see e.g. the clear and sensible statements of O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 496 f., 502, 509). It must not, however, be forgotten that this tendency, which was undoubtedly a vera causa, gave fresh effect to the very ancient belief in the soul as a tiny winged form sent forth from the lover to compass his desires. That is the ultimate reason—I take it—why Eros with crossed legs and torch reversed became the commonest of all symbols for Death (A. Furtwängler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1369, M. Collignon in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 1610 fig. 2192 f., O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 508 f., F. Lübker Reallexikon des klassischen Altertums^{8} Berlin 1914 p. 1028, C. Robert Thanatos (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Berlin xxxix) Berlin 1879 p. 44, Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 845, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1050 n. 5, supra p. 309): a resting Eros meant a restful soul. Again, that is why Eros was so constantly associated with Psyche (L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1877 pp. 53—219, M. Collignon Essai sur les monuments grecs et romains relatifs au mythe de Psyché Paris 1877 (inadequate), A. Zinzow Psyche und Eros Halle 1881, A. Furtwängler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1370—1372, O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 531—542 and in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 3237—3256): quasi-bird and quasi-butterfly were kindred conceptions of the soul. Finally, we may discover here one ground at least for the astonishing variety of genre occupations attributed to Eros and the Erotes in the Graeco-Roman age. Readers of these lines will probably remember an eloquent passage in which J. W. Mackail Select Epigrams from the Greek Anthology London 1890 p. 34 f. describes the wealth of imagination lavished by a single writer, Meleagros, upon the figure of Eros. The poet's words could be illustrated by scores of extant works of art, especially terra-cotta statuettes, engraved gems, and mural paintings. By way of relaxation at the end of a somewhat stiff and stodgy Appendix I subjoin a few specimens.

Eros pervaded the universe and swayed all hearts from the highest to the lowest. Time was when Alkibiades had given offence by carrying a shield of gold and ivory with the device of Eros fulminant (Plout. v. Alcib. 16, Athen. 534 E), and an onyx at Berlin dating from the first half of s. iv (?) B.C. very possibly shows this deity with his protégé (fig. 894=C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835 ii. 2. 35 pl. 39, 451, Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 35 no. 355 pl. 7). But in s. i B.C. Eros was represented not merely holding a thunderbolt (Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 160 no. 3708 pl. 29 brown paste: Eros leaning on a pillar with thunderbolt (?) in right hand, sceptre in left and an altar (?) below, id. ib. p. 159 no. 3700 pl. 29 dark brown paste: Eros with thunderbolt in right hand, trident in left) but actually breaking it across his knee (fig. 895=Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 30, 31, ii. 149 a cornelian in the royal collection at The Hague, id. Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 90 no. 1628 pl. 17 paste, Reinach Pierres Gravées p. 52 no. 16, 1 pl. 51 banded agate, cp. Babelon Monn. rép. rom. ii. 8 no. 7 fig. reverse type of a quinarius struck by L. Iulius Bursio in 88 B.C.). A sardonyx formerly in the Poniatowski cabinet shows Eros posing as Zeus himself with thunderbolt and sceptre (fig. 896=T. Cades Collezione di N° 1400 Impronti delle migliori pietre incise, sì antiche, che moderne, ricavati dalle più distinte Collezioni conosciute dell' Europa I^ma^ Classe, A 6, 34 'Genio di Giove': genuine? Lippold Gemmen p. 171 pl. 28, 4 says

Fig. 894.

Fig. 895.

'Römisch'). If Eros thus usurped the position of the strongest god, a fortiori he superseded the strongest hero. Lysippos is said to have represented Herakles as stripped of his weapons by Eros (Anth. Pal. 16. 103. 1 ff. (Tullius Geminus), cp. 16. 104. 1 ff. (Philippos)); and the incident became a commonplace of later art (see e.g. M. Collignon in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 1606 fig. 2184, A. Furtwängler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1366, 2248 f., O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 510, 513 f.). Hence Eros is arrayed in the hero's spoils

Fig. 896.

Fig. 897.

(fig. 897=Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 64, 19, ii. 290 a sardonyx cameo of three layers—translucent ground, figure in opaque white, upper surface brown—at Munich; of Roman date. Cp. Furtwängler ib. i pl. 62, 2, ii. 280, id. Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 73 no. 1111 pl. 14 (shown more clearly in C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835 ii. 3. 13 pl. 51, 636) small convex garnet, p. 135 no. 3020 pl. 25 cornelian, p. 135 nos. 3021—3028 pl. 25 pastes, p. 160 nos. 3713—3716 pastes, p. 237 no. 6482 (G. Winckelmann Monumenti antichi inediti Roma 1821 i. 39 f. κληδοῦχος! pl. 32) sardonyx), or combines them with those of Zeus in a pantheistic scheme (fig. 898=Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 43, 61, ii. 210). In short, Eros plants his foot upon the world (C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835 ii. 3. 13 pl. 51, 633, Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 276 no. 7440 pl. 55 flat cornelian of imperial date. The motif occurs also in sculpture: see A. de Ridder Les bronzes antiques du Louvre Paris 1913 i. 87 no. 613=Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 446 no. 7, Von Sacken Ant. Bronzen Wien pl. 14, 1=Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 447 no. 1, L. Urlichs in the Bonner Jahrbücher 1846 ix. 155 pl. 5, 4=Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 431 no. 4), or takes his seat thereon (fig. 899=Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 30, 37, ii. 149), or with a mighty effort carries the globe as if it were a mere ball

Fig. 898.

Fig. 899.

Fig. 900.

(fig. 900=Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 160 no. 3722 pl. 29 black paste with bluish band). We are meant to draw the moral: omnia vincit Amor; et nos cedamus Amori (Verg. ecl. 10. 69). Psyche is no match for the matchless one. Of countless illustrations I give but two: a convex banded agate in my daughter's possession shows Eros with one foot raised on a step in hot pursuit of a butterfly, the animal form of Psyche (fig. 901); and a flat cornelian in my own collection portrays him riding her round a race-course, the goals of which are marked by her butterfly and his weapons respectively (fig. 902). Such allegories, not to say 'sermons in stones,' were keenly relished in the early imperial age. If Eros thus masters the human soul, he enters into all the pleasures and pains of man. Sometimes he is represented as a veritable fay, doing the deeds of mortals with more than mortal skill. Thus, like 'the merry Grecian coaster' he sails the blue waters of the Mediterranean, but his boat is nothing more than a wine-jar—no wonder he bears the palm (fig. 903=T. Cades op. cit. I^ma^ Classe, A 6, 57, C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835 ii. 3. 23 f. pl. 55, 702 a cornelian in the Poniatowski collection), or even a murex—a cockleshell, as we might say (fig. 904=T. Cades op. cit. I^ma^ Classe, A 6, 59 of unknown provenance). Sometimes, again, Erotes and Psychai play the part of ordinary men and women with no trace of divinity beyond the tell-tale wings of bird or butterfly or beetle and a certain exquisite grace that idealizes all—witness a wonderful band of decoration below the main panels on the wall of a dining-room in the house of the Vettii, which pictures Erotes and Psychai as twining garlands, making oil, coining money (?), fulling clothes, and selling wine (Herrmann Denkm. d. Malerei pls. 22, 24, 25 Text pp. 34—39, A. Mau Pompeii its life and art[2] trans. F. W. Kelsey New York 1902 pp. 331—337 figs. 163, 165—169, A. Mau Pompeji in Leben und Kunst Anhang zur zweiten Auflage Leipzig 1913 p. 48, P. Gusman Pompéi Paris 1899 p. 339 with col. pl. 11 opposite p. 388, H. B. Walters The Art of the Romans London 1911 p. 102 f. pl. 43). Eros can be the schoolmaster and wield the whip

Fig. 901.

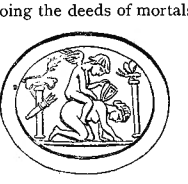

Fig. 902.

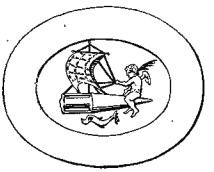

Fig. 903.

Fig. 904.

Fig. 905.

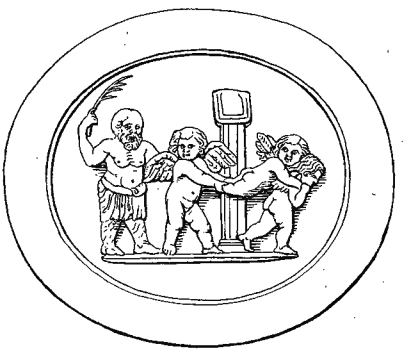

Fig. 906.

(fig. 905 = Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 50, 36, ii. 244, E. Gerhard in the Bull. d. Inst. 1834 p. 124 no. 31 a cornelian from the Nott collection); Eros can be the schoolboy and suffer the whipping (fig. 906 = T. Cades op. cit. I[ma] Classe, A 3, 59 'nel Museo Blacas,' Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems p. 127 no. 1005 an onyx cameo from the Castellani collection).

Fig. 907.

It seems a far call from Eros as a great cosmogonic deity to Eros as a diminutive fairy. But ξυνὸν ἀρχὴ καὶ πέρας, and the expression of the one belief may be curiously like the expression of the other. Thus a cornelian formerly in the collection of Sir Henry Russell represents the Orphic Eros seated in the world-egg, already split open to form heaven and earth (fig. 907 = C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835 ii. 3. 12 pl. 50, 628, E. Gerhard in the Bull. d. Inst. 1839 p. 107 no. 100,

M. Collignon in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 1595 f. fig. 2142, A. Furtwängler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1357, id. Ant. Gemmen i pl. 50, 37, ii. 244), while one of the most charming of all Pompeian frescoes shows a pair of lovers examining a nestful of tiny Erotes (G. Bechi in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1824 i pl. 24, L. Hirt 'Il nido. Idillio' in the Ann. d. Inst. 1829 p. 251 ff. pl. E, 1, Herrmann Denkm. d. Malerei Text p. 26 fig. 5, Helbig Wandgem. Camp. p. 163 no. 821, Guida del Mus. Napoli p. 313 no. 1324, from the Casa del poeta tragico.

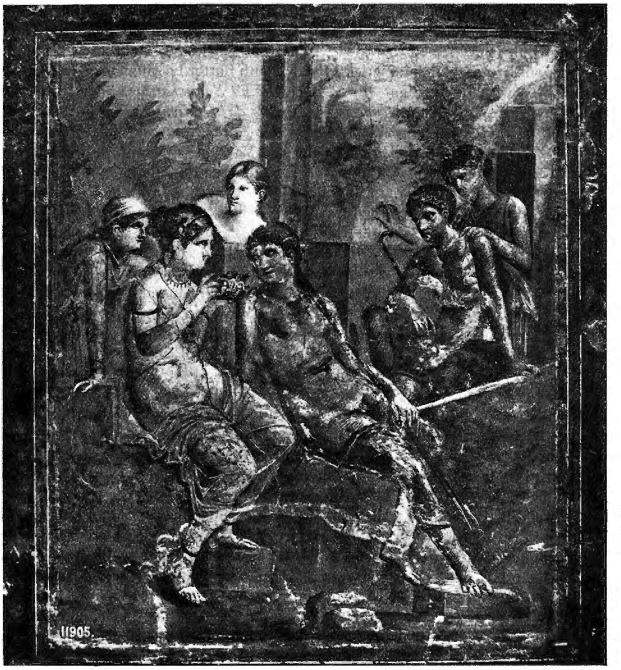

Fig. 908.

Fig. 908, a replica from Pompeii reg. vii. 12. 26, well published by Herrmann op. cit. pl. 17 Text p. 26 = Helbig op. cit. p. 164 no. 823, G. Rodenwaldt Die Komposition der pompejanischen Wandgemälde Berlin 1909 p. 152 ff. fig. 25, is more completely preserved, but less fine: it has only two Erotes in the nest. A second replica, Helbig op. cit. p. 164 no 822, omits the girl in the background to the right. See also J. Overbeck—A. Mau Pompeji[4] Leipzig 1884 pp. 288, 293, 581).

It was pointed out by F. Piper Mythologie der christlichen Kunst Weimar 1847 i. 214—217 that scenes representing Eros and Psyche passed from pagan to Christian sarcophagi ((1) R. Garrucci Storia della Arte cristiana nei primi otto secoli della chiesa Prato 1879 v. 12 f. pl. 302, 2—5, J. Ficker Die altchristlichen Bildwerke im christlichen Museum des Laterans Leipzig 1890 no. 181, W. Lowrie Christian Art and Archæology New York 1901 p. 254 fig. 93, L. von Sybel Christliche Antike Marburg 1909 ii. 44, 70, 72, 98 n. 1, 103 n. 1, 194, 226 fig. 45, C. M. Kaufmann Handbuch der christlichen Archäologie Paderborn 1913 p. 498 fig. 193=a marble sarcophagus, found near the catacomb of Praetextatus and now preserved in the Lateran Museum: it dates from the end of s. iii or the beginning of s. iv A.D. and shows on its main face the Good Shepherd, thrice repeated (bearded in centre, beardless to right and left), amid a vintage of Erotes, which includes a Psyche with butterfly-wings bringing grapes to an Eros with bird-wings. (2) A. Bosio Roma Sotterranea Roma 1632 p. 75 fig., G. Bottari Sculture e pitture sagre estratte dai cimiterj di Roma Roma 1737 i. 105 pl. 28 f., E. Z. Platner Beschreibung der Stadt Rom Stuttgart 1830—1842 ii. 1. 192 f.=a marble sarcophagus from the Vatican catacomb, now under an altar in the chapel of the Madonna della Colonna in St. Peter's: Christ, amid the apostles, adored by a man and his wife; beneath, a large lamb flanked by twelve smaller lambs; behind, vines and two palm-trees (phoenix on left palm); Christ stands in front of a gateway, the arch of which has a Psyche with butterfly-wings on the left, a wingless Eros with torch on the right. [But R. Garrucci op. cit. v. 50 f. pl. 327, 2—4 shows that these figures really represent Sol and Luna respectively.] (3) J. B. L. G. Séroux d'Agincourt Histoire de l'Art par les monumens Paris 1823 iii Sculpture p. 4 pl. 4, 3, 5=a sarcophagus from the catacomb of S. Pietro e Marcellino (Torrepignatarra): the column which divides the front bears a relief of Eros embracing Psyche; the inscription reads Zacinie cesque (for quiesce) in pace. (4) E. Z. Platner op. cit. iii. 2. 450=a sarcophagus in the Convent of S. Agnese at Rome: both ends show Eros and Psyche with reed and urn to betoken water, and a cornu copiae for earth, beneath them; the centre has inlaid a Christian medallion of S. Agnese. [(5) R. Garrucci op. cit. v. 138 pl. 395, 3, L. von Sybel Christliche Antike Marburg 1909 ii. 96 fig. 11=a fragmentary sarcophagus-lid from the catacomb of S. Callisto at Rome with a medallion supported by two Erotes, adjoining which is the group of Eros and Psyche.] Indeed, early Christian art made constant use of Erotes, winged or wingless, in a variety of motifs derived from classical sources (see the examples collected by L. von Sybel Christliche Antike Marburg 1906 i col. pl. 1, 2, 169 fig., 175 f. with 176 n. 1, 179, 1909 ii. 96 n. 3). Eros still figured largely in Byzantine carvings and paintings (e.g. O. M. Dalton Byzantine Art and Archaeology Oxford 1911 p. 216 fig. 130, p. 281 fig. 171). He survived in the putto of the early renaissance (F. Wickhoff 'Die Gestalt Amors in der Phantasie des italienischen Mittelalters' in the Jahrbuch der königlichen preussischen Kunstsammlungen 1890 xi. 41—53, S. Weber Die Entwicklung des Putto in der Plastik der Frührenaissance Heidelberg 1898, O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 516), and is still recognizable on our valentines and Christmas-cards.

It would seem, then, that from first to last Eros was simply and essentially a soul-type. If we raise the further question—Whose soul was represented by the Orphic Eros?—, we get an uncertain reply. According to the early Orphic scheme (supra pp. 1020, 1034), golden-winged Eros sprang from the egg laid by black-winged Nyx Ἐρέβους...ἐν ἀπείροσι κόλποις (Aristoph. av. 695). But who was the consort of Nyx? We are not definitely told. Presumably it was Erebos (so in Hes. theog. 123 ff., Akousilaos frag. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 100 Müller) ap. Damask. quaest. de primis principiis 124 (i. 320, 10 ff. Ruelle)—though schol. Theokr. 13. 1 f. says Ἀκουσίλλας (Kallierges corr. Ἀκουσίλαος) Νυκτὸς καὶ Αἰθέρος (sc. υἱὸν εἶπεν τὸν Ἔρωτα), Antagoras ap. Diog. Laert. 4. 26, Cic. de nat. deor. 3. 44, Hyg. fab. praef. p. 9, 3 ff. Schmidt). But the later Orphic theogonies (supra pp. 1022, 1024, 1034) appear to have regarded Chronos as the maker of the cosmic egg. In any case—and this is the main point—it was not Zeus. In the early Orphic theogony Zeus does not figure at all till the fourth generation (supra pp. 1020, 1034). In the theogony of Hellanikos he is a name for Protogonos in the second generation (supra pp. 1023, 1034). In the Rhapsodies he is one of the children of Phanes in the third generation (supra pp. 1026 ff., 1034). We may reasonably infer that the original form of the Orphic cosmogony was independent of, and perhaps anterior to, the recognition of Zeus.

The later Orphists, however, made much of Zeus and viewed him as a pantheistic power (supra p. 1027 ff.). The primitive notion of Chaos as a gaping or yawning mouth (supra p. 1039) was transferred to Zeus who, according to the Rhapsodies, opened his jaws wide and swallowed Phanes whole (supra p. 1027). Phanes himself was conceived as in some sort a Zeus (supra i. 7 n. 6); for Phanes was Protogonos (supra p. 1026), and Protogonos was 'Zeus the arranger of all' (supra p. 1023). This equation is presupposed by a relief (fig. 909), which seems to have come more than a century since from Rome and is now exhibited in the Royal Museum (no. 2676) at Modena (C. Cavedoni 'Dichiarazione di un bassorilievo Mitriaco della R. Galleria Palatina di Modena' in the Atti e Memorie delle RR. deputazioni di storia patria per le provincie Modenesi e Parmensi Modena 1863 i. 1—4 with lithographic pl., A. Venturi La R. Galleria Estense in Modena Modena 1883 p. 360 fig. 94, F. Cumont in the Rev. Arch. 1902 i. 1—10 with photographic pl. 1, R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 ii. 399 ff. fig. 47, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 61 no. 1). On a thick slab of white marble (0.71^{m} high, 0.49^{m} wide) is an oval band enclosing an egg-shaped recess. The band is decorated with the twelve signs of the zodiac, and grouped about it are winged heads representing the four winds of heaven. Within the recess stands a nude youth encumbered with a plethora of attributes. Above his head and beneath his feet are the two halves of an egg, from each of which flames are bursting. A snake coiled round him rears its head on to the upper egg-shell. He has two large wings and a crescent on his back, the head of a lion growing from his front, and the heads of a goat and a ram projecting from his right and left sides. Instead of feet he has cloven hoofs. In his right hand he grasps a thunderbolt, in his left a sceptre. Cavedoni, followed by Cumont, regarded this singular figure as primarily Mithraic, though both admitted the presence of features susceptible of an Orphic interpretation. R. Eisler has done good service by insisting on its Orphic character. The egg-like recess in which the god is placed, the upper and lower shells from which he has emerged, the strange animal-heads on his flanks (supra p. 1022 f.), the snake's head appearing above his face (supra p. 1023), all mark him as Phanes. He bears thunderbolt and sceptre, because Phanes was one with Zeus. His face is that of the sun-god in Rhodian art, for Phanes was not only called Antauges and Phaethon (supra p. 1026) but also identified with Helios (supra i. 7 n. 6, 311). Cavedoni took the cloven hoofs to be those of a goat: if so, they hint that Phanes was Pan (supra p. 1023). Cumont and Eisler think them bovine: if so, they denote him as Dionysos (supra p. 1026). The relief bears two inscriptions. The first, [E]YPHROSY[NE ET] FELIX on the background of the recess, has been intentionally effaced. The second, P P | FELIX PATER on either side of the zodiac, must be completed as p(ecunia) p(osuit) Felix pater (sacrorum). Eisler ingeniously suggests that the relief in question originally adorned the Orphic sanctuary of a certain Felix and Euphrosyne and was subsequently re-dedicated in a Mithraic temple by Felix alone, since women were excluded from the rites of Mithras. That an Orphic monument should thus be re-consecrated in a Mithraic shrine seems likely enough in view of the fact that at Borcovicium (Housesteads on Hadrian's Wall) Mithras himself was represented in an oval zodiac with an egg-shell on his head (J. C. Bruce The Roman Wall[3] London 1867 p. 399 with fig. on p. 398, id. Lapidarium Septentrionale Newcastle-upon-Tyne 1871 ii. 96—98 no. 188 fig., F. Cumont Textes et monuments figurés relatifs aux mystères de Mithra Bruxelles 1896 i. 395 fig. 315, R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 ii. 410 ff. fig. 48 a relief, 1.40[m] high, 0.77[m] wide, found in situ between two Mithraic altars = Corp. inscr. Lat. vii nos. 645, 646: Mithras' body emerges from the Petra genetrix (Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. nos. 4244, 4248, 4250, cp. 4249); his arms are broken, but his right hand still holds a knife, his left hand a lighted torch), while the lion-headed god, usually described as the Mithraic Kronos or Aion, but more probably explained as Areimanios or Areimanes, the Mithraists' equivalent for Ahriman (F. Legge Forerunners and Rivals of Christianity Cambridge 1915 ii. 254 f.), appears with a snake coiled about him, wings attached to his shoulders and haunches, a sceptre held in his left hand, and a thunderbolt on his breast or at his side (e.g. Clarac Mus. de Sculpt. pl. 559 fig. 1193, Reinach Rép. Stat. i. 296 no. 3, F. Lajard Introduction à l'étude du culte public et des mystères de Mithra en orient et en occident Paris 1847 pl. 70, C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835 ii. 4. 71 f. pl. 75, 967, F. Cumont Textes et monuments figurés relatifs aux mystères de Mithra Bruxelles 1896 ii. 238 f. fig. 68, id. in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 3039 fig. 1, R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 ii. 412 f. fig. 50 a statue in white marble (1.65^{m} high, 0.47^{m} wide at base), found at Ostia in 1797 by the English painter R. Fagan and now erected at the entrance of the Vatican Library: the four wings are adorned with symbols of the seasons, viz. the left upper wing with dove and swan, the right upper wing with corn-ears, the right lower wing with grapes, the left lower wing with two palm-trees and reeds; the hands hold keys and a sceptre; the breast is marked with a thunderbolt; the supporting slab shows hammer and tongs to left, caduceus, cock, and pine-cone to right, with an inscription (Corp. inscr. Lat. xiv no. 65 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4212 C. Valeri|us Heracles pat(er) | et C. Valerii | Vitalis et Nico|mes (sic) sacerdo|tes s(ua) p(e)c(unia) p(o)s(ue)r(unt) | D. d. idi. Aug. imp. | Com. | VI et | Septi|miano | cos. = Aug. 13, 190 A.D.). H. Dütschke Antike Bildwerke in Oberitalien Leipzig 1878 iii. 180 f. no. 367, F. Cumont Textes et monuments figurés relatifs aux mystères de Mithra Bruxelles 1896 ii. 258 f. fig. 96, id. Die Mysterien des Mithra[2] trans. G. Gehrich Leipzig 1911 p. 215 n. 1 pl. 2, 4 (= my fig. 910), Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 477 no. 7 a statue in white Italian marble (1.15^{m} high, 0.35^{m} wide) in the Uffizi at Florence: the god wears a sleeved garment; two slot-holes in his back show where the shoulder-wings were attached; his right hand held a key, his left a sceptre; the upper part of the thunderbolt at his side takes the form of a human head; his feet with the sphere on which he stands are restored).

Fig. 909.

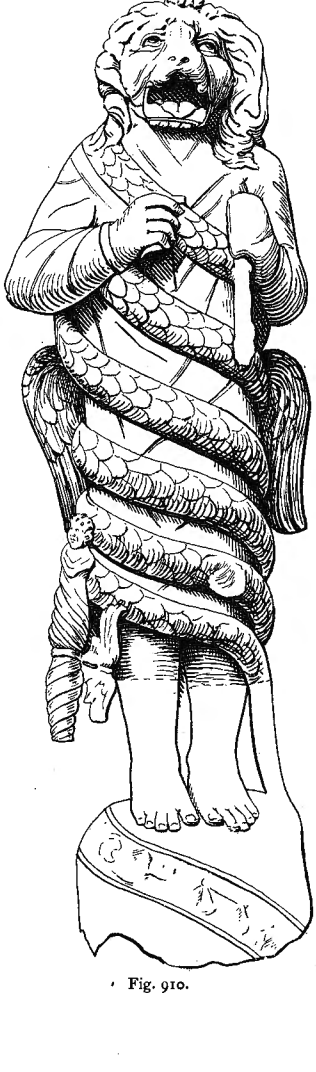

Fig. 910.

APPENDIX H.

ZEUS KTÉSIOS.

(1) The Jars of Zeus Ktésios.

Any discussion of Zeus Ktésios must start from the locus classicus in Athen. 473 B—C ΚΑΔΙΣΚΟΣ. Φιλήμων ἐν τῷ προειρημένῳ συγγράμματι (sc. Philemon the Atticist, on whom see W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[3] München 1898 p. 771 n. 3) ποτηρίου εἶδος. ἀγγεῖον δ' ἐστὶν ἐν (M. P. Nilsson would delete ἐν) ᾧ τοὺς Κτησίους Δίας ἐγκαθιδρύουσιν, ὡς Ἀντικλείδης φησὶν ἐν τῷ Ἐξηγητικῷ (E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 2426, ii. 2597 f. makes it highly probable that the reference is to the Ἐξηγητικόν of Autokleides, not Antikleides,—a valuable source for traditional rites) γράφων οὕτως "Διὸς Κτησίου σημεῖα (G. Kaibel cj. σιπύας) ἱδρύεσθαι χρὴ ὧδε. καδίσκον καινὸν (κενὸν with αι above ε cod. P.) δίωτον ἐπιθηματοῦντα στέψαι τὰ (so Villebrun and C. F. W. Jacobs for στέψαντα. K. W. Dindorf would follow Jacobs, or else read στέψαντα τὰ) ὄτα ἐρίῳ λευκῷ καὶ ἐκ τοῦ ὤμου τοῦ δεξιοῦ καὶ ἐκ τοῦ μετώπου τοῦ κροκίου[1] καὶ (K. W. Dindorf would omit καὶ) ἐσθεῖναι (so codd. A.B. ἐσθῆναι cod. P. edd. V. L.) ὅ τι ἂν εὕρῃς καὶ εἰσχέαι (so J. Schweighäuser for εἴσχεαι cod. C. ἴσχεται cod. P. edd. V. L.) ἀμβροσίαν. ἡ δ' ἀμβροσία ὕδωρ ἀκραιφνές, ἔλαιον, παγκαρπία. ἅπερ ἔμβαλε." Cod. C. epitomizes as follows: φησί που Διογένης. εἶτα εἴσχεαι ἀμβροσίαν. ἡ δ' ἀμβροσία, ὕδωρ ἀκραιφνὲς, ἔλαιον, παγκαρπία· ἅπερ ἔμβαλε. For the word τοῦ κροκίου[1], which I have marked as corrupt, no very satisfactory emendation has been proposed. I. Casaubon cj. ἄωτον κρόκινον κρεμαννύναι, 'lanam suspendito coloris crocei.' Villebrun cj. καὶ ἐκ τοῦ ὤμου τοῦ δεξιοῦ τε καὶ ἐκ τοῦ μετώπου τι κρόκινον ἀρθῆναι (meaning ἀρτηθῆναι!), ὅ τι ἂν εὕρῃς. C. F. W. Jacobs cj. καὶ ἐκ τοῦ ὤμου τοῦ δεξιοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ ἐκ τοῦ μετώπου κρόκινον κάλυμμα ἐσθῆναι. G. Kaibel cj. < καθέσθαι τὰ ἄκρα > τοῦ κροκίου, 'to let down the ends of the thread.' Tresp Frag. gr. Kultschr. p. 47 keeps ἐκ τοῦ μετώπου τοῦ κροκίου, taking κροκίου in the sense of κροκίνου, 'from its forehead smeared with saffron.' But 'τοῦ κροκίου' is a vox nihili; and there is, to my thinking, much difficulty in ἐσθεῖναι ὅ τι ἂν εὕρῃς. I suspect that we ought to read καὶ ἐκ τοῦ ὤμου τοῦ δεξιοῦ καὶ ἐκ τοῦ μετώπου κρόκινόν τι ἐκτεῖναι, ὅ τι ἂν εὕρῃς, and to translate the whole extract as follows: 'The right way to set up the signs of Zeus Ktésios is this. Take a new jar with two ears and a lid to it (ἐπιθηματοῦντα is adj.) and wreath its ears with white wool, and stretch a piece of yellow—anything you can find—from its right shoulder and its forehead, and pour ambrosia into it. Ambrosia is a mixture of pure water, olive oil, and all manner of fruits: empty these ingredients in.'

Fig. 911.

(2) The Jars of Zeus Ktésios funereal in character.

The use of the terms ὦτα, ὦμος, μέτωπον reminded Miss Harrison (Themis p. 299) 'of the anthropoid vases of the Troad.' But, though such language may have originated in connexion with Gesichtsurnen (vide Forrer Reallex. pp. 275, 419 and especially J. Schlemm Wörterbuch zur Vorgeschichte Berlin 1908 pp. 173—176 figs. a—i), we cannot safely infer that the kadiskos of Zeus Ktésios was of human or partially human shape. The description of it given above recalls rather certain vase-forms developed out of the primitive píthos (H. B. Walters History of Ancient Pottery London 1905 i. 159) such as the large lidded amphora of the 'Dipylon' style, or its lineal descendants (A. Milchhöfer in the Ath. Mitth. 1880 v. 177 f., A. Brückner—E. Pernice ib. 1893 xviii. 143 ff., P. Wolters in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1899 xiv. 128 ff., F. Poulsen Die Dipylongräber und die Dipylonvasen Leipzig 1905 pp. 18 ff., 45 ff.) the próthesis-vase of the sixth century and the loutrophóros of the fifth. Now all these vases were connected with death and the grave. The 'Dipylon' amphora, of which I figure a typical specimen (Collignon—Couve Cat. Vases d'Athènes p. 40 f. no. 196 Planches p. 5 pl. 11, A. Furtwängler in the Arch. Zeit. 1885 xliii. 131, 139 figs., Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art vii. 174 fig. 58, 226 fig. 98, S. Wide in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1899 xiv. 196 f. fig. 61. My fig. 911 is from a photograph. Height with lid 0·90^{m}), stood half-sunk beneath the surface of the ground (cp. A. Brückner—E. Pernice in the Ath. Mitth. 1893 xviii. 92 fig. 4 = Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art vii. 56 fig. 4) and—since its bottom is holed—served to convey liquid offerings to the dead beneath it (F. Poulsen op. cit. p. 19 'die Vase diente als Hohlaltar, durch welchen man die flüssigen Opfer Milch und Honig, Öl und Wein, vielleicht auch das Blut der Opfertiere hinabströmen lassen konnte'). The lid with its handle in the shape of a vase turned upside down is suggestive of drink-offerings. The procession of chariots above and warriors below would delight the heart of the dead. And snakes moulded in relief round the rim, round the base of the neck, and up either handle sufficiently indicate the funereal character of the whole. The próthesis-vase was likewise set up over the grave, as we see from a very remarkable example found at Cape Kolias and now at Athens (Collignon—Couve Cat. Vases d'Athènes p. 212 ff. no. 688 Planches p. 14 f. pl. 30; A. Conze in the Ann. d. Inst. 1864 xxxvi. 183 ff. with fig., Mon. d. Inst. viii pl. 4, 1^{a}—1^{e}, pl. 5, 1^{f}—1^{h} = Reinach Rép. Vases

i. 164, 1—5, 165, 1—3, H. von Rohden in Baumeister Denkm. iii. 1974 f. fig. 2114, É. Michon in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. ii. 1333 fig. 3280, É. Cuq ib. ii. 1377 fig. 3345, 1378 fig. 3346, M. Collignon ib. iii. 1319 fig. 4561, O. Crusius in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1149 fig. 5, P. Wolters in the Ath. Mitth. 1891 xvi. 379 no. 11 fig., Miss J. E. Harrison in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1899 xix. 219 fig. 4, ead. Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 235 fig. 53, Themis p. 290 f. fig. 77. I reproduce the drawings given in the Mon. d. Inst. loc. cit. Height 0·64[m]). The body of the vase shows two successive scenes: (A) the dead man, laid out on a bed, is surrounded by mourners; beside one of them is the word ΟΙΑΡΟΙ (S. Reinach

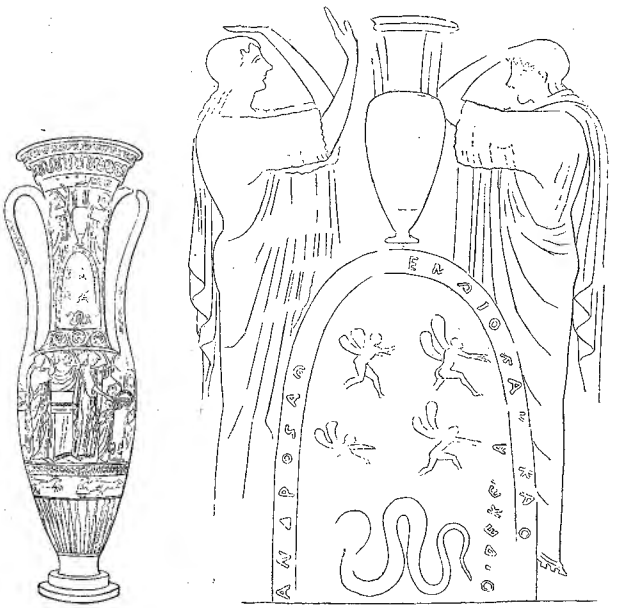

Fig. 912.

loc. cit. suggests οἶμοι (?); but cp. Souid. s.v. οἴαροι· γυναῖκες). (B) The coffin is lowered into the grave by four men, one of whom removes the pall. Mourners stand to right and left; and there is a tree in the background. Beneath both scenes is a race of four chariots, the goal appearing between two of them. The neck of the vase continues the same sequence of scenes: (A′) In the centre rises an omphaloid tomb painted white. Within it flit four souls represented as small winged eídola; below them is a snake. Round the edge of the tomb runs an inscription, which P. Pervanoglu took to be

ΑΝΔΡΟϟΛ.....ΟΙΟΓΑV·ΚΑ·ΟΙΕΝΘΑΔΕ ΚΕΙΜΑΙ

S. A. Kumanudis (Ann. d. Inst. 1864 xxxvi. 197 n. 2) transcribed the latter part of it as follows :

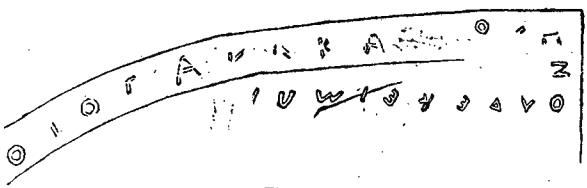

Fig. 913.

A. Conze's illustration is based on a copy by A. Postolakkas. The line was convincingly read by C. Keil: ἀνδρὸς ἀποφθιμένοιο ῥάκος κακὸν ἐνθάδε κεῖμαι—a curiously cynical hexameter. The use of ῥάκος to denote a corpse is defended by Anth. Pal. 7. 380. 6 f. (Krinagoras) κεῖται δὲ τῇδε τὠλιγηπελὲς ῥάκος | Εὐνικίδαο, σήπεται δ' ὑπὸ σποδῷ, cp. ib. 5. 20. 3 (Rufinus) σῶμα ῥακῶδες and Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. vi. 2334 D f. On the tomb is placed a vase resembling in shape that which is here described ; and mourners to right and left make lamentation. (B') A procession of four mourners, two of whom bear offerings (?), approaches the grave. Among the patterns surrounding the neck of the vase will be seen a wavy line clearly derived from the old sepulchral snake. The paintings of this important vase have, unfortunately, suffered much since its discovery: nothing now remains of the inscriptions, the winged souls, or the snake, and little is left of the tomb. Finally, the loutrophóros was carved or painted over the tomb of the unmarried (infra § 9 (d) ii (β)). 'So war die Grabvase, deren Entwickelung von Hohlaltar zu Monument wir verfolgt haben, aus einem Monument zum Symbol geworden' (F. Poulsen op. cit. p. 47).

The 'Dipylon' amphora, the próthesis-vase, the loutrophóros, each in turn served as the σῆμα or σημεῖον of the dead beneath it. In view of these facts how are we to interpret the jars called by Autokleides the σημεῖα of Zeus Ktésios? They too may well have been funereal in character. Hence their prophylactic wreathing with white wool and yellow stuff (?). Hence too the necessity for filling them with a mixture of water, oil, and seeds, known as ambrosía (cp. Pausanias the Atticist ap. Eustath. in Il. p. 976, 4 f. κατὰ Παυσανίαν, ὃς λέγει καὶ ὅτι ἀμβροσία γένος τι συνθέσεως ἐξ ὕδατος ἀκραιφνοῦς καὶ μέλιτος καὶ ἐλαίου < καὶ (inserui) > παγκαρπίας): such offerings had come to be conceived as food given by the living to the dead (see e.g. P. Stengel Opferbräuche der Griechen Leipzig and Berlin 1910 pp. 129 ff., 183 ff.), but were originally a magical means of enabling the dead to make food for the living (see Miss J. E. Harrison Themis p. 291 ff.). Similar in character was the offering made to the chthonian Zeus in Eur. frag. 912 Nauck² (from the Cretes, according to L. C. Valckenaer) ap. Clem. Al. strom. 5. 11 p. 373, 3 ff. Stählin σοὶ τῶν πάντων μεδέοντι χοὴν | πέλανόν τε φέρω (so H. Grotius for φέρων cod. L.), Ζεὺς εἴτ' Ἀΐδης | ὀνομαζόμενος στέργεις· σὺ δέ μοι | θυσίαν ἄπυρον (so Abresch for ἄπορον L.) παγκαρπείας (so Grotius for παγκαρπίας L.) | δέξαι πλήρη προχυθεῖσαν (so Valckenaer for προχυτίαν L.). | σὺ γὰρ ἔν τε θεοῖς τοῖς οὐρανίδαις | σκῆπτρον τὸ Διὸς μεταχειρίζεις (so H. van Herwerden for μεταχειρίζων L.) | χθονίων τ' (so F. Sylburg for δ' L.) Ἀΐδῃ (ἄιδῃ L.) μετέχεις ἀρχῆς. | πέμψον δ' ἐς (so A. Nauck for μὲν L.) φῶς ψυχὰς ἐνέρων (so Nauck for ἀνέρων L.) | τοῖς βουλομένοις (Grotius cj. πέμψον μὲν φῶς ψυχαῖς ἀνέρων ταῖς βουλομέναις) ἄθλους· προμαθεῖν (so Grotius for προσμαθεῖν L.) |

πόθεν ἔβλαστον, τίς ῥίζα κακῶν, | τίνα (F. H. M. Blaydes cj. τίνι) δεῖ (so Grotius for δὴ L.) μακάρων ἐκθυσαμένους (so Valckenaer for ἐκθυσαμένοις L.) | εὑρεῖν μοχθῶν ἀνάπαυλαν.

(3) Zeus Ktésios as Forefather buried in the House.

Accordingly I would venture to put forward the following hypothesis with regard to Zeus Ktésios and his jars. In Italy the forefather of the family, once buried in the house (Serv. in Verg. Aen. 5. 64 etiam domi suae sepeliebantur: unde orta est consuetudo ut dii Penates colantur in domibus, ib. 6. 152 apud maiores...omnes in suis domibus sepeliebantur. unde [ortum est ut Lares colerentur in domibus, unde] etiam umbras larvas vocamus, nam dii Penates alii sunt. inde est quod etiam Dido cenotaphium domi fecit marito, Isid. orig. 15. 11. 1 prius autem quisque in domo sua sepeliebatur. These statements are supported by the custom of burying infants less than forty days old in a subgrundarium (Fulgent. expos. serm. ant. 7; cp. Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 27571 = Orelli Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4545 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 7938) and by the myths concerning the birth of Romulus (Plout. v. Rom. 2), Servius Tullius (Plin. nat. hist. 36. 204), and Caeculus (Serv. in Verg. Aen. 7. 678). They are rightly emphasised by F. Granger The Worship of the Romans viewed in relation to the Roman Temperament London 1895 p. 60, id. in the Class. Rev. 1897 xi. 32 f. W. Warde Fowler ib. 1896 x. 394 f., 1897 xi. 33 ff. attempted to minimise their force. But J. E. King ib. 1903 xvii. 83 f. suggested that infants were so buried in order to ensure their re-birth, and Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art i. 105 n. 4 extends his suggestion to cover 'The widespread custom of burying the dead in the house.' A good example of this practice in the Semitic area is the case of Samuel, who was 'buried...in his house at Ramah' (1 Sam. 25. 1). At Bibracte the capital of the Aedui (Mont Beuvray in Saône-et-Loire) Gallic graves of the third La Tène period (s. i B.C.) were found beneath the houses, often under the hearth: see M. Hoernes Natur- und Urgeschichte des Menschen Wien und Leipzig 1909 ii. 128, 440, cp. J. Déchelette Manuel d'archéologie préhistorique Paris 1914 ii. 3. 948 ff. for an aperçu of the town), was known as the Lar or Genius of the home (Plaut. merc. 834 familiai Lar pater, Laberius frag. 54 ap. Non. Marc. p. 172, 26 f. Lindsay Laberius in Imagine: Genius generis nostri parens. For the identification of the Lar with the Genius see further Censorin. de die nat. 3. 2 eundem esse Genium et Larem multi veteres memoriae prodiderunt, in quis etiam Granius Flaccus in libro quem ad Caesarem de indigitamentis scriptum reliquit, interp. Serv. (i.e. Donatus, according to E. K. Rand in the Class. Quart. 1916 x. 158 ff.) in Verg. Aen. 3. 63 Appuleius de Daemonio Socratis (? a paraphrase of Apul. de deo Socr. p. 152 f. Oudendorp): 'Manes,' inquit, 'animae dicuntur melioris meriti, quae in corpore nostro Genii dicuntur, corpori renuntiantes Lemures; cum domos incursionibus infestarent, Larvae appellabantur; contra, si aequi et faventes essent, Lares familiares,' Auson. technop. de dis 9 nec Genius domuum, Larunda progenitus Lar, cp. Ov. fast. 3. 57 f. Wissowa Rel. Kult. Röm.[2] p. 175 denies their identity on grounds that seem to me inadequate) and was conceived as a Iupiter (so at least I have argued in Folk-Lore 1905 xvi. 296 ff. noting that the Genius of a man corresponded with the Iuno of a woman (T. Birt in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1614 f., M. Ihm ib. ii. 615 ff.), that according to Caesius (Bassus?), who professed to follow Etruscan authorities, the Penates were Fortuna, Ceres, the Genius Iovialis, and the masculine Pales (Caesius ap. Arnob. adv. nat. 3. 40, cp. ib. 3. 43 Ceres, Pales, Fortuna, Iovialis aut Genius)—this Genius Iovialis being evidently a family god of some kind, not to be confused with the Genius Iovis (Min. Fel. Oct. 29. 5, Corp. inscr. Lat. i no. 603, 16 with tab. lith. 82=ix no. 3513, 16=Orelli Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 2488 fin., cp. no. 1730,=Wilmanns Ex. inscr. Lat. no. 105, 25=Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4906, 16) who was but the Genius of an anthropomorphic Iupiter—, that the Genius was not only affiliated to Iupiter (Fest. p. 359 a 14 f. Müller, p. 492, 6 f. Lindsay Tages nomine, Geni filius, nepos Iovis) but actually identified with Iupiter (Aug. de civ. Dei 7. 13 quid est Genius? ...hic est igitur quem appellant Iovem. This, however, is a quasi-philosophical conclusion based on the general similarity between the functions of the Genius and those of Iupiter as conceived by Valerius Soranus in his famous couplet (ib. 7. 9, cp. Myth. Vat. 3 prooem. p. 152, 28 ff. Bode): Iuppiter omnipotens, regum rerumque deumque (rerum regumque repertor Myth. Vat. G. H. Bode cj. creator) | progenitor genetrixque (genitrixque Myth. Vat.) deum, deus unus et omnes (idem Myth. Vat.)), etc.), who appeared in the form of a snake (Herrmann Denkm. d. Malerei pl. 48 Text p. 59, A. Mau in the Röm. Mitth. 1896 xi. 29, id. Pompeii: its Life and Art[2] trans. F. W. Kelsey New York 1902 p. 271 f. fig. 127, A. Sogliano in the Mon. d. Linc. 1898 viii. 268, Talfourd Ely in Archæologia 1897 lv. 305 ff. a painting on the back wall of a shrine in the Casa dei Vettii at Pompeii, which shows the Genius with patera in right hand, acerra opened in left, and a face resembling that of Nero (supra p. 96); he stands between two dancing Lares, each of whom bears a goat-rhytón (cp. supra i. 108) and a pail; beneath him a great bearded and crested snake approaches an altar, on which is an egg and fruit. For the snake as a manifestation of the Genius see further T. Birt in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1623 ff. fig., J. A. Hild in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. ii. 1490 with fig. 3543, W. F. Otto in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 1161 f., E. Küster Die Schlange in der griechischen Kunst und Religion Giessen 1913 pp. 146 n. 3, 153 f.; and for the egg as an offering to the dead, M. P. Nilsson Das Ei im Totenkultus der Griechen Lund 1901 pp. 3—12 figs. 1, 2 (Sonderabdruck aus Från Filologiska Föreningen i Lund, Språkliga uppsatser ii Lund 1902)).

Similarly we may suppose without any undue temerity that in Greece the forefather of the family, once buried in the house (Plat. Minos 315 D οἱ δ' αὖ ἐκείνων ἔτι πρότεροι αὐτοῦ καὶ ἔθαπτον ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοὺς ἀποθανόντας. No other literary testimony to this custom can be cited; but the assertion here made is fully borne out by actual remains. H. Bulle Orchomenos München 1907 i. 67 f. shows that at Orchomenos in Boiotia during early Mycenaean times (c. 1700—1500 B.C.) the dead were buried as a rule inside the houses, and quotes parallels from Thorikos, Athens, and Eleusis. In the small settlement of early Mycenaean date on the summit of Mt Velatouri at Thorikos round, or in two cases oblong, holes were found hewn in the rock within the houses: the round holes had certainly served as graves, for in them stood large ptíthoi the upper parts of which were safeguarded by circular walls, and in these ptíthoi were remains of human bones (B. Staes in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1893 p. 15 f. pl. B, 3, id. in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1895 p. 228 ff. pl. 11, 3, Frazer Pausanias v. 524 f., A. J. B. Wace—M. S. Thompson Prehistoric Thessaly Cambridge 1912 p. 222). At Athens a grave of unbaked brick, dating from the same period and containing four bodies, one of them in a crouching attitude, was discovered between 'Pelasgian' house-walls on the S. slope of the Akropolis (A. N. Skias in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1902 p. 123 ff. figs. 1—4, A. J. B. Wace—M. S. Thompson op. cit. p. 221). In the nekropolis at Eleusis two graves of unbaked brick were found under hearths and mistaken for small altars (A. N. Skias in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1898 p. 49 ff.

with pl., A. J. B. Wace—M. S. Thompson op. cit. p. 222). At Tiryns beneath the walls of the older Mycenaean palace five small stone-built graves with crouched bodies have come to light (W. Dörpfeld in the Ath. Mitth. 1907 xxxii p. iii, R. M. Dawkins in The Year's Work in Class. Stud. 1907 p. 14). In Thessaly graves have been repeatedly found within houses of the bronze age (Ch. Tsountas Αἱ προϊστορικαὶ ἀκροπόλεις Διμηνίου καὶ Σέσκλου Athens 1908 p. 131 'οἱ νεκροὶ ἐθάπτοντο ἐντὸς τῶν οἰκιῶν ἢ παρ' αὐτάς,' ib. p. 383 'τὸ ἔθιμον νὰ θάπτωσι τοὺς νεκροὺς ἐντὸς τῶν οἰκιῶν'), was viewed as Zeus; for in prehistoric times he had been the representative of the sky-god to his clan. Herein, I take it, lies the ultimate explanation of such cults as that of Zeus Ἀγαμέμνων, who was worshipped at Sparta, if not at Athens (Append. I), Zeus Ἀμφιάραος, who had a popular sanctuary at Oropos (Append. J), Zeus Τρεφώνιος or Τροφώνιος, the great oracular deity of Lebadeia (Append. K), and Zeus Ἀσκληπιός, the healer of Epidauros, Hermione, and Pergamon (Append. L). The same conception will afford us a clue to the cults of Zeus Μειλίχιος and Zeus Φίλιος as well as to the myth of Periphas (Append. M). Most of these buried kings appeared in the guise of snakes. And it is important to observe that Zeus Ktésios did so too. A marble stéle from Thespiai, now in the Museum at Thebes (inv. no. 330), bears the inscription ΔΙΟΣ | ΚΤΗΣΙΟΥ in lettering of s. iii (?) B.C. and below it a relief, partially chipped away to make the block available for building purposes, but still plainly portraying a coiled snake with crest and beard (M. P. Nilsson 'Schlangenstele des Zeus Ktesios' in the Ath. Mitth. 1908 xxxiii. 279—288 fig.=my fig. 914, Harrison Themis p. 297 ff. fig. 79). The discovery of this stéle confirmed, as M. P. Nilsson notes, the acute surmise of E. Gerhard Über Agathodämon und Bona Dea Berlin 1849 pp. 3, 23 (Gesammelte akademische Abhandlungen Berlin 1868 ii. 45 with n. 28) that Zeus Ktésios was probably represented as a snake.

Fig. 914.

(4) The Jars of Zeus Ktésios compared with the Jars of the Dioskouroi.

Gerhard further maintained that the jars of Zeus Ktésios were comparable with those of the Dioskouroi at Sparta (e.g. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 122 pl. 24, 6 a silver coin of 250—146 B.C. with rev. Λ Λ a lidded amphora with a snake twining round it, between the caps of the Dioskouroi surmounted by stars; in the field a monogram and A. Ib. p. 125 pl. 24, 14 a copper of 146—32 B.C. with rev. ΛΑΚΕΔΑΙ Μ·ΝΙΩΝ two amphorae with snakes twining round them; in the field two monograms. Fig. 915 = Einzelaufnahmen no. 1311, E. Cahen in the Bull. Corr.

Fig. 915.

Hell. 1899 xxiii. 599 f. fig. 1 (Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art viii. 442 f. fig. 216) an archaic relief—'sculpture par silhouettage ou découpage'—at Sparta (M. N. Tod and A. J. B. Wace A Catalogue of the Sparta Museum Oxford 1906 p. 191 no. 575 fig. 65), which has in the gable an egg (that of Leda??) flanked by two snakes, and in the space below the Dioskouroi facing each other with two lidded amphorae between them. Fig. 916—drawn from a photograph kindly given me by Miss J. E. Harrison—shows the relief of Argenidas in the Museo Lapidario at Verona (no. 555, height 0·40^{m}, breadth 0·72^{m}. Montfaucon Antiquity Ex- plained trans. D. Humphreys London 1725 Suppl. i. 103 f. pl. 27 no. 1 (inexact), S. Maffei Museum Veronense Veronae 1749 p. 47 fig. 7 (bad) with p. 56, A. Michaelis in the Arch. Zeit. 1871 xxix. 145 n. 37, Wien. Vorlegebl. iv pl. 9, 8 a, H. Dütschke Antike Bildwerke in Oberitalien Leipzig 1880 iv. 237 no. 538, A. Furtwängler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1170 f. fig., M. N. Tod—A. J. B. Wace op. cit. p. 113 f. fig. 14, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 436 no. 4, Harrison Themis p. 304 f. fig. 84). On a base to the left are statues of the Dioskouroi wearing pîloi, chitônes (?), and chlamýdes (?). Before them is a rectangular altar decorated with a boar in relief. Behind the altar a large pedestal carries two lidded amphorae. On a step or low base to the right stands a man, clad in chitôn and himátion (?), who holds a phiále (see H. Heydemann Mittheilungen aus den Antikensammlungen in Ober- und Mittelitalien Halle 1879 p. 5) in his right hand extended over the altar (?). Away to the right is seen a rocky coast forming a bay, in which floats a vessel close to the shore. Near the vessel's stern are the heads of two horned animals (oxen ?). On the further side of the bay two sets of dókana (supra i. 766 ff.) are set up over a cavern. In the cavern two male figures are reclining; a third raises his hand with a gesture of surprise or greeting; a fourth (?) and possibly a fifth (??) follow him into the cave. On the rocky point to the left of the cave is a cock. And from the dókana a snake makes its way towards the amphorae. The scene is accompanied by the inscriptions [ΑΝΑ]ΚΕΙΟΝ below the dókana and [Α]ΡΓΕΝΙΔΑΣ ΑΡΙΣΤΟΓΕΝΙΔΑ ΔΙΟΣΚΟΡΟΙΣ | ΕΥΧΑΝ along the lower edge of the slab in lettering of s. ii B.C. (Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 1949). This relief, found in 1710 A.D. at Ateste (Este) in the country of the Veneti, had perhaps been brought thither from Venice (A. Boeckh in the Corp. inscr. Gr. loc. cit.). It records the gratitude of one Argenidas, a Spartan (?), who having crossed the sea to Venetia (?) in safety dedicates a thank-offering to the Dioskouroi. It is thus the monumental counterpart of Catullus' famous poem on his yacht (Cat. 4). The foreground of the relief shows Argenidas pouring a libation at the altar, which—like many examples of Italian aes grave (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Italy Index p. 406)—bears the figure of a boar, and the heads of two sacrificed animals lying on the rocky shore. The distance gives a very interesting view of the Anakeion (supra i. 107 n. 7) or sanctuary at Therapne (?), where the Dioskouroi lived on underground (Alkm. frag. 5 Bergk[4] ap. schol. Eur. Tro. 210, Pind. Nem. 10. 103 f. with schol. ad loc.). The reclining figures are the buried heroes themselves. The snake containing their numen creeps across from the old sanctuary to the new, intent on tasting the libation of Argenidas), at the Spartan colony Tarentum (see e.g. Garrucci Mon. It. ant. p. 130 pl. 100, 48, cp. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Italy p. 160 nos. 1—3, Head Coins of the Ancients p. 66 pl. 33, 12, id. Hist. num.[2] p. 58, and especially M. P. Vlasto in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1899 ii. 331 f. pl. 17, 1—6 gold statêres of Tarentum struck c. 281 B.C.: obv. head of Zeus to left with NIK as monogram in the field to right; rev. TAPANTINΩN and NIKAP and on one specimen ΦI, eagle to right on thunderbolt with two amphorae, sometimes surmounted by stars, in the field to right, id. ib. 1899 ii. 333 f. pl. 17, 16—18 quarter statêres of gold with same reverse type, but obverse showing laureate head of Apollon. The presence of the amphorae as symbols on these coins is explained by the fact that at Tarentum there was a cult of the Dioskouroi (supra i. 35 n. 6 fig. 8). In 1880 A.D. numerous terra-cottas were found at Tarentum, including a series of votive tablets studied by E. Petersen 'Dioskuren in Tarent' in the Röm. Mitth. 1900 xv. 3—61 with 2 pls. and many figs. and by G. Gastinel 'Cinq reliefs Tarentins' in the Rev. Arch. 1901 i. 46—58 with 4 figs. The tablets are in the form of naîskoi and were originally painted. As classified by Petersen, they comprise the following types:

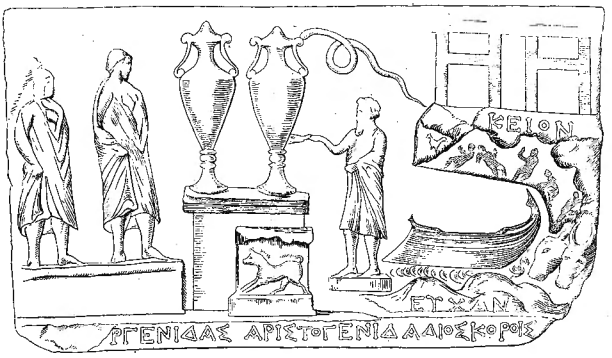

Fig. 916.

A. The Dioskouroi standing without horses (Petersen loc. cit. p. 7 fig. 1 and p. 8 fig. 3).
B. The Dioskouroi standing by their horses (Petersen loc. cit. p. 15 fig. 1).
C. The Dioskouroi riding (Petersen loc. cit. p. 18 fig. 2).
D. The Dioskouroi driving (Petersen loc. cit. p. 23 fig. 1).
E. The Dioskouroi on horse-back coming to the Theoxénia (Petersen loc. cit. p. 24 fig. 6).
F. The Dioskouroi reclining at the feast (Petersen loc. cit. p. 27 fig. 2).

It should be observed that the amphorae are a constant feature of the Tarentine reliefs (G. Gastinel loc. cit. p. 55 cp. the amphorae on the cake-moulds from Tarentum: supra p. 131), being placed usually on the ground, but sometimes on the dôkana (cp. supra p. 158 ff. fig. 99), or on pillars), in Etruria (Gerhard Etr. Spiegel iii. 42 pl. 48, 6 and 8, cp. supra i. 770 fig. 564), and at Tauion in Galatia (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 24 pl. 5, 1, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 749 coppers of s. i. B.C.).

These Dioscuric amphorae have been variously explained. E. Petersen in the Röm. Mitth. 1900 xv. 41 calls them 'agonistisch' and supposes that jars of wine were given as prizes and contained the drink required for the Theoxénia (schol. Pind. Ol. 3 argum., 1, cp. 72: see further Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 418 ff.). A. Furtwängler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1171 hesitates whether to regard them as 'Weinamphoren' implying a ritual use or as merely 'sepulkrale Symbole.' E. Bethe in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 1108 takes them to be bottomless vessels, like the great 'Dipylon' vases (cp. supra i. 766 n. 9), set up over the grave for the reception of funereal offerings. Gerhard Gr. Myth. i. 524 f. long ago described them as 'Aschengefässe.' My friend Dr J. Rendel Harris Boanerges Cambridge 1913 p. 377 f. acutely conjectures that in them we have a Greek parallel to the pots used throughout Africa etc. for the burial of a twin or of a twin's placenta. Personally I should be content to say that the amphorae both of Zeus Ktésios and of the Dioskouroi presuppose the custom of pithos-burial, and were retained as signs of the divinised dead long after the custom in question had ceased to be. If Zeus Ktésios was, as I maintain, an early Greek king buried in his own house, it is certainly permissible to assume that he was buried in a píthos. Platon, who states that the primitive Athenians used to bury the dead in their houses (supra p. 1060), informs us in the same context that their successors among other old-fashioned burial rites 'sent for women to fill the jars' (Plat. Minos 315 C ὥσπερ καὶ ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς οἶσθά που καὶ αὐτὸς ἀκούων, οἵοις νόμοις ἐχρώμεθα πρὸ τοῦ περὶ τοὺς ἀποθανόντας, ἱερεία τε προσφάττοντες πρὸ τῆς ἐκφορᾶς τοῦ νεκροῦ καὶ ἐγχυτριστρίας μεταπεμπόμενοι with schol. ad loc. τὰς χοὰς τοῖς τετελευτηκόσιν ἐπιφερούσας, ὡς ἐπὶ τοῦδε. ἔλεγον δὲ καὶ τὸ βλάψαι (βάψαι Zonaras. C. A. Lobeck cj. θάψαι) καταχυτρίσαι (J. G. Baiter cj. ἐγχυτρίσαι), ὡς 'Αριστοφάνης (Aristoph. vesp. 289 ὃν ὅπως ἐγχυτριεῖς). λέγονται δὲ καὶ ὅσαι τοὺς ἐναγεῖς καθαίρουσιν, αἷμα ἐπιχέουσαι τοῦ ἱερείου. ἔτι δὲ καὶ αἱ θρηνήτριαι, καὶ δὴ καὶ αἱ μαῖαι αἱ ἐκτιθεῖσαι ἐν χύτραις τὰ βρέφη = Souid. s.v. ἐγχυτρίστριαι = et. mag. p. 313, 41 ff. (cp. 39 f.) = Zonar. lex. s.v. ἐγχυτρίστριαι (cp. s.v. ἐγχυτρίζειν), cp. Hesych. s.vv. ἐγχυτριεῖς, ἐγχυτρίζειν, schol. Aristoph. vesp. 289, Moiris lex. s.v. ἐγχυτρισμός, Thom. Mag. p. 264). It seems reasonable to infer that, when píthos-burial within the house was abandoned, offerings to the dead were still placed in memorial jars by a special class of mourning-women. My contention is that the σημεῖα of Zeus Ktésios were just such memorial jars retained in the house, though their original significance had long been forgotten. The divinity whose presence they betokened would naturally be deemed the guardian of the household stores; for the master, himself buried in a píthos, would know how to protect his own goods bestowed in other píthoi.

(5) Zeus Ktésios in Literature and Cult.

Hence his title Ktésios, 'god of Property,' which occurs in literature from s. V B.C. onwards (Aisch. suppl. 443 ff. καὶ χρημάτων μὲν ἐκ δόμων πορθουμένων | ... γένοιτ' ἂν ἄλλα Κτησίου Διὸς χάριν, Hippokr. de insomniis 4 (xxii. 10 Kühn) καὶ τοῖς θεοῖς εὔχεσθαι, ἐπὶ μὲν τοῖσιν ἀγαθοῖσιν Ἡλίῳ, Διὶ Οὐρανίῳ, Διὶ Κτησίῳ, Ἀθηνᾷ Κτησίῃ, Ἑρμῇ, Ἀπόλλωνι, ἐπὶ δὲ τοῖσιν ἐναντίοισι τοίσιν ἀποτροπίοισι καὶ Γῇ καὶ ἥρωσιν κ.τ.λ., Hypereid. πρὸς Ἀπελλαῖον frag. 13 Blass[2] ap. Harpokr. s.v. Κτησίου Διός who adds Κτήσιον Δία ἐν τοῖς ταμείοις ἵδρυντο, Menand. Pseudherakles frag. 2, 2 f. (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 223 f. Meineke) ap. Harpokr. loc. cit. τὸν δὲ Δία τὸν Κτήσιον | ἔχοντα τὸ ταμεῖον οὐ κεκλεισμένον, Autokleides (?) ap. Athen. 473 B—C (supra p. 1054 ff.), Plout. de repugn. Stoic. 30 ὁ δὲ Ζεὺς γελοῖος, εἰ Κτήσιος χαίρει καὶ Ἐπικάρπιος καὶ Χαριδότης προσαγορευόμενος, ὅτι δηλαδὴ χρυσᾶς ἀμίδας καὶ χρυσᾶ κράσπεδα χαρίζεται τοῖς φαύλοις, τοῖς δ' ἀγαθοῖς ἄξια δραχμῆς ὅταν πλούσιοι γένωνται κατὰ τὴν τοῦ Διὸς πρόνοιαν, Cornut. theol. 9 p. 9, 16 f. Lang καὶ Κτήσιον...αὐτὸν (sc. Δία) προσαγορεύουσιν, Dion Chrys. or. 1 p. 57 Reiske Κτήσιος δὲ καὶ Ἐπικάρπιος ἅτε τῶν καρπῶν αἴτιος καὶ δοτὴρ πλούτου καὶ κτήσεως, οὐ πενίας οὐδὲ ἀπορίας, or. 12 p. 413 Reiske Κτήσιος δὲ καὶ Ἐπικάρπιος ἅτε τῶν καρπῶν αἴτιος καὶ δοτὴρ πλούτου καὶ δυνάμεως, Souid. s.vv. Διὸς κώδιον (supra i. 423 n. 1 = Apostol. 6. 10), Ζεὺς Κτήσιος· ὃν καὶ ἐν τοῖς ταμείοις ἱδρύοντο ὡς πλουτοδότην, Κτήσιος· ὁ Ζεύς, Κτησίου Διός· τὸν Κτήσιον Δία ἐν τοῖς ταμείοις ἱδρύοντο, Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 266 no. 51 (Διός) Κτησίου).

Under this title Zeus was worshipped at Athens (Dem. in Mid. 53 Διὶ Κτησίῳ βοῦν λευκόν (supra i. 717 n. 2), Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 2 no. 3854, 1 f. from the Asklepieion [. .κ]αὶ Διὸς | [Κ]τησίου) including the Peiraieus (Antiph. or. 1. 16 μετὰ ταῦτα ἔτυχε τῷ Φιλόνεῳ ἐν Πειραιεῖ ὄντα ἱερὰ (C. Wachsmuth Die Stadt Athen im Alterthum Leipzig 1890 ii. 1. 146 n. 1 would read ὄντι θύειν ἱερὰ) Διὶ Κτησίῳ, ὁ δὲ πατὴρ ὁ ἐμὸς εἰς Νάξον πλεῖν ἔμελλεν. κάλλιστον οὖν ἐδόκει εἶναι τῷ Φιλόνεῳ τῆς αὐτῆς ὁδοῦ ἅμα μὲν προπέμψαι εἰς τὸν Πειραιᾶ τὸν πατέρα τὸν ἐμὸν φίλον ὄντα ἑαυτῷ, ἅμα δὲ θύσαντα τὰ ἱερὰ ἑστιᾶσαι ἐκεῖνον, ib. 18 ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἐδεδειπνήκεσαν, οἷον εἰκός, ὁ μὲν θύων Διὶ Κτησίῳ κἀκεῖνον ὑποδεχόμενος, ὁ δ' ἐκπλεῖν τε μέλλων καὶ παρ' ἀνδρὶ ἑταίρῳ αὐτοῦ δειπνῶν, κ.τ.λ., cp. for the domestic celebration Isai. or. 8. 16 καὶ τὰς ἑορτὰς ἤγομεν παρ' ἐκεῖνον πάσας· τῷ Διί τε θύων τῷ Κτησίῳ, περὶ ἣν μάλιστ' ἐκεῖνος θυσίαν ἐσπούδαζε καὶ οὔτε δούλους προσῆγεν οὔτε ἐλευθέρους ὀθνείους, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς δι' ἑαυτοῦ πάντ' ἐποίει, ταύτης ἡμεῖς ἐκοινωνοῦμεν καὶ τὰ ἱερὰ συνεχειρουργοῦμεν καὶ συνεπετίθεμεν καὶ τἄλλα συνεποιοῦμεν, καὶ ἠῦχετο ἡμῖν ὑγίειαν διδόναι καὶ κτῆσιν ἀγαθήν, ὥσπερ εἰκὸς ὄντα πάππον) and Phlyeis (Paus. 1. 31. 4 Φλυεῦσι δέ...ναὸς δὲ ἕτερος ἔχει βωμοὺς Δήμητρος Ἀνησιδώρας < καὶ ins. Siebelis > Διὸς Κτησίου καὶ Τιθρωνῆς (Siebelis cj. Τριτώνης) Ἀθηνᾶς καὶ Κόρης Πρωτογόνης καὶ Σεμνῶν ὀνομαζομένων θεῶν), at Thespiai (supra p. 1061), at Epidauros (P. Cavvadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 56 no. 121 = Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1288 a limestone slab inscribed Διὶ | Κτησίοι Κράτων. | μη'), at Kárien between Mt Pangaion and the sea (P. Perdrizet in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1894 xviii. 441 ff. no. 1 = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 774 = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 576 a white marble boundary-stone inscribed in lettering of c. 400 B.C. Διὸς Ἑρκε[ίο Πατρώ[ο ; καὶ Διὸ]ς Κτησίο), in the Kykládes Syros (F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Inscr. Gr. ins. v. 1 no. 670 an altar from Psarriana inscribed in late lettering Διὸς | Κτησίου), Thera (F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Inscr. Gr. ins. iii Suppl. no. 1361 fig. = my

Fig. 917.

fig. 917 a small altar or ἐσχάρα of volcanic stone inscribed Ζεὺς Κτή(σιος)), Anaphe (Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 2477, 17 [Διὸς ?] τοῦ Κτησίου, which is corrected ib. p. 1091 to [ὁ]πεῖ ὁ [βω]μὸς τοῦ Κτησίου καὶ τὸ ξο[άνι]ον and in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 1. 201 ff. no. 3430, 12 to [ὁ]πεῖ ὁ βωμὸς τοῦ Κτησίου καὶ τὸ ξοάνιον = F. Hiller von Gaertringen in the Inscr. Gr. ins. iii no. 248, 13 = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 853, 12 = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 555, 13 = J. v. Prott and L. Ziehen Leges Graecorum sacrae ii no. 122, 13. This inscription, which can be dated c. 100 B.C., tells how one Timotheos, anxious to erect a temple of Aphrodite, was bidden by an oracle to do so in the precinct of Apollon Asgelátas : the building-operations necessitated the temporary removal of an altar of Ktésios and an adjacent statuette. It is not certain that the statuette belonged to Ktésios, still less that it represented him. L. Ziehen even denies that Ktésios was originally Zeus Ktésios. In this, however, he is over-sceptical, though no doubt Ktésios was a title applicable to other deities besides Zeus (see O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1578 f.)), at Panamara in Karia (G. Deschamps —G. Cousin 'Inscriptions du temple de Zeus Panamaros' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1888 xii. 269 f. no. 54, 7 ff. a stéle dedicated by Kleoboulos and Strateia to a series of deities καὶ τοῖς ἐνοικιδίοις θεοῖς Διὶ Κτησίῳ καὶ Τύχῃ καὶ | Ἀσκληπιῷ), at Teos in Ionia (Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 3074 on an altar or base of s. ii B.C. Διὸς Κτησίου, | Διὸς Καπετωλίου, | Ῥώμης, | Ἀγαθοῦ δαίμονος = Michel Recueil d'Inscr.

gr. no. 806), in Phrygia (G. Cousin 'Inscription d'Ormellé de Phrygie' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1884 viii. 503 part of an astragalomantic inscription found at Tefeny col. iii, 19 δδδς'α ☌ ιθ' ☌ Διὸς Κτησίου ☌ (i.e. the throw 4 + 4 + 4 + 6 + 1 = 19 is that of Zeus Ktésios) followed by the hexameters θαρσῶν ἐν χειρεὶ καὶ ἐ[π' ἐ]|λπίδος ἐστὶν ὁ χρησμός, ὡς..... | μανύει καὶ τὸν νοσέοντ[α δὲ σώσ|ει· εἰ δέ τι μαντεύῃ χρ[ησμὸς...|. δ]εις ἀπολήψῃ. I should venture to restore and read the lines as follows : θαρσῶν ἐνχείρει, καὶ ἐπ' ἐλπίδος ἐστὶν ὁ χρησμός, | ὡς καλὰ μανύει καὶ τὸν νοσέοντα δὲ σώσει· | εἰ δέ τι μαντεύῃ, χρησμοὺς ἠδεῖς ἀπολήψῃ. See further the clear and helpful observations of W. R. Halliday Greek Divination London 1913 p. 213 ff. A. Wagener 'Inscriptions grecques recueillies en Asie Mineure' in the Mémoires couronnés et mémoires des savants étrangers, publiés par l'Académie Royale des Sciences, des Lettres et des Beaux-Arts de Belgique 1858—1861 xxx Classe des Lettres 2. 19 f. no. 2 pl. A inscribed on a white marble stèle found at Koloe (Koula) with the prefatory remarks of J. de Witte ib. p. viii Διὰ Κτήσιον Τατία | Παπίαν τὸν ἑαυτῆ[ς] | ἄνδρα, Τεμοκράτη[ς] | τὸν πατέρα, Καρποφό|ρος τὸν θρέψαντα | κατειέρωσαν. | ἔτους σοα' μη(νὸς) | Αὐδναίου η'; from which it appears that in 175 A.D. (=261 of the Sullan era) Tatia definitely consecrated her deceased husband Papias as Zeus Ktésios—a striking vindication of my view that Zeus Ktésios was but the buried ancestor of the clan), at Pergamon in Mysia (H. Hepding in the Ath. Mitth. 1910 xxxv. 452 no. 35 a marble altar inscribed [Διὶ Κ]τησίωι | [Μ.] Αὐρήλιος | Μηνογένης | ὁ ἱεροφάντης), and doubtless elsewhere also. At Amastris in Paphlagonia he was recognised as Zeus Panktésios (G. Hirschfeld 'Inschriften aus dem Norden Kleinasiens besonders aus Bithynien und Paphlagonien' in the Sitzungsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin 1888 p. 878 no. 31 on a small marble altar at Amastris inscribed ☌ ΔΙΙ ☌ | ΠΑΝΚΤΗ|CΙΩ ☌). But this was an exceptional flourish. As a rule, Zeus Ktésios was a homely power content with worship in a small way—he never has a temple or a statue, but puts up with a jar or a hearth or at most a trumpery altar. I doubt if he ever received a handsomer offering than that of the white ox mentioned by Demosthenes.

(6) The Jars of Zeus in the Iliad.

One interesting possibility must not be neglected. We have traced Zeus Ktésios back to the days of Aischylos. But the very nature of his cult postulates a hoary antiquity. There is therefore much to be said for an acute suggestion made by Miss Harrison (Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 642), viz. that we have a reminiscence of the self-same cult in the Homeric description of the jars of Zeus (Il. 24. 527 ff. δοιοὶ γάρ τε πίθοι κατακείαται ἐν Διὸς οὔδει | δώρων, οἷα δίδωσι, κακῶν, ἕτερος δὲ ἑάων· | ᾧ μέν κ' ἀμμίξας δώῃ Ζεὺς τερπικέραυνος, | ἄλλοτε μέν τε κακῷ ὅ γε κύρεται, ἄλλοτε δ' ἐσθλῷ· | ᾧ δέ κε τῶν λυγρῶν δώῃ, λωβητὸν ἔθηκε· | καί ἑ κακὴ βούβρωστις ἐπὶ χθόνα δίαν ἐλαύνει, | φοιτᾷ δ' οὔτε θεοῖσι τετιμένος οὔτε βροτοῖσιν. For full apparatus criticus see A. Ludwich ad loc. The most important variants are the omission of line 528 in cod. T. and the substitution of κηρῶν ἔμπλειοι, ὁ μὲν ἐσθλῶν, αὐτὰρ ὁ δειλῶν in the passage as quoted by Plat. rep. 379 D, Plout. quo modo adolescens poetas audire debeat 6 (but cp. consolat. ad Apollon. 7), Euseb. praep. ev. 13. 3. 12 (from Plat. loc. cit.), Prokl. in Plat. remp. i. 96, 14 f. Kroll. Dr W. Leaf in 1888 printed δοιοὶ γάρ τε πίθοι κατακείαται ἐν Διὸς οὔδει | δώρων οἷα δίδωσι κακῶν, ἕτερος δὲ ἑάων· | κ.τ.λ. and supposed that 'Zeus has two jars of evil for one of good' (cp. Pind. Pyth. 3. 143 ff. ἓν παρ' ἐσλὸν πήματα σύνδυο δαίονται βροτοῖς | ἀθάνατοι). But in 1898, collaborating with Mr M. A. Bayfield, he was more disposed to admit the possibility that 'there are only two jars spoken of, one of ills and one of blessings.' For κακῶν, ἕτερος δὲ ἑάων = ἕτερος μὲν κακῶν, ἕτερος δὲ ἑάων he cited Il. 7. 417 f. But the idiom is by no means rare: to the examples adduced by R. Kühner—B. Gerth Ausführliche Grammatik der griechischen Sprache Hannover and Leipzig 1904 ii. 266 add Aristot. poet. 1. 1447 b 14 ἐλεγειοποιοὺς τοὺς δὲ ἐποποιοὺς ὀνομάζουσιν, pol. 2. 4. 1262 a 26 f. φόνους ἀκουσίους, τοὺς δὲ ἑκουσίους. Moreover, the existence of the variant κηρῶν ἔμπλειοι, ὁ μὲν ἐσθλῶν, αὐτὰρ ὁ δειλῶν, which is not of course 'more careless than the average of Plato's citations' but good evidence of the pre-Aristarchean text, makes it practically certain that the jars were conceived as two in number):

> Two jars lie buried in the floor of Zeus
> Filled with the gifts he gives—evil in this,
> Good in the other. Whensoever Zeus
> The lightning-hurler gives a mingled lot,
> He that receives it falls on evil now
> And now on good. But he to whom Zeus gives
> Of the sorry store is made a very scorn:
> Him evil hunger drives o'er the bright earth,
> Nor gods nor mortals honour him as he goes.

(7) Zeus Ktésios compared with the Di Penates.

Finally, it should be observed that sundry Greek antiquarians described the Roman di Penates as theoὶ Ktésioi (Dion. Hal. ant. Rom. 1. 67 τοὺς δὲ θεοὺς τούτους Ῥωμαῖοι μὲν Πενάτας καλοῦσιν· οἱ δὲ ἑξερμηνεύοντες εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα γλῶσσαν τοὔνομα οἱ μὲν Πατρῴους ἀποφαίνουσιν, οἱ δὲ Γενεθλίους, εἰσὶ δ' οἳ Κτησίους, ἄλλοι δὲ Μυχίους, οἱ δὲ Ἑρκίους, cp. ib. 8. 41 καὶ ὑμεῖς, ὦ θεοὶ Κτήσιοι καὶ ἑστία πατρῴα καὶ δαίμονες οἱ κατέχοντες τοῦτον τὸν τόπον, χαίρετε). The description was apposite; for the di Penates, as divinised ancestors (?? see Folk-Lore 1905 xvi. 293 ff.) keeping watch over the penus, were in function at least strictly analogous to Zeus Ktésios. Perhaps indeed the likeness extended to the signs and symbols of their presence; for the Penates of Lavinium were represented by 'caducei of iron and bronze together with Trojan pottery' (Timaios frag. 20 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 197 Müller) ap. Dion. Hal. ant. Rom. 1. 67 σχήματος δὲ καὶ μορφῆς αὐτῶν πέρι Τίμαιος μὲν ὁ συγγραφεὺς ὧδε ἀποφαίνεται· κηρύκια σιδηρᾶ καὶ χαλκᾶ καὶ κέραμον Τρωϊκὸν εἶναι τὰ ἐν τοῖς ἀδύτοις τοῖς ἐν Λαουϊνίῳ κείμενα ἱερά. πυθέσθαι δὲ αὐτὸς ταῦτα παρὰ τῶν ἐπιχωρίων), which presumably implies metal snakes coiled about a staff and an earthenware jar (N.B. The tabula Iliaca in three separate places represents Aineias and Anchises as carrying the sacra of Troy in a cylindrical jar (?) with a domed lid: see O. Jahn Griechische Bilderchroniken Bonn 1873 p. 35 pl. 1, and cp. Helbig Wandgem. Camp. p. 310 no. 1380, id. in the Bull. d. Inst. 1879 p. 76 f., Preller—Jordan Röm. Myth.[3] ii. 322 n. 2). The mention of caducei in this connexion sets us thinking. Is it possible that Hermes himself with his chthonian and his phallic traits was of kindred origin? The idea should not be scouted without a careful consideration of the facts brought together by Mr A. L. Frothingham (in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1916 xx. 175—211 and a sequel as yet unpublished). See further supra p. 383 n. 7.

APPENDIX I.

ZEUS AGAMÉMNON.

The evidence for the cult of Zeus Ἀγαμέμνων at Sparta is as follows: Lyk. Al. 335 states that Priamos was killed (supra i. 39 n. 2 and n. 6) ἀμφὶ τύμβῳ τἀγαμέμνονος, on which Tzetzes remarks Ἀγαμέμνων ὁ Ζεὺς ἐν Λακεδαιμονίᾳ. This is confirmed by Lyk. Al. 1124 Ζεὺς Σπαρτιάταις αἰμύλοις κληθήσεται (sc. ὁ Ἀγαμέμνων) with Tzetz. ad loc. ὅτι Λακεδαιμόνιοι ἱδρύσαντο Ἀγαμέμνονος Διὸς ἱερὸν εἰς τιμὴν τοῦ ἥρωος, Staphylos frag. 10 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 506 Müller) ap. Clem. Al. protr. 2. 38. 2 p. 28, 17 f. Stählin Ἀγαμέμνονα γοῦν τινα Δία ἐν Σπάρτῃ τιμᾶσθαι Στάφυλος ἱστορεῖ, Athenag. supplicatio pro Christianis 1 p. 1 Schwartz ὁ δὲ Λακεδαιμόνιος Ἀγαμέμνονα Δία...σέβει.

For his cult at Athens the evidence is slighter: Lyk. Al. 1369 ff. πρῶτος μὲν ἥξει Ζηνὶ τῷ Λαπερσίῳ | ὁμώνυμος Ζεύς, ὃς καταιβάτης μολὼν | σκηπτῷ πυρώσει πάντα δυσμενῶν σταθμά with Tzetz. ad loc. Λαπέρσαι δῆμος τῆς Ἀττικῆς (U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff cj. Λακωνικῆς), ἔνθα Ἀγαμέμνονος Διὸς ἱερόν ἐστιν. ᾧ ὁμώνυμος οὖν τῷ Λαπερσίῳ Διὶ ὁ Ἀγαμέμνων, κ.τ.λ. The cj. Λακωνικῆς is supported by Soph. frag. 871 Nauck², 957 Jebb, ap. Strab. 364 νὴ τὼ Λαπέρσα (sc. the Dioskouroi), νὴ τὸν Εὐρώταν τρίτον, | νὴ τοὺς ἐν Ἄργει καὶ κατὰ Σπάρτην θεούς, Rhian. ap. Steph. Byz. s.v. Λαπέρσα θηλυκῶς, ὄρος Λακωνικῆς, οὗ μέμνηται Ῥιανὸς ἐν Ἡλιακῶν πρώτῳ· ἀπὸ τῶν Λαπερσῶν Διοσκούρων. τὸ ἐθνικὸν Λαπερσαῖος. See further W. Pape—G. E. Benseler *Wörterbuch der griechischen Eigennamen*³ Braunschweig 1875 ii. 773.

With regard to the interpretation of this evidence ancient and modern views have differed widely: Metrodoros of Lampsakos, who allegorized Homer (Tatian. or. adv. Graec. 37), took Agamemnon to be the aithér (Hesych. Ἀγαμέμνονα· τὸν αἰθέρα Μητρόδωρος ἀλληγορικῶς)· Eustath. in Il. p. 168, 11 ff. is hardly more satisfactory: δοκεῖ εὐλόγως παρὰ Δάκωσι Ζεὺς Ἀγαμέμνων ἐπιθετικῶς εἶναι, ὡς ὁ Λυκόφρων λαλεῖ· Ἀγαμέμνων τε γὰρ εὐρυκρείων καὶ Ζεὺς εὐρυμέδων. εἰ δὴ ταὐτὸν εὐρυκρείων καὶ εὐρυμέδων, λέγοιτ' ἂν διὰ τοῦτο διθυραμβικώτερον καὶ Ἀγαμέμνων Ζεύς, καθότι καὶ εὐρυκρείων. Welcker Gr. Götterl. ii. 183 regards Ἀγαμέμνων as a title of Zeus, 'Erzwalter.' Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 157 renders 'Zeus...der "grosse Sinner"' and ib. n. 22 cites the vase inscriptions ΑΛΑΜΕΣΜΟΝ and ΑΛ·ΜΕΣΜΟ·(P. Kretschmer Die Griechischen Vaseninschriften Gütersloh 1894 p. 168 ff.) as implying an original *Ἀγαμέδμων (W. Prellwitz in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1891 xvii. 171 f., 1894 xx. 306 f., *id. Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.*² p. 3) with which he compares such names as Ἀγαμήδης, Ἀγαμήστωρ. Wide Lakon. Kulte pp. 12 f., 333 f., following F. Deneken in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 2449 f., holds that a god' Ἀγαμέμνων (ἀγα-+μεμ-), 'der viel sinnende, viel Sorge tragende, mächtig schirmende und schützende,' whose partner was originally Ἀλεξάνδρα, came to be identified with Zeus. On the etymology see, however, K. Brugmann—A. Thumb *Griechische Grammatik*⁴ München 1913 p. 89: 'Dass uridg. -nm- auch zu -mn- geworden sei, glauben wir nicht. Man nimmt an, Ἀγα-μέμνων sei aus *-μενμων (zu ai. mánman-) entstanden (DE SAUSSURE, Mém. 4, 432). Wäre das richtig, so könnte die besondere Behandlung der Gruppe -nm- aus der Mitwirkung der anderen Nasale des Wortes oder aus Volksetymologie (vgl. θρασυ-μέμνων 'mutig standhaltend') erklärt werden. Aber die attische Nebenform Ἀγαμέσμων (KRETSCHMER, Vas. 168 f.) weist auf *Ἀγα-μέδμων als Grundform (vgl. PRELLWITZ, BB. 17, 171 f.

20, 306 f.). Hieraus ging einerseits durch Anlehnung an Πολυ-φράσμων u. a. (§ 88 Anm. 2) die Form Ἀγαμέσμων hervor; Ἀγαμέμνων anderseits zeigt die gleiche Behandlung des δμ wie att. μεσό-μνη neben ion. μεσό-δμη (§ 58), ὕμνος aus ὑδμος* (falls zu ὕδω, ὑδέω, s. W. SCHMID, Rhein. Mus. 61, 480; anders, aber unwahrscheinlich EHRLICH, Rhein. Mus. 62, 321 ff., vgl. ferner P. MAAS, Philol. 66, 590 ff.), kret. μνῴα neben ion. δμώς: in einzelnen griechischen Dialekten wurde also δμ zu νμ (vgl. neuir. meamna=altir. menme 'mens') zu einer Zeit, wo der Wandel von uridg. -nm- zu -μμ- schon längst vollzogen war[1]. ([1]Dass dm- schon uridg. zu nm- geworden sei und hierauf unser μν beruhe (so zuletzt JOHANSSON, IF. 3, 227), ist unwahrscheinlich.) Aus diesem Dialektgebiet stammt die Form Ἀγα-μέμνων. Anders KRETSCHMER a. a. O., FICK, Gött. gel. Anz. 1894 S. 234. 241 (der in μεσό-μνη ursprüngliches -δμν- vermutet) und SCHULZE, Gött. gel. Anz. 1896 S. 236 (der in μεσόμνη, Ἀγαμέμνων "durch eine Art von Metathesis δμ zu βν und weiter zu μν" geworden sein lässt unter Mitwirkung' des in den beiden Wörtern vorausgehenden μ); vgl. aber auch STOLZ, Innsbrucker Festschr. zur 50. Philol.-Vers. (1909) 13 ff.' Farnell Cults of Gk. States iv. 50 without venturing upon philological ground assumes that 'the two names [Ζεύς and Ἀγαμέμνων] were originally quite distinct and became conjoined owing to some later fusion of cults.' But A. Furtwängler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 96 'ein chthonischer Zeus' and K. Wernicke in Pauly—Wissowa Real. Enc. i. 721 'vielleicht ein chthonischer Gott' had already pointed the way to a better solution of the problem. In the Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 277, cp. Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 299, 301, I contended that the hero was a Zeus all along, the local champion or king being as such the embodiment of the god. Even in Homer there are traces of this belief. Agamemnon's stock epithet ἄναξ ἀνδρῶν is suggestive of a divine appellation (cp. Verg. Aen. 1. 65 divom pater atque hominum rex, Hes. theog. 923 θεῶν βασιλῆι καὶ ἀνδρῶν), and in Il. 2 478 he is described as ὄμματα καὶ κεφαλὴν (S. A. Naber cj. φθογγὴν) ἴκελος Διὶ τερπικεραύνῳ. See further supra p. 1060 f.

APPENDIX J.

ZEUS AMPHIÁRAOS.

The worship of Zeus Ἀμφιάραος at Oropos is attested by Dikaiarch. 1. 6 (Geogr. Gr. min. i. 100 Müller) ἐντεῦθεν εἰς Ὠρωπὸν δι' Ἀφιδνῶν καὶ τοῦ Ἀμφιαράου Διὸς ἱεροῦ ὁδὸν ἐλευθέρῳ βαδίζοντι σχεδὸν ἡμέρας προσάντη πάντα. The text is not free from corruption. For the manuscript's διαδαφνιδὸν L. Holstein and others read διὰ Δελφίνιον (cp. Strab. 403), C. Müller in Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 256 διὰ Ψαφιδῶν (cp. Strab. 399); id. in Geogr. Gr. min. i. 100 accepts C. Wordsworth's cj. δι' Ἀφιδνῶν or else δι' Ἀφίδνων. For the manuscript's ὁδὸν...πρόσαντα C. Müller, after I. Casaubon, proposes ὁδὸς...προσάντης πᾶσα, but prints ὁδὸν... προσάντη [πάντα]. Casaubon wanted to expunge Διός. But he was certainly wrong. The hero Amphiaraos had come to be reckoned as a god: cp. Soph. El. 836 ff. οἶδα γὰρ ἄνακτ' Ἀμφιάρεων χρυσοδέτοις | ἔρκεσι κρυφθέντα γυναικῶν· καὶ νῦν ὑπὸ γαίας | ... | πάμψυχος ἀνάσσει with Cic. de div. 1. 88 Amphiaraum autem sic honoravit fama Graeciae, deus ut haberetur, atque ut ab eius solo, in quo est humatus, oracula peterentur, Paus. 1. 34. 2 θεὸν δὲ Ἀμφιάραον πρώτοις Ὠρωπίοις κατέστη νομίζειν, ὕστερον δὲ καὶ οἱ πάντες Ἕλληνες ἥγηνται. That he was under the protection of Zeus appears from Pind. Nem. 9. 58 ff. ὁ δ' Ἀμφιάρη σχίσσεν κεραυνῷ παμβίᾳ | Ζεὺς τὰν βαθύστερνον χθόνα, κρύψεν δ' ἅμ' ἵπποις, | δουρὶ Περικλυμένου πρὶν νῶτα τυπέντα μαχατὰν | θυμὸν αἰσχυνθῆμεν, 10. 13 ff. γαῖα δ' ἐν Θήβαις ὑπέδεκτο κεραυνωθεῖσα Διὸς βέλεσιν | μάντιν Οἰκλείδαν, πολέμοιο νέφος, Apollod. 3. 6. 8 Ἀμφιαράῳ δὲ φεύγοντι παρὰ ποταμὸν Ἰσμηνόν, πρὶν ὑπὸ Περικλυμένου τὰ νῶτα τρωθῆ, Ζεὺς κεραυνὸν βαλὼν τὴν γῆν διέστησεν. ὁ δὲ σὺν τῷ ἅρματι καὶ τῷ ἡνιόχῳ Βάτωνι, ὡς δὲ ἔνιοι Ἐλάτωνι (so R. Wagner after Sommer, who suggested Ἐλάτωνι or Ἐλατίῳ. L. Dindorf cj. Ἐλάτῳ. ἐλάττῳ R. ἐλάττωνι *R^a. ἐλάττωνον P. R^b. R^c. ἐλάττω V. L. N. T.), ἐκρύφθη, καὶ Ζεὺς ἀθάνατον αὐτὸν ἐποίησεν.

As a parallel to this famous scene H. Usener in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. Akad. d. Wiss. in Wien Phil.-hist. Classe 1897 cxxxvii. 3. 2, 4, 37 (=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 200 ff., 234) cites the belief that Theodoric the Great, king of the Ostrogoths, did not die in 526 A.D., but entered the earth as a living man seated on his black charger. I am, however, inclined to lay more stress on analogies drawn from the classical area, e.g. that of Erechtheus (supra p. 793 f.) or those of Latinus and Aeneas (Class. Rev. 1904 xviii. 363, Folk-Lore 1905 xvi. 286). Such cases may be taken to imply that the early king, who during his life had been credited with magical powers of making a thunderstorm, was after his death frankly identified with the weather-god. Moreover dead kings, being chthonian powers, can give oracles, send dreams, and bestow health on those that consult them in the right way. Hence at the popular Amphiareion near

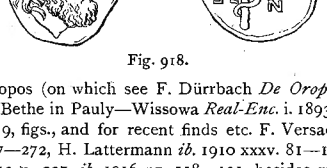

Fig. 918.

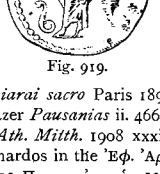

Fig. 919.

Oropos (on which see F. Dürrbach De Oropo et Amphiarai sacro Paris 1890, E. Bethe in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1893 ff. fig., Frazer Pausanias ii. 466 ff. pl. 9, figs., and for recent finds etc. F. Versace in the Ath. Mitth. 1908 xxxiii. 247—272, H. Lattermann ib. 1910 xxxv. 81—102, B. Leonardos in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1913 p. 237, ib. 1916 pp. 118—121, besides reports in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1903 p. 33 f., 1904 p. 27 f., 1906 p. 83 f., 1913 p. 114) the marble cult-statue of Amphiaraos (Paus. 1. 34. 2) appears to have borne a close resemblance to Asklepios. An autonomous copper of the town, dating from s. ii B.C. or later, has for obverse type the head of Amphiaraos bearded and laureate, and for reverse a snake coiled round a staff with the legend Ω ΡΩ ΠΙΩ Ν (É. de Cadalvène Recueil de médailles grecques inédites Paris 1828 p. 168 no. 1 = Overbeck Gall. her. Bildw. i. 151 Atlas pl. 6, 10 = my fig. 918. Other specimens show obv. a beardless head described as Apollon (A. v. Sallet in the Zeitschr. f. Num. 1898 xxi. 208 f. pl. 4, 10) or Amphiaraos (Head Hist. num.^{2} p. 392—a bad guess, unless the head is really bearded, as stated by Cadalvène op. cit. p. 168 no. 2, cp. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Attica etc. p. 115 pl. 20, 5) or even a female (U. Köhler in the Ath. Mitth. 1879 iv. 250 f. fig., 259 ff.), rev. a dolphin coiled round a trident with the legend ΩΡΩ ΠΙΩΝ). Another copper of Oropos, struck by Gallienus, has rev. ΩΡΩ[Π Ι Ω]Ν Amphiaraos enthroned to left, his left hand grasping a sceptre and his right extended over a snake (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Attica etc. p. 115 pl. 20, 6, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. iii. 153 pl. EE, 18

=my fig. 919). Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner justly remark that 'On these coins Amphiaraus is represented exactly in the guise of Asclepius, as a god rather than as a hero.' B. I. Leonardos in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1887 p. 62 f. reports the discovery in the Amphiareion at Oropos of a small statue, minus head and extremities, 'παριστὰν δὲ βεβαίως τὸν Ἀμφιάραον ὡς τὸν Ἀσκληπιόν, στηριζόμενον ἐπὶ ῥάβδου περὶ ἣν ἑλίσσεται ὄφις,' and of a small relief representing a similar Amphiaraos and Hygieia seated on a rock beside him (cp. Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1885 p. 102 no. 4, 3=Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 311, 3, Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1885 p. 106 no. 6, 3=Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 372, 3, ib. i no. 412, 11), while above them appears the head of Pan another partner in their cult (Paus. 1. 34. 3).

The hero's name offers a variety of problems. Ἀμφιάραος had a clipped form Ἄμφις (Herodian. περὶ παθῶν frag. 104 (ii. 205, 16 ff. Lentz) ap. et. mag. p. 93, 50 ff. = Zonar. lex. s.v. Ἀμφίς, cp. et. mag. p. 159, 31, cites Aisch. frag. 412 Nauck²). A possible doublet is Ἄμφιος, brother of Adrastos and son of Merops the seer of Perkote who foresaw the doom of his sons at Troy (Il. 2. 830 ff., 11. 328 ff.); and he in turn has been regarded (E. Bethe in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1949) as originally identical with Ἄμφιος, son of Selagos, who lived at Paisos and was slain at Troy (Il. 5. 612 ff., Tzetz. Hom. 89 f. N.B.: Il. 2. 828 Ἀπαισοῦ =Il. 5. 612 Παισῷ). See further H. Usener in E. Bethe Thebanische Heldenlieder Leipzig 1891 p. 65, id. Götternamen Bonn 1896 p. 355, id. in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. Akad. d. Wiss. in Wien Phil.-hist. Classe 1897 cxxxvii. 3. 40 ff. (=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 237 ff.), who holds that Ἄμφιος gave rise, on the one hand to Ἀμφίων (cp. et. mag. p. 92, 41 ff.), on the other to Ἀμφιάραος, Ἀμφιάρεως, Ἀμφιάρης. It may, however, be doubted whether Usener has said the last word on the subject; for the etymology of the name Ἀμφιάραος is still far from clear. F. G. Welcker *Der epische Cyclus*² Bonn 1882 p. 322 takes Ἀμφιάραος to mean 'der Beter' (ἀράομαι). P. Kretschmer Die Griechischen Vaseninschriften Gütersloh 1894 pp. 32, 123 argues that Ἀμφιάρης, for *Ἀμφιάρηϝος, was derived from ἰαρεύς (stem ἰαρηϝ-) and meant ἀρχιέρεως, but that Ἀμφιάραος was formed by popular etymologizing from ἀράομαι. A. Fick *Die Griechischen Personennamen*² Göttingen 1894 p. 438 f. connects with Ἄρης: 'Dasselbe Element ist in ἀμφι-άρης Zeus.' Similarly J. Rendel Harris Boanerges Cambridge 1913 p. 225 suggests that at Argos Areïos (Ap. Rhod. 1. 118, Orph. Arg. 148, cp. Pherekyd. frag. 75 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 90 Müller) ap. schol. Od. 11. 289) and Amphiaraos were twin-brothers. But all these views are risquées. At most we can assert that there is a tendency (satirised in the person of Ἀμφίθεος by Aristoph. Ach. 46 ff.) for divine and heroic names to begin with Ἀμφι-. Such names need not point to the existence of twins (pace J. Rendel Harris op. cit. p. 224 f.), but might on occasion refer to some twofold aspect of Zeus (supra p. 445), who is e.g. ἀμφιθαλής, 'god of both parents,' in Aisch. cho. 394 f. καὶ πόθ' ἂν ἀμφιθαλὴς | Ζεὺς ἐπὶ χεῖρα βάλοι; (see a good note by T. G. Tucker ad loc.). Thus H. Usener in the Rhein. Mus. 1898 liii. 336 f. (=id Kleine Schriften iv. 266 f.) regards Ἀμφιτρύων (τρύω, τρυπᾶν, κ.τ.λ.) as 'der nach Osten und Westen den Donnerkeil entsendende und damit durchbohrende Gewittergott,' an ancient Sondergott (supra p. 13 n. 1) absorbed into the all-prevailing personality of Zeus. I should myself put the matter somewhat differently. To my thinking Amphitryon, like Amphiaraos, was a king who played the part of a human Zeus and was named accordingly.

APPENDIX K.

ZEUS TREPHÓNIOS OR TROPHÓNIOS.

For the cult of Zeus Τρεφώνιος or Τροφώνιος at Lebadeia Rohde Psyche[3] i. 125 n. 1 cites the following evidence: Strab. 414 Λεβάδεια δ' ἐστίν, ὅπου Διὸς Τροφωνίου μαντεῖον ἵδρυται, χάσματος ὑπονόμου κατάβασιν ἔχον, καταβαίνει δ' αὐτὸς ὁ χρηστηριαζόμενος, Liv. 45. 27 Lebadiae quoque templum Iovis Trophonii adit (sc. L. Aimilius Paullus in 167 B.C.): ibi cum vidisset os specus, per quod oraculo utentes sciscitatum deos descendunt, sacrificio Iovi Hercynnaeque facto, quorum ibi templum est, etc., Iul. Obseq. prod. 110 (96 B.C.) Lebadiae Eutychides in templum Iovis Trophonii digressus tabulam aeneam extulit, in qua scripta erant quae ad res Romanas pertinerent, [add Ampel. 8. 3 ibi (sc. Argis in Epiro!—unless we may assume that a mention of Lebadeia has dropped out of the text, or that pictum est is to be supplied from the preceding clause) Iovis templum Trophonii (so D. hyphonis C.), unde est ad inferos descensus ad tollendas sortes: in quo loco dicuntur ii qui descenderunt Iovem ipsum videre], Hesych. s.v. Λεβάδεια· πόλις Βοιωτ[ε]ίας, ἔνθα καὶ μαντεῖον Διὸς τὸ ἱερὸν κατεσκεύαστο [? leg. μαντεῖον Διός, <Τροφωνίου> τὸ ἱερὸν κατασκευάσαντος], Phot. lex. (p. 154 Hermann) s.v. Λεβαδία· πόλις Βοιωτίας, ἐν ᾗ Διὸς μαντεῖον, Τροφωνίου κατασκευάσαντος, Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3090=R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 162 f. no. 423 Ἵππων Ἐπινίκαν Νικίαο | Διὶ Τρεφωνίοι on a square base formerly supporting a statue of Epinike (on the back of the same base was recorded the manumission of Athanon (Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3080 infra); on its right side, that of Hermaïa (ib. no. 3081 infra): later the base was used for a statue of Drusus Caesar (ib. no. 3103)), ib. no. 3098=L. Stephani Reise durch einige Gegenden des nördlichen Griechenlandes Leipzig 1843 p. 70 f. no. 47 pl. 5 Διονύσῳ Εὐσταφύλῳ | κατὰ χρησμὸν Διὸς | Τροφωνίου, Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3077, 3 ὁ ἱερεὺς τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Τροφωνίου Τροφωνιανός (the priest being named after his god, as Maybaum Der Zeuskult in Boeotien Doberan 1901 p. 11 f. remarks).

Further, at Lebadeia—as I urged in Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 301—Zeus bore the significant title Βασιλεύς (Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3073, 89 f. and 93=Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 589, 89 f. and 93=Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 972, 89 f. and 93 εἰς τὸν ναὸν τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Βασιλέως in an important inscription of s. ii B.C. dealing with the half-built temple on Mt St. Elias to the W. of Livadia (Paus. 9. 39. 4, supra p. 900 n. 0), Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3080, 1 ff. =R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 165 no. 430, 1 ff. [τὸ Γί]διο[ν] δουλι[κὸν | π]αιδάριον Ἀθάνωνα τῦ Δὶ τεῖ Βασιλεῖ κὴ τεῖ Τρεφωνίει ἰαρὸν εἶμεν τὸν πάν[τα | χ]ρόνον ἀπὸ τᾶσδε τᾶς ἁμέρας, Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3081, 2 f. =R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 164 f. no. 429, 2 f. τὰν Γιδίαν δούλαν Ἑρμαΐαν τεῖ Δὶ τεῖ Βασιλεῖ κὴ τῦ Τρε[φ]ωνίν ἰαρὰν εἶμ[εν] | τὸν πάντα χρόνον, Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3083, 6 ff.=R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 163 no. 425, 6 ff.=Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 1392, 6 ff. τὸν | Γίδιον θεράποντα Ἀν|δρικὸν τῦ Δὶ τῦ Βασιλεῦι | κὴ τῦ Τρεφωνίν ἰαρὸν εἶ]μεν παρμείναντα πὰρ | τὰν ματέρα Ἀθανοδώ|ραν Γέτια δέκα, Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3085, 2 ff. τὸ ἴδιον δουλικὸν παι[δάριον | Σωκράτην, παραμείναντα Κι.....] καὶ Ἀριστοκίδι, τὸ[ν πάντα | χρόνον ἱερὸν κατὰ τὴν] ἀνάθ[ε]σιν τῷ Διὶ τῷ Βα[σιλεῖ], ib. no. 3091, 1 ff. =R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 162 no. 422, 1 ff.=Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 1115, 1 ff. Νέων Γασκώ[νδαο] | ἀγωνοθετεί[σας] | τὰ Βασίλεια | τὸ ἑληοχρίσ[τιον] | ἀνέθεικε τοῖ [Δὶ] | τοῖ Βασιλε[ῖι] κ[ὴ τῆ] | πόλι in an inscription which can be dated shortly after 250 B.C., cp. Polyb. 20. 5. 5, 8, 14, Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3096, 1 f. Διὶ Βασιλεῖ | καὶ τῇ πόλει Λεβαδέων | κ.τ.λ., ib. no. 4136, 1 ff. = M. Holleaux in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1890 xiv. 19 ff. no. 10, 27 ff. = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 635 B, 27 ff. Καλλικλίδας Λοκρὸς ἐσς Ὀπόεντος καταβὰς ἐν Τρεφών|νιον ἀνάγγειλε Λεπάδειαν τοῖ Διὶ τοῖ Βασιλεῖι ἀνθέμεν | κὴ τοῖ Τρεφωνίοι, κ.τ.λ., 32 f. ὅστις δέ κα τῶ | Διὸς τῶ Βασιλείος ἐπιμελειθείει τῶ ναῶ, τὸν στέφανον | ὕσστη in the record of an oracle delivered soon after 178 B.C.).

In view of the foregoing passages and inscriptions I would venture to reconstruct the story of the Lebadean cult as follows. Once upon a time there lived in the locality a king of the old magical sort (supra i. 12 ff.), who controlled the weather for his people (supra i. 79) and passed as a human Zeus (supra i. 247 (?), 545 n. 5, 547 (?), 662, 737 (?), ii. 24, 192, 794, 833, 897 n. 0, 940 n. 0, 944 f. n. 0, Append. H (3) and (4), Append. I, Append. J, infra Append. L sub fin., Append. M med.)—one of those who in epic days came to be called Διοτρεφέες βασιλῆες (Il. 1. 176, 2. 98, 196, 445, 14. 27, Od. 3. 480, 4. 44, 63, 7. 49, h. Dion. 11, Hes. theog. 82, 992: see H. Ebeling Lexicon Homericum Lipsiae 1885 i. 311 f.) because it was remembered that they were at least intimately related to the sky-god (either by descent (schol. Il. 1. 176 citing Hes. theog. 96 ἐκ δὲ Διὸς βασιλῆες, Hesych. s.v. Διοτρεφέων), or by special favour (Il. 2. 196 f. with Eustath. in Il. p. 199, 20 ff. ἐνταῦθα δὲ καὶ ἐφερμηνέυει, διὰ τί Διογενεῖς καὶ Διοτρεφεῖς τοὺς βασιλεῖς λέγει, οὐχ ὅτι ἐκ Διὸς τὸ γένος ἕλκουσιν, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐξ ἐκείνου αὐτοῖς ἡ τιμή. φησὶ γάρ· "τιμὴ δ' ἐκ Διός ἐστιν," ἡ τῆς βασιλείας δηλαδή. ἀφιδρύματα γὰρ ὡσανεὶ Διὸς ἐδόκουν εἶναι οἱ βασιλεῖς, cp. ib. p. 316, 33 f.): the relation is moralised by Themist. or. 6 p. 79 A—B ἡ δὲ εἰς ἀνθρώπους ἀρετὴ καὶ πρᾳότης καὶ εὐμένεια...μὴ καὶ μᾶλλόν ἐστιν ἐγγυτέρα τῷ κοινωνοῦντι τῆς φύσεως; αὕτη ποιεῖ θεοείκελον, αὕτη θεοειδῆ, οὕτω Διοτρεφὴς γίνεται βασιλεύς, οὕτω Διογενής, οὕτως αὐτῷ τὴν θειότητα ἐπιφημίζοντες οὐ ψευσόμεθα). Now Διοτρέφης, Διειτρέφης, and similar names have a shortened form Τρέφων (A. Fick Die Griechischen Personennamen[2] Göttingen 1894 p. 269), and Τρέφων by the addition of a common suffix would become Τρεφώνιος. Hence our local king, when dead and buried, was still consulted as Zeus Τρεφώνιος or—since he was responsible for the crops (supra i. 79)—as Zeus Τροφώνιος (Max. Tyr. 41. 2 τὸν Δία...τὸν καρπῶν τροφέα, cp. Zeus Ὀπωρεύς in Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 2733 = Roehl Inscr. Gr. ant. no. 151 = R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 213, 396 no. 567 an early inscription from Akraiphia Κρίτων καὶ Θειόσδοτος τοῖ | Διὶ τὠπωρεῖι. Other appellatives of Zeus with the same general significance are collected and discussed by H. Usener Götternamen Bonn 1896 p. 243 n. 67, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1109 n. 1). In support of this explanation it should be noted that, when Q. Titius and Salvenius obtained from Trophonios at Lebadeia prophecies concerning Sulla, ἀμφότεροι...ταὐτὰ περὶ τῆς ὀμφῆς ἔφραζον· τῷ γὰρ Ὀλυμπίῳ Διὶ καὶ τὸ κάλλος καὶ τὸ μέγεθος παραπλήσιον ἰδεῖν ἔφασαν (L. Cornelius Sulla rer. gestar. frag. 16 Peter ap. Plout. v. Sull. 17). Further, Paus. 9. 39. 10 compares the oracular building to a κρίβανος or 'baking jar,' i.e. one of the domical earthen ovens still used in the east for baking bread (J. H. Middleton in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1888 ix. 313 f.). It was in fact the thólos-tomb of an old Boeotian king (cp. schol. Loukian. p. 255, 21 ff. Rabe). Those who descended into it to consult the divinised dead took honey-cakes in their hands (Aristoph. nub. 506 ff., Paus. 9. 39. 11, Poll. 6. 76, Loukian. dial. mort. 3. 2, Max. Tyr. 14. 2, Hesych. s.v. μαγίδες) for the reptiles that they might encounter (Philostr. v. Apoll. 8. 19 p. 335 Kayser, schol. Aristoph. nub. 508 = Souid. s.v. Τροφωνίου κατὰ γῆς παίγνια, Eudok. viol. 930) because the man who first penetrated its recesses found there two snakes and appeased them with honey-cakes (schol. Aristoph. nub. 508). It was even said that the oracle was delivered by a snake (schol. Aristoph. nub. 508=Souid. s.v. Τροφωνίου κατὰ γῆς παίγνια) or snakes (Souid. s.v. μελιτοῦττα), to which the inhabitants threw honey-cakes. Snakes, it would seem, were as sacred to Trophonios as they were to Asklepios (Paus. 9. 39. 3): indeed, in the cave from which flowed the stream Herkyna there stood images of Trophonios and Herkyna with snakes coiled about their staves so that they resembled Asklepios and Hygieia (Paus. ib.). According to the story current in the district, Herkyna (a sort of Demeter, cp. Lyk. Al. 152 f. Ἐνναία... | Ἕρκυνν' Ἐρινὺς κ.τ.λ. with Tzetz. ad loc. Ἕρκυνν' Ἐρινὺς ἐπώνυμα Δήμητρος. κ.τ.λ., Hesych. Ἑρκύνια (so S. Potter for Ἑρκήνια)· ἑορτὴ Δήμητρος. Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 353 says: 'wohl eine Fruchtbarkeit spendende Quellgöttin, der arkadischen Demeter ähnlich'), playing with Kore, had lost a goose, which flew into a cave and hid beneath a stone till Kore came in and found it: the stream springing from the spot, whence Kore had lifted the stone, was called Herkyna. And in the temple of Herkyna near the bank of the stream a maiden was still to be seen with a goose in her hands (Paus. 9. 39. 2 f.). The story reminds us that Zeus, to win Nemesis or Leda, transformed himself into a goose (supra i. 279 n. 4, 760 n. 2). It may, I think, be divined that the goose in the hands of the maiden was Zeus himself in animal form. For that Zeus was associated with Herkyna appears from Paullus' sacrifice 'Iovi Hercynnaeque' (supra p. 1073). L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1863 p. 94 finds an illustration of the Lebadean tale on a rhytón, shaped like a bull's head, found at Ruvo and now in the Jatta collection, which shows (a) Zeus seated with thunderbolt and sceptre, and (b) a maiden pursuing a goose (published by T. Avellino in the Bull. Arch. Nap. 1856 Nuova Serie iv. 114 f. pl. 11, 2, 1, 3=Reinach Rép. Vases i. 483, 4, 3, 6): but this is perhaps a mere juxtaposition of the sublime with the ridiculous (Maybaum Der Zeuskult in Boeotien Doberan 1901 p. 19 detects 'eine Genrescene'). Be that as it may, Trophonios was not only a dead man, but also a living god (Loukian. dial. mort. 3. 1 f.), and as such received the rites due to a god (Charax frag. 6 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 637 f. Müller) ap. schol. Aristoph. nub. 508 καὶ θύουσιν αὐτῷ ὡς θεῷ), being, as we have seen, frequently identified with Zeus (in Cic. de nat. deor. 3. 55, Arnob. adv. nat. 4. 14, with a chthonian Hermes: cp. Paus. 9. 39. 7). This, however, does not preclude a certain likeness to Amphiaraos; for Trophonios too was swallowed by the earth at a place in Lebadeia, where there was a hole (βόθρος) of Agamedes and a stéle beside it (Paus. 9. 37. 7, cp. 9. 39. 6?). The name Καταβάσιον sometimes given to the oracular building (schol. Aristoph. nub. 508=Souid. s.v. Τροφωνίου κατὰ γῆς παίγνια) bears a superficial resemblance to that of Zeus Καταβάτης, but means presumably the sacred spot 'to which men descend' (cp. Dikaiarchos περὶ τῆς εἰς Τροφωνίου καταβάσεως (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 266 ff. Müller), and a work by Plutarch with the same title—no. 181 in the catalogue of Lamprias (W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[5] München 1911 ii. 1. 371 n. 4)). J. Vürtheim 'De Eugammonis Cyrenaei Telegonia' in Mnemosyne 1901 xxix. 27—30 regards both Agamedes and Trophonios as hypostases of Zeus: 'Sed indigetando ex uno hoc Iove (vel Mercurio) dii tres sunt facti, e quibus unus Clymenus (i.e. Ζεὺς Κλύμενος vel Περικλύμενος) avum repraesentabat, secundus Trophonius antiquo nomine servato vates fiebat, tertius Agamedes (i.e. sagacissimus) indolem prudentem τοῦ χθονίου θεοῦ indicabat; deinde e dis mutati in reges mythicos (ut Amphiaraus ille)' etc....'Vidimus igitur Iovem τροφώνιον χθόνιον e spelunca sua in lucem quasi protractum in duos heroas abiisse, quemadmodum Amphiaraus est natus

e Iove Amphiarao et subterraneus Iuppiter plurimis locis cognominibus variis invocabatur, qualia sunt Ζεὺς Εὔβουλος vel Εὐβουλεύς, Βουλαῖος, Κλύμενος' etc. But this explanation leaves unexplained the peculiar character of the Καταβάσιον. I much prefer to suppose that it was the thólos of an ancient Lebadean king, who in his day played the part of Zeus. The worship of Zeus Βασιλεύς, which—as we have seen—flourished at Lebadeia, implies a similar, though not identical, tradition. We may, in fact, conceive of the local cult as having developed along the following divergent lines:

Trophonios is said to have been succeeded at Lebadeia by St Christopher the martyr (schol. Loukian. p. 255, 15 ff. Rabe); but see Frazer Pausanias v. 198 f. and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner on Paus. 9. 39. 4.

APPENDIX L.

ZEUS ASKLEPIÓS.

The cult of Zeus Ἀσκληπιός at Epidauros, Hermione, and Pergamon is attested by a considerable body of evidence, inscriptional, literary, and monumental.

(1) Zeus Asklepiós in Inscriptions.

M. Fränkel in the Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1000 Epidauros [Γᾶ(?)]ος Ἰο[ύ]λιος Ἀ[σια]]τικός, ἱεραπολή|σας ἔτους πα', | κελεύσα[ν]τι | Διὶ Ἀσκληπιῷ | Σωτῆρι. | with the numeral ιϑ' and the symbol  , which—as C. Blinkenberg in the Nordisk Tidsskrift for Filologi Tredie Række 1894—1895 iii. 175 ff. and in the Ath. Mitth. 1899 xxiv. 384, 391 showed—represents the wreath of Asklepios. P. Kabbadias in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1884 p. 24 no. 65=id. Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 58 no. 136 inserted a comma between Διὶ and Ἀσκληπιῷ, but E. Thraemer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1661 and M. Fränkel loc. cit. rightly reject it. M. Fränkel in the Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1022 Epidauros – – – – – – – ν – – – – | – – – – ος Διογνήτου ἱερεὺς | Ἀσκληπιῷ Διὶ κατὰ ὄναρ. | with the numeral ϙς'. Id. ib. i no. 1086 Epidauros Παταῖος – – – | πυρο[φορή]σας | Ἀσκληπιῶι | Διὶ Τελείωι. | with the numeral ϙζ' and the symbol  , which C. Blinkenberg in the Nordisk Tidsskrift for Filologi Tredie Række 1894—1895 iii. 175 f. took to be 'le rameau...comme un signe de la soumission et du respect le plus profond' and in the Ath. Mitth. 1899 xxiv. 385, 392 described as 'Zweig (oder Baum?),' 'wahrscheinlich...ein Palmenzweig,' while M. Fränkel in the Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i. 188 calls it 'Ramus olivae s. quercus.' C. Blinkenberg in the Ath. Mitth. 1899 xxiv. 385 n. 2 read the name of the dedicator as ΠΑΙΛΙΟΣ i.e. Πόπλιος Αἴλιος and put a comma between Ἀσκληπιῶι and Διί. M. Fränkel in his note on the Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1086 thinks Blinkenberg's reading possible, but demurs to his punctuation. The inventory-symbols, which appear to have been added to the inscriptions c. 306 A.D. (Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i. 186), suffice to prove that at Epidauros Asklepios was then known as Zeus Ἀσκληπιὸς Σωτήρ and Zeus as Asklepios Ζεὺς Τέλειος. A. Boeckh in the Corp. inscr. Gr. i no. 1198=M. Fränkel in the Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 692=W. Prellwitz in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 1. 185 no. 3396 Hermione Ξενότιμος Πολυκλέος | Δάματρι Χθονίαι, Διὶ Ἀ(σκ)λαπιῶι, where K. O. Müller Die Dorier[2] Breslau 1844 i. 403 n. 3 corrected M. Fourmont's reading ΔΙΙΑΡΓΙΛΑΠΙΩΙ to ΔΙΙΑΣΚΛΑΠΙΩΙ. P. Kabbadias Fouilles d'Épidaure i. 58 and W. Prellwitz loc. cit. assume a series of three deities; but A. Boeckh loc. cit. and M. Fränkel loc. cit. treat Διὶ Ἀσκλαπιῶι as one god.

(2) Zeus Asklepiós in Literature.

Their view is supported by E. Thraemer loc. cit., who adds: 'Besonders häufig findet sich Zeus A. bei Aristeides, nicht etwa ein blos rhetorischer Ausdruck für die Hoheit des Gottes, sondern Anlehnung an einen ganz bestimmten Kult der Stadt Pergamos. Dieser hat mit dem schon in hellenistischer Zeit blühenden vorstädtischen Asklepieion freilich nichts zu thun, ist vielmehr eine Neuschöpfung des 2. Jhdts. v. Chr., seine Stätte die grösste Ruine der Unterstadt, die früher Basilika genannte, jetzt in Berlin für Thermen gehaltene Anlage über dem Selinos. Dass wir es hier mit dem Tempel und ἄλσος des Zeus A. zu thun haben, werde ich demnächst an anderem Orte nachweisen.' See further K. Pilling Pergamenische Kulte Naumburg a. S. 1903 p. 23 ff. (cited by Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1908 p. 271) and Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 295, 1094 n. 19, 1456 n. 4. Cp. Aristeid. or. 6. 37 (i. 64 f. Dindorf) καὶ Διὸς Ἀσκληπιοῦ νεὼν οὐκ ἄλλως οἱ τῇδε ἱδρύσαντο. ἀλλ' εἴπερ ἐμοὶ σαφὴς ὁ διδάσκαλος, εἰκὸς δὲ παντὸς μᾶλλον, ἐν ὅτῳ δὲ ταῦτ' ἐδίδαξε τρόπῳ καὶ ὅπως ἐν τοῖς ἱεροῖς λόγοις εἴρηται, οὗτός ἐσθ' ὁ τὸ πᾶν ἄγων καὶ νέμων σωτὴρ τῶν ὅλων καὶ φύλαξ τῶν ἀθανάτων, εἰ δὲ θέλεις τραγικώτερον εἰπεῖν, ἔφορος οἰάκων, σώζων τά τε ὄντα ἀεὶ καὶ τὰ γιγνόμενα. εἰ δ' Ἀπόλλωνος παῖδα καὶ τρίτον ἀπὸ Διὸς νομίζομεν αὐτόν, αὖθις αὖ καὶ συνάπτομεν τοῖς ὀνόμασιν, ἐπεί τοι καὶ αὐτὸν τὸν Δία γενέσθαι λέγουσί ποτε, πάλιν δὲ αὐτὸν ἀποφαίνουσιν ὄντα τῶν ὄντων πατέρα καὶ ποιητήν, or. 23. 283 (i. 456 Dindorf) ὁ δὲ στέφανος ἦν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ τοῦ Διὸς Ἀσκληπιοῦ (for the wreath of Asklepios C. Blinkenberg in the Nordisk Tidsskrift for Filologi Tredie Række 1894—1895 iii. 176 f. and in the Ath. Mitth. 1899 xxiv. 391 cites, not only the Epidaurian symbol, but also a red-figured kratér from Boiotia, now at Athens (Collignon—Couve Cat. Vases d'Athènes p. 626 f. no. 1926), published by O. Kern in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1890 p. 131 ff. pl. 7=Reinach Rép. Vases i. 515, 1 f., which shows (a) Asklepios on a couch feeding a huge snake from a Boeotian cup in his right hand and holding an egg in his left hand, the wall hung with four garlands, (b) Hygieia seated, grasping a sceptre with her left hand and extending her right towards a girl, who carries a basket of fruits and cakes and an oinochóe, the wall hung with three garlands and votive limbs, and a Messenian copper of Roman date (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 112 pl. 22, 16, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. ii. 66 pl. P, 1 f.), on which Asklepios appears with a large wreath by his side), or. 23. 290 (i. 464 Dindorf) καὶ ἅμα λαμβάνω τινὰ ἐπιστολὴν πρὸ ποδῶν κειμένην τοῦ Διὸς Ἀσκληπιοῦ, or. 26. 332 (i. 516 Dindorf) μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα βουλομένοις ἡμῖν κοινῇ περὶ τοῦ ἀναθήματος συνεδόκει καὶ τῷ ἱερεῖ καὶ τοῖς νεωκόροις ἀναθεῖναι ἐν Διὸς Ἀσκληπιοῦ, ταύτης γὰρ οὐκ εἶναι χώραν καλλίω· καὶ οὕτω δὴ τοῦ ὀνείρατος ἡ φήμη ἐξέβη. καὶ ἔστιν ὁ τρίπους ὑπὸ τῇ δεξιᾷ τοῦ θεοῦ, εἰκόνας χρυσᾶς ἔχων τρεῖς, μίαν καθ' ἕκαστον τὸν πόδα, Ἀσκληπιοῦ, τὴν δὲ Ὑγιείας, τὴν δὲ Τελεσφόρου. κ.τ.λ.

(3) Zeus Asklepiós in Art.

In art the type of Asklepios was not uninfluenced by that of Zeus. Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpt. p. 186 ff. regards a whole series of standing Asklepios-statues as copies of a Myronian original representing Zeus (Strab. 637 notes a Zeus by Myron formerly grouped with an Athena and a Herakles by the same sculptor at Samos, but later erected by Augustus in an aedicula on the Capitol at Rome): 'The restful conception that marks the older type of Zeus exactly suited the mild character of Asklepios.' Overbeck Gr. Plastik[4] i. 379 holds that 'das Ideal des Asklepios wesentlich als eine geistreiche Umbildung des von Phidias ausgeprägten Zeusideales erscheint, eine Umbildung, die unter Beibehaltung der meisten charakteristischen Formen doch vermöge ihrer Herabsetzung auf ein reiner Menschliches die Hoheit des Weltregierers durch die herzliche Milde und Klugheit des hilfreichen Heilgottes zu ersetzen weiss': accordingly he traces the canonical bearded type of Asklepios to the cult-statue of the god by Pheidias' pupil Alkamenes at Mantineia (Paus. 8. 9. 1). E. Reisch in the Eranos Vindobonensis Wien 1893 p. 21 f. assumes that this statue showed the god standing as on imperial coppers of Mantineia (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 187 pl. 35, 9, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. ii. 93 pl. S, 15, Rasche Lex. Num. v. 183 f.), and that the same figure appearing with inverted sides on Athenian silver ((i) ΜΕΝΕΔ ΕΠΙΓΕΝΟ Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Attica etc. pp. xliv, 63 pl. 11, 6, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. iii. 150 pl. EE, 2, E. Beulé Les monnaies d'Athènes Paris 1858 p. 331 ff., Head Hist. num.[2] p. 383 accepting J. Sundwall's date, 177 B.C.; (ii) ΔΙΟΚΛΗΣ ΛΕΩΝΙΔΗΣ E. Beulé op. cit. p. 401, Head op. cit.[2] p. 386 dating c. 86 B.C. to time of Augustus) and copper coins (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Attica etc. p. 109 pl. 19, 4, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. iii. 150 pl. EE, 3 f., E. Beulé Les monnaies d'Athènes Paris 1858 p. 331) attests the existence in the Asklepieion at Athens of a similar statue by Alkamenes or one of his pupils. But, after all, the coins adduced by Reisch exhibit common poses of Asklepios (the coppers of Mantineia show schema iii of E. Thraemer's classification in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 636; the silver and copper coins of Athens, schema i ib. i. 634 f.), and it is far from certain that they were intended to portray cult-statues, let alone works by Alkamenes. We are on firmer ground in observing that Kolotes, who helped Pheidias with his Zeus at Olympia (Plin. nat. hist. 34. 87, 35. 54), made a wonderful ivory statue of Asklepios for Kyllene (Strab. 337). If this, like Zeus at Olympia, was a seated figure, Kolotes paved the way for Thrasymedes of Paros, whose chryselephantine Asklepios at Epidauros (bibliography in Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 148 n. 1) was half the size of the Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Athens (Paus. 2. 27. 2) and was, by a natural blunder, attributed to Pheidias himself (Athenag. supplicatio pro Christianis 17 p. 19, 15 f. Schwartz). Thrasymedes' cult-statue was decidedly Zeus-like in appearance—witness the silver (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 156 pl. 29, 14, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 43 pl. L, 3, W. Wroth in the Num. Chron. Third Series 1892 xii. 14 f. pl. 1, 17, J. N. Svoronos in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1901 iv. 11 fig. 6 enlarged=id. Ath. Nationalmus. p. 150 fig. 104, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 441) and copper coins of Epidauros (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 159 pl. 29, 22 f., cp. ib. p. 158 pl. 29, 19, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 43 pl. L, 4 f., J. N. Svoronos in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1901 iv. 10 f. figs. 3—5 enlarged=id. Ath. Nationalmus. p. 150 f. figs. 105—107, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 442), and an imperial copper of Kleonai (Imhoof-Blumer Monn. gr. p. 133, id. and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 32, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 441). The god is seated to the left with his left foot advanced, holding a long sceptre high up in his left hand and extending his right hand over the head of a coiled snake. Beneath his seat (silver coins) or behind it (coppers) lies a dog (see H. Gaidoz 'À propos des chiens d'Épidaure' in the Rev. Arch. 1884 ii. 218—222, O. Keller Die antike Tierwelt Leipzig 1909 i. 141, F. Orth in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 2576 f.). The seat itself is sometimes a high-backed throne (silver and copper coins), sometimes a mere stool (silver coins). Other Zeus-like types of Asklepios seated occur on coppers of Argos—perhaps after the group by Xenophilos and Straton (Paus. 2. 23. 4), which followed the main lines of Thrasymedes' work (Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 40 f. pl. K, 47, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 151 no. 166), Fig. 920.

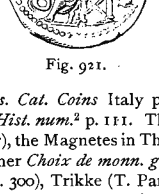

Fig. 921.

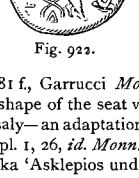

Fig. 922.

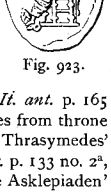

Fig. 923.

Rhegion (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Italy p. 381 f., Garrucci Mon. It. ant. p. 165 pl. 115, 12 f., Head Hist. num.[2] p. 111. The shape of the seat varies from throne to high-backed chair), the Magnetes in Thessaly—an adaptation of Thrasymedes' statue (Imhoof-Blumer Choix de monn. gr.[1] pl. 1, 26, id. Monn. gr. p. 133 no. 2[a], Head Hist. num.[2] p. 300), Trikke (T. Panofka 'Asklepios und die Asklepiaden' in the Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1845 Phil.-hist. Classe p. 353 pl. 1, 13, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Thessaly etc. p. 52 pl. 11, 13, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 311 'Asklepios seated, feeding serpent with bird, or resting on crooked staff'! Fig. 922, from a well-preserved specimen of mine, shows the god to have a sceptre and the bird to be a goose (cp. Loukian. Alex. 13 f. cited infra)), Ainos (Ant. Münz. Nord-Griechenlands ii. 1. 1. 199 pl. 5, 28), Anchialos (ib. ii. 1. 1. 272 pl. 8, 2), Bizye (Rasche Lex. Num. i. 154, 1548, Suppl. i. 295), Serdike (ib. viii. 673, Suppl. i. 295), Mytilene (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Troas, etc. p. 201 pl. 40, 3=supra p. 260 fig. 172, p. 206 pl. 41, 4), Pergamon—perhaps after the statue of Phyromachos (Polyb. 32. 27. 4, Diod. 31 frag. 46 Bekker (ii. 2. 128 Dindorf), Souid. s.v. Προυσίας bis: diverse possibilities are mooted by P. Smith Dict. Biogr. Myth. iii. 608, W. Wroth in the Num. Chron. Third Series 1882 ii. 14 ff., W. Amelung 'Der Asklepios des Phyromachos zu Pergamon' in the Röm. Mitth. 1903 xviii. 1 ff., H. von Fritze in Nomisma 1908 ii. 19 f. Rasche Lex. Num. i. 154, Mionnet Descr. de méd. ant. ii. 604 no. 595, Suppl. v. 443 no. 1018, T. Panofka 'Asklepios und die Asklepiaden' in the Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1845 Phil.-hist. Classe p. 352 f.

pl. 1, 8, p. 353 pl. 1, 17, W. M. Leake Numismata Hellenica London 1856 Asiatic Greece p. 98, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 121 pl. 25, 9, cp. ib. p. 156 pl. 32, 1, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 534), Herakleia Salbake (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Caria, etc. pp. 116, 120 pl. 20, 9), Neapolis in Samaria (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Palestine p. 65 f. pl. 7, 3): cp. coins of Antoninus Pius (Rasche Lex. Num. i. 154, Suppl. i. 295 f., Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] ii. 381 no. 1138). The same Zeus-like figure appears on gems (Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 111 no. 2356, supra

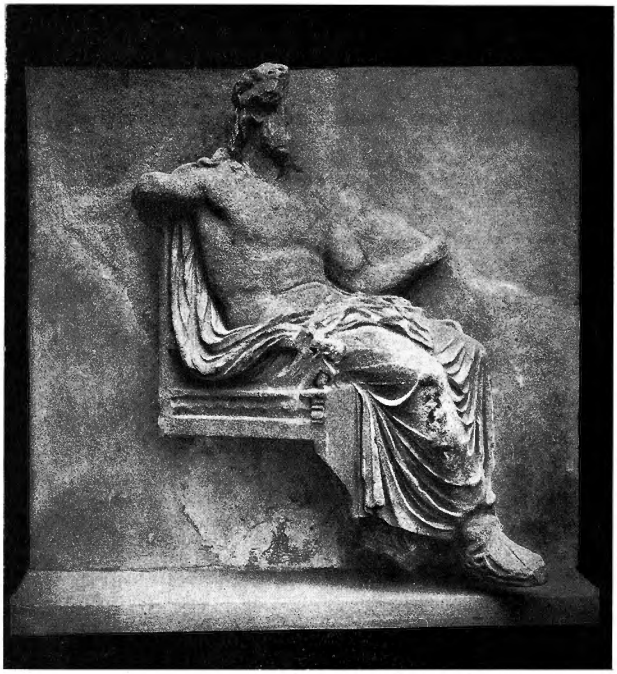

Fig. 924.

i. 357 n. 4, a small convex 'plasma,' which I reproduce in fig. 923 from T. Panofka 'Asklepios und die Asklepiaden' in the Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1845 Phil.-hist. Classe p. 289 pl. 1, 10. Asklepios (? Zeus Ἀσκληπιός) is enthroned to the left with serpent-sceptre: on the back of the throne, behind his head, stands a Nike; beneath his left foot lies a ram's-head; in his right hand is a pine-cone, possibly resting on a phiále (?); before his feet is a second pine-cone (cp. Asklepios at Sikyon as described by Paus. 2. 10. 3 ἐσελθοῦσι δὲ ὁ θεός ἐστιν οὐκ ἔχων γένεια, χρυσοῦ καὶ ἐλέφαντος, Καλάμιδος δὲ ἔργον· ἔχει δὲ καὶ σκῆπτρον καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς ἑτέρας χειρὸς πίτυος καρπὸν τῆς ἡμέρου with Sir J. G. Frazer's note ad loc.). Furtwängler op. cit. p. 124 no. 2677 pl. 24 a cornelian = Asklepios (?) seated on a stool gazing at a beardless head held in his right hand, a serpent-staff before him, ib. p. 248 no. 6753 pl. 48 a cornelian = Asklepios (?) with portrait features, seated on a stool, plucking fruit and placing it in a basket on an altar (?), a serpent-staff before him). Indeed, Asklepios was commonly conceived as a kindly, human Zeus, conversant with the ways of men and able to cure their ailments. The difference between Zeus and Asklepios may be readily grasped, if we set side by side two reliefs of Pentelic marble found in the precinct at Epidauros (Staïs Marbres et Bronzes: Athènes[2] p. 42 f. no. 173 f., P. Kabbadias in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1885 p. 48 ff. pl. 2, 6 and 1894 p. 11 ff. pl. 1, id. Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 22 pl. 9, 21, A. Defrasse—H. Lechat Épidaure Paris 1895 p. 83 ff. with figs., Brunn—Bruckmann Denkm. der gr. und röm. Sculpt. pl. 3, Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt.

Fig. 925.

gr. ii. 186 f. fig. 88). Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. pp. 148—154 no. 173 f. pl. 31 (cp. my figs. 924, 925) has made out a strong case for supposing that they were metopes from the temple of Asklepios, carved in s. iv B.C. On his showing the one (fig. 924) represents Zeus seated on a throne, the arms of which are supported by winged sphinxes and end in rams'-heads. His right hand held a sceptre; his left was extended. An ample himátion, draped over the back of the throne and round the legs of the god, left bare his broad chest. His head wore a metal wreath (holes for attachment remain), and his feet were shod with sandals of strap-work. Altogether he was an august and imposing figure. The other relief (fig. 925) shows Asklepios, very similar in attitude and costume, but curiously diverse in effect. A comfortable man with soft, podgy body, he sits on a cushioned chair with easy back, crosses his feet, and talks with a gesture of his right hand. He might be a Harley Street consultant prescribing for a patient. The same humanity and affability are characteristic of Asklepios, even when an attempt is made to emphasise his Zeus-hood by means of external attributes. For instance, an alliance-copper of Pergamon and Ephesos, struck by Commodus, has Asklepios standing, in his right hand the serpent-staff, in his left a Nike, who offers a wreath to Artemis (Rasche Lex. Num. vi. 888, Suppl. i. 295: but cp. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 164 pl. 33, 4), while coppers of Caracalla show Asklepios with little Telesphoros to the left and the cosmic globe to the right (Rasche Lex. Num. i. 158, Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 775 f., Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] iv. 178 no. 329 f. P·M·TR·P·XVIII·IMP·III·COS·IIII·P·P·S·C· first brass, cp. ib. iv. 179 no. 331 do. do. without Telesphoros. Fig. 926 is from a second brass in my collection. For other examples of Asklepios with the globe see Rasche Lex. Num. Suppl. i. 298 f.: E. Loewe De Aesculapi figura Strassburg 1887 p. 75 n. 7).

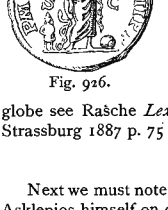

Fig. 926.

(4) Asklepiós and the Snake.

Next we must note the constant association of this human Zeus with a snake. Asklepios himself on occasion took that form. He travelled from Epidauros to Sikyon as a snake drawn by mules; and from the roof of his temple in the latter town hung a small figure of Aristodama, the mother of his son Aratos, riding on a snake (Paus. 2. 10. 3): the creature so ridden was presumably none other than the god, who was believed to have consorted with Aristodama in snake-form (Paus. 4. 14. 7 f., cp. Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 866 n. 1). Again, it was as a snake that Asklepios came from Epidauros to Epidauros Limera on the east coast of Lakonike: he slipped out of the ship and dived into the earth not far from the sea at a place where altars, planted about with olive trees, were erected to him (Paus. 3. 23. 7: see F. W. Hasluck in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1907—1908 xiv. 179). At Lebena in Crete there was a famous temple of Asklepios (Paus. 2. 26. 9, Philostr. v. Apoll. 4. 34 p. 152 f. Kayser), where incubation was practised (Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 839, 1 f. = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. i. 303. 1 f.): the divine snake sent by Asklepios to guide his priest the son of Aristonymos to the temple-spring and forty-seven years later sent on a similar errand to show Soarchos, priest in his father's room, how to replenish the failing spring (see the interesting inscription from Lebena (Leda) published by T. Baunack in Philologus 1890 xlix. 578 ff. and R. Meister ib. 1891 l. 570 ff.) should probably be viewed 'als Inkarnation des Gottes selbst' (Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel.

p. 1448 n. 7). Whether the snake followed by Antinoe, daughter of Kepheus and granddaughter of Aleos, when she refounded Mantineia on its historical site (Paus. 8. 8. 4 f.), was Asklepios (as Miss Harrison apparently assumes in Themis p. 381 n. 5) is very doubtful. In 293—291 B.C. Asklepios was fetched from Epidauros to Rome and duly domiciled on the island in the Tiber; he arrived in the guise of a golden snake (Liv. 10. 47. 7, per. 11 Aesculapi signum... anguem...in quo ipsum numen esse constabat, Ov. met. 15. 622 ff. especially 669 f. cristis aureus altis | in serpente deus etc., 737 erigitur serpens, etc., cp. fast. 1. 291 f., Val. Max. 1. 8. 2 anguis, Plout. quaestt. Rom. 94 τοῦ δράκοντος, Plin. nat. hist. 29. 72 anguis, Aur. Vict. de vir. ill. 22. 1—3 anguis, Sidon. epist. 1. 7. 12 serpentis Epidaurii: see further O. Richter Topographie der Stadt Rom[2] München 1901 p. 282 f., H. Jordan—C. Hülsen Topographie der Stadt Rom im Alterthum Berlin 1907 i. 3. 633—635)—a belief commemorated on coppers of the gens Rubria (Babelon Monn. rép. rom. ii. 406 ff. nos. 5 f. and 9 figs., Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. i. 312 pl. 38, 5, i. 313 n. 1 fig. under date c. 86 B.C.) and on bronze medallions of Antoninus Pius (Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 9 pl. 43, 1 = my fig. 927 and ii. 9 pl. 43, 2, Brit. Mus. Cat. Medallions p. 7 no. 4 pl. 8, 3, cp. p. 7 no. 5, Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 51 ff. figs., Baumeister Denkm. i. 140 fig. 150, Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 20 fig. Father Tiber, reclining amid his waters, rests his left elbow on an urn, holds a reed in his left hand, and extends his right to greet the snake on its arrival. The galley, whose steersman and rowers(?) are visible, passes under the Pons Fabricius towards the island, where buildings and a tree mark the new home of the god). Lastly, Lucian in his Alexandros or the Sham Seer tells how an impostor from Abonou Teichos, a coast-town in Paphlagonia, purchased a large tame snake at Pella in Makedonia (Loukian. Alex. 7), and with the aid of a confederate spread the news that Asklepios and his father Apollon were about to visit the Abonotichians (ib. 10). The rascals had made a snake's head of linen, painted it with a human expression, given it a mouth that could open and shut by means of horse-hairs, and added a black forked tongue that worked in the same way (ib. 12). Thus equipped Alexandros went to Abonou Teichos, where the worthy inhabitants were already digging the foundations of a new temple to greet the advent of the gods, buried a goose's egg containing a young reptile in the mud after dark (ib. 13) and duly discovered 'the new-born Asklepios' next morning to the astonishment of the bystanders (ib. 14). Alexandros now became the exhibitor of the god. He took into his bosom 'the Asklepios from Pella,' twined its body round his neck and let its tail hang down, but kept its head hidden under his armpit and showed the linen mask instead (ib. 15). The people were astounded at the miraculously rapid growth of the snake (ib. 16). Bithynians, Galatians, Thracians came flocking in; pictures, portraits, and images, some of bronze, some of silver, were made; and the god was named Glykon in obedience to an oracle of his own (ib. 18 εἰμὶ Γλύκων, τρίτον αἷμα Διός, φάος ἀνθρώποισι). From this time onwards Alexandros drove a roaring trade in oracles (ib. 19 ff.). A tube consisting of the windpipes of cranes introduced into the artificial head enabled an assistant outside to make 'the linen Asklepios' answer questions and deliver 'autophone oracles'' (ib. 26). The fame of Glykon spread to Italy and made a sensation at Rome (ib. 30 ff.). Mysteries were instituted with hierophants, daidoûchoi, and a full ceremonial lasting three days (ib. 38 ff.). Alexandros even petitioned the emperor that new coins might be struck with an obverse design of Glykon and a reverse of himself bearing the stémmata of Asklepios and the hárpe of Perseus (ib. 58). The whole narrative is sufficiently amazing. But perhaps more amazing still is the fact that much collateral evidence can be quoted in its support. Copper coins of Abonou Teichos from the reigns of Antoninus Pius, Lucius Verus, Geta, Severus Alexander, Gordianus Pius, and Trebonianus Gallus represent the new-fangled god as a snake with a more or less human face (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Pontus, etc. p. 83 pl. 19, 1 = my fig. 928, Waddington—Babelon—Reinach Monn. gr. d'As. Min. i. 129 ff. pl. 17, 12, 13, 16 (= my fig. 929), 19 with legend ΓΛΥΚΩΝ, cp. pl. 17, 20, 21, 22, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 505). Coppers of Nikomedeia in Bithynia struck by Caracalla and Maximus give the snake a definitely human head (M. Dumersan Description des médailles antiques du cabinet de feu M. Allier de Hauteroche Paris 1829 p. 70 pl. 11, 10, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Pontus, etc. p. 187 no. 48, Waddington—Babelon—Reinach Monn. gr. d'As. Min. i. 513, 545 pl. 94, 12 = my fig. 930, pl. 94, 13 f.,

Fig. 927.

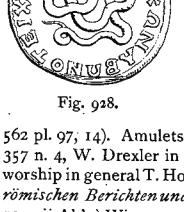

Fig. 928.

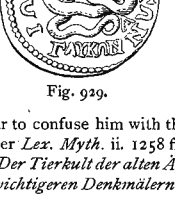

Fig. 929.

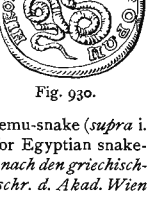

Fig. 930.

562 pl. 97, 14). Amulets appear to confuse him with the Khnemu-snake (supra i. 357 n. 4, W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1258 ff., cp. for Egyptian snake-worship in general T. Hopfner Der Tierkult der alten Ägypter nach den griechisch-römischen Berichten und den wichtigeren Denkmälern (Denkschr. d. Akad. Wien 1913 ii Abh.) Wien 1913 p. 136 ff.). Thus an agate in the Behr collection showed Khnemu as a lion-headed snake, with a radiate crown, accompanied by several inscriptions—ΧΝΟΥΒΙC in the field, ΓΛΥΚΩΝΑ in front, ΙΑΩ beneath, and a magical formula on the other side of the stone (F. Lenormant Description des médailles et antiquités composantes le cabinet de M. le baron Behr Paris 1857 p. 228 no. 76, id. in the Gaz. Arch. 1878 iv. 183, E. Babelon in the Rev. Num. iv Série 1900 iv. 28 fig. 6). Again, a red jasper in the Sorlin-Dorigny collection at Constantinople has Asklepios standing with a raven(?) behind his shoulder and a human-headed or lion-headed snake before him (F. Lenormant 'Un monument du culte de Glycon' in the Gaz. Arch. 1878 iv. 179 ff. with fig., E. Babelon in the Rev. Num. iv Série 1900 iv. 27 f. fig. 5). Two inscriptions from Apulum (Carlsburg) prove that the cult of Glykon reached Dacia (Corp. inscr. Lat. iii no. 1021 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4079 Glyconi | M. Ant. | Onesas | iusso dei | l. p., Corp. inscr. Lat. iii no. 1022 Gl(y)co | M. Aur. | Theodo|tus ius|so dei p.). A third inscription found at Blatsche between Skoupoi (Uskub) and Stoboi associates the beast with the false prophet (Corp. inscr. Lat. iii Suppl. no. 8238 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no 4080 Iovi et Iuno|n. [et] Dracco|n. et Dracce|nae et Ale|xandro Epi|tynchanus [C. | F]uri Octavi[ani] | c. v.

posuit). See further F. Cumont 'Alexandre d'Abonotichos' in the Mémoires de l'Académie Royale des Sciences de Belgique 1887 xl. 13 ff., 37 ff. and in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 1634 f., vii. 1468 f., E. Babelon 'Le faux prophète Alexandre d'Abonotichos' in the Rev. Num. iv Série 1900 iv. 1—30 with 6 figs., W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1692 f., Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1487, O. Weinreich 'Alexandros der Lügenprophet und seine Stellung in der Religiosität des II. Jahrhunderts n. Chr.' in the Neue Jahrb. f. klass. Altertum 1921 xlvii. 129—151. The main point to bear in mind—a point commonly missed—is that the populace regarded Asklepios as essentially serpentiform.

(5) The Name Asklepiós.

This leads us to consider the question whether Ἀσκληπιός originally meant 'Snake' and nothing more. The name occurs in a puzzling variety of forms:

Ἀγλαόπης (Hesych. Ἀγλαόπης· ὁ Ἀσκληπιός. Λάκωνες. So Musurus for .γλαόπης cod., cp. Bekker anecd. i. 329, 23, Souid. s.v. ἄγμασι, Zonar. lex. s.v. ἄγμασι).

Ἀγλαπιός (G. Dickins in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1904—1905 xi. 131 f. no. 1 fig. 1 publishes a stéle at Thalamai (Koutiphari) inscribed ΛΑΝΙΚΙΑ | ΑΝΕΘΗΚΕ | ΤΩΙΑΓΛΑΠΙΩΙ in lettering which M. N. Tod ib. assigns to c. 350 B.C. and W. Kolbe in Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. i no. 1313 to s. v B.C.).

Ἀσκληπιός in epic, Ionic, Attic. Ἀσσκληπιός thrice in Attic inscriptions (K. Meisterhans Grammatik der attischen Inschriften[3] Berlin 1900 p. 89 n. 770), cp. Ἀσσκληπιάδης (id. ib. p. 89 n. 771), Ἀσσκληπιόδωρος (id. ib. p. 89 n. 772).

Ἀσκλαπιός in non-Ionic dialects. Ἀσκαλπιός in a Gortynian inscription (F. Halbherr in the Mon. d. Linc. 1889 i. 38 ff. C, 7 ΑΣΚΑΛΠΙΟΝ). Ἀσκλειπιός in a Spartan inscription (Corp. inscr. Gr. i no. 1444, 10 ΑΣΚΛΕΙΠΙΟΥ) turns out to be a mistaken reading (H. J. W. Tillyard and A. M. Woodward in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1906—1907 xiii. 212 ΑΣΚΛΗΠΙΟΥ, Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. i no. 602, 10).

Ἀσχλαπιός in a Boeotian inscription (Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3191 f., 3 ΑΣΧΛΑΠΙΩ, 37 f. [ΑΣΧ]ΛΑΠΙΩ Orchomenos), cp. Ἀσχλάπων (Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 397 no. 571[a], 10 Akraiphia), but Ἀσκλαπίχιος (ib. i. 174 no. 476, 40 Orchomenos).

Αἰσχλαβιός in the alphabet of Megara or Corinth on the leg of an archaic bronze statuette from Bologna (Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 6737, 2, Roehl Inscr. Gr. ant. no. 549, 2, Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 356, 2, Roberts Gk. Epigr. i. 146 no. 118 (c), 2 ΑΙΣΧΛΑΒΙΟΙ).

Αἰσκλαπιός in the oldest Epidaurian inscription (P. Cavvadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 37 no. 8 on a bronze phiále, to be dated at the beginning of s. v B.C., if not earlier still, Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1202 ΤΟΙΑΙΜΚΛΑΠΙΟΙ) and in an inscription from Troizen (E. Legrand in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1893 xvii. 90 ff. no. 4, 3, Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 771, 3 ΤΩΙΑΙΣΚΛΑΠ[ΙΩΙ]).

Αἰσκλαπιεύς in another early Epidaurian inscription (P. Cavvadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 37 no. 10 from the rim of a bronze vessel ΙΙΙΙΜΙΞΙΓΛΑϒΚΙΑ⊣=τ' Αἰσκλαπιεῖ μ' [ἀνέθηκε—]).

Aisclapius in an inscription painted on an Etruscan cup (H. Jordan in the Ann. d. Inst. 1884 lvi. 357 f. pl. R, Wilmanns Ex. inscr. Lat. no. 2827 b, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 2958 𐤀𐤔𐤒𐤋𐤐𐤉).

Aesclapius in an inscription at Narona (Corp. inscr. Lat. iii no. 1766 AESCLAPIO, cp. ib. iii no. 1767, 1 [AE]SCLAPIO).

Aiscolapius in an inscription found in the Tiber (Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 30846, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 3833).

Aescolapius in a trilingual (Latin, Greek, Phoenician) inscription on the base of a bronze column at Santuacci in Sardinia (Corp. inscr. Lat. x no. 7856, 1, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 1874, 1, Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 608, 1 AESCOLAPIO) and in two inscriptions from Rome (Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 30849, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 3834; Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 30847, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 3835).

Aisculapius in an inscription from the Tiber-island (Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 12, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 3837).

Aesculapius, the normal form in Latin.

Esculapius on a bronze plate from the ager Praenestinus (Corp. inscr. Lat. xiv no. 2846, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 3838).

In view of Asklepios' early connexion with Thessaly, special importance must be attached to the names Ἀσκαλαπιάδας at Iolkos (H. G. Lolling in the Ath. Mitth. 1883 viii. 115 no. 9, 1, Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 378 no. 1284, 1 [Ἀσ]καλαπιάδ[ας]) and Ἀσκαλαπιόδωρος at Phalanna (H. G. Lolling in the Ath. Mitth. 1883 viii. 109 f. line 3, Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 384 no. 1330, 5 ΑΣΚΑΛΑΠΙΟΔΟΥΡΟΙ), since these point to an original Thessalian *Ἀσκαλαπιος (E. Thraemer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1642): cp. Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 1. 186 no. 3398 b, 21 Hermione ΑΣΚΛΑΛΑ gen. of Ἀσκαλᾶς, J. H. Mordtmann in the Ath. Mitth. 1885 x. 13 no. 1 near Kotiaeion Ἀσκλᾶς καὶ Ἀσκληπᾶ[ς] | οἱ Ἀσκληπᾶ (A. Fick in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1901 xxvi. 319). The ultimate meaning of Ἀσκληπιός has been much debated, and is still questionable. The ancients—children in philology—jumped to the conclusion that the second element in the name was ἥπιος, 'mild,' and used this word (Lyk. Al. 1054 with Tzetz. ad loc., et. mag. pp. 154, 45 ff., 434, 15 ff., Tzetz. chil. 6. 991, 10. 712, Eustath. in Il. pp. 463, 34 f., 860, 9 ff., in Od. p. 1447, 48 f., Cornut. theol. 33 p. 70, 5 ff. Lang (?), cp. Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 Add. no. 171 b, 8 and 13=carm. pop. 47, 6 and 11 Bergk⁴=Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 4. 53. 4 and 9) or its compounds ἠπιοδώτης, ἠπιόδωρος, ἠπιόφρων (Bruchmann Epith. deor. p. 51, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1441) of the god himself—Demosthenes is even said to have sworn by Ἀσκλήπιος, not Ἀσκληπιός (Plout. de vit. decem orat. 8, Herodian. περὶ καθολικῆς προσῳδίας 5 (i. 123, 1 ff. Lentz), Eustath. in Il. p. 463, 37 ff., in Od. p. 1447, 64 ff., Favorin. lex. p. 296, 40 f.),—and Ἠπιώνη, Ἠπιώ of his partner (Cornut. theol. 33 p. 71, 2 ff. Lang: see further Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1441 n. 9, E. Thraemer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 186 ff.). But the first element puzzled them. They tried ἀσκεῖν (schol. Il. 4. 195, Eustath. in Il. p. 463, 35 f., Favorin. lex. p. 296, 43 f.), ἀσκελές (et. mag. p. 154, 43 ff., 47 f., et. Gud. p. 83, 39 ff., Orion p. 9, 14 ff., Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 1054, Favorin. lex. p. 296, 38 ff.), Ἄσκλης a supposed king of Epidauros (Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 1054, Favorin. lex. p. 296, 41 ff., cp. et. mag. p. 154, 45 ff., Eustath. in Il. p. 463, 34 f.), Αἴγλη the mother of Asklepios (P. Cavvadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 35 f. no. 7, 50 ff.=Isyll. 19 f. Weir Smyth). Modern scholars have gone from bad to worse, starting with ἄλκω, 'I help,' whence an assumed *Ἀλξηπιος (A. F. Pott in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1857 vi. 401), and, after numerous blind alleys (see E. Thraemer in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 616 and in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1643), ending in the quartier juif with ish-kalbi, 'l'homme-chien' (C. Clermont-Ganneau in the Revue critique 1884 p. 502). Much more attractive is the view first put forward in 1860 by Welcker Gr. Götterl. ii. 736, viz. that Ἀσκληπιός is akin to ἀσκάλαβος, 'lizard,'—a word which may well have had at one time a wider meaning and denoted 'snake.' This idea has commended itself, not only to mythologists (J. Maehly Die Schlange im Mythus und Cultus der classischen Völker Basel 1867 pp. 6, 8 f., M. Mayer Die Giganten und Titanen Berlin 1887 p. 93 n. 105, L. Deubner De incubatione Lipsiae 1900 p. 37, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1443 ff.), but also to philologists. C. Angermann in Studien zur griechischen und lateinischen Grammatik herausgegeben von G. Curtius und K. Brugmann 1876 ix. 247 f. would trace both Ἀσκληπιός and ἀσκάλαβος, ἀσκαλαβώτης (perhaps also the bird-names ἀσκαλώπας, σκολόπαξ, and the insect-name σκολόπενδρα) to a root skalp or skarp, a lengthened form of skar, 'springen, sich hin und her bewegen.' A. Vaníček Griechisch-lateinisches etymologisches Wörterbuch Leipzig 1877 i. 1079 says: '(σκαλ-π, σκλα-π, σκλη-π) Ἀ-σκληπ-ιό-ς m. (urspr. Schlange).' A. Fick in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1901 xxvi. 313—323 'Asklepios und die heilschlange,' followed by Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 58, holds that Asklepios was originally a snake and explains the Thessalian *Ἀσκαλαπιος and the Cretan Ἀσκαλπιός by the help of the Hesychian glosses σκαλαπάζει· ῥέμβεται and σκαλπάζειν· ῥεμβωδῶς βαδίζειν. Thus Ἀσκληπιός would mean 'Creepy-crawly'—a likely enough name for a snake. Ἀσκάλαβος, 'lizard,' and ἀσκάλαφος, a species of 'owl' (Apollod. 2. 5. 12, Ov. met. 5. 538 ff., interp. Serv. in Verg. Aen. 4. 462 f.) that haunts holes in the rock (cp. Apollod. 1. 5. 3, 2. 5. 12: see further D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 36), are very possibly related forms, if not also σκολόπαξ, ἀσκολόπας, ἀσκαλώπας, 'woodcock' (id. ib. pp. 36, 155).

(6) Thessalian Kings as impersonations of Zeus.

The explanation of Ἀσκληπιός as formerly denoting a snake is perfectly compatible with the belief that the original bearer of the name was a Thessalian king. Drakon of Thebes, Ophis of Salamis, Python of Delphoi, etc. were all recognised as kings by Euhemeristic writers (see W. H. Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1201, O. Höfer ib. iii. 925 f., R. Wagner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 1646 f.). But here, as elsewhere (supra i. 662), Euhemerism had a foundation in fact. Greeks and Romans alike regarded the soul of the dead as able to manifest itself in the form of a snake (the evidence is conveniently summarised by E. Küster Die Schlange in der griechischen Kunst und Religion Giessen 1913 p. 62 ff., cp. W. Wundt Völkerpsychologie Leipzig 1906 ii. 2. 72 ff., id. Elements of Folk Psychology trans. E. L. Schaub London—New York 1916 pp. 190 ff., 214, 368, O. Waser 'Über die äussere Erscheinung der Seele' etc. in the Archiv f. Rel. 1913 xvi. 354 ff.). A deceased king might well appear as a great beneficent snake, or at least be accompanied by such. And, when his soul-animal had come to be viewed as a mere attendant or attribute, explanatory myths would arise. Thus Asklepios was said to have reared his snake in an oak growing in a glen of Mt Pelion called Pelethronion (Nik. ther. 438 ff. with schol. and Eutekn. ad loc.: Class. Rev. 1904 xviii. 83. Cp. the story told of Melampous by Apollod. 1. 9. 11), or again to have been placed by Zeus in the sky as the constellation Ophiuchus (supra i. 755 n. 9) because he had raised from the dead Hippolytos son of Theseus (pseudo-Eratosth. catast. 6, Hyg. poet. astr. 2. 14) or Glaukos son of Minos (Hyg. poet. astr. 2. 14). Such tales are late and of little value. It is more important to note that the earliest home of Asklepios was in central Thessaly (E. Thraemer in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 623 and more fully in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1643 ff., 1662 f.), and that at Trikke he had an underground ádyton (P. Cavvadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 34 ff. no. 7, 27 ff. πρῶτος Μᾶλος ἔτευξεν Ἀπόλλωνος Μαλεάτα | βωμὸν καὶ θυσίαις ἠγλάϊσεν τέμενος. | οὐδέ κε Θεσσαλίας ἐν Τρίκκῃ πειραθείης | εἰς ἄδυτον καταβὰς Ἀσκληπιοῦ, εἰ μὴ ἐφ' ἁγνοῦ | πρῶτον Ἀπόλλωνος βωμοῦ θύσαις Μαλεάτα. Cp. J. Ziehen 'Über die Lager des Asklepiosheiligtums von Trikka' in the Ath. Mitth. 1892 xvii. 195—197 and especially P. Kastriotes Τὸ ἐν Τρίκκῃ τῆς Θεσσαλίας Ἀσκληπιεῖον Athens 1903, id. Τρίκκης Ἀσκληπιεῖον in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1918 pp. 65—73) comparable with the Καταβάσιον of Trophonios at Lebadeia, which we have already (supra p. 1076) taken to be the thólos of an ancient king (A. J. B. Wace—M. S. Thompson Prehistoric Thessaly Cambridge 1912 p. 272 Index record thólos-tombs at Dhimini, Ghura, Kapakli, Marmariani, Rakhmani (?), Sesklo, Zerelia (?)). Moreover, there is reason to think that in early days Thessalian kings were wont to pose as Zeus. Salmoneus, the very type of a would-be Zeus (supra i. 12, 318), was a king hailing from Thessaly (Apollod. i. 9. 7, schol. Aristoph. ran. argum. 4, Souid. s.v. Σαλμωνεύς. See further J. Ilberg in Roscher Lex. Myth. iv. 290). Keyx, who declared that his wife was Hera, and Alkyone, who dubbed her husband Zeus (Apollod. i. 7. 4, schol. Il. 9. 562, Eustath. in Il. p. 776, 19 ff., schol. Aristoph. av. 250. K. Wernicke in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1580 f. suggests that the story in this form goes back to the Hesiodic Κήυκος γάμος), were commonly described as king and queen of Trachis in south Thessaly (schol. Aristoph. av. 250, Loukian. Alcyon 1, Ov. met. 11. 268 ff., 382 ff., Lact. Plac. narr. fab. 11. 10. See further K. Wernicke loc. cit. and H. W. Stoll in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 249 ff., ii. 1181 f.). Ixion, king of the Thessalian Lapithai, aspired to the hand of Hera, while conversely Zeus was enamoured of Ixion's wife Dia (Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 420, 1906 xx. 378)—a case paralleled by that of Hera in love with the Thessalian Iason and Zeus in love with Medeia (supra i. 248). Now it is a very noteworthy fact that all these names, indeed the great bulk of the personages considered in the present discussion,—Amphiaraos, Trophonios, Asklepios, Askalaphos, Salmoneus, Alkyone, Ixion, Iason—belonged to the family of Aiolos (see the pedigree conveniently set forth by Gerhard Gr. Myth. ii. 223 ff.). The inference is that this custom of regarding the king as Zeus was characteristic of the Aeolians settled in Thessaly and central Greece. Asklepios, like the rest, was ab origine a king (he is ἄναξ in h. Asklep. 5, Aristoph. Plout. 748, Herond. 4. 1 and 18, P. Cavvadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 36 no. 7, 79, Corp. inscr. Gr. i no. 2292, 1 (Delos) = Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 803. 1 = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. i. 225. 1 (see R. Wünsch in the Archiv f. Rel. 1904 vii. 95 ff.); βασιλεύς in Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 5974 B, 1 (Rome) = Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 967 b, 1 = Kaibel Epigr. Gr. Add. no. 805 a, b tit. = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. i. 247 β n., Ail. de nat. an. 9. 33, Orph. εὐχὴ πρὸς Μουσαῖον 37, Cougny op. cit. 6. 180. 2 f. Ἀσκλαπιὸς Καῖσαρ in W. R. Paton—E. L. Hicks The Inscriptions of Cos Oxford 1891 p. 130 no. 92, 5 f., ib. p. 153 no. 130, 4 f. = Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 1. 375 f. no. 3672, 5 f. is the deified Claudius), who played the part of Zeus during his life and was worshipped as Zeus after his death (E. Thraemer in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 620 and in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1654 f. draws attention to the fact that several Greek localities could point to an alleged grave of Asklepios: Cic. de nat. deor. 3. 57 Aesculapiorum...secundus, secundi Mercurii frater. is, fulmine percussus, dicitur humatus esse Cynosuris, Clem. Al. protr. 2. 30. 3 p. 22, 14 Stählin οὗτος μὲν οὖν κεῖται κεραυνωθεὶς ἐν τοῖς Κυνοσουρίδος ὄρεσι with schol. ad loc. p. 305, 31 Stählin κώμη Λακεδαίμονος, Lyd. de mens. 4. 142 p. 164, 8 ff. Wünsch δεύτερος Ἰσχύος τοῦ Ἐλάτου καὶ Κορωνίδος,<ὃς ἐν τοῖς Κυνοσουρίδος suppl. C. B. Hase> ὁρίοις ἐτάφη, cp. Acta Sanctorum edd. Bolland. Octobris ix. 546 ('Passio S. Philippi episc., Severi presb. et Hermæ diac.' 1. 8) ignis ille divinus...et Scolapium medicum in monte Cynozuridos fulminatum consecrationem mereri in gentibus fecit, where cod. Bodecense rightly reads Æsculapium and the Bollandist editors wrongly (?) comment: 'apud Cynozurim Thessaliæ urbem sepultus' (ib. ix. 549). Cic. de nat. deor. 3. 57 tertius, Arsippi et Arsinoae,...cuius in Arcadia non longe a Lusio flumine sepulcrum et lucus ostenditur, Lyd. de mens. 4. 142 p. 164, 10 ff. Wünsch τρίτος Ἀρσίππου καὶ Ἀρσινόης τῆς Λευκίππου·...καὶ τάφος αὐτῷ ἐν Ἀρκαδίᾳ. Clem. Rom. hom. 6. 21 (ii. 213 Migne) Ἀσκληπιὸς ἐν Ἐπιδαύρῳ (sc. κεῖται), Rufin. recognit. 10. 24 in Epidauro Aesculapii (sc. sepulcrum demonstratur). Cp. Tert. ad nat. 2. 14 Athenienses...Aesculapio et matri inter mortuos parentant with Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen pp. 217 n. 4, 218, 222 and F. Kutsch Attische Heilgötter und Heilheroen Giessen 1913 p. 16 ff.).

(7) Telesphoros.

Such an one might even be called Zeus Τέλεως (cp. the dedication Ἀσκληπιῶι Διὶ Τελείωι supra p. 1076). Further, the title τελεσφόρος, 'bringing the end, bringing to maturity' (see Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. vii. 1971 C ff.), appropriate to the divine monarch (h. Zeus 1. f. Ζῆνα θεῶν τὸν ἄριστον ἀείσομαι ἠδὲ μέγιστον, |εὐρύοπα, κρείοντα, τελεσφόρον, κ.τ.λ.) and actually found on a Phrygian altar as his appellative (supra p. 838 n. 1), was a likely epithet of his human counterpart. And here it will be remembered that antiquity often associates with Asklepios a subordinate deity Telesphoros, who has been the subject of much speculation (L. Schenck De Telesphoro deo Göttingen 1888, W. Wroth 'Telesphorus' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1882 iii. 283—300, ib. 1883 iv. 161 f., ib. 1884 v. 82 n. 2, Frazer Pausanias iii. 70 f., S. Reinach 'Télesphore' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1901 xiv. 343—349=id. Cultes, mythes et religions Paris 1906 ii. 255—261, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1455 n. 1, alib., id. Myth. Lit. 1908 p. 622, Harrison Themis p. 382 f.). We shall not be far wrong, if we regard him as the procreative power of Asklepios, split off from the god, to whom he at first belonged by way of appellative, and endowed with a separate and secondary personality. The existence of Grabphalli (supra i. 53 n. 1) and the birth-myths of Romulus and Servius Tullius (supra p. 1059) lead us to suppose that the buried ancestor in his procreative capacity might take the form of a simple phallós (with this interchange of human and phallic shapes cp. the statue of Nabu at Calah figured in two aspects by C. F. Lehmann-Haupt in Roscher Lex. Myth. iv. 685 f.). Accordingly we sometimes meet with representations of Telesphoros as a phallós draped to look like a man or a boy. C. M. Grivaud de la Vincelle Recueil de monumens antiques, la plupart inédits, et découverts dans l'ancienne Gaule Paris 1817 i. 86 f., ii. pl. 10, 1—5 (of which 1, 3=my fig. 931) and pl. 11, 5 (Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 75 no. 1, J. A. Dulaure Histoire abrégée de différens cultes[2] Paris 1825 ii. 242 f.) published a bronze statuette, found some forty years earlier in a tomb near Amiens, which shows a bearded male figure clad in a short tunic, a cape with a peaked hood (bardocucullus), and boots (caligae): the upper part—head, hood, and cape—can be lifted off, revealing a body that consists in an erect phallós. Similarly T. Panofka 'Asklepios und die Asklepiaden' in the Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1845 Phil.-hist. Classe pp. 324, 357 pl. 6, 5 and 5 a (=my fig. 932, C. O. Müller—F. Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst Göttingen 1856 ii. 4. 4 pl. 61, 789, Reinach Rép. Stat. ii.

469 no. 8 f.) published a bronze statuette at Copenhagen (L. Müller Description des antiquités du Musée-Thorvaldsen Section i et ii Copenhague 1847 p. 162 f. no. 50 height without the peak 3 Danish inches, with it 4, S. B. Smith Kort Veiledning i Antikkabinettet i Kjøbenhavn Kjöbenhavn 1864 p. 38 no. 123a), which repeats the type, except that the figure is a beardless youth and wears no sandals. One whose function is to bring to maturity might well be portrayed as either man or boy. Asklepios himself was beardless on occasion (Paus. 2. 10. 3 Sikyon (supra p. 1080), 2. 13. 5 Phlious, 8. 28. 1 Gortys. Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpture pp. 277 n. 5, 300, E. Thraemer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1690 f., 1693 ff.) or even infantile (Paus. 8. 25. 11 Thelpousa, 8. 32. 5 Megalopolis. Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 5974 A, B (Rome)=Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 967

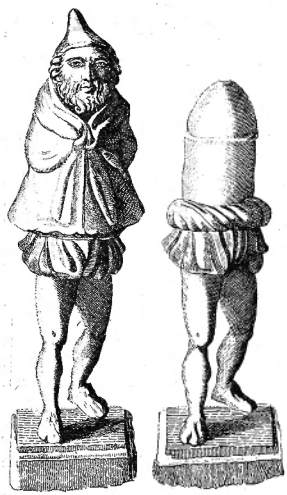

Fig. 931.

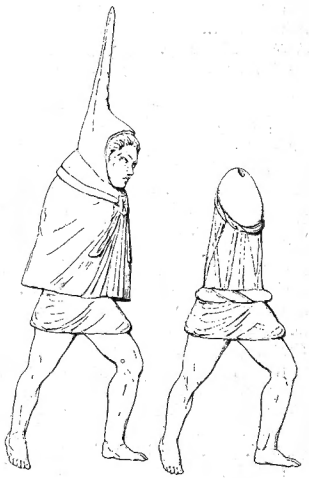

Fig. 932.

a, b = Kaibel Epigr. Gr. Add. no. 805 a, b = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. i. 247 a, β: Overbeck Gr. Plastik[4] ii, 181). The Copenhagen bronze is inscribed OMORION (Panofka loc. cit.), which could be connected with Zeus Ὁμόριος (Steph. Thes. Gr. Ling. v. 1984 A quotes the title from Polyb. 2. 39. 6; but see supra i. 17 n. 4) or Ὅριος (Dion. Hal. ant. Rom. 2. 74)=Iupiter Terminus or Terminalis (supra i. 53, 520 n. 2. Cp. Aug. de civ. Dei 4. 11 ipse in aethere sit Iuppiter,... in Iano initiator, in Termino terminator. E. Samter 'Die Entwickelung des Terminuskultes' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1913 xvi. 137—144 argues that the boundary-stone could not have been originally sacred to Iupiter, because at its erection offerings were placed in the hole prepared for it (Siculus Flaccus in the Grom. vet. i. 141 Lachmann)—a procedure suggestive of a chthonian rather than of a celestial power. But the lord of the property, who had been a celestial Iupiter during his life would be a chthonian Iupiter after his death). B. Borghesi in the Bull. d. Inst.

1831 p. 182 ff. and E. Gerhard in the Ann. d. Inst. 1846 xviii. pl. S, ib. 1847 xix. 327 ff. drew attention to a white marble Hermaphrodite-term, found near Ravenna, which is inscribed (Orelli—Henzen Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5648 = Corp. inscr. Lat. xi no. 351) IOV · TER · M | VAL · ANT · | AN · TI · CO · | V · L · S · | ☿ ramus, i.e., according to Borghesi, Iov(i) Ter(minali) M(arcus) Val(erius) Ant(onius) Antico v(otum) l(ibens) s(olvit), or, as Mommsen suggested, M. Val(erius) Ant(iochus) An(nii) Ti(beriani) co(mes). It should be noted also that a denarius of Augustus, struck

Fig. 933.

Fig. 934.

c. 29—27 B.C., has obv. head of Octavian, rev. IMP | CAESAR an ithyphallic term of Octavian with a bay-wreath on his head and a winged thunderbolt at his feet (Babelon Monn. rép. rom. ii. 64 no. 153 fig., cp. ib. ii. 65 no. 155 fig., Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. ii. 16 no. 4360 f. pl. 60, 5 f., cp. ib. ii. 16 no. 4362 pl. 60, 7 = my fig. 933, Emp. i. pp. cxxiii f., 102 nos. 628—630 pl. 15, 10 f., cp. ib. i. 104 no. 637 pl. 15, 16, A. Boutkowski Dictionnaire numismatique Leipzig 1881 i. 333 f. no. 732, cp. ib. i. 334 no. 733. Fig. 934 is from a specimen in my collection),—an excellent illustration of a mortal monarch aping the sky-god and credited with superhuman propagatory powers. See also Addenda ad loc.

APPENDIX M.

ZEUS MEILÍCHIOS.

(1) Zeus Meilichios on the Kephisos.

Zeus was worshipped under the title Meilíchios far and wide through the Hellenic world. In primis Athens had long been a centre of his cult. Pausanias, noting the objects of interest along the Sacred Way from Athens to Eleusis, remarks :

'When you have crossed the Kephisos there is an ancient altar of Zeus Meilíchios. At this altar Theseus was purified by the descendants of Phytalos after he had slain various brigands including Sinis, who was related to him through Pittheus[1].'

Plutarch's account is rather fuller :

'So Theseus went on and came to the Kephisos. Here he was met by men of the clan Phytalidai, who were the first to salute him. He begged them to purify him. Thereupon they cleansed him with the customary rites, offered Milichian sacrifices, and feasted him in their home, whereas up to that time no man had shown him hospitality by the way. His return is said to have fallen on the eighth day of the month Kronios, Hekatombaion as it is called nowadays[2].'

Dates of this sort are not invented at random, and we may fairly suppose that the local festival of Zeus Meilíchios was celebrated by the Phytalidai in their ancestral house[1] on Hekatombaion 8[2]. Plutarch adds that, in return for their entertainment, Theseus gave them charge over a sacrifice at the Oschophoria[3].

[1] Paus. 1. 37. 4. [2] Plout. v. Thes. 12.

In the old Attic myth two points deserve to be stressed. On the one hand, Zeus Meilíchios was a god able to purify a man from the stain of kindred bloodshed: we have already noted that the skins of animals sacrificed to him were used in purificatory rites[4]. On the other hand, the festival of this god was observed 'at home[5]' by a clan traditionally associated with the fig-tree and its fruit[6]: in fact, the descendants of Phytalos appear to have had special duties in regard to Zeus Meilíchios, much as the descendants of Anthos had in regard to Zeus Lýkaios[7].

(2) The Title Meilíchios.

We are, therefore, at once confronted with the difficult question: What is the meaning of Meilíchios? Does it denote 'the Kindly One' (meílichos, meilíchios)[8], a deity whose wrath could be readily appeased by the quaking man-slayer? Or does it rather signify 'the god of Figs' (meílicha)[9] with special

[1] Cp. Paus. 1. 37. 2 quoted infra n. 6.

[2] In the calendar of Mykonos (J. de Prott Leges Graecorum sacrae Lipsiae 1896 Fasti sacri p. 13 ff. no. 4, 29 ff., Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 714, 29 ff., Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 615, 29 ff.) Hekatombaion 7 is marked by the sacrifice of a bull and ten lambs to Apollon Ἑκατόμβαιος and by the sacrifice of a full-grown victim and ten lambs to Acheloios—a god who at Athens was closely connected with Zeus Μειλίχιος (infra p. 1117 f.). It seems possible that this Myconian festival on Hekatombaion 7 was the equivalent of an Athenian festival on Hekatombaion 8. But further evidence is lacking.

[3] Plout. v. Thes. 23: see J. Töpffer Attische Genealogie Berlin 1889 p. 251 f., Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 286 n. 2.

[4] Supra i. 422 ff.

[5] Plout. v. Thes. 12 καὶ δεομένου καθαρθῆναι τοῖς νενομισμένοις ἀγνίσαντες καὶ Μειλίχια θύσαντες εἱστίασαν οἴκοι.

[6] Paus. 1. 37. 2 ἐν τούτῳ τῷ χωρίῳ Φύταλόν φασιν οἰκῳ Δήμητρα δέξασθαι, καὶ τὴν θεὸν ἀντὶ τούτων δοῦναί οἱ τὸ φυτὸν τῆς συκῆς· μαρτυρεῖ δέ μοι τῷ λόγῳ τὸ ἐπίγραμμα (Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 3. 24) τὸ ἐπὶ τῷ Φυτάλου τἀφῳ· ἐνθάδ' ἄναξ ἥρως Φύταλός ποτε δέξατο σεμνὴν | Δήμητραν, ὅτε (A. Meineke cj. Δήμητρ' ᾧ τότε L. Dindorf and C. G. Cobet cjj. Δήμητρ' ὅπποτε) πρῶτον ὀπώρας καρπὸν ἔφηνεν, | ἣν ἱερὰν συκῆν θνητῶν γένος ἐξονομάζει· | ἐξ οὗ δὴ τιμὰς Φυτάλου γένος ἔσχεν ἀγήρως. Infra p. 1103 n. 3.

[7] Supra i. 71 ff.

[8] Cornut. theol. 11 p. 12, 2 ff. Lang προσαγορεύουσι δὲ καὶ μείλιχον (F. Osann cj. μειλίχιον; but Aristeid. or. 1. 3 (i. 4 Dindorf) has εἰ δέ πῃ σφαλλόμεθα, ὁ μείλιχος (sc. Zeus) ἡμῶν κεκλήσθω) τὸν Δία, εὐμείλικτον ὄντα τοῖς ἐξ ἀδικίας μετατιθεμένοις, οὐ δέοντος ἀδιαλλάκτως ἔχειν πρὸς αὐτούς: cp. Liban. or. 57. 12 (iv. 154 Foerster) Σενήρος δὲ χρηστός τε ἦν ἐν τοῖς ῥήμασι καὶ τιμήσειν ἔλεγε τῇ πρρότητι τὸν Μειλίχιον Δία, κ.τ.λ., Anth. Pal. 9. 581. 4 f. (Leon Philosophos?) μηδὲ νοήσω, | Ζηνὸς Μειλιχίοιο λαχὼν θρόνον, ἀνέρος οἶτον. A highly moral explanation: but high morals are out of place in an early cult-title. Phrynichos the 'Atticist' (on whom see Sir J. E. Sandys A History of Classical Scholarship[2] Cambridge 1906 i. 323 ff.) in Bekker anecd. i. 34, 12 ff. Δικαιόσυνος Ζεύς· ὁ ἐπὶ τοῖς δίκαιά τε καὶ ἄδικα δρῶσι τεταγμένος. ὥσπερ καὶ ὁ ἐπὶ τοῖς μείλιχα μειλίχιος καὶ ὁ ἐπὶ τοῖς φίλα φίλιος adduces would-be parallels. But Zeus Δικαίόσυνος is a late divinity (D. M. Robinson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1905 ix. 302 no. 24 near Ghereh (Karousa) Διὶ Δικαιοσύνωι | Μεγάλωι | Πύθης Διονυσίου | στρατηγῶν | χαριστήριον, cp. schol. Il. 13. 29, Eustath. in Il. p. 918, 47), and Zeus Φίλιος is probably euphemistic (Append. N). On Zeus Ἅγιος see supra i. 192, 400 n. 6, 565 n. 2.

[9] Figs were called μείλιχα, 'sweets,' in Naxos—witness Athen. 78 c Νάξιοι δέ, ὡς Ἀνδρίσκος (frag. 3 in Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 304 Müller) ἔτι δ' Ἀγλαοσθένης (frag. 5 in Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 294 Müller) ἱστοροῦσι, Μειλίχιον καλεῖσθαι τὸν Διόνυσον διὰ τὴν τοῦ συκίνου reference to the Phytalidai and their fig-culture? Arguments in support of either interpretation lie near to hand.

In may be urged that Zeus was notoriously sympathetic with the outcast and the vagabond. He was worshipped as Hikésios, 'the Suppliant's god[1],' καρποῦ παράδοσιν. διὸ καὶ πρόσωπον τοῦ θεοῦ παρὰ τοῖς Ναξίοις τὸ μὲν τοῦ Βακχέως Διονύσου καλουμένου εἶναι ἀμπέλινον, τὸ δὲ τοῦ Μειλιχίου σύκινον. τὰ γὰρ σῦκα μείλιχα καλεῖσθαι, where T. Reinesius' proposed alteration of Μειλίχιον...Μειλιχίου...μείλιχα into Μόρυχον...Μορύχου...μόρυχα (cp. Souid. s.vv. Μόρυχος, μωρότερος Μορύχου) is a good example of misplaced ingenuity.

[1] At Athens in s. vi B.C. (Poll. 8. 142 τρεῖς θεοὺς ὀμνύναι κελεύει Σόλων, Ἱκέσιον, Καθάρσιον, Ἑξακεστῆρα, i.e. Zeus under three diverse aspects (cp. Poll. 1. 24), as observed by W. Dindorf ad loc., G. F. Schoemann Griechische Alterthümer[4] Berlin 1902 ii. 145, 276=id. Antiquités recques trans. C. Galuski Paris 1887 ii. 185, 331, O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 1592. The recognition of Zeus Ἐξακεστήρ (Hesych. Ἐξακεστήριος· ὁ Ζεύς. καὶ ἡ Ἥρα) is perhaps not unconnected with the fact that Solon's own father was Ἐξηκεστίδης. The oath by this triad of Zeuses was inscribed on the ἄξονες (Hesych. τρεῖς θεοί· παρὰ Σόλωνι ἐν τοῖς ἄξοσιν ὅρκῳ πέτακται <τρεῖς θεοὺς ἐπιμαρτύρεσθαι?>. ἔνιοι κατὰ τὸ Ὁμηρικόν (sc. Il. 2. 371, 4. 288, 7. 132, 16. 97, Od. 4. 341, 7. 311, 17. 132, 18. 235, 24. 376 αἲ γάρ, Ζεῦ τε πάτερ καὶ Ἀθηναίη καὶ Ἄπολλον)), which are said to have been wooden axles revolving in oblong frames kept in the Prytaneion (Plout. v. Sol. 25 καὶ κατεγράφησαν εἰς ξυλίνους ἄξονας ἐν πλαισίοις περιέχουσι στρεφομένους, ὧν ἔτι καθ' ἡμᾶς ἐν Πρυτανείῳ λείψανα μικρὰ διεσώζετο). Another account says rather enigmatically that they were square in shape, but that when laid in the direction of their acute angle they produced a triangular appearance (Polemon frag. 48 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 130 Müller) ap. Harpokr. s.v. ἄξονι· οἱ Σόλωνος νόμοι ἐν ξυλίνοις ἦσαν ἄξοσι γεγραμμένοι...ἦσαν δέ, ὥς φησι Πολέμων ἐν τοῖς πρὸς Ἐρατοσθένην, τετράγωνοι τὸ σχῆμα. διασώζονται δὲ ἐν τῷ Πρυτανείῳ, γεγραμμένοι κατὰ πάντα τὰ μέρη. ποιοῦσι δ' ἐνίοτε φαντασίαν τρίγωνον, ὅταν ἐπὶ τὸ στενὸν κλιθῶσι τῆς γωνίας). The Solonian laws were also inscribed on κύρβεις set up in the Stoa Basileios (Aristot. resp. Ath. 7. 1 = Aristot. frag. 352 Rose ap. Harpokr. s.v. κύρβεις, Souid. s.v. κύρβεις, Plout. v. Sol. 25, schol. Aristoph. av. 1354, cp. Aristot. de mundo 6. 400 b 30 f.), and these κύρβεις are described as stones standing upright like pillars, surmounted by an apex or cap (Apollod. frag. 26 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 432 f. Müller) ap. Harpokr. s.v. κύρβεις· ...κύρβεις φησὶν Ἀπολλόδωρος ἐν τοῖς περὶ θεῶν ἔχειν ἐγγεγραμμένους τοὺς νόμους. εἶναι δ' αὐτοὺς λίθους ὀρθοὺς ἑστῶτας, ὡς ἀπὸ μὲν τῆς στάσεως στήλας, ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς εἰς ὕψος ἀναστάσεως (leg. ἀνατάσεως) διὰ τὸ κεκορυφῶσθαι κύρβεις ἐκάλουν, ὥσπερ καὶ κυρβασίαν τὴν ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς τιθεμένην, cp. Souid. s.v. κύρβεις, Phot. lex. s.v. κύρβεις, schol. Aristoph. av. 1354). One ancient grammarian attempts to identify the κύρβεις with the ἄξονες, stating that in both cases a large brick-shaped body as long as a man had fitted to it quadrangular pieces of wood, whose sides were flat and covered with lettering, and that pivots at either end enabled readers to move and turn about the text (Aristophanes (of Byzantion) ap. Souid. s.v. κύρβεις·...'Αριστοφάνης δὲ ὁμοίας εἶναί φησι τοῖς ἄξοσι·...ἀμφοτέρων δὲ τὸ κατασκεύασμα τοιοῦτον· πλινθίον τι μέγα, ἀνδρόμηκες, ἡρμοσμένα ἔχον τετράγωνα ξύλα, τὰς πλευρὰς πλατείας ἔχοντα καὶ γραμμάτων πλήρεις· ἑκατέρωθεν δὲ κυρώδακας, ὥστε κινεῖσθαι καὶ μεταστρέφεσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν ἀναγινωσκόντων). On the whole it seems clear that the wooden ἄξονες of the Prytaneion are to be distinguished from the stone κύρβεις of the Stoa Basileios. The ἄξονες were apparently shaped as in fig. 935, the κύρβεις as in fig. 936 (on the former is inscribed frag. 149 (I. B. Télfy Συναγωγὴ τῶν 'Αττικῶν νόμων Corpus iuris Attici Pestini et Lipsiae 1868 p. 39 f.) ap. Dem. c. Timocr. 33; on the latter, frag. 562 (Télfy op. cit. p. 137) ap. Dem. c. Timocr. 151). Neither shape was chosen at random. The wheel of Nemesis (supra i. 269 ff.) had a long history behind it and was related (supra i. 267) to that wheel, which in India symbolised ṛta, the course of nature, the right path, in short, law and order (W. Simpson The Buddhist Praying-wheel London 1896 p. 89 ff., H. Oldenberg La religion du Véda Paris 1903 p. 163 ff., Harrison Themis p. 526 f., F. M. Cornford From Religion to Philosophy London 1912 p. 172 ff.). It seems highly probable that Solon inscribed his laws on wooden ἄξονες because he wished to represent them as the σεμνὰ θέμεθλα Δίκης (Solon frag. 2. 14 Hiller—Crusius). At the same time the shape chosen would be convenient for purposes of reference or consultation: my friend Dr P. Giles tells me that in the parish church of Great Yarmouth documents are, or were, arranged à la Solon. Individual enactments appear to have been copied on stones of the characteristic wedge-like form, as may be seen from an extant fragment (Corp. inscr. Att. iv. 1. 2 no. 559 with figs.) first published by S. A. Koumanoudes, to whose brilliant article in the 'Εφ. 'Αρχ. 1885 pp. 215—218 figs. 1—3 I am indebted for the main idea of my restoration in fig. 935 (Koumanoudes fits his wedges on to an axle that is circular, not square, in section). Again, it seems likely that the κύρβεις—as indeed I conjectured in the Class. Rev. 1904 xviii. 86—copied the primitive idols of Zeus. Their shape, to judge from Apollodoros' words (supra p. 1094 n. 0), was identical with that of Zeus Στορπαῖος, Zeus Πάσιος, Zeus Πατρῷος, etc. (supra i. 520 n. 2, ii. 815 fig. 781). If so, the implication is that the laws were the very voice of Zeus (cp. Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 426 n. 1, 1001 n. 5). There was a tradition that Solon had tried to express his laws in hexameter verse and had begun with a couplet invoking Zeus: πρῶτα μὲν εὐχώμεσθα Διὶ Κρονίδῃ βασιλῆϊ | θεσμοῖς τοῖσδε τύχην ἀγαθὴν καὶ κῦδος ὀπάσσαι (Plout. v. Sol. 3). The original form of his famous oath may have been πρὸς Διὸς ἱκεσίου καθαρσίου ἐξακέσαντος (cp. for the last word Pyth. carm. aur. 66) or the like. Analogous to the κύρβεις as inscribed obelisks were the Egyptian κύρβεις of the Colchians (Ap. Rhod. 4. 279 ff. with schol. ad loc.), not to mention the pillar of Zeus Τριφύλιος (supra i. 662). Cp. also the marble obelisk from Kition, the base of which bears a votive inscription for Esmun (Corp. inscr. Sem. i no. 44 pl. 8 fig. 44, Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art iv. 385 fig. 203, Ohnefalsch—Richter Kypros pp. 173 ff., 416 pl. 80, 5. Seleukos, a grammarian of Alexandreia, wrote a whole treatise τῶν Σόλωνος ἀξόνων (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 500 Müller), and modern writers have devoted much attention to them, e.g. E. Caillemer in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 589, G. Busolt Griechische Geschichte Gotha 1895 ii.[2] 290 ff., E. Szanto in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 2636, Lübker Reallex.[8] pp. 153, 963 f., and the literature there cited. E. Beulé Les monnaies d'Athènes Paris 1858 p. 399 f. fig. would recognize Solon with one of his ἄξονες on a copper coin of Athens: but see K. Lange in the Ath. Mitth. 1881 vi. 68 f. fig., Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. iii. 152 pl. EE, 16 f.).

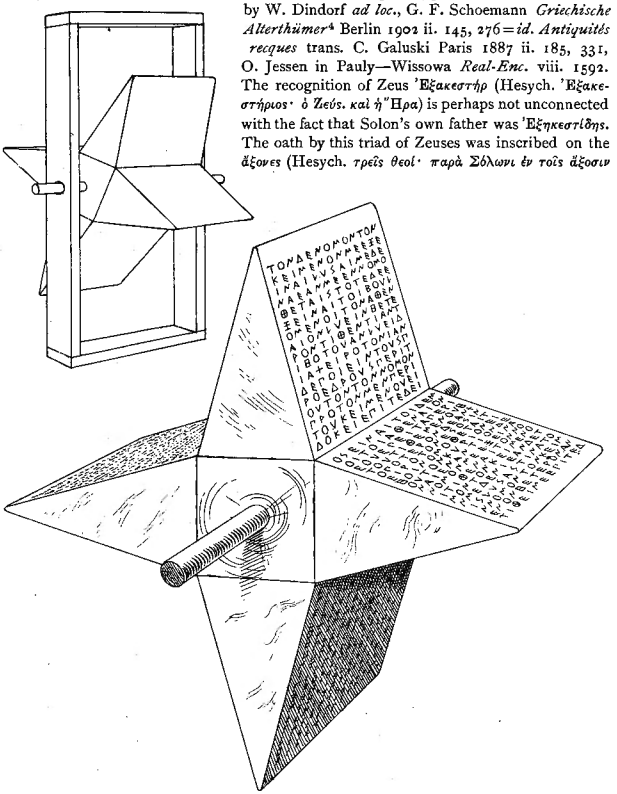

Fig. 935.

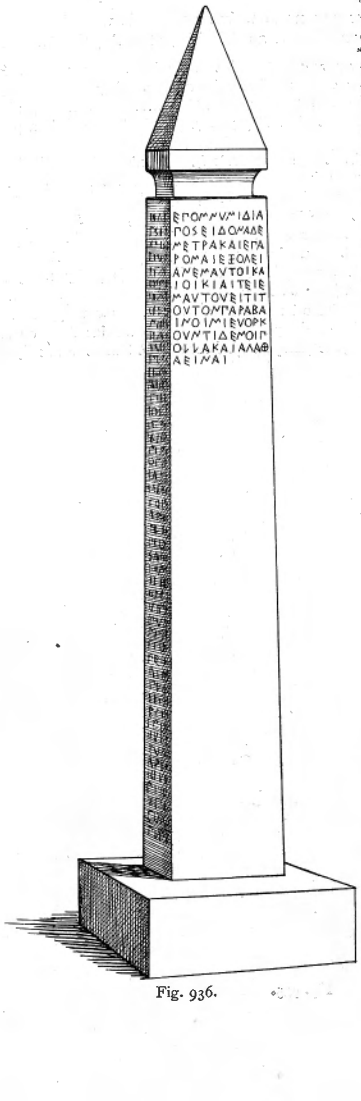

Fig. 936.

Similarly at Thera in s. vi B.C. the same appellative occurs without the name of Zeus (supra i. 143 in three rock-cut inscriptions). Elsewhere name and title appear together: so at Kos in s. iv B.C. (A. Hauvette-Besnault and M. Dubois in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1881 v. 224 no. 12 on a slab fixed in the pavement of an ancient chapel of S. John Διὸς 'Ικεσίου | Σιμωνιδᾶν=W. R. Paton—E. L. Hicks The Inscriptions of Cos Oxford 1891 p. 161 no. 149=Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 1. 376 no. 3674=Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 796=Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 929) and at Delos in s. iii B.C.

and even as Hikétas, himself 'the Suppliant[1],'—a remarkable title dependent, I think[2], upon the very primitive notion[3] that a stranger suddenly appearing in the midst of the community may well be a god on his travels[4].

(T. Homolle in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1879 iii. 471 f. no. 4 on a square base of white marble Διονύσιος Νίκωνος | Παλληνεὺς ἐπιμελητὴς | γενόμενος Δήλου | ὑπὲρ τοῦ δήμου τοῦ | Ἀθηναίων Διὶ Ἱκεσίῳ). More doubtful is an inscription of s. ii B.C. from Netteia in Rhodes (Inscr. Gr. ins. i no. 891, 2 on a slab of blackish marble [οἱ ἐπιμήν]ιοι ἀεὶ τοὶ αἰ[ρ]εθέ[ντες Ἱκε]σίωι φθόϊ[ς] ἐγ λ– , where F. Hiller von Gaertringen ad loc. supplies Διΐ and notes that φθόϊς = φθόϊας, 'cakes').

[1] Roehl Inscr. Gr. ant. Add. nov. no. 49*a* with fig. = my fig. 937 a rough calcareous boundary-stone (0·35^{m} long, 0·30^{m} high, 0·10^{m}—0·11^{m} thick), found at Sparta and preserved in the Museum at Teuthis (Dimitzana), bearing the retrograde inscription Διοικέτα, | Διϝλευθερ[ω] = Roberts Gk. Epigr. i. 249 no. 244 = R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 6 no. 4407. E. S. Roberts ad loc. remarks: 'The change of the final σ of Διὸς in l. 1 to the spiritus asper is remarkable; still more so the contraction in Διϝλ. of l. 2 after disappearance of the h = σ. Stolz (Wiener Stud. VIII. 1886, p. 160), who summarily rejects this explanation, suggests a genitive Δίω on the analogy of o-stems, and compares Lat. Iovos, Eph. ep. I. 14 no. 21, Iovo, Herm. XIX. 453. Elsewhere certainly final σ does not disappear in Laconian, even where the next word begins with a vowel.' But R. Meister ad loc. is content to assume the change of σ into h; and so is A. Thumb in K. Brugmann Griechische Grammatik[4] München 1913 p. 171, citing Cypriote parallels.

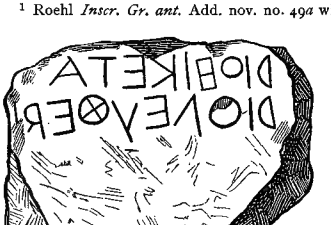

Fig. 937.

[2] H. Roehl loc. cit. refers to Eustath. in Od. p. 1807, 9 f. καὶ ὁ ἱκετεύσας καὶ ὁ τὴν ἱκετείαν δεξάμενος ἤτοι κατὰ τοὺς παλαιοὺς εἰπεῖν ἱκετοδόχος ἱκέται εἰσὶν ἀλλήλοις. For the supposed reciprocal sense Eustathios cp. ξένος, προστρόπαιος, χρήστης.

G. Murray The Rise of the Greek Epic[2] Oxford 1911 p. 291 ('this Zeus of Aeschylus is himself the suppliant; the prayer which you reject is his very prayer, and in turning from your door the helpless or the outcast you have turned away the most high God. The belief was immemorially old') comes much nearer the mark, though I cannot accept the explanation which he adds in a footnote ib. p. 291 n. 1 ('Ζεὺς Ἀφίκτωρ...is a "projection" of the rite of Supplication').

[3] Frazer, Golden Bough[2]: Spirits of Corn and Wild i. 216 ff., 252 f. (the story of Lityerses compared with the harvest customs of Europe, after W. Mannhardt Mythologische Forschungen Strassburg 1884 p. 18 ff.).

[4] This is definitely stated in Od. 17. 483 ff. Ἀντίνο', οὐ μὲν κάλ' ἔβαλες δύστηνον ἀλήτην· | οὐλόμεν', εἰ δή πού τις ἐπουράνιος θεὸς ἐστι,— | καί τε θεοὶ ξείνοισιν ἐοικότες ἀλλοδαποῖσι, | παντοῖοι τελέθοντες, ἐπιστρωφῶσι πόληας, | ἀνθρώπων ὕβριν τε καὶ εὐνομίην ἐφορῶντες (cp. Hes. o.d. 121 ff.), and is implied in the history of Barnabas and Paul (supra i. 193 n. 3. See too Acts 28. 1—6), the myths of Philemon and Baucis (Ov. met. 8. 616 ff., Lact. Plac. narr. fab. 8. 7—9), Pelargus or Pelasgus (Class. Rev. 1904 xviii. 81 f.), Lykaon (supra i. 79 n. 6. There is a reminiscence of the Homeric passage in Nikolaos Damask. frag. 43 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 378 Müller) ὅτι Λυκάων ὁ Πελασγοῦ υἱός, βασιλεὺς Ἀρκάδων, ἐφύλαττε τὰ τοῦ πατρὸς εἰσηγήματα ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ. ἀποστῆσαι <δὲ> βουλόμενος καὶ αὐτὸς τῆς ἀδικίας τοὺς ἀρχομένους, ἔφη τὸν Δία ἑκάστοτε φοιτᾶν παρ' αὐτὸν ἀνδρὶ ξένῳ μοιούμενον εἰς ἔπόψιν τῶν δικαίων τε καὶ ἀδίκων = Souid. s.v. Λυκάων), and many others.

Similarly the poets spoke of Zeus, not only as hiketésios[1], hikésios[2], and

It is reasonable to surmise that the possible divinity of the stranger even helped to establish the law of hospitality (other contributory causes in Schrader Reallex. p. 269 ff., Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Taboo p. 130, W. Wundt Elements of Folk Psychology trans. E. L. Schaub London 1916 p. 340 ff.). Ἱκέτης or ξένος—who could tell?—might turn out to be Zeus himself. 'Some have entertained angels unawares' (Heb. 13. 2).

At a later stage of religious development Zeus is conceived, not as the actual ἱκέτης or ξένος, but as his unseen attendant. Thus e.g. the Phaecian Echeneos says to Alkinoos: ἀλλ' ἄγε δὴ ξεῖνον μὲν ἐπὶ θρόνου ἀργυροήλου | εἶσον ἀναστήσας, σὺ δὲ κηρύκεσσι κέλευσον | οἶνον ἐπικρῆναι, ἵνα καὶ Διὶ τερπικεραύνῳ | σπείσομεν, ὅς θ' ἱκέτῃσιν ἅμ' αἰδοίοισιν ὀπηδεῖ· | κ.τ.λ. (Od. 7. 162 ff. with the sequel in line 178 ff.), and Odysseus to Polyphemos: ἀλλ' αἰδεῖο, φέριστε, θεούς· ἱκέται δέ τοί εἰμεν. | Ζεὺς δ' ἐπιτιμήτωρ ἱκετάων τε ξείνων τε, | ξείνιος, ὅς ξείνοισιν ἅμ' αἰδοίοισιν ὀπηδεῖ (Od. 9. 269 ff.). Cp. Od. 14. 158 f., a variant of Od. 19. 303 f.

Ultimately Zeus becomes Ἱκέσιος and Ξένιος (cp. Ap. Rhod. 2. 378 Ζηνὸς Ἐυξείνοιο Γενηταίην ὑπὲρ ἄκρην with schol. ad loc. cited supra p. 617 n. 1), the god who protects suppliants and strangers in general.

[1] Od. 13. 213 f. Ζεύς σφεας τίσαιτο (C. G. Cobet cj. Ζεὺς δέ σφεας τίσαιθ') ἱκετήσιος, ὅς τε καὶ ἄλλους | ἀνθρώπους ἐφορᾷ καὶ τίνυται ὅς τις ἁμάρτῃ with schol. ad loc. ἱκέσιος· ἱκετῶν ἐπόπτης and Eustath. in Od. p. 1739, 18 f. ἱκετήσιος δὲ Ζεὺς δοκεῖ πρωτότυπον εἶναι τοῦ ἱκέσιος (id. ib. p. 1576, 14), Tzetz. allég. Od. 13. 46 ὁ Ζεὺς ὁ ἱκετήσιος, Hesych. s.v. ἱκετήσιος· ὁ ἐπὶ τῶν ἱκετῶν Ζεύς· ἢ ὁ τοὺς ἱκέτας ἐλεῶν.

[2] Aisch. suppl. 343 βαρύς γε μέντοι Ζηνὸς ἱκεσίου κότος, 616 f. ἱκεσίου Ζηνὸς κότον | μέγαν προφωνῶν κ.τ.λ., Soph. Phil. 484 πρὸς αὐτοῦ Ζηνὸς ἱκεσίου, Eur. Hec. 345 πέφευγας τὸν ἐμὸν ἱκέσιον Δία, Aristot. de mundo 7. 401 a 23 f. καθάρσιός τε καὶ παλαμναῖος καὶ ἱκέσιος καὶ μειλίχιος, ὥσπερ οἱ ποιηταὶ λέγουσι = Stob. ecl. 1. 1. 36 p. 45, 21 f. Wachsmuth, Ap. Rhod. 2. 215 ff. ἱκεσίου πρὸς Ζηνός, ὅτις ῥίγιστος ἁλιτροῖς | ἀνδράσι,... | λίσσομαι with schol. ad loc., 2. 1131 ff. ἀλλ' ἱκέτας ξείνους Διὸς εἵνεκεν αἰδέσσασθε | ξεινίου ἱκεσίου τε· Διὸς δ' ἄμφω ἱκέται τε | καὶ ξεῖνοι· ὁ δέ που καὶ ἐπόψιος ἄμμι τέτυκται, 4. 358 f. ποῦ τοι Διὸς ἱκεσίοιο | ὅρκια; 4. 700 ff. τῶ καὶ ὀπιζομένη Ζηνὸς θέμιν ἱκεσίοιο, | ὅς μέγα μὲν κοτέει, μέγα δ' ἀνδροφόνοισιν ἀρήγει, | ῥέζε θυηπολίην with the whole context (Iason and Medeia, on reaching the hall of Kirke, sit in silence at her hearth as is the wont of suppliants. Medeia hides her face in both hands; and Iason fixes in the ground the sword with which he has slain Apsyrtos. Kirke understands, and performs the appropriate rites of atonement. She holds above their heads a young pig, slits its throat, and sprinkles their hands with its blood. Then she makes propitiation with drink-offerings, καθάρσιον ἀγκαλέουσα Ἑκάτην, παλαμναίων τιμήορον ἱκεσιάων (708 f.). Her attendants carry forth all defilement (cp. Il. 1. 314), while she, standing by the hearth, burns pélanoi and expiatory offerings without wine as she prays to the Erinyes and Zeus. Finally, she raises Iason and Medeia, and bids them sit on seats to question them), Cornut. theol. 11 f. p. 12, 4 ff. Lang (sequel to passage cited supra p. 1092 n. 8) διὰ τοῦτο γὰρ καὶ ἱκεσίου Διὸς εἶσι βωμοὶ καὶ τὰς Λιτὰς ὁ ποιητὴς ἔφη τοῦ Διὸς εἶναι θυγατέρας, κ.τ.λ., Dion Chrys. or. 1 p. 56 f. Reiske (of Zeus) πρὸς δὲ τούτοις Ἱκέσιός τε καὶ Φύξιος καὶ Ξένιος...Ἱκέσιος δὲ ὡς ἂν (Reiske suggests ὧν for ἂν) ἐπήκοός τε καὶ ἵλεως τοῖς δεομένοις, Φύξιος δὲ διὰ τὴν τῶν κακῶν ἀπόφευξιν (L. Dindorf restores ἀπόφυξιν), Ξένιος δὲ ὅτι καὶ τοῦτο ἀρχὴ φιλίας μηδὲ τῶν ξένων ἀμελεῖν μηδὲ ἀλλότριον ἡγεῖσθαι μηδένα ἄνθρωπον = or. 12 p. 413 Reiske (of Zeus) πρὸς δὲ αὐτοῖς Ἱκέσιός τε καὶ <Φύξιος καὶ> Ξένιος...Ἱκέσιος δὲ ὡς ἂν ἐπήκοός τε καὶ ἵλεως τοῖς δεομένοις, Φύξιος δὲ διὰ τὴν τῶν κακῶν ἀπόφυξιν, Ξένιος δὲ ὅτι δεῖ μηδὲ τῶν ξένων ἀμελεῖν μηδὲ ἀλλότριον ἡγεῖσθαι ἀνθρώπων μηδένα, Clem. Al. protr. 2. 37. 1 p. 27, 23 f. Stählin καλὸς γε ὁ Ζεὺς ὁ μαντικός, ὁ ξένιος, ὁ ἱκέσιος, ὁ μειλίχιος, ὁ πανομφαῖος, ὁ προστροπαῖος, Heliod. 2. 22 ὁ δὲ Κνήμων θαυμάσας, Ἀλλ' ἦ Ξενίου Διός, ὡς ἔοικεν, εἰς αὐλὰς ἥκομεν, ὦ πάτερ, οὕτως ἀπροφάσιστος ἡ θεραπεία καὶ πολὺ τὸ εὐνοῦν τῆς γνώμης ἐμφαίνουσα. Οὐκ εἰς Διός, ἔφη, ἀλλ' εἰς ἀνδρὸς Δία τὸν Ξένιον καὶ Ἱκέσιον ἀκριβοῦντος, Anth. Pal. 11. 351. 7 f. (Palladas) ἀλλά σε πρὸς πύκτου Πολυδεύκεος ἠδὲ καὶ αὐτοῦ | Κάστορος ἱκνοῦμαι καὶ Διὸς ἱκεσίου, Orph. Arg. 107 f. οὐ γὰρ hiktaîos (?)[1], 'the god of suppliants,' but also as hiktér[2], and aphíktor[3], 'the suppliant.' Again, Zeus was known as alástoros[4] or alástor[5], 'he that brings a curse[6],' Palamnaîos, 'he of the Violent Hand[7],' prostrópaios, 'he of the ἄτιμοι | ἱκεσίου Ζηνὸς κοῦραι Λιταί, Nonn. Dion. 18. 18 πρὸς Διὸς ἱκεσίοιο, τεοῦ, Διόνυσε, τοκῆος, Tryphiod. exc. Il. 278 πεφύλαξο Διὸς σέβας ἱκεσίοιο, Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 265 (Διός) 49 ἱκεσίου, ib. i. 266 (Διός) 44 ἱκεσίου.

[1] Aisch. suppl. 385 μένει τοι Ζηνὸς ἱκταίου κότος. So U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff (1914) with cod. M. E. Fraenkel in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1913 xlv. 168 n. 2 accepts Dindorf's cj. ἱκτίου 'das wohl eine Kompromissbildung zwischen ἱκέσιος und ἱκτήριος ist genau wie Lykophrons ἵκτης, ἵκτιδες eine solche zwischen ἱκέτης, -τις und ἱκτήρ; vgl. auch die umgekehrte Beeinflussung, die ἱκετηρία (im Gegensatz zu ἱκτήριος) durch ἱκεσία, ἱκετεία erfahren hat ([E. Fraenkel Griechische Nomina agentis Strassburg 1910] I, S. 52 ff. mit Anm. 2).'

[2] Aisch. suppl. 478 f. ὄμως δ' ἀνάγκη Ζηνὸς αἰδεῖσθαι κότον | ἱκτῆρος· ὕψιστος γὰρ ἐν βροτοῖς φόβος. W. Headlam renders 'Zeus Petitionary.'

[3] Aisch. suppl. 1 f. Ζεὺς μὲν ἀφίκτωρ ἑπίδοι προφρόνως | στόλον ἡμέτερον. 'Zeus Petitionary' (W. Headlam).

[4] Cramer anecd. Oxon. i. 62, 10 ff. παρὰ δὲ τὸ ἀλαστῶ ῥῆμα, ἀλάστωρ ὁ Ζεύς, ἐπὶ τῶν χαλεπῶν τι πρασσόντων· παρηκτικὴ δὲ ἡ εὐθεῖα παρὰ τὴν ἀλάστορος γενικήν· Αἰσχύλος Ἰξίονι (frag. 92 Nauck[2]) "πρευμενὴς ἀλάστορος," καὶ Φερεκύδης (frag. 114[a] (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 99 Müller)) "ὁ Ζεὺς δὲ Ἱκέσιος καὶ ἀλάστορος καλεῖται." With πρευμενὴς ἀλάστορος A. Nauck ad loc. cp. Aisch. Eum. 236 (Orestes to Athena) δέχου δὲ πρευμενοῦς ἀλάστορα | κ.τ.λ. and Bekker anecd. i. 382, 29 f. ἀλάστορον· ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀλάστορα, ἀπὸ εὐθείας τῆς ὁ ἀλάστορος, Αἰσχύλος (frag. 294 Nauck[2]) "μέγαν ἀλάστορον" εἶπεν. Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 67 reasonably supposes that Pherekydes spoke of Zeus ἱκέσιος καὶ ἀλάστωρ (sic) in relation to Ixion (supra i. 198 n. 3).

[5] Orph. h. daem. 73. 2 ff. cited infra Append. M fin., cp. supra i. 504 n. 2. The title provoked much learned discussion: Cornut. theol. 9 p. 10, 20 ff. Lang λέγεται δ' (sc. ὁ Ζεύς) ὑπό τινων καὶ ἀλάστωρ καὶ παλαμναῖος τῷ τοὺς ἀλάστορας καὶ παλαμναίους κολάζειν, τῶν μὲν ὠνομασμένων ἀπὸ τοῦ τοιαῦτα ἁμαρτάνειν ἐφ' οἷς ἔστιν ἀλαστῆσαι καὶ στενάξαι, τῶν δὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ ταῖς παλάμαις μιάσματα ἀνέκθυτα (ἀνέκπλυτα codd. N. B. G.) ἀποτελεῖν = Eudok. viol. 414[g], Hesych. s.v. ἀλάστωρ· πικρὸς δαίμων. Ζεύς, et. Gud. p. 32, 35 ff. ἀλάστωρ· ὁ Ζεὺς ὁ ἐποπτεύων τοὺς ἀλαστὰ καὶ χαλεπὰ ποιοῦντας. ἢ ὁ ἀσεβῆς, ἢ ὁ κακοποιός. οὕτως Ἡρωδιανός (περὶ καθολικῆς προσῳδίας 2 = i. 49, 13 f. Lentz reading ὑποπτεύων for ἐποπτεύων; cp. ii. 937, 27 n. Lentz), et. mag. p. 57, 25 ff. ἀλάστωρ· ὁ ἀμαρτωλός, ἢ ὁ φονεύς, ἢ ὁ ἐφορῶν τοὺς φόνους Ζεύς...ἐπὶ δὲ τοῦ Διός, οἷον ἀλάστωρ Ζεύς, ἀπὸ τοῦ τοὺς τὰ ἀλαστὰ πάσχουσιν ἐπαμύνειν· ἢ ὁ τὰ ἀλαστὰ (τουτέστι τὰ χαλεπὰ) τηρῶν, Eustath. in Il. p. 474, 22 f. παρὰ δὲ τοῖς ὕστερον καὶ Ζεὺς ἀλάστωρ, ὃν ἐλάνθανεν οὐδέν, ἢ ὁ τοῖς ἄλαστα πάσχουσιν ἐπαμύνων κατὰ τοὺς παλαιούς, ib. p. 763, 36 f. δθεν καὶ Ζεὺς ἀλάστωρ καὶ φθόνος καὶ δαίμων ἀλάστωρ ἐπενοήθη λέγεσθαι = Favorin. lex. p. 1692, 43 f. δθεν καὶ Ζεὺς ἀλάστωρ καὶ ὁ φθονερὸς δαίμων ἐπενοήθη λέγεσθαι.

[6] The derivation of the word is doubtful (cjj. in A. Vaníček Griechisch-lateinisches etymologisches Wörterbuch Leipzig 1877 i. 788 f., L. Meyer Handb. d. gr. Etym. i. 293 f., Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 23, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 41), but its meaning is sufficiently clear (see K. Wernicke in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1292 f.).

[7] Aristot. de mundo 7. 401 a 23 (cited supra p. 1097 n. 2) = Stob. ecl. 1. 1. 36 p. 45, 21 Wachsmuth, Cornut. theol. 9 p. 10, 20 ff. Lang (cited supra p. 1098 n. 5), Orion in F. W. Sturz's ed. of et. Gud. p. 628, 17 ff. παλαμναῖος ὁ τοὺς αὐτοχειρὶ φονεύσαντας τιμωρούμενός καὶ Ζεὺς Παλαμναῖος ἐν Χαλκίδι, et. Gud. p. 448, 28 ff. παλαμναῖος· σημαίνει δὲ δύο, ὁ τοὺς αὐτοχειριφονεύσαντας τιμωρούμενος καὶ ὁ ἐπί τινι βιάσματι κατεχόμενος, ib. p. 449, 21 f. καὶ Ζεὺς δὲ Παλαμναῖος λέγεται ἐν Χαλκίδι, et. mag. p. 647, 43 f. παλαμναῖος· ὁ τοὺς αὐτοχειρὶ φονεύσαντας τιμωρούμενος, Ζεὺς Παλαμναῖος. λέγεται καὶ ἐν Χαλκίδι Παλαμναῖος (cod. D. omits the last word), Souid. s.v. παλαμναῖος = Phot. lex. s.v. παλαμ-appeal[1],'—titles which applied primarily to the sinner, secondarily to the god concerned with his sin. Less ambiguous and further removed from primitive conceptions are the cult-names Litaîos, 'god of Prayers[2],' and Kathársios, 'god ναῖος· φονεὺς ἢ μιαρός· παλαμναῖοι γὰρ λέγονται οἱ διὰ χειρὸς ἀνδροφονοῦντες· παρὰ τὴν παλάμην· καὶ Ζεὺς Παλαμναῖος, ὁ τοὺς τοιούτους τιμωρούμενος· καὶ προστροπαῖος ὁ προστρέπων τὸ ἄγος αὐτοῖς, Favorin. lex. p. 221, 54 καὶ Ζεὺς δέ φασι Παλαμναῖος, ὁ τοὺς φονεῖς καταρρίπτων, Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 265 (Διός) 87 παλαμναίου, ib. i. 266 (Διός) 69 παλαμναίου. Cp. Ap. Rhod. 4. 708 f. (cited supra p. 1097 n. 2) and Clem. Al. protr. 2. 39. 2 p. 29, 6 f. Stählin οὐχὶ μέντοι Ζεὺς Φαλακρὸς ἐν Ἄργει, Τιμωρὸς (J. Bernays cj. σινάμωρος) δὲ ἄλλος ἐν Κύπρῳ τετίμησθον;

In a church near Gomphoi (Musákri) Leake found a plain quadrangular altar inscribed in large deeply-cut letters ΖΗΝΙ | ΠΑΛΑΜΝΙΩ (W. M. Leake Travels in Northern Greece London 1835 iv. 523 f. pl. 44 no. 220, Lebas—Foucart Peloponnèse ii no. 1194, Inscr. Gr. sept. ii no. 291).

[1] Clem. Al. protr. 2. 37. 1 p. 27, 23 f. Stählin (cited supra p. 1097 n. 2), Souid. s.v. παλαμναῖος = Phot. lex. s.v. παλαμναῖος (cited supra p. 1098 n. 7), Eustath. in Od. p. 1807, 11 f. προστρόπαιός τε γὰρ Ζεὺς ἐν ῥητορικῷ λεξικῷ (E. Schwabe Aelii Dionysii et Pausaniae Atticistarum fragmenta Lipsiae 1890 p. 254, 7 ff.: see further Sir J. E. Sandys A History of Classical Scholarship[2] Cambridge 1906 i. 323 and L. Cohn in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 1478 ff.), ᾧ ἄν τις, φασί, προστρέποιτο δεόμενος. καὶ προστρόπαιος ὁ ἱκέτης, ὁ πρός τινα δηλαδὴ δεητικῶς τρεπόμενος (supra p. 1096 n. 2). It follows that Zeus, who in one respect was προστρόπαιος, in another was ἀποτρόπαιος: cp. Bekker anecd. i. 427, 5 f. ἀποδιοπομπεῖσθαι· ἀποπέμπεσθαι πρὸς τὸν προστρόπαιον Δία καὶ οἱονεὶ καθαίρεσθαι ἢ ἱλάσκεσθαι, schol. Plat. Crat. 396 E ἀποδιοπομπεῖσθαί φασι τὸ ἀποτρέπεσθαι τὸν προστρόπαιον Δία καὶ οἱονεὶ καθαίρεσθαι τὰ δεινά, schol. Plat. legg. 854 B ἀποδιοπομπήσεις· τὰς ἀποστροφὰς τὰς γιγνομένας ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀποτροπαίου Διός, διὰ τὸ καθαίρεσθαι τὰ δεινά· ἢ τὰς ἀποπομπὰς τὰς πρὸς τὸν προστρόπαιον Δία καὶ οἱονεὶ καθάρσεις καὶ ἱλασμούς, schol. Aischin. de fals. leg. 323 προστρόπαιός ἐστιν ὁ εἰς ἑαυτὸν ἐπισπώμενος τὰ κακά, ὅπερ ἐστὶν ἐναντίον τοῦ (so H. Sauppe for τῷ cod. f.) ἀποτρόπαιος, τοῦ ἀποτρέποντος τὰ κακά. διὸ καὶ Διὶ ἀποτροπαίῳ θύομεν, οὐκέτι μέντοι καὶ προστροπαίῳ (on which see O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 3154).

The essence of a προστροπή was that the supplicator and the supplicated should both be turned towards each other and thus brought into such immediate connexion that the thing asked must needs be granted. If possible, direct contact was established by the clasping of knees, chin, etc. (C. Sittl Die Gebärden der Griechen und Römer Leipzig 1890 pp. 163 ff., 282 f.). Failing that, quasi-contact was made by means of outstretched arms, etc. (id. ib. pp. 186 ff., 283, 296). But in any case the two parties were face to face.

[2] Coppers of Nikaia in Bithynia, struck by Nero (M. P. Lambros in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1878 ii. 508 f. pl. 24, 1 = my fig. 938 ΔΙΟΣ | ΛΙΤΑ||ΙΟΥ) and Antoninus Pius (supra i. 37 n. 1 ΔΙ||ΟC || ΛΙΤΑΙΟΥ), show the altar of Zeus Λιταῖος (Head Hist. num.[2] p. 517). O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2064 explains the title as 'Father of the Litai' with reference to the remarkable passage in Il. 9. 502 ff. καὶ γὰρ τε Λιταί εἰσι, Διὸς κοῦραι μεγάλοιο, | χωλαί τε ῥυσαί τε παραβλῶπές τ' ὀφθαλμώ, | αἳ ῥά τε καὶ μετόπισθ' Ἄτης ἀλέγουσι κιοῦσαι. | ἡ δ' Ἄτη σθεναρή τε καὶ ἀρτίπος, οὕνεκα πάσας | πολλὸν ὑπεκπροθέει, φθάνει δέ τε πᾶσαν ἐπ' αἶαν | βλάπτουσ' ἀνθρώπους· αἱ δ' ἐξακέονται ὀπίσσω. | ὃς μέν τ' αἰδέσεται κούρας Διὸς ἄσσον ἰούσας, | τὸν δὲ μέγ' ὤνησαν καί τ' ἔκλυον εὐχομένοιο· | ὃς δέ κ' ἀνήνηται καί τε στερεῶς ἀπόείπῃ, | λίσσονται δ' ἆρα ταί γε Διὰ Κρονίωνα κιοῦσαι | τῷ Ἄτην ἅμ' ἕπεσθαι, ἵνα βλαφθεὶς ἀποτίσῃ (see for variants A. Ludwich ad loc., for imitations Quint. Smyrn. 10. 300 ff. Λιταῖς δ' ἀποθύμια ῥέξεις, | αἳ ῥα καὶ αὐταὶ Ζηνὸς ἐριγδούποιο θύγατρες | εἰσί, κ.τ.λ., Orph.

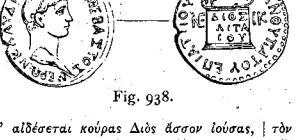

Fig. 938.

of Purification[1].' The exact relationship of all these appellatives and the growth of the religious beliefs implied by them are still far from clear. Perhaps we shall come within measurable distance of the truth by assuming that development proceeded on some such lines as follow:

Arg. 107 f. cited supra p. 1097 n. 2, and for a parody Anth. Pal. 11. 361. 1 ff. (Automedon)). How Zeus could have begotten such creatures, 'halt wrinkled squinting,' was a puzzle (Bion Borysthenites frag. 44 Mullach ap. Clem. Al. protr. 4. 56. 1 p. 43, 29 ff. Stählin, Herakleitos quaestt. Hom. 37, Porph. quaest. Il. 97, 21, Eustath. in Il. p. 768, 28 ff.). But symbolism proved a ready solvent (vide the comments of Herakleitos quaestt. Hom. 37, schol. Il. 9. 502 f., Porph. quaestt. Il. 97, 21, Eustath. in Il. p. 767, 60 ff., Cornut. theol. 12 p. 12, 5 ff. Lang, Eudok. viol. 606, Cramer anecd. Paris. iii. 239, 32 ff., cp. Hesych. s.v. Αἶται (H. Stephanus restored Λιταί)). Dr W. Leaf A Companion to the Iliad London 1892 p. 185 can still write: 'The epithets applied to them indicate the attitude of the penitent: halting, because he comes with hesitating steps; wrinkled, because his face betrays the inward struggle; and of eyes askance, because he dares not look in the face the man he has wronged' (cp. the same scholar's note on Il. 9. 503, repeated in his joint ed. with the Rev. M. A. Bayfield). I am sorry to dissent from Dr Leaf, to whom all lovers of Homer are so deeply indebted. But to me it seems far more probable that the Litai were physically deformed and loathsome like the Erinyes, to whom they were akin. I suppose them to have been essentially the prayers of the injured man taking shape as vengeful sprites. In the last analysis they were simply the soul of the victim issuing from his mouth in visible form, maimed because he was maimed, and clamouring for vengeance. The personification is not unlike that implied in Gen. 4. 10 'the voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground' (with Dr J. Skinner's note ad loc.). For the soul as Erinys see Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 213 ff. No doubt all this belongs to the dim background of Greek religion and has already been half-forgotten by the Homeric writer, who conceives the Litai, not as the wrathful prayers of the injured man, but as the penitential prayers of his injurer. The apologue thus acquires a new moral value. It is, however, largely couched in language appropriate to the earlier conception (Ate, swift of foot, drives many a man to do mad deeds. Then come the Litai and effect the cure. If a man respects them, they help him and hear his prayer. If a man flouts them, they go and pray to Zeus that Ate may fall upon such an one, drive him mad, and make him pay the price), and in particular its description of the Litai as misshapen and hideous is an abiding relic of its former significance. The passage is, in fact, an αἶνος (like Il. 19. 91 ff. or the oracle in Hdt. 6. 86) misinterpreted and misapplied by a later moralist. But, however understood, it contributes little or nothing to an explanation of Zeus Λιταῖος. The altar at Nikaia was surely voted to him as 'Hearer of Prayers' for the restored health of the emperor or for some other benefit vouchsafed to a grateful public.

[1] Zeus was worshipped as Καθάρσιος at Athens (Poll. 8. 142 (cp. 1. 24) cited supra p. 1093 n. 1) and at Olympia (Paus. 5. 14. 8 πρὸς αὐτῷ δέ ἐστιν Ἀγνώστων θεῶν βωμός, καὶ μετὰ τοῦτον Καθαρσίου Διὸς καὶ Νίκης, καὶ αὖθις Διὸς ἐπωνυμίαν Χθονίου. E. Curtius Die Altäre von Olympia (Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1881 Phil.-hist. Classe) Berlin 1882 p. 39 no. 21 rightly assumes that Zeus Καθάρσιος and Nike had here a common altar. So, with some hesitation, does W. Dörpfeld in Olympia i. 83 no. 18. C. Maurer De aris Graecorum pluribus deis in commune positis Darmstadii 1885 p. 17 adopts the same view. But K. Wernicke 'Olympische Beiträge i' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1894 ix. 96 no. 18 f. thinks otherwise). For literary allusions see Aristot. de mundo 7. 401 a 23 (cited supra p. 1097 n. 2) = Stob. ecl. 1. 1. 36 p. 45, 21 Wachsmuth, Ap. Rhod. 4. 708 f. (cited supra p. 1097 n. 2), Plout. de carn. esu 2. 1 ὦ Ζεῦ καθάρσιε, Orph. h. Zeus 15. 8 f. σεισίχθων, αὐξητά, καθάρσιε, παντοτινάκτα, | ἀστράπιε (so G. Hermann for ἀστραπαῖε), βρονταῖε, κεραύνιε, φυτάλιε Ζεῦ.

MAN-SLAYER.

(1) The bloodguilty man, appearing suddenly as a suppliant stranger, is deemed a god (Zeus Ἱκέτας, ἱκτήρ, ἀφίκτωρ, ἀλάστωρ, κ.τ.λ.)[1].

(2) The suppliant or stranger is not himself mistaken for a god, but is thought to have a divine escort (Zeus ὅς θ' ἱκέτῃσιν ἅμ' αἰδοίοισιν ὀπηδεῖ, Zeus ὃς ξείνοισιν ἅμ' αἰδοίοισιν ὀπηδεῖ)[2].

(3) Suppliants and strangers in general are supposed to be protégés of the god (Zeus Ἱκέσιος, ἱκετήσιος, ἱκταῖος (?), Zeus Ξένιος)[3].

VICTIM.

(1) The soul (κῆρ) of the murdered man becomes a wrathful spirit (ἐρινύς). His curses (ἀραί), prayers (λιταί), and penalties (ποιναί) all pursue the guilty.

(2) Hence arises the whole tribe of avenging deities (Κῆρες, Ἐρινύες, Ἀραί, Ἀράντιδες[4], Λιταί[5], Ποιναί, κ.τ.λ.).

(3) With the progress of religion deities of this low type are subordinated to a high god[6], especially to Zeus[7] (cp. Zeus Τιμωρός[8]).

The protective and the punitive powers of Zeus are fused (Zeus Ἱκέσιος, Παλαμναῖος, προστρόπαιος).

[1] Supra pp. 1096, 1098. [2] Supra p. 1097 n. 0.

[3] Supra pp. 1093, 1097, 1097 n. 0, 1097 n. 2.

A marble statue of Zeus Ξένιος by Papylos, a pupil of Praxiteles, was owned by C. Asinius Pollio (Plin. nat. hist. 36. 34 Iuppiter hospitalis Papyli (pamphili Gelenius),

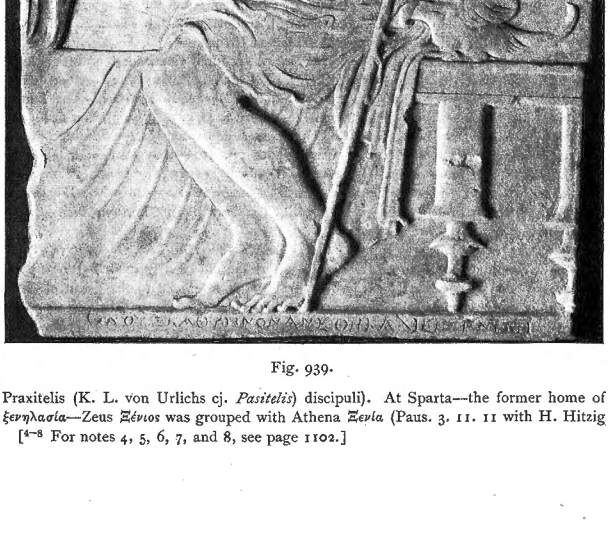

Fig. 939.

Praxitelis (K. L. von Urlichs cj. Pasitelis) discipuli). At Sparta—the former home of ξενηλασία—Zeus Ξένιος was grouped with Athena Ξενία (Paus. 3. 11. 11 with H. Hitzig

[4–8] For notes 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, see page 1102.]

Zeus Meilichios as an angry god readily appeased by the man-slayer might conveniently be ranged under this joint-category, his title being interpreted as 'the Kindly One.'

and H. Blümner ad loc. Wide Lakon. Kulte p. 9 aptly cites Philostr. v. Apoll. 4. 31 p. 149 Kayser περιστάντες δὲ αὐτὸν οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι ξένον τε παρὰ τῷ Διὶ ἐποιοῦντο κ.τ.λ.). A broken relief in the Terme Museum (fig. 939) shows Zeus Ξένιος as a traveller sitting with a rumpled himátion over his knees and a knotted stick in his left hand, while he extends his right in welcome to a draped figure before him and offers a seat on his own eagle-decked couch (Matz—Duhn Ant. Bildw. in Rom iii. 146 f. no. 3772, P. Arndt La Glyptothèque Ny-Carlsberg Munich 1896 p. 64 fig. 34, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 330 no. 2, R. Paribeni Le Terme di Diocleziano e Il Museo Nazionale Romano[4] Roma 1922 p. 217 no. 546). The lower border of the relief bears an archaising inscription, which G. Kaibel in Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 990 transcribes [ὁ δεῖνα ...]ρους καθ' ὕπνον ἀνέθηκα Διεὶ Ξενίωι ... (facsimile in W. Helbig Führer durch die öffentlichen Sammlungen klassischer Altertümer in Rom[3] Leipzig 1913 ii. 173 ff. no 1405 fig. 38).

[4] Hesych. Ἀράντισιν (Musurus cj. ἀραντίσιν)· Ἐρινύσι. Μακεδόνες. See O. Crusius in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 470, ii. 1165, K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 379, O. Hoffmann Die Makedonen, ihre Sprache und ihr Volkstum Göttingen 1906 p. 95 f.

[5] Supra p. 1099 n. 2.

[6] A. Rapp in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1328.

[7] This can be best made out in the case of the Erinyes. The following sequence of extracts attests their increasing subordination to Zeus: Il. 19. 86 ff. ἐγὼ δ' οὐκ αἴτιός εἰμι, | ἀλλὰ Ζεὺς καὶ Μοῖρα καὶ ἠεροφοῖτις Ἐρινύς, | οἵ τέ μοι ἐν ἀγορῇ φρεσὶν ἐμβάλον ἄγριον ἄτην | κ.τ.λ. (see further E. Hedén Homerische Götterstudien Uppsala 1912 p. 134 f.), Aisch. Ag. 55 ff. ὕπατος δ' ἀίων ἤ τις Ἀπόλλων | ἢ Πὰν ἢ Ζεὺς... | ὑστερόκοτον | πέμπει παραβάσιν Ἐρινύν, 744 ff. παρακλίνας' ἐπέκρανεν | δὲ γάμου πικρὰς τελευτάς, | δύσεδρος καὶ δυσόμιλος | συμένα Πριαμίδαισιν, | πομπᾷ Διὸς ξενίου | νυμφόκλαυτος Ἐρινύς (see W. Kausche 'Mythologumena Aeschylea' in the Dissertationes philologicae Halenses Halis Saxonum 1888 ix. 182 f.), Verg. Aen. 12. 849 ff. hae (sc. the three Furies) Iovis ad solium saevique in limine regis | apparent, acuuntque metum mortalibus aegris, | si quando letum horrificum morbosque deum rex | molitur, meritas aut bello territat urbes. | harum unam celerem demisit ab aethere summo | Iupiter, etc., Val. Flacc. 4. 74 f. gravis orantem procul arcet Erinys, | respiciens celsi legem Iovis.

[8] Supra p. 1099 n. 0. Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1116 n. 9 cites as a doubtful analogue Hesych. Ζητήρ· Ζεὺ(ς) ἐν Κύπρῳ = Favorin. lex. p. 828, 36 f. F. Guyet in J. Alberti's note on Hesych. loc. cit. says: 'An Ζητὴρ a ζάω, unde Ζὰν, Ζῆν, & Ζεὺς, a ζέω.' This derivation would have satisfied the Greeks themselves (supra i. 11 n. 5, 31 n. 3), and in Kypros a Zeus Ζητήρ might have been regarded as a Grecised equivalent of the Semitic θεὸς ζῶν (W. W. Baudissin Adonis und Esmun Leipzig 1911 pp. 450—510 'Jahwe der lebendige Gott'). But it is far more probable that Ζητήρ means 'Avenger' and is related to ζη-μία, ζη-τρός, κ.τ.λ. (on which see A. Vaníček Griechisch-lateinisches etymologisches Wörterbuch Leipzig 1877 i. 756, Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 168, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 309). Supra p. 444 n. 7.

His Roman equivalent was Iupiter Ultor. Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 9239 (a dedication found at Clunia in Spain) Iovi Aug. | Ultori sacrum | L. Valerius Paternus | mil. leg. X Gem. | optio 7 Censoris exs | voto perhaps has reference to the death of Nero. Pertinax at the last besought Iupiter Ultor to avenge his assassination (Iul. Capit. v. Pert. 11. 10). Domitian, Septimius Severus, Alexander Severus, Pupienus, and Gallienus issued coins with the legend IOVI VLTORI (Rasche Lex. Num. iv. 902 ff., Suppl. iii. 158 f., Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 486 fig.). I figure a 'first brass' of Alexander Severus in my collection (fig. 940) and a medallion struck in two bronzes by the same emperor, 224 A.D. (F. Gnecchi in the Rivista italiana di numismatica 1888 i. 286 no. 12 pl. 8, 7 (=my fig. 941) rev.: IOVI VLTORI P·M·TR·P·III· and COSPP· Hexastyle temple with triumphal chariot and statues as akrotéria; statuary

Very different is the explanation propounded by Monsieur S. Reinach in an able and persuasive paper already noticed[1]. The altar of Zeus Meilíchios, at which the Phytalidai purified Theseus[2], was not far from the spot called Hierà Sykê, the 'Sacred Fig-tree,' where Demeter first revealed to Phytalos the fruit of the fig[3]. It is, therefore, tempting to surmise that Theseus was purified 'avec du suc des figuiers sacrés (?)[4]' and that Meilíchios meant originally the 'god of Figs' (meilicha)[5]. Whether we accept Monsieur Reinach's further contention that the word sykophántes meant the hierophant of this fig-cult[6], or not, we must admit that the contiguity of a place named the 'Sacred Fig-tree' affords strong support to his derivation of Meilíchios. Moreover, Zeus Meilíchios was, according to the myth, a purificatory power, and another purifying Zeus bore the title Sykásios, which presumably denotes the 'god of Fig-gathering' (sykázein)[7]. The case for a local fig-cult might indeed be made even stronger. When Plouton carried off Kore, he was said to have descended into the earth beside the Eleusinian Kephisos at a point known as Erineós, the 'Wild Fig-tree[8].' Again, Sir James Frazer thinks that the site of the ancient altar dedicated also in pediment. Within the temple sits Iupiter Ultor with thunderbolt and sceptre.

Fig. 940.

Fig. 941.

Round the temple is a large porticus with eight arches a side, and three arched entrances surmounted by statues).

[1] Supra p. 291 n. 2. [2] Supra p. 1091 f.

[3] Supra p. 1092 n. 6. Cp. Plout. symp. 7. 4. 4, Athen. 74 D, Philostr. v. soph. 2. 20, Hesych. s.v. ierá, Phot. lex. s.v. ierà sukê, et. mag. p. 469, 17, Eustath. in Od. p. 1964, 12 f.

[4] On figs as a means of purification see Boetticher Baumkultus p. 437 f., J. Töpffer Attische Genealogie Berlin 1889 pp. 249 f., 252, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 910, F. Olck in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 2148 f.

[5] Supra p. 1092. [6] Supra p. 291 n. 2.

[7] Eustath. in Od. p. 1572, 58 f. λέγεται δὲ καὶ Συκάσιος Ζεὺς παρὰ τοῖς παλαιοῖς, ὁ Καθάρσιος. τῇ γὰρ συκῇ ἐχρῶντο φασὶν ἐν καθαρμοῖς, Hesych. Διὶ Συκασίῳ (so Musurus for διϊσκασίῳ cod.)· παραπεποίηται παρὰ τὸ συκοφαντεῖν. From these two passages it may be inferred that there was a cult of Zeus Συκάσιος with cathartic rites, and that some comedian had used the phrase Διὶ Συκασίῳ with a sly reference to συκάζειν in the sense of συκοφαντεῖν or worse (Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. vii. 1014 A).

[8] Paus. 1. 38. 5, cp. Plat. Theaet. 143 B.

When Zeus was pursuing a Titan named Sykeas or Sykeus, Ge rescued her son by sending up a fig-tree to shelter him: the scene was laid at Sykea in Kilikia (Athen. 78 A—B περὶ δὲ τῆς προσηγορίας τῶν σύκων λέγων Τρύφων ἐν δευτέρῳ φυτῶν ἱστορίας Δωρίωνά φησιν ἐν Γεωργικῷ ἱστορεῖν Συκέαν, ἕνα τινὰ τῶν Τιτάνων, διωκόμενον ὑπὸ Διὸς τὴν μητέρα Γῆν ὑποδέξασθαι καὶ ἀνεῦναι τὸ φυτὸν εἰς διατριβὴν τῷ παιδί, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ Συκέαν πόλιν εἶναι ἐν Κιλικίᾳ, Steph. Byz. s.v. Συκαί, Eustath. in Od. p. 1764, 13 ff.). Kreuzer in to Zeus Meilichios may now be covered by the church of Saint Sabas[1]. If so[2], is it a mere coincidence that this Greek martyr, whose festival falls on the first of May, was said to have been hung by his hands upon a fig-tree[3]?

There is, it would seem, much to be said in favour of both these views—that which regards Zeus Meilichios as a god 'Kindly' towards the fugitive man-slayer and that which takes him to have been originally a 'god of Figs.' Nevertheless I find myself unable to adopt either opinion; for both alike are based on the circumstances of one particular cult-centre without regard to the other localities in which Zeus Meilichios is known to have been worshipped. Our survey must be wider before we can safely venture on an interpretation of the disputed appellative.

(3) Zeus Meilichios on the Attic coast.

Between the harbours of Zea and Mounichia the Attic coastline shows various groups of rock-cut niches[4]. At one point[5], four hundred metres in a north-westerly direction from the island of Stalida, the foothill displays a grotto and beside it a recess, originally lined with red stucco and still framed by pilasters and an architrave with palmettes above it. The decoration appears to date from the fourth century B.C. Some ninety metres further towards the west other niches of different shapes and sizes are to be seen carved in an old quarry-face[6]. To judge from votive reliefs found in the vicinity, the whole site was once sacred to Zeus Meilichios and to a kindred deity Zeus Philios[7]. Agathe Tyche, regarded Roscher Lex. Myth. iv. 1617 connects this myth with the belief that the fig-tree was lightning-proof (Plout. symp. 4. 2. 1, 5. 9, Lyd. de mens. 3. 52 p. 49, 22 Bekker=ib. 4. 96 p. 111, 3 f. Bekker=p. 181, 18 f. Wünsch, 4. 4 p. 69, 1 Wünsch, de ostent. 45 p. 98, 15 ff. Wachsmuth, Theophanes Nonnos epitome de curatione morborum 259, Geopon. 11. 2. 7, cp. Plin. nat. hist. 15. 77: see Rohde Psyche[3] ii. 406 f., Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 785 n. 6, F. Olck in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 2145, and especially T. H. Martin La foudre l'électricité et le magnétisme chez les anciens Paris 1866 p. 194 f.).

[1] Frazer Pausanias ii. 493.

[2] F. Lenormant Monographie de la Voie Sacrée Éleusinienne Paris 1864 p. 312 accepts the view of F. C. H. Kruse Hellas Leipzig 1826 ii. 1. 173 that the site of the altar is marked by the little church of St Blasios (Sir W. Gell The Itinerary of Greece London 1819 p. 31).

[3] Acta Sanctorum edd. Bolland. Maii i. 46 (De Sancto Saba, martyre apud Græcos.) Antiqua MSS. Menæa, quæ Divione apud Patrum Franciscum Societatis Iesu asservari reperimus anno MDCLXII, referunt hisce Kalendis Maji S. Sabam, in fico digitis suis appensum, & sic gloriosa vita functum, & addunt hoc distichon.

Ἤνεγκε καρπὸν πρωϊμένης συκῆς
Κλάδος τὸν χειροδεσμοῖς ἐκκρεμαμένον Σάβαν.

[lege Ἤνεγκε καρπὸν πρωΐμης συκῆς κλάδος
Τὸν χειροδέσμοις ἐκκρεμαμένον (sic) Σάβαν.]

Attulit fructum præmaturæ ficus Ramus, suspensum è digitis vinctis Saban.

M. and W. Drake Saints and their Emblems London 1916 p. 113 confuse this St Sabas with St Sabas the Gothic martyr (April 12), who suffered under Athanaricus in 372 A.D. (G. T. Stokes in Smith—Wace Dict. Chr. Biogr. iv. 566).

[4] A. Milchhöfer in E. Curtius—J. A. Kaupert Karten von Attika Berlin 1881 Erläuternder Text Heft i p. 60 f., C. Wachsmuth Die Stadt Athen im Alterthum Leipzig 1890 ii. 1. 146 ff., A. Furtwängler in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1897 p. 406 ff., W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 p. 383.

[5] E. Curtius and J. A. Kaupert Atlas von Athen Berlin 1878 p. 35 pl. 12, 1.

[6] E. Curtius and J. A. Kaupert op. cit. p. 35 pl. 12, 2.

[7] Infra Append. N med.

as consort of the latter[1], had a separate precinct near by[2], as had also on a larger scale Asklepios[3].

Zeus Meilichios was sometimes represented as a kingly figure enthroned. A fourth-century relief of white stone, found near the Tsocha theatre in the Peiraieus and now in the National Museum at Athens, shows him approached by three devotees (fig. 942)[4]. Within an architectural framework the god is seated towards the right on a throne, the arm of which is adorned with the usual sphinx and ram's-head (?)[5]. Clad in a himátion only, he holds a sceptre in one hand, a phiále in the other. Before him is a rectangular altar. From the right draws near a simple family-group of man[6], woman, and child, with gestures of greeting. Above, on the architrave, is the dedication:

'Aristarche, to Zeus Meilichios[7].'

A second relief from the same find-spot adds more to our knowledge of the god (fig. 943)[8]. As before, he is seen within a framework of architecture, which bears the inscription:

'——toboule, to Zeus Milichios[9].'

As before, he is enthroned on the left with a phiále in his right hand[10], while a group of worshippers advances towards him from the right. But this time he grasps a cornu copiae in his left hand, and they bring a pig to sacrifice at his altar. Behind the altar stands a boy with something in a shallow basket: between the man and woman is seen a grown girl supporting a deep basket on her head. The cornu copiae, one of the rarer attributes of Zeus[11], marks him as a sort of Plouton, able to dispense abundance. The pig, again, though its bones strewed the altar of Zeus Lýkaios[12], was an animal commonly sacrificed to Zeus in his chthonian capacity—Zeus Bouleús at Mykonos[13], Zeus Eubouleús at Delos[14].

[1] Infra Append. N init.

[2] Ch. D. Tsountas in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1884 p. 169 line 44, W. Judeich op. cit. p. 383 n. 9.

[3] W. Judeich op. cit. p. 388 n. 16.

[4] Staïs Marbres et Bronzes: Athènes[2] p. 245 f. no. 1431, Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 436 f. pl. 70, 4, P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1883 vii. 507 ff. pl. 18 (=my fig. 942), Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 117 pl. 2, a, Einzelaufnahmen no. 1246, 2 with Text v. 21 by E. Löwy, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 19 f. fig. 3, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 363 no. 1. Height 0·30^{m}, breadth 0·40^{m}.

[5] Supra i. 407 n. 1.

[6] Not the priest (Foucart loc. cit.), but the husband (Svoronos loc. cit.) or son (Löwy loc. cit.) of the dedicant Aristarche.

[7] Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1579 Ἀριστάρχη Διὶ Μειλιχίωι. Rather: Ἀρι(σ)τάρχη κ.τ.λ.

[8] I. Ch. Dragatses in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1886 p. 49 f. no. 1, Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 117, A. Furtwängler in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1897 p. 408, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 21 f. fig. 6. My illustration is from a photograph kindly placed at my disposal by Miss Harrison. Height 0·36^{m}, breadth 0·24^{m}. Traces of colouring subsist on Zeus and his horn (red, yellow), etc.

[9] Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1579*b* —τοβούλη Διὶ Μιλιχίω[ι]. Miss Harrison loc. cit. after Dragatses prints [Κριτο]βόλη Διὶ Μειλιχίῳ. But this is inexact. The name of the dedicator should be longer, perhaps ['Αρισ]τοβούλη (F. Bechtel Die Attischen Frauennamen Göttingen 1902 pp. 6, 9); and the name of the god has no ε.

[10] I. Ch. Dragatses loc. cit. says τὴν μὲν δεξιὰν ἐπὶ τῶν μηρῶν ἀναπαύοντα—another inexactitude.

[11] Supra i. 361, 501 f., 598 n. 1.

[12] Supra i. 82.

[13] Supra i. 668, 717 n. 3.

[14] Supra i. 669 n. 2, 717 n. 3.

The abundance vouchsafed by Zeus Meilichios and the pig provided by his worshippers are alike illustrated by a passage in Xenophon's Anabasis[1]:

'Next they sailed across to Lampsakos, where Xenophon was met by a seer

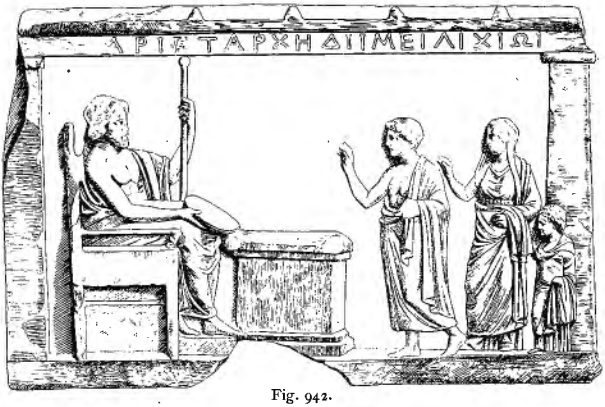

Fig. 942.

Fig. 943.

from Phlious, Eukleides son of Kleagoras. Kleagoras was the man who painted the frescoes in the Lykeion. This Eukleides congratulated Xenophon on his escape and asked him how much money he had. Xenophon told him on oath that he would not even have enough to take him home, unless he sold his horse and personal belongings. Eukleides did not believe him. But when the men of Lampsakos sent gifts by way of welcome to Xenophon and he offered sacrifice to Apollon, he bade Eukleides stand beside him. And he on seeing the victims said that he believed in Xenophon's lack of funds. "But I know," he added, "that even if funds are ever forthcoming there is some hindrance in your way—yourself, if nothing else." To this Xenophon agreed. "The fact is," said Eukleides, "Zeus Meilichios is hindering you." And he went on to ask if Xenophon had already sacrificed to that deity "as I," said he, "used at home to have sacrifice made and to present whole burnt-offerings on your behalf." Xenophon replied that since leaving home he had not sacrificed to this god. So Eukleides counselled him to have sacrifice made to the god in his usual manner and declared that things would improve. Next day Xenophon advanced to Ophrynion: there he had sacrifice made and presented whole burnt-offerings of pigs in accordance with his ancestral custom, and the omens were favourable[1]. That very day Bion and Nausikleides arrived with money for the troops. They were entertained by Xenophon and, as to the horse which he had sold at Lampsakos for fifty darics, hearing that it was a favourite mount and suspecting that he had parted with it through poverty, they bought the animal back again and handed it over to its master, refusing to take the purchase-money from him.'

[1] Xen. an. 7. 8. 1—6.

That the god who thus sent wealth in return for whole burnt-offerings of pigs was in fact an Underworld power appears further from other votive reliefs, nine or more in number, found in 1878 near the north-east angle of the Munichian Gate[2]. These show the same deity in the guise of a monstrous snake[3], usually bearded (figs. 944[4], 945[5]) and towering above his human worshippers (fig. 946)[6]. P. Foucart, to whom we are indebted for the first collection and discussion of these reliefs, pointed out that in no case is the name of the dedicator accompanied by that of his deme. It follows that the worshippers were strangers, resident

[1] ἐθύετο καὶ ὡλοκαύτει χοίρους τῷ πατρίῳ (πατρῴῳ cod. Eton. etc. followed by Bornemann) νόμῳ, καὶ ἐκαλλιέρει (Xen. An. 7. 8. 5).

[2] P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1883 vii. 507 ff. draws up the list.

[3] On the chthonian character of the snake see supra pp. 1060, 1061.

[4] Ant. Skulpt. Berlin p. 270 no. 722 with fig., R. Kekulé von Stradonitz Die griechische Skulptur[2] Berlin 1907 p. 202, P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1883 vii. 509 no. 6, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 17 f. fig. 1 a stèle of Hymettian marble inscribed in lettering of s. iv. B.C. – – – Διὶ Μειλιχίωι (Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1581). Height 0·58[m], breadth 0·31[m]. I am again indebted to Miss Harrison for the photograph from which my fig. 944 is drawn.

P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1883 vii. 509 no. 7 describes a relief in the Louvre representing a snake reared upright, with the inscription Ἀσκληπιάδης | Ἀσκληπιοδώρου | Διὶ Μιλιχίωι (Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1580).

[5] Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 438 pl. 70, 3 (=my fig. 945), P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1883 vii. 510 no. 8 with fig., id. in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 1700 f. fig. 4892, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 20 fig. 4 a relief inscribed in lettering of s. iv. B.C. Ἡρακλείδης τῶι θεῶι (Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1583). Height 0·33[m], breadth 0·19[m]. J. N. Svoronos loc. cit. notes that τῶι θεῶι might mean either Διὶ Μειλιχίωι or Ἀσκληπιῶι (id. in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1901 iv. 503—507).

[6] Ant. Skulpt. Berlin p. 271 no. 723 with fig., R. Kekulé von Stradonitz Die griechische Skulptur[2] Berlin 1907 p. 202, P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1883 vii. 509 no. 5, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] pp. 17, 19 fig. 2, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 31 no. 4 a stèle of Hymettian marble without inscription. My fig. 946 is from a transparency in the collection of Newnham College, Cambridge. Height 0·42[m], breadth 0·23[m] to 0·25[m]. The gigantic snake approached by a woman and two men might, again, be either Zeus Μειλίχιος or Asklepios.

aliens, freedmen, or slaves. And Foucart suggests[1] that they formed a thíasos of Phoenician settlers, who had brought with them to the crowded port of Athens Ba'al Milik or Melek or Molok, their own 'Lord King'[2]: Ba'al they translated as Zeûs and Milik they transliterated as Milíchios[3]. This view has commended

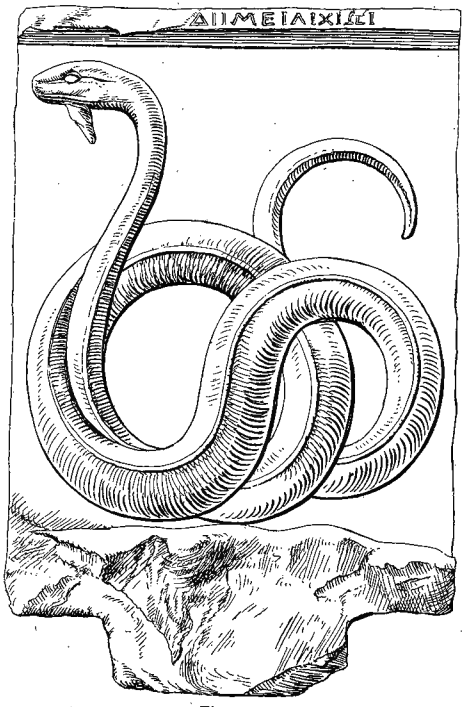

Fig. 944.

[1] P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1883 vii. 511 ff., id. in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 1700 f.

[2] On the problematic Malakba'al- or Melekba'al-stêlai see E. Meyer in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 2871, ii. 3107, and on Moloch in general E. Meyer and A. Jeremias ib. ii. 3106 ff., F. X. Kortleitner De polytheismo universo Oeniponte 1908 pp. 216—227. My friend and colleague the Rev. Prof. R. H. Kennett has suggested 'that Moloch, to whom first-born children were burnt by their parents in the valley of Hinnom,...may have been originally the human king regarded as an incarnate deity': for this important hypothesis see Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Adonis Attis Osiris[3] ii. 219 ff. ('Moloch the King').

[3] Cp. P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1883 vii. 513 n. 4: 'M. Renan avait fait remarquer que la forme la plus vraisemblable est Milik, que la leçon Διὰ Μιλίχιον se rencontre dans plusieurs des manuscrits d'Eusèbe où est traduit un passage de Sanchoniaton sur le dieu phénicien [Euseb. praep. ev. 1. 10. 12 Δία Μειλίχιον. G. H. A. Ewald in W. W. Baudissin Studien zur semitischen Religionsgeschichte Leipzig 1876 i. 15 took Μειλίχιος here to be a Grecised form of the Semitic word for 'sailor,' and Baudissin himself ib. p. 36 n. 2 says: 'Insofern der oben S. 15 erwähnte Μειλίχιος "der Schiffer" die Bezeichnung Ζεύς erhält, haben wir eine Gottheit in diesem Namen zu suchen, die kaum eine andere als Melkart sein kann (s.m. Jahve et Moloch S. 28 f.). Μελικέρτης, dessen Name sicher das phönicische Melkart ist, gilt bei den Griechen als Meergottheit...' Cp. Gruppe Cult. Myth. orient. Rel. i. 398, Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 908 n. 3. À propos of the Semitic word for 'sailor' my friend Mr N. McLean writes to me (April 10, 1917): 'The word occurs in the form mallāḥ in Hebrew, Aramaic, & Arabic. Arabic borrowed it from Aramaic; & it is said to itself to sundry scholars including M. Clerc[1], H. Lewy[2], M. Mayer[3], O. Höfer[4], W. Prellwitz[5], and in a modified form to S. Reinach[6]. But Miss Harrison in-have come to Hebrew & Aramaic as a loanword from Assyrian, where the form is Malaḫu.' The last statement is further guaranteed by the Rev. C. H. W. Johns (April 11, 1917)], qu'enfin Silius Italicus (III, 104 [103 ff. lascivo genitus Satyro nymphaque Myrice | Milichus indigenis late regnarat in oris | cornigeram attollens genitoris imagine frontem]) cite Milichus comme un dieu punique (Mémoires de l'Académie des Inscriptions, t. 23, p. 267). L'orthographe constante [?] des bas-reliefs du Pirée vient confirmer cette opinion.' F. C. Movers Die Phönizier Berlin 1841 i. 326 f. had already connected the words Μειλίχιος, Milichus, and Melech.

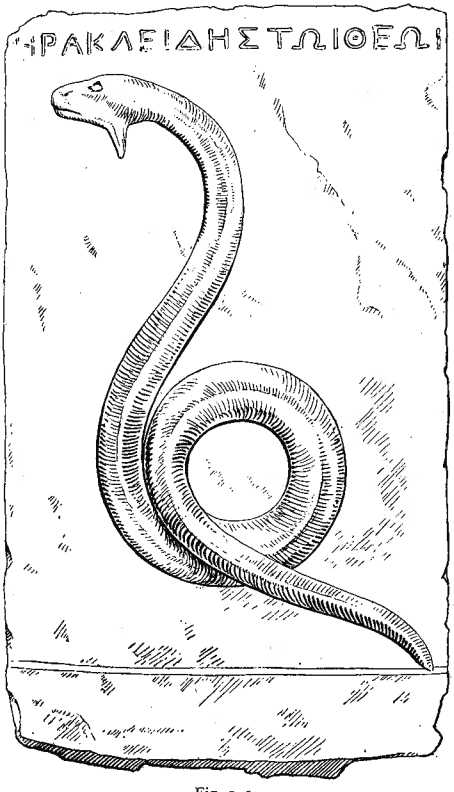

Fig. 945.

Fig. 946.

[1] M. Clerc Les métèques athéniens (Bibliothèque des écoles françaises d'Athènes et de Rome lxiv) Paris 1893 p. 127 ff.

[2] H. Lewy Die semitischen Fremdwörter im Griechischen Berlin 1895 p. 242 f.

[3] M. Mayer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1521.

[4] O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2561 : but cp. ib. p. 2562.

[5] Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 286.

[6] S. Reinach Chroniques d'Orient Paris 1891 p. 683 holds that in Zeus Μειλίχιος we may see the fusion of an original Greek with an incoming oriental god : 'une forme grecque et une forme orientale, distinctes à l'origine, ont été confondues par le même syncrétisme qui a assimilé Héraklès à l'Hercule latin.' Similarly in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1906 xix. 348 dicates an obvious difficulty: 'Unfortunately for this interesting theory we have no evidence that "Moloch" was ever worshipped in snake form[1].' And R. Dussaud further contends that in point of fact the Phoenicians recognised no such deity as Milk[2]. We must turn a deaf ear to all Semitic Sirens and seek an explanation nearer home.

Miss Harrison herself maintains that the cult of Zeus Meilichios was a case of 'superposition.' The worship of the sky-god Zeus had ousted that of an older earth-demon Meilichios: hence the snake inappropriate to the former, but natural to the latter; hence too the euphemistic title common to many a buried hero. 'Zeus,' we are told, 'is one of the few Greek gods who never appear attended by a snake. Asklepios, Hermes, Apollo, even Demeter and Athene have their snakes, Zeus never[3].' 'And the truth is nothing more or less than this. The human-shaped Zeus has slipped himself quietly into the place of the old snake-god.... It is not that Zeus the Olympian has "an underworld aspect"; it is the cruder fact that he of the upper air, of the thunder and lightning, extrudes an ancient serpent-demon of the lower world, Meilichios. Meilichios is no foreign Moloch, he is home-grown, autochthonous before the formulation of Zeus[4].' 'When we come to the discussion of hero-worship, it will be seen that all over Greece the dead hero was worshipped in snake form and addressed by euphemistic titles akin to that of Meilichios[5].' That Miss Harrison's shaft has hit the target and indeed gone near to piercing the bull's-eye, I shall not deny. The snake-form and euphemistic title of Zeus Meilichios are rightly explained as the appanage of a chthonian power resembling the divinised dead. But why need we make the rather unlikely assumption that a sky-cult has been superposed on an earth-cult? Because—says Miss Harrison—Zeus never has a snake as his attribute. That, surely, is a misleading statement. I have already adduced much evidence connecting both the Thraco-Phrygian Zeus[6] and the Graeco-Libyan Zeus[7] with the snake. To recall but a single case: the coinage of Dion in Makedonia shows Zeus standing with a snake at his side[8]. Should we not rather conclude that the (id. Cultes, Mythes et Religions Paris 1908 iii. 104): 'C'est plus tard seulement...qu'on l'identifia, par exemple au Pirée, à quelque baal-melek phénicien.' Cp. Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 18 n. 1: 'The possibility of a contaminatio between the Phenician Baal and Zeus Meilichios cannot be lightly dismissed. For a discussion of the subject see especially Clermont-Ganneau, Le dieu Satrape, p. 65, on the river Meilichos at Patrae, and Lagrange, Etudes sur les Religions Sémitiques, p. 105.'

[1] Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 18. Not but what there is ample evidence of serpent-worship among the Semites: see e.g. S. Bochart Hierozoicon rec. E. F. C. Rosenmüller Lipsiae 1796 iii. 125—250, F. X. Kortleitner De polytheismo universo Oeniponte 1908 pp. 191 ff., 323 f., J. Skinner on Gen. 3. 1 ff., R. H. Kennett 'Ark' in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1908 i. 791—793. The sanctity of the serpent in Phoinike (Philon Bybl. frag. 9 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 572 f. Müller) ap. Euseb. praep. ev. 1. 10. 46 ff.) may in part account for its frequency as a motif in Phoenician art (e.g. Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art iii. 658, with fig. on p. 628, 759 fig. 543, 833 fig. 597, F. Poulsen Der Orient und die frühgriechische Kunst Leipzig—Berlin 1912 p. 193 Index s.vv. 'Schlangen, Schlangenkopf,' E. Küster Die Schlange in der griechischen Kunst und Religion Giessen 1913 p. 48).

[2] R. Dussaud 'Milk, Moloch, Melqart' in the Revue de l'histoire des religions 1904 xlix. 163—168, Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1908 p. 643.

[3] Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 18 f.

[4] Ead. op. cit. p. 19.

[5] Ead. op. cit. p. 20 f.

[6] Supra i. 392 ff., 428.

[7] Supra i. 358 ff., 428.

[8] Supra i. 102 n. 4, 113 fig. 84.

local king, reverenced during his life-time as Zeus incarnate, was after his death worshipped as an anguiform soul under the euphemistic appellation of Zeus 'the Kindly One'? On this showing Zeus Meilíchios falls into line with a whole string of deities already discussed—Zeus Ktésios[1], Zeus Agamémnon[2], Zeus Amphidraos[3], Zeus Trophónios[4], Zeus Asklepiós[5]. Moreover, from the new standpoint the circumstances of the cult on the Kephisos are readily intelligible. The head of a clan, dead and buried, would be just the personage required on the one hand to purify a man from the stain of kindred bloodshed, on the other to promote the fertility of the fig-trees. His title Meilíchios, 'the Kindly One[6],'—originally a euphemistic name[7]—would lend itself equally well to two false inter-

[1] Append. H. [2] Append. I. [3] Append. J.
[4] Append. K. [5] Append. L.

[6] E. Maass De Aeschyli Supplicibus commentatio Gryphiswaldiae 1890 p. xxxvii n. 4 says: 'Jupiter Μελισσαῖος (Hesych. s.v. [Μελισσαῖος· ὁ Ζεύς]) a μέλισσα abstracto (=ἠπιότης) videtur derivatus, ut sit idem ac μειλίχιος.' But Zeus Μελισσαῖος presumably means Zeus 'of the Bees' (cp. Nik. ther. 611). Whether the allusion is to the infant Zeus of Crete nurtured by bees (supra i. 150, ii. 928 f. n. 0, 932 f. n. 1) or to Aristaios the bee-keeper worshipped as Zeus in Arkadia (supra i. 372 n. 7) or to some unidentified cult, we cannot say.

Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 908 f.: 'Das gewöhnlichste Mittel, die Geister zu versöhnen, ist die Bewirtung mit Honig; wahrscheinlich nach ihm heisst das Entsühnen μειλίσσειν. Nach der besänftigenden Honigspende sind wahrscheinlich Zeus und Dionysos Meilichios genannt worden.' But, as Gruppe himself is aware (op. cit. p. 908 n. 2 f.), the connexion of μειλίσσειν with μέλι is very doubtful: see now Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. pp. 620, 624.

[7] Euphemism is and always has been a vera causa in popular life. I once stayed at Lavancher, a village near the Mer de Glace: the little inn, which had languished under the name L'hôtel du Mauvais Pas, was doing well as L'hôtel Beau-Séjour! Similarly with Greek and Latin place-names: the Αἷξενος became the Εὔξεινος (Strab. 298 f., Ov. trist. 4. 4. 55 ff., Mela 1. 102, Plin. nat. hist. 4. 76, 6. 1, Solin. 23. 16, Isid. orig. 13. 16. 7), Maleventum was improved into Beneventum (Liv. 9. 27, Plin. nat. hist. 3. 105, Fest. p. 340 b 7 f. Müller, p. 458, 35 f. Lindsay, Paul. ex Fest. p. 34 Müller, p. 31, 17 ff. Lindsay, Steph. Byz. s.v. Βενεβεντός, Prokop. de bell. Goth. 1. 15); it was even supposed that Epidamnus had heen changed into Dyrrhachium (Mela 2. 56, Plin. nat. hist. 3. 145, Fest. p. 340 b 9 Müller, p. 458, 37 Lindsay) and Egesta into Segesta (Fest. p. 340 b 3 ff. Müller, p. 458, 31 ff. Lindsay) for the sake of avoiding an evil omen. Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Taboo p. 392 ff. collects many examples of euphemistic substitutes for common words, which for one reason or another were taboo. He might have added to his store from Greek usage. When the ancient Greek spoke of his 'left hand' as ἀριστερά or εὐώνυμος, of 'night' as εὐφρόνη, of 'death' as εἴ τι πάθοις, of 'the dead' as οἱ πλείονες (see O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2560 f.), when the modern Greek calls the small-pox Συγχωρεμένη, the 'Gracious One,' or Εὐλογία, the 'Blessing' (G. F. Abbott Macedonian Folklore Cambridge 1903 p. 236), and the Devil himself ὁ καλὸς ἄνθρωπος, 'the Good man,' or ὁ κατάκαλος, 'the Beloved' (B. Schmidt Das Volksleben der Neugriechen Leipzig 1871 i. 176), these complimentary phrases are best explained as due to downright euphemism. Cp. Eustath. in Od. p. 1398, 50 ff., et. mag. p. 144, 20 ff. Further instances are adduced by writers on rhetoric to illustrate the trope antíphrasis: see Anonymos περὶ τρόπων 14 (C. Walz Rhetores Graeci Stuttgartiae et Tuhingae 1835 viii. 722, 10 f.), Tryphon περὶ τρόπων 15 (Walz op. cit. viii. 755, 11 ff.), Gregorios of Corinth περὶ τρόπων 18 (Walz op. cit. viii. 773, 20 ff.), Kokondrios περὶ τρόπων 6 (Walz op. cit. viii. 785, 27 ff.), Choiroboskos περὶ τρόπων 13 (Walz op. cit. viii. 812, 11 ff.). An example will serve: Helladios ap. Phot. bibl. p. 535 a 4 ff. Bekker ὅτι τὸ μὴ λέγειν δύσφημα πᾶσι τοῖς παλαιοῖς μὲν φρονητὶς ἦν, μάλιστα δὲ τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις. διὸ καὶ τὸ δεσμωτήριον οἶκημα ἐκάλουν, καὶ τὸν δήμιον κοινόν [a euphemism for a euphemism!], τὰς δὲ Ἐρινύας Εὐμενίδας ἢ σεμνὰς θεάς, τὸ δὲ μύσος ἅγος, τὸ δὲ ὄξος μέλι καὶ τὴν χολὴν γλυκεῖαν, τὸν δὲ βόρβορον ὀχετόν. οἱ δὲ γραμματικοὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα κατὰ ἀντίφρασιν ὀνομάζουσιν. οἶδα δέ τινας, φησί, τῶν φιλολόγων καὶ τὸν πίθηκον ὀνομάζοντες καλλίαν.

Confining our attention to the titles of Greek divinities, we note the following cases:—

(1) The Erinyes were known as Ἀβλαβίαι (Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 600, b 67, Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 839, B 18 Erythrai in the first half of s. iii B.C.), Εὐμενίδες, Σεμναί.

(2) Hades was Ἀγήσανδρος (Hesych. s.v., Favorin. lex. p. 18, 22), Ἀγησίλαος (Aisch. frag. 406 Nauck[2] ap. Athen. 99 B, cp. Hesych. s.v. Ἀγεσίλαος (so Musurus for ἄγες, λαὸς cod.) = Favorin. lex. p. 17, 7 f., Kallim. lavacr. Pall. 130 Ἀγεσίλᾳ cited by et. mag. p. 8, 32 f. as Ἀγεσιλάῳ, Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 195. 2 = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 2. 551. 2 ἐπ' Ἀγεσίλας for the meaningless inscr. ΕΠΑΓΕΣΙΜΗ, Lact. div. inst. 1. 11 Plutoni, cui cognomen Agesilao (v.l. Agelasto) fuit. So Nik. frag. 74, 72 ap. Athen. 684 D Ἡγεσιλάου, Anth. Pal. 7. 545. 4 (Hegesippos) ἠγησίλεω...ἈΙδος), Εὐβουλεύς (supra p. 118 n. 4), Εὐειδής (Hesych. s.v. Εὐκλῆς cited supra p. 118 n. 3), Εὐκλῆς (supra p. 118 n. 3), Εὐχαίτης (J. Franz in the Ann. d. Inst. 1842 xiv. 136 ff. no. 1, 24 an oracle of Klaros, s. ii A.D., found at Kallipolis on the Thracian Chersonese: see Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 1034. 23, W. H. Roscher in his Lex. Myth. i. 1397, K. Buresch Klaros Leipzig 1889 p. 81 ff., H. von Prott in the Ath. Mitth. 1899 xxiv. 257 f., O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 880, and C. Picard Éphèse et Claros Paris 1922 pp. 212, 389, 673, 694, 696 (following Buresch)), Ἰσοδαίτης (Hesych. s.v.: see further O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 551 f., Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 804 n. 7, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 1430 n. 1, 1432 n. 2, 1557 n. 3, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] pp. 440, 481 n. 1, Themis p. 157), Κλύμενος (C. Scherer in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1783, R. Engelmann, W. H. Roscher, and W. Drexler ib. ii. 1228 f.), Πασιάναξ (on Megarian (?) imprecatory tablets of lead published by E. Ziebarth 'Neue attische Fluchtafeln' in the Nachr. d. kön. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Göttingen Phil.-hist. Classe 1899 p. 120 no. 21, 1, 3, 7 and p. 121 no. 22, 1. O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1664 cp. the Pythian oracle quoted by Phlegon of Tralleis Olympiades seu chronica frag. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 603 Müller) = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 6. 20. 5 f. ἀτιμάζοντες Ὀλύμπια πασιάνακτος | Ζηνός), Περικλύμενος (Hesych. s.v.: so Salmasius and Soping for περίκλυμος cod.), Πλούτων (supra i. 503 f.), Πολύαρχος (Cornut. theol. 35 p. 74, 15 Lang), Πολυδαίμων (Orph. h. Plout. 18. 11: see Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 400 n. 2, O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii 2637), Πολυδέγμων (h. Dem. 17, 31, 430, Cornut. theol. 35 p. 74, 15 Lang: see further Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 400 n. 2, 809 n. 1, O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2639 f.), Πολυδέκτης (h. Dem. 9 with the note of E. E. Sikes ad loc., Cornut. theol. 35 p. 74, 14 Lang: see further Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 400 n. 2, 867 n. 5, H. W. Stoll and O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2640), Πολύξενος? (Kallim. frag. 478 Schneider ap. et. Flor. p. 189 Κλυμένου...πολυξείνοιο. In Soph. O.C. 1569 f. ἐν πύλαισι | ...πολυξέστοις S. Musgrave restored πολυξένοις. Cp. Aisch. suppl. 157 f. τὸν πολυξενώτατον | Ζῆνα τῶν κεκμηκότων, where T. Birt would read Δία for Ζῆνα with the citation in et. Gud. p. 227, 43 διὰ (sic) and in Cramer anecd. Oxon. ii. 443, 13 Διὰ (sic). Again, in Aisch. frag. 228 Nauck[2] Ζαγρεῖ τε νὺν με καὶ πολυξένῳ < > | χαίρειν cited by et. Gud. p. 227, 40 f. and by Cramer anecd. Oxon. ii. 443, 10 f. Hermann supplied πατρί, Schneidewin Δαΐ. See further O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2561 and 2742), Πυλάοχος (Plout. de Is. et Os. 35), πυλάρτης (Il. 8. 367 with schol. ad loc., 13. 415, Od. 11. 277, Mosch. 4. 86, Apollon. lex. Hom. p. 137, 25 ff., Hesych. s.v. πυλάρταο κρατεροῖο, et. mag. p. 696, 48 ff., Eustath. in Il. pp. 718, 20 f., 914, 18 f., 940, 5 f., in Od. p. 1684, 43 f., Favorin. lex. p. 1601, 28 ff.: see further Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 400 n. 1, O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 3326). Infra Append. N med.

(3) Persephone was Μελίβοια? (Lasos frag. 1 Bergk[4] ap. Athen. 624 E Δάματρα μέλπω κόραν τε Κλυμένοι' ἄλοχον Μελίβοιαν, | ὕμνων ἀναγῶν Αἰολῆΐδα | βαρύβρομον ἁρμονίαν: but E. Hiller—O. Crusius read ἄλοχον | μελιβόαν ὕμνων ἀναγέων | Αἰολίδ' ἀνὰ κ.τ.λ.), Μελιτώδης (Theokr. 15. 94 with schol. ad loc., Porph. de antr. nymph. 18. In Kokondrios περὶ τρόπων 6 (Walz op. cit. viii. 786, 8) καὶ Μελιτώνην τὴν Περσεφόνην Boissonade anecd. iii. 292 cj. μελιτώδη), Μελινδία? (Io. Malal. chron. 3 p. 62 Dindorf: Rohde Psyche[3] i. 206 n. 2 cj. Μελίνοια).

pretations. Some, narrowing its range overmuch, would see in it the description of a god specially gracious to the repentant man-slayer. Others, wrongly associating it with meilicha, 'figs,' would point in triumph to the Sacred Fig-tree of the Phytalidai.

(4) Zeus Meilichios on the Hills near Athens.

There must have been another sanctuary of Zeus Meilichios on the northern slope of the Nymphs' Hill, now crowned by the Observatory. For here two dedications to the god have come to light, one inscribed on a round pillar[1], the other on a quadrangular base[2]. The latter associates him with Helios, possibly as being a god of fertility[3].

The eastward prolongation of the Nymphs' Hill, on which stands the church of Saint Marina, had in antiquity its own cult of Zeus: a couple of rock-cut inscriptions on the southern slope mark the limits of his precinct[4]. Whether the god here also had fertilising powers, we cannot tell; but at the present day women who come to supplicate Saint Marina for children 'go through the performance of sliding down the great sloping rock in front of the church[5].'

(4) Hekate was Ἀρίστη (C. Wessely Griechische Zauberpapyrus von Paris und London Wien 1888 p. 57 pap. Par. 1450 καὶ Ἀρίστη Χθονία), Εὐκολίνη (Kallim. frag. 82[d] Schneider χαῖρ', Εὐκολίνη, ap. et. Sorbon. (cited by T. Gaisford in his note on et. mag. p. 392, 27); et. Ultraiect. (cited by D. Ruhnken epist. crit. ii. 181), et. Flor. p. 133, cp. et. mag. p. 392, 27 f., Cramer anecd. Paris. iv. 182, 23 ff., Souid. s.v. Εὐκολίνη), Καλλίστη (Hesych. s.v.), Κράταις (Ap. Rhod. 4. 829 with schol. ad loc.: see further H. W. Stoll and O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1408 f.).

(5) A daughter of Zeus by Persephone was Μειλινόη? (so C. A. Lobeck for Μηλινόη in Orph. h. Melin. 71. 1).

(6) An Arcadian bear-goddess (?) was Καλλιστώ (Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. 402 ff. fig. 26, R. Franz 'De Callistus fabula' in the Leipziger Studien zür classischen Philologie 1890 xii. 233—365, id. in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 931—935, Farnell Cults of Gk. States ii. 438, Frazer Pausanias iv. 191, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 194 f., 942 n. 8, alib., O. Keller Die antike Tierwelt Leipzig 1909 i. 176 f.).

(7) The bogus snake-god of Abonou Teichos was Γλύκων (supra Append. L p. 1083 ff.).

Such titles have a twofold aspect. Their value is at once negative and positive. On the one hand, they are substitutes for names that were taboo. 'It is especially,' says Dr Farnell (Cults of Gk. States iii. 137), 'in the cults of the powers of the lower world, in the worship of Hades and Persephone, and more especially still in the mysteries, that we discern in many Greek communities a religious dislike to pronounce the proper personal name, either because of its extreme holiness or because of its ominous associations, and to conceal it under allusive, euphemistic, or complimentary titles.' On the other hand, these titles often aim at securing by magical means the blessing that they describe: you call your god what you wish him to be, in order to make him so. See some shrewd remarks by W. R. Halliday Greek Divination London 1913 p. 33 f.: 'Here, in part (there are other elements also) lies the efficacy of Euphemism. You call the Fairies "Kindly Ones"; behind the conscious motive of putting them into a good temper, and the fear of effecting a connection with them by uttering their name, is further the comfort that you derive by persuading yourself to believe that they are kindly: the fact that you call them kindly makes them kindly.' Μειλίχιος is a case in point.

[1] Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1584 Διὶ Μειλιχίωι | Ξωπυρίων.

[2] Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1585 Ἡλίωι καὶ Διὶ Μειλ[ιχίωι] | Μαμμία.

[3] Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen pp. 421 n. 4, 424.

[4] Corp. inscr. Att. i no. 504 ΣΟΙΔΣΟΦΟΗ and a little lower down no. 505 ΗΟΡΟΣ.

[5] Miss M. Hamilton Greek Saints and their Festivals Edinburgh and London 1910 p. 58 f. Cp. supra i. 563 n. 4.

At Alopeke (Angelokepoi, Ampelokepoi) near Mount Lykabettos[1] Zeus again appears to have borne a chthonian character. A roughly squared block of Pentelic marble, found in an ancient well of this locality, has the upper part of its front face engraved as follows[2] in lettering of the late fifth century B.C.:

HI EPO N:-	Sanctuary
ΔI O Σ:M I	of Zeus Mi-
L I X I O:A	lichios, (G)-
HΣ:AΘH N	e, Athen-
AI AΣ	aia.

The grouping of the god with Ge, if not also the discovery of his boundary-stone in a well, is significant of his underground nature.

(5) Zeus Meilichios on the Ilissos.

Yet another Athenian cult seems to have connected Zeus Meilichios as a god of fertility with underground waters. In 1893 A. N. Skias, when exploring

Fig. 947

[1] S. Reinach 'Le sanctuaire d'Athéna et de Zeus Meilichios à Athènes' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1892 xvi. 411—417.

[2] S. A. Koumanoudes in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1889 pp. 51—54 no. 1 = Corp. inscr. Att. iv. 1. 3 no. 528[1] ἱερὸν | Διὸς Μ|ιλιχίου, (Γ)|ῆς, Ἀθην|αίας. The reading (Γ)ῆς, here adopted by A. Kirchhoff, was suggested independently by Semitelos and Diels (O. Kern in the Ath. Mitth. 1891 xvi. 10 n. 2), and is accepted by O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2558 f., Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen pp. 421 n. 3, 424, W. Larfeld Handbuch der griechischen Epigraphik Leipzig 1898 ii. 1. 69.

the bed of the Ilissos, discovered in the two reservoirs beneath the rocky barrier of the later Kallirrhoe four slabs carved in relief. Of these slabs two were found close together in the basin[1] adjoining the chapel of Saint Photeine, and with them a colossal head of Herakles wearing the lion-skin. One of the two reliefs in question (fig. 947)[2] shows Zeus, with a sceptre in his left hand and a phiále (?) in his right, seated on a rock (?)[1]. Before him is an altar of rude stones. Beyond it stand two female worshippers, presumably mother and daughter, conceived on a smaller scale than the god himself. The moulding above bears traces of fifth-century letters, which were read by Skias as a dedication to Zeus Nάιος[2]: they may equally well, indeed better, be completed as a dedication to Zeus Meilíchios[3]. The second relief (fig. 948)[4] represents Zeus holding a jug in both hands as he sits on a horned and bearded head, which is inscribed in lettering of the Alexandrine age Achelôios[5]. Behind Zeus stands a female (?)—perhaps Kallirrhoe, daughter of Acheloios,—fronting us with a cornu copiae in her left hand and a phiále in her right. Before Zeus stand Hermes and Herakles. Hermes has a trefoil oinochóe in his right hand, the caduceus in his left. Herakles, equipped with lion-skin and club, extends his right hand with something in it (another oinochóe ?) towards Zeus. To either side of the heads of Zeus and Herakles are two holes of doubtful significance.

Fig. 948.

[1] Marked B in W. Wilberg's plan of the excavations (Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1893 pl. A).
[2] A. N. Skias in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1894 p. 133 ff. fig., Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus.

It is not quite certain that either of these reliefs figures Zeus Meilíchios. But it is probable that both do so. The former bears a general resemblance to the Meilíchios-reliefs of the Peiraieus (figs. 942, 943)[6], though it shows a more primitive type of altar and dispenses with architectural framework. The latter represents a chthonian Zeus of some sort; for it associates him closely with Acheloios[7] and Kallirrhoe (?). Now somewhere in the immediate neighbourhood pl. 130, 2 (=my fig. 947). The dimensions of the slab, which is now preserved in the National Museum (no. 1779), are as follows: breadth 0·31^{m}, height 0·22^{m}.

[1] Cp. Svoronos op. cit. pl. 130, 3 (no. 1781), infra p. 1119 n. 0.

[2] Ε ∪ Ι ΝΕΝΑΙ = [ὁ δεῖνα ἀν]έθηκεν Ναϊ[ῳ Διΐ]. The lettering is hardly later than c. 450 B.C.

[3] Skias himself supposes that the god portrayed is Zeus Μειλίχιος, who qua watery chthonian Zeus might—he thinks—bear the title Νάιος. But it is surely simpler to restore [Διὶ Μειλιχίωι κατ' εὐχὴν ἀν]έθηκεν Ναϊ[άς] or Νάν[ριον] or the like.

[4] P. Kabbadias in the 'Εφ. 'Αρχ. 1893 p. 137 n. 1, A. N. Skias ib. 1894 p. 137 ff. pl. 7 (=my fig. 948), Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. pl. 131 (larger, but not so clear), Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 351 no. 3 (summary sketch). The slab, now in the National Museum (no. 1778), measures: greatest height 0·85^{m}, breadth below 0·53^{m}, breadth above 0·60^{m}, thickness of base 0·16^{m}, thickness of background c. 0·10^{m}.

[5] ΑΧΕΛΩΙΟΣ. [6] Supra p. 1105 f.

[7] A votive relief of Pentelic marble (height 0·42^{m}, breadth 0·49^{m}, thickness 0·08^{m}: it had originally a tenon for insertion in a mortise), found at Megara (F. Wieseler 'Ueber ein Votivrelief aus Megara' in the Abh. d. gött. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1875 xx. 6. 1—39) and now in the Berlin Museum (Ant. Skulpt. Berlin p. 251 f. no. 679 with fig.), is referable to the early part of s. iv. B.C. (Furtwängler Samml. Sabouroff Sculptures pl. 27=my fig. 949). On the back wall of a cavern is carved the bead of Acheloios, and immediately beneath it is set a table for offerings. Ranged round the cavern we see a semicircle of divinities. Zeus in the centre is flanked by Pan (horns) and Kore (torches). Next to Pan is Demeter (?); next to Kore, Plouton (?—possibly Agathos Daimon) (phiále, cornu copiae). The reclining youth on the extreme left and the seated female figure on the extreme right are insufficiently characterised as deities (Apollon?? Aphrodite?? cp. Paus. 1. 44. 9) and more probably represent the eponymous hero Megaros and his mother, one of the nymphs called Sithnides, who was beloved by Zeus (Paus. 1. 40. 1, cp. et. mag. p. 228, 21 ff. where the hero is called Megareus): the fact that they alone occupy the ground-level would not justify the inference that they are merely the dedicators of the ex voto.

The nearest parallel to this relief as a whole is furnished by the rock-carvings at the entrance to the marble-quarries of Paros: see J. Stuart—N. Revett The Antiquities of Athens London 1816 iv pp. ix, 34 f., ch. 6 pl. 5, Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst of the reservoirs above-mentioned must be located[1] that sanctuary of the Nymphs and Acheloios, which with its votive statuettes and images still makes a pretty picture in the pages of Platon. It will be remembered how Sokrates and Phaidros one thirsty day stretched themselves on the turf beneath a great plane-tree, cool water bubbling up at their feet, the air ringing with a chorus of cicalas, and blossoms of agnus castus perfuming the whole place[2]. It is reasonable to suppose that the Zeus of our reliefs had a precinct adjoining this sacred spot. And the supposition squares well with sundry further considerations. To the north, and close at hand, lay the vast temple of Zeus Olýmpios, begun by Peisistratos, continued by Antiochos iv Epiphanes, and ended by Hadrian. Zeus indeed had been established here from time immemorial. 'They say,' writes Pausanias, 'that Deukalion built the old sanctuary of Zeus Olýmpios, and in proof that Deukalion dwelt at Athens they point to a grave not far from the present temple[3].' If early graves were to be seen in the vicinity, we might look to find the cult of a chthonian Zeus[4], who would be readily brought into connexion with the powers of sub-

ii. 4. 11 pl. 63, 814, A. Michaelis in the Ann. d. Inst. 1863 xxxv. 314 f., 328, Lebas—

Fig. 949.

Reinach Voyage Arch. p. 110 f. pl. 122, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 360 no. 1, Inscr. Gr. ins. v. 1 no. 245.

[1] A. N. Skias Συμβολαὶ εἰς τὴν Ἀθηναικὴν τοπογραφίαν pp. 13—16 (=Ἑστία 1894 p. 292), id. in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1893 p. 123.

[2] Plat. Phaedr. 230 B-C. [3] Paus. 1. 18. 8.

[4] A. N. Skias in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1897 p. 81 ff. suggests that the small Ionic temple terranean springs. Pliny, or his authority, was probably[1] thinking of the site, when he remarked: 'At Athens during a rainy summer Enneakrounos is colder than the well in the garden of Zeus, but in dry seasons the latter is freezing-cold[2].' More than that. Midway between the Kallirrhoe-bar and the Olympieion are the foundations of a small temple built in Roman times and subsequently transformed into a Christian church[3]. This little edifice perhaps marks the very ground where Zeus Meilichios was worshipped[4].

on the Ilissos (J. Stuart—N. Revett The Antiquities of Athens London 1762 i. 7 ff., ch. 2 pls. 1—8, A. N. Skias loc. cit. p. 73 ff. with pl. A′ by A. N. Lykakes, W. Dörpfeld in the Ath. Mitth. 1897 xxii. 227 f., J. N. Svoronos in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1901 iv. 243 ff., C. Wachsmuth in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Suppl. i. 190 f.), which was standing as the church of the Παναγία εἰς τὴν Πέτραν till towards the close of the eighteenth century, had originally some connexion with Zeus Φίλιος, a doublet of Zeus Χθόνιος. He relies on a fragmentary votive relief (Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1897 p. 83 f. pl. A′ fig. A′, Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. pl. 130, 3 (no. 1781)) of s. iv or iii B.C. found in one of the numerous tombs adjoining the temple: it represents a sceptred god sitting on a rock with an altar before him. But W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 p. 371 f. makes out a strong case for regarding the sanctuary as that of the Μήτηρ ἐν Ἀγραις.

[1] But see W. Judeich op. cit. p. 182 n. 6.

[2] Plin. nat. hist. 31. 50 Athenis Enneacrunos nimbosa aestate frigidior est quam puteus in Iovis horto, at ille siccitatibus riget.

[3] A. N. Skias in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1893 p. 130 ff. pl. A with inset (=my fig. 950). The temple was a peripteral building with 6 columns on each short side and 9 on each long side: the naós was amphiprostyle with 4 columns at either end (Skias loc. cit. p. 131 fig.). The order appears to have been Doric (?). When the temple became a church, the prónaos was transformed into a ἅγιον βῆμα. Beneath the sacred table was a pit (Γ in fig. 950) for relics, which were bestowed in an old Greek sepulchral urn of black stone with four handles. Several tombs of Christian date were found on the site.

[4] That is my conjecture. A. N. Skias, who has a better right to speak, contends (Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1893 p. 132 f.) that here was the spot known in s. xv A.D. as the 'precinct of Hera' (Anon. Vindob. 7 in C. Wachsmuth Die Stadt Athen im Alterthum Leipzig 1874 i. 735 f. πρὸς δὲ νότου τούτων ἔστιν οἶκος βασιλικὸς πλὴν ὡραῖος, εἰς ὃν κατερχόμενος ὁ δοὺξ κατὰ καιρὸν εἰς εὐωχίαν ἐκινεῖτο· ἐκεῖ ἐστι καὶ ἡ Ἐννεάκρουνος (νεάκρουνος cod.) πηγὴ ἡ Καλλιρρόη, εἰς ἣν λουόμενος ἀνήρχετο εἰς τέμενος τὸ τῆς Ἥρας λεγόμενον καὶ προσηύχετο· νῦν δὲ μετεποιήθη εἰς ναὸν τῆς ὑπεραγίας Θεοτόκου ὑπὸ τῶν εὐσεβῶν). But W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 p. 371 n. 12 decides with greater probability that this and other early allusions to a 'temple de Junon' (Wachsmuth op. cit. i. 736 n. 1) referred to the Christian church on the Ilissos-'island' (see R. Rangabé in the Bull. d. Inst. 1850 p. 134 ff.), which had been wrongly identified with Hadrian's temple of Hera and Zeus Πανελλήνιος (Paus. 1. 18. 9 Ἁδριανὸς δὲ κατεσκευάσατο μὲν καὶ ἄλλα Ἀθηναίοις, ναὸν Ἥρας καὶ Διὸς Πανελληνίου κ.τ.λ., Dion Cass. 69. 16 τόν τε σηκὸν τὸν ἑαυτοῦ, τὸ Πανελλήνιον ὠνομασμένον, οἰκοδομήσασθαι τοῖς Ἕλλησιν ἐπέτρεψε, καὶ ἀγῶνα ἐπ' αὐτῷ κατεστήσατο (sc. Ἁδριανός), Philostr. v. soph. 2. 1. 7 καὶ μὴν καὶ ἐλειτούργησεν (sc. Ἡρώδης) Ἀθηναίοις τήν τ' ἐπώνυμον καὶ τὴν τῶν Πανελληνίων, 2. 17. 1. μηδ' εἰ τὴν τῶν Πανελληνίων Ἀθήνησιν εὐκλεῶς ἦρξεν (sc. Ῥοῦφος, cp. Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 17), Hieron. chron. ann. Abr. 2148 (Euseb. chron. ii. 167 Schoene) Hadrianus cum insignes et plurimas aedes Athenis fecisset agonem edidit bibliothecamque miri operis instruxit). The real site of the temple of Zeus Πανελλήνιος at Athens is unknown: future excavators will doubtless discover it.

Meantime extant inscriptions confirm the literary sources and add somewhat to our knowledge of the god and of his festival. The name appears to have had a distinctly political origin. In late republican or early imperial times the Achaean League was revived as τὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν καὶ Βοιωτῶν καὶ Δοκρῶν καὶ Φωκέων καὶ Εὐβοέων κοινόν, or more briefly τὸ κοινὸν τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, ἡ σύνοδος τῶν Πανελλήνων: their council met at Argos under the presidency of a στρατηγὸς τῶν Ἀχαιῶν. But in 131 A.D. Hadrian instituted a new Πανελλήνιον on grander lines: it met at Athens and included all the Greek states, not merely those of the Peloponnese. Thenceforward the revived Achaean League naturally dropped its pretension to be Panhellenic (see W. Dittenberger's notes on the Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 18, on Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 842, 2 f., and on Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 504, 1 f., 11). Hadrian not only founded a temple of Zeus Πανελλήνιος (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 13, 10 [ναὸν Πανελλ]ηνίου Διὸς ἐφ[ιδρύσατο (sc. Ἀδριανός)]), but also himself assumed the title Πανελλήνιος (ib. iii. 1 no. 12, 26 ff. [τ]ὰς δωρεὰς ὡ[ς ἔκασται ἐδόθησαν ὑπὸ τοῦ] | μεγίσ[του Αὐτοκράτορ]ος Καίσαρος Τραία[νοῦ Ἀδριανοῦ Σεβαστοῦ] | Ὀλυμπί[ου Πανελληνίου], Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 70, 1 f. τὸν δὶς αὐτοκράτορα Κ[αίσαρα Τρ]αϊανὸν Ἀδρια[νὸν] | Σεβαστὸν Ὀλύμπιον Π[ύθι]ον Πανελλήνιον, ib. i no. 71, 1 f. [τὸν δὶς αὐτοκράτορα Καίσαρα Τραϊανὸν Ἀδριανὸν

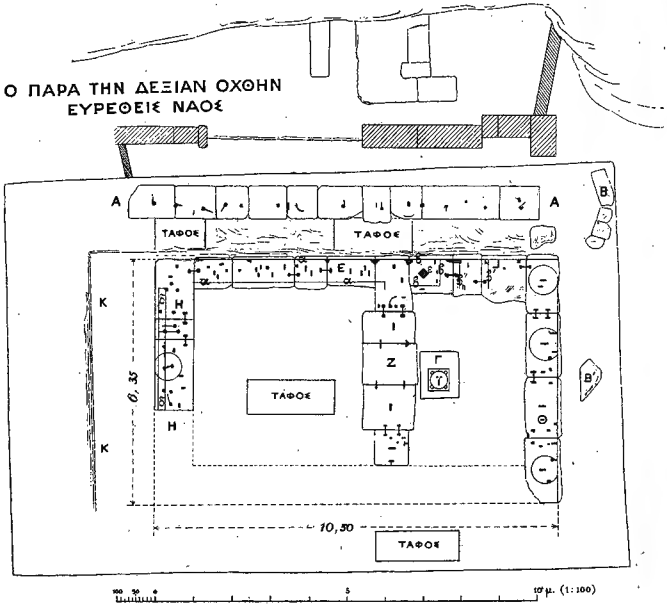

Fig. 950.

Σεβαστὸν Ὀλύμπιον Πύθιον Πανελλήνιον], ib. i no. 72, 1 ff. τὸν δὶς αὐτοκράτορα Καίσαρα Τραϊανὸν | Ἀδριανὸν Σεβαστὸν Ὀλόμπιον Πύθιον | Πανελλήνιον, ib. i no. 3491, 1 ff. τὸν δὶς αὐτοκράτορα Καίσαρα [θεοῦ Τραϊανοῦ Παρθικοῦ υἱόν], | θεοῦ Νέρβα υἱωνόν, Τραϊανὸν Ἀδρι[ανὸν Σεβαστὸν Ὀλύμ]πιον Πανελλήνιον νέον Πύθιον, G. Radet in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1887 xi. 480 no. 60, 1 f. Kirk-Agaisch from Thyateira [αὐτ]οκράτορα Τραϊανὸν Ἀδριανὸν Καίσαρα Σ[εβαστόν, | ...κ]αὶ Πανελλήνιον) presumably as being the earthly representative and vice-gerent of Zeus (Folk-Lore 1905 xvi. 314). After his death the divinised Hadrian had as priest the president of the great Panhellenic council (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 681, 2 ff. τὸν ἄρχο[ντα τῶν] | σεμνο[τάτων Παν]ελλήνω[ν καὶ ἱερέα] | θεοῦ Ἀδ[ριανοῦ Παν|ελ]ληνί[ου καὶ ἀγω]ν[ο]θ[έ]τ[ην τῶν Παν|ελλη]ν[ίων.....],? cp. ib. iii. 2 no. 3872, 1 ff. θεὸν |['Αδριανὸν?] – – – Πανε[λλην...], Dittenberger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 504, 1 f. Aizanoi ὁ ἄρχων τῶν

With his cult on the Ilissos I would connect both a local myth and a local custom.

(6) The Myth of Periphas.

Antoninus Liberalis in his Metamorphoses, a valuable work preserved to us by a single manuscript at Heidelberg, gives the following account of Periphas:

'Periphas was sprung from the soil in Attike before Kekrops the son of Ge appeared. He became king of the ancient population, and was just and rich and holy, a man who offered many sacrifices to Apollon and judged many disputes and was blamed by no one. All men willingly submitted to his rule and, in view of his surpassing deeds, transferred to him the honours due to Zeus and decided that they belonged to Periphas. They offered sacrifices and built temples to him, and called him Zeus Sotêr and Epópsios and Meilichios.

Πανελλήνων καὶ ἱερεὺς θεοῦ Ἀδριανοῦ Π[ανελληνίου] | καὶ ἀγωνοθέτης τῶν μεγάλων Πανελληνίων, ib. no. 507, 1 f. ὁ ἄρχων τῶν Πανελλήνων καὶ ἱερεὺς θεοῦ Ἀδριανοῦ Πανελληνίου | καὶ ἀγωνοθέτης τῶν μεγάλων Πανελληνίων). It would even seem that at Athens the god Hadrian took over the temple of Zeus' Ὀλύμπιος (so W. Dittenberger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 504 n. 6 understands Dion Cass. 69. 16 cited supra). Cp. Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 1822 (Epeiros) an altar inscribed αὐτοκ[ράτορι Τραϊα]|νῶι Ἀδρια[νῶι Σε]βασ[τῶι,] | Ὀλυμπίωι, Διὶ Δωδωναί[ωι]. The foundation of the Πανελλήνιον in 131 A.D. (P. Cavvadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 43 no. 35, 1 ff. = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 842, 1 ff. ἔτους γ' τῆς καθιερώσεως τοῦ Διὸ[ς] | τοῦ Ὀλυμπίου καὶ τῆς κτίσεος | τοῦ Πανελληνίου) was commemorated (Dion Cass. and Hieron. chron. locc. citt.) by means of an ἀγών (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 10, 13 f. (ἀ)[ντ]άρχοντος τοῦ ἱερωτάτου ἀ(γ)|[ῶνος τοῦ] (Π)αν(ελ)ληνίου, cp. ib. iii. 1 no. 681, 6 ff. [ἀγω]ν[ο]θ[έ]τ[ην τῶν Παν|ελλη]ν[ίων .....], ib. iii. 1 no. 682, 1 ff. [ἀγωνοθετήσ]αντα – – – [? Πανελλη]νίων, ib. iii. 1 no. 1199, 5 f. ἐπὶ ἀγωνοθέ[του τῶν μεγά]λων Πανελληνίων, Dittenberger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 504, 2 ἀγωνοθέτης τῶν μεγάλων Πανελληνίων, ib. no. 507, 2 ἀγωνοθέτης τῶν μεγάλων Πανελληνίων) known as the Πανελλήνια (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 32, 5 τὸ εἰς τὰ Πανελλ[ήνια], ib. iii. 1 no. 127, 3 f. Πανελλήνια | ἐν Ἀθήναις, ib. iii. 1 no. 128, 5 νεικήσας κατὰ τὸ ἑξῆς Πανελλήνια | κ.τ.λ., 10 f. Πανελ|λήνια | δὶς | Ἀθή(ναις), Olympia v. 347 ff. no. 237, 8 f. α' Ἀδρειάνεια ἐν Σμύρνῃ καὶ ἐν Ἐφέσῳ καὶ τὰ πρῶτως Πα|νελλήνια ἀχθέντα ἐν Ἀθήναις πρῶτος κηρύκων, Corp. inscr. Gr. i no. 1068 i, 1 f. = Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 49, 7 Megara Πανελλήνια | ἐν Ἀθήναις, E. L. Hicks The Collection of Ancient Greek Inscriptions in the British Museum iii. 2. 237 f. Oxford 1890 no. 611, 7 Ephesos Πανελλήνια ἐν Ἀθήναις, στάδιον, ib. iii. 2. 238 f. no. 613, 8 f. Ephesos ['A]θήναις παῖ[δων Παν|ελ]λήνια γ̄, ib. iii. 2. 239 f. no. 615, 5 Ephesos Ἀθήνας παίδων Πανελλήνια, J. R. S. Sterrett in Papers of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens Boston 1888 iii. 291 f. no. 413, 15 f. Kara Baulo Πανελλήνε(ι)α | ἐν Ἀθήναις). The name μεγάλα Πανελλήνια (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 17, 3 [τῶν μεγ]άλων Πανελλ[ηνίων] or [τῶν ἄ]λλων Πανελλ[ήνων], ib. no. 1199, 5 f. ἐπὶ ἀγωνοθέ[του τῶν μεγά]λων Πανελληνίων, Dittenberger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 504, 2 ἀγωνοθέτης τῶν μεγάλων Πανελληνίων, ib. no. 507, 2 ἀγωνοθέτης τῶν μεγάλων Πανελληνίων) implies that the contest was organised also as a pentaeteris on the analogy of the Panathenaia (Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p 168 ff. tries to make out that the Panhellenia at Athens was modelled on the Eleutheria at Plataiai). Few further details of the festival are on record (with Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 1141, 20 f. καὶ ἐκ Παν[ελ]ληνίου οὐθέν cp. ib. iii. 1 no. 1184, 20 ff. [με]τ[ὰ τὰ]ς Σεβαστοφορικὰς νομὰς πάσας τὰς διὰ Πανελληνίων ἐπ' ἴσης οἵ τε ἔφηβοι καὶ οἱ πε[ρὶ τὸ Δι]ογένειον θύσαντες καὶ σπείσαντες ἐν τῷ Διογενείῳ τὰ ἐξιτήρια εὐοχήθησαν, | ο[ὐδε]νὶ δὲ ἄλλῳ συνετέλεσαν οἱ ἔφηβοι ἢ κατὰ τὸ ἀναγκαῖον τῷ καψαρίῳ μόνῳ. Mommsen op. cit. p. 168 f. argues that the éphéboi, who began their course in Boedromion, must have ended it in Metageitnion: accordingly, if their concluding feast took place after the Panhellenia, we may refer the Panhellenia also to Metageitnion, i.e. to August or September. The relevance of Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 85, 1 ff. οἱ Πανέλληνες | ΑΡΙΣΤΑ[Ν] | ..... | καρποῦ ἀπαρχῆς is doubtful: see W. Dittenberger ad loc.)).

Indignant at this, Zeus wished to consume his whole house with a thunderbolt. But when Apollon, whom Periphas used to honour exceedingly, begged Zeus not to destroy him utterly, Zeus granted the request. He came into the home of Periphas and found him embracing his wife. Grasping them both in his hands, he turned Periphas into an eagle; his wife, who begged him to make her too a bird to bear Periphas company, into a vulture. So upon Periphas he bestowed honours in return for his holy life among men, making him king over all the birds, and granting him to guard the sacred sceptre and to draw near to his own throne; while Periphas' wife he turned into a vulture, and suffered to appear as a good omen to men in all their doings[1].'

From what source Antoninus Liberalis, a compiler of the second century A.D. or later[2], drew this singular narrative is unknown[3]; nor are its incidents—apart from a casual reference in Ovid[4]—cited elsewhere. Nevertheless the story as it stands is instructive. Certain traits are late and must be suppressed. Thus the writer, or his authority, is inclined to etymologise[5] and, worse still, to moralise. His tale belongs to a well-defined group, in which an early king (Salmoneus is typical) poses as Zeus and is consequently punished by the real Zeus. This implies, as I have elsewhere pointed out[6], that, when the essential divinity of the old-world king had little by little faded into oblivion, posterity treated his claim to be Zeus as sheer impiety calling for the vengeance of the genuine god. Yet the author of our tale, with illuminating inconsistency, makes Zeus himself bestow upon the blasphemer altogether exceptional 'honours in return for his holy life.' I take it, then, that Periphas was an Attic king, who in the dim past had played the rôle of Zeus and made his petty thunder for some unsophisticated folk. It may even be that his name Períphas, 'the Brilliant[7],' was a recognised epithet of Zeus[8]; for an Orphic hymn salutes Zeus Astrápios, the lightning-god, as períphantos[9]. Now we have repeatedly found a human Zeus of this sort figuring among the kings of Thessaly descended from Aiolos[10]. It is therefore of interest to observe that Lapithes, the eponymous king of the Thessalian Lapithai, was either father[11] or son of a Periphas, who wedded Astyagyia

[1] Ant. Lib. 6.

[2] G. Wentzel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 2573 ('schwerlich vor dem 2. Jhdt. n. Chr.'), W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[3] München 1898 p. 778 ('aus der Zeit der Antonine'). See fnrther E. Oder De Antonino Liberali Bonn 1886 pp. 1—61.

[3] H. Usener in the Rhein. Mus. 1868 xxiii. 357 (=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 66) says: 'wahrscheinlich von Boios,' and O. Schneider Nicandrea Lipsiae 1856 p. 43 had reached the same conclusion before him. M. Wellmann in Hermes 1891 xxvi. 507 n. 2 thinks otherwise: 'Vermuthlich ist Nikander Quelle.'

[4] Ov. met. 7. 399 f. Palladias arces: quae te, iustissima Phene, | teque, senex Peripha, pariter videre volantes. Lact. Plac. narr. fab. 7. 20 merely echoes Ovid (M. Schanz Geschichte der römischen Litteratur[2] München 1899 ii. 1. 237 f.): venisse etiam Athenas, ubi Phineum (sic) et Peripham in aves conversos.

[5] He harps on derivatives of φαίνω, real or supposed: Περίφας...φανῆναι...φήνην... ἐπιφαίνεσθαι.

[6] Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 277, Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 300.

[7] Περίφας=περιφανής (Gerhard Auserl. Vasenb. iii. 86), περίφαντος, περιφαής. Cp. Πολύφας, Τπέρφας. For other explanations see O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1971 f.

[8] H. Usener in the Rhein. Mus. 1868 xxiii. 357 (=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 66 f.).

[9] Orph. h. Zeus Astrápios 20. 1 ff. κικλήσκω μέγαν, ἀγνόν, ἐρισμάραγον, περίφαντον, | ...ἀστράπιον Δία, παγγενέτην, βασιλῆα μέγιστον, | κ.τ.λ. adduced by O. Höfer loc. cit.

[10] Supra p. 1088.

[11] Epaphroditos Homerica frag. 16 Luenzner ap. Steph. Byz. s.v. Λαπίθη.

daughter of Hypseus and became by her the father of Antion and the grandfather of Ixion[1]. J. Töpffer in an important article[2] insisted on the point that Periphas was at once an Attic autochthon and a Thessalian king: he compared other cases of the same bilocation[3] and, following up the clue thus afforded, reached the conclusion that in prehistoric times some Thessalian tribe (Lapithai? Dryopes?) migrated southwards through Euboia to north-eastern Attike, and so on by sea to the southern parts of the Argolid. Töpffer's hypothesis has been accepted by P. Weizsäcker[4] and is, I think, helpful in any attempt to unravel the tangled skein of Attic religion. For, in view of their traditional descent from Aiolos, we shall probably be right in supposing that these immigrants were Aeolians (not Achaeans[5]), who, swarming off from Thessaly in days before the great Athenian synoikismós, settled in Attike and planted the worship of their[6] Zeus Olýmpios on the northern bank of the Ilissos. The leader of the settlement, regarded by his subjects as the human representative of the sky-god, would later on be reverenced in the same neighbourhood as Zeus Sotér and Epópsios and Meilíchios. All these titles, whose connotation was subsequently enlarged in a variety of directions, were from the first applicable to the buried king. To begin with, he was Sotér, because on him depended the preservation and perpetuation of the family line. Custom prescribed that at a banquet libation should be made from the first mixing-bowl to Zeus Olýmpios and the Olympians, from the second to the Heroës, from the third to Zeus Sotér, otherwise styled Téleios[7]. The sequence suggests that this final offering was in its essence simply [1] Diod. 4. 69, who—according to E. Schwartz (Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 674)—is here excerpting from an earlier mythographical handbook.

[2] J. Töpffer 'Theseus und Peirithoos' in Aus der Anomia Berlin 1890 pp. 30—46.

[3] Theseus, Peirithoos, Boutes, Ixion, Phorbas, Phaleros, Mopsos, etc. Töpffer remarks inter alia that Perithoidai, a deme of the tribe Oineis (A. Milchhöfer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 2195, with map to face p. 2204, places it to the N.W. of Athens on the near side of Mt Aigaleos), was said to have been founded by Peirithoos son of Ixion, and that the Athenian custom of extending a special welcome to Thessalians was motived by the friendship of Theseus and Peirithoos (Ephoros frag. 37 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 243 Müller) ap. Phot. lex. s.v. Περιθοΐδαι, Souid. s.v. Περιθοΐδαι, Apostol. 14. 19).

[4] P. Weizsäcker in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1762.

[5] The commonly received opinion that the Achaeans were an Aeolian people is subjected to shrewd criticism by J. A. K. Thomson Studies in the Odyssey Oxford 1914 p. 117 ff. See further A. Fick 'Äoler und Achäer' in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung auf dem Gebiete der indogermanischen Sprachen 1911 xliv. 1 ff., eund. 'Älteste griechische Stammverbände' ib. 1914 xlvi. 67 ff., G. Dottin Les anciens peuples de l'Europe Paris 1916 p. 143 ff.

[6] A. Fick loc. cit. 1914 xlvi. 97.

[7] Poll. 6. 15 κρατῆρες δὲ ὁ μὲν πρῶτος Διὸς Ὀλυμπίου καὶ Ὀλυμπίων θεῶν, ὁ δὲ δεύτερος ἡρώων, ὁ δὲ τρίτος Διὸς Σωτῆρος Τελείου, ὅτι καὶ τὰ τρία πρῶτος τέλειος ἀριθμός, 6. 100 ὥσπερ καὶ Διὸς Σωτῆρος ὁ τρίτος κρατὴρ ἱερὸς ἦν, Schol. Pind. Isthm. 6 (5). 10 τὸν δὲ τρίτον κρατῆρα Διὸς Σωτῆρος ἔλεγον, καθὰ καὶ Σοφοκλῆς ἐν Ναυπλίῳ (frag. 392 Nauck[2], 425 Jebb)· 'Ζεῦ παυσίλυπε καὶ Διὸς σωτηρίου | σπονδὴ τρίτου κρατῆρος.' τὸν μὲν γὰρ πρῶτον Διὸς Ὀλυμπίου ἐκίρνασαν, τὸν δὲ δεύτερον ἡρώων, τὸν δὲ τρίτον Διὸς Σωτῆρος, καθὰ καὶ Αἰσχύλος ἐν Ἐπιγόνοις (frag. 55 Nauck[2])· 'λοιβὰς Διὸς μὲν πρώτων ὡραίου γάμου | Ἥρας τε.' εἶτα· 'τὴν δευτέραν γε (C. G. Schütz cj. δὲ) κρᾶσιν Ἥρωσιν νέμω.' εἶτα· 'τρίτον (A. Nauck cj. τρίτην) Διὸς Σωτῆρος εὐκταίαν λίβα.' Διὸς δὲ Σωτῆρος ἔλεγον τὸν τρίτον διὰ τὸ τοὺς τοῦτον πίνοντας σταθεροὺς γίνεσθαι, τοὺς δὲ μετὰ τοῦτον εἰς ἄτην καὶ ἀνομίαν καὶ ἀσέλγειαν τρέπεσθαι. ἔλεγον δὲ αὐτὸν καὶ Τέλειον διὰ τὸ τέλειον εἶναι τὸν τρίτον ἀριθμὸν ἀρχὴν ἔχοντα καὶ μέσον καὶ τέλος, schol. Plat. Phileb. 66 D τὸ τρίτον τῷ Σωτῆρι: ἐκ μεταφορᾶς εἰρηται τοῦ ἐν ταῖς

συνουσίαις ἔθους· Σοφοκλῆς ἐν Ναυπλίῳ καταπλέοντι. ἐκιρνῶντο γὰρ ἐν αὐταῖς κρατῆρες τρεῖς. καὶ τὸν μὲν πρῶτον Διὸς Ὀλυμπίου καὶ θεῶν Ὀλυμπίων ἔλεγον, τὸν δὲ δεύτερον ἡρώων, τὸν δὲ τρίτον Σωτῆρος, ὡς ἐνταῦθά τε καὶ δὴ καὶ ἐν Πολιτείᾳ (Plat. rep. 583 B). ἔλεγον δὲ αὐτὸν καὶ Τέλειον, ὡς Εὐριπίδης Ἀνδρομέδᾳ (frag. 148 Nauck²) καὶ Ἀριστοφάνης Ταγηνισταῖς (frag. 33 Meineke), schol. Plat. Charm. 167 A—B τὸ τρίτον τῷ Σωτῆρι· ἐπὶ τῶν τελείως τι πραττόντων. τὰς γὰρ τριτας σπονδὰς καὶ τὸν τρίτον κρατῆρα ἐκίρνων τῷ Διὶ τῷ Σωτῆρι. τέλειος γὰρ ὁ τρία ἀριθμός, ἐπειδὴ καὶ ἀρχὴν καὶ μέσον καὶ τέλος ἔχει, καὶ πρῶτος οὗτος τῶν ἀριθμῶν ἀρτιοπέριττος. Τέλειος δὲ καὶ ὁ Ζεύς, ὥστε κατὰ λόγον τρίτον τῷ Διὶ σπένδεταί τε καὶ ὁ κρατὴρ τρίτος τίθεται. Σοφοκλῆς Ναυπλίῳ· 'καὶ Διὸς σωτηρίου | σπονδῆ τρίτου κρατῆρος,' καὶ Πλάτων Πολιτείαις καὶ ἐνταῦθα, Hesych. s.v. τρίτος κρατήρ· Σοφοκλῆς Ναυπλίῳ καταπλέοντι. ἐν ταῖς συνουσίαις ἐκιρνῶντο κρατῆρες τρεῖς. καὶ τὸν μὲν πρῶτον Διὸς Ὀλυμπίου καὶ θεῶν Ὀλυμπίων ἔλεγον· τὸν δὲ δεύτερον ἡρώων· τὸν δὲ τρίτον Σωτῆρος, schol. Arat. phaen. 14 τὴν μὲν πρώτην σπονδὴν εἶναι θεῶν τῶν Ὀλυμπίων, δευτέραν δὲ ἡρώων, καὶ τρίτην Διὸς Σωτῆρος, Souid. s.v. τρίτου κρατῆρος· τοῦ Σωτῆρος, ὃν καὶ Τέλειον ἔλεγον. τὸν μέν γε (G. Bernhardy cj. μὲν γὰρ) πρῶτον Ὀλυμπίων φασί· τὸν δὲ β' Ἡρώων, <τὸν δὲ γ' Σωτῆρος ins. T. Gaisford>. Πλάτων Πολιτείᾳ· τὸν (G. Bernhardy cj. τὸ) δὲ γ' Ὀλυμπικῶς τῷ Σωτῆρί τε καὶ Ὀλυμπίῳ (cp. Plat. rep. 583 B) = Phot. lex. s.v. τρίτου κρατῆρος· τοῦ Σωτῆρος, ὃν καὶ Τέλειον ἔλεγον. τὸν μὲν πρῶτον Ὀλυμπίων φασί, τὸν δὲ δεύτερον ἡρώων, τὸν δὲ τρίτον Ὀλυμπικῶς τῷ Σωτῆρί τε καὶ Ὀλυμπίῳ, ἰὸ. s.v. τρίτος κρατήρ· Διὸς Τελείου Σωτῆρος· πρῶτος γὰρ τέλειος ἀριθμὸς ὁ τρία, ὅτι ἔχει ἀρχὴν καὶ τέλος καὶ μέσα, ὡς Φιλόχορος ἐν τῷ περὶ Ἡμερῶν (frag. 179 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 414 Müller)), Apostol. 10. 5 a κρατὴρ τρίτος Διὸς Σωτῆρος· εἰώθασι γὰρ ἐν συμποσίοις οἱ παλαιοὶ κιρνᾶν κρατῆρα πρῶτον Ὀλυμπίῳ Διί, δεύτερον τοῖς ἥρωσι, τὸν δὲ τρίτον Διὸς Σωτῆρος. Σοφοκλῆς τοῦτο μαρτυρεῖ ἐν Ναυπλίῳ (A. Boeckh corr. Ναυπλίῳ)· 'Ζεῦ παυσίλυπε (P. Wolters in the Ath. Mitth. 1903 xxxviii. 197 notes a skýphos at Athens (no. 12351) with incised inscription ΠΑ⁻ΓΙΑ⁻ΠΟΣ) καὶ Διὸς σωτηρίου | σπονδαὶ τρίτου κρατῆρος,' 10. 77 a 'Λοιβὰς <Διὸς> μὲν πρῶτον ὡραίου γάμου | "Ηρας τ᾽. εἶτα· 'τὴν δευτέραν <γε> κρᾶσιν "Ηρωσιν νέμω,' 17. 28 τρίτου κρατῆρος ἐγεύσω (a proverb in ancient dactylic metre: supra i. 444)· ἐπὶ τῶν μεμνημένων τὰ τελεώτατα καὶ σωτηριωδέστερα. τρεῖς δὲ ἦσαν κρατῆρες· καὶ τὸν μὲν πρῶτον ἔλεγον Ὀλυμπίων, τὸν δὲ δεύτερον ἡρώων, <τὸν δὲ τρίτον Σωτῆρος ins. T. Gaisford>. Πλάτων ἐν Πολιτείᾳ· τὸν (leg. τὸ) δὲ τρίτον Ὀλυμπικῶς τῷ Σωτῆρί τε <καὶ> Ὀλυμπίῳ. S. A. Naber on Phot. lex. s.v. τρίτου κρατῆρος says: 'Boethi observatio est.' A. C. Pearson on Soph. frag. 425 Jebb remarks: 'It is clear that our passage was a stock instance with the grammarians, and that all the quotations given above are derived from a common source: this was in all probability Didymus, from whom they may have passed to Diogenian, and thence to the Platonic scholia.' Another tradition is evidenced by Souid. s.v. κρατήρ· τρεῖς κρατῆρας ἵστασαν ἐν τῷ δείπνῳ· α' Ἑρμῇ, β' Χαρισίν (T. Hemsterhuys cj. Χάρισιν), γ' Διὶ Σωτῆρι.

A krater or stámnos of Apulian ware from Fasano, now in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iv. 226 no. F 548, P. Wolters in the Ath. Mitth. 1903 xxxviii. 198 n. 2), has its body decorated with (a) a vine-wreath, from which hang two branches with a comic mask between them and a rosette on either side; (b) an ivy-wreath. On its neck is painted in white ΔΙΟΣ ΣΩΤΗΡΟΣ (Corp. inscr. Gr. iv no. 8470 c).

Literary allusions to the third bowl of Zeus Σωτήρ will be found e.g. in Pind. Isthm. 6 (5). 10 ff., Aisch. suppl. 27 f., Ag. 244 ff., 1385 ff., cho. 577 f. with 1073 f., Eum. 759 f., frag. 55 Nauck², Soph. frag. 392 Nauck², 425 Jebb, Eur. frag. 148 Nauck² (?), Aristoph. tagenistaí frag. 33 Meineke (?), Plat. Charm. 167 A—B, rep. 583 B, Phileb. 66 D, legg. 692 A, epist. 7. 334 D, 340 A, Antiphanes ágroikoi frag. 5 Meineke ap. Athen. 692 F, Euboulos kybeutaí frag. 1 Meineke ap. Athen. 471 D—E, Alexis tokistés or katapseudómenos frag. 3 Meineke ap. Athen. 692 F f., frag. fab. inc. 12 Meineke ap. Athen. 466 D—E (a goblet inscribed in golden letters ΔΙΟΣ ΣΩΤΗΡΟΣ), Diphilos Sappho frag. 1 Meineke ap. Athen. 487 A, Philochoros frag. 18 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 387 Müller) ap. Athen. 38 C—D, Diod. 4. 3, Philonides de unguentis et coronis ap. Athen. 675 B—C, Eumath. 1. 14 (τέταρτον (sic) ἐπίνομεν Σωτῆρι Διΐ).

The chthonian character of the god is well brought out by Aischylos. In suppl. 24 ff. the chorus of Danaïdes prays: ὦν πόλις, ὧν γῆ καὶ λευκὸν ὕδωρ | ὕπατοί τε θεοὶ καὶ βαρύ- drink for the soul of a dead man. As such it was duplicated by the cup of unmixed wine drunk after dinner in the name of the Agathos Daimon[1]. Both τιμοι | χθόνιοι θήκας κατέχοντες, | καὶ Ζεὺς Σωτὴρ τρίτος, οἰκοφύλαξ | ὁσίων ἀνδρῶν, κ.τ.λ. In Ag. 1385 ff. Klytaimestra describes the third and fatal blow dealt by her hand : καὶ πεπτωκότι | τρίτην ἐπενδίδωμι, τοῦ κατὰ χθονός | Διὸς (so R. Enger for ἄιδου codd.) νεκρῶν Σωτῆρος εὐκταίαν χάριν, where W. Kausche 'Mythologumena Aeschylea' in the Dissertationes philologicae Halenses Halis Saxonum 1888 ix. 179 and A. W. Verrall (ed. 1889) adhere to the manuscript reading, but W. Headlam (trans. 1904) and U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff (ed. 1914) rightly accept Διός.

[1] With regard to the Agathos Daimon various opinions have been held : see E. Gerhard Über Wesen, Verwandtschaft und Ursprung der Dämonen und Genien Berlin 1852 pp. 12 f., 30 (=Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1852 Phil.-hist. Classe pp. 248 f., 266), K. Lehrs Populäre Aufsätze aus dem Alterthum[2] Leipzig 1875 i. 173 ff. ('Dämon und Tyche'), E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 131, K. Wernicke in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 746 f., Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 541 ff., Rohde Psyche[8] i. 254 n. 2, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1087 n. 2, Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 401 f., Harrison Themis p. 277 ff.

On the whole it seems probable that the Agathὸs Daimon or 'Good Spirit' was originally the male ancestor of the family addressed by a euphemistic title (supra p. 1112 n. 7). As such, he was a giver of fertility and wealth, a sort of Plouton or chthonian Zeus, equipped with a cornu copiae (Cornut. theol. 27 p. 51, 11 ff. Ἀγαθὸς δὲ Δαίμων... προστάτης...καὶ σωτὴρ τῶν οἰκείων ἐστὶ τῷ σώζειν καλῶς τὸν ἴδιον οἶκον... τὸ δὲ τῆς Ἀμαλθείας κέρας οἰκεῖον αὐτῷ φόρημά ἐστιν, ἐν ᾧ ἅμα πάντα ἀλδήσκει τὰ κατὰ τοὺς οἰκείους καιροὺς φυόμενα, κ.τ.λ.). An Athenian relief shows him as a bearded man carrying his horn and associated with his usual partner, Agathe Tyche (L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1859 p. 111, R. Schöne Griechische Reliefs aus athenischen Sammlungen Leipzig 1872 p. 55 pl. 26, 109. The inscriptions run : ...ι... | ἀνέθηκ... | Ἀγαθὸς Δα[ίμω]ν [Ἀγ]α[θῆ] Τύχῃ) : cp. Brit. Mus. Marbles xi. 90 ff. pl. 47, Brit. Mus. Cat. Sculpture iii. 232 no. 2163, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 481 no. 5. A relief from Thespiai represents a similar figure seated before an altar (?) with a phiale in his right hand, a horn in his left (G. Körte in the Ath. Mitth. 1878 iii. 408 no. 189, O. Kern ib. 1891 xvi. 24 f. fig.). And another relief from Thespiai completes the likeness to Zeus by the addition of throne, sceptre, and eagle (O. Kern in the Ath. Mitth. 1891 xvi. 24 f. fig. = my fig. 951, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 356 f. fig. 107, infra Append. N init. Inscribed : Ἀγέστροτο[ς], | Τιμοκράτεια, | Πτωΐλλεια, | Ἐμπεδονίκα | Ἀγαθοῦ Δήμου[ι] (Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 1815)). Hence, although the contention of J. Neuhaeuser De Graecorum daemonibus particula prior Berolini 1857 p. 10 ff. that the word δαίμων was in the beginning 'ipsius summi numinis appellatio' is justly dismissed by Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1087 n. 2, we can understand the reasoning of Paus. 8. 36. 5 Μεγαλοπολίταις δὲ διὰ τῶν ἐπὶ τὸ ἕλος ὀνομαζομένων πυλῶν, διὰ τούτων ὁδεύουσιν ἐς Μαίναλον παρὰ τὸν ποταμὸν τὸν Ἑλισσόντα ἐστι τῆς ὁδοῦ ἐν ἀριστερᾷ Ἀγαθοῦ Θεοῦ ναός· εἰ δὲ ἀγαθῶν οἱ θεοὶ δοτῆρές εἰσιν ἀνθρώποις, Ζεὺς δὲ ὕπατος θεῶν ἐστιν, ἑπόμενος ἂν τις τῷ λόγῳ τὴν ἐπίκλησιν ταύτην Διὸς τεκμαίροιτο εἶναι. Others besides Pausanias took the Agathos Theos to be a sort of Zeus. Tiberius Claudius Xenokles, after serving as fire-bearer, set up an altar at Epidauros in 224 A.D. to the local Agathos Theos, whom he represented as a chthonian Zeus with a sceptre in his right hand, a cornu copiae in his left, and a snake wriggling below (P. Cavvadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 45 no. 44, Harrison Themis p. 285 f. fig. 75, M. Fränkel in the Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1059 with numeral πθ′ and circle no. 2 ib. p. 186 possibly meant for a snake emerging from its hole (?)); cp. another block erected at Epidauros in 187 A.D. by Tiberius Claudius Pollio, after service as hierapólos, to the Agathos Theos and to Agathe (P. Cavvadias op. cit. i. 44 f. nos. 41—41a, M. Fränkel loc. cit. i no. 997: Agathos Theos has numeral ξγ′ and circle no. 1 ib. p. 186 possibly meant for a snake emerging from its hole (?); Agathe has numeral ξξ′). The same explanation might well be given of the Zeus-like Theos Megas at Odessos in Thrace,

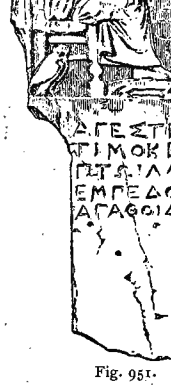

Fig. 951.

Fig. 952.

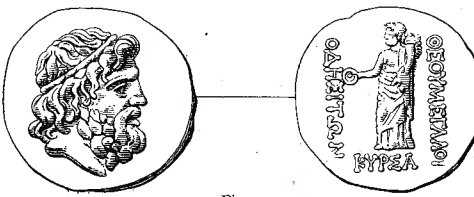

Fig. 953.

where silver tetradrachms were struck in s. ii B.C. with obv. a bearded male head wearing a fillet, rev. the bearded god standing with phiále and cornu copiae (B. Pick in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1898 xiii. 155 f. pl. 10, 20=my fig. 952, Head *Hist. num.*² p. 276 fig. 167, inscribed ΘΕΟΥ ΜΕΓΑΛΟΥ ΟΔΗ and ΚΥΡΣΑ below. Hunter Cat. Coins i. 418 pl. 28, 4=my fig. 953 inscribed ΘΕΟΥΜΕΓΑΛΟΥ ΟΔΗΣΙΤΩΝ and ΚΥΡΣΑ below. For later variants see Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Thrace etc. p. 137 ff. fig., Hunter Cat. Coins i. 418 f. pl. 28, 5, Head *Hist. num.*² p. 276 f., and especially B. Pick in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1898 xiii. 157 ff. pl. 10, 15 ff. and Ant. Münz. Nord-Griechenlands i. 2. 524 ff. pl. 4 f.).

Fig. 954.

Fourth-century sculptors more suo represented the Agathos Daimon in younger form. Plin. nat. hist. 34. 77 mentions among the bronzes of Euphranor to be seen at Rome 'a statue of Bonus Eventus holding a patera in its right hand, a corn-ear and poppies in its left.' Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 35 f. fig. detected the type on a bronze medallion struck by Hadrian (Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 3 no. 3) and Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpt. p. 349 f. fig. 149 with pl. 6, 37, id. Ant. Gemmen i pl. 44, 9 ff., ii. 211 f. illustrated it from gems and coins of Galba etc. (in fig. 954 I add the reverse of an unpublished copper of Antoninus Pius in my collection):

cp. also a cameo plaque of blue glass now in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Marbles iii Frontisp., F. Robiou in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 737 fig. 870, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 462 no. 5, C. Davenport Cameos London 1900 p. 24 f. pl. 3, Harrison Themis p. 302 f. fig. 82), which Taylor Combe Brit. Mus. Marbles loc. cit. already recognised as a copy of Euphranor's statue. Plin. nat. hist. 36. 23 in his list of marble works by Praxiteles at Rome includes 'the statues of Bonus Eventus and Bona Fortuna on the Capitol.' W. Klein Praxiteles Leipzig 1898 p. 156, greatly daring, would identify the Praxitelean Bonus Eventus with the bronze original of the Madrid Hypnos and its numerous congeners, e.g. the bronze statuette of a horn-bearing Hypnos at Vienna (id. ib. p. 140 fig. 21). Be that as it may, the common assumption that Pliny's Bonus Eventus and Bona Fortuna are the Latinised forms of Agathòs Daimon and Agathè Tyche is probably correct.

Not till Hellenistic times do we get evidence of the Agathos Daimon conceived as a snake. This belief was especially prevalent in Egypt; but it seems to have spread from thence to Delos, and even to Rome. According to the foundation-legend of Alexandreia, when the city-walls began to rise, a snake of huge size and majestic bearing attacked the workmen and hindered their work. Alexander the Great bade his men assemble on the following day to slay the monster. This was done on the site of the later Stoa. An elaborate tomb was built for the snake, and Alexander had garland-shops erected near by 'in order that the beast, commonly thought to do service in temples—it is called Agathos Daimon—, might itself be worshipped as a deity' (Iul. Valer. 1. 28 pr 37, 15 ff. Kuebler. The concluding words are: 26 ff. ut quod haec bestia famulitium quoddam templis praestare videbatur—daemon <enim> melior appellatur—, ipse quoque divina quadam religione coleretur). When the snake's tomb was finished, certain blocks of the architrave over the columns of the entrance gave way, and from them were seen to issue numerous snakes (cp. supra i. 205 f.). These crept about and entered the penetralia of the newly built houses. Soothsayers declared that they too were presiding Daimones to be worshipped in every house as di Penates. Hence the custom at Alexandreia that on definite days wheaten meal is thrown for the snakes to eat and the upper classes, with garlands, go up to the temple of the Heros, who is served by snakes of this sort (Iul. Valer. 1. 29 p. 38, 18 ff. Kuebler. Cp. pseudo-Kallisth. 1. 32 ἱδρυμένου δὲ τοῦ πυλῶνος τοῦ ἱεροῦ ἐξαίφνης πλαξ μεγίστη ἐξέπεσεν ἀρχαιοτάτη πλήρης γραμμάτων, ἐξ ἧς ἐξῆλθον ὄφεις πολλοί, καὶ ἐρπύζοντες εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὰς ὁδοὺς τῶν ἤδη τεθεμελιωμένων οἰκιῶν. [τὴν πόλιν γὰρ ἔτι παρὼν Ἀλέξανδρος καθίδρυσεν τῇ αὐτοῦ δυνάμει ἰαννουαρίου πρώτῃ καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ ἱερόν.] δθεν τούτους τοὺς ὄφεις σέβονται οἱ θυρωροὶ ὡς Ἀγαθοὺς Δαίμονας εἰσιόντας εἰς τὰς οἰκίας· οὐ γάρ εἰσιν ἰοβόλα ζῶα with the addition in cod. A ἐκέλευσε δὲ ὁ Ἀλέξανδρος τοῖς φύλαξι τῶν οἴκων σῖτον δοθῆναι. οἱ δὲ λαβόντες, ἁλήσαντες καὶ ἀθηροποιησάμενοι τὴν ἡμέραν (C. Müller cj. ταύτῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ) τοῖς ἐνοικοῦσι θάλλους διδόασιν· δθεν καὶ μέχρι τοῦ δεῦρο τοῦτον τὸν νόμον φυλάττουσι παρ' Ἀλεξανδρεῦσι, Τύβι (so C. Müller for Τύβη) κ' τὰ μὲν κτήνη στεφανοῦσθαι, θυσιάζεσθαι <δὲ> τοῖς Ἀγαθοῖς Δαίμοσι τοῖς προνοουμένοις τῶν οἰκιῶν, καὶ διασώσεις (διαδόσεις? C. Müller) τῶν ἀθηρῶν ποιεῖσθαι). See further Plout. amat. 12 ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ ποτὲ γείτονας ἑώρων δύο διαμφισβητοῦντας ὄφεως προσερπύσαντος εἰς τὴν ὁδόν, ἀμφοτέρων μὲν Ἀγαθὸν Δαίμονα καλούντων, ἑκατέρου δ' ἔχειν ἀξιοῦντος ὡς ἴδιον, Lamprid. v. Heliogab. 28. 3 Aegyptios dracunculos Romae habuit, quos illi Agathodaemonas vocant, C. Wessely Griechische Zauberpapyrus von Paris und London Wien 1888 p. 81 pap. Par. 2427 ff. (part of a charm to secure wealth, in which a waxen man begs with his right hand, holds in his left a wallet and a staff with a snake coiled about it, and has a coiled snake on his belt and upon the crown of his head) εἰς δὲ τὸν δράκοντα τὸ | ὄνομα τοῦ Ἀγαθοῦ Δαίμονος, ὅ ἐστιν, | ὡς λέγει Ἐπαφρόδιτος, [ὅ ἐστιν] τὸ ὑποκειμ(ενον)· | φρη αν ωϊ φωρχω φνννη ρορψις | οροχωϊ, ὡς δὲ ἐν τῷ χάρτῃ δ (sic) εὕρο(ν), | μετεβλήθη τὸ πραγματικὸν οὕτως· | αρπονκνουφι ὃ, Philon Bybl. frag. 9 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 572 Müller) ap. Euseb. praep. ev. 1. 10. 48 ff. Φοίνικες δὲ αὐτὸ (sc. the snake) Ἀγαθὸν Δαίμονα καλοῦσιν. ὁμοίως καὶ Αἰγύπτιοι Κνὴφ ἐπονομάζουσι· προστιθέασι δὲ αὐτῷ ἱέρακος κεφαλὴν διὰ τὸ πρακτικὸν τοῦ ἱέρακος...ἔτι μὴν οἱ Αἰγύπτιοι ἀπὸ τῆς αὐτῆς ἐννοίας τὸν κόσμον γράφοντες περιφερῆ κύκλον ἀεροειδῆ καὶ πυρωπὸν χαράσσουσι, καὶ μέσα τεταμένον ὄφιν ἱερακόμορφον, καὶ ἔστι τὸ πᾶν σχῆμα ὡς τὸ παρ' ἡμῖν

θῆτα, τὸν μὲν κύκλον κόσμον μηνύοντες τὸν δὲ μέσον ὄφιν συνεκτικὸν τούτου Ἀγαθὸν Δαίμονα σημαίνοντες. Nero, who in Egypt called himself ὁ Ἀγαθὸς Δαίμων τῆς | οἰκουμένης (Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 4699, 3 f.=Dittenberger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 666, 3 f.), struck billon coins there with the reverse type of a serpent enfolding corn-ears and poppy-heads, inscribed ΝΕΟ·ΑΓΑΘ·ΔΑΙΜ= νέος Ἀγαθὸς Δαίμων (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 20 f. pl. 26, 171=my fig. 955, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 413, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 863, E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 131 fig. 174, Harrison Themis p. 277 fig. 66). And a remarkable contorniate medal shows him as the νέος Ἀπόλλων, νέος Διόνυσος (supra pp. 96 n. 3, 254), and νέος Ἀγαθὸς Δαίμων rolled into one (fig. 956 from a specimen in my collection. Obv.: Head of Nero to right, with bow and arrow in front of him, and ivy-leaf behind him. The usual compendium ϱ here appears on Nero's face, the P encircling his eye and the E marking his nostril and mouth. Also the muscles of his neck are peculiarly rendered in the form of an ivy-leaf. Rev.: Bearded and crested snake approaching a portable altar with dependent fillets). The antechamber of a Graeco-Egyptian catacomb at Kom el Chougafa has its doorway flanked by two such snakes equipped with thýrsos and winged caduceus (F. W. von Bissing Les bas-reliefs de Kom el Chougafa Munich 1901 pl. 1). Another rock-cut tomb, known locally as 'the grave of

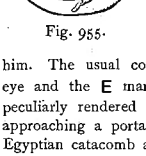

Fig. 955.

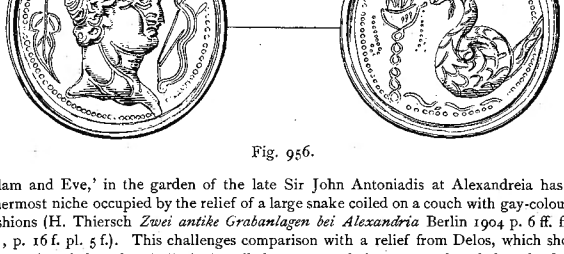

Fig. 956.

Adam and Eve,' in the garden of the late Sir John Antoniadis at Alexandreia has its innermost niche occupied by the relief of a large snake coiled on a couch with gay-coloured cushions (H. Thiersch Zwei antike Grabanlagen bei Alexandria Berlin 1904 p. 6 ff. figs. 6 f., p. 16 f. pl. 5 f.). This challenges comparison with a relief from Delos, which shows a large bearded snake similarly installed on a couch between a bearded male figure bearing phiále and cornu copiae to the right and a female figure bearing oinochóe and cornu copiae to the left: these personages, who both have a modius on their heads and are draped alike in chitón and himátion, should be interpreted as Agathos Daimon (hardly Sarapis or Plouton) and Agathe Tyche (M. Bulard in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1907 xxxi. 525 ff. fig. 24, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 326 no. 2). Agathos Daimon is, in fact, here represented both in his animal and in his human form. Similarly a marble statue at Berlin, which portrays Antinoos as Agathos Daimon, makes him a youthful Dionysiac figure resting his hand on a cornu copiae with a snake twined about it (Ant. Skulpt. Berlin p. 146 f. no. 361 fig., Clarac Mus. de Sculpt. pl. 947 fig. 2427, E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 131 fig. 173). A small relief of s. iii A.D. in the Palazzo Massimo alle Terme again groups Agathos Daimon with Agathe Tyche (F. von Duhn in Matz—Duhn Ant. Bildw. in Rom iii. 144 no. 3764 says Sarapis (?) with Alexandreia (?). F. Grossi Gondi 'Di una singolare rappresentazione mitologica sincretistica del culto romano' in the Bull. Comm. Arch. Comun. di Roma 1910 xxxviii. 150—160 fig. 1 decides for Serapis with Isis (Isityche)). It represents the former as a coiled snake with had their counterpart in another Greek custom. 'Food that fell from the tables,' says Athenaios, 'they used to assign to their dead friends.' And by way of proof he quotes from Euripides the couplet descriptive of the love-sick Sthenoboia, who believes that Bellerophontes is dead:

> Never a crumb falls from her finger-tips
> But she must cry: 'For the Corinthian guest[1]!'

Athenaios might have added the Pythagorean precept not to pick up food from the floor, a precept utilised by Aristophanes in his Heroes and duly recorded by Aristotle On the Pythagoreans[2].

a bearded human head wearing a modius, the latter as a draped goddess likewise wearing a modius and holding a leafy spray (hardly corn-ears) in her right hand, a cornu copiae in her left, while a large jar projects from the ground beside her.

Agathos Daimon was, on this showing, a chthonian power essentially akin to Zeus Sotér. As a fertilising agent he was naturally brought into connexion with Dionysos (see bibliography at the beginning of this note), with whom he is even identified (Philonides de unguentis et coronis ap. Athen. 675 B). The postprandial draught of unmixed wine is referred to Agathos Daimon by Aristoph. eq. 105 ff., vesp. 525, pax 300 with scholl. ad loc., Antiphanes lampás frag. 1 Meineke ap. Athen. 486 F and 487 B, Theophr. ap. Athen. 693 C–D, Aelius Dionysios ap. Eustath. in Od. p. 1471, 32 ff., Ail. var. hist. 1. 20, Hesych. s.v. Ἀγαθοῦ Δαίμονος πόμα = Bekker anecd. i. 209, 14 ff., i. 334, 4 ff. = Apostol. 1. 10. Cp. also the Ἀγαθοδαιμονισταί (Hesych. s.v.) or Ἀγαθοδαιμονιασταί (Aristot. eth. Eud. 3. 6. 1233 b 3 f., Inscr. Gr. ins. i no. 161, 5 = Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 1. 478 f. no. 3842, 5 καὶ ὑπὸ [Διοσ]ταβυριαστᾶν Ἀγαθοδαιμονιαστᾶν Φιλ(ω)νείων κοινοῦ κ.τ.λ., with Plout. symp. 3. 7. 1). The toast Ἀγαθοῦ Δαίμονος is distinguished from the toast Διὸς Σωτῆρος by Eriphos frag. 3 Meineke ap. Athen. 693 C, Xenarchos didymoi frag. 1 Meineke ap. Athen. 693 B–C, Diod. 4. 3, Poll. 6. 100, Athen. 692 F, Souid. s.v. Ἀγαθοῦ Δαίμονος, schol. Aristoph. pax 300, cp. Philochoros frag. 18 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 387 Müller) ap. Athen. 38 C–D and frag. 19 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 387 Müller) ap. Athen. 693 D–E, and never really confused with it (Diphilos Sappho frag. 1 Meineke ap. Athen. 487 A Ἀρχίλοχος, δέξαι τήνδε τὴν μεταιπτρίδα | μεστὴν Διὸς Σωτῆρος, Ἀγαθοῦ Δαίμονος is a case of asyndeton, not of apposition. Cp. e.g. Herond. 2. 67 f.).

A kántharos with knotted handles from Athens (Nicole Cat. Vases d'Athènes Suppl. p. 272 f. no. 1173, C. Watzinger in the Ath. Mitth. 1901 xxvi. 74 no. 17 fig., P. Wolters ib. 1913 xxxviii. 198 n. 2) has round its neck a yellow ivy-wreath, above which is painted in white ΑΓΑΘΟΥ ΘΕΟΥ. A small vase at Kentoripa (Centorbi) is inscribed ΑΓΑΘΟΥΔΑΜΟΣ, which is perhaps to be read as Ἀγαθοῦ Δαίμονος rather than as Ἀγαθοδάμου (Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 2406, 109, P. Wolters loc. cit.). Cp. a fragment of black ware with relief-decoration and the inscription ΗΣΤΥ+ΗΣ = [Ἀγαθ]ῆς Τύχης round its neck, found on the W. slope of the Akropolis at Athens (A. Koerte in the Ath. Mitth. 1896 xxi. 294, P. Wolters loc. cit.).

[1] Athen. 427 E τοῖς δὲ τετελευτηκόσι τῶν φίλων ἀπένεμον τὰ πίπτοντα τῆς τροφῆς ἀπὸ τῶν τραπεζῶν· διὸ καὶ Εὐριπίδης περὶ τῆς Σθενεβοίας φησίν, ἐπειδὴ νομίζει τὸν Βελλεροφόντην τεθνάναι, 'πεσὸν δέ νιν λέληθεν οὐδὲν ἐκ χερός, | ἀλλ' εὐθὺς αὐδᾷ "τῷ Κορινθίῳ ξένῳ"' (Eur. frag. 664 Nauck²). The Euripidean passage is parodied by Kratin. fab. inc. frag. 16. 4 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 179 ff. Meineke) ap. Athen. 782 D–E, Aristoph. thesm. 404 f. with schol. ad loc., cp. Hesych. s.v. Κορίνθιος ξένος.

[2] Aristot. frag. 190 Rose ap. Diog. Laert. 8. 34 φησὶ δ' Ἀριστοτέλης...παραγγέλλειν αὐτὸν (sc. Πυθαγόραν)...τὰ...πεσόντ' ἀπὸ τραπέζης μὴ ἀναιρεῖσθαι, ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἐθίζεσθαι μὴ ἀκολάστως ἐσθίειν ἢ ὅτι ἐπί τελευτῇ τινος ('sive quod essent mortuo destinata' Ambrosius revised by C. G. Cobet)· καὶ Ἀριστοφάνης δὲ τῶν ἡρώων φησὶν εἶναι τὰ πίπτοντα, λέγων ἐν τοῖς Ἥρωσι (frag. 2 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 1070 f. Meineke)) 'μηδὲ γεύεσθ' ἄττ' ἂν ἐντὸς (I. Casaubon and W. Canter, followed by C. Jacobitz, cjj. ἐκτὸς) τῆς τραπέζης καταπέσῃ' = Souid. s.v. Πυθαγόρα τὰ σύμβολα.

Secondly, the buried chieftain was Epópsios because he kept an eye on his descendants and watched over their interests[1]. The title was, however, susceptible of a wider meaning. So Zeus Epópsios[2] came to be revered as the guardian of suppliants[3], the observer of right and wrong[4], the avenger of impious deeds[5]. Like Zeus Panóptes[6], he readily took on a solar complexion[7]. And it may be that the story of Zeus transforming himself into a hoopoe (épops)

[1] Cp. the important passage Hes. o. d. 121 ff. αὐτὰρ ἐπεὶ δὴ τοῦτο γένος κατὰ γαῖ' ἐκάλυψε, | τοὶ μὲν δαίμονές εἰσι Διὸς μεγάλου διὰ βουλὰς | ἐσθλοί, ἐπιχθόνιοι, φύλακες θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων, | [οἵ ῥα φυλάσσουσίν τε δίκας καὶ σχέτλια ἔργα | ἠέρα ἑσσάμενοι πάντη φοιτῶντες ἐπ' αἶαν,] | πλουτοδόται· καὶ τοῦτο γέρας βασιλήιον ἔσχον. For apparatus criticus see A. Rzach ad loc. Infra Append. M fin.

The adjective ἐπόψιος is used in this sense by Soph. Phil. 1040 f. ἀλλ', ὦ πατρῴα γῆ θεοί τ' ἐπόψιοι, | τείσασθε κ.τ.λ., the substantive ἔποψις by Strab. 676 εἶτ' 'Αμφίλοχον... συμβαλεῖν εἰς μονομαχίαν πρὸς τὸν Μόψον, πεσόντας δ' ἀμφοτέρους ταφῆναι μὴ ἐν ἐπόψει ἀλλήλοις, the verb ἐποπτεύω by Aisch. cho. 489 of the buried Agamemnon ὦ γαῖ', ἄνες μοι πατέρ' ἐποπτεῦσαι μάχην, cho. 1 of Hermes Chthónios Ἑρμῆ Χθόνιε πατρῷ' ἐποπτεύων κράτη cited by Aristoph. ran. 1126, 1138 ff., Eum. 220 of the Eumenides τὸ μὴ τίνεσθαι μηδ' ἐποπτεύειν κότῳ, cho. 984 ff. of Helios ὡς ἴδῃ πατήρ, | οὐχ οὐμός, ἀλλ' ὁ πάντ' ἐποπτεύων τάδε | Ἥλιος, ἄναγνα μητρὸς ἔργα τῆς ἐμῆς, Ag. 1270 of Apollon ἐποπτεύσας δέ με, Eum. 224 of Athena δίκας δὲ Παλλὰς τῶνδ' ἐποπτεύσει θεά, cho. 1064 f. of God καί σ' ἐποπτεύων πρόφρων | θεὸς φυλάσσοι κ.τ.λ., Ag. 1578 f. of the gods in general φαίην ἂν ἤδη νῦν βροτῶν τιμαόρους | θεοὺς ἄνωθεν γῆς ἐποπτεύειν ἄχη (see further F. H. M. Blaydes on Aristoph. ran. 1126). Similarly ἐφορᾶν is used of Zeus in Od. 13. 213 f. (cited supra p. 1097 n. 1), Archil. frag. 84 Hiller—Crusius ap. Stob. ecl. 1. 3. 34 p. 58, 11 ff. Wachsmuth (Clem. Al. strom. 5. 14 p. 412, 3 ff. Stählin, Euseb. praep. ev. 13. 13. 54) ὦ Ζεῦ, πάτερ Ζεῦ, σὸν μὲν οὐρανοῦ κράτος, | σὺ δ' ἔργ' ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων ὁρᾷς | λεωργὰ καὶ θεμιστά (so Liebel for καθέμιστα or the like), σοὶ δὲ θηρίων | ὕβρις τε καὶ δίκη μέλει, Soph. El. 174 f. ἔτι μέγας οὐρανῷ | Ζεύς, ὃς ἐφορᾷ πάντα καὶ κρατύνει. For Zeus Ἔφορος see supra i. 737 n. 8.

[2] Supra i. 737 n. 9.

[3] Ap. Rhod. 2. 1123 ἀντόμεθα πρὸς Ζηνὸς Ἐποψίου with schol. Paris. ad loc. Ἐπόψιος δὲ ὁ ἔποπτος (J. Alberti corr. ἐπόπτης), 1131 ff. (cited supra p. 1097 n. 2).

[4] Kallim. h. Zeus 81 ff. ἴζεο δ' αὐτὸς | ἄκρῃς ἐν πολίεσσιν, ἐπόψιος οἵ τε δίκῃσι | λαὸν ὑπὸ σκολιῆς, οἵ τ' ἔμπαλιν ἰθύνουσιν.

[5] Orph. Arg. 1035 ἀλλά οἱ οὔτι λάθων Δί' ἐπόψιον οὐδὲ θέμιστας.

[6] Supra i. 459 ff.

[7] A stone pillar (height 1·0^{m}, breadth 0·23^{m}), found on the site of Itanos (Erimopolis) in E. Crete and now serving as a lintel in a cottage near the lighthouse on Capo Sidero, bears the following inscription in letters of s. iv B.C. or earlier: Πάτρων Διὶ | Ἐπ[ο]ψί[ω]ι | ἀνέ[θ]ηκε. | τροπα[ὶ] χει[μερινα]ί. | εἴ τινι τούΓ[των : ἐπιμε]λές : κατὰ | τὴν : χοιρά[δα : τὴν | μικρὰν | καὶ τὴν στή]λην : ὁ ἥλιος | τρέπεται (F. Halbherr in the Museo Italiano di antichità classica 1890 iii. 585 f. no. 4 = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 1181 = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.^{3} no. 1264). The original position of the pillar was such that a line drawn from it to a certain small rock visible at sea, and prolonged thence to the horizon, would mark the precise spot where the sun rose at the winter solstice. Halbherr ad loc. cp. schol. Aristoph. av. 997 φησὶ δὲ Καλλίστρατος ἐν Κολωνῷ ἀνάθημά τι εἶναι αὐτοῦ (sc. Μέτωνος) ἀστρολογικόν and Ail. var. hist. 10. 7 ὅτι Μέτων ὁ Λευκονοιεὺς ἀστρολόγος ἀνέστησε στήλας καὶ τὰς τοῦ ἡλίου τροπὰς κατεγράψατο. The rosette or star, which figures so frequently on coins of Itanos (J. N. Svoronos Numismatique de la Crète ancienne Mâcon 1890 i. 201 ff. pl. 18, 21 ff., pl. 19, 5, 16, 19, 22 f., 25 ff., id. in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1894 xviii. 115, 117 f., Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Crete etc. p. 51 f. pl. 12, 6 ff., pl. 13, 4, 7 f., Babelon Monn. gr. rom. ii. 3. 895 ff. pl. 244, 1 ff., 20, pl. 245, 3, 7 ff., Anson Num. Gr. vi. 11 no. 114 pl. 1, Head Hist. num.^{2} p. 469 f.), was in all probability a solar symbol. And Zeus on Cretan soil tended to become a sun-god (supra i. 545 ff.).

For Ἐπόψιος as a title of Apollon see supra i. 737 n. 9.

to win Lamia[1] owes something to popular confusion with the title Epópsios[2]. Thirdly, the king was Meilichios—a coaxing or cajoling appellation[3], which he shared with various chthonian powers[4].

Two other points in the narrative of Antoninus Liberalis call for remark. Periphas, transformed into an eagle, was set to guard the sacred sceptre and had leave to approach the very throne of Zeus[5]. Much the same is said of [1] W. Crönert in the Archiv für Papyrusforschung und verwandte Gebiete 1901 i. 109 n. 1 drew attention to an unnoticed fragment of Philodem. περὶ εὐσεβείας (in the series of photographs issued by the Oxford Philological Society vi. 206) on the amours of Zeus: [ὧν ἦν καὶ Νέμ]εσις, [ἣν | φη]σιν (T) ὁ τὰ Κύ[πρια | γ]ράψας ὁμοιωθ[ῆ|ν]α<ι> χηνί, Δί[α <δὲ> αὐ]τὴν | δ]μώκειν καὶ μιγῆ[αι, | τὴν δ]ὲ ὠιὸν τεκεῖν, | [ἐξ] οὗ γενέσθαι τ]ὴ[ν | Ἑλ]ένην. ὥσ[π]ε[ρ αὖ | Λή]δας ἐρασθεὶς [έ|γ]ένετο κύκνο[ς, | Εὐ]ρώ[πης δὲ ταῦ|ρος], Λαμίας δὲ ἐ[πο]ψ (so F. Blass), Δανάης δ᾽ χ[ρυ|σός]. καὶ παρ᾽ Ἀπολ[λω|ρίδη] καὶ παρ᾽ Εὐ[ρι|πίδ]η λέγεται... With this allusion to the hoopoe O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2566 well cp. Clem. Rom. hom. 5. 13 (ii. 184 Migne) Λαμίᾳ ἐπεμορφώθη ἔποψ, Rufin. recognit. 10. 22 Lamiam (sc. stuprat) mutatus in upupam.

[2] Aisch. frag. 304, 1 Nauck[2] ap. Aristot. hist. an. 9. 49 B. 633 a 19 τοῦτον δ᾽ ἐπόπτην ἔποπα τῶν αὐτοῦ κακῶν | κ.τ.λ. (F. G. Welcker Die Griechischen Tragödien Bonn 1839 i. 384, followed by many scholars, attributed the fragment to Sophokles' Tereus: see A. C. Pearson on Soph. frag. 581 Jebb). Cp. Hesych. ἔποψ· ἐπόπτης. δυνάστης. καὶ εἶδος ὀρνέου.

There were, no doubt, other reasons, which made the hoopoe a suitable vehicle for Zeus, especially his fine feathered crest or crown and his widely-recognized magical powers (to the evidence cited by S. Bochart Hierozoicon rec. E. F. C. Rosenmüller Lipsiae 1796 iii. 111 f. add the Kyranides 1. 7. 11 ff. in F. de Mély—C. É. Ruelle Les Lapidaires de l'antiquité et du moyen âge Paris 1898 ii (Les Lapidaires grecs). 20 ff. with 235 f. [ἔποψ] ζῷόν ἐστιν ἐν ἀέρι πτώμενον ᾧ καλεῖται ἔποψ, ἐπτάχρωμον βασίλειον ἔχον μήκει δακτύλων β᾽, ἁπλούμενον καὶ συστελλόμενον· αὐτὸ δὲ τετράχρωμον, ὡς εἰπεῖν, πρὸς τὰς δ᾽ τροπὰς τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ· οὗτος καλεῖται κουκούφας καὶ ποῦπος, ὡς ἐγράφη τὰ περὶ τούτου ἐν τῇ πρώτῃ τῇ βίβλῳ ‘ἀρχαϊκῇ’ καλουμένῃ· ἔστι δὲ τὸ ζῷον ἱερόν. λαβὼν οὖν τὴν τούτου καρδίαν ἔτι πταίρουσαν κατάπιε ἀντίκρυ τοῦ ἡλίου ὥρας πρώτης ἀρχομένης ἢ ὀγδόης ἀρχομένης· ἔστω δὲ ἡμέρα Κρόνου, σελήνης ἀνατολικῆς οὔσης· καὶ ἐπίπιε γαλὰ βοὸς μελαίνης μετ᾽ ὀλίγου μέλιτος ἐκ τοῦ συνθέματος αὐθωρόν, ἵνα ἡ καρδία ὑγιὴς καταποθῇ, καὶ ἔσῃ προγινώσκων τὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ γῇ, καὶ εἴ τις κατὰ ψυχὴν ἔχει τι καὶ ὅσα κατὰ τὰ κλίματα καὶ κατὰ πόλεις γίνεται καὶ τὰ μέλλοντα ἅπασιν ἀνθρώποις· ...ἐὰν δὲ καὶ ἑτέραν καρδίαν καὶ ἦπαρ ἔποπος βάλῃς ἐν τῷ συνθέματι, κρεῖττον ἔσται καὶ ἔτι μνημονικώτερον ποιεῖ... The sequel deals with a yet more potent charm, in which, among other ingredients, is καὶ τὸ βασίλειον τὸ ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς τοῦ ἔποπος). On his relations to the cuckoo, hawk, woodpecker, and bee-eater see E. Oder 'Der Wiedehopf in der griechischen Sage' in the Rhein. Mus. 1888 xliii. 541—556, D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 pp. 54—57, S. Bochart op. cit. iii. 107—115, J. Grimm Teutonic Mythology trans. J. S. Stallybrass London 1883 ii. 681 f., C. Swainson The Folk Lore and Provincial Names of British Birds London 1886 pp. 106—109, O. Keller Die antike Tierwelt Leipzig 1913 ii. 60—63.

Horapoll. hierogl. 1. 55 εὐχαριστίαν γράφοντες, κουκούφαν ('hoopoe') ζωγραφοῦσι· διότι τοῦτο μόνον τῶν ἀλόγων ζώων, ἐπειδὰν ὑπὸ τῶν γονέων ἐκτραφῇ, γηράσασιν αὐτοὺς τὴν αὐτὴν ἀποδίδωσι χάριν· ...ὅθεν καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν θείων σκήπτρων κουκούφα προτίμησίς ἐστι (cp. Ail. de nat. an. 10. 16, 16. 5) looks like a parallel to the tale of Periphas, but is perhaps based on a misconception; for the erectile crest of the hoopoe, when laterally compressed (H. Lydekker The Royal Natural History London 1895 iv. 57 ff., col. pl., A. H. Evans The Birds of Britain Cambridge 1916 p. 108 f. fig.), bears a superficial resemblance to the regular sceptre of the gods (see e.g. C. Leemans on Horapoll. loc. cit. with fig. 54).

[3] Supra p. 1112 n. 7.

[4] See O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2558, 2563.

[5] Ant. Lib. 6 (supra p. 1121 f.) διδοῖ φυλάσσειν τὸ ἱερὸν σκῆπτρον καὶ προσιέναι πρὸς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ θρόνον.

Merops an early king of Kos[1]. Behind such traditions lie definite beliefs. It was supposed, as I have elsewhere contended[2], that, when the divine king died, his soul escaped as a bird and in that shape continued to watch over the fortunes of his realm. Further, his divinity was transmitted to his successor in outward and visible form as an eagle-tipped sceptre to be handed down from king to king. Thus the soul of Agamemnon, for instance, became an eagle[3]; and the sceptre which had descended to him from Zeus[4], with an eagle perched upon it[5], was worshipped at Chaironeia as the chief of the gods[6]. The sceptre originally belonged

[1] Schol. Il. 24. 293 οἱ δέ, ὅτι Μέροψ ὁ Κῷος ἀπαύστως ἐπένθει τὴν γυναῖκα, ξενίσας δὲ τὴν Ῥέαν (C. Robert cj. Ἥραν) μετεβλήθη καὶ συμπάρεστιν ἀεὶ τῷ Διί, Eustath. in Il. p. 1351, 29 f. φέρεται δὲ μῦθος καὶ ὅτι Μέροψ Κῷος, ἀπαύστως τὴν γυναῖκα πενθῶν θανοῦσαν, ξενίσας Ῥέαν, μετεβλήθη εἰς ἀετόν, καὶ σύνεστιν ἀεὶ τῷ Διί. It may be suspected that originally Merops was metamorphosed, not into an eagle, but into a bee-eater (μέροψ), cp. Ant. Lib. 18 and D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 116 f.

[2] Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 386 ff., cp. ib. 1905 xvi. 312, 1906 xvii. 165 ff., 313 ff.

[3] Plat. rep. 620 B τὴν δ' ἐπὶ τούτῳ Ἀγαμέμνονος (sc. ψυχήν)· ἔχθρᾳ δὲ καὶ ταύτην τοῦ ἀνθρωπίνου γένους διὰ τὰ πάθη ἀετοῦ διαλλάξαι βίαν. It would not be safe to conclude that Agamemnon's choice was due to Platonic fancy: Plato constantly founds on folk-belief (supra i. 310 f., 357 n. 4, ii. 43 ff., 63 n. 0).

[4] Il. 2. 100 ff. (Hephaistos made the sceptre for Zeus, from whom it passed successively to Hermes, Pelops, Atreus, Thyestes, and Agamemnon) with schol. ad loc. and Eustath. in Il. p. 181, 13 ff.

[5] Aristoph. av. 509 ff. ΠΕ. ἦρχον δ' οὔτω σφόδρα τὴν ἀρχὴν ὥστ' εἴ τις καὶ βασιλεύοι | ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν τῶν Ἑλλήνων, Ἀγαμέμνων ἢ Μενέλαος, | ἐπὶ τῶν σκήπτρων ἐκάθητ' ὄρνις, μετέχων ὅ τι δωροδοκοίη with schol. ad loc. ἐν γὰρ τοῖς σκήπτροις τῶν βασιλέων ἦν ἀετός. But see supra i. 406 f.

[6] Paus. 9. 40. 11 f. θεῶν δὲ μάλιστα Χαιρωνεῖς τιμῶσι τὸ σκῆπτρον ὃ ποιῆσαι Διὶ φησιν Ὅμηρος Ἥφαιστον, παρὰ δὲ Διὸς λαβόντα Ἑρμῆν δοῦναι Πέλοπι, Πέλοπα δὲ Ἀτρεῖ καταλιπεῖν, τὸν δὲ Ἀτρέα Θυέστῃ, παρὰ Θυέστου δὲ ἔχειν Ἀγαμέμνονα· τοῦτο οὖν τὸ σκῆπτρον σέβουσι, δόρυ ὀνομάζοντες. καὶ εἶναι μέν τι θειότερον οὐχ ἥκιστα δηλοῖ τὸ ἐς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἐπιφανὲς ἐξ αὐτοῦ· φασὶ δ' ἐπὶ τοῖς ὅροις αὐτῶν καὶ Πανοπέων τῶν ἐν τῇ Φωκίδι εὑρεθῆναι, σὺν δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ χρυσὸν εὕρασθαι τοὺς Φωκεῖς, σφίσι δὲ ἀσμένοις ἀντὶ χρυσοῦ γενέσθαι τὸ σκῆπτρον. κομισθῆναι δὲ αὐτὸ ἐς τὴν Φωκίδα ὑπὸ Ἡλέκτρας τῆς Ἀγαμέμνονος πείθομαι. ναὸς δὲ οὐκ ἔστιν αὐτῷ δημοσίᾳ πεποιημένος, ἀλλὰ κατὰ ἔτος ἕκαστον ὁ (H. C. Schubart, followed by H. Hitzig—H. Blümner, cj. ὁ κατὰ ἔτος ἕκαστον) ἱερώμενος ἐν οἰκήματι ἔχει τὸ σκῆπτρον· καὶ οἱ θυσίαι ἀνὰ πᾶσαν ἡμέραν θύονται, καὶ τράπεζα παράκειται παντοδαπῶν κρεῶν καὶ πεμμάτων πλήρης. The worship of sceptre or spear was characteristic of a primitive age: Iust. 43. 3. 3 per ea tempora adhuc reges hastas pro diademate habebant, quas Graeci sceptra dixere. nam et ab origine rerum pro signis inmortalibus veteres hastas coluere, ob cuius religionis memoriam adhuc deorum simulacris hastae adduntur, Philon Bybl. frag. 1. 7 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 564 Müller) ap. Euseb. praep. ev. 1. 9. 29 οἱ παλαίτατοι τῶν βαρβάρων, ἐξαιρέτως δὲ Φοίνικές τε καὶ Αἰγύπτιοι, παρ' ὧν καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ παρέλαβον ἄνθρωποι, θεοὺς ἐνόμιζον μεγίστους τοὺς τὰ πρὸς τὴν βιωτικὴν χρείαν εὑρόντας, ἢ καὶ κατά τι εὐποιήσαντας τὰ ἔθνη· εὐεργέτας τε τούτους καὶ πολλῶν αἰτίους ἀγαθῶν ἡγούμενοι ὡς θεοὺς προσεκύνουν, καὶ εἰς τὸ χρεὼν μεταστάντας ναοὺς κατασκευασάμενοι στήλας τε καὶ ῥάβδους ἀφιέρουν ἐξ ὀνόματος αὐτῶν, καὶ ταῦτα μεγάλως σεβόμενοι, καὶ ἑορτὰς ἔνεμον αὐτοῖς τὰς μεγίστας Φοίνικες. Examples of the cult are collected by De Visser De Gr. diis non ref. spec. hum. p. 90 f. § 94 ff. and Frazer Pausanias v. 210 ff., Golden Bough[2]: The Magic Art i. 365. It is possible that the object reverenced by the Chaeroneans was a sceptre found in the grave of some 'Minoan' chief (cf. C. Schuchhardt Schliemann's Excavations trans. E. Sellers London 1891 p. 250 f., Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art vi. 978 f., W. Dörpfeld Troja und Ilion Athen 1902 i. 385, 398, R. M. Dawkins in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1904—1905 xi. 284, H. R. Hall Ægean Archæology London 1915 pp. 57, 242). H. C. Schubart in to the king as weather-maker, and the eagle on it was no mere decoration[1]

Philologus 1860 xv. 400 thought that it was housed in a portable wooden shrine (οἴκημα !). But F. Thiersch in the Abh. d. bayer. Akad. 1858 Philos.-philol. Classe viii. 445 with far greater probability explained that the priest for the time being used a room (οἴκημα) in his own house as chapel for the chose sacrée. The annual tenure of his office seems to have been a method of ensuring his bodily competence (Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 394 ff.).

[1] K. Sittl Der Adler und die Weltkugel als Attribute des Zeus (Besonderer Abdruck aus dem vierzehnten Supplementbande der Jahrbücher für classische Philologie) Leipzig 1884 pp. 3—42 contains a rich collection of material. Here we are concerned only with the eagle in relation to the sceptre (cp. supra i. 127 fig. 96, 128 f. pl. xii, 200 f. fig. 146, 251 pl. xxii, 501 f. pl. xxxi, 590 fig. 450, 596 fig. 454, ii. 104 fig. 65, 512 fig. 390)—a combination which should be compared with the cuckoo-on-sceptre (supra i. 134 f., 532 fig. 399), the cock-on-column (G. von Brauchitsch Die panathenäischen Preisamphoren Leipzig and Berlin 1910 p. 106 ff. fig. 33 ff., R. Garrucci Storia della Arte Cristiana Prato 1881 iv. 59 pl. 251, 1), the woodpecker-on-post (Dion. Hal. ant. Rom. i. 14: see Class. Rev. 1904 xviii. 375, Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i. pl. 24, 10, ii. 119, Harrison Themis p. 101 f. fig. 17, W. R. Halliday Greek Divination London 1913 p. 265. I figure (scale ⅔) an engraved cornelian at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (J. H. Middleton The Lewis Collection of Gems and Rings London 1892 p. 50 no. 26), which shows a warrior consulting the woodpecker of Mars at Tiora Matiene (Dion. Hal. loc. cit.)), the hawk-on-pillar (D. G. Hogarth Excavations at Ephesus London 1908 pp. 157 pl. 22, 1 a, 161 f. pl. 25, 1 ff., 198, W. M. Flinders Petrie Tanis London 1888 ii. 2. 9, J. T. Bent The Ruined Cities of Mashonaland[2] London 1895 p. 180 ff.), the dove-on-sceptre (Encyclopædia Britannica[9] London 1886 xx. 340 s.v. 'Regalia,' ib. xxi. 385 s.v. 'Sceptre,' Folk-Lore 1906 xvii. 315, The Daily Graphic for Dec. 14, 1907 p. 8 fig.), and the like.

Fig. 957.

The earliest literary allusions (Pind. Pyth. 9 ff. εὐθεῖ δ' ἀνὰ σκάπτῳ Διὸς αἰετός, κ.τ.λ. with schol. ad loc. and Soph. frag. 799 Nauck[2], 884 Jebb, ap. schol. Aristoph. av. 515 ὁ σκηπτροβάμων αἰετός, κύων Διός) are at least suggestive of vitality. Cp. Append. N med. And classical numismatic art conceived of the bird as alive and active. On an archaic silver obol (?) of Galaria or Galarina in Sicily he is unusually large and prominent (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Sicily p. 64 fig., P. Gardner Types of Gk Coins p. 89 pl. 2, 1 f., G. F. Hill Coins of Ancient Sicily London 1903 p. 90 f. fig. 12, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 139 obv. ΓΑΛΑ, Dionysos standing with kántharos and vine-branch; rev. ΣΟΤΕΡ retrograde, Zeus enthroned with eagle-sceptre). On coppers of Ptolemy vi Philometor (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins The Ptolemies, Kings of Egypt p. 80 pl. 19, 2, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 388 ΠΤΟΛΕΜΑΙΟΥ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ and ΕΥΛ (the regent Eulaios)) and of Antiochos viii Grypos (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Seleucid Kings of Syria p. 90 pl. 24, 4, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 102 f. pl. 70, 1 ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ ΑΝΤΙΟΧΟΥ ΕΠΙΦΑΝΟΥΣ with ΙΕ to left, ΒΡΡ (= 120 B.C.) and ear of corn below, ib. iii. 103 pl. 70, 2) the Macedonian eagle appears shouldering a sceptre. On a gold coin struck by Koson, king of Thrace (??) under the Romans, c. 42 B.C. the eagle carries a sceptre and a wreath (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Thrace p. 208 fig., Hunter Cat. Coins i. 436, Ant. Münz. Berlin Paeonia etc. iii. 2. 23 fig., Head Hist. num.[2] pp. 272, 289). Denarii struck c. 49 B.C. by one Terentius Varro pro quaestore have obv. VARRO · PRO Q, a filleted bust of Iupiter (Terminalis ?) to right; rev. MAGN · PRO COS (Magnus pro consule) in exergue, a sceptre upright between an eagle and a dolphin (emblems of earth, air, and sea ?) (Babelon Monn. rép. rom. ii. 343, 485 f. fig., Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. ii. 362 nos. 64, 65 pl. 100, 16, 66, 363 nos. 67, 68 pl. 100, 18, 69). An aureus of Q. Caecilius Metellus Pius Scipio, 48—46 B.C., has obv. METEL · PIVS SCIP · IMP, a bust of Iupiter (Terminalis ?)

but an actual embodiment of Zeus[1], which conferred upon its holder the powers of the sky-god. This belief has left traces of itself throughout the historical period of Greece and Rome[2]; indeed, it appears to have lingered on[3] well into the middle ages[4]. In a sense it is still with us[5]. But if the mythopoeic mind fitly transformed any ancient king into an eagle[6], it did so in the case of Periphas with a clear conscience. For Periphas, as son or father of Lapithes[7], was near akin to the Phlegyai[8], whose very name marks them as an 'Eagle'-tribe[9].

In conclusion, the devotion of Periphas to Apollon is adequately explained, either by the fact that in the Lapith genealogy Lapithes and Kentauros were to right, with an eagle's head and sceptre below (Babelon Monn. rép. rom. i. 278 f. fig., Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. ii. 571 fig.: there are denarii with the same type—Babelon op. cit. i. 279, Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. ii. 571 no. 4 pl. 121, 2, no. 5). A first brass of Hadrian has rev. PROVID ENTIADEORVM and S·C·, an eagle flying with a sceptre towards the emperor, who stands with a roll in his left hand (Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] ii. 208 no. 1207. Fig. 958 is from a specimen in my collection. Cohen ib. no. 1208 fig. shows a second brass with the same design).

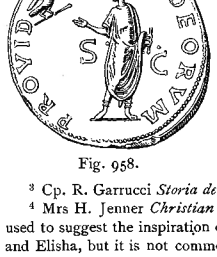

Fig. 958.

[1] Supra i. 105 f. fig. 76, 164 n. 4, 532 figs. 395—400, 543 n. 6, and especially ii. 187 n. 8, 751 f.

[2] Supra p. 1133 n. 1.

[3] Cp. R. Garrucci Storia della Arte Cristiana Prato 1881 iv. 76 pl. 226, 5.

[4] Mrs H. Jenner Christian Symbolism London 1910 p. 41 f.: 'The Eagle is chiefly used to suggest the inspiration of the Holy Spirit to saints of the Old Law, such as David and Elisha, but it is not common.' This is illustrated by a plate from an English MS. of s. xi now in the British Museum (Cotton. Tib. C. vi), which shows David inspired by the eagle on his sceptre (Mrs Jenner by an odd slip says 'dove'): above is the hand of God, holding a horn full of rays. My friend Mr G. F. Hill kindly directs me to a discussion of the inspiration-type by C. R. Morey 'East Christian Paintings in the Freer Collection' in the University of Michigan Studies, Humanistic Series 1914 xii. 35 ff.

[5] Supra p. 1133 n. 1 the dove-on-sceptre.

[6] In addition to Periphas (supra p. 1121 f.), and Merops (supra p. 1131 f.), the shape-shifter Periklymenos underwent the same transformation (Hes. frag. 14, 3 f. Rzach ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. 1. 156, Ov. met. 12. 556 ff., Hyg. fab. 10). ? Cp. Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 26, 71 and 72, ii. 132, if not also i pl. 25, 42, ii. 128.

[7] Supra p. 1122.

[8] See the pedigrees in Gerhard Gr. Myth. p. 227 f. ('Lapithen und Phlegyer').

[9] Hes. sc. Her. 133 f. (arrows) ὅπισθε | μόρφνοιο φλεγύαο καλυπτόμενοι πτερύγεσσιν, Hesych. s.v. φλεγύας· ἀετὸς ξανθός, ὀξύς, Souid. s.v. φλεγύας· ὁ ἀετός, et. mag. p. 795, 57 ff. φλεγύας, ἔστιν ἀετός, ἀπὸ τοῦ φλέγειν καὶ λαμπρὸς εἶναι. οἱ δέ, ὄρνεον παραπλήσιον γυπί. Ἡσίοδος Ἀσπίδι, 'μορφνοῖο φλεγύαο,' τουτέστι μέλανος ἀετοῦ, Eustath. in Il. p. 933, 27 f. ῥήτωρ δέ τις, κατὰ στοιχεῖον συντάξας ἅπερ ἐπόνησε, λέγει καὶ ὅτι φλεγύας ξανθὸς ἀετός, κατὰ γλῶσσάν τινα, ὡς ἔοικεν. A. Fick in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung auf dem Gebiete der indogermanischen Sprachen 1914 xlvi. 77 f. renders φλεγύας 'der Schwarzadler' and adds: 'Das Wort wird soviel als "braun, dunkel" bedeutet haben: wie αἰθων braun, αἰθαλος Russ von αἴθειν brennen, so φλεγύας von φλέγω brennen, engl. black zu germ. blek (φλέγειν).' See further my paper on 'Descriptive animal names in Greece' in the Class. Rev. 1894 viii. 381 ff. and, for the bird-tribes of Greece and Italy, an appendix by W. R. Halliday Greek Divination London 1913 p. 277 ff.

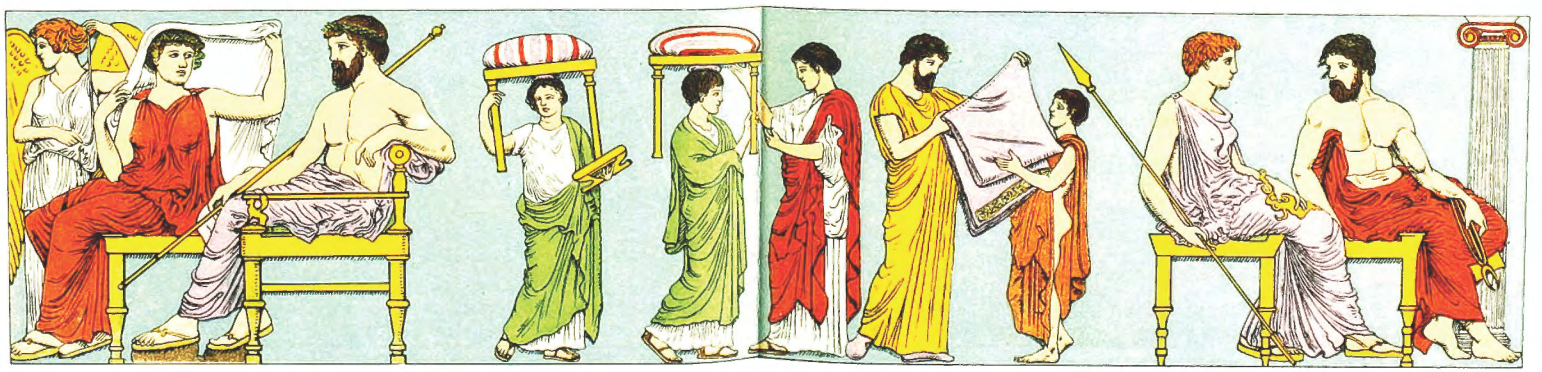
1



2

E. T. T.

The central slab from the Eastern Frieze of the Parthenon, representing the ritual Apotheosis of the King and Queen at Athens:
1. The relief as extant in the British Museum. 2. The relief with flat coloration and metal accessories restored.

See page 1135 ff.

the sons of Stilbe by Apollon[1], or by the contiguity of the Olympieion to the Pythion[2]. In any case it is noteworthy that at Ardettos, just across the Ilissos, Athenian jurors used to swear by Apollon Patrôios, Demeter, and Zeus Basileús[3].

The myth of Periphas comes to us from an age that had largely forgotten its own antecedents. Few, if any, citizens even of Periclean Athens would have dared to assert that on the banks of the Ilissos there once lived a line of kings claiming to be Zeus incarnate. Nevertheless that is the real gist of the tale, and I do not see how we are to avoid accepting it as a genuine echo of bygone beliefs. After all, Periclean Athens, democratic to the core, still had its 'king' and still remembered that divinity clung about him[4]. If any doubted, he had but to lift his eyes to the scene carved by Pheidias' direction above the main doorway of the Parthenon. The central slab of the eastern frieze (pl. xliv)[5] represents a ritual apotheosis[6]. The 'king' and 'queen' of Athens receive from [1] Diod. 4. 69.

[2] Frazer Pausanias ii. 189 ff., v. 519 ff., W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 p. 344 f.

[3] Poll. 8. 122 ὤμνυσαν δὲ ἐν Ἀρδήττῳ δικαστηρίῳ Ἀπόλλω Πατρῷον καὶ Δήμητρα καὶ Δία Βασιλέα.

[4] We must be careful here to rule out invalid evidence. Some statements, which prima facie connect the Athenian king with Zeus, or Zeus with the Athenian king, will not bear closer scrutiny.

The βασιλεύς of republican Athens, during his year of office, sat in the Στοὰ Βασίλειος (Paus. 1. 3, 1 with the notes of Sir J. G. Frazer and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc., E. A. Gardner Ancient Athens London 1902 pp. 386 f., 518 f., W. Judeich op. cit. p. 295 ff.), which is sometimes said to have been named after Zeus Βασιλεύς (Hesych. s.v. Βασίλειος Στοά· δύο εἰσὶν Ἀθήνησιν Βασίλειοι Στοαί, ἥ τε τοῦ λεγομένου Βασιλέως. Διὸς καὶ ἡ τοῦ Ἐλευθερίου = Favorin. lex. p. 355, 13 f., Bekker anecd. i. 222, 29 f. Βασίλειος Στοά· Ἀθήνησι δύο εἰσὶ Βασίλειοι Στοαί, ἡ τοῦ λεγομένου Βασιλέως Διὸς καὶ ἡ τοῦ Ἐλευθερίου); but this seems to be a misconception due to a transcriber's error (cp. Harpokr. s.v. Βασίλειος Στοά·...δύο εἰσὶ στοαὶ παρ' ἀλλήλας, ἥ τε τοῦ Ἐλευθερίου Διὸς καὶ ἡ Βασίλειος. ἔστι δὲ καὶ τρίτη τις, ἡ πάλαι μὲν Ἀνάκτιος καλουμένη, Ποικίλη δὲ μετονομασθεῖσα, Souid. s.v. Βασίλειος Στοά· δύο εἰσὶ στοαὶ παρ' ἀλλήλας, ἥ τε τοῦ Ἐλευθερίου Διὸς καὶ ἡ Βασίλειος. ἔστι δὲ καὶ τρίτη, ἡ πάλαι μὲν Πανάκτιος (P. J. de Maussac cj. Πεισιανάκτειος cp. Diog. Laert. 7. 5 and Souid. s.vv. Ζήνων and Πεισιανάκτιος Στοά, G. Bernhardy cj. Πεισιανάκτιος) ἐκαλεῖτο, νῦν δὲ μετωνομάσθη Ποικίλη, whence Meursius in Hesych. loc. cit. restored δύο εἰσὶν Ἀθήνησι στοαὶ ἥ τε Βασίλειος λεγομένη τοῦ βασιλέως καὶ ἡ Διὸς τοῦ Ἐλευθερίου).

Cic. de nat. deor. 3. 53 Διόσκουροι etiam apud Graecos multis modis nominantur. primi tres, qui appellantur Anactes Athenis, ex rege Iove antiquissimo et Proserpina nati, Tritopatreus, Eubuleus, Dionysus. This passage forms part of the Catalogue of the gods, the origin of which has been much disputed. J. B. Mayor ad loc. would trace it back to Kleitomachos, who became head of the New Academy in 129 B.C. W. Michaelis De origine indicis deorum cognominum Berlin 1898 finds its ultimate source in the pseudo-Aristotelian péplos, which he attributes to an unknown Rhodian author of s. ii. B.C. W. Bobeth De indicibus deorum Leipzig 1904 thinks that the Catalogue was first drafted in 100—50 B.C. Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1908 p. 199 refers it to Aristokles of Rhodes, whose floruit falls in s. i. B.C. In any case the allusion to 'Zeus a very ancient king' betrays the influence of Euhemeros (supra i. 662, 758).

[5] Pl. xliv, 1 is drawn from the best available photographs of the actual slab, viz. A. H. Smith The Sculptures of the Parthenon London 1910 pls. 34—36, supplemented by the casts of it in the Cambridge collection. Pl. xliv, 2 gives a restoration of the same.

[6] So at least I ventured to suggest in the Class. Rev. 1904 xviii. 371, cp. Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Dying God p. 89 n. 5. Other interpretations (which to me, their attendants the sacred péplos and two cushioned díphroi. Of these díphroi one is being handed to the 'queen,' the other with a footstool[1] is reserved for the 'king.' He is a very noteworthy personage. Alone of all the figures on the frieze, he is clad simply in a long chitón with short sleeves and in shoes—doubtless the Cretan garment[2] and royal footgear[3], which we know to have been his distinctive attire. Court etiquette is conservative and these articles of apparel were reminiscent of 'Minoan' predecessors. But, to complete his costume, he needs a himátion; and it seems not unreasonable to conjecture that he is about to put on immortality in the shape of Athena's péplos[4]. This done, the 'king'

I confess, seem inadequate) regard the scene as (1) the priest receiving the new péplos (most archaeologists); (2) the priest folding up and putting away the old péplos (G. F. Hill 'The east frieze of the Parthenon' in the Class. Rev. 1894 viii. 225 f., E. A. Gardner A Handbook of Greek Sculpture London 1897 ii. 291 f., id. Ancient Athens London 1902 p. 332 ff.); (3) the priest, about to sacrifice, handing his own himátion to the boy, cp. the vase shown in the Arch. Zeit. 1879 xxxvii pl. 4 (A. Flasch Zum Parthenon-Fries Würzburg 1877 p. 99 ff., Friederichs—Wolters Gipsabgüsse p. 277 f., Sir C. Waldstein 'The Panathenaic festival and the central slab of the Parthenon frieze' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1885 i. 10 ff., id. Essays on the Art of Pheidias Cambridge 1885 p. 229 ff. ('The central slab of the Parthenon frieze and the Copenhagen plaque') pls. 11 f.); (4) the βασιλεύς, before sacrifice, about to put on his protónion (W. Watkiss Lloyd 'On the Central Groups of the Eastern Frieze of the Parthenon' in Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature Second Series (1892) xvi. 73 ff.); (5) the priest receiving a carpet (στρωμνή, cp. Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 589, 9 and 44 f.) to be spread before the seats of the gods for a theoxeny (E. Curtius in the Jahrb. d. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1894 ix Arch. Anz. p. 181, Miss J. E. Harrison in the Class. Rev. 1895 ix. 91, 427 f. ('The central group of the east frieze of the Parthenon: peplos or στρωμνή?')). See also E. Petersen 'Peplosübergabe' in the Arch. Zeit. 1877 xxxv. 136 f., A. Michaelis 'Peplos und Priestermantel' in the Festschrift für Johannes Overbeck Leipzig 1893 p. 178 ff., A. H. Smith in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Sculpture i. 156 ff., id. A Guide to the Sculptures of the Parthenon London 1908 p. 75 ff., id. The Sculptures of the Parthenon London 1910 p. 53, Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpt. p. 427, id. in the Class. Rev. 1895 ix. 274 ff.

[1] E. Petersen Die Kunst des Pheidias am Parthenon und zu Olympia Berlin 1873 p. 247 n. 1.

[2] Poll. 7. 77 ἐκαλεῖτο δέ τι καὶ Κρητικόν, ᾧ Ἀθήνησιν ὁ βασιλεὺς ἐχρῆτο.

[3] Poll. 7. 85 ὑποδημάτων δὲ εἴδη βασιλίδες· ἐφόρει δὲ αὐτὰς ὁ βασιλεὺς Ἀθήνησιν.

[4] If it be objected that the βασιλεύς had no right to masquerade in the costume of Athena, various considerations may be urged in his defence. At the Greater Mystery of Pheneos in Arkadia the priest put on the mask of Demeter Kidaría before smiting the Underground Folk with rods (Paus. 8. 15. 3). The obverse of a gold statér with the name and types of Alexander the Great is believed by C. T. Seltnan to exhibit the head of Demetrios Poliorketes wearing the helmet of Athena (Num. Chron. Fourth Series 1909 ix. 267 ff. pl. 20, 3). A Melian copper of imperial date shows a bearded male figure inscribed T|V|[X]|H, with left arm carrying a child and right arm resting on a pillar (Imhoof-Blumer Gr. Münzen p. 23 no. 66 pl. 2, 8), presumably a benefactor of Melos represented as her Tyche holding the infant Ploutos (so Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpt. p. 382 n. 3). The colossal statues of the Nemroud Dagh include Antiochos i of Kommagene, who in the accompanying inscription speaks of himself as Τύχης νέας (supra i. 744 n. 3). Conversely, the gold octadrachms and silver decadrachms etc. of the deified Arsinoe ii give her a horn like that of Zeus Ammon (J. N. Svoronos in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. cited supra p. 773 fig. 739, C. T. Seltman Num. Chron. Fourth Series 1909 ix. 269, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 850). Again, it might be pointed out that a woman's péplos is really the same garment as a man's himátion, both being essentially an oblong piece of woollen cloth folded for wear. But the true defence of the βασιλεύς is more and 'queen' will take their places on the díphroi set for them between the deities enthroned on either hand[1]. With Zeus and Hera on the one side, Athena and Hephaistos on the other[2], they will appear with all the credentials of divinity.

But it is time to pass from the local myth of Periphas to the local custom of the Diasia[3].

probably to be sought in the fact that on certain ritual occasions men were expected to don women's raiment—a custom on which I have said my say elsewhere (Class. Rev. 1906 xx. 376 f.). Miss Harrison has suggested to me (July 30, 1917) an explanation, which—if sound—would not only meet the objection here noted but also add much to the significance of the whole procedure. The 'king,' on my showing, is about to assume the péplos of Athena. Yes, but the péplos may be simply the 'Weltenmantel,' which Athena had taken over from the early Attic kings. Such a garment could be appropriately worn by the 'king,' who thus came by his own again. R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 i. 58 ff., 77 ff., ii. 326 seems (though he is not very clear about it) to regard Athena's péplos as a cosmic robe. I fail to see that he has proved the point. When he states that the 'Praxiergidenpriesterinnen' ἀμφιέννουσιν ἐν ἑορταῖς τὸν πέπλον Διὶ Μοιραγέτει Ἀπόλλωνι (op. cit. i. 59), he is indulging in an ungrammatical (Πραξιεργίδαι should be masculine, and ἀμφιέννουσιν is not Greek at all) and highly improbable ('Διἰ...appellativisch (wie divus)') restoration of the mutilated text Corp. inscr. Att. i no. 93, 11 f. = J. V. Prott and L. Ziehen Leges Graecorum sacrae ii no. 14, 11 f. cited supra p. 231 n. 8.

[1] Similarly Philip of Macedon, immediately before his assassination at Aigai in 336 B.C., εἰδωλα τῶν δώδεκα θεῶν ἐπόμπευε...σὺν δὲ τούτοις αὐτοῦ τοῦ Φιλίππου τρισκαιδέκατον ἐπόμπευε θεοπρεπὲς εἴδωλον, σύνθρονον ἑαυτὸν ἀποδεικνύντος τοῦ βασιλέως τοῖς δώδεκα θεοῖς (Diod. 16. 92).

[2] It seems likely that Pheidias had already employed the same principles of composition for the trophy erected at Delphoi as a tithe from the spoils of 'Marathon.' The account given by Paus. 10. 10. 1—2 has led to much discussion, which is conveniently summarised by H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc. Personally, I hold that the grouping of this remarkable monument was as follows:

[Three national worthies]	Five ἐπώνυμοι	ATHENA as goddess of Athens	MILTIADES	APOLLON as god of Delphoi	Five ἐπώνυμοι	[Three later ἐπώνυμοι]

Three out of the ten ἐπώνυμοι, viz. Oineus, Hippothoon, and Aias, are not mentioned in the text of Pausanias (probably a clerical error, cp. E. Curtius in the Nachr. d. kön. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Göttingen Phil.-hist. Classe 1861 p. 369 ff. = id. Gesammelte Abhandlungen Berlin 1894 ii. 365 f.). Later, when the ten tribes were increased to thirteen, the Athenians added at one end of the row three figures of the new ἐπώνυμοι, Antigonos, Demetrios Poliorketes, Ptolemy ii Philadelphos, and balanced them at the other end by three more figures of national worthies, Kodros, Theseus, Phyleus. It will be observed that, on this showing, the arrangement of the Delphic trophy definitely anticipated that of the eastern frieze of the Parthenon (I accept the view of A. S. Arvanitopullos 'Phylen-Heroen am Parthenonfries' in the Ath. Mitth. 1906 xxxi. 38 ff. pl. 4 f. that the ten standing men of the eastern frieze are the eponymous heroes of the Attic tribes):

Head of Panathenaic procession	Five ἐπώνυμοι	Six seated DEITIES	KING and QUEEN of Athens with their attendants	Six seated DEITIES	Five ἐπώνυμοι	Head of Panathenaic procession

In both cases alike Pheidias' design portrays a virtual apotheosis—humanity raised to the rank of surrounding deities.

[3] The best collection of sources will be found in O. Band Die Attischen Diasien Berlin 1883 pp. 3—10. The remainder of this excellent monograph suffers from undue compression and is admittedly incomplete.

(7) The Diasia.

Towards the close of the seventh century (636? 632? 628? B.C.) Kylon, an Athenian noble who had married the daughter of Theagenes tyrant of Megara, resolved with Theagenes' help to make himself tyrant of Athens. In answer to an enquiry the Delphic god bade him seize the Akropolis 'at the greatest festival of Zeus.' Kylon, who had been an Olympic victor, naturally took this to be the festival at Olympia. So he waited till it came round and then made his coup, which proved a disastrous failure[1]. Thoukydides' comment concerns us:

'Whether the greatest festival spoken of was in Attike or elsewhere, was a point which he did not perceive and the oracle did not reveal. For the Athenians too have what is called the Diasia, a festival of Zeus Meilichios, greatest of any, held outside the city, at which all the people offer sacrifice—many not victims but sacrifices peculiar to the country[2].'

The difficulties of the Thucydidean style[3] and the doubts attaching to the text[4] have, I think, hindered scholars from asking the obvious question: Why did the oracle regard the Diasia as a suitable day for setting up a tyranny at Athens? The explanation is twofold: partly, no doubt, because the gathering of the populace outside the city would leave the coast clear for Kylon's attempt; but partly also because the Diasia was the festival of Zeus Meilichios, who represented the line of ancient kings. Kylon might in fact have acted under their auspices and been accepted as their successor. His presumptuous error spoiled what was, in reality or pretence, quite a pretty piece of politico-religious plotting[5].

[1] Thouk. 1. 126, Hdt. 5. 71, Aristot. de Athen. rep. frag. 8 p. 110, 14 ff. Blass—Thalheim, Herakleides Pontikos frag. 1. 4 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 208 Müller), Cic. de leg. 2. 28, Plout. v. Sol. 12 f., Paus. 1. 28. 1, 1. 40. 1, 7. 25. 3, Hesych. s.v. Κωλών(ε)ιον ἄγος, Souid. s.v. Κυλώνειον ἄγος, schol. Aristoph. eq. 445.

[2] Thouk. 1. 126 εἰ δὲ ἐν τῇ Ἀττικῇ ἢ ἀλλοθί που ἡ μεγίστη ἑορτὴ εἵρητο, οὔτε ἐκεῖνος ἔτι κατενόησε τό τε μαντεῖον οὐκ ἐδήλου. ἔστι γὰρ καὶ Ἀθηναίοις Διάσια ἃ καλεῖται, Διὸς ἑορτὴ Μειλιχίου μεγίστη, ἔξω τῆς πόλεως, ἐν ᾗ πανδημεὶ θύουσι, πολλοὶ οὐχ ἱερεῖα ἀλλὰ θύματα ἐπιχώρια with schol. ad loc. ἱερεῖα· πρόβατα and θύματα· τινὰ πέμματα εἰς ζώων μορφὰς τετυπωμένα ἔθυον.

[3] B. Jowett ad loc. would punctuate differently, reading either (1) ἔστι γὰρ καὶ Ἀθηναίοις, Διάσια ἃ καλεῖται, Διὸς ἑορτὴ Μειλιχίου μεγίστη, κ.τ.λ. 'For the Athenians also have a greatest festival of Zeus, namely, of Zeus Meilichius, the Diasia as it is called'; or (2) ἔστι γὰρ καὶ Ἀθηναίοις Διάσια, ἃ καλεῖται Διὸς ἑορτὴ Μειλιχίου μεγίστη, κ.τ.λ. 'For the Athenians also have a festival of Zeus, namely, the Diasia, which is called the greatest festival of Zeus Meilichius.' E. C. Marchant ad loc. translates as in (2).

[4] E. F. Poppo—J. M. Stahl ad loc. cj. Διάσια ἥ καλεῖται. C. F. Hermann in Philologus 1867 ii. 1 ff. cj. ἐν ᾗ πανδημεὶ θύουσι πολλὰ οὐχ ἱερεῖα, κ.τ.λ. T. Hemsterhuys on Loukian. Tim. 7 cj. ἀλλ' ἀγνὰ θύματα ἐπιχώρια. O. Band op. cit. p. 4 regards the words ἔστι—μεγίστη as a probable and ἔξω—ἐπιχώρια as a certain interpolation.

[5] In view of Kylon's connexion with Theagenes, note that the cult of Zeus at Megara bore some resemblance to the cult of Zeus on the Ilissos. A relief from Megara, like that from the Kallirrhoe-basin, associates Zeus with Acheloios (supra p. 1117 n. 7). Megara, like the Ilissos-bank, had its myth of the deluge (Paus. 1. 40. 1). And at Megara too there was an Olympieion with a famous statue of Zeus (Paus. 1. 40. 4 μετὰ ταῦτα ἐς τὸ τοῦ Διὸς (τοῦ Διὸς τὸ cod. Monac.) τέμενος ἐσελθοῦσι καλούμενον Ὀλυμπιεῖον ναός ἐστι θέας ἄξιος· τὸ δὲ ἄγαλμα οὐκ ἐξειργάσθη τοῦ Διὸς ἐπιλαβόντος τοῦ Πελοποννησίων πολέμου πρὸς Ἀθηναίους,... τῷ δὲ ἀγάλματι τοῦ Διὸς πρόσωπον ἐλέφαντος καὶ χρυσοῦ, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ πηλοῦ τέ ἐστι καὶ γύψου· ποιῆσαι δὲ αὐτὸ Θεόκοσμον λέγουσιν ἐπιχώριον, συνεργάσασθαι δέ οἱ Φειδίαν. ὑπὲρ δὲ τῆς κεφαλῆς τοῦ Διός εἰσιν Ὧραι καὶ Μοῖραι· δῆλα δὲ πᾶσι τὴν Πεπρωμένην μόνῳ οἱ πείθεσθαι, καὶ τὰς ὥρας τὸν θεὸν τοῦτον νέμειν ἐς (so H. C. Schubart—E. C. Walz for εἰς) τὸ δέον. ὄπισθε δὲ τοῦ ναοῦ κεῖται ξύλα ἡμίεργα· ταῦτα ἔμελλεν ὁ Θεόκοσμος ἐλέφαντι καὶ χρυσῷ κοσμήσας τὸ ἄγαλμα ἐκτελέσειν τοῦ Διός, supra j. 2 n. 2). Imperial coppers of Megara show a seated Zeus holding a Nike (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Attica etc. p. 122 pl. 22, 1=my fig. 959, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 4 f. pl. A, 3, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 394) or an eagle (Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 5), which may be meant for Theokosmos' masterpiece, and a Zeus striding to the right with thunderbolt and eagle (Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 5 pl. A, 4=my fig. 960, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 394), in which—since the god sometimes has a base—we must recognise another statue (cp. Paus. 1. 40. 6 Διὸς Κονίου in a context cited supra p. 257 n. 4, Paus. 1. 43. 6 καὶ ἐν τῷ ναῷ τῷ πλησίον Μούσας καὶ χαλκοῦν Δία ἐποίησε Λύσιππος).

It remains to determine the place, time, and character of the Diasia. O. Band[1] and A. Mommsen[2] conclude in favour of the Ilissos-site. Not without reason; for here Zeus had been worshipped since the days of Deukalion[3], and here, on the north bank of the river, just outside the Themistoclean wall[4], there was convenient space for the people to assemble[5]. They did so on Antheſterion 22 or 23[6], which in the time of Plutarch would have corresponded with March 22 or 23[7]. The inference to be drawn from this dating is that the Diasia, like the Lesser Mysteries of Agra (c. Antheſterion 20[8]) or the Pithoigia, Chóes, and Chýtroi (Antheſterion 11—13[9]), had a character at once chthonian and agrarian[10]. Zeus Meilíchios, the buried king, was the giver of animal and vegetable life.

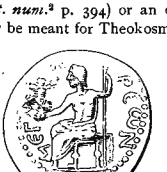

Fig. 959.

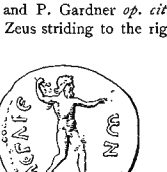

Fig. 960.

[1] O. Band Die Attischen Diasien Berlin 1883 p. 11.

[2] Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 421 f.

[3] Paus. 1. 18. 8, supra p. 420.

[4] Schol. Aristoph. nub. 408 ἑορτὴ Διὸς Ἀθήνησι τὰ Διάσια, ἐν ᾗ πανδημεὶ ἔξω τείχους συνόντες ἑορτάζουσιν (a paraphrase of Thouk. 1. 126 cited supra p. 1138 n. 2)=Favorin. lex. p. 492, 36 f.

[5] See A. N. Skias in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1893 pl. A.

The Ilissos-site is highly probable, but not absolutely certain; for the Kephisos-site (W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 p. 362 n. 5) likewise had claims to high antiquity and convenient proximity. It is not, however, so aptly described by the phrases ἔξω τῆς πόλεως, ἔξω τείχους, and its festal day appears to have been Hekatombaion 8 (supra p. 1091 f.).

[6] Schol. Aristoph. nub. 408 Διασίοισιν· ἑορτὴ Ἀθήνησι Μειλιχίου Διός. ἄγεται δὲ μηνὸς Ἀνθεστηριῶνος η' φθίνοντος. This would be Antheſterion 22 or 23, according as that month was 'full' (30 days) or 'hollow' (29 days): see the discussion and tables in A. Schmidt Handbuch der griechischen Chronologie Jena 1888 p. 200 ff.

[7] Plout. v. Sull. 14 ἐλεῖν δὲ τὰς Ἀθήνας αὐτὸς φησιν ἐν τοῖς ὑπομνήμασι (frag. 13 (Hist. Rom. frag. p. 131 Peter)) Μαρτίαις καλάνδαις, ἥτις ἡμέρα μάλιστα συμπίπτει τῇ νουμηνίᾳ τοῦ Ἀνθεστηριῶνος μηνός, ἐν ᾧ κατὰ τύχην ὑπομνήματα πολλὰ τοῦ διὰ τὴν ἐπομβρίαν ὀλέθρου καὶ τῆς φθορᾶς ἐκείνης δρῶσιν, ὡς τότε καὶ περὶ τὸν χρόνον ἐκεῖνον μάλιστα τοῦ κατακλυσμοῦ συμπεσόντος, infra § 9 (h) ii (ε).

[8] Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 406, supra i. 692 f.

[9] Mommsen op. cit. p. 384 ff., supra i. 684.

[10] Supra i. 687.

The ritual of the Diasia is imperfectly known. Thoukydides' statement that many, in lieu of 'victims,' offered 'sacrifices peculiar to the country' is annotated by the scholiast, who remarks (1) that 'victims' means sheep (próbata), and (2) that the 'sacrifices peculiar to the country' were cakes moulded into the forms of animals[1]. Both observations are credible. On the one hand, we have seen that the 'fleece of Zeus' was stripped from a victim sacrificed to Zeus Meilichios or to Zeus Ktêsios[2]. On the other hand, we hear[3] of a cult of Artemis at Syracuse, in which rustic singers were decked with a loaf that had wild beasts moulded upon it[4], a wallet full of mingled grain, and wine in a goat-skin for distribution to all and sundry. They wore garlands, had stag-horns on their foreheads, and carried a crook in their hands. Thus equipped they vied with each other in song: the victor received the loaf of the vanquished and stopped in Syracuse; the vanquished went about the neighbouring villages collecting food for themselves. Their songs were full of mirth and merriment, and ended with the stanza:

Here's wealth for you!
Here's health for you!
We bring you what the goddess sends,
A boon and blessing to her friends!

It would seem that at Athens the god, and at Syracuse the votary, accepted the cake or loaf moulded with animal forms as a surrogate for the animals themselves in accordance with a well-known principle of ancient ritual[5].

[1] Supra p. 1138 n. 2.

[2] Supra i. 422 ff. O. Band Die Attischen Diasien Berlin 1883 p. 4 (following E. F. Poppo on Thouk. 1. 126) à propos of the scholion Ἱερεῖα· πρόβατα says curtly 'Immo χοίρους.'

[3] Schol. Theokr. proleg. B εὕρεσις τῶν βουκολικῶν b p. 3, 2 ff. Wendel (cp. anecd. Estense 3. 1 p. 7, 11 ff. Wendel, Prob. in Verg. ecl. p. 347 f. Lion, Diomed. art. gramm. 3 p. 486, 27 ff. Keil: Probus and Diomedes connect the custom with the cult of Diana Lyaea ᾄδειν δέ φασιν αὐτοὺς ἄρτον ἐξηρτημένους θηρίων ἐν ἑαυτῷ πλέοναις τύποις ἔχοντα καὶ πήραν πανσπερμίας ἀνάπλεων καὶ οἶνον ἐν αἰγείῳ ἀσκῷ, σπονδὴν νέμοντας τοῖς ὑπαντῶσι, στέφανόν τε περικεῖσθαι καὶ κέρατα ἐλάφων προκεῖσθαι καὶ μετὰ χεῖρας ἔχειν λαγωβόλον. τὸν δὲ νικήσαντα λαμβάνειν τὸν τοῦ νενικημένου ἄρτον· κἀκεῖνον μὲν ἐπὶ τῆς τῶν Συρακουσίων μένειν πόλεως, τοὺς δὲ νενικημένους εἰς τὰς περιοικίδας χωρεῖν ἀγείροντας ἑαυτοῖς τὰς τροφάς· ᾄδειν (so H. Schaefer for διδόναι codd.) δὲ ἄλλα τινὰ παιδιᾶς καὶ γέλωτος ἐχόμενα καὶ εὐφημοῦντας ἐπιλέγειν· 'δέξαι τὰν ἀγαθὰν τύχαν, | δέξαι τὰν ὑγίειαν, | ἃν φέρομες παρὰ τᾶς (so F. G. Schneidewin for τῆς E[b]. A.T. τοῦ K.) θεοῦ, ἂν ἐκαλέσσατο (ἐκλελάσκετο K. A. H. Ahrens cj. ᾗ 'κελήσατο C. Wendel cj. ἐκλάσκετο or ἐλακήσατο) τήνα (carm. pop. 42 Bergk[4], 45 Hiller—Crusius).

[4] ? cp. Athen. 646 E ἔλαφος πλακοῦς ὁ τοῖς Ἐλαφηβολίοις ἀναπλασσόμενος διὰ σταιτὸς καὶ μέλιτος καὶ σησάμου.

[5] Serv. in Verg. Aen. 2. 116 et sciendum in sacris simulata pro veris accipi. unde, cum de animalibus quae difficile inveniuntur est sacrificandum, de pane vel cera fiunt et pro veris accipiuntur. Lobeck Aglaophamus ii. 1079 ff. and Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Spirits of Corn and Wild ii. 95 n. 2 have made full collections of the literary evidence. Countless archaeological finds illustrate the same principle: see W. H. D. Rouse Greek Votive Offerings Cambridge 1902 p. 295 ff. To take a single case, the pig for sacrifice might be replaced by a dog dressed in a pig-skin (so on a red-figured kýlix at Vienna (Masner Samml. ant. Vasen u. Terracotten Wien p. 40 f. no. 321 fig. 24, F. Studniczka 'Ein Opferbetrug des Hermes' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1891 vi. 258 ff. fig., J. E. Harrison—D. S. MacColl Greek Vase Paintings London 1894 p. 25 pl. 33, 1)), or by a terra-cotta pig (so with those from the precinct of Demeter and Kore at Tegea (Brit. Mus. Cat. Terracottas pp. xxxviii f., 78 no. B 46, A. Milchhöfer in the Ath.

Kylon's mistake suggests that already in the seventh century the Diasia was past its zenith. But popular rites die hard. Two hundred years later old-fashioned folk still thought of the family feast and the public fair. Aristophanes makes Strepsiades tell with gusto how once at the Diasia he roasted a haggis for his kinsmen[1], and how on a like occasion he spent an obol on a toy-cart for his little son[2]. This is the last that we hear of the festival for more than half a millennium. Then came Lucian with his marvellous talent for galvanizing the past into a semblance of life. In the Ikaromenippos Zeus asks 'why the Athenians had dropped the Diasia all those years[3].' In the Timon Hermes jogs the memory of Zeus himself:

'What, Father! Don't you know Timon—son of Echekratides, of Kollytos? Many's the time he's entertained us on perfect sacrifices, the wealthy parvenu of the whole hecatombs, with whom we used to feast like lords at the Diasia[4].'

In the Charidemos there is a reference to literary competitions at the same festival[5].

A stage more remote from the original facts was Eumathios Makrembolites, the Byzantine novelist (second half of s. xii A.D.) who penned the Romance of Hysmine and Hysminias. He laid its scene in the imaginary towns of Eurykomis and Aulikomis and dealt largely with the circumstances of the Diasia. The hero, Hysminias, wearing a bay-wreath, a long chitón, and sacred shoes[6], went as herald of Zeus from the former to the latter town, where he was received as a god[7] and entertained in the name of Zeus[8], but proved himself to be very human by falling in love with Hysmine the daughter of his host. She, however, was betrothed to another; and her parents, who had escorted the herald back to Eurykomis, offered there at the altar of Zeus a sacrifice for the future happiness of their daughter. Thereupon an eagle swooped down and carried off the sacrifice. The parents were much upset at this evil omen[9]. But some of the bystanders took it to be a most auspicious sign[10]. And a friend of Hysminias pointed out to him that he might be the eagle, and carry off the bride[11]—which he proceeded to do. We need not trace at greater length his rather banal escapades and adventures. But we should note that the god, whom he served so unworthily, is throughout spoken of as Zeus or Zeus Pátrios[12] or Zeus Phílios[13] or Zeus Sotér[14]

Mitth. 1879 iv. 171, 174, C. A. Hutton Greek Terracotta Statuettes London 1899 p. 3 f.) or from that of Persephone at Tarentum (Sir A. J. Evans in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1886 vii. 24, W. H. D. Rouse op. cit. p. 301)), or even by a ham-shaped coin (so with the curious coppers from the fountain at Nîmes (L. de la Saussaye Numismatique de la Gaule Narbonnaise Blois 1842 p. 159 pl. 20, 36, G. Long in Smith Dict. Geogr. ii. 414 f. fig., A. Boutkowski Dictionnaire Numismatique Leipzig 1884 ii. 1. 1738 f. no. 2833 fig., E. Muret—M. A. Chabouillet Catalogue des monnaies gauloises de la Bibliothèque Nationale Paris 1889 p. 61 no. 2839, H. de la Tour Atlas de monnaies gauloises Paris 1892 no. 2839 pl. 7, G. F. Hill A Handbook of Greek and Roman Coins London 1899 p. 3 f. fig. 2, Babelon Monn. gr. rom. i. 1. 675 f.)).

[1] Aristoph. nub. 408 ff.
[2] Id. ib. 861 ff.
[3] Loukian. Icaromen. 24.
[4] Loukian. Tim. 7.
[5] Loukian. Charid. 1, cp. 3.
[6] Eumath. 1. 1 f., 1. 7, 4. 3, 4. 24, 5. 3, 8. 10, 8. 13, cp. 8. 19, 8. 21.
[7] Id. 1. 3 δέχομαι παρ' αὐτοῖς οὐχ ὡς κήρυξ, ἀλλ' ὡς θεός.
[8] Id. 1. 10 Διασίων καιρός, κατατρυφήσωμεν τὰ Διάσια· ὅλοι γευώμεθα τῆς ἑορτῆς, ὅλοι τῆς πανηγύρεως. Ζεὺς παρὰ τῇ τραπέζῃ, καὶ Διὸς τράπεζα, ὅτι καὶ ὁ κήρυξ οὗτος Διός: cp. 6. 2.
[9] Id. 6. 10.
[10] Id. 6. 11.
[11] Id. 6. 13.
[12] Id. 6. 10.
[13] Id. 3. 9, 5. 18.
[14] Id. 4. 2, 5. 15, 6. 2, 6. 15, cp. 1. 14.

or Zeus Xénios[1], but never as Zeus Meilíchios—a sufficient proof that the author, though he works up his material with some care, has not preserved to us a trustworthy record of Athenian cult.

The scholiast on Lucian, who here and there makes valuable remarks, tells us more than once that the Diasia was kept at Athens 'with gloomy looks,' such as befitted the worship of the dead[2]. This agrees well with other indications concerning the ritual of Zeus Meilíchios. An old Attic calendar, the lettering of which has been referred to the early part of s. V B.C., mentions 'sober' offerings to Milíchios side by side with offerings to Meter at some date before the end of Gamelion[3]. Now 'sober' offerings consisted in the main of honey[4], and were specially, though not exclusively, given to chthonian powers (Gaia[5], the Bona Dea[6], Dis[7], Hekate[8], the Eumenides[9], Kerberos[10]) and the souls of the dead[11]. The same might be said of the pigs sacrificed to Zeus Meilíchios at the Peiraieus[12] and by Xenophon 'in accordance with his ancestral custom[13].' In short, we have every reason to conclude that at Athens the cult of Zeus Meilíchios was essentially chthonian—the worship of a buried king, who during his life-time had been hailed as the sky-god incarnate and still was present to bless his people with increase of field and flock and family.

[1] Eumath. 5. 8 f., 5. 14 f., 6. 1 f., 6. 9, 11. 3.

At the altar of this deity, who is called indifferently Zeus Σωτήρ or Zeus Ξένιος, the parents sacrifice about the third watch of the night (id. 5. 15, 6. 5, 6. 14, 6. 16, cp. 10. 9).

[2] Schol. Loukian. Icaromen. 24 p. 107, 15 f. Rabe Διάσια· ἑορτὴ Ἀθήνησιν, ἣν ἐπετέλουν μετά τινος στυγνότητος θύοντες ἐν αὐτῷ Διὶ Μειλιχίῳ, Tim. 7 p. 110, 27 f. Rabe Διάσια· ἑορτὴ Ἀθήνησιν οὕτω καλουμένη, ἣν εἰώθεσαν μετὰ στυγνότητός τινος ἐπιτελεῖν θύοντες Διὶ τῷ Μειλιχίῳ, Tim. 43 p. 117, 14 ff. Rabe ἀποφράς·...ἐτελεῖτο δὲ ταῦτα κατὰ τὸν Φεβρουάριον μῆνα, ὅτε καὶ τοῖς καταχθονίοις ἐνήγιζον. καὶ πᾶς οὖτος ὁ μὴν ἀνεῖτο τοῖς κατοιχομένοις μετὰ στυγνότητος πάντων προϊόντων † ἕτερον † τρόπον, ὃν καὶ τὰ Διάσια στυγνάζοντες ἄγουν Ἀθηναῖοι. M. du Soul marked ἕτερον as corrupt. T. Hemsterhusius cj. ἐνέρων. Graeven cj. οὐχ ἕτερον. O. Band Die Attischen Diasien Berlin 1883 p. 6 regards ἕτερον as euphemistic. If alteration is needed, perhaps we should read σκυθρωπότερον. Cp. Hesych. Διάσια· ἑορτὴ Ἀθήνησι. καὶ σκυθρωποὺς ἀπὸ τῆς ἑορτῆς ἣν ἐπετέλουν μετά τινος στυγνότητος θύοντες, on which M. Schmidt acutely observes: 'Fortasse comicus dixerat βλέποντας Διάσια.'

[3] Corp. inscr. Att. i no. 4 A, 3 ff., J. de Prott Leges Graecorum sacrae Lipsiae 1896 Fasti sacri p. 1 ff. no. 1 A, 3 ff. Θάρ[γελοι? – – Διὶ Μ]ει[λ]ιχίοι : ε[– – – – – νεφ]άα : Μετρὶ : [ἐν Ἄγρας – – –][.]σπυριχεια – – – – – – –. Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 421 infers that Zeus Milíchios and Meter (=Demeter) were worshipped in or near Agra on the Ilissos: cp. supra p. 1118 n. 4.

[4] W. H. Roscher Nektar und Ambrosia Leipzig 1883 p. 64 n. 167, id. Über Selene und Verwandtes Leipzig 1890 p. 49 n. 199, W. Robert-Tornow De apium mellisque apud veteres significatione et symbolica et mythologica Berolini 1893 p. 144, Journ. Hell. Stud. 1895 xv. 20 f.

[5] Ap. Rhod. 2. 1271 ff.

[6] Macrob. Sat. 1. 12. 25.

[7] Sil. It. 13. 415 f. For bees and honey in relation to Demeter and Persephone see supra i. 443 n. 6 f., ii. 1113 n. 0 no. (3).

[8] Ap. Rhod. 3. 1035 f.

[9] Aisch. Eum. 106 f., Soph. O.C. 98 ff., 480 ff. with schol. ad loc., Paus. 2. 11. 4.

[10] Verg. Aen. 6. 417 ff., Souid. s.v. μελιτοῦττα=schol. Aristoph. Lys. 601.

[11] Il. 23. 170 f., Od. 10. 518 ff., 11. 26 ff., 24. 67 f., Aisch. Pers. 607 ff., Eur. Or. 114 f. with schol. ad loc., I.T. 159 ff., 633 ff., Ap. Rhod. 2. 1271 ff., Souid. s.v. μελιτοῦττα=schol. Aristoph. Lys. 601. See further H. Usener 'Milch und Honig' in the Rhein. Mus. 1902 lvii. 177—195 (=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 398—417) and S. Eitrem Opferritus und Voropfer der Griechen und Römer (Videnskapsselskapets Skrifter. II. Hist.-Filos. Klasse. 1914. No. 1) Kristiania 1915 pp. 102—105.

[12] Supra p. 1105.

[13] Supra p. 1107.

(8) Zeus Meilichios at Argos.

Outside Athens the cult of Zeus Meilichios seems to have borne a similar character. Thus at Argos there was a seated statue of Zeus Meilichios, made of white marble by Polykleitos (so it was said) to purify the people from the stain of kindred bloodshed[1]. Argive coppers of imperial date show several types of Zeus. Coins of Hadrian (fig. 961) and Lucius Verus give his head alone[2]. Others, struck by Antoninus Pius, Marcus Aurelius, and Lucius Verus (fig. 962), represent

Fig. 961.

Fig. 962.

Fig. 963.

Fig. 964.

him enthroned with a phidle in his right hand and a sceptre in his left[3]. Others of Septimius Severus and Plautilla (fig. 963) make him hold an eagle or a Nike in place of the phiále[4]. On others, again, struck by Hadrian, Marcus Aurelius (fig. 964), Septimius Severus, Iulia Domna, Plautilla, and Valerianus Senior, he stands, naked, with a sceptre in his right hand and an eagle at his feet[5]; while yet another, by Plautilla, figures him striding, naked, with eagle and thunderbolt in his hands[6]. F. Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner suggest that the Zeus enthroned with phidle and sceptre (fig. 962) may be Zeus Meilichios, and add that the head

[1] Paus. 2. 20. 1 f. with Sir J. G. Frazer and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc. The statue has been attributed to the elder Polykleitos by Overbeck Schriftquellen p. 168 no. 941 and Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 50 f. (but see infra), G. Löschcke in the Arch. Zeit. 1878 xxxvi. 11 n. 12, Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. i. 486, to the younger Polykleitos by H. Brunn Geschichte der griechischen Künstler Stuttgart 1857 i. 280 f. and in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1880 p. 469, Overbeck Gr. Plastik[4] i. 508 f. (but see supra). Both attributions are called in question by C. Robert Archaeologische Maerchen aus alter und neuer Zeit Berlin 1886 p. 102, Furtwängler Masterpieces of Gk Sculpt. p. 224, E. A. Gardner A Handbook of Greek Sculpture London 1897 ii. 332 n. 1. To me it seems clear (1) that Pausanias meant the elder and more famous Polykleitos, but (2) that marble was an improbable material for such a statue by him, and (3) that an obvious ground for the false ascription of the seated Zeus to him lay in the fact that he was the sculptor of the seated Hera (supra i. 134 f.).

[2] Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 36 pl. K, 27 = my fig. 961, Rasche Lex. Num. i. 1082.

[3] Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 36 pl. K, 25 = my fig. 962.

[4] Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 36 pl. K, 26 = my fig. 963.

[5] Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 36 pl. K, 28 = my fig. 964, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 148 pl. 28, 10 Hadrian, p. 150 Septimius Severus (with wrong reference to pl. 28, 21), Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 154 pl. 39, 13 Valerianus Senior, Rasche Lex. Num. i. 1083 Iulia Domna, Suppl. i. 1033 Septimius Severus, cp. 1034 Plautilla. Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner loc. cit., id. in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 148 n.* cp. Paus. 2. 20. 3 τούτων δὲ ἀπαντικρὺ Νεμείου Διός ἐστιν ἱερόν, ἄγαλμα ὀρθὸν χαλκοῦν, τέχνη Λυσίππου (where H. C. Schubart cj. <τὸ> ἄγαλμα, but H. C. Schubart—E. C. Walz and Kayser omit ἱερόν with cod. Leid. a).

[6] Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 36, Rasche Lex. Num. Suppl. i. 1034.

of Zeus (fig. 961) being 'decidedly fine and early' is perhaps 'a reminiscence of the head of Polycleitus' statue[1].' But, in view of the large number of Argive Zeuses[2], these conjectures are admittedly uncertain.

(9) Zeus Meilichios at Sikyon.

From Argos to Sikyon[3], as the crow flies, is less than five-and-twenty miles. But in their representation of Zeus Meilichios Argives and Sicyonians differed toto caelo. The former could boast a masterpiece shown to visitors as the work of Polykleitos himself; the latter were content with an artless pyramid, not even anthropomorphic[4]. Why Zeus was given this peculiar shape, we are not told.

[1] Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 36.

[2] In addition to references already given (supra i. 117 Zeus 'Αφέσιος, 122 f. Zeus Λαρισαῖος, 134 f. Zeus as a cuckoo, 320 and 462 Zeus with three eyes, 448 and 456 Zeus Νέμειος, 461 Zeus Πανόπτης, ii. 704 ff. Zeus as a cuckoo, 712 ff. Zeus as partner of Hera, 875 n. 2 Zeus Φαλακρός, 892 n. 5 Zeus Λαρισσαῖος, Λαρισσεύς) see Paus. 2. 19. 7 Δαναὸς δὲ ταῦτά τε ἀνέθηκε καὶ πλησίον κίονας ἓξ < > Διὸς καὶ 'Αρτέμιδος ξόανον (so most MSS. and H. C. Schubart, who indicated the lacuna: he is followed by Sir J. G. Frazer and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner. Some of the older editors read ἐς Διός with cod. Paris c. H. C. Schubart—E. C. Walz, L. Dindorf, and F. Spiro print καὶ Διὸς after cod. Vindob. a. Clavier cj. ὡς Διός. A. Kuhn cj. ξόανα) where we should perhaps correct ἐκ Διὸς <κελεύσματος> (cp. supra i. 371 n. 1) and suppose a pillar-cult of some sort, 2. 19. 8 βωμὸς Τετίου Διός (infra § 9 (h)), 2. 20. 6 καὶ Διὸς ἐστιν ἐνταῦθα ἱερὸν Σωτῆρος, 2. 21. 2 πρὸ δὲ αὐτοῦ πεποίηται Διὸς Φυξίου βωμός, 2. 22. 2 πέραν δὲ τοῦ τάφου (sc. of Pelasgos) χαλκεῖόν ἐστιν οὐ μέγα, ἀνέχει δὲ αὐτὸ ἀγάλματα ἀρχαῖα 'Αρτέμιδος καὶ Διὸς καὶ 'Αθηνᾶς. Λυκέας μὲν οὖν ἐν τοῖς ἔπεσιν ἐποίησε Μηχανέως τὸ ἄγαλμα εἶναι Διός, καὶ 'Αργείων ἔφη τοὺς ἐπὶ "Ιλιον στρατεύσαντας ἐνταῦθα ὁμόσαι παραμενεῖν (so H. C. Schubart—E. C. Walz for παραμένειν codd.) πολεμοῦντας, ἕστ' ἂν ἡ τὸ "Ιλιον ἕλωσιν ἢ μαχομένους τελευτὴ σφᾶς ἐπιλάβῃ· ἑτέροις δέ ἐστιν εἰρημένον ὅστᾳ ἐν τῷ χαλκείῳ κεῖσθαι Ταντάλου. The word χαλκεῖον, which has been much misunderstood (see H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc.), presumably means a bronze cista. On the lid of it stood three archaic figures—an arrangement familiar to us from extant specimens (e.g. the 'Ficoroni'-cista, on which see Gerhard Etr. Spiegel ii. 14 ff. pl. 2, P. O. Brondsted den Ficoroniske Cista Kjöbenhavn 1847, E. Braun Die Ficoronische Cista des collegio Romano Leipzig 1849, O. Jahn Die Ficoronische Cista Leipzig 1852, Baumeister Denkm. i. 453 f. fig. 500, Forrer Reallex. p. 148 f. fig. 146; the handle of another cista from Palestrina in Brit. Mus. Cat. Bronzes p. 106 no. 643). Lykeas, as an Argive poet (Paus. 1. 13. 8 f., 2. 19. 5, 2. 23. 8), followed local tradition. And it is possible that the bones in the cista really were those of some early chieftain worshipped after his death as Zeus Μηχανεύς (for whom see infra § 9 (h) i). Argive inscriptions further allude to the cult of Zeus Νέμειος (Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 602, 14 ff. καὶ θύσαν|τα τῶ Διὶ τῶ Νεμείω ἑκατόμ|βην, ib. no. 606, 11 f. = Corp. inscr. Gr. i no. 1123, 12 f. = W. Prellwitz in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. ii. 1. 131 f. no. 3293, 12 f. θύσαντά τε καὶ τῶ Διὶ τῶ Νεμείω ἑκα|τόνβαν πρῶτον καὶ μόνον) and Zeus "Υψιστος (Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 620, 4 = Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 465. 8 = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 2. 286. 8 cited supra p. 878 n. 0 no. (4)).

[3] I pass by Epidauros, because the evidence for a cult of Zeus Meilichios in that town is small—in fact depends on the suggested interpretation of a single letter. See J. Baunack 'Zu den Inschriften aus Epidauros' in Philologus 1895 liv. 37: 'Nr. 125 h. bei K. [= P. Kabbadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 p. 57] nur 'Αφροδίτας μιλιχίας. Bl. (Askl. S. 123) [= C. Blinkenberg Asklepios og hans fraender i Hieron ved Epidauros Kobenhavn 1893 p. 123 no. 7] merkt darauf einen Zwischenraum von etwa 2 Zeichen an und hierauf ein Δ, was er ansprechend als den Anfang einer zweiten Inschrift Δ[ιὸς μιλιχίου] erklärt,' Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1272 in letters of s. iii B.C. ΑΦΡΟΔΙΤΑΣΜΙΛΙΧΙΑΣ| |ΔΣΝ = 'Αφροδίτας Μιλιχίας. Δι[ὸς Μιλιχίου].

[4] Paus. 2. 9. 6 cited supra i. 520 n. 2.

I do not, of course, mean to imply that the Sicyonians were averse from the Zeus-types

It is tempting to conjecture that his pyramid betokened a buried king. For tombs of pyramidal form occur sporadically from Egypt to Italy[1]; and, if Eumelos of later art. A 'third brass' of Geta shows Zeus seated with a phiále in his right hand, a sceptre in his left (Rasche Lex. Num. viii. 912, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 29). A copper of Caracalla (?) has CI KVW N Zeus standing to the left, naked, with thunderbolt in right hand, sceptre in left (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 55, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 29 pl. H, 10=my fig. 965): cp. the obverse type of a quasi-autonomous coin in Nummismata antiqua in tres partes divisa, collegit Thomas Pembrochiæ et Montis Gomerici comes Londinii 1746 ii pl. 28, 11, Rasche Lex. Num. viii. 910 Zeus standing, naked, with Nike in his right hand and a sceptre in his left. Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner loc. cit. rightly see in the British Museum coin an illustration of Paus. 2. 9. 6 τῆς δὲ ἀγορᾶς ἐστιν ἐν τῷ ὑπαίθρῳ Ζεὺς χαλκοῦς, τέχνη Ἀνσίππου (cp. Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 151 f.).

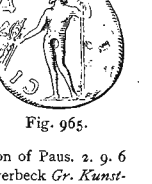

Fig. 965.

[1] A good collection of evidence is got together by R. Rochette 'Sur la pyra, comme type de monument funéraire' in the Mémoires de l'Institut National de France Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres 1848 xvii. 388—401, who derives pyramidal tombs from pyramidal pyres. Without necessarily subscribing to this view, we may admit that pyres and similar structures of funerary import must be taken into account along with actual tombs. A rough classification of the relevant monuments according to form would include (a) stepped pyramids, (b) smooth-sided pyramids, (c) stepped pyramids on plinths, (d) smooth-sided pyramids on plinths. Examples are :—

(a) The stepped pyramid at Saqqâra built by Zosiri of the third dynasty (G. Maspero The Dawn of Civilization[4] London 1901 p. 359, E. A. Wallis Budge A History of Egypt London 1902 i. 193, 218 f. fig., J. H. Breasted A History of Egypt New York 1911 p. 113 f. fig. 63, E. Bell The Architecture of Ancient Egypt London 1915 p. 23 ff. fig.), or that at Riqqeh, whose occupant is unknown (G. Maspero op. cit.[4] p. 359 n. 3), or again that at Mêdûm built by Snofrûi the last king of the third dynasty, though this at least was probably meant to be cased with polished stone (G. Maspero op. cit.[4] p. 359 f. fig., E. A. Wallis Budge op. cit. ii. 24 f. fig., J. H. Breasted op. cit. p. 115 fig. 64, E. Bell op. cit. p. 25 f. fig.). The form has traceable antecedents, viz. the four-sided tumulus → the brick-built mastaba → the stone-built mastaba → a series of stone-built mastaba superposed = a stepped pyramid.

(b) The fully developed pyramids of Egypt, those of Kenchreai (A. Blouet etc. Expédition scientifique de Morée Paris 1833 ii. 92 pl. 55, 1—3, Frazer Pausanias iii. 212—214, v. 565 f.) and Ligourio near Epidauros (A. Blouet etc. op. cit. ii. 164 pl. 76, 2 f., Frazer Pausanias iii. 233, v. 570), that at Astros in Kynouria (W. Vischer Erinnerungen und Eindrücke aus Griechenland Basel 1857 p. 327), that of Cestius on the via Ostiensis (A. Schneider Das alte Rom Leipzig 1896 pl. 4, 15, O. Richter Topographie der Stadt Rom[2] München 1901 p. 355, H. Jordan—C. Huelsen Topographie der Stadt Rom im Alterthum Berlin 1907 i. 3. 179 f.), if not also the one formerly existing near the Mausoleum of Hadrian and known to the middle ages, or earlier (Acron in Hor. epod. 9. 25), as the sepulcrum Scipionis or Romuli (O. Richter op. cit.[2] p. 280, H. Jordan—C. Huelsen op. cit. i. 3. 659 f., H. Jordan ib. Berlin 1871 ii. 405 f.). A pyramid of the sort is grouped with a warrior or gladiator (bustuarius?) in two different gem-types (E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 755 fig. 898, Reinach Pierres Gravées p. 65 no. 73, 5 pl. 65; Reinach op. cit. p. 83 no. 90 pl. 80).

(c) The stepped tomb of 'Kyros' on the site of Pasargadai (C. F. M. Texier Description de l'Arménie, la Perse et la Mésopotamie Paris 1852 ii. 152 ff. pls. 81—83, Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art v. 597 ff. figs. 375—377, J. Fergusson A History of Architecture in all Countries[3] London 1893 i. 196 ff. figs. 84—86) can hardly be said to have a plinth, but forms the starting-point for such edifices as the lion-tomb at Knidos (Sir C. T. Newton A is to be trusted, the eponymous king Sikyon, son of Marathon son of Epopeus, came of a family in which we have already seen reason to suspect successive incarnations of Zeus[1]. To be sure, there were rival traditions with regard to Sikyon. Hesiod made him the son of Erechtheus[2]. Asios the Samian genealogist[3] took him to be the son of Metion son of Erechtheus, and this view was preferred by the Sicyonians themselves[4]. Finally, Ibykos deemed him the son of Pelops[5]. But the variants each and all suggest close connexion with Zeus. Erechtheús, the 'Cleaver,' was a cult-title of Zeus the lightning-god[6]. Metíon is History of Discoveries at Halicarnassus, Cnidus, and Branchidæ London 1862—1863 i pls. 61—66, ii. 480—511, id. Travels & Discoveries in the Levant London 1865 ii. 214 ff., Brit. Mus. Cat. Sculpture ii. 214 ff. no. 1350, J. Fergusson op. cit.[3] i. 284 f. fig. 164, P. Gardner Sculptured Tombs of Hellas London 1896 p. 224 ff. fig. 77), the Mausoleion of Halikarnassos, the stepped tomb at Mylasa (M. G. F. A. Comte de Choiseul-Gouffier Voyage pittoresque de la Grèce Paris 1782 i. 144 ff. pls. 85—89, Antiquities of Ionia published by the Society of Dilettanti London 1797 ii. 26 pls. 24—26, C. Fellows An Account of Discoveries in Lycia London 1841 p. 75 f. with pl.), and that near Delphoi (E. Dodwell Views and Descriptions of Cyclopian, or, Pelasgic Remains, in Greece and Italy London 1834 p. 20 pl. 36 f.).

(d) A good specimen of the smooth-sided pyramid on plinth is the tomb of 'Zechariah' in the Valley of Jehoshaphat near Jerusalem (T. H. Horne Landscape Illustrations of the Bible London 1836 i pl. 93 with text). See also supra i. 515 n. 5 fig. 388, ii. 814 f. fig. 781, cp. i. 600 ff. figs. 465—468.

Further cp. the pyramids built above the rock-cut tombs of the Maccabees at Modin (Macc. 1. 13. 25—30, Ioseph. ant. Iud. 13. 6. 5, Euseb. onomasticon de locis Hebraicis s.v. Μοδεὶμ p. 290, 4 ff. F. Larsow—G. Parthey = Hieron. de situ et noninibus locorum Hebraicorum s.v. 'Modeim' p. 291, 6 ff. F. Larsow—G. Parthey: see V. Guérin Description géographique, historique et archéologique de la Palestine Paris 1868—1880 Seconde partie—Samarie ii. 55 ff. with two pls., Troisième partie—Galilée i. 47 ff., Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art iv. 361), the three pyramids built near Jerusalem by Helene, sister and wife of Monobazos Bazaios king of Adiabene (Ioseph. ant. Iud. 20. 4. 3, bell. Iud. 5. 2. 2, 5. 3. 3, 5. 4. 2, Paus. 8. 16. 5, Euseb. hist. eccl. 2. 12. 3, Hieron. epist. 108. 9 (xxii. 883 Migne): see W. Otto in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 2836 f.), the pyramid, decorated with Argive shields, beneath which the followers of Proitos and Akrisios were buried (Paus. 2. 25. 7), the pyramidal tombs built by Hieron ii at Agyrion in Sicily (Diod. 16. 83), those made for horses at Agrigentum (Plin. nat. hist. 8. 155), the rock-cut 'Sepolcro Consolare' at Palazzola (Palazzuolo) above the Alban Lake (A. Nibby Viaggio antiquario ne' contorni di Roma Roma 1819 ii. 125 f.), the 'Sepolcro di Pompeo' or, as the folk of the district call it, 'di Ascanio' on the via Appia near Albano (A. Nibby op. cit. ii. 110—112), and another tomb near Capua (J. C. Richard de Saint-Non Voyage pittoresque ou description des royaumes de Naples et de Sicile Paris 1781—1786 ii. 249).

All these and other related types (cones etc.) ought to be made the subject of a thoroughgoing investigation. It would, no doubt, be found that the structures in question were produced by a combination of factors, some of practical exigency, some of symbolic significance. I shall content myself with suggesting that one root-idea was that of a mountain reaching up to heaven—an idea comparable with those of the sky-pillar (supra p. 44 ff.), the soul-ladder (supra p. 121 ff.), the stepped or spiral tower (supra p. 128 f.).

[1] Supra i. 245 ff.

[2] Hes. frag. 229 Flach, 102 Rzach ap. Paus. 2. 6. 5.

[3] E. Bethe in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1606, W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[5] München 1908 i. 125.

[4] Asios frag. 11 Kinkel ap. Paus. 2. 6. 5.

[5] Ibyk. frag. 48 Bergk[4] ap. Paus. 2. 6. 5.

[6] Supra p. 793.

but another form of metieta, metióeis, Zeus the 'Magician[1].' And Pelops too we have regarded as in some sense a human Zeus[2]. Nevertheless I should not insist on the Sicyonian pyramid as sepulchral in character; for it must not be forgotten that at Tegea the pyramid-on-pillar was a favourite type for the representation of deities in general[3].

(10) Zeus Meilichios at Tegea.

From Tegea comes a dedication, of s. ii B.C. or earlier, to Zeus Melíchios[4]. W. Immerwahr holds that the cult was of recent introduction[5]. But Tegea was an ancient Arcadian town[6], and there is some ground for thinking that the Tegeates, like the Athenians, recognised the divinity of their early kings. At Athens—it will be remembered—the dead king seems to have been known as Zeus Sotér or Téleios[7]; and at Tegea Zeus Téleios had an altar and a square image (presumably a pyramid-on-pillar) of the usual Arcadian type[8]. Moreover, there are scattered indications that something rather like the Erechtheion and its royal worship existed at one time in Tegea. Aleos, the founder of the town[9], was, like Erechtheus[10], a quasi-divine king, whose head as shown on autonomous coppers closely resembles that of Zeus (fig. 966)[11]. His house, like the house of Erechtheus, was still to be seen in Pausanias' time[12]. Again, Aleos instituted the cult of Athena Aléa[13] and established his kingdom in connexion with her sanctuary[14]. This suggests that he stood to her in the same sort of relation as Erechtheus to Athena Poliás. Further hints help to fill in the picture: Athena Aléa had a sacred couch in her temple[15], was served by a boy-priest[16], and on occasion received the

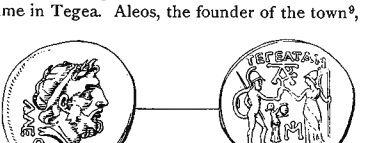

Fig. 966.

[1] Supra i. 14 n. 1. [2] Supra i. 139. [3] Supra i. 520 n. 1, ii. 814 f.

[4] O. Hoffmann Die Griechischen Dialekte Göttingen 1891 i. 33 no. 49, Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 1092, Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. ii no. 90 Διὶ Μελιχί|ωι Μικύλο|ς ἀνέθηκε where F. Hiller von Gaertringen notes: 'Forma Λ et dativus in -ωι alterius, sed Μελ-pro Μειλ quarti potius saeculi a. Chr. esse videtur.'

[5] Immerwahr Kult. Myth. Arkad. p. 30.

[6] There was another Τεγέα in Crete, founded by Talthybios (Steph. Byz. s.v. Τέγεα) or Agamemnon (Vell. Pat. 1. 1. 2). Conversely, Tegea in Arkadia had its ὄρος...Κρήσιον (Paus. 8. 44. 7).

[7] Supra p. 1123.

[8] Paus. 8. 48. 6 πεποίηται δὲ καὶ Διὸς Τελείου βωμὸς καὶ ἄγαλμα τετράγωνον· περισσῶς γὰρ δή τι τῷ σχήματι τούτῳ φαίνονταί μοι χαίρειν οἱ Ἀρκάδες.

[9] Paus. 8. 45. 1. [10] Supra p. 793 f.

[11] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 202 pl. 37, 19 (=my fig. 966), Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 163, W. M. Leake Numismata Hellenica London 1856 European Greece p. 98, F. Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Com. Paus. ii. 108 f. pl. V, 23, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 455: autonomous copper struck after c. 146 B.C. obv. ΑΛΕΟΣ Bearded head of Aleos to right, wearing fillet; rev. ΤΕΓΕΑΤΑΝ Athena handing to Kepheus the hair of the Gorgon, while Sterope holds up a vase to receive it. In the field are two monograms.

[12] Paus. 8. 53. 10. [13] Paus. 8. 4. 8, 8. 45. 4.

[14] Paus. 8. 4. 8. [15] Paus. 8. 47. 2.

[16] Paus. 8. 47. 3 ἱερᾶται δὲ τῇ Ἀθηνᾷ παῖς χρόνον οὐκ οἶδα ὅσον τινά, πρὶν δὲ ἡβάσκειν καὶ οὐ πρόσω, τὴν ἱερωσύνην with Sir J. G. Frazer and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc.

gift of a péplos[1]. Notice too that, just as the safety of Athens depended on the snake kept in the Erechtheion[2], so the safety of Tegea depended on a lock of Medousa's hair which Athena had given to Kepheus son of Aleos[3]. The coins represent Kepheus' daughter Sterope receiving it in a jar (fig. 966)[4]. And it is permissible to conjecture that both at Athens and at Tegea the original talisman[5] was the soul of the ancestral king living on as a snake[6] in his burial jar[7]. The comparison will even take us a step further. The perpetual lamp of the Erechtheion[8] was but a civilised form of the perpetual fire burning on the common hearth of a primitive folk[9]. Now Pausanias says: 'The Tegeates have also what they call the common hearth of the Arcadians.... The high place on which stand most of the altars of the Tegeates is called after Zeus Klários[10]: plainly the god got his surname from the lot (klêros) cast on behalf of the sons of Arkas. The Tegeates celebrate a festival here every year[11].' Zeus Klários gave his name to the first of the four Tegeate tribes Klareôtis, Hippothoîtis, Apolloniâtis, Athaneâtis[12]. But the legend of the lot is probably due to a mis-

[1] Paus. 8. 5. 3.

[2] Frazer Pausanias ii. 168—170 collects the evidence. The precise position of the snake's hole is doubtful (W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 p. 250 f., M. L. D'Ooge The Acropolis of Athens New York 1908 p. 209). H. N. Fowler in the Papers of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens 1882—1883 Boston 1885 would seek it somewhere under the N. porch of the Erechtheion, a view approved by M. P. Nilsson in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1901 xxi. 329. Not improbably it is covered by the small round cistern of Turkish (?) origin still to be seen in the N.W. corner of the crypt beneath the N. porch (Πρακτικὰ τῆς ἐπὶ τοῦ Ἐρεχθείου ἐπιτροπῆς Athens 1853 pl. 3 = F. Thiersch in the Abh. d. bayer. Akad. 1857 Philos.-philol. Classe viii pl. 3 will provide a coloured plan and section. See also P. Cavvadias—G. Kawerau Die Ausgrabung der Akropolis Athens 1907 pl. Γ', and the remarks of E. M. Beulé L'Acropole d'Athènes Paris 1854 ii. 251 f., D'Ooge op. cit. p. 207).

[3] Paus. 8. 47. 5, cp. Apollod. 2. 7. 3, Phot. lex. s.v. πλόκιον Γοργάδος, Souid. s.v. πλόκιον Γοργάδος, Apostol. 14. 38.

[4] Cp. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Peloponnesus p. 203 pl. 37, 20, Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 163, W. M. Leake Numismata Hellenica London 1856 European Greece p. 98, F. Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. ii. 108 pl. V, 22, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 455: obv. Head of Eileithyia (?) with torch at her shoulder; rev. [T]ΕΓΕΑΤΑΝ and type as above described. In the field are two monograms.

[5] For other classical examples see Frazer Pausanias iv. 433 f. and Golden Bough[3]: Taboo p. 317, ib.[3]: Balder the Beautiful i. 83 n. 1.

[6] K. Tümpel in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1108 says 'βόστρυχος; ob vielmehr Schlange?'—an acute suggestion.

[7] Supra Append. H.

[8] Strab. 396, Plout. v. Num. 9, v. Sull. 13, Paus. 1. 26. 6 f., schol. Od. 19. 34.

[9] Sir J. G. Frazer 'The Prytaneum, the Temple of Vesta, the Vestals, Perpetual Fires' in the Journal of Philology 1885 xiv. 145 ff., id. Pausanias iv. 441 f., id. Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art ii. 253 ff., ib.[3]: Adonis Attis Osiris[3] ii. 174, id. Totemism and Exogamy London 1910 ii. 491, iii. 239.

[10] The high place in question (684[m] above sea-level) lies to the N. of the town and is now occupied by the modern village of Mertzaouzi. Another height (706[m]) to the N.W. of the town, the ancient citadel, is crowned by the village of Hagios Sostis (V. Bérard in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1892 xvi. 541 with pl. 13).

[11] Paus. 8. 53. 9 f. cited supra p. 874 n. 2.

[12] Paus. 8. 53. 6, supra p. 164 n. 6. G. Gilbert Handbuch der griechischen Staatsalterthümer Leipzig 1885 ii. 127 notes that, according to inscriptional evidence (Corp.

taken attempt to explain the title Klários, which has been better interpreted by F. Solmsen as 'god of the High Place' (Klários for Krārios*)[1]. Be that as it may[2], Zeus Klários was not improbably the old divine king buried under the common hearth of his people. If such were really the beliefs of the Tegeates, the cult of Zeus Meilichios, whether imported or not, would flourish in their midst.

(11) Zeus Meilichos or Milichos in Boiotia.

At Orchomenos in Boiotia, the great stronghold of the Aeolian Minyai[3], Zeus was worshipped under the title Meílichos. Towards the close of the third century B.C. a certain Anticharidas, priest of the god, brought forward a decree for the construction of a fountain in or near his sanctuary, the Meilíchion, in order that persons sacrificing there might have a convenient supply of drinkable water[4]. The connexion with water recalls the Meilíchios-cults of Athens[5] and prepares us to find that here too Zeus was a chthonian god with fertilising powers. Now Orchomenos the eponym of the town is said to have been the son inscr. Gr. i nos. 1513, 1514 = F. Bechtel in Collitz–Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 351 ff. no. 1231 = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 888 = Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. ii. no. 36 and F. Bechtel loc. cit. i. 357 ff. no. 1246 = Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. ii no. 38. Add Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. ii no. 6, 83 and 89, ii nos. 39, 40, 41, 173, 174), the names of the tribes were ἐπ' Ἀθαναίαν, Κραριῶται, Ἱπποθοῖται, Ἀπολλωνιᾶται. On their topographical distribution see V. Bérard in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1892 xvi. 549 with pl. 13.

[1] Supra p. 874 n. 2.

[2] Alii aliter. (1) M. Schmidt on Hesych. κλάρες· αἱ ἐπὶ ἑδάφους (so M. Musurus for ἐδάφου) ἑσχάραι suggests that Zeus Κλάριος of Tegea drew his title hence.

If Zeus Κλάριος was a god 'of Hearths,' his annual festival was presumably for the purpose of furnishing the people with new fire (Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Index p. 271 f.). This adds significance to a curious incident in the history of the town. According to Paus. 8. 53. 10, the Lacedaemonians once marched against the Tegeates at the time of the festival: 'It was snowing, and the Lacedaemonians were cold and weary with the weight of their weapons. But the Tegeates unbeknown to them kindled a fire and, not being incommoded by the chill, got under arms, marched out against the Lacedaemonians, and beat them in the action.' According to Polyain. 1. 8, when the Lacedaemonians were attacking Tegea, Elnes (?) king of the Arcadians bade the men of military age to charge downhill against the enemy at midnight, but the old men and children to kindle a huge fire outside the town at the same hour. The Lacedaemonians turned in astonishment towards the glare, and so fell a prey to the onslaught from the height. Both accounts presuppose the fire-festival of Zeus Κλάριος.

(2) Immerwahr Kult. Myth. Arkad. p. 29 takes Zeus Κλάριος to be 'god of Branches,' i.e. of suppliant-boughs, cp. Hesych. †κλάριοι (Immerwahr rightly adopts M. Schmidt's cj. κλάροι)· κλάδοι and Aisch. suppl. 354 ff. ΠΕΛ. ὁρῶ κλάδοισι νεοδρόποις κατάσκιον | νεύονθ' ὅμιλον τόνδ' (so J. G. J. Hermann for τῶνδ') ἀγωνίων θεῶν followed by 359 f. cited supra p. 874 n. 2.

[3] On the Minyai as Aeolians see A. Fick in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung auf dem Gebiete der indogermanischen Sprachen 1911 xliv. 2 f., 5, ib. 1914 xlvi. 70, 76 f., 85 ff., 93, 102 ff.

[4] Corp. inscr. Gr. i no. 1568, R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 191 no. 495 with i. 394, Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3169, Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 701, Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 994 Δαμοσθίδαο ἄρχοντος, | ἰαρειάδδοντος | Ἀντιχαρίδαο Ἀ[θ]ανοδώρω, (ἀ π)όλις Διὶ Μειλί(χ)[υ.] | Ἀντιχαρίδας Ἀθανοδώρω ἐλ[ε]ἰξε· δεδόχθη τῦ δάμω, ὅπω[ς] ἔχω(ν)|θι τῶν πολιτάων τὺ (θ)ὀ(ο)ν(τ)ες ε[ν] | (τ)ῦ Μειλιχίν ο(ὗδ)ατι χρειεῖσθη [πο][τίμω, κατασκενάττη κ(ρ)[άναν] | ἐν τῦ ἰαρῦ εἰ πὰρ τὸ (ἰ)αρ[όν, εἰ κα] | δοκῖ ε[ν] καλλίστο[ι εἶμεν].

[5] Supra p. 1115 ff.

of Zeus[1] by the Danaid Hesione[2] or by Hermippe daughter of Boiotos[3]. Alleged descent from Zeus presupposes a line of kings believed to incarnate Zeus. Was one of them that Minyas, of Aeolian ancestry[4], whose name was attached by the Orchomenians to their famous prehistoric thólos[5]? It would seem so; for among the relics of funerary cult discovered by Schliemann within the thólos, relics ranging from 'Minoan' to Roman times[6], was a slab of white marble inscribed with a late dedication to Zeus Téleios and Hera Teleía[7]. The old pre-Greek king, whose underground cupola with its rosettes of glittering bronze mimicked the midnight sky[8], was indeed aptly succeeded by an Aeolian dynast reverenced as a nether Zeus[9]. With all the prestige of immemorial tradition behind him such an one would watch over the fortunes of his people. For instance, in or about the year 329 B.C., as we know from an inscription formerly (1868) to be seen in the court of the neighbouring monastery[10], Orchomenian troopers, who

[1] Eustath. in Il. p. 272, 31 ὁ Βοιώτιος δὲ τῷ τοῦ Διὸς Ὀρχομενῷ ἐπωνόμασται.

[2] Schol. Ap. Rhod. 1. 230 Ἡσιόνης ('Ισιόνης cod. Paris.) δὲ τῆς Δαναοῦ καὶ Διὸς γίνεται Ὀρχομενός, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ ἡ πόλις Ὀρχομενὸς καλεῖται (ἐκλήθη cod. Paris). Rufin. recognit. 10. 21 Hippodamiam et Isionen Danai filias (sc. vitiat Iupiter), quarum unam Hippodamiam <matrem (inscrui)> Olenus, Isionen vero Orchomenus sive Chryses habuit. O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 939 f. conjectures that the mother's name was 'Ισονόη: but see G. Weicker in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 1240.

[3] Schol. D. Il. 2. 511 τὸν ἐν τῇ Βοιωτίᾳ λέγει Ὀρχομενόν, τὸν ὑπὸ Μινυοῦ βασιλευθέντα, τὸν ὀνομασθέντα ἀπὸ Ὀρχομενοῦ τοῦ Διὸς υἱοῦ καὶ Ἑρμίππης τῆς Βοιωτοῦ.

[4] Ap. Rhod. 3. 1094 Αἰολίδην Μινύην with schol. ad loc. (cod. Paris.) Αἰολίδην δὲ τὸν Μινύαν λέγει, οὐχ ὡς ὄντα υἱὸν τοῦ Αἰόλου, ἀλλ' ὡς μητρόθεν ἀπ' ἐκείνου καταγόμενον. Σισύφου γὰρ τοῦ Αἰόλου παῖδες Ἅλμος καὶ Πορφυρίων, Χρυσογόνης δὲ τῆς Ἅλμου καὶ Ποσειδῶνος Μινύας. ὥστε ἐκ μητρὸς μὲν Αἰολίδης ὁ Μινύας, πατρὸς δὲ Ποσειδῶνος.

[5] The genealogy of Minyas is very variously given: see in primis schol. Pind. Isthm. 1. 80 τοῦτον δὲ τὸν Μινύαν οἱ μὲν Ὀρχομενοῦ γενεαλογοῦσιν, ὡς Φερεκύδης (frag. 84 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 92 Müller)), ἔνιοι δὲ ἔμπαλιν τὸν Ὀρχομενὸν Μινύου, ἔνιοι δὲ ἀμφοτέρους Ἐτεοκλέος γενεαλογοῦσι, Διονύσιος (guis? Perhaps the Rhodian, cp. schol. Pind. Pyth. 1. 109, Nem. 3. 104) δὲ τὸν Μινύαν Ἄρεος ἀναγράφει, Ἀριστόδημος (sc. ὁ Ἀλεξανδρεύς, cp. schol. Pind. Isthm. 1. 11) δὲ Ἀλεοῦ τὸν Μινύαν, καὶ τοὺς Ἀργοναύτας δὲ Μινύας ἐντεῦθεν γράφει προσηγορεῦσθαι with K. Tümpel's article in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 3016 ff.

[6] H. Schliemann Orchomenos Leipzig 1881 p. 56 ff. = id. 'Exploration of the Boeotian Orchomenus' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1881 ii. 137 ff., Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art vi. 439 f., Frazer Pausanias v. 189, 191.

[7] H. Schliemann Orchomenos p. 58 = id. in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1881 ii. 139 ('a slab of marble broken on the left side, with the inscription:— ... ΕΙΩΗΡΑΤΕΛΕΙΑ which Professor Sayce [May he be forgiven! A.B.C.] holds to be the end of an hexameter'), Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3217 [.....Διὶ Τελ]είῳ, Ἥρᾳ Τελείᾳ.

[8] Supra i. 751 f.

[9] Notice Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3218 Orchomenos [.....τὸ]ν ἑαυτῶν γυμνασίαρχον | .....ιον Ἑρμῇ καὶ Μυΐᾳ, which proves a definite cult of Minyas. In 1889 a herm of white marble was found near the church of Haghios Charalambos on a small hill to the W. of Thespiai: beneath the phallós was inscribed τοι ἱεράρχαι ἀνέθεαν | τοι ἐφ' Ἵππωνος ἄρχοντος | τοῖς Δαιμόνεσσι· | κ.τ.λ. (P. Jamot in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1895 xix. 375 ff. no. 28, Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 752, Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 1102). This inscription (c. 300 B.C.) associates Hermes with certain Δαίμονες. May we venture to conclude that they were the souls of bygone Thespian kings?

[10] The monastery named after the Κοίμησις τῆς Θεοτόκου, the 'Falling Asleep of the Mother of God,' is believed to occupy the site of the ancient temple of the Charites (Frazer Pausanias v. 186, H. Hitzig—H. Blümner on Paus. 9. 38. 1, K. Baedeker Greece Leipsic 1889 p. 188, J. Murray Handbook for Travellers in Greece[7] London 1900 p. 562).

had served with Alexander the Great in Asia, returned home and testified their gratitude by a votive offering to Zeus Sotér[1].

At Thespiai, another ancient city of Boiotia, Zeus Mîlichos had a consort Mîltche[2]. Since Thespios, the eponymous hero of the place, was said to have been an Athenian and the son of Erechtheus[3], or of Teuthras son of Pandion[4], we may legitimately compare the cult with that of Zeus Meilîchios at Athens. Accordingly, we are not surprised to learn that Thespiai made much of Zeus Saótes, the local equivalent of Zeus Sotér. Pausanias heard all about him:

'The Thespians have in their town a bronze image of Zeus Saótes. The story they tell of it is this. Once upon a time, when a snake (drákon) was ravaging the town, the god commanded that every year a youth, chosen by lot, should be given to the monster. They do not, they say, remember the names of the victims who thus perished. But they add that, when the lot fell on Kleostratos, his lover Menestratos resorted to the following expedient. He had a bronze breastplate made with a fish-hook on each of its plates, pointing upwards. This breastplate he put on, and offered himself willingly to the snake; for he meant by his offering to kill the monster, though he died for it. Hence Zeus got the name of Saótes (the "Saviour")[5].'

So the Greeks had their own version of Slingsby and the Snapping Turtle! Indeed, the episode is but one variety of a world-wide myth, that of the dragon-slayer[6]. We must not, therefore, too hastily assume that the snake in question was the animal form of a divinised ancestor. Not improbably, however, the Boeotian Zeus Saótes, like the Elean Sosípolis[7], appeared on occasion as a snake, so that the old snake-myth, which originated elsewhere in a different connexion, would in Boiotia readily attach itself to the ancestral theriomorphic Zeus.

A relic of his cult has survived in a votive relief of white marble found at Sialesi and now in the Berlin collection (fig. 967)[8]. This monument, which might be good Attic work of the fourth century B.C., shows a bearded man and a boy approaching a cave in a rocky hill-side. The man holds an egg-shaped object, perhaps a honey-cake[9], in his raised right hand. And a large snake writhes out of the cave to get it. If Sialesi is rightly identified with the site of the ancient Eteonos[10] (later Skarphe), the cave may well represent the burying-

[1] P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1879 iii. 452 ff., R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 170 f. no. 470, Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3206, Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 1112 [τοὶ ἱππόδη το]ὶ ἐν τὰν Ἀσία[ν] σ[τρατευσάμενοι βα|σιλεῖο]ς Ἀλεξάνδρω στραταγίοντος, ...|. οδωρίω βιλαρχίοντος, Διὶ Σωτῆρι ἀν[έθιαν · κ.τ.λ.].

[2] P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1885 ix. 404 no. 15, Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 1814 Θυνοκλίδας Διονυ|σίω Διὶ Μιλίχυ κὴ Μι|λίχη (an inscription of s. ii or iii B.C.).

[3] Diod. 4. 29, Paus. 9. 26. 6 (with Thespia daughter of Asopos as alternative eponym).

[4] Steph. Byz. s.v. Θέσπεια, Eustath. in Il. p. 266, 6 f.

[5] Paus. 9. 26. 7 f.

[6] See Sir J. G. Frazer on Paus. 9. 26. 7 and the authorities cited supra i. 178 n., 782.

[7] Paus. 6. 20. 5. See further C. Robert 'Sosipolis in Olympia' in the Att. Mitth. 1893 xviii. 37—45 and the excellent article of L. Weniger in Roscher Lex. Myth. iv. 1222 ff.

[8] Ant. Skulpt. Berlin p. 271 no. 724 fig., C. O. Müller—A. Schöll Archaeologische Mittheilungen aus Griechenland Frankfort a/M. 1843 p. 97 no. 103 ('Opfer an die (Asklepios-) Schlange für einen (kranken) Knaben'), R. Kekulé von Stradonitz Die griechische Skulptur[2] Berlin 1907 p. 202 fig. ('Weihrelief an Zeus Meilichios'), Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 14 no. 1 ('Hommage au serpent d'Asklépios'), Harrison Proleg. Gr. Rel.[2] p. 20 f. fig. 5 and Themis p. 282 f. fig. 73. I am indebted to Miss Harrison for the photograph, from which my fig. 967 was drawn. Height 0·265^{m}, breadth 0·495^{m} to 0·505^{m}.

[9] So Harrison Themis p. 282.

[10] C. O. Müller—A. Schöll loc. cit., Ant. Skulpt. Berlin loc. cit.

place of Oidipous in the sanctuary of Demeter. Lysimachos of Alexandreia[1] in his work on Theban Marvels wrote as follows[2]:

'When Oidipous died, his friends thought to bury him in Thebes. But the Thebans, holding that he was an impious person on account of the misfortunes which had befallen him in earlier times, prevented them from so doing. They carried him therefore to a certain place in Boiotia called Keos and buried him there. But the inhabitants of the village, being visited with sundry misfortunes, attributed them to the burying of Oidipous and bade his friends remove him from their land. The friends, perplexed by these occurrences, took him up and brought him to Eteonos. Wishing to bury him secretly, they interred him by night in the sanctuary of Demeter—for they did not know the locality. When the facts transpired, the inhabitants of Eteonos asked the god what they should do. The god bade them not to move the suppliant of the goddess. So Oidipous is buried there, and'—adds Lysimachos—'the sanctuary is called the Oidipódeion.'

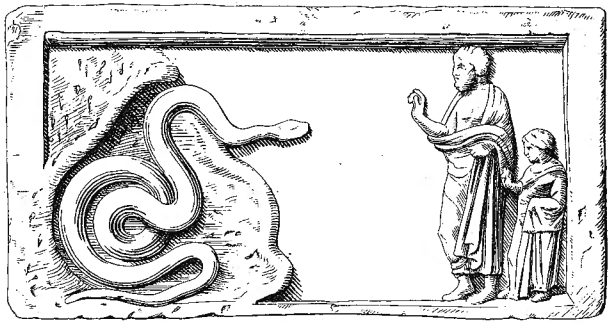

Fig. 967.

Demeter at Eteonos bore the surname Euryódeia[3] and was certainly an earth-goddess[4]. Oidipous, buried in her precinct with the honours due to a suppliant[5], would naturally be viewed as a beneficent chthonian power. In this capacity he would almost certainly be anguiform. Indeed, P. Kretschmer has argued that the name Oidípous, 'Swell-foot,' actually denoted a snake, being a euphemistic

[1] W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1911 ii. 1. 184.

[2] Lysimachos frag. 6 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 336 f. Müller) ap. schol. Soph. O.C. 91, citing Arizelos, of whom nothing further is known (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 340 Müller).

[3] Hesych. Εὐρυόδεια· μεγαλάμφοδος (so Musurus for μεγαλάμφεδα cod.). καὶ ἡ Δημήτηρ οὕτως ἐν Σκαρφείᾳ (so M. Schmidt for Σκαρφίᾳ cod.). καὶ ἡ γῆ.

[4] Et. mag. p. 396, 24 ff. εὐρυοδεία·...'ἀπὸ χθονὸς εὐρυοδείης' (Il. 16. 635, Od. 3. 453, 10. 149, cp. 11. 52), μέγα τὸ ἔδος ἐχούσης, ὃ ἐστιν ἔδρασμα. ἔστι δὲ ἐπίθετον τῆς γῆς.

Cp. schol. Od. 16. 118 Ἀρκείσιος Εὐρυοδίας (W. Dindorf cj. Εὐρυοδείας) καὶ Διὸς Eustath. in Od. p. 1796, 34 ἱστέον δὲ ὅτι γενεαλογοῦσι Διὸς μὲν καὶ Εὐρυοδίας Ἀρκείσιον, which presupposes a union of Zeus with the earth-goddess.

[5] Similarly in the Attic version Oidipous at Kolonos ἱκέτευεν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ τῶν θεῶν Δήμητρος καὶ Ποσειδῶνος Ἱππίου (Androtion frag. 31 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 374 Müller) ap. schol. Od. 16. 271. The passage continues καὶ Διός. ἀγόμενος < δὲ > ὑπὸ Κρέοντος κ.τ.λ. But W. Dindorf, following J. T. Struve, corr. καὶ βίᾳ ἀγόμενος ὑπὸ Κρέοντος κ.τ.λ.). appellation for the swollen coils of the creature appropriate to a chthonian hero[1].

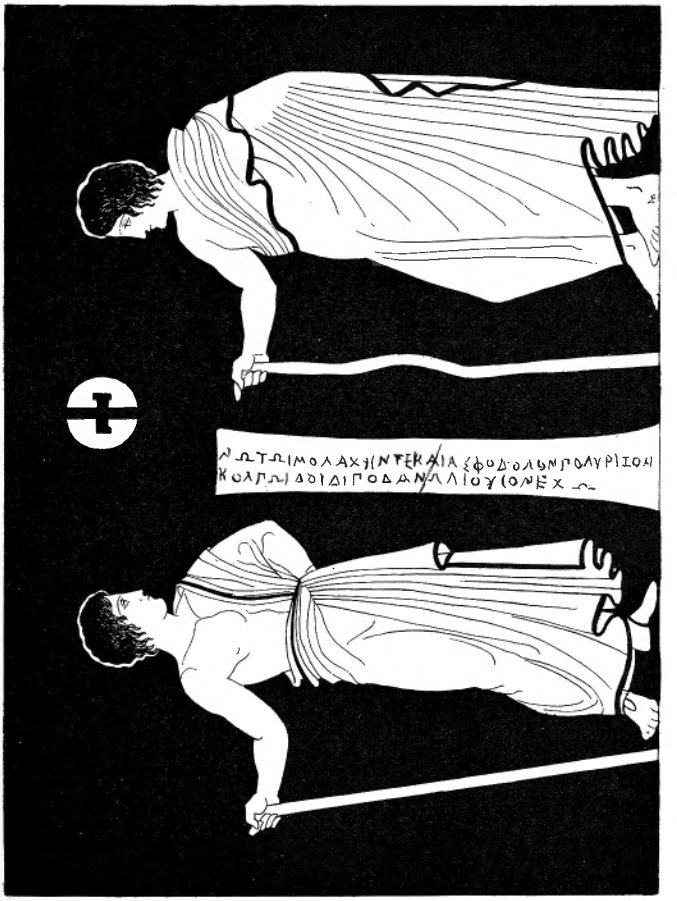

Fig. 968.

[1] P. Kretschmer Die Griechischen Vaseninschriften Gütersloh 1894 p. 191 n. 3 'Οιδίπους erinnert an einen anderen rätselhaften mythischen Namen, den des frommen Sehers Μελάμπους: beides sind chthonische Heroen... Chthonische Wesen haben einen Schlangenleib statt der Füsse:... Sollten nicht "Schwellfuss" und "Schwarzfuss" euphemis-

Again, the buried hero would be responsible for the growth of all living things. The Sialesi relief shows the snake propitiated by a grown man and a growing boy—a sufficiently suggestive picture. Moreover, a red-figured amphora from Basilicata, now in the Naples collection (fig. 968)[1], represents two youths, with himátia and sticks, standing to right and left of a stéle, which marks the grave of Oidipous. In the background hangs a pair of haltêres[2], the sign of their devotion. But the most interesting feature of the design is the inscription on the stéle, a metrical couplet in which the grave apparently (though the speaker is not named) announces:

> Mallows and rooty asphodel upon my back I bear,
> And in my bosom Oidipodas, Laïos' son and heir[3].

Now mallows and asphodel were the common vegetable food of the Boeotian peasant, as we learn from a famous passage of Hesiod[4]. We may therefore reasonably regard this vase-painting as an illustration of the Boeotian Oidipódeion. And the more so, if—as seems probable—the dialect of the inscription contains sundry would-be Boeotisms[5].

It appears, then, that Oidipous in his grave played a part not easily distinguishable from that of Zeus Meilíchios[6]. There is, I think, that much of truth in a venturesome view advanced by O. Höfer, who after an exhaustive study of the hero's-myth and monuments comes to the tentative conclusion that Oidipous after all may be but a hypostasis of the chthonian Zeus[7]. Sophokles knew what he was about in making the old king summoned hence by the tische Bezeichnungen des schwarzen geschwollenen Schlangenleibes sein, welcher diesen Heroen natürlich genommen wurde, als sie zu Held:en der Dichtung wurden?'

[1] Heydemann Vasensamml. Neapel p. 415 f. no. 2868 pl. 7, B. Quaranta in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1833 ix pl. 28, J. Millingen Ancient Unedited Monuments Series ii London 1826 p. 86 ff. pl. 36, Inghirami Vas. fitt. iv. 18 ff. pl. 315. Fig. 968 is copied from Millingen's coloured plate and Heydemann's facsimile of the inscription.

[2] Heydemann loc. cit. says 'ein Ball.'

[3] νώτωι <μὲν> μολάχην τε καὶ ἀσφόδολον πολύριζον | κόλπωι δ' Οἰδιπόδαν Λαΐου <υ>ἱὸν ἔχω (Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 2. 120). A. Boeckh in the Corp. inscr. Gr. iv no. 8429 quotes Eustath. in Od. p. 1698, 25 ff. ἐφυτεύετο ἐν τοῖς τάφοις τὸ τοιοῦτον φυτόν (sc. ὁ ἀσφόδελος), ὡς δηλοῖ καί τι τῶν παρὰ τῷ Πορφυρίῳ ἐπιγραμμάτων λέγον ὡς ἀπό τινος τάφου ὅτι νώτῳ μὲν μαλάχην καὶ ἀσφόδελον πολύριζον, κόλπῳ δὲ τὸν δεῖνα ἔχω and surmises that Porphyrios found the epigram in the Aristotelian péplos (see Eustath. in Il. p. 285, 24 f.)—a view already put forward by Jahn Vasensamml. München p. cxxiv n. 914. Boeckh loc. cit. further cp. Auson. epitaph. 21. 1 f. (p. 79 Peiper) Hippothoum Pyleumque tenet gremio infima tellus: | caulibus et malvis terga superna virent, whence E. Curtius would read Ἱππόθοόν τ' ἠδὲ Πύλαιον for τὸν δεῖνα in Eustath. loc. cit.

[4] Hes. o.d. 41 with K. W. Goettling—J. Flach ad loc., and H. G. Evelyn White in the Class. Quart. 1920 xiv. 128 f.

[5] μολάχην for μαλάχην, ἀσφόδολον for ἀσφόδελον, Οἰδιπόδαν for Οἰδιπόδην, if not also (as Dr P. Giles suggests to me), Λαΐο=Λαΐω for Λαΐου. J. Millingen loc. cit. p. 87 n. 5 says 'according to the Æolic dialect'; P. Kretschmer op. cit. p. 224 f., 'in attischem Dialekt,'—regarding μολάχην as a blend of μαλάχην and μολόχην (Athen. 58D), ἀσφόδολον as a case of vulgar assimilation. Decernant peritiores.

[6] Cp. Inscr. Gr. sept. ii no. 1329 an inscription in lettering of s. ii B.C. found at Akketsi near Thebes Ανσίμαχο[s] | Μειλιχίοις.

[7] O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 743 'Ist Oidipus vielleicht eine Hypostase des Ζεὺς χθόνιος?' This suggestion should not be tossed on one side till the evidence adduced ib. p. 741 ff. has been carefully weighed.

thunders of Zeus Chthónios[1]. When the moment of departure comes and Theseus remains 'holding his hand before his face to screen his eyes, as if some dread sight had been seen, and such as none might endure to behold[2],' the poet with consummate tact leaves the secret untold. But the mythologist may be forgiven, if he hazards the conjecture that Oidipous was then and there transformed into a snake.

(12) Zeus Meilíchios in Thessaly.

The demolition of a mosque at Larissa in Thessaly brought to light two fragments of an Ionic architrave inscribed as follows[3]:

> Makon, son of Omphalion, (dedicated) the temple > to Zeus Meilíchios and to Enhodía[4] and to the City[5].

The cult of the chthonian Zeus here had civic importance, and may fairly be connected with the founder of the state, Akrisios[6], who—struck on the foot and slain by the dískos of Perseus—was buried in a heróion outside the town[7] or else in the temple of Athena on the akropolis[8]. Akrisios was represented by Attic vase-painters of s. v B.C. as a bearded king, twice with a long sceptre[9], once with a long staff and a wreath of olive[10]. He had a divine doublet in Akrisias, the

[1] Soph. O. C. 1606 κτύπησε μὲν Ζεὺς Χθόνιος κ.τ.λ. Supra p. 805 n. 6.

[2] Soph. O. C. 1650 ff.

[3] Ath. Mitth. 1886 xi. 336, S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1887 ii. 79, id. Chroniques d'Orient Paris 1891 p. 346, G. Fougères in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1889 xiii. 392 no. 9, Inscr. Gr. sept. ii no. 578 Μάκων Ὀμφαλίωνος τὸν να[ὸν] | Διὶ Μειλιχίωι καὶ Ἐνοδίᾳ καὶ Πό[λει].

[4] For this appellation of Hekate at Larissa cp. Inscr. Gr. sept. ii no. 575, 2 f. εὔξατο: δ' Ἀγέ[τ]ορ | ραστικὰι : Ἐνοδίαι.

[5] Cp. Inscr. Gr. sept. ii no. 31, 2 (Hypata) Ἑρμᾶι καὶ τᾶι πόλε[ι], no. 94, 5 (Larissa Kremaste) Ἑρμᾶι καὶ τᾶι πόλει.

[6] Hellanikos frag. 29 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 49 Müller) ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. 1. 40 = Favorin. lex. p. 1156, 25 f., Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἀδρισσα.

[7] Pherekyd. frag. 26 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 77 Müller) ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. 4. 1091 = Eudok. viol. 40 = Favorin. lex. p. 99, 16 ff., Apollod. 2. 4. 4, cp. Paus. 2. 16. 2. Hyg. fab. 63 lays the scene in Seriphos and makes Akrisios struck on the head, cp. fab. 273. Further confusion in Lact. Plac. in Stat. Theb. 1. 255 = Myth. Vat. 2. 111 (Perseus hurls the Gorgon's head at Akrisios and turns him into stone!).

[8] Antiochos frag. 15 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 184 Müller) ap. Clem. Al. protr. 3. 45. 1 p. 34, 9 f. Stählin.

[9] (1) On a red-figured kratér from Caere, now at Petrograd (Stephani Vasensamml. St. Petersburg ii. 281 ff. no. 1723, E. Gerhard Danae, ein griechisches Vasenbild (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Berlin xiv) Berlin 1854 with col. pl., Welcker Alt. Denkm. v. 275 ff. pl. 17, 1, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus pp. 406 f., 411 f. Atlas pl. 6, 2 f., Baumeister Denkm. i. 405 f. fig. 447 f., P. Hartwig Die griechischen Meisterschalen der Blüthezeit des strengen rothfigurigen Stiles Stuttgart—Berlin 1893 p. 396 f., J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 94 ('The Foundry Painter'), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i 458 f. no. 17).

(2) On another red-figured kratér from Caere, now at Petrograd (Stephani op. cit. ii. 139 ff. no. 1357, F. T. Welcker in the Mon. ed. Ann. d. Inst. 1856 p. 37 f. pl. 8, Welcker Alt. Denkm. v. 283 ff. pl. 17, 2, Overbeck op. cit. Zeus p. 412 f. Atlas pl. 6, 4, Reinach Rép. Vases i. 244, 1, J. D. Beazley in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1911–1912 xviii. 226 no. 16 and op. cit. p. 46 f. fig. 28 ('The Eucharides Painter'), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 359 no. 20).

[10] On a red-figured hydría at Boston (P. Hartwig 'Danaé dans le coffre' in the Mon.

Phrygian Kronos[1]. It seems probable, therefore, that Akrisios was the royal embodiment of a sky-god[2]. And the story of his death from the dískos of Perseus, like that of Hyakinthos' death from the dískos of Apollon[3], is best explained as a genuine solar myth[4]. Whether Akrisios or Akrisias, as O. Gruppe supposes[5], was originally a mountain-god, is doubtful[6]. Still more so is Gruppe's attempt[7] to equate him with Arkésios or Arkelsios, a clipped form of Arkesílaos[8], god of the underworld[9]. Ruling out such questionable possibilities, we must yet concede that Akrisios was likely enough to live on in the popular memory as a buried beneficent Zeus.

(13) Zeus Meilíchios in the Archipelago, Asia Minor, etc.

The cult of Zeus Meilíchios was wide-spread in the islands of the Archipelago. Rock-cut inscriptions at Thera show that Zeus Melíchios was adored by the intimates of a certain Polyxenos[10] and that Melíchios received the offering of a 'singed' victim[11]. Boundary-stones inscribed 'Of Zeus Meilíchios' have been found at Palaiopolis in Andros[12], at Arkesine in Amorgos[13], and in the district of Piot 1903 x. 55—59 pl. 8, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 51 f. fig. 32 ('The Painter of the Diogenes Amphora'), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 206 no. 1).

[1] Hesych. 'Ακρισίας· Κρόνος, παρὰ Φρυξίν.

[2] On Kronos as a sky-god see supra p. 548 ff.

[3] Greve in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 2760, G. Fougères in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 305, S. Eitrem in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 9 f.

[4] Pace S. Eitrem loc. cit. p. 16.

[5] Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 182 n. 2, 1105 n. 1 starting from ἄκρις=ocris derives 'Ακρίσιος from the former, Ocrisia from the latter and cp. Hesych. 'Ακρία· ἡ 'Αθηνᾶ ἐν "Αργει, ἐπί τινος ἄκρας ἱδρυμένη, ἀφ' ἧς καὶ 'Ακρίσιος (so Musurus for ὀκρίσιος. M. Schmidt suggests ὁ 'Ακρίσιος) ὠνομάσθη. ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἡ "Ηρα καὶ "Αρτεμις καὶ 'Αφροδίτη προσαγορευομένη ἐν "Αργει, κατὰ τὸ ὅμοιον ἐπ' ἄκρῳ ἱδρυμέναι, cp. Methodios ap. et. mag. p. 52, 40 f. 'Ακρίσιος· ὁ ἥρως, ἀπὸ τῆς ἐν τῷ "Αργει ἄκρας. οὕτως Μεθόδιος.

[6] A. Fick Die ehemalige Spracheinheit der Indogermanen Europas Göttingen 1873 p. 411 proposed to connect the Phrygian 'Ακρισίας with Hesych. ἀκριστιν· κλέπτριαν (C. A. Lobeck cj. πέπτριαν). ἀλετρίδα. Φρύγες. This, though groping in the dark, is better than et. mag. p. 52, 41 f. ὁ δὲ "Ωρος ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀκρίζω 'Ακρίσιος, ὡς παρὰ τὸ θαυμάζω θαυμάσιος. ἢ παρὰ τὸ κρίσις κρίσιος, καὶ ἀκρίσιος, ὁ ἄκριτος καὶ ὠμός. [ἀκρίζω δὲ σημαίνει τὸ ἄκροις ποσὶ πορεύεσθαι· κ.τ.λ.].

[7] Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 253, 778, 1105 n. 1.

[8] A. Fick in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1906 xxx. 279: 'Αρκείσιος [Od. 14. 182, 16. 118, alib.] würde richtig 'Αρκέσσιος='Αρκεσίλαος heissen; den anlass zu der entstehung gab der schreibung mit einem σ.'

[9] Cp. et. mag. p. 144, 33 ff. cited supra p. 549 n. 1.

[10] With Inscr. Gr. ins. iii Suppl. no. 1316 Ζεὺς Μηλί]χιος τῶν | περὶ Πολύ̣ξενο|ν (fig.) cp. the other rock-cut inscriptions from the same locality ib. no. 1317 Ζε(ὺ)ς | τ[ῶ]ν περ[ὶ Λ]άκιον and ib. no. 1318 Ζεὺς | τῶν περὶ 'Ολ[υμ]]πιόδωρον. Supra i. 144 n. 2 with i. 143 n. 13.

[11] Inscr. Gr. ins. iii no. 406 (supra i. 144 n. 1).

[12] E. Pernice in the Ath. Mitth. 1893 xviii. 9 f. no. 4=Inscr. Gr. ins. v. 1 no. 727 on a large unworked stone ΔΙΟΣ | ΜΕΛΙΧΙΟ (fig.)=Διὸς | Με(ι)λιχίο(υ). E. Pernice and F. Hiller von Gaertringen locc. citt. regard the line after O as a mere crack.

[13] Inscr. Gr. ins. vii no. 89 on a rough stone in letters of s. iii or iv B.C. [Δι]ὸς Μειλιχίου, ib. no. 90 on a fragmentary slab of marble with lower moulding [Διὸς Μει]λιχίου. Note also ib. no. 92 on a small white marble base of Roman date Διὸς Σωτῆρος, ib. no. 93 on a broken block of bluish marble in letters of s. iii B.C. Διὸς | Σωτῆρο[ς], ib. no. 94 on a fragment of rough bluish marble Διὶ Τελ[είωι], ib. no. 91 on a large marble slab

Saint Anna beyond Bounáki at Chios[1]. A dedication to the same god has been recorded at Chalkis in Euboia[2]. Nisyros had its sect of Diosmilichiastai[3], and Crete a joint-cult of Zeus Melíchios and Hera Melichía[4].

Our search might be extended eastwards into Asia Minor and Egypt, westwards into Sicily and Italy. An altar 'Of Zeus Meil[ichios],' discovered at Knidos by Sir Charles Newton, is now in the British Museum[5]. Xenophon sacrificed pigs to Zeus Meilichios at Ophrynion[6]: but we have no reason to think that there was a local cult of this deity. Achilleus Tatios (?s. vi. A.D.[7]) brings Kleitophon and Leukippe, the hero and heroine of his novel, to Alexandreia, his own native town.

ΔΙΟΣΑΝΑΛΩΙΟΥ = Διὸς Ἀνα(δ)ώ(τ)ου, 'of Zeus who sendeth up his Gifts from Below'—an obviously chthonian god (cp. supra p. 321 n. 1).

Other Zeus-cults of the same town: ib. no. 88 on a rough altar of bluish marble in letters of s. iv B.C. [Δ]ιὸς Ἀποτροπαίο (cp. P. Kabbadias Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 56 no. 119=Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1285 Epidauros, not later than s. iii B.C. Διὸς Ἀποτροπαίου, O. Rayet in the Rev. Arch. 1887 i. 107 ff. = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 839 B, 19 f., C, 2 ff. = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 1014 b, 69 f., c, 114 ff. Erythrai, a sale of priesthoods dating from the first half of s. iii B.C. Διὸς | Ἀποτροπαίου καὶ Ἀθηνᾶς Ἀποτροπαίας [Ⅎ]ⱶⱶ, ἐπώνιον· ⱶ[ⱶ] and Διὸ[ς] | [Ἀποτ]ροπαίου καὶ Ἀθηνᾶς Ἀποτ[ρο]|[παί]ας ⱶⱶ[Ⅎ], ἐπωνίου [Γ]), ib. no. 95 a metrical inscription on a marble slab Μνημοσύνης καὶ Ζηνὸς Ὀλυμ[πίου ἀγλαὰ τέκνα cp. Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 4. 33. 1], | κ.τ.λ., supra i. 194 f.

[1] A. G. Paspates Τὸ Χιακὸν γλωσσάριον Athens 1888 p. 421 f. no. 58 on Chian marble ΔΙΟΣ | ΜΙΛΙΧΙ [. .]=Διὸς | Μιλιχί[ου].

At Mestá, six kilometers S.E. of the capital, is a place still called Olýmpi, where was a cult of Zeus Olýmpios and Herakles (Paspates op. cit. p. 410 no. 24 Διὸς Ὀλυ[μπίου] | καὶ Ἡρακλέ[ους]).

[2] Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 2150 ΕΡΜΙΩΝΜΕΙΛΙΧΙΟΥΔΙΛΙΟΝΙ which A. Boeckh ad loc. would read as Ἑρμίων Μειλιχί(ωι) Δι(ὶ ἀ)ν(ὲ)[θηκεν].

[3] A. E. Kontoleon in the Ath. Mitth. 1890 xv. 134, S. Reinach Chroniques d'Orient Paris 1891 p. 702, Inscr. Gr. ins. iii no. 104 a cylindrical base of white marble now serving as pedestal for an eikón in the church at Mandráki I ff. Γνωμαγόραν Δωροθέου | Νεισύριον | κ.τ.λ., ib. 13 ff. καὶ στεφανωθέντα ὑπὸ Ἑρμαϊζόντων χ|ρυσέοις στεφάνοις πλεονάκις, καὶ ὑπὸ Ἀφρο|δισιαστᾶν Σύρων καὶ ὑπὸ Διὸς Μιλιχιαστᾶν, | [καὶ] τειμαθέντα ὑπὸ αὐτῶν καὶ στεφανω|θέν[τα ὑπὸ Διον]υσιαστᾶν Εὐ[ρυθεμιδ]έων τῶν σὺν | [τῷ δεῖνι – – –]. I should prefer to read (with Kontoleon and Reinach) Διοσμιλιχιαστᾶν, cp. Διοσταβυριαστᾶν (supra p. 924 f. n. 0).

[4] F. Halbherr in the Museo Italiano di antichità classica 1890 iii. 621 f. no. 39 Hierapytna = J. Baunack in Philologus 1889 xlviii. 399 f. no. 3 Herakleion, a small altar inscribed ΖΗΝΙΜΗΛΙ | ΧΙΩΚΑΗΡΑ | ΜΗΛΙΧΙΑ | CΩΤΑCΥΠΕ ΡΠΑΡΔΑΛΑ | ЄΥΧΗΝ = Ζηνὶ Μηλι|χίῳ κα(ὶ) Ἥρᾳ | Μηλιχίᾳ. | Σώτας ὑπὲ|ρ Παρδάλα | εὐχήν.

[5] Sir C. T. Newton A History of Discoveries at Halicarnassus, Cnidus, and Branchidæ London 1862—1863 i pl. 92 no. 40, ii. 755 (cp. 470) no. 40, R. Schoell in the Rhein. Mus. 1887 xlii. 478 ff., E. L. Hicks The Collection of Ancient Greek Inscriptions in the British Museum iv. i. 24 f. Oxford 1893 no. 817. Newton, followed by Schoell, read ΔΙΟΣ ΜΕΙ as Διὸς Μεγ[ίστου]. But Hicks gives ΔΙΟΣ ΜΕΙ/ with Φ below ΔΙΟΣ and interprets as Διὸς Μειλ[ιχίου] with inventory number. In addition to this mark of ownership the altar bears a second inscription, which Schoell took to be a modified hexameter [ἀθα]νάτοις | [θυ]θεντα | [δα]μιουργὸς Ἀρ[πο]κρᾶ(s) ἱδρύσατο | βωμόν. Hicks reads [ἀθα]νάτοις | [θυ]θεντα | [δα]μιουργὸς Ἀρ|■ κράσ ζ ἱδρύσατο | βωμόν, and suggests with hesitation that ζ may be a numeral. He thinks that the name, Harpokras or the like, was substituted for that of an earlier dedicator. Non liquet.

[6] Supra p. 1107.

[7] W. Schmid in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 245.

'By a stroke of luck,' says Kleitophon[1], 'we happed upon a sacred month of the great god, whom the Greeks call Zeus and the Egyptians Serapis[2]. The festivities included a torch-lighting; and I saw that remarkable sight. It was evening and the sun sank. Yet night was nowhere to be seen. Another sun made its appearance, or rather the small change of that gold piece. There before my eyes was the city rivalling the sky in beauty. On the one hand I saw Zeus Meilíchios, on the other the temple of Zeus Ouránios[3]. So, after breathing a prayer to the great god and beseeching him that our troubles might at last come to a standstill, we reached the lodging hired for us by Menelaos.'

It may be inferred from this passage, not only that the Alexandrines had a statue of Zeus Meilíchios and a temple of Zeus Ouránios[4], but also that the former was a god of the underworld, the latter a god of the upperworld. Both are appropriately mentioned at a moment when the twinkling lamps below seemed to reflect the twinkling stars above. At Alaisa or Halaesa (Castel Tusa), founded or re-founded in 403 B.C. by the Sikel king Archonides ii[5] on the north coast of Sicily, an inscription records among other topographical features 'the road past the Meilichieîon[6].' And, finally, an Oscan road-makers' tablet of c. 200 B.C. from Pompeii states that the aediles M. Suttius and N. Pontius laid out the Via Pompeiana, now known as the Strada Stabiana, with a breadth of three perches as far as the temple or precinct of Iupiter Milichius[7].

Further indications of the cult might be sought in theophoric names[8] such as Meilichios, a magistrate of Hierapolis in Phrygia[9], or Meilichion, a woman of Elateia in Phokis[10].

[1] Ach. Tat. 5. 2. [2] Supra i. 188 ff.

[3] ἐθεασάμην δὲ καὶ τὸν Μειλίχιον Δία, καὶ τὸν Διὸς Οὐρανίου (so C. B. Hase, W. A. Hirschig, and S. Gaselee for οὐράνιον codd.) νεών.

[4] Supra i. 8, 565 n. 2, 647 n. 7.

[5] B. Niese in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 565.

[6] Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 5594 col. dextra, 15 f. = Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 352 i, 15 f. κατὰ τᾶς ὁδοῦ τᾶς παρὰ τὸ | Μειλιχιεῖον ἐς τὸν ῥοῖσκον κ.τ.λ.

Coppers of Alaisa, struck during Timoleon's war with the Carthaginians (340 B.C.), have obv. ΖΕΥΣ ΕΛΕΥΘΕΡΙΟΣ head of Zeus; rev. ΑΛΑΙΣΙΝΩΝ ΣΥΜΜΑΧΙΚΟΝ torch between two ears of corn (G. F. Hill Coins of Ancient Sicily London 1903 p. 175, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 126). Coppers of the same town, struck after c. 241 B.C., have obv. a head of Zeus, usually to left, wearing a bay-wreath; rev. an eagle to left, standing with open wings (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Sicily p. 27, Hunter Cat. Coins i. 166 pl. 12, 6, Rasche Lex. Num. i. 269 f., Suppl. i. 425, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 126).

[7] H. Grassmann in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1867 xvi. 103, J. Zvetaieff Sylloge inscriptionum Oscarum Petropoli 1878 i. 41 ff. no. 62, 5 ff., ii pls. 10, no. 5, and 10[a], R. S. Conway The Italic Dialects Cambridge 1897 i. 58 f. no. 39, 5 ff., C. D. Buck A Grammar of Oscan and Umbrian Boston 1904 p. 239 f. no. 3, 5 ff. ízssu vía Púmpaiiana ter|emnattens perek. III ant kaíla Iúveís Meeilikiieís (= iídem viam Pompeianam terminaverunt perticis III usque ad aedem (cp. caeli templa in De Vit Lat. Lex. s.v. 'templum' § 2) Iovis Milichii).

[8] E. Sittig De Graecorum nominibus theophoris Halis Saxonum 1911 p. 15.

[9] Imhoof-Blumer Kleinas. Münzen i. 238 f. no. 21, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phrygia p. lxvii ...ΙΑΛΟ[Σ] | ΜΕΙΛΙΧΙΟΣ on the reverse, of a copper struck by Augustus.

[10] Inscr. Gr. sept. iii. 1 no. 174 a cone of grey limestone found near the E. foundation-wall of the temple of Athena Kranaía at Elateia and now preserved in the local museum at Drachmani: the cone has a hole in its truncated top and is inscribed on the side ΜΕΙΛΙΧΙΟΝ | ΔΑΜΟΣΤΡΑΤΑ | ΜΙΚΑ | ΧΟΙΡΙΝΑ = Μειλίχιο[ν], | Δαμοστράτα, | Μίκα, | Χοιρίνα. P. Paris in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1887 xi. 345 f. no. 15 at first read Μειλίχιο[ς], but concluded in favour of Μειλίχιο[ν].

(14) Conclusions with regard to Zeus Meilichios.

It remains to gather up the results of our enquiry. Early Greek kings, especially such as could claim descent from Aiolos, were held to be embodiments of the sky-god Zeus, and as weather-makers for the community bore a sceptre tipped with the lightning-bird. Even when dead and buried the king continued to help his people. He preserved and perpetuated the tribe (Zeus Soter). He brought its young folk to his own state of maturity (Zeus Teleios). He watched over its interests (Zeus Epopsios). Hence, like other chthonian powers, he was fitly addressed by a coaxing appellation—'the Kindly One' (Zeus Meilichios). Regents of this sort, at once human and divine, were, strictly speaking, daimones rather than theoi; and there is much to be said for O. Schrader's brilliant suggestion that in name, as in nature, they were the equivalent of the Latin Lares[1]. They are best described in two passages of poetry which, though separated by a thousand years, yet derive mutual support and illustration from each other, and serve to assure us that the belief common to both was latent, if not patent, throughout the whole course of Greek history. Hesiod, looking [1] Schrader Reallex. p. 29: 'Es steht daher nichts im Wege, für δαίμων ein Grundform *δασι-μων anzusetzen, und den ersten Bestandteil dieses Wortes *δασι- unter Annahme eines bekannten Lautwandels (δάκρυμα: lacrima) dem lat. *lasi- (lares, larium) "Geist eines Verstorbenen" zu vergleichen.' The context rightly maintains that previous derivations (from δαήμων, 'knowing,' or from δαίομαι, 'I divide,' or from the Sanskrit root div, 'to shine') are all unsatisfactory. I regret to see that Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 103 and Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 162 still cling to δαίομαι.

The word *δασι-μων is perhaps related to the name Δάσιμος or Δάζιμος. Δάσιμος Πύρρου is engraved on a bronze helmet from Anxia (Anzi) now in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Bronzes p. 48 no. 317, Roehl Inscr. Gr. ant. no. 547, Roberts Gk. Epigr. i. 272 no. 269, Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 655); and Δάζιμος Πύρρω, presumably a descendant of the same family, is mentioned in the bronze tabulae Heracleenses (Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 645 i, 5, 9, ii, 1, 5, 8, R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 88 no. 4629 i, 5, 9, ii, 1, 5, 8, F. Solmsen Inscriptiones Graecae ad inlustrandas dialectos selectae Lipsiae 1905 no. 18 i, 5, 9, ii, 1, 5, 8). The l-form of this name occurs in ΛΑΣΙΜΟΣ ΕΓΡΑΨΕ, an inscription on an Apulian amphora from Canusium (Canosa) now in the Louvre (Corp. inscr. Gr. iv no. 8486, Wien. Vorlegebl. 1889 pl. 11, 3, Reinach Vases Ant. p. 64 ff. Millin ii pl. 37 ff. with bibliography, P. Kretschmer Die Griechischen Vaseninschriften Gütersloh 1894 p. 217 f.). The foregoing can hardly be separated from the definitely Messapian name ΔΑΞΙΜΑϚ (J. P. Droop in Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1905—1906 xii. 139 f. fig. 1, 2 Ceglie Messapica) and the Grecised or Latinised Δάσιος (Appian. Hannib. 31 and 45), Δάζιος (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Thessaly etc. p. 68 no. 52 ΔΑΖΙΟΣ on a coin of Dyrrhachion, cp. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Italy p. 130 no. 1 f. ΔΑΞΟΥ on coins of Arpi, ib. p. 144 no. 4 ΔΑΞΕΝΙ and no. 6 ΔΑΞΥ on coins of Salapia, Hunter Cat. Coins i. 53 no. 1 pl. 4, 10 ΔΑΞΟΥ on a coin of Arpi), Dasius, Dasumius, etc. (De Vit Onomasticon ii. 568 f., R. S. Conway The Italic Dialects Camhridge 1897 ii. Index iii p. 566, F. Münzer, Stein and Groag in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 2218 f., 2222 ff.).

A. Zimmermann in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1915 xlvii. 192 holds that the -da of Larunda is identical with the Δα- of Δαμάτηρ and regards Larunda δαιμόνων μήτηρ (G. Goetz—G. Gundermann in the Corpus glossariorum Latinorum Lipsiae 1888 ii. 121, 17) as a literal translation (cp. eid. ib. ii. 265, 62 δαίμονες ἤτοι θεοὶ κατοικίδιοι· lares dicitur et lar).

For a useful vindication of the view that the Lares were originally the souls of deified ancestors see Miss M. C. Waites 'The nature of the Lares and their representation in Roman art' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1920 xxiv. 241—261.

backward to the Golden Age when men lived 'as gods' and the soil was fruitful to the uttermost, says:

> But since the earth hath covered o'er this race
> They are daímones by the will of mighty Zeus,
> Good spirits that tread the ground and guard mankind,
> Givers of wealth—a guerdon meet for kings[1].

The late writer of an Orphic hymn strikes the self-same note:

> I bid the daímon to draw near, dread chief,
> The Kindly Zeus, begetter and life-giver,
> Great Zen, much-roaming[2], curse-bringer[3], king of all,
> Wealth-giving where he enters house full-force,
> Or now again chilling the poor man's blood.
> The keys of grief and gladness both are thine[4].

The daímon, in short, was the theós incarnate[5]. And the Agathos Daimon par excellence was Zeus Meilíchios.

APPENDIX N.

ZEUS PHÍLIOS.

It was pointed out by H. Usener[6] that every important conception of a god tends to express itself verbally in more ways than one. The result is a succession of divine appellatives, practical synonyms which vary from time to time and from place to place. In accordance with this principle we find the Greeks worshipping, not only Zeus Meílichos or Meilíchios, 'the Kindly One,' but also Zeus Phílios, 'the Friendly One.' The former title gradually became old-fashioned and wore out. The latter, with its appeal to the language of daily life, seemed more up-to-date, promised a business-like return, and consequently acquired a vogue of its own. Of course old centres remained more or less faithful to the old name, the connotation of which was enlarged in various directions. But new centres accepted, fixed, and popularised the novel epithet, which in its turn was filled with fresh meaning and expanded into an ever widening circle of applicability. Nevertheless Zeus Phílios was from the outset essentially akin to Zeus Meilíchios, as may be seen from a brief survey of the relevant monuments and literary allusions[7].

[1] Hes. o.d. 121 ff. cited supra p. 1130 n. 1.

[2] Supra p. 1096 n. 4.

[3] Supra p. 1098 n. 5.

[4] Orph. h. daem. 73. 1 ff. (ΔΑΙΜΟΝΟΣ, θυμίαμα λίβανον) δαίμονα κικλήσκω πελάσαι ἠγήτορα φρικτόν, μειλίχιον Δία, παγγενέτην, βιοδώτορα θνητῶν, | Ζῆνα μέγαν, πολύπλαγκτον, ἀλάστορα, παμβασιλῆα, | πλουτοδότην, ὁπότ' ἂν γε βρυάζων οἶκον ἐσέλθῃ, | ἔμπαλι δὲ ψύχοντα βίον θνητῶν πολυμόχθων· | ἐν σοὶ γὰρ κλῆδες λύπης τε χαρᾶς τ' ὀχέονται. Supra i. 504 n. 2, ii. 1098 n. 5.

[5] The relation of δαίμων to θεός is a thorny topic, which cannot be dismissed in a sentence, but must not here be pursued. See further J. A. Hild in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. ii. 9 ff., O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 2010 f., Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] pp. 587, 624, 657, ead. Themis pp. 307, 386.

[6] H. Usener Götternamen Bonn 1896 p. 56 ff. ('Erneuerung des Begriffs').

[7] The evidence is well presented in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2305—2308 by that excellent enquirer O. Höfer, to whose article I am much indebted.

(1) Zeus Philios at Athens.

We begin with Athens. The priest of Zeus Philios was a personage of importance, who in the time of Augustus had a reserved seat at the theatre[1]. On the northern slope of the Nymphs' Hill, where—as we have already seen[2]—Zeus Meilichios was worshipped, Zeus Philios too had obtained a footing as far back as s. iv B.C. For here in the archonship of Hegesias (324—323 B.C.) certain eranistai or club-feasters dedicated to him a stêle of Pentelic marble bearing a relief (fig. 969)[3], which closely resembles the offering of [? Aris]toboule to Zeus Meilichios (fig. 943)[4]. The club-feasters too represent Zeus enthroned on the left with a phiale in his right hand, while a pig is brought to the altar before him. The pig is proof enough that Zeus Philios, despite the eagle at his side, was a chthonian god[5]—a god much like the Agathos Daimon, as Miss Harrison adroitly shows by figuring together this relief and another from Thespiai (fig. 951)[6]. But what—it will be asked—had feasters to do with a chthonian god

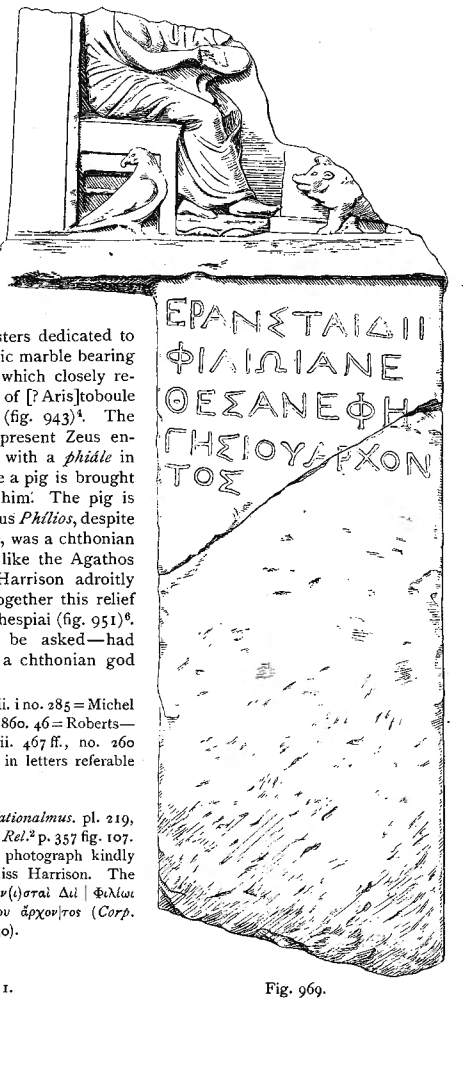

Fig. 969.

[1] Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 285 = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 860. 46 = Roberts—Gardner Gk. Epigr. ii. 467 ff., no. 260 ΙΕΡΕΩΣΔΙΟΣΦΙΛΙΟΥ in letters referable to the Augustan age.

[2] Supra p. 1114.

[3] Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. pl. 219, 1, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 357 fig. 107. My fig. 969 is from a photograph kindly supplied to me by Miss Harrison. The stêle is inscribed: ἐραν(ι)σταὶ Διὶ | Φιλίωι ἀνε|θεσαν ἐφ' Ἡ|γησίου ἄρχον|τος (Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1330).

[4] Supra p. 1105 f.

[5] Supra p. 1105.

[6] Supra p. 1125 n. 1.

akin to a divinised ancestor? In view of our discovery[1] that at an ordinary banquet food was assigned 'to dead friends' and drink offered to the father of the clan under the titles of Zeus Sotér and Zeus Téleios, we may well suppose that a dinner-club would reverence its deceased founder as Zeus Philios and think of him as still a sharer in the common festivity. His presence would transform the meal into a communion[2] and safeguard the participants against the intrusion of evil[3] without in any way diminishing their social merriment.

In the other world too Zeus Philios was a feaster, as appears from an Attic relief of fourth-century style, now in the Jacobsen collection at Ny Carlsberg (fig. 970)[4]. Within an architectural framework we see the man-turned-god recumbent on a couch, with a cornu copiae in his left hand, a phiále in his right, and a table bearing flat and pointed cakes (pyramídes made of wheat and honey[5]) at his side. On the foot of the couch sits a goddess holding in both hands a fillet or perhaps rather a garland for the neck (hypothymís[6]), the carving

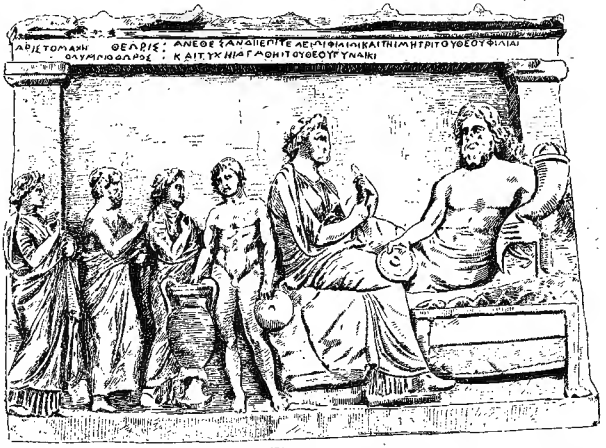

Fig. 970.

[1] Supra p. 1129.

[2] On communion with the dead by means of food see e.g. Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Spirits of Corn and Wild ii. 154. Infra p. 1170 ff.

[3] An important consideration during a repast, when the mouth must be opened and bad spirits as well as good food might gain a ready entrance. In the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1902 xxii. 22 ff. I have argued that the common kóttabos-stand was originally a feasters' gong intended to keep evil at a distance.

[4] Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek: Billedtavler til Kataloget over Antike Kunstvaerker Kiøbenhavn 1908 no. 95, A. Furtwängler 'Sogenanntes "Todtenmahl"-Relief mit Inschrift' in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1897 i. 401—414 with fig. (=my fig. 970), Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 354 ff. fig. 106, ead. Themis p. 312 f. fig. 90.

[5] Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. vi. 2250 D.

[6] Id. ib. viii. 338 D ff.

of which would be eked out by means of colour. Behind the goddess stands a naked cup-bearer, dipping his right hand into the kratér so as to fill the phiále in his left. Then, on a smaller scale, we have two women and a man approaching from the left with hands raised in adoration. The architrave above carries an inscription, which throws a good deal of light (together with some darkness) on the scene represented :

> 'Aristomache, Olympiodoros, Theoris dedicated (this) to Zeus Epitéleios Philios and to Philía the mother of the god and to Tyche Agathé the god's wife[1].'

We gather that the dedicators are worshipping their kinsman transformed into a chthonian Zeus—Epitéleios because he has himself come 'to maturity[2],' Philios because he will be 'friendly' to his friends. The goddess associated with him is in all probability his wife, Tyche Agathé as the inscription calls her. An Agathe Tyche makes an appropriate partner for one who is essentially an Agathos Daimon. This being so, we should have expected Philía, the feminine form of Philios, to be a second title attached to Tyche. Instead of that, it is treated as the name of a third deity, who is described as the mother of the god. Possibly the curious distribution of divine names was motived by the fact that the dedicators too were three in number—a man, his wife, and his mother[3]. Possibly also an effigy of Philía was added in paint on the smooth background between Zeus Epitéleios Philios and Tyche Agathé.

But this does not exhaust the interest of our relief. The artist has, somewhat unexpectedly but quite justifiably, used for his Zeus Philios the familiar type of a Totenmahl or hero-feast[4]. Now Mr J. C. Lawson[5] in a chapter marked by equal insight and eloquence has gone far towards proving, partly from ancient literature[6],

[1] 'Αριστομάχη, | 'Ολυμπιόδωρος, | Θεωρὶς | ἀνέθεσαν Διὶ 'Επιτελείωι Φιλίωι καὶ τῆι μητρὶ τοῦ θεοῦ Φιλίαι | καὶ Τύχηι 'Αγαθῆι τοῦ θεοῦ γυναικί. Since the names of the three dedicators are inscribed above their respective figures, and Theoris heads the procession, it seems that the order of precedence should be Θεωρίς, 'Ολυμπιόδωρος, 'Αριστομάχη.

[2] Cp. Plat. legg. 784 D μήτε γὰρ εἰς γάμους ἴτω μήτε εἰς τὰς τῶν παίδων ἐπιτελειώσεις with Hesych. s.v. ἐπιτελείωσις· αὔξησις. Zeus 'Επιτέλειος would thus be only another form of Zeus Τέλειος, whose priest at Athens was drawn from the ancient clan of the Bouzygai and occupied a special seat in the theatre (Corp. Inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 294 = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 860. 55 = Roberts–Gardner Gk. Epigr. ii. 467 ff. no. 251 ἱερέως | Διὸς Τελεί[ου βουζύγου in lettering (fig. 971) not earlier than s. ii A.D.).

ΙΕΡΕΩΣ
ΔΙΟΣΤΕΛΕΙ
ΟΥΒΟΥΣΥΓΟ

Fig. 971.

[3] So Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 356.

[4] Lübker Reallex.[8] p. 1052 gives a brief bibliography, to which should be added Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1049 n. 1, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] pp. 349—362, 614, ead. Themis pp. 307—316.

[5] J. C. Lawson Modern Greek Folklore and Ancient Greek Religion Cambridge 1910 pp. 543—606 ('The union of gods and men'). The statement 'that Easter falls in the same period of the year as did the great Eleusinian festival' (ib. p. 572) is a slip, which has hindered the critics from appreciating the real merits of this important chapter.

[6] Soph. Ant. 574 f., [653 f.,] 804 f., 810 ff., 891 ff., 1203 ff., 1240 f., [Eur. Tro. 445, Or. 1109, I. A. 460 f.,] Artemid. oneirocr. i. 80 θεῷ δὲ ἢ θεᾷ μιγῆναι ἢ ὑπὸ θεοῦ περανθῆναι νοσοῦντι μὲν θάνατον σημαίνει (θανάτου σημεῖον cod. B.)· τότε γὰρ ἡ ψυχὴ τὰς τῶν θεῶν συνόδους τε καὶ μίξεις μαντεύεται, ὅταν ἐγγὺς ᾖ τοῦ καταλιπεῖν τὸ σῶμα ᾧ ἐνοικεῖ· κ.τ.λ., 2. 49 ἀποθανεῖν δοκεῖν καὶ ἐκκομισθῆναι καὶ κατορυγῆναι...ἀνδρὶ...ἀγάμῳ γάμον προαγορεύει· τέλη μὲν γὰρ ἀμφότερα τοῖς ἀνθρώποις εἶναι νενόμισται καὶ ὁ γάμος καὶ ὁ θάνατος. ἀεὶ δὲ partly from modern folk-song[1], that the Greeks of old aspired to an actual marriage-union with the deities of the underworld, a union to be fore-shadowed here in mystic rites and consummated hereafter in very truth. Every man would one day enter the bridal chamber of Persephone, every woman that of Hades[2]. If this daring belief is rightly credited to them—and the evidence for it is strong—, then we may, I think, venture to interpret the popular scheme of the hero-feast as a naïve representation of the dead man's marriage-banquet. Wedded at last to the queen of the nether world, he is actually feasting in her company. His garland and cakes recall

'the white sesame-grains
And myrtle-berries and poppy-head and water-mint[3]' appropriate to any bridegroom. Were they not the magic means by which he δείκνυται ὑπ' ἀλλήλων. ὅθεν καὶ τοῖς νοσοῦσι τὸ γαμεῖν θάνατον προαγορεύει· καὶ γὰρ τὰ αὐτὰ ἀμφοτέροις συμβαίνει τῷ τε γαμοῦντι καὶ τῷ ἀποθανόντι, οἷον παραπομπὴ φίλων ἀνδρῶν τε καὶ γυναικῶν καὶ στέφανοι καὶ ἀρώματα καὶ μύρα καὶ συγγραφὴ κτημάτων, 2. 65 ἐπειδὴ καὶ ὁ γάμος ἔοικε θανάτῳ καὶ (ἐπειδὴ καὶ cod. B.) ὑπὸ θανάτου σημαίνεται, ἐνταῦθα καλῶς ἔχειν ἠγησάμην ἐτιμηθῆναι (ὑπομνησθῆναι cod. B.) αὐτοῦ. γαμεῖν παρθένον τῷ νοσοῦντι θάνατον σημαίνει· ὅσα γὰρ τῷ γαμοῦντι συμβαίνει, τὰ αὐτὰ καὶ τῷ ἀποθανόντι.

Mr Lawson might have found further support for his theory in the rich storehouse of ancient Greek epitaphs. Turning over the leaves of the Anthology I lit upon the following: Anth. Pal. 7. 13. 2 f. (Leonidas or Meleagros) "Ηρωναν... | "Αιδας εἰς ὑμέναιον ἀνάρπασεν, 7. 183. 2 (Parmenion) "Αιδης τὴν Κροκάλης ἔφθασε παρθενίην, 7. 401. 9 (Krinagoras) χθὼν ὦ δυσνύμφευτε, 7. 492. 6 (? Anyte of Mitylene) νυμφίον ἀλλ' 'Αίδην κηδεμόν' εὐρόμεθα, 7. 507[b] (? Simonides = frag. 124 B Bergk[4], 105 Hiller—Crusius) οὐκ ἐπιδὼν νύμφεια λέχη κατέβην τὸν ἄφυκτον | Γόργιππος ξανθῆς Φερσεφόνης θάλαμον, 7. 547. 3 f. (Leonidas of Alexandreia) κατέστενε δ' οὐχ 'Τμεναίῳ, | ἀλλ' 'Αίδᾳ νύμφαν δωδεκέτιν κατάγων, cp. 7. 221. 5 f. "Αιδη δυσκίνητε, τί τὴν ἐπέραστον ἑταίρην | ἥρπασας; ἢ καὶ σὴν Κύπρις ἔμηνε φρένα; Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 2. 43 = Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 50 ἐνθάδε τὴν πάσης ἀρετῆς ἐπὶ τέρμα μολοῦσαν | Φαναγόραν κατέχει Περσεφόνης θάλαμος, Cougny 2. 122 a. 3 f. = Kaibel no. 35 a. 3 f. ἔθανες, Διονύσιε, καὶ τὸν ἀνάγκης | κοινὸν Φερσεφόνης πᾶσιν ἔχεις θάλαμον, Cougny 2. 127. 3 f. Γλαυκιάδης... | ἦλθ' ἐπὶ πάνδεκτον Φερσεφόνης θάλαμον, 2. 214. 3 f. = Kaibel no. 201. 3 f. συγκέχυται γενέτας δὲ Ποσείδιππος κλυτὸν ἔρως | ξαλωτὸν πέμψας Περσεφόνας θαλάμοις, Cougny 2. 268. 1 f. = Kaibel no. 570. 1 f. οὐχ ὁσίως ἥρπαξας ὑπὸ [χθόνα], κοίρανε Πλουτεῦ, | πενταέτη νύμφην κ.τ.λ.

See also R. Foerster Der Raub und die Rückkehr der Persephone Stuttgart 1874 p. 73 n. 3; E. Maass Orpheus München 1895 p. 219, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 865 n. 1.

[1] E.g. A. Passow Popularia carmina Graeciae recentioris Lipsiae 1860 no. 364. 6 ff. Κ' ἐγὼ πάγω νὰ παντρεφτῶ νὰ πάρω μιὰ γυναῖκα, | Πῆρα τὴν πλάκα πεθερὰ, τὴ μαύρη γῆ γυναῖκα | Κι' αὐτὰ τὰ λιανολίβαρα ὅλα γυναικαδέρφια ('For I must go to marry me, to take a wife unto me; | The black earth for my wife I take, the tombstone as her mother | And yonder little pebbles all her brethren and her sisters'—from the dirge of an old man: Bostitsa), ib. no. 374. 8 f. Ἐψὲς ἐγὼ παντρεύθηκα, ἐψὲς ἀργὰ τὸ βράδυ. | Ὁ ἅδης εἶν' ὁ ἄντρας μου, ἡ πλάκ' ἡ πεθερά μου ('Yesterday was my marriage-day, late yestere'en my wedding, | Hades I for my husband have, the tomb for my new mother'—from the dirge of a young girl). Cp. ib. nos. 38, 65, 152, 180, 370, 380, 381, G. F. Abbott Macedonian Folklore Cambridge 1903 p. 256 n. 1.

[2] This had been remarked by E. Maass Orpheus München 1895 p. 219: 'Jedes Weib, das stirbt, vermählt sich nach alter Anschauung dem Hades; die Männer und Jünglinge betreten ihrerseits den Thalamos der Persephone.' B. Schmidt Das Volksleben der Neugriechen Leipzig 1871 i. 232 f. had already drawn attention to this group of ideas, citing ancient and modern illustrations. See further O. Schrader Totenhochzeit Jena 1904 pp. 1—38 and S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1921 ii. 141—143.

[3] Aristoph. av. 159 f. τὰ λευκὰ σήσαμα | καὶ μύρτα καὶ μήκωνα καὶ σισύμβρια.

was empowered to impregnate his bride[1]? Raised from mortal to immortal

[1] Schol. Aristoph. pax 869 πλακοῦς γαμικὸς ἀπὸ σησάμων πεποιημένος, διὰ τὸ πολύγονον, ὥς φησι Μένανδρος (frag. 435 (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 318 Meineke)). A. de Gubernatis La mythologie des plantes Paris 1882 ii. 347 refers to L. G. Gyraldus Operum quæ extant omnium Tomus Secundus Basileae 1580 p. 485, 24 ff. Quale est illud, quod de nubentibus dici vulgo solebat, Sesamum aut hordeum sere, aut proijce: cum fœcunditatem, & multiplicem generationem ac fœtum significare volebant. Sunt enim huiusmodi semina multæ fœcunditatis, & vt Græci dicunt, πολύγονα. Sed quod de sesamo dicimus, aliqui ex eo placentam fieri solitam in nuptijs, eadem ratione tradunt.'

Boetticher Baumkultus pp. 445—455 begins his article on the myrtle by distinguishing a lucky aspect of the plant as sacred to Aphrodite from a sepulchral aspect of it as sacred to chthonian deities. He finds a connecting link in the cult of Venus Libitina, Aphrodite Epitymbia, etc. I should rather suppose that both aspects are referable to the quickening qualities of the evergreen. When a long journey was to be taken afoot, the mere carrying of myrtle-twigs prevented fatigue. Twisted into rings without the use of iron, they cured swelling of the groin (Plin. nat. hist. 15. 124). To dream of a myrtle-wreath meant marriage with a free-born woman and a prospect of long-lived children (Artemid. oneirocr. 1. 77). Etc., etc. A shrub of such vivifying or revivifying potency was well fitted to be a life-token. Accordingly we hear of two sacred myrtles, which grew before the temple of Quirinus and by their fertility or barrenness portended the fortunes of the patricians and plebeians respectively (Plin. nat. hist. 15. 120 f.). See further A. de Gubernatis op. cit. ii. 233—236, H. Friend Flowers and Flower Lore London 1883 ii. 688 Index s.v. 'Myrtle,' R. Folkard Plant Lore, Legends, and Lyrics London 1884 pp. 454—457. These authors by no means exhaust the topic, which deserves fuller investigation. It might, for example, be discovered that the myrtle-wreath worn by the initiate at Eleusis (Aristoph. ran. 156, 328 ff. with schol. ad loc., Istros frag. 25 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 421 Müller) ap. schol. Soph. O. C. 681: illustrated supra i. 220 f. fig. 163, E. Lübbert in the Ann. d. Inst. 1865 xxxvii. 82 ff. pl. F=L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1868 p. 160=F. Lenormant in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. ii. 570 fig. 2637=Reinach Rép. Vases i. 313, 1 f.) or by the Orphic devotee (supra p. 555) marked him as the prospective consort of a chthonian deity. The botanical fact underlying these beliefs is the polyspermous nature of the myrtle: 'The fruit is a purplish berry, consisting of the receptacle and the ovary blended into one succulent investment enclosing very numerous minute seeds' (The Encyclopædia Britannica[11] Cambridge 1911 xix. 115).

The poppy has an even greater wealth of tiny seeds. Hence it made for fertility, and became the attribute of various mother-goddesses. A. de Gubernatis op. cit. ii. 284 quotes from L. G. Gyraldus op. cit. ii. 468, 39 f. the dictum 'papauer fertilitatis & vrbis symbolum fuit' [where, however, we should restore orbis, cp. Cornut. theol. 28 p. 56, 8 ff. Lang ἀνατιθέασι δ' αὐτῇ (sc. τῇ Δήμητρι) καὶ τὰς μήκωνας κατὰ λόγον· τό τε γὰρ στρογγύλον καὶ περιφερὲς αὐτῶν παρίστησι τὸ σχῆμα τῆς γῆς σφαιροειδοῦς οὔσης, ἥ τε ἀνωμαλία τὰς κοιλότητας καὶ τὰς ἐξοχὰς τῶν ὀρῶν, τὰ δ' ἐντὸς τοῖς ἀντρώδεσι καὶ ὑπονόμοις ἔοικε, σπέρματά τε ἀναρίθμητα γεννῶσιν ὥσπερ ἡ γῆ]. The poppy of Demeter (Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1179 n. 2) was passed on to Rhea (id. ib. p. 1542 n. 1) and to Isis (W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 450 ff. fig.). Kanachos made for the Sicyonians a chryselephantine Aphrodite with a poppy in one hand, an apple in the other (Paus. 2. 10. 5): and here again the influence of Demeter may be suspected; for certain persons derived the old name of Sikyon, Μηκώνη, from the 'poppy,' μήκων, which Demeter there first discovered (et. mag. p. 583, 56 f.: but cp. Ov. fast. 4. 531 ff., Serv. and interp. Serv. in Verg. georg. i. 212). Poppy-heads, as well as myrtle-wreaths, played their part in the Eleusinian initiation (supra i. 425 f. fig. 307 f.).

Lastly, σισύμβριον or 'bergamot-mint' (mentha aquatica) was used for the bridegroom's garland (schol. Aristoph. av. 160), not merely because its branches, leaves, etc. were sweet-scented (Theophr. hist. pl. 6. 6. 2 and frag. 4, 27 ap. Athen. 689 D, Nik. georg. frag. 2. 57 ap. Athen. 684 B), but on account of its aphrodisiac properties. If the rank, henceforward he can read a deeper meaning in the old-world wedding-chant:

'I have fled the bad, I have found the better[1].'

It looks as though the primitive mind conceived of death itself as simply due to the fact that the chthonian deity (whether goddess or god) had claimed another consort[2]. The summons has been sent. The call must be obeyed. But—

'Who knows if life be death and death be life[3]?'

In the embrace of Persephone the dead man becomes the chthonian king. Borne off by Hades the dead woman becomes the chthonian queen. We can understand now the familiar saying and find a further significance in the representation of Death as Love[5].

'Whom the gods love dies young[4],'

wearing of a wreath made from it betokened disease (Artemid. oneirocr. 1. 77), that was due to the fact that the plant in question was recognised as a cure for diseases (Nik. ther. 896). Greeks called it the garland of Aphrodite, Romans the herb of Venus (Dioskor. 2. 154 (155) p. 271 Sprengel); and the medical writers enable us to guess the reason, cp. Dioskor. 2. 154 (155) p. 272 Sprengel δύναμιν δὲ ἔχει θερμαντικὴν· ἁρμόζει δὲ πρὸς στραγγουρίας καὶ λιθιάσεις τὸ σπέρμα σὺν οἴνῳ πινόμενον, id. 2. 155 (156) p. 272 Sprengel of another variety ἔστι δὲ θερμαντικόν, οὐρητικόν, Galen. de simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis ac facultatibus 8. 18. 20 (xii. 124 Kühn) θερμαινούσης καὶ ξηραινούσης κατὰ τὴν τρίτην τάξιν ἐστὶ δυνάμεώς τε καὶ κράσεως. καὶ τὸ σπέρμα δ' αὐτοῦ λεπτομερές τε καὶ θερμὸν ἐστιν, ὅθεν σὺν οἴνῳ τινὲς αὐτὴν διδόασι κ.τ.λ., id. ib. 8. 18. 21 (xii. 124 Kühn) of the other variety ὅταν μὲν ξηρὸν ᾖ, τῆς τρίτης ἐστὶ τάξεως τῶν ξηραινόντων τε ἅμα καὶ θερμαινόντων, κ.τ.λ. On mint in general see A. de Gubernatis op. cit. ii. 226—228, H. Friend op. cit. ii. 687 Index s.v. 'Mint,' R. Folkard op. cit. p. 439 f. Supra i. 257 n. 5.

[1] ἔφυγον κακόν, εὗρον ἄμεινον (carm. pop. 20 a Hiller—Crusius)—an early dactylic line (cp. supra i. 444) first found in Dem. de cor. 259 (cited supra i. 392 n. 4) as a formula used by initiates in the rites of Sabázios, and from him apparently quoted by Hesych. s.v. It is given as a marriage-rubric by Pausanias the Atticist ap. Eustath. in Od. p. 1726, 19 ff. καὶ παροιμία δηλοῖ παρὰ Παυσανίᾳ λέγουσα 'ἔφυγον κακόν, εὗρον ἄμεινον,' ἣν ἔλεγέ, φησίν, ἀμφιθαλὴς παῖς Ἀθήνησιν, ἑστεμμένος ἀκάνθαις μετὰ δρυΐνων καρπῶν, λίκνον βαστάζων πλῆρες ἄρτων, αἰνισσόμενος τὴν ἐκ τοῦ παλαιοῦ βίου ἐπὶ τὸ κρεῖττον μεταβολήν=Zenob. 3. 98, Diogeneian. 4. 74, Plout. 1. 16, Apostol. 8. 16, Phot. lex. and Souid. s.v., cp. Porph. de abst. 1. 1. Probably the so-called proverb was a very ancient charm employed in the mysteries to facilitate the transition from the lower to the higher life, a transition culminating in the divine marriage (see Lobeck Aglaophamus i. 646 ff.). Subsequently it was transferred, with some loss of meaning, to ordinary human marriages.

[2] Cp. the Celtic tales of the Otherworld-visit, which I have summarised in Folk-Lore 1906 xvii. 143 ff. (supra i. 239).

[3] Eur. Polyeidos frag. 638 Nauck[2] (supra p. 868), cp. Eur. Phrixus frag. 833 Nauck[2]. In Aristoph. ran. 1477 f. τίς οἶδεν εἰ τὸ ζῆν μὲν ἐστι κατθανεῖν, | τὸ πνεῖν δὲ δειπνεῖν, τὸ δὲ καθεύδειν κώδιον; the attempts of the editors to extract sense from the latter line are far from convincing. I fancy Aristophanes is poking fun at the prospect held out to every pious believer, the hero-feast (δειπνεῖν) and the poppy-head (for κώδιον read κώδυον, cp. Theophr. hist. pl. 6. 8. 1 and ap. Athen. 680 E, or κωδία, cp. Aristoph. frag. 166 Dindorf ap. Harpokr. s.v. κωδία). Life hereafter was to be one perpetual banquet in the bridal chamber of Persephone: if the new immortal tired of it, he had at least the poppy-capsule to lull him to sleep and to renew his generative powers. Those who retain κώδιον in the text should still interpret the word of the initiate's equipment, the 'fleece of Zeus' (supra i. 422 ff.).

[4] Menand. disexapaton frag. 4 (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 105 Meineke). Cp. Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 340. 8=Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 2. 585. 8.

[5] Supra pp. 309, 1045.

Nor was this union one of merely physical fruition. The Greek was capable of rising to greater heights, and the title Philios had from the first a moral connotation. True, Aristotle denied the possibility of love (philia) between man and God:

'For love, we maintain, exists only where there can be a return of love. But love towards God does not admit of love being returned, nor at all of loving. For it would be strange if one were to say that he loved Zeus[1].'

But popular usage was against him[2]. Whether parched with drought[3], or drenched with rain[4], the man in the street cried out upon 'loved Zeus.' And the like intimacy is attested by half-a-dozen poets from Theognis to Antipatros of Thessalonike[5]. On a red-figured kylix by the potter Sosias Herakles, when admitted to Olympos, makes the same naïve ejaculation[6]. Moreover, the name Diphilos, 'loved by Zeus,' was of common occurrence[7]. No doubt this mutual love did not amount to much. But the root of the matter was there, and its growth was fostered by mystic teaching. On the grandest page of extant Greek literature[8] the Platonic Sokrates tells how Diotima of Mantineia (supposed to be a priestess of Zeus Lykaios[9] and in any case, as her name shows, 'honoured of Zeus') once made plain to him the mysteries of Eros. The initiate, she said, must mount by successive grades from desire of a single beautiful body to desire of all beautiful bodies, and from beauty of body to beauty of soul involving the beauty of customs and laws. Thence he will launch out boldly into the beauty of knowledge until, crossing its wide sea and nearing his journey's end, on a sudden he catches sight

[1] Aristot. mag. mor. 2. 11. 1208 b 28 ff. τὴν γὰρ φιλίαν ἐνταῦθά φαμεν εἶναι οὗ ἐστὶ τὸ ἀντιφιλεῖσθαι, ἡ δὲ πρὸς τὸν θεὸν φιλία οὔτε ἀντιφιλεῖσθαι δέχεται οὔθ' ὅλως τὸ φιλεῖν· ἄτοπον γὰρ ἂν εἴη εἴ τις φαίη φιλεῖν τὸν Δία.

[2] Indeed, he was against himself—witness his brief but pregnant utterance with regard to the Final Cause in met. 12. 7. 1072 b 3 f. κινεῖ δὴ ὡς ἐρώμενον, κινούμενον δὲ τἆλλα κινεῖ. He is groping his way towards the stupendous discovery that 'God is love.'

[3] Marc. Ant. comment. 5. 7 ὦ φίλε Ζεῦ (infra § 9 (b)).

[4] Anth. Pal. 5. 166. 6 (Asklepiades) Ζεῦ φίλε (infra § 9 (b)).

[5] Theogn. 373 Hiller—Crusius Ζεῦ φίλε, θαυμάζω σε· κ.τ.λ., Eupol. χρυσοῦν γένος frag. 13 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 541 f. Meineke) ap. Poll. 10. 63 ἀλλ', ὦ φίλε Ζεῦ, κατάχυτλον τὴν ῥῖν' ἔχεις, Aristoph. eccl. 378 f. καὶ δῆτα πολὺν ἡ μίλτος, ὦ Ζεῦ φίλτατε, | γέλων παρέσχεν, κ.τ.λ., Philem. Pythos frag. 1. 7 f. (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 22 Meineke) ap. Stob. flor. 55. 5 εἰρήνη 'στίν· ὦ Ζεῦ φίλτατε, | τῆς ἐπαφροδίτου καὶ φιλανθρώπου θεοῦ, Kallim. ep. 7. 4 Schneider, 6. 4 Wilamowitz Κρεωφύλῳ, Ζεῦ φίλε, τοῦτο μέγα, Anth. Pal. 5. 108. 4 (Antipatros) ἦ ῥα μάτην, Ζεῦ φίλε, βοῦς ἐγένου. It is obvious that the phrases Ζεῦ φίλε, ὦ φίλε Ζεῦ, ὦ Ζεῦ φίλτατε expressed a variety of moods—indignation, astonishment, delight, etc. But the point is that all alike are colloquial, herein differing somewhat from such usages as Il. 1. 578 πατρὶ φίλῳ ἐπιῆρα φέρειν Διί, Pind. Nem. 10. 104 ff. ἀμέραν τὰν μὲν παρὰ πατρὶ φίλῳ | Διὶ νέμονται, τὰν δ' ὑπὸ κεύθεσι γαίας κ.τ.λ.

[6] Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin ii. 549 ff. no. 2278, C. Lenormant in the Ann. d. Inst. 1830 ii. 232 ff., Mon. d. Inst. i pl. 24 = Reinach Rép. Vases i. 70, 2, Furtwängler—Reichhold—Hauser Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 13 ff. pl. 123, Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art x. 503 ff. fig. 285, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. i. 457 ff., iii. 137 fig. 418. Further bibliography in Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 421 ff. no. 1. Corp. inscr. Gr. iv no. 8291, a ΞΝΙΦΟΥΞΙ.

[7] Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 1152—1156 record twenty-two bearers of the name. See also K. Meisterhans Grammatik der attischen Inschriften[3] Berlin 1900 p. 74 n. 644 a.

[8] I am weighing my words: that is my deliberate opinion.

[9] Schol. Aristeid. p. 468, 15 f. Dindorf.

of Absolute Beauty, timeless, changeless, formless,—the beatific vision which shall make amends

For all our toil while on the road.

Embracing this, he will at last beget no phantom forms of virtue, for it is no phantom that he clasps, but virtues true to type, for he has the very truth. And here he will live for ever as one that is indeed 'loved of God' and a sharer in immortality. That is the hope of which Sokrates, persuaded himself, is fain to persuade others also[1]. To summarise or paraphrase such a passage is, of course, to ruin its effect, and is little short of blasphemy to boot. I can but call attention to the one word theophilés, 'loved of God[2].' Platon had it from the mystics. And Theon of Smyrna (s. ii. A.D.) informs us that the initiate passed upwards through five stages, viz. purification, the tradition of the rite, the eyewitnessing of it, the binding and putting on of the garlands in order to communicate it to others, and finally the resultant felicity of dwelling in the 'love of God' (theophilés) and sharing in the life divine[3].

These beliefs formed a point of contact between paganism and Christianity. The hero-feast is an antecedent of the celestial banquet, a favourite theme in the art of the catacombs[4]. And if the Greeks looked forward to 'the good fare of the blest[5]' in the bridal chamber of Hades or Persephone, John can say 'Blessed are they which are bidden to the marriage supper of the Lamb[6].' The conception, cherished by the Church[7], has inspired not a few modern mystics :

[1] Plat. symp. 209 E—212 B. Faith, Hope, and Charity unite in this triumphant climax.

[2] The relevant words are: τεκόντι δὲ ἀρετὴν ἀληθῆ καὶ θρεψαμένῳ ὑπάρχει θεοφιλεῖ γενέσθαι καὶ εἴπερ τῳ ἄλλῳ ἀνθρώπων, ἀθανάτῳ καὶ ἐκείνῳ. On the later Platonic conception of ἀθανασία I have said my say in The Metaphysical Basis of Plato's Ethics Cambridge 1895 p. 96 ff. See also R. K. Gaye The Platonic Conception of Immortality and its Connexion with the Theory of Ideas (Hare Prize Essay 1903) London 1904.

[3] Theon Smyrn. mathem. p. 14, 18 ff. Hiller καὶ γὰρ αὖ τὴν φιλοσοφίαν μύησιν φαίη τις ἂν ἀληθοῦς τελετῆς καὶ τῶν ὄντων ὡς ἀληθῶς μυστηρίων παράδοσιν. μυήσεως δὲ μέρη πέντε. τὸ μὲν προηγούμενον καθαρμός· οὔτε γὰρ ἅπασι τοῖς βουλομένοις μετουσία μυστηρίων ἔδ̓τιν, ἀλλ᾽ εἰσὶν οὓς αὐτῶν εἴργεσθαι προαγορεύεται, οἷον τοὺς χεῖρας μὴ καθαρὰς καὶ φωνὴν ἀξύνετον ἔχοντας, καὶ αὐτοὺς δὲ τοὺς μὴ εἰργομένους ἀνάγκη καθαρμοῦ τινος πρότερον τυχεῖν. μετὰ δὲ τὴν κάθαρσιν δευτέρα ἐστὶν ἡ τῆς τελετῆς παράδοσις· τρίτη δὲ <ἡ ins. C. A. Lobeck> ἐπονομαζομένη ἐποπτεία· τετάρτη δέ, ὃ δὴ καὶ τέλος τῆς ἐποπτείας, ἀνάδεσις καὶ στεμμάτων ἐπίθεσις, ὥστε καὶ ἑτέροις, ἅς τις παρέλαβε τελετάς, παραδοῦναι δύνασθαι, ἁδυοχίας τυχόντα ἡ ἱεροφαντίας ἤ τινος ἄλλης ἱερωσύνης· πέμπτη δὲ ἡ ἐξ αὐτῶν περιγενομένη κατὰ τὸ θεοφιλὲς καὶ θεοῖς συνδίαιτον εὐδαιμονία (so I. Bouillaud for εὐδαιμονίαν cod. A.). See Lobeck Aglaophamus i. 38 ff.

[4] W. Lowrie Christian Art and Archæology New York 1901 pp. 221—223, L. von Sybel Christliche Antike Marburg 1906 i. 181—209 (the best account), C. M. Kaufmann Handbuch der christlichen Archäologie Paderborn 1913 pp. 269—274, 358.

[5] Aristoph. ran. 85 ἐς μακάρων εὐωχίαν, cp. Plat. Phaid. 115 D. Notice the schol. Aristoph. loc. cit. ἢ ὡς περὶ τετελευτηκότος λέγει, ὡσανεὶ εἴπε τὰς μακάρων νήσους· ἢ ὅτι Ἀρχελάῳ τῷ βασιλεῖ μέχρι τῆς τελευτῆς μετὰ ἄλλων πολλῶν συνῆν ἐν Μακεδονίᾳ, καὶ μακάρων εὐωχίαν ἔφη τὴν ἐν τοῖς βασιλείοις διατριβήν. If Hades was known as 'Ἀγησίλαος, Πολύαρχος, and the like (supra p. 1113 n. 0 no. (2)), it is at least possible that he bore the title 'Αρχέλαος. Aristophanes' sous-entendu would thus gain in point.

[6] Rev. 19. 9 with the context.

[7] A. Dieterich Eine Mithrasliturgie[2] Leipzig and Berlin 1910 pp. 129—134.

He lifts me to the golden doors ;
The flashes come and go ;
All heaven bursts her starry floors,
And strows her lights below,
And deepens on and up ! the gates
Roll back, and far within
For me the Heavenly Bridegroom waits,
To make me pure of sin.
The sabbaths of Eternity,
One sabbath deep and wide—
A light upon the shining sea—
The Bridegroom with his bride ![1]

How much, or how little, of all this is to be found in our relief, it is not easy to say. The title Epiteleios suggests the mystic marriage, and the stress laid on Philios and Philia tends to confirm the suggestion. We must leave it at that.

The matter-of-fact spectator, who cared little for mysteries or mystical symbolism, saw in Zeus Philios a god of good company, given to feasting in both this world and the next. Accordingly, Diodoros of Sinope, a poet of the new comedy, who flourished early in s. iii B.C.[2], makes him the discoverer of the parasite and his ways :

'Twas Zeus the Friendly, greatest of the gods
Beyond all doubt, that first invented parasites.
For he it is who comes into our houses,
Nor cares a rap whether we're rich or poor.
Wherever he espies a well-strown couch
With a well-appointed table set beside it,
Joining us straightway like a gentleman
He asks himself to breakfast, eats and drinks,
And then goes home again, nor pays his share.
Just what I do myself ! When I see couches
Strown and the tables ready, door ajar,
In I come quietly, all in order due—
I don't disturb, not I, my fellow-drinker.
Everything set before me I enjoy,
Drink, and go home again, like Zeus the Friendly[3].

The inference to be drawn from the fourth-century reliefs and the third-century comedy is that at Athens Zeus Philios, like Zeus Sotér[4], Zeus Xénios[5], and other

[1] Tennyson St. Agnes' Eve 25 ff.

[2] J. Kirchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 660, Lübker Reallex.[8] p. 293.

[3] Diod. Sinop. ἐπίκληρος frag. 1. 5 ff. (Frag. com. Gr. iii. 543 ff. Meineke) ap. Athen. 239 A ff.

[4] Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 1 no. 305, 10 ff. = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. ii—iii. 1 no. 676, 10 ff. ἐπειδὴ ο[ἱ ἐπιμεληταὶ πάσας] ἐθ[υόν τε τὰς θ|υ]σίας τῶ[ι Διὶ τῶι Σωτῆρι καὶ τ]εῖ Ἀθη[ναῖ τεῖ | Σω]τείρ[αι καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἐπεμε]λήθησα[ν μετὰ | το]ῦ ἱερ[έως καλῶς καὶ φιλοτίμω]ς, ἐπεμελήθη|[σα]ν δὲ [καὶ τῆς στρώσεως τῆς κλ[ί]νης καὶ τῆς κ|[οσ]μήσεως τῆς τραπέζης· κ.τ.λ.] in a decree of 277/6 B.C.

[5] Pyrgion Κρητικὰ νόμιμα frag. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 486 f. Müller) ap. Athen. 143 E—F ἦσαν δὲ καὶ ξενικοὶ θᾶκοι καὶ τράπεζα τρίτη δεξιᾶς (I. Casaubon cj. ἐκ δεξιᾶς or ἐν δεξιᾷ) εἰσιόντων εἰς τὰ ἀνδρεῖα· ἣν Ξενίου τε Διὸς ξενίαν τε προσηγόρευον.

chthonian powers[1], had a couch set for him and a table spread. The rite was private rather than public, belonging essentially to family worship[2] and being in effect a communion between the dead and the living[3]. A. Furtwängler[4] justly compares the lectisternia, which are commonly held to have been a Roman adaptation of the Greek Theoxénia[5]. Be that as it may, the comparison is of interest. For it is possible, perhaps even probable, that at the Greek feast, as at its Roman equivalent, the god was represented in visible shape. But in what shape? Our only clue is the Roman custom. Livy mentions 'heads of gods' placed on the couches[6]. Pompeius Festus (s. ii A.D.)—an excellent authority, since he abridged the important dictionary of Verrius Flaccus (c. 10 B.C.)[7]—states that these 'heads of gods' were properly termed struppi and consisted in bundles of verbenae or 'sacred plants[8].' Elsewhere Festus, à propos of stroppus in the sense of a priestly head-dress or wreath, informs us that at Tusculum an

[1] Furtwängler Samml. Sabouroff Sculptures p. 28 f., A. Milchhöfer in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1887 ii. 31 (with list of deities).

[2] The ἑρανισταί (supra p. 1161 f.) formed a quasi-family, worshipping—we have conjectured—its deceased founder as its ancestor.

[3] Supra p. 1162 n. 2. See also Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 419.

[4] A. Furtwängler in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1897 i. 405.

[5] F. Robiou 'Recherches sur l'origine des lectisternes' in the Rev. Arch. 1867 i. 403—415, F. Deneken De Theoxeniis Berolini 1881, (G.) Wackermann Ueber das Lectisternium Hanau 1888 pp. 1—28, G. E. Marindin in Smith—Wayte—Marindin Dict. Ant. ii. 15—17, C. Pascal 'De lectisterniis apud Romanos' in the Rivista di filologia 1894 xxii. 272—280, id. Studî di antichità e mitologia Milano 1896 p. 19 ff., W. Warde Fowler The Roman Festivals London 1899 pp. 200, 218, 273, id. The Religious Experience of the Roman People London 1911 pp. 263 ff., 268, 318 f., A. Bouché-Leclercq in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 1006—1012, Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 161 f., Wissowa Rel. Kult. Röm.[2] pp. 61, 269 f., 311, 315, 421 ff.

[6] Liv. 40. 59 terra movit: in foris (K. A. Duker cj. fanis) publicis, ubi lectisternium erat, deorum capita, quae (K. A. Duker and J. N. Madvig cjj. qui) in lectis erant, averterunt se, lanaque (J. Scheffer cj. laenaque, G. Cuypers and J. Marquardt cjj. lanxque) cum integumentis (F. van Oudendorp cj. intrimentis), quae Iovi opposita (C. Sigone and J. Scheffer cjj. apposita) fuit, decidit=Iul. Obseq. 61 in lectisternio Iovis terrae motu deorum capita se converterunt. lana cum integumentis, quae Iovi erant apposita, decidit.

[7] M. Schanz Geschichte der römischen Litteratur[2] München 1899 ii. 1. 319 ff., Sir J. E. Sandys A History of Classical Scholarship[2] Cambridge 1906 i. 200.

[8] Fest. p. 347, 34 f. Müller, p. 472, 15 f. Lindsay struppi vocantur in pulvinaribus <fasciculi de verbenis facti, qui pro de>orum capitibus ponuntur=Paul. ex Fest. p. 346, 3 Müller, p. 473, 4 f. Lindsay struppi vocabantur in pulvinaribus fasciculi de verbenis facti, qui pro deorum capitibus ponebantur. Cp. Paul. ex Fest. p. 64, 5 Müller, p. 56, 12 Lindsay capita deorum appellabantur fasciculi facti ex verbenis.

Serv. in Verg. Aen. 12. 120 verbena proprie est herba sacra sumpta de loco sacro Capitolii, qua coronabantur fetiales et paterpatratus foedera facturi vel bella indicturi. abusive tamen verbenas iam vocamus omnes frondes sacratas, ut est laurus, oliva vel myrtus. etc. Cp. Plin. nat. hist. 22. 5, 25. 105 ff., interp. Serv. in Verg. ecl. 8. 65, Donat. in Ter. Andr. 4. 3. 11.

S. Eitrem in the Class. Rev. 1921 xxxv. 20 finds an illustration of these struppi in a painting of s. v B.C. in the Tomba del Letto funebre at Corneto (F. Poulsen Fra Ny Carlsberg Glyptoteks Samlinger Copenhagen 1920 i fig. 34, F. Weege Etruskische Malerei Halle (Saale) 1921 pls. 23, 24): 'on a mighty lectus you see on the torus not two recumbent defuncts, but two green crowns, surmounted by the Etruscan (and Roman) pointed head-dress, the tutulus.'

object known as struppus was placed on the couch of Castor[1]. We gather, then, that at the lectisternia Iupiter and the gods in general were originally represented by twisted bundles of herbs. These bundles seem to have been padded and clothed as puppets; for in 179 B.C., shaken by an earthquake, the wool and wrappings attached to Iupiter slipped off revealing his true inwards to the confusion of all present[2]. Later, if we may trust the evidence of a Roman lamp (fig. 972)[3] and certain Roman coins (figs. 973, 974, 975)[4], the puppets of the

Fig. 972.

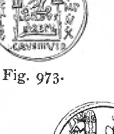

Fig. 973.

Fig. 974.

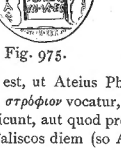

Fig. 975.

[1] Fest. p. 313 a 12 ff. Müller, p. 410, 6 ff. Lindsay stroppus est, ut Ateius Philologus (L. Ateius Praetextatus frag. 7 Funaioli) existimat, quod Graece στρόφιον vocatur, et quod sacerdotes pro insigni habent in capite. quidam coronam esse dicunt, aut quod pro corona insigne in caput inponatur, quale sit strophium. itaque apud Faliscos diem (so Antonius Augustinus for idem codd.) festum esse, qui vocetur Struppearia, quia coronati ambulent; et a Tusculanis, quod in pulvinari inponatur Castoris, struppum vocari = Paul. ex Fest. p. 312, 1 Müller, p. 411, 1 ff. Lindsay stroppus, quod Graece στρόφιον dicitur, pro insigni habebatur in capitibus sacerdotum; alii id coronam esse dixerunt. Cp. Plin. nat. hist. 21. 3.

[2] Liv. 40. 59 and Iul. Obseq. 61 cited supra p. 1170 n. 6.

Cp. the woollen effigies of the Lares hung up at the cross-roads during the Compitalia (Paul. ex Fest. p. 121, 17 f. Müller, p. 108, 27 ff. Lindsay; Fest. p. 237 b 34 ff. Müller, p. 272, 15 ff. Lindsay = Paul. ex Fest. p. 239, 1 ff. Müller, p. 273, 7 ff. Lindsay. See further Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Spirits of Corn and Wild ii. 94 ff., 107 f.), if not also the saying that the gods had woollen feet (Apollod. frag. 41 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 435 Müller) ap. Macrob. Sat. 1. 8. 5, Petron. sat. 44. 18, Porph. in Hor. od. 3. 2. 31 f.).

[3] Fig. 972 shows the relief on the handle of a terra-cotta lamp first published by P. S. Bartoli—G. P. Bellori Le antiche lucerne sepolcrali Roma 1691 ii pl. 34 (A. Bouché-Leclercq in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 1011 fig. 4381, H. B. Walters History of Ancient Pottery London 1905 ii. 412). Sarapis and Isis, Selene and Helios, are here represented by half-length busts set on the couch. A similar bust of white marble, obtained in the Levant by Mr W. Simpson and now in my possession (height $3\frac{3}{4}$ inches: kálathos broken off: traces of paint (?) on face, chest, etc.: eye-holes and breast-jewel once filled in with glass or other glittering substance), was very possibly used at some lectisternium of Sarapis (cp. e.g. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Pontus, etc. p. 101 no. 57 a copper of Sinope struck by Caracalla: rev. Zeus Sarapis on couch to left, with eagle on right hand, sceptre in left, Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 507).

Another lamp-handle with a similar design, found at Pesaro, is suspect as being derived from the Lucernae fictiles Musei Passerii Pisauri 1739—1751 iii pl. 51 (A. Bouché-Leclercq loc. cit. iii. 1011 fig. 4382): see the exposure by H. Dressel in the Röm. Mitth. 1892 vii. 144 ff. (150 'una solenne impostura'), H. B. Walters History of Ancient Pottery ii. 408.

[4] Denarii of the gens Coelia, struck c. 61 B.C., have for reverse type a lectisternium

lectisternia appear to have developed into half-length busts. Indeed, on one occasion, when Seleukos was sending back to Athens the statues of Harmodios and Aristogeiton carried off by Xerxes, the Rhodians invited the venerable bronzes to a public banquet and installed them bodily on the sacred couches[1]. So much for progressive anthropomorphism. The vegetable bundles, which formed the primitive effigies[2], may be taken to imply that the souls of the dead were conceived as animating the yearly vegetation[3]. And the same belief may underlie the rites of Iupiter Dapalis[4] and Iupiter Farreus[5], in which Mr Warde surmounted by a half-figure and flanked by two trophies. The front is inscribed L·CALDVS | VII·VR·EPVL (=Lucius Caldus septemvir epulo). To left and right is the legend, read downwards, C·CALDVS | IMP·A (or AV)·X (=Gaius Caldus imperator augur decemvir sacris faciundis). Below is CALDVS·III·VIR (=Caldus triumvir monetalis). See Morell. Thes. Num. Fam. Rom. i. 100 ff., ii pl. Coelia I, IA, IB, Babelon Monn. rép. rom. i. 373 ff. with six figs., G. F. Hill Historical Roman Coins London 1909 p. 76 ff. pl. 10, 44, Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. i. 475 pl. 47, 23 f., pl. 48, 1. Figs. 973—975 are from specimens in my collection. The identification of the personage seen above the couch has long been disputed. He is either the moneyer's father, L. Coelius Caldus, as septemvir epulo preparing the feast for Iupiter (Rasche Lex. Num. ii. 659 f., T. Mommsen Histoire de la monnaie romaine Paris 1870 ii. 506, Babelon loc. cit., G. F. Hill op. cit. p. 78), or—more probably—the effigy of Iupiter himself eating the sacrificial meal (see the remarks of S. Havercamp in Morell. op. cit. i. 102, Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 507, H. A. Grueber in Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. i. 474 n. 2).

The two epula Iovis, which took place on Sept. 13, the foundation-day of the Capitoline temple, and on Nov. 13, were in relation to the ludi Romani and ludi plebei respectively (Wissowa Rel. Kult. Röm.[2] pp. 127, 423, 453 ff.). Iupiter had a lectulus, Iuno and Minerva each a sella (Val. Max. 2. 1. 2), while the magistrates and senate took the meal before them in Capitolio (Liv. 38. 57, 45. 39, Gell. 12. 8. 2 f., Dion Cass. 39. 30, 48. 52). See further E. Aust in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 732, 734 f., W. Warde Fowler The Roman Festivals London 1899 p. 215 ff., id. The Religious Experience of the Roman People London 1911 pp. 172 f., 336, 338, 353. Hence the title of Iupiter Epulo (Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 3696 found in the Forum at Rome=Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4964, with the criticisms of G. Wissowa in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 265, who prefers T. Mommsen's reading (Bull. d. Inst. 1873 p. 51 f.) [magistri] quinq(uennales) | [collegi] teib(icinum) Rom(anorum), qui | [s(acris) p(ublicis) p(raesto) s(unt)], Iov(i) Epul(oni) sac(rum) | etc. to that of E. Bormann and H. Dessau qui | .... Iov(is) epul(o), sac(ris) | [p(ublicis) p(raesto) s(unt)]: | etc.).

[1] Val. Max. 2. 10. 1 ext.

[2] Masurius Sabinus ap. Serv. in Verg. Aen. 2. 225 Masurius Sabinus delubrum, effigies, a delibratione corticis; nam antiqui felicium arborum ramos cortice detracto in effigies deorum formabant, unde Graeci ξόανον dicunt. Cp. Serv. in Verg. Aen. 4. 56, Paul. ex Fest. p. 73, 1 Müller, p. 64, 6 f. Lindsay, pseudo-Ascon. in Cic. div. in Caec. p. 101, 16 f. Baiter (in J. C. Orelli's ed. of Cicero Turici 1833 v. 2. 101). But a closer parallel may be found in the Corn-maiden (supra i. 397 n. 4 pl. xxviii).

[3] Supra i. 687.

[4] Cato de agr. 132 dapem hoc modo fieri oportet: Iovi Dapali culignam vini quantam vis polluceto. eo die feriae bubus et bubulcis et qui dapem facient. cum pollucere oportebit, sic facies: 'Iuppiter Dapalis, quod tibi fieri oportet in domo familia mea culignam vini dapi, ei<us> rei ergo macte hac illace dape pollucenda esto.' manus interluito, postea vinum sumito: 'Iuppiter Dapalis, macte istace dape pollucenda esto, macte vino inferio esto.' Vestae, si voles, dato. daps Iovi assaria pecuina (pecuina v.) urna vini. Iovi caste profanato sua contagione. postea dape facta serito milium, panicum, alium, lentim.

The adjective dapalis, 'sumptuous,' is most frequently found as an epithet of cena (Thes. Ling. Lat. v. 35, 29 ff.).

[5] Gaius inst. 1. 112 farreo in manus (Göschen, followed by P. Krüger—W. Studemund, Fowler conjectures that Iupiter himself was originally identified with the flesh, the wine, and the bread consumed by his worshippers[1].

It is possible, then, that the communion-feast of Zeus Philios approximated to, and paved the way for, the agápe or 'love-supper' of the early Christian Church[2]. Nevertheless the evidence is indirect and by no means conclusive. We shall be on surer, if lower, ground in returning to the cult-monuments of Attike.

(2) Zeus Philios on the Attic coast, etc.

To the west of the Asklepieîon near the strand of Zea there appears to have been a common sanctuary of Zeus Meilíchios and Zeus Philios[3]. Votive reliefs from the site show the latter god in the same types (anthropomorphic and theriomorphic) as the former.

On the one hand, a slab of Pentelic marble, found on the eastern slope of Mounichia at a point two hundred paces from the sea, represents him (fig. 976)[4] as a kingly personage enthroned towards the right with a sceptre (painted) in his hand. He is approached by a woman and a girl—Mynnion and her daughter, as we infer from the inscription added above in lettering of s. iv B.C.:

'[M]ynnion dedicated (this) to Zeus Philios[5].'

A fragmentary relief of white marble, found later in the same locality, was clearly of similar type[6]. On the left are seen the head of Zeus, his left shoulder, and his left hand holding a sceptre. On the right a bearded man and a youthful figure draw near with right hand raised in the attitude of adoration: behind them there cj. manum) conveniunt per quoddam genus sacrificii, quod Iovi Farreo fit, in quo farreus panis adhibetur; unde etiam confarreatio dicitur; etc.

[1] W. Warde Fowler The Religious Experience of the Roman People London 1911 p. 141 'The cult-title [Farreus] should indicate that the god was believed to be immanent in the cake of far, rather than that it was offered to him (so I should also take I. Dapalis, though in later times the idea had passed into that of sacrifice, Cato, R. R. 132), and if so, the use of the cake was sacramental.' A shrewd and scholarly verdict. Wissowa Rel. Kult. Röm.[2] p. 119 'die heilige Handlung gilt dem Juppiter, welcher von dem zur Anwendung kommenden farreum libum den Beinamen Farreus erhält' is inadequate. B. J. Polenaar on Gaius inst. 1. 112 cp. Adorea as goddess of martial glory (Hor. od. 4. 4. 41) a farris honore (Plin. nat. hist. 18. 14): but the derivation of the word from ador, though assumed by the ancients, is doubtful or worse (see F. Stolz in the Indogermanische Forschungen 1899 x. 74 f., Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] p. 13 s.v. 'adōria').

[2] On the Christian ἀγάπαι consult A. Kestner Die Agape oder der geheime Weltbund der Christen Jena 1819, E. H. Plumptre in Smith—Cheetham Dict. Chr. Ant. i. 39 ff., R. St. J. Tyrwhitt ib. i. 625 ff., H. Leclercq in F. Cabrol Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie Paris 1907 i. 775—848, A. J. Maclean in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1908 i. 166—175.

[3] Supra p. 1104.

[4] R. Schöne Griechische Reliefs Leipzig 1872 p. 53 f. no. 105 pl. 25, Friederichs—Wolters Gipsabgüsse p. 370 no. 1128, Einzelaufnahmen no. 1247, 2 with Text v. 22 by E. Löwy, Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 354 f. no. 1405 pl. 59 (=my fig. 976), Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 362, 7 (wrongly described ib. p. 363 as 'Hommage à Zeus Meilichios'). Height 0·22^{m}, breadth 0·21^{m}.

[5] Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1572 [Μ]ΥΝΝΙΟΝΔΙΙΦΙΛΙΩΙΑΝΕΘ[ΗΚΕΝ]= [Μ]ύννιον Διὶ Φιλίωι ἀνέθ[ηκεν].

[6] I. C. Dragatses in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1885 p. 89 f. no. β', Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 355. Height 0·16^{m}, breadth 0·30^{m}.

are traces of a third head. The whole is enclosed by an architectural framework, which bears the inscription:

'Hermaios (dedicated this) to Zeus Philios[1].'

On the other hand, the same site yielded two reliefs representing a snake accompanied by the words:

'——— dedicated (this) to Zeus Philios[2].'

Fig. 976.

As before[3], we must suppose that the snake figures the soul of the divinised dead, here conciliated by the euphemistic title Zeus 'the Friendly One.' Philios is virtually a synonym of Meilichios[4].

Other reliefs, which probably derive from the same cult-centre in the Peiraeus,

[1] Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 Add. no. 1572*b* ΕΡΜΑΙΟΣΔΙΙΦΙΛΙΩΙ = Ἑρμαῖος Διὶ Φιλίωι.

[2] (1) I. C. Dragatses in the Δελτ. Ἀρχ. 1888 p. 135, Corp. inscr. Att. iv. 2 no. 1572*c* a fragmentary marble slab inscribed ϽΙΛΙ and ΞΝ = [– – – Διὶ Φ]ιλ[ίωι] | [ἀνέθηκ]εν above the relief of a snake. (2) I. C. Dragatses in the Δελτ. Ἀρχ. 1888 p. 135 no. 3, Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 355 the relief of a snake with the inscription Διὶ Φ[ιλ]ίωι [ἀνέθηκ]εν.

[3] Supra p. 1111.

[4] This explains the otherwise inexplicable gloss of Hesych. φιλιός (Soping corr. φίλιος, M. Schmidt cj. ἀφάδιος ?)· ὁ ἀποτρόπαιος, κατ' εὐφημισμ[έν]ον.

repeat the types in question but, having no inscribed dedication, cannot be assigned with assurance to either god. Two examples will suffice. A fourth-century relief in Pentelic marble (fig. 977)[1] shows, within an architectural border, Zeus enthroned towards the right, holding a phiále in his right hand and a sceptre (painted) in his left. Before him kneels a woman, who with a well-known gesture of supplication stretches out both hands to clasp his knees[2]. Behind her stands a second woman, with right hand uplifted. They are accompanied by a couple of children. The scene is closed by two hieródouloi—a boy carrying a flat basket on his right hand while he grasps a ram with his left, and a girl supporting a large round basket on her head. The fact that in reliefs of this sort the father is so often escorted by his son, the mother by her daughter, suggests that the god, whether Meilichios or Philios, was in any case worshipped as Téleios.

Fig. 977.

More difficult to interpret is another fourth-century relief (fig. 978)[3] representing a cylindrical altar with a snake coiled about it and a pair of snakes, both bearded, in heraldic pose to right and left. Have we here a votive tablet honouring the same god under all three aspects?

The chthonian character of Zeus Philios is borne out by his ability to witness oaths and to send dreams. Greek dialogues, letters, and speeches abound in such phrases as 'by Zeus the Friendly[4],' 'by the Friendly Zeus[5],' 'by the Friendly

[1] Friederichs—Wolters Gipsabgüsse p. 375 no. 1139, Einzelaufnahmen no. 1245, 3 with Text v. 20 by E. Löwy, Staïs Marbres et Bronzes: Athènes[2] p. 242 no. 1408, Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 357 f. no. 1408 pl. 65 (=my fig. 977), Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 363 no. 2. Height 0·25[m], breadth 0·40[m].

[2] C. Sittl Die Gebärden der Griechen und Römer Leipzig 1890 pp. 163 ff., 282 f., Svoronos op. cit. p. 358.

[3] Svoronos op. cit. p. 441 no. 1441 pl. 71 (=my fig. 978). Height 0·15[m], breadth 0·24[m].

[4] πρὸς Διὸς Φιλίου Plat. Phaedr. 234 E, Minos 321 C, Ioul. epist. 3. 2. Cp. πρὸς Διὸς Φιλίου τε καὶ Ἑταιρείου Sokrat. epist. 27. 1 p. 627 Hercher.

[5] πρὸς Φιλίου Διός Ioul. or. 2 p. 123, 9 Hertlein, or. 3 p. 165, 23 Hertlein, Aineias of Gaza epist. 1.

One[1],' 'yes, by the Friendly One[2],' 'no, by your Friendly One and mine[3].'

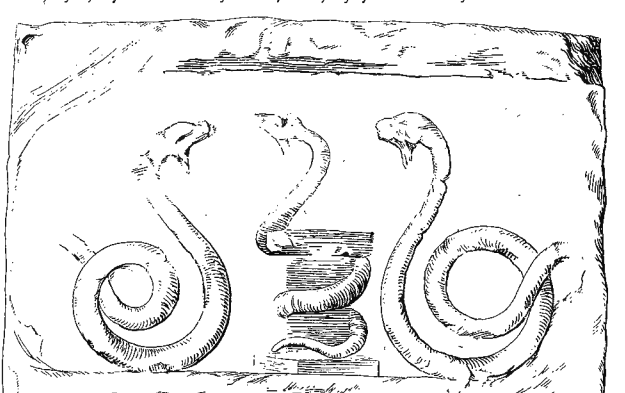

Fig. 978.

Friends in general swore by Zeus Philios[4], who came to be looked upon as the overseer and guardian of friendship[5], or ultimately as a god of love who would

[1] πρὸς Φιλίου Plat. Euthyphr. 6 B, Gorg. 500 B, 519 E, Loukian. Herod. 7, rhet. praecept. 4, de dipsad. 9, Themist. or. I. 17 A p. 19, 6 Dindorf, Prokop. epist. 75, 103, 116, 132.

[2] ναὶ τὸν Φίλιον Aristoph. Ach. 730 with schol. ad loc. νὴ τὸν Φίλιον Pherekrat. κραπάταλοι frag. 16. 4 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 293 Meineke) ap. Phot. lex. s.v. Φίλιος Ζεύς = Souid. s.v. Φίλιος.

[3] μὰ τὸν Φίλιον τὸν ἐμόν τε καὶ σόν Plat. Alcib. I 109 D, imitated by Aristain. epist. 2. 14 μὰ τὸν Φίλιον Ἔρωτα (D. Wyttenbach om. Ἔρωτα as a gloss) τὸν ἐμόν τε καὶ σόν and Synes. epist. 49 p. 660 Hercher and 59 p. 672 ναὶ μὰ τὸν Φίλιον τὸν ἐμόν τε καὶ σόν, 103 p. 700 οὐ μὰ τὸν Φίλιον τὸν ἐμόν τε καὶ σόν, 129 p. 716 νὴ τὸν Φίλιον τὸν ἐμόν τε καὶ σόν, 95 p. 694 οὐ μὰ τὸν Ὁμόγνιον τὸν ἐμόν τε καὶ σόν. We have a similar usage of the possessive pronoun (one of those little touches, which show that on occasion Greek religion could be personal as well as civic) in Eur. Andr. 602 f. ἥτις ἐκ δόμων | τὸν σὸν λιποῦσα Φίλιον (sc. Δία) ἐξεκώμασε | κ.τ.λ., Hec. 345 (cited supra p. 1097 n. 2).

[4] Menand. ἀνδρόγυνος frag. 6 (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 85 Meineke) ap. Phot. lex. s.v. Φίλιος Ζεύς = Souid. s.v. Φίλιος· ... μαρτύρομαι τὸν Φίλιον, ὦ Κράτων, Δία, Loukian. Toxar. 11 f. ΜΝΗΣ. ὀμούμεθα, εἴ τι καὶ ὅρκου δεῖν νομίζεις. τίς δέ σοι τῶν ἡμετέρων θεῶν—ἆρ' ἱκανὸς ὁ Φίλιος; ΤΟΞ. καὶ μάλα·... ΜΝΗΣ. ἴστω τοίνυν ὁ Ζεὺς ὁ Φίλιος, ἢ μὴν κ.τ.λ., schol. rec. Soph. Ai. 492 p. 211, 6 ff. ἐφεστίου Διός· τοῦ τιμωμένου ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ καὶ ἐφορῶντος τὴν συνοίκησιν ἡμῶν. Ἐφέστιον Δία προτείνουσιν οἱ συνοικοῦντες· οἱ δὲ φίλοι Φίλιον· οἱ δὲ ἐν μιᾷ τάξει καταλεγόμενοι καὶ μιᾷ συμμορίᾳ, Ἑταιρεῖον· οἱ δὲ ξένοι, Ξένιον· οἱ δὲ ἐν ὅρκοις συμφωνίας ποιοῦντες, Ὅρκιον· οἱ δὲ δεδιότες, Ἱκέσιον· οἱ δὲ ἀδελφοί, Ὁμόγνιον = schol. Eur. Hec. 345.

[5] Phrynichos the 'Atticist' (c. 180 A.D.) in Bekker anecd. i. 34, 14 (cited supra p. 1092 n. 8), ib. i. 71, 7 Φίλιος· ὁ φιλίας ἔφορος θεός, Phot. lex. s.v. Φίλιος Ζεύς = Souid. s.v. Φίλιος· ὁ τὰ περὶ τὰς φιλίας ἐπισκοπῶν, et. mag. p. 793, 43 Φίλιος Ζεύς· ὁ τὰ περὶ τῆς φιλίας (F. Sylburg cj. τὴν φιλίαν) ἐπισκοπῶν, Olympiod. in Plat. Gorg. 500 B (published by have all men dwell together in amity[1]. A title with such claims to popularity was naturally included among the stock epithets of Zeus[2].

An oblong slab of limestone found in the precinct of Asklepios at Epidauros bears a dedication to Zeus Phílios 'in accordance with a dream' and adds, as symbol of the god, a branch of olive or oak enclosed in a circle[3]. It must not be

A. Jahn in the Neue Jahrbücher für Philologie und Pädagogik Suppl. 1848 xiv. 364 f.) ἐπὶ τὸν ἔφορον τῆς φιλίας φέρει αὐτόν, ἵνα εἰδὼς ὅτι θεός ἐστιν ὁ τῆς φιλίας προστάτης μὴ πάλιν παίξῃ· ὁ γὰρ παίζων εἰς φίλον τὸν προστάτην ταύτης θεὸν παίζει, schol. Plat. Gorg. 500 B Διὸς ἦν ἐπώνυμον παρ' Ἀθηναίοις ὁ Φίλιος, ἐκ τοῦ εἶναι τῶν φιλικῶν καθηκόντων αὐτὸν ἔφορον, Thom. Mag. ecl. voc. Att. p. 382 Ritschl Φίλιος ὁ τῆς φιλίας ἔφορος θεός, Favorin. lex. p. 1188, 57 Φίλιος, ὁ φιλίας ἔφορος, p. 1832, 62 f. Φίλιος Ζεύς, ὁ τὰ περὶ τῆς φιλίας ἐπισκοπῶν. With these scholastic definitions cp. such passages as Liban. epist. 19 καὶ ταύτην τίνομεν τῷ Φιλίῳ τὴν δίκην ὅτι δὴ φίλων ἡμῖν ἐφάνη τι τιμιώτερον, 1204 ὑπέμνησα Φιλίου Διός and context.

[1] Dion Chrys. or. 1 p. 56 f. Reiske Ζεὺς γὰρ...ἐπονομάζεται...καὶ Φίλιός τε καὶ Ἑταιρεῖος ... Φίλιος δὲ καὶ Ἑταιρεῖος ὅτι πάντας ἀνθρώπους ξυνάγει καὶ βούλεται εἶναι ἀλλήλοις φίλους, ἐχθρὸν δὲ ἡ πολέμιον μηδένα = or. 12 p. 412 f. Reiske Ζεὺς γὰρ...ὀνομάζεται...καὶ Φίλιος καὶ Ἑταιρεῖος... Φίλιος δὲ καὶ Ἑταιρεῖος ὅτι πάντας ἀνθρώπους ξυνάγει καὶ βούλεται φίλους εἶναι ἀλλήλοις, ἐχθρὸν δὲ ἡ πολέμιον οὐδένα οὐδενός, Eustath. in magnam quadragesimam oratio praeparatoria 44 (= Eustath. opusc. p. 86 Tafel) πονηροὶ οἱ μὴ ἀγαπῶντες· πονηροὺς δὲ ὁ Φίλιος οὐ προσίεται.

[2] Aristot. de mund. 7. 401 a 22 ἑταιρεῖός τε καὶ φίλιος καὶ ξένιος = Stob. ecl. 1. 1. 36 p. 45, 19 f. Wachsmuth (translated by Apul. de mund. 37 alii Hospitalem Amicalemque), Loukian. Tim. 1 TIM. ὦ Ζεῦ φίλιε καὶ ξένιε καὶ ἑταιρεῖε καὶ ἐφέστιε καὶ ἀστεροπητὰ καὶ ὄρκιε καὶ νεφεληγερέτα καὶ ἐρίγδουπε καὶ εἴ τί σε ἄλλο οἱ ἐμβρύητοι ποιηταὶ καλοῦσι, καὶ μάλιστα ὅταν ἀπορῶσι πρὸς τὰ μέτρα, Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 288 Φύξιος δὲ ὁ Ζεὺς καὶ Φίλιος καὶ Ἑταιρεῖος καὶ Ἐφέστιος καὶ Ὁμόγνιος καὶ ἄλλα μυρία καλεῖται πρὸς τὰ συμβαίνοντα καὶ γινόμενα καὶ μετονομαζόμενος· κ.τ.λ., Achilleus (Tatios) comment. frag. in Arat. phaen. 2 f. p. 84, 16 ff. Maass λέγεται γὰρ καὶ βουλαῖος Ζεὺς καὶ ξένιος καὶ ἑταίρειος (leg. ἑταιρεῖος) φίλιος φυτάλμιος ἐπικάρπιος, schol. Arat. p. 332, 10 f. Maass ὡς εἰσι (φασί) γενέτωρ φράτριος ὁμόγνιος ἑταιρεῖος φίλιος ἱκέσιος ξένιος ἀγοραῖος βουλαῖος βρονταῖος καὶ τὰ ὅμοια (sc. ἐπίθετα Διός), Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 267 no. 100 φιλίου (sc. Διός), 274 φίλιος (sc. Ζεύς), 282 φίλιος (sc. Ζεύς).

In particular the epithets Ξένιος and Φίλιος are often combined: Plout. v. Arat. 54 δίκας γε μὴν ὁ Φίλιππος οὐ μεμπτὰς Διὶ Ξενίῳ καὶ Φιλίῳ τῆς ἀνοσιουργίας ταύτης τίνων διετέλεσε, Himer. or. 6. 3 φέρε οὖν κἀνταῦθα Φιλίῳ Διὶ κρατῆρα στήσωμεν καὶ τὸν Ξενίου βωμὸν λόγων ξενίαις ἀμείψωμεν, Ioul. or. 8 p. 327, 8 ff. Hertlein ἄγοι μὲν θεὸς εὐμενής, ὅποι ποτ' ἂν δέῃ πορεύεσθαι, Ξένιος δὲ ὑποδέχοιτο καὶ Φίλιος εὔνους, Heliod. Aeth. 6. 2 πρὸς Ξενίων καὶ Φιλίων θεῶν, schol. Eur. Hec. 791 χθονίους μὲν (sc. οὐ δείσας) διὰ τὸ ἄταφον ἐᾶσαι φονεύσαντα, οὐρανίους δὲ διὰ τὸν Ξένιον καὶ Φίλιον Δία (here actually contrasted with the chthonian powers !), schol. Eur. Andr. 603 Φίλιον'...ἢ λείπει τὸ Δία, ἵν' ᾖ Φίλιον Δία, ὡς Ξένιον Δία, schol. Aristoph. eq. 500 Ζεὺς Ἀγοραῖος· ὡς Ζεὺς Ξένιος ἢ Μειλίχιος ἢ Φίλιος, οὕτω καὶ Ἀγοραῖος.

See also Aineias of Gaza epist. 8, Prokop. epist. 15, Eumath. 3. 9, 5. 18 (supra p. 1141 n. 13). And cp. Loukian. Prom. s. Caucas. 6 πάνυ φιλανθρώπου τοῦ Διὸς πεπειραμένος.

[3] P. Kabbadias in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1883 p. 31 no. 12, id. Fouilles d'Épidaure Athènes 1893 i. 60 no. 161, M. Fränkel in the Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 1296 [Δ]ὶ Φιλίω | Πύρριος | κατ' ὄναρ with the numeral νθ' and the symbol 𝍢 in circle, on which see supra p. 1076 f. The garland of Zeus Phílios is mentioned in an inscription from Kyrene (Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 5173, 3 ff. = Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 873, 1 ff. = Cougny Anth. Pal. Appendix i. 280. 1 ff. ἀ(γ)ρεῖ δ' Ἄρτεμις ἀ(γ)[ροτέ]ρη, καλοῖς ἐνὶ [πέπλ]οις, | Μαρκιανὴν ἱερῷ δερκομένη (θ)[αλάμῳ·] | ο[ὗ Δ]ιὸς ἀρητὴρ [ἡρᾶ]το, πατὴρ ἱερήων, | [ἄρ]τ[ι πυ]κ[νὸ]ν Φιλίο(υ) [σ]τέμμ' ἀν[α]δησάμενος· | κ.τ.λ. The restoration is doubtful: see G. Kaibel and E. Cougny ad loc.).

hastily assumed that Zeus Philios was only another name for Asklepios[1], though the two deities were certainly of similar origin and somewhat similar character.

But we have yet to notice three remarkable cults of Zeus Philios at Megalopolis in Arkadia, at Pergamon in Mysia, and at Antiocheia on the Orontes, respectively.

(3) Zeus Philios at Megalopolis.

Pausanias in describing the enclosure sacred to the Greek Goddesses at Megalopolis says:

'Within the precinct is a temple of Zeus Philios. The image is by Polykleitos the Argive and resembles Dionysos; for its feet are shod with buskins and it has a cup in one hand, a thýrsos in the other. On the thýrsos is perched an eagle, though this does not agree with what is told of Dionysos. Behind the said temple is a small grove of trees surrounded by a wall. People are not allowed to enter it, but before it are images of Demeter and Kore some three feet in height. Within the precinct of the Great Goddesses there is also a sanctuary of Aphrodite[2].'

So the temple of Zeus Philios had a grove of awful sanctity behind it, over which Demeter and Kore mounted guard. I take this to mean that Zeus Philios, himself a chthonian god, was reckoned as the consort of these chthonian goddesses, and was held to be jointly responsible with them for the yearly yield of corn and wine. Hence his approximation to the type of Dionysos. The singular Dionysiac Zeus is attributed by J. Overbeck[3] to Polykleitos the younger on the ground that his more famous namesake was dead and buried years before the foundation of Megalopolis (371—368 B.C.). But H. Brunn[4] suggested that the statue was a work of Polykleitos the elder, brought from some other Arcadian town to grace the new federal centre. Two arguments incline me towards Brunn's view. In the first place, Pausanias is elsewhere careful to distinguish the younger sculptor from his more illustrious predecessor[5], so that, rightly or wrongly, our author must have meant the elder Polykleitos. In the second place, Polykleitos the elder, bowing to the authority of local tradition, represented Hera with a highly peculiar sceptre[6]: he may well have done the same for this cult-statue of Zeus. It is not, however, necessary to suppose with Brunn that the statue was brought from another town: cult-statues are not easily transplanted. I should rather conceive of the situation as follows. Megalopolis had a quarter or, as Stephanos the geographer says, a 'half' called Orestía after Orestes[7], who had spent a year of exile in the Orésteion[8]. Now in the only other Orésteion known

[1] Cp. supra p. 1076 ff.

[2] Paus. 8. 31. 4 f. (supra i. 112 n. 2) τοῦ περιβόλου δέ ἐστιν ἐντὸς Φιλίου Διὸς ναός, Πολυκλείτου μὲν τοῦ Ἀργείου τὸ ἄγαλμα, Διονύσῳ δὲ ἐμφερές· κόθορνοί τε γὰρ τὰ ὑποδήματά ἐστιν αὐτῷ, καὶ ἔχει τῇ χειρὶ ἔκπωμα, τῇ δὲ ἑτέρᾳ θύρσον, κάθηται δὲ ἀετὸς ἐπὶ τῷ θύρσῳ· καίτοι γε τοῖς (R. Porson cj. τοῖς γε) ἐς Διόνυσον λεγομένοις τοῦτο οὐχ ὁμολογοῦν ἐστι. τούτου δὲ ὀπισθεν τοῦ ναοῦ δένδρων ἐστὶν ἄλσος οὐ μέγα, θριγκῷ περιεχόμενον. ἐς μὲν δὴ τὸ ἐντὸς ἔσοδος οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνθρώποις· πρὸ δὲ αὐτοῦ Δήμητρος καὶ Κόρης ὅσον τε ποδῶν τριῶν εἰσιν (Siebelis cj. ἐστιν) ἀγάλματα. ἔστι δὲ ἐντὸς τοῦ περιβόλου τῶν Μεγάλων Θεῶν καὶ Ἀφροδίτης ἱερόν.

[3] Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus pp. 51 f., 228 ff., 563, Gr. Plastik[4] i. 533, 537.

[4] H. Brunn in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1880 p. 468 f.

[5] Paus. 6. 6. 2.

[6] Supra i. 134 f., ii. 893 n. 2.

[7] Steph. Byz. s.v. Μεγάλη πόλις.

[8] Eur. Or. 1643 ff. with schol. See N. Wedd ad loc. and Frazer Pausanias iv. 413.

to us Orestes and Pylades were revered by the Scythians as Philioi Daímones[1]. Not impossibly, therefore, the Arcadian Orestes likewise was a Philios Daímon worshipped after his death as Zeus Philios. Orestes was the son of Agamemnon; and it is probable enough that he, like his father[2], was remembered as a human Zeus. His name Oréstes, whatever its origin[3], would pass muster as a title of Zeus the mountain-god[4]. In any case there was good reason for the retention of this pre-Megalopolitan cult: the appellative Philios was a most desirable omen for a town which combined the inhabitants of some forty Arcadian villages[5].

(4) Zeus Philios at Pergamon.

From Arkadia we pass to Pergamon. 'The Pergamenes themselves,' says Pausanias, 'claim to be Arcadians of the band which crossed into Asia with Telephos[6].' It is not, therefore, surprising to find that Pergamon too had its cult of Zeus Philios. An inscribed block from the wall of the Traianeum speaks of that splendid structure (fig. 979)[7] as the temple of Iupiter Amicalis and the emperor Trajan. The inscription is probably of 113—114 A.D. and intimates that, thanks to the liberality of one Iulius Quadratus, the joint cult is to be honoured with a penteteric festival, which shall take rank with the existing Pergamene festival of Roma and Augustus[8]. The competitions thus established

[1] In Loukian. Toxar. 7 the Scythian states that his compatriots honour Orestes and Pylades on account of their mutual loyalty and devotion, adding καὶ τοὔνομα ἐπὶ τούτοις αὐτῶν ἐθέμεθα Κοράκους καλεῖσθαι· τοῦτο δέ ἐστιν ἐν τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ φωνῇ ὥσπερ ἂν εἴ τις λέγοι 'Φίλιοι Δαίμονες.' He also mentions a bronze tablet in the Orésteion inscribed with the tale of their sufferings, which Scythian children had to get by heart, and ancient paintings on the temple-wall illustrating the record. Possibly Κόρακοι = (Διόσ)κοροι.

[2] Supra Append. I.

[3] Recent discussion of Orestes and his myth is conveniently summarised by Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1908 pp. 576 ff., 620 ff.

[4] Supra i. 100 ff., 117 ff., ii. Append. B.

[5] Diod. 15. 72, Paus. 8. 27. 3 ff. Prof. J. B. Bury in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1898 xviii. 19 says of the temples enumerated by Pausanias at Megalopolis: 'Those which he saw on the north side [of the river Helisson] suggest no federal association.' Is not this to ignore the obvious connotation of the title Philios?

[6] Paus. 1. 4. 6. See further W. Ridgeway The Early Age of Greece Cambridge 1901 i. 180 f. and A. C. Pearson on Soph. Μυσοί frag. 409 ff. Jebb.

Orestes enters into the myth of Telephos (O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 958—961) and is figured on the small inner frieze of the grand altar of Zeus (H. Winnefeld in Pergamon iii. 2. 191 f., 219, 223, 228, Beilage 6, D, 7, 42, pl. 33, 4, Overbeck Gr. Plastik[4] ii. 285 fig. 201 c, C. Robert in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1887 ii. 245 ff. fig. D, id. ib. 1888 iii. 104, A. Trendelenburg in Baumeister Denkm. iii. 1271 f. fig. 1429, O. Höfer loc. cit. p. 960).

[7] Pergamon v. 2. 1—54 with numerous illustrations and an Atlas of plates (my fig. 979 is after pl. 34 the restored view) forms a monograph on the Traianeum by H. Stiller. See also E. Pontremoli and M. Collignon Pergame, restauration et description des monuments de l'acropole Paris 1900 pp. 153–160 with figs. and pls. 11 f.

[8] T. Mommsen in the Corp. Inscr. Lat. iii Suppl. no. 7086, 18 ff. = M. Fränkel Die Inschriften von Pergamon (= Pergamon viii. 2) Berlin 1895 ii. 203 ff. no. 269, 9 ff. with facsimile [placere ut certamen illud,] quod in honorem templi Iovis Amicalis et | [Imp. Caes. divi Nervae f. Ner]vae Traiani Augusti Germanici Dacici | [pontif. max. est con-st]itutum εἰσελαστικὸν in civitate | [Pergamenorum, eiusdem con]dicionis sit, cuius est, quod in honorem Romae | [et divi Aug. ibi agitur, it]a ut ea impendia, quae propter id certamen | [fieri oportebit, cedant in] onus Iuli Quadrati clarissimi viri | [eorumque a]d quos ea res pertinebit. The official description ib. 13 = 5 [ἀγὼν δεύτ]ερος παρ' ὑμεῖν ἱερὸς are called in another inscription the Traianeia Deiphileia[1]. From the double nomenclature and from the absence of earlier foundations beneath the temple M. Fränkel justly infers that the cult of Trajan was superposed on a previously existing cult of Zeus Philios (Latinised as Iupiter Amicalis), who formerly had no temple but only an open-air altar[2]—presumably that detected by J. Schrammen on the highest point of the hill[3]. When it was decided to institute the cult of Trajan, who himself had some pretensions to the name of Zeus[4], the best is borne out by Dion Cass. 51. 20 καὶ ἔλαβον καὶ οἱ Περγαμηνοὶ τὸν ἀγῶνα τὸν ἱερὸν ὠνομασμένον ἐπὶ τῇ τοῦ ναοῦ αὐτοῦ (sc. Αὐγούστου) τιμῇ ποιεῖν.

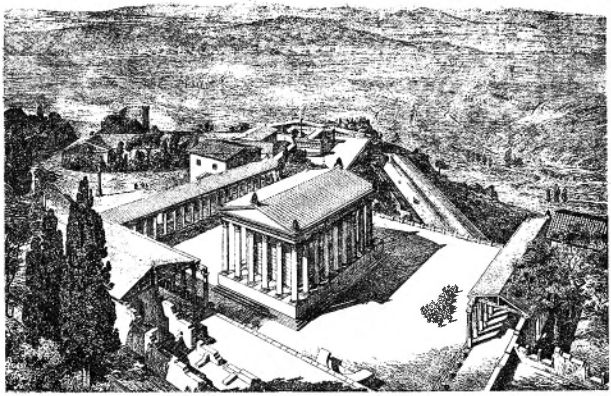

Fig. 979.

[1] E. L. Hicks The Collection of Ancient Greek Inscriptions in the British Museum iii. 2. 233 f. Oxford 1890 no. 605, 9 Τραϊάνεια Δειφίλεια ἐν Περγάμῳ ἀνδρῶν πυγμ(ήν·), where Hicks wrongly supposes that the games 'may have been endowed by one Διφίλος (sic).' Δειφίλεια, as M. Fränkel loc. cit. saw, are the games of Ζεὺς Φίλιος.

[2] M. Fränkel Die Inschriften von Pergamon (=Pergamon viii. 2) Berlin 1895 ii. 206.

[3] Supra i. 120 f. fig. 89.

[4] A fragmentary inscription from Hermione speaks of Trajan as Zeus Embatérios (Corp. inscr. Gr. i no. 1213=Inscr. Gr. Pelop. i no. 701 – – – – – – – | [Κ]αίσαρα θεὸν θεο[ῦ] | Σεβαστὸν Γ*ε*ρμανικὸν | Δακικόν, Δία Ἐμβατήριον, | ἡ πόλις). L. Dindorf in Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. iii. 810 A cp. Apollon Ἐμβάσιος (O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2485) and Ἐπιβατήριος (id. ib. vi. 28). We can contrast Apollon Ἐκβάσιος (id. ib. v. 2155), Artemis Ἐκβατηρία (id. ib. v. 2158). Such epithets denote a deity invoked by the voyager before he embarks or after he disembarks, as the case may be. The deity in question might chance to be of mortal stock: on the quay at Alexandreia was τὸ λεγόμενον Σεβάστιον, Ἐπιβατηρίου Καίσαρος νεώς (Philon leg. ad Gai. 22: see further O. Puchstein in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1385, O. Jessen ib. vi. 28). Hesych. Ἐπιβήμιος· Ζεὺς ἐν Σίφνῳ has been wrongly added to this group of travel-titles (O. Jessen ib. vi. 28), or altered to Ἐπιδήμιος (R. Förster in the Ath. Mitth. 1894 xix. 372 f., citing a marble block at Karadjadagh-Köi on the Ulutshar in Bithynia, which is inscribed Διὶ Ἐπιδημίῳ | Κλαύδιο(ς) Σε[βη]ο|s Ὀφελίων οἰκο|νόμος κ(αὶ) Ἡλιὰς ¶ ὑπὲρ τέκνων | κ(αὶ) τῶν βοῶν | εὐχῆς χάριν | ἀνεστήσα|μεν): Zeus 'on the Step' is better explained as a god standing beside the course seemed to be to maintain the old altar of ashes on the hill-top and to erect a new temple, which should be shared on equal terms by Zeus Philios and the divinised emperor. Copper coins of Pergamon, struck by Trajan, illustrate the inscription from the Traianeum in two ways. On the one hand, they put

Fig. 980.

Fig. 981.

Fig. 982.

Trajan himself more or less on a par with Zeus Philios. Thus the emperor's head occupies the obverse, the god's head the reverse, of a coin (fig. 980)[1]. Or, the emperor's head on the obverse is balanced by a seated figure of the god on the reverse (fig. 982)[2]. Or, the emperor in military costume stands beside the orator on his platform and inspiring his utterance (cp. Welcker Gr. Götterl. ii. 207, Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 162). Supra p. 897 n. 3.

The southern or townward face of Trajan's Arch at Beneventum, which like the Pergamene temple dates from the year 113—114, represents in the two panels of its attic (a) the Capitoline triad awaiting the arrival of Trajan: Iuno is escorted by Mercurius and Ceres, Minerva by Libet and Hercules; (b) Trajan approaching the area Capitolina: accompanied by Hadrian as emperor designate and followed by two lictors, he has reached the temple of Iupiter Custos, on the left of which, before the entrance-arch, are seen Roma, the Penates Publici Populi Romani, and the consuls. These two panels, separated only by the dedicatory inscription (Corp. inscr. Lat. ix no. 1558 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 296 imp. Caesari divi Nervae filio | Nervae Traiano Optimo Aug. | Germanico Dacico, pontif. max., trib. | potest. XVIII, imp. VII, cos. VI, p. p., | fortissimo principi, senatus p. q. R.), form a single composition—Iupiter handing his own thunderbolt to Trajan, who is thereby recognised as his vice-gerent (figs. 983, 984 are from photographs by R. Moscioni (nos. 15308, 15309)). See further E. Petersen 'L'arco di Traiano a Benevento' in the Röm. Mitth. 1892 vii. 239—264 with cut, especially p. 251 f., A. L. Frothingham in the Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1897 p. 379 f., A. von Domaszewski 'Die politische Bedeutung des Traiansbogens in Benevent' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1899 ii. 173—192 with figs., especially p. 175 ff., F. Wickhoff Roman Art trans. Mrs. S. A. Strong London 1900 pp. 105—110 with figs., ead. Roman Sculpture London 1907 pp. 214—227 with pls. 63—66, especially p. 215 f., ead. Apotheosis and the After Life London 1915 pp. 85—87 pl. 10, Reinach Rép. Reliefs i. 58—66, especially p. 64 no. 1 f. For the title Optimus see supra p. 100 n. 6.

The significance of the imperial figure on the summit of Trajan's Column at Rome has been already considered (supra p. 100 ff.).

[1] Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 228 Münztaf. 3, 23, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 141 pl. 28, 12, H. Stiller in Pergamon v. 2. 53 fig. 2, H. von Fritze in the Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1910 Phil.-hist. Classe Anhang i. 55 pl. 4, 5. I figure a specimen from my collection: obv. AVTTPAIA NOCCCBA, rev. ΣΕVC ΦΙΛΙΟC (= obv. Αὐτοκράτωρ Τραϊανὸς Σεβαστός, rev. Ζεὺς Φίλιος).

[2] Rasche Lex. Num. vi. 872, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 141 no. 259, H. Stiller in Pergamon v. 2. 53 fig. 1 = my fig. 982, H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 55 pl. 4, 4: obv. AVTTPAI ANOCCЄBACT, rev. ΦΙΛΙΟCΣЄVC ΠЄΡΓΑ (= obv. Αὐτοκράτωρ seated god within the same temple (fig. 981)[1]. On the other hand, the coins equate the cult of Zeus Philios and Trajan with the cult of Roma and Augustus. The obverse shows Zeus Philios and Trajan in their temple, the reverse Roma and Augustus in theirs[2]. Or, the obverse has Trajan, the reverse Augustus, as sole occupants of their respective fanes[3].

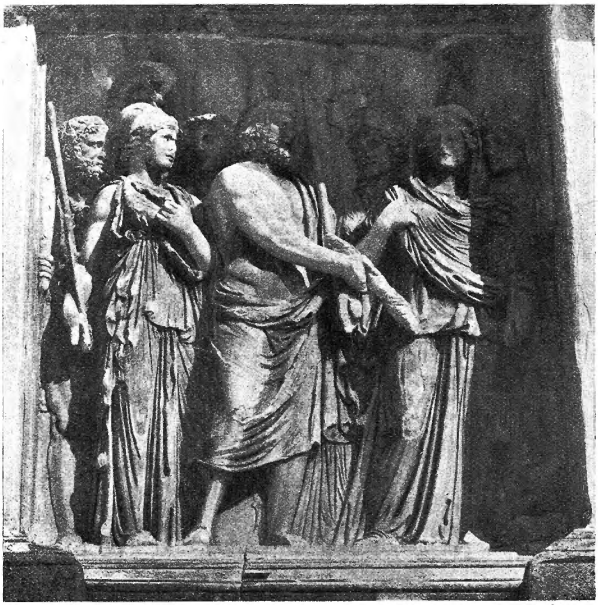

Fig. 983.

Τραϊανὸς Σεβαστός, rev. Φίλιος Ζεὺς Περγαμηνῶν). A copper of Lucius Verus gives the reverse type on a larger scale (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 148 no. 293, H. Fritze loc. cit. p. 55 pl. 4, 6) with the legend: ЄΠΙCΤΡΑΑΤΥΛ....ΚΡΑ ΤΙΠΠΟΥΠЄΡΓΑΜΗΝΩΝΒ ΝЄΟΚΟΡ (=ἐπὶ στρατηγοῦ Ἀτυλλίου Κρατίππου, Περγαμηνῶν β′ νεωκόρων).

[1] Rasche Lex. Num. vi. 872, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 142 no. 262, H. Stiller in Pergamon v. 2. 53 fig. 3=my fig. 981: rev. ΦΙΛΙΟC ZЄΥC ΤΡΑΙΑ ΝΟCΠЄΡΓ ΑΜΗΝΩΝ. Cp. a copper of Traianus Decius (H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 55 pl. 8, 18).

[2] Rasche Lex. Num. vi. 872 ff., Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 142 pl. 28, 10, H. Stiller in Pergamon v. 2. 53 fig. 5, H. von Fritze loc. cit. pp. 55, 83 ff. pl. 8, 12: obv. ΦΙΛΙΟC ΣЄVC AVT ΤΡΑΙΑΝΟ CЄΒΠЄ[Ρ] or ΠΕΡΓΑΜΗ, rev. ΘЄΛ ΡΩΜΗ [Κ]Α[ΙΘ]Є[Ω] CЄΒΑC ΤΩ.

[3] Rasche Lex. Num. vi. 873, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 142 pl. 28, 11, Hunter

The cult of Zeus Phílios on the mountain at Pergamon was, if I am right in my conjecture[1], derived from the cult of Zeus Phílios the 'Mountaineer[2]' of Megalopolis. But the original connexion with Oréstes had long since been forgotten, or at best left a mere trace or itself in the traditional link between Orestes and Telephos[3]. It was, however, remembered that Zeus Phílios somehow stood for the founder of the state. This may be inferred from the fact that, when Cat. Coins ii. 282 no. 57, H. Stiller in Pergamon v. 2. 53 fig. 4, H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 84 pl. 8, 17: obv. CT PΠΩΛ ΛΙΩΝΟC ΤΡΑΙΑ ΝΟ C or CTPΠΩΛΛΙ ΩΝΟCΤΡΑΙΑ ΝΘCΕΠΙ, rev. ΑΥΓ Ο V CTOC ΠΘΡΓΑ (=obv. ἐπὶ στρατηγοῦ Πωλλίωνος· Τραϊανός, rev. Αὔγουστος· Περγαμηνῶν).

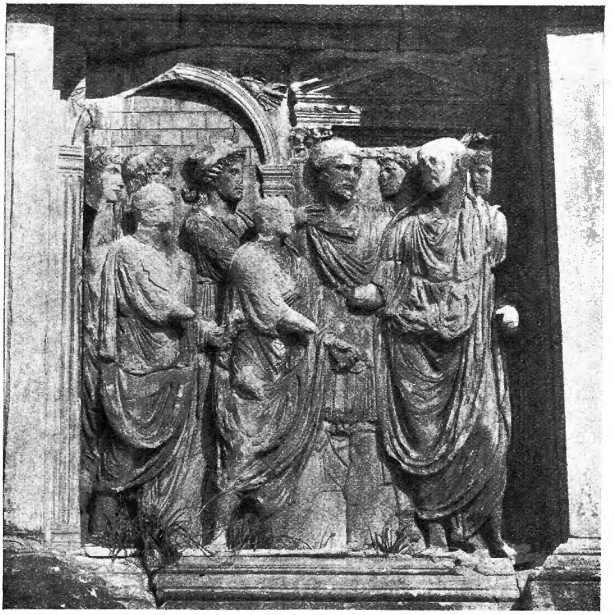

Fig. 984.

[1] Supra p. 1179.

[2] Supra p. 1178 f.

[3] Supra p. 1179 n. 6. Note that Τήλεφος, a clipped form of Τηλεφάνης (F. Bechtel—A. Fick Die Griechischen Personennamen[2] Göttingen 1894 p. 374) was, like Ὀρέστης (supra p. 1179), a name which would fitly describe a mountain-god (cp. Od. 24. 83, Aristoph. nub. 281, Menand. Λευκαδία frag. 1, 4 (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 158 f. Meineke) ap. Strab. 452, and the like).

the Pergamenes invented an eponymous hero Pergamos[1], they portrayed him (fig. 985)[2] with the features of Zeus Philios.

Whether Zeus Philios at Pergamon was in any sense Dionysiac, we can hardly determine. A phiále in his hand (figs. 981, 982) is no proof. Nor can we lay stress on the curious association of Telephos with the vine[3]. The most we can say is that a buskined Zeus of the Arcadian type[4] would not be out of place in a town which recognised Zeus Sabázios[5] and Zeus Bákchos[6].

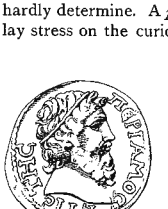

Fig. 985.

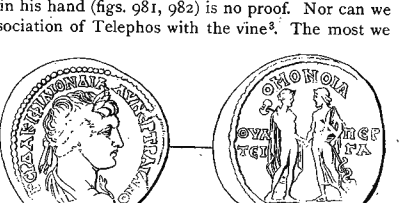

Fig. 986.

Popular enthusiasm, or policy, having thus raised the emperor to the level of Zeus Philios, went a step further and identified the two. An alliance-coin of Thyateira and Pergamon (fig. 986)[7] surrounds the laureate bust of Trajan with

[1] H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 69 n. 1 points out that Pergamos is first mentioned as founder of the state in two mutually complementary inscriptions of c. 50 B.C. published together by H. Hepding in the Ath. Mitth. 1909 xxxiv. 329 ff.: ὁ δῆμος ἐτίμησεν | Μιθραδάτην Μηνοδότου τὸν διὰ γένους ἀρχιερέ[α] | καὶ ἱερέα τοῦ Καθηγεμόνος Διονύσου διὰ γένο[υς,] | ἀπο[κα]τασήσαντα τοῖς πατρώοις θεοῖς τ[ήν τε πόλιν] | καὶ [τὴν] χώραν καὶ γενόμενον τῆς πατρίδος μ[ετὰ Πέργαμον] | καὶ Φιλέταιρον νέον κτίστην and ὁ δῆμος ἐτίμησεν | [Μιθραδάτη]ν Μηνοδότου τὸν διὰ γέν[ους ἀρχιερέα | καὶ ἱερέα τοῦ Κα]θηγεμόνος Διονύσου, ἀποκα[τασήσαντα | τοῖς πατ]ρώοις θεοῖς τήν τε πόλιν καὶ τὴν χώρα[ν καὶ γενόμενον | τῆς πατ]ρίδος μ[ε]τ[ὰ Π]έργαμο[ν καὶ Φ]ιλέταιρον νέον κτ[ίστην]. On the hero Pergamos and his cult see further O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1958 f.

[2] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 136 pl. 28, 1, H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 67 pl. 3, 14 and 19=my fig. 985, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 536: quasi-autonomous coppers inscribed ΠΕΡΓΑΜΟC and ΠΕΡΓΑΜΟC ΚΤΙC ΤΗC.

[3] When the Greeks sailed against Troy, they lost their way and attacked Mysia by mistake. Telephos, king of the Mysians, went out against the invaders and slew many of them, but fled before Achilles and, tripping over a vine, was wounded in the thigh by that hero's spear (Apollod. epit. 3. 17). This occurred because Dionysos was angry with Telephos for depriving him of his due honours (schol. Il. 1. 59 f., cp. Eustath. in Il. p. 46, 35 ff. (Telephos' horse stumbles over a vine by the design of Dionysos), Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 211 (Dionysos repays Achilles' sacrifices by causing to spring up a vine-shoot, which entangles Telephos), Dictys Cretensis 2. 3 (Telephus, pursued by Ulysses among the vineyards, trips over a vine-stem and is speared by Achilles in the left thigh)). The story is given without detail by Pind. Isthm. 8. 109 f. ὃ καὶ Μύσιον ἀμπελόεν | αἷμαξε Τηλέφου μέλανι ῥαίνων φόνῳ πεδίον. On the golden vine presented to Telephos' wife Astyoche by Priamos see supra p. 281 n. 4.

[4] Supra p. 1178.

[5] Supra p. 287 n. 2.

[6] Supra pp. 287 n. 2, 954 n. 0.

[7] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Lydia p. 320 pl. 41, 5 (my fig. 986 is from a cast of the coin), H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 100: ΑVΝΕΡΤΡΑΙΑΝΟ Ν[CΕ]ΓΕΡ ΔΑΚΙΦΙΛΙΟΝ ΔΙΑ (=αὐτοκράτορα Νέρουαν Τραϊανὸν Σεβαστὸν Γερμανικὸν Δακικὸν Φίλιον Δία).

the cunningly-worded legend: 'The emperor Nerva Traianus [Augustus] Germanicus Dacicus Zeus Philios.' The mind of the reader passes upward from names of human import through titles recording hard blows struck and magnificent triumphs won to the final claim of supreme beneficent godhead. Moreover, the whole is thrown into the accusative case with a subtle suggestion of some verb denoting honour, if not worship[1]. Adulation of the man has reached its limit. And, after all, a god who starts as a buried king ends not unfittingly as a divinised emperor.

Pergamon, in common with other cities of Asia Minor, frankly regarded the reigning sovereign as lord of heaven and earth, and did not hesitate to portray him in this capacity as a cosmic Zeus. A wonderful copper piece from the Pergamene mint (fig. 987)[2] exhibits Commodus in the form of a youthful Zeus with short hair and slight beard, naked and erect, a thunderbolt in his right hand, a sceptre in his left. He has an eagle with spread wings at his feet, and is flanked by two recumbent figures—Gaia on the right with a turreted crown and a cornu copiae, Thalassa on the left with a head-dress of crab's-claws and a steering paddle. In the field are busts of Helios and Selene. A unique coin, struck at Pergamon and now in the cabinet of T. Prowe at Moscow (fig. 988)[3], repeats the theme with variations. Thalassa and Gaia stand side by side, the former with bare breast, crab's-claws on her head, and a steering paddle in her uplifted hand, the latter with covered

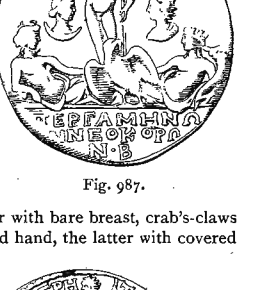

Fig. 987.

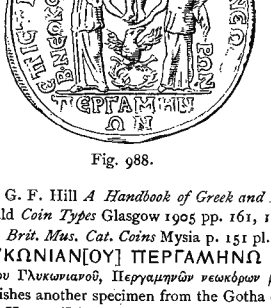

Fig. 988.

Fig. 989.

[1] G. F. Hill A Handbook of Greek and Roman Coins London 1899 p. 186, G. Macdonald Coin Types Glasgow 1905 pp. 161, 170, H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 78 ff.

[2] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Mysia p. 151 pl. 30, 4 = my fig. 987: rev. [ΕΠΙ]ΣΤΡΑΤΗΓ ΛΥΚΩΝΙΑΝ[ΟΥ] ΠΕΡΓΑΜΗΝΩ ΝΝΕΟΚΟΡΩ Ν·Β (= ἐπὶ στρατηγοῦ Μ. Αἰλίου Γλυκωνιανοῦ, Περγαμηνῶν νεωκόρων β'). H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 56 f. pl. 4, 7 publishes another specimen from the Gotha collection.

[3] H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 56 f. pl. 4, 11: rev. ЄΠΙCΤΡ ΜΗΝΟ Γ ЄΝΟVC·Β· ΝЄΩ[ΚΟ] ΡΩΝ ΠЄΡΓΑΜΗΝ ΩΝ (= ἐπὶ στρατηγοῦ Μηνογένους, β' νεωκόρων Περγαμηνῶν).

breast, wheat-ears on her head, and a cornu copiae on her arm. Both join hands to support a nude, youthful Zeus with the features of Geta, who holds a sceptre in his left hand and brandishes a thunderbolt in his right. Below him is his eagle with spread wings, grasping a wreath in his talons. Further variations are found on another unique copper, struck by Caracalla at Laodikeia in Phrygia and now in our national collection (fig. 989)[1]. Gaia and Thalassa have changed places: behind the one corn-ears spring from the ground; behind the other a dolphin plunges into the sea. On their joined hands, instead of Zeus, stands Caracalla with a radiate crown on his head holding phále and sceptre, while beneath him hovers his eagle bearing a wreath.

(5) Zeus Philios at Antiocheia.

Lastly, we turn to Antiocheia on the Orontes, where the worship of Zeus Philios was established by Theoteknos, governor of the city under Maximinus ii and an apostate from the Christian faith[2]. Eusebios in his Ecclesiastical History[3] pens an ugly portrait of this persecutor[4]:

'The root of all the mischief grew in Antiocheia itself[5]—Theoteknos, a horror, a humbug, and a villain, whose character belied his name; he was supposed to keep the town in order. He set all his forces against us. He threw himself with zest into the task of hunting our people out of their holes and corners in every possible way, as though they had been a gang of thieves and malefactors. He went all lengths in slandering and accusing us. And, after causing tens of thousands to be put to death, he finally set up an idol of Zeus Philios with a deal of quackery and imposture. He invented foul rites for it, initiations of an irreligious sort, and abominable modes of purification. He even exhibited before the emperor the portentous signs by means of which it was supposed to produce oracles[6].'

Theoteknos may well have augured a great success for his new cult, partly on general and partly on special grounds.

On the one hand, the Antiochenes had always been devoted to the worship of Zeus. Long before their city was built, Triptolemos—so they said—had founded Ione on the slope of Mount Silpion and had constructed there a sanctuary of Zeus Némeios, later renamed Zeus Epikárpios[7]. Subsequently Perseus

[1] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phrygia p. 316 pl. 37, 12 (=my fig. 989), H. von Fritze loc. cit. p. 57: rev. ·ЄΠΙ·Π·ΑΙΛ ΠΙΓΡΗ ΤΟϹ ΑϹΙΑΡΓ ΛΑΟΔΙΚЄΩΝΝ ЄΩΚΟΡΩΝ· (=ἐπὶ Π. Αἰλίου Πίγρητος Ἀσιάρχου γ', Λαοδικέων νεωκόρων).

[2] G. T. Stokes in Smith—Wace Dict. Chr. Biogr. iv. 1011.

[3] Euseb. hist. eccl. 9. 2 f.

[4] In 304 A.D. he did to death S. Theodotos and the Seven Virgins of Ankyra (Acta Sanctorum edd. Bolland. Maii iv. 147—165, T. Ruinart Acta primorum martyrum sincera & selecta[2] Amstelaedami 1713 pp. 336—352, A. Gallandius Bibliotheca veterum patrum antiquorumque scriptorum ecclesiasticorum Venetiis 1768 iv. 114—130).

[5] We have here a buried hexameter: ὧν πάντων ἀρχηγὸς ἐπ' αὐτῆς Ἀντιοχείας.

[6] Euseb. hist. eccl. 9. 3 τελευτῶν εἴδωλόν τι Διὸς Φιλίου μαγγανείαις τισὶ καὶ γοητείαις ἱδρύεται, τελετάς τε ἀνάγνους αὐτῷ καὶ μυήσεις ἀκαλλιερήτους ἐξαγίστους τε καθαρμοὺς ἐπινοήσας, μέχρι καὶ βασιλέως τὴν τερατείαν δι' ὧν ἐδόκει χρησμῶν (leg. χρησμοὺς) ἐκτελεῖν ἐπεδείκνυτο. Cp. the loose translation of Rufin. hist. eccl. 9. 3 apud Antiochiam simulacrum quoddam Iovis Amicalis nuper consecratum artibus quibusdam magicis et impuris consecrationibus ita compositum erat, ut falleret oculos intuentium et portenta quaedam ostentare videretur ac responsa proferre. C. F. Crusé renders τελετάς τε ἀνάγνους κ.τ.λ. 'after reciting forms of initiation' etc., clearly taking ἀνάγνους to be ἀναγνούς—an ingenious error.

[7] Liban. or. 11. 51 (i. 2. 453, 1 ff. Foerster), supra i. 236 n. 10. Cp. Chron. Paschale visited Ione and, when a storm burst so that the river Orontes, then called Drakon, overflowed its banks, bade the inhabitants pray for deliverance. Thereupon a ball of lightning fell from the sky and stopped at once the downpour and the flood. Perseus kindled a fire from the blaze, took it to his own palace in Persia, and taught the Persians to reverence it as divine. He also established for the men of Ione a sanctuary of Immortal Fire[1]. In the Hellenistic age this sanctuary on Mount Silpion was known as that of Zeus Keraúnios[2]. Again, the foundation of Antiocheia itself was directly associated with the cult of Zeus. Libanios in his panegyric of the town says[3]:

'The settlement began with Zeus Bottiaîos[4], erected by Alexander, and the hill called Emathia after Alexander's home.'

i. 76 Dindorf ἔκτισαν οὖν ἐκεῖ οἱ αὐτοὶ Ἰωνῖται ἱερὸν Κρονίωνος (but see supra i. 237 n. 1) εἰς τὸ Σίλπιον ὄρος and perhaps Liban. legat. ad Iulian. 79 (ii. 152, 10 ff. Foerster) cited supra p. 869 n. 1.

Zeus Νέμειος appears on a billon coin of Alexandreia with sélinon (?)-wreath, aigís, and star (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Alexandria p. 17 no. 130 pl. 1 (=my fig. 990), Head Hist. num.[2] p. 862, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus pp. 218, 248, O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 116). These coins were struck by Nero in 67—68 A.D. to commemorate his triumphant tour through Greece in 67 A.D. (Eckhel Doctr. num. vet.[2] iv. 53).

Fig. 990.

As to the title Ἐπικάρπιος, my friend Mr G. F. Hill in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1915 xxxv. 150 kindly draws my attention to Methodios ap. et. mag. p. 58, 20 ff. Ἀλδήμιος ἡ Ἄλδος, ὁ Ζεύς, ὃς (codd. D. Vb. omit ὃς) ἐν Γάζῃ τῆς Συρίας τιμᾶται· παρὰ τὸ ἀλδαίνω, τὸ αὐξάνω· ὁ ἐπὶ τῆς αὐξήσεως τῶν καρπῶν. Μεθόδιος (οὕτως Μεθόδιος cod. Vb.). Cp. S. Bochart Geographia sacra, seu Phaleg et Canaan[4] Lugduni Batavorum 1707 lib. ii cap. 14 p. 748 'Ego Jovem illum Phœnices linguâ suâ vocasse puto בעל חלדא baal-halda dominum sæculi, vel בעלחלדים baal-aldim dominum sæculorum'—a most ingenious explanation of the alternatives Ἄλδος and Ἀλδήμιος.

[1] Pausanias the chronographer (cp. Io. Tzetz. schol. in exeges. Iliad. in L. Bachmann Scholia in Homeri Iliadem Lipsiae 1835 p. 833, 28 f. Παυσανίας δὲ ὁ ἱστορικὸς ἐν τῷ περὶ Ἀντιοχείας κτίσεως γράφει πλατύτερον. κ.τ.λ.) ap. Io. Malal. chron. 2 p. 37 f. Dindorf = Chron. Paschale i. 72 f. Dindorf ὁ δὲ αὐτὸς Περσεὺς ἔκτισε τοῖς Ἰωνίταις ἱερόν, ὃ ἐπωνόμασε πυρὸς ἀθανάτου.

[2] Io. Malal. chron. 8 p. 199 Dindorf says of Seleukos i Nikator after the foundation of Seleukeia καὶ εὐχαριστῶν ἀνῆλθεν εἰς Ἰώπολιν καὶ μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας ἐπετέλεσεν ἑορτὴν ἐκεῖ τῷ Κεραυνίῳ Διὶ ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ τῷ κτισθέντι ὑπὸ Περσέως τοῦ υἱοῦ Πίκου καὶ Δανάης, τῷ ὄντι εἰς τὸ Σίλπιον ὄρος, ἔνθα κεῖται ἡ Ἰώπολις, ποιήσας τὴν θυσίαν τῇ πρώτῃ τοῦ Ἀρτεμισίου μηνός.

[3] Liban. or. 11. 76 (i. 2. 461, 18 ff. Foerster).

[4] With Zeus Βοττιαῖος cp. Zeus Βώττιος of Βωττία, a village on the Orontes (Io. Malal. chron. 8 p. 200 Dindorf cited infra p. 1188), which doubtless claimed connexion with Βοττία, Βοττιαία, Βοττιαῖς, the district round Pella in Makedonia (E. Oberhummer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 794 f.). Since the Bottiaeans of Makedonia were said to have been brought by one Botton from Crete (Aristot. frag. 443 Rose ap. Plout. v. Thes. 16 and quaestt. Gr. 35, Strab. 279, 282, 329 frag. 11, Konon narr. 25, et. mag. p. 206, 1 ff.), it is possible that Zeus Βοττιαῖος was ultimately of Cretan origin. The story of the clay loaves etc. told by Konon loc. cit. probably has some basis in Bottiaean ritual. Coppers struck at Pella, under Philippos v and later (Head Hist. num.[2] p. 243), with the monogram Β (for Βοττεατῶν) have obv. head of Zeus wreathed with bay (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Macedonia, etc. p. 13, Hunter Cat. Coins i. 352) or oak (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Macedonia, etc. p. 13 fig., Hunter Cat. Coins i. 352 (?)), rev. winged thunderbolt.

Further on he adds[1]:

'The whole thing was ordained of God. Forty furlongs from this city of ours there was a city bearing the name of Antigonos and built by Antigonos. Here Seleukos was sacrificing after his victory[2]. The bull had been slaughtered, the altars had received their customary portion, the fire was already licking up the sacrifice and burning fiercely, when, lo, Zeus moved from his sceptre[3] his own companion and favourite bird and despatched him to the altar. He flew down into the midst of the flame, caught up the thigh-pieces all ablaze, and bore them off[4]. As the event attracted the looks and thoughts of all and was manifestly due to divine interposition, Seleukos bade his son[5] mount a horse, pursue the flight from the ground, and guide his horse by the bridle according to the route taken by the bird; for he wished to know what it would do with its booty. Seleukos' son riding his horse, with upturned eyes, was led by the flight to Emathia. There the eagle stooped and deposited his burden on the altar of Zeus Bottiaîos, erected by Alexander when he was cheered by the sight of the spring[6]. So all men, even without special powers of interpretation, could see that Zeus meant them to build a city on the spot. And thus it came about that the settlement intended and commenced by Alexander was carried to completion, while the chief of the gods[7] by means of his own omen became our founder.'

Similar tales were current with regard to Alexander's foundation of Alexandreia[8] and Seleukos' foundation of Seleukeia Pieria[9]. Ioannes Malalas, of whose sixth-century chronicle a Greek abridgment (not to mention the fuller Slavonic version[10]) is extant, gives the Antiochene story[11], adding a touch or two of his own to heighten the interest. Thus, instead of connecting Zeus Bottiaîos with the hill Emathia, he harrows our feelings by the assertion that at Bottia, a village over against Iopolis, Seleukos, when founding Antiocheia, sacrificed a maiden named Aimathe (sic) by the hand of the chief priest and initiator Amphion, between the city and the river, on Artemisios, i.e. May, 22, at daybreak, as the sun rose—a most circumstantial narrative. He goes on to say that Seleukos founded also the sanctuary of Zeus Bóttios[12]. Again, Antiochos iv Epiphanes built for the Antiochenes, presumably on Mount Silpion, a magnificent temple of Iupiter Capitolinus, of which we are told, not only that its roof had gilded coffers, but that its walls were overlaid with beaten gold[13]. Tiberius either completed or restored the structure[14]. Antiochos Epiphanes also erected in the temple, which he had built, or more probably beautified, for Apollon at Daphne, a copy of the Olympian Zeus, said to have been as large as the original[15]. This statue was perhaps in-

[1] Liban. or. 11. 85—88 (i. 2. 464, 10 ff. Foerster).

[2] Seleukos i Nikator, after vanquishing Antigonos in Phrygia (301 B.C.).

[3] Supra p. 1132 ff. [4] Infra fig. 1001. [5] Antiochos i Soter.

[6] See Io. Malal. chron. 10 p. 234 Dindorf.

[7] (ὁ Ζεὺς) ὁ τῶν θεῶν κορυφαῖος.

[8] Iul. Valer. 1. 30 p. 39, 9 ff. Kuebler, pseudo-Kallisth. 1. 32 (context supra p. 1127 n. 0).

[9] Supra p. 981 n. 1.

[10] Prof. J. B. Bury informs me that such a version exists, but is not yet published in accessible shape. On Malalas see further K. Krumbacher Geschichte der byzantinischen Litteratur von Justinian bis zum Ende des Oströmischen Reiches[2] München 1897 p. 325 ff., Sir J. E. Sandys A History of Classical Scholarship[2] Cambridge 1906 i. 390 f.

[11] Io. Malal. chron. 8 p. 199 ff. Dindorf.

[12] Id. ib. 8 p. 200 Dindorf.

[13] Liv. 41. 20. Cp. Gran. Licin. 28 p. 6, 5 f. Flemisch duos colossos duodenum cubitorum ex aere unum Olympio, alterum Capitolino Iovi de*dicaverat*.

[14] Io. Malal. chron. 10 p. 234 Dindorf ὁ δὲ Τιβέριος Καῖσαρ ἔκτισεν ἐν τῇ αὐτῇ Ἀντιοχείᾳ πόλει ἱερὸν μέγα Διὸς Καπετωλίου. The word ἔκτισεν must not be pressed.

[15] Amm. Marc. 22. 13. 1 eodem tempore die xi Kalend. Novembrium amplissimum tended to represent Antiochos himself[1]; for it seems to have been part of that ruler's policy always to foster the cult, and on occasion to assume the rôle, of Zeus[2]. Thus he struck handsome silver pieces showing on the obverse side an idealised portrait-head of himself, sometimes with twin stars at the ends of his diadem[3], and on the reverse Zeus enthroned with a Nike in his hand. The Nike extends a wreath towards the god. And the accompanying legend reads 'Of King Antiochos, the God Made Manifest' (fig. 991)[4], or 'Of King Antiochos, the God Made Manifest, Bearer of Victory' (fig. 992)[5]. Another imposing type has on the obverse the head of the monarch, wreathed with wild-olive and bearded as if he were indeed Zeus Olýmpios, on the reverse Zeus enthroned with Nike in the act of crowning him (fig. 993)[6] or his pompous inscription (fig. 994)[7]. It is very possible that this coin commemorates the erection of the Olympian Zeus at Daphne. Be that as it may, the statue was probably made of gold and ivory, like its original at Olympia.

Fig. 991.

Fig. 992.

Daphnaei Apollinis fanum, quod Epiphanes Antiochus rex ille condidit iracundus et saevus, et simulacrum in eo Olympiaci Iovis imitamenti aequiparans magnitudinem, subita vi flammarum exustum est. But Liban. or. 11. 94 ff. (i. 2. 467, 1 ff. Foerster) and Sozom. hist. eccl. 5. 19 agree that the sanctuary of Apollon Δαφναῖος was the work of Seleukos i Nikator. Presumably Antiochos Epiphanes added to its attractions. Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 58 by an odd blunder takes Ammianus to mean that Antiochos dedicated at Daphne a statue of Apollon in the guise of Olympian Zeus!

[1] We may fairly suspect that the same intention prompted Antiochos' sacrilegious treatment of the temples at Jerusalem and on Mt Gerizim (supra i. 233, ii. 887 n. 0 no. (31)).

[2] See E. R. Bevan 'A note on Antiochos Epiphanes' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1900 xx. 26—30, id. The House of Seleucus London 1902 ii. 154 ff., G. F. Hill Historical Greek Coins London 1906 p. 144.

[3] Tetradrachms with rev. ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ ΑΝΤΙΟΧΟΥ or ΑΝ ΤΙΟΧΟΥ Apollon seated on the omphalós have obv. head of Antiochos with diadem surmounted by a star (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Seleucid Kings of Syria p. 34 pl. 11, 1) or with diadem ending in two eight-rayed stars (Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 41 pl. 66, 9). They bear witness to the early deification of the king.

[4] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Seleucid Kings of Syria p. 35 pl. 11, 8, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 44 pl. 66, 13, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 762. I figure a specimen from my collection.

[5] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Seleucid Kings of Syria p. 35 pl. 11, 7 = my fig. 992, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 47 f. pl. 66, 17 (cp. 18), Head Hist. num.[2] p. 762, Bunbury Sale Catalogue 1896 ii. 65 no. 494.

[6] E. Babelon Les rois de Syrie Paris 1890 pp. xciv f., 71 pl. 12, 11 (= my fig. 993).

[7] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Seleucid Kings of Syria p. 36 pl. 11, 9 = my fig. 994, Hunter

Alexander ii Zabinas, when beaten by Antiochos viii Grypos in 123—122 B.C., retired to Antiocheia and, in order to pay his troops, bade men enter the temple of Zeus and remove from the god's hand the Nike of solid gold, remarking that

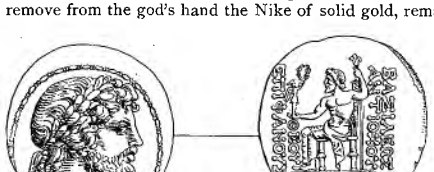

Fig. 993.

Fig. 994.

Zeus had lent him victory![1] A unique statér of gold, formerly in the Montagu collection (fig. 995)[2], was doubtless struck by Zabinas from this stolen Nike[3]. A few days later he attempted to carry off the whole statue of Zeus with its vast weight of gold, but was caught in the act and forced by popular outcry to flee from the city[4].

Fig. 995.

The statue, however, did not escape for long the cupidity of the Syrian kings. Antiochus ix Kyzikenos, son of Antiochos vii Sidetes, being in need of money, gave orders that the golden Zeus, fifteen cubits high, should be melted down and replaced by a copy in inferior material with gilded sheathing[5]. It was presumably in connexion with the cult of Zeus Olýmpios that Antiochos Epiphanes held games Cat. Coins iii. 48 no. 50, E. Babelon Les rois de Syrie Paris 1890 p. xciv f., Head Hist. num.[2] p. 762 f. The head is usually described as laureate.

[1] Iust. 39. 2. 5.

[2] Montagu Sale Catalogue 1896 i. 92 no. 716 pl. 9=my fig. 995.

[3] E. Babelon Les rois de Syrie Paris 1890 p. cxlix f.

[4] Iust. 39. 2. 6, Diod. excerpta de virt. et vit. 35 p. 145, 42 ff. Dindorf.

[5] Clem. Al. protr. 4. 52. 3 p. 40, 22 ff. Stählin Ἀντίοχος δὲ ὁ Κυζικηνὸς ἀπορούμενος χρημάτων τοῦ Διὸς τὸ ἄγαλμα τὸ χρυσοῦν, πεντεκαίδεκα πηχῶν τὸ μέγεθος ὄν, προσέταξε χωνεῦσαι καὶ (J. Markland cj. κἀκ) τῆς ἄλλης τῆς ἀτιμοτέρας ὕλης ἄγαλμα παραπλήσιον ἐκείνῳ πετάλοις κεχρυσωμένον ἀναθεῖναι πάλιν. Cp. Arnob. adv. nat. 6. 21 Antiochum Cyzicenum ferunt decem (F. Orsini cj. quindecim) cubitorum Iovem ex delubro aureum sustulisse et ex aere bracteolis substituisse fucatum.

of unusual significance at Daphne[1], not to mention the high jinks[2] which earned him the sobriquet of Epimanés. Antiochos Grypos followed suit[3]. And in later times the Olympic contests of Daphne obtained a wide celebrity[4]. Diocletian is said to have built a sanctuary of Zeus Olympios in the Stádion at Daphne—a statement of uncertain value[5]. Meantime in Antiocheia itself Commodus had built a temple of Zeus Olympios with an adjoining portico known as the Xystón[6]. Didius Iulianus had added a Pléthron[7], which was later doubled in size by Argyrios and Phasganios[8], and still further enlarged by Proklos[9]. The whole complex of buildings was evidently modelled on its counterpart at Elis and was meant to accommodate athletes preparing for the Olympia, which were actually held at Daphne. At Daphne too there was a temple of Zeus Sotér, built to commemorate a crisis in the history of the city. For at dawn on Apellaios, i.e. December, 13 in the year 115 Antiocheia was shaken by a great earthquake with most disastrous results. The survivors founded this temple and inscribed upon it the words:

'The saved set up (this edifice) for Zeus the Saviour[10].'

The earthquake was preceded by many thunderbolts and unusual winds[11]; and so severe was it that the tops of Mount Kasion were broken off and threatened destruction to the town below[12]. Finally, there was the ancient cult of Zeus

[1] Polyb. 31 ap. Athen. 194 C—195 F and 439 B—D.

[2] E.g. Polyb. 31 ap. Athen. 195 F (=439 D) ὑπὸ τῶν μίμων ὁ βασιλεὺς εἰσεφέρετο ὅλος κεκαλυμμένος καὶ εἰς τὴν γῆν ἐτίθετο, ὡς εἷς ὢν δῆτα τῶν μίμων· καὶ τῆς συμφωνίας προκαλουμένης ἀναπηδήσας ὠρχεῖτο καὶ ὑπεκρίνετο μετὰ τῶν γελωτοποιῶν. Was this sheer foolery, or the take-off of some resurrection-rite?

[3] Poseidonios of Apameia 28 frag. 31 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 263 Müller) ap. Athen. 210 D—E and 540 A—B.

[4] Liban. or. 60. 6 f. (iv. 315, 5 ff. Foerster)=Io. Chrys. de Babyla c. Iul. 19 (ii. 568 A Montfaucon), Liban. epist. 763 Wolf, Io. Malal. chron. 9 p. 224 f. Dindorf (see P. Perdrizet in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1900 xxiv. 290 f.), 12 pp. 289 f., 307 Dindorf, 16 p. 396 Dindorf. Cp. Liban. or. 10. 30 (i. 2. 409, 15 ff. Foerster).

[5] Io. Malal. chron. 12 p. 307 Dindorf ἔκτισε δὲ ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ σταδίῳ Δάφνης ἱερὸν Ὀλυμπίου Διός, καὶ ἐν τῇ σφενδόνῃ τοῦ αὐτοῦ σταδίου ἔκτισεν ἱερὸν τῇ Νεμέσει. C. O. Müller Antiquitates Antiochenae Gottingae 1839 p. 62 f. thinks it far more likely that the temple of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Daphne was founded by Antiochos Epiphanes. Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 59 dismisses the claims of Diocletian ('wohl ohne allen Zweifel verkehrt') and attributes to Antiochos Epiphanes merely a redecoration of the temple ('nur eine neue Ausschmückung des Zeusheiligthums von Daphne, nicht dessen Gründung'). But is it certain that Malalas is referring to the big temple of Zeus? A small shrine in the Stádion would be appropriate enough.

[6] Io. Malal. chron. 12 p. 283 Dindorf καὶ εἰς τὴν ἀρχὴν δὲ τὴν κάτω τοῦ Ξυστοῦ ἔκτισεν ἱερὸν τῷ Ὀλυμπίῳ Διΐ.

[7] Io. Malal. chron. 12 p. 290 Dindorf Πλεθρίν.

[8] Liban. or. 10. 9 ff. (i. 2. 403, 22 ff. Foerster).

[9] Liban. or. 10. 1 ff. (i. 2. 401, 2 ff. Foerster).

[10] Io. Malal. chron. 11 p. 275 Dindorf οἱ σωθέντες ἀνέστησαν Διὶ Σωτῆρι. Eustath. in Dionys. per. 916 quotes the dedication as οἱ ζήσαντες (ζητήσαντες cod. y.) ἀνέστησαν θεῷ (ἐν θεῷ cod. y. H. S. Reiner cj. ἀνεστήσαμεν) Σωτῆρι, which amounts to much the same thing.

[11] Dion. Cass. 68. 24.

[12] Dion. Cass. 68. 25. See further Iuv. 6. 411, Aur. Vict. de Caes. 13. 10, cp. epit. 13. 12, Oros. hist. adv. pag. 7. 12. 5, Euagrios hist. eccl. 2. 12, Synkell. chron. 348 A (i. 657 Dindorf), Euseb. vers. Armen. in ann. Abr. 2130 (= 116 A.D.), Hieron. in Euseb. ann. Abr. 2130 (= 116 A.D.), Zonar. 11. 22 (iii. 68 f. Dindorf).

Kásios on Mount Kasion, where Julian offered a belated hecatomb[1]. The devotion of the Antiochenes to Zeus—a devotion grafted perhaps upon the Ba'al-worship of their predecessors—might further be inferred from their coin-types. Antiochos iv Epiphanes (175—164 B.C.) inaugurated a system of municipal coinage and struck coppers at 'Antiocheia near Daphne,' which had as reverse design Zeus wrapped in a himátion with a wreath in his outstretched hand (fig. 996)[2]—sign and symbol of the Olympic sports that he held at Daphne[3]. Alexandros i Bala (150—145 B.C.), who claimed to be the son of Antiochos iv, repeated his father's type of a wreath-bearing Zeus[4]. Other Seleucid kings in all probability issued coins with Zeus-types at Antiocheia, e.g. Demetrios ii

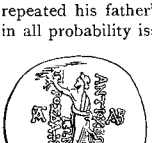

Fig. 996.

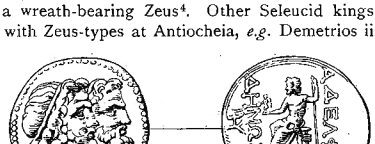

Fig. 997.

Nikator in his first reign (146—140 B.C.)[5] and Antiochos viii Grypos (121—96 B.C.)[6]. Passing from the regal to the autonomous coinage of the town, we have coins struck for the tetrápolis[7] of Antiocheia by Daphne, Seleukeia in Pieria, Apameia, and Laodikeia (149—147 B.C.) with a head of Zeus as obverse and a thunderbolt as reverse type[8], or with two Zeus-like heads—probably meant for the Demoi of Antiocheia and Seleukeia—as obverse and Zeus enthroned, Nike in one hand, a sceptre in the other, as reverse type (fig. 997)[9]. The autonomous issues of 'the metropolis of the Antiochenes' (s. i B.C.) show the head of Zeus wearing bays and Zeus enthroned as before but enclosed in a

[1] Supra p. 981 n. 1.

[2] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Seleucid Kings of Syria p. 40 pl. 13, 1, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 50 f. pl. 66, 20, E. Babelon Les rois de Syrie Paris 1890 p. 79 pl. 14, 6 (= my fig. 996), Head Hist. num.[2] p. 763.

[3] Supra p. 1188 ff.

[4] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Seleucid Kings of Syria p. 56 pl. 17, 1, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 66 no. 65 f., Head Hist. num.[2] p. 765 f.

[5] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Seleucid Kings of Syria p. 61 no. 29 obv. head of Zeus to right, laureate; rev. ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ ΔΗΜΗΤΡΙΟΥ ΘΕΟΥ ΦΙΛΑΔΕΛΦΟΥ ΝΙΚΑΤΟΡΟΣ, with ΜΑ in exergue, Apollon seated on the omphalós, holding arrow and bow.

[6] Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 100 pl. 69, 20 obv. Head of Antiochos viii to right, diademed; rev. ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ ΑΝΤΙΟΧΟΥ ΕΠΙΦΑΝΟΥΣ, with ⏃ and $\frac{\text{P}}{\text{A}}$, Zeus enthroned to left, holding Nike with a wreath on his right hand and a long sceptre in his left.

[7] Strab. 749.

[8] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 151 no. 1, p. 152 pl. 18, 7, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 142 nos. 2—4, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 778.

[9] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 152 pl. 18, 6 (= my fig. 997), cp. pl. 18, 8, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 141 no. 1, cp. p. 142 no. 8, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 778. G. Macdonald in the Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 141, followed by B. V. Head loc. cit., supposes that the mint was Seleukeia, not Antiocheia. The usual interpretation of the two bearded heads is borne out by the reverse legend ΑΔΕΛΦΩΝ ΔΗΜΩΝ.

large bay-wreath (fig. 998)[1]. In imperial times the head of Zeus sometimes occupies the obverse (fig. 999)[2], while his eagle in one guise or another very commonly fills the reverse[3]. We see the great bird grasping a thunderbolt[4], or holding a wreath in his beak and a bay-branch in his talons[6], or gripping a caduceus with his jaws and a palm-branch with his right claw as he rests

Fig. 998.

Fig. 999.

Fig. 1000.

Fig. 1001.

Fig. 1002.

Fig. 1003.

on a garlanded altar (fig. 1000)[6], or again perched with wreath in beak on the thigh of an animal-victim (fig. 1001)[7]—altar and thigh alike recall the city's foundation-myth—[8], or bestriding a bay-wreath with the three Charites in it (fig. 1002)[9], or soaring beneath the imperial head (fig. 1003)[10]. Here and there

[1] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 153 ff. pl. 18, 9, 11, 12, pl. 19, 1 (cp. my fig. 998 from a specimen of mine, which likewise shows Nike wreathing the city's title), Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 143 ff. pl. 71, 28, 30, 34, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 778.

[2] From a specimen in my collection. Cp. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 162 f. pl. 19, 11 and pl. 20, 3. The reverse shows Boule (?), in chitón and himátion, dropping a pebble into the voting-urn.

[3] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 158 ff., Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 148 ff., Head Hist. num.[2] p. 779 f.

[4] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 175 pl. 21, 9 Nero: ЄΤΟΥΣ ΒΙΡ·Ι (year 112 of the Caesarean era, reckoned from 49 B.C.: see B. Pick in the Zeitschr. f. Num. 1887 xiv. 312 n. 3).

[5] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 177 pl. 22, 2 Otho: ЄΤΟΥCΑ (year 1 of the emperor's reign!).

[6] Ib. p. 179 pl. 22, 5 Vespasian: ЄΤΟVCΝЄΟV ΙЄΡΟV Є (new sacred year 5 = 73—74 A.D., reckoned from Sept. 2 to Sept. 1, the Syrian year of Augustus: see B. Pick loc. cit. p. 331 ff.).

[7] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 192 pl. 23, 5 Marcus Aurelius: ΓЄΡCΑΡΔΗ ΜЄΞΑΙ VΠΑ ΤΓ (= Γερμανικὸς Σαρματικός, δημαρχικῆς ἐξουσίας αι', ὕπατος γ').

[8] Supra p. 1188.

[9] Ib. p. 196 pl. 23, 11 Caracalla: ΔΗΜΑΡ Χ·ЄΞ·VΠΑ·Τ·Δ· (= δημαρχικῆς ἐξουσίας, ὕπατος τὸ δ').

[10] Ib. p. 196 pl. 23, 12 Caracalla: ΔΗΜΑΡΧΕ ΞVΠΑΤΟCΤΟ Δ (= δημαρχικῆς ἐξουσίας, ὕπατος τὸ δ'). See F. Imhoof-Blumer 'Zur griechischen Münzkunde' in the Revue Suisse de Numismatique 1898 p. 45 f.

a little touch implies that the emperor, whose bust appears on the obverse, is posing as the very Zeus. Thus Nero[1], Domitian[2], and Nerva[3] are all invested with the aigís. It is clear, then, that for centuries the inhabitants of Antiocheia had been familiar with the Hellenic Zeus and had known emperors who claimed to be his visible vicegerents.

On the other hand Maximinus ii, like Diocletian[4] and Galerius[5] before him,

[1] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Galatia, etc. p. 175 pl. 21, 9: ΝΕΡΩΝΚΑΙΣΑΡ ΣΕΒΑΣΤΟΣ.

[2] Ib. p. 182 pl. 22, 8: ΑΥΤΚΛΙΣΑΡΔΟΜΙΤΙΑΝΟΣΣΕΒΓΕΡΜ.

[3] Ib. p. 183 pl. 22, 9: ΑVΤΝΕΡΟVΑΣ ΚΑΙΣΣΕΒ. On these coins of Domitian and Nerva the aigís is reduced to a mere fringe of snakes passing over the further shoulder. It is, however, there and ought to have been noticed in the British Museum catalogue.

[4] Eumenius panegyr. Constantio Caesari 4, pro restaur. schol. 10, 16, Lact. de mortibus persecut. 52, Aur. Vict. de Caes. 39. 18, 39. 33, 40. 1, 40. 8, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 621 Rome (=Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 254=Orelli Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 1047) Genio Iovii Aug., | Iovia porticu eius a fundamentis absoluta | excultaque, | etc., no. 623 Sirmium (=Corp. inscr. Lat. iii no. 3231=Orelli—Henzen Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5560a=Wilmanns Ex. inscr. Lat. no. 1059) I. O. M. et | G.h.l. (=Genio huius loci) pro | salute dd. | nn. Iovio | et Herculio Augg. nn. (=dominorum nostrorum, Iovio et Herculio Augustis nostris), no. 634 Thessalonike Herculi Augusto | Iovius ..... (the words et Herculius have been erased) Augg. (e)t | Herculius et Iovius nobb. Caess., no. 8930 Alexandreia (S. de Ricci in the Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1908 p. 793) Iovi Auguste, vincas, cp. no. 659 Carnuntum (Corp. Inscr. Lat. iii no. 4413=Orelli Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 1051) D.S.I.M. (=Deo Soli Invicto Mithrae), | fautori imperii sui, | Iovii et Herculii | religiosissimi Augusti et Caesares | sacrarium restituerunt.

A gold medallion of Diocletian and Maximianus, formerly in the Cabinet de France, had rev. IOVIO ET HERCVLIO The two emperors pouring a libation over a tripod: in the field above, nude statues of Iupiter, with thunderbolt, and Hercules, with club, set on a garlanded altar. In exergue S M V R or S M T (Rasche Lex. Num. iv. 917 f., 932, Suppl. iii. 162, Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] vi. 480 no. 7, Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 487, Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. i. 12 no. 3). A bronze medallion of Diocletian, at Paris, has obv. IOVIO DIOCLETIANO AVG Half-length bust of Diocletian, with bay-wreath, sceptre, and himátion only—in imitation of Iupiter (Rasche Lex. Num. iv. 917, Suppl. iii. 162, Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 256 f. fig., Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] vi. 429 f. no. 142 fig., Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 124 no. 3 pl. 124, 1, cp. ii. 124 no. 4). A smaller bronze medallion, in the Vatican, has obv. IOVI DIOCLETIANO AVG A similar bust of Diocletian, with radiate crown (id. ib. iii. 78 no. 40 pl. 158, 11): this medallion, if IOVI is not a mere blunder for IOVIO, baldly identifies the god with the emperor. Another at Paris has rev. IOVI CONSERVATORI AVG A hexastyle temple, with wreath in pediment and architrave inscribed IOVIVS AVG, containing emperor as Iupiter enthroned with thunderbolt and sceptre (Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 255, Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] vi. 443 no. 275 fig., Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 124 no. 7 pl. 124, 3 corroded and retouched, cp. id. ib. ii. 124 no. 8 at Florence): similar medallions at Paris, struck by Maximianus, repeat the reverse type, but show the emperor as Iupiter standing with thunderbolt, sceptre, and eagle (Rasche Lex. Num. iv. 931 f., Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 255 fig., Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 128 nos. 6 f. pl. 126, 6 and 7). A gold piece, formerly in the Cabinet de France, had rev. PRIMI XX IOVI AVGVSTI Iupiter seated, with thunderbolt and sceptre. In exergue TR (Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] vi. 458 no. 393 with n. 1 'IOVI est sans doute mis pour IOVII, et encore dans ce cas la légende n'est-elle pas trop compréhensible').

The title Iovius was, no doubt, suggested by the name *Dio*cletianus, the origin of which is uncertain. W. Ramsay in Smith Dict. Biogr. Myth. i. 1011 says of Diocletian:

or Licinius[1] and Licinius Iunior[2] after him, had assumed the title Iovius[3]—

'From his mother, Doclea, or Dioclea, who received her designation from the village where she dwelt, he inherited the appellation of Docles or Diocles, which, after his assumption of the purple, was Latinized and expanded into the more majestic and sonorous Diocletianus' [Aur. Vict. epit. 39. 1]. But T. Mommsen in the Corp. inscr. Lat. iii. 283 argues that the home of Diocletian was Salona, not Doclea. And Patsch in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 1251 notes that Doclea came to be called Dioclea (Aur. Vict. epit. 39. 1), Διόκλεια (Constantinus Porphyrogenitus de administrando imperio 29 (iii. 126 Bekker)), Διόκλητα (id. ib. 35 (iii. 162 Bekker)) in consequence of the conjecture that Diocletian was born there.

[5] Chronicon Paschale (i. 512 Dindorf) 275 B Μαξιμιανὸς Ἰόβιος ἐπιφανέστατος Καῖσαρ, 275 C Μαξιμιανοῦ Ἰοβίου Καίσαρος, 275 D Μαξιμιανοῦ Ἰοβίου bis, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 634 cited supra p. 1194 n. 4, no. 658 Aquincum (=Corp. inscr. Lat. iii no. 3522) pro salute dd. | nn. | [M]aximiano | Iovo invic. | Aug. et Maximino | Caes. (=dominorum nostrorum Maximiani Iovii invicti Augusti et Maximini Caesaris) | Iulius Valeria[n]u[s et Aurel. Maxim[us] ddvv. col. | Aq. (=duoviri coloniae Aquinci), cp. no. 659 cited supra p. 1194 n. 4, no. 661 Solva near Leibnitz in Stiria (=Corp. inscr. Lat. iii no. 5325) divo| Iovio | Maximiano | ordo Sol., no. 8931 Alexandreia (S. de Ricci in the Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1909 p. 146) Iovi Cae[s]ar, vincas.

[1] Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 676 Canusium (=Corp. inscr. Lat. ix no. 6026) d. n. Iovio Licinio invicto semper Aug.

Rasche Lex. Num. iv. 932, Suppl. iii. 163, cites from A. Banduri Numismata imperatorum a Trajano Decio ad Palæologos Augustos Lutetiæ Parisiorum 1718 ii. 195 and other sources a coin showing the head of Licinius with the legend IOVIVS LICINIVS AVG. On this Eckhel Doctr. num. vet.[2] viii. 67 remarks: 'Iovius. Hujus appellationis auctor Diocletianus, quam is transmisit in Gal. Maximianum, hic in Maximinum, mox Licinium, scilicet lege adoptionis, Licinius denique in filium. Haec confirmata numis vidimus, tum iis, quae supra de hereditariis his nominibus in numis Constantii Chlori exposui. Atque hujus cum Iove cognationis causa tot Licinius numos cum ejus dei effigie feriri jussit, quot ante eum nemo, neque ingratus is adversus nepotem fuit. Nam ut Hercules olim filio Maximiano leoninum capitis integumentum, ita Iuppiter Licinio fulmen impertivit, quod ille, ut in antica nonnullorum ejus numorum videre est [ib. p. 64], manu terrifica vibrat, sed cujus aciem Constantinus Enceladus apud Hadrianopolin obtundet.' Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] vii. 198 f. nos. 98—100 with fig. gives examples, in small bronze and in bad billon or potin, of the type described by Eckhel.

I add a few specimens from my collection which illustrate the relation of Licinius (figs. 1004—1006) and Licinius Iunior (fig. 1007) to Iupiter Conservator. It is amusing to see the thunderbolt in the hand of the emperor (figs. 1004, 1005) replaced by a mere mappa (figs. 1006, 1007).

[3] Copper coins struck by Licinius and his son have obv. DD. NN. IOVII LICINII INVICT. AVG. ET CAES. Laureate busts of the two Licinii supporting between them a figure of Fortuna (or Victoria, or a trophy); rev. I. O. M. ET FORT. CONSER. (or VICT. CONSER., or VIRTVTI) DD. NN. AVG. ET CAES. Iupiter and Fortuna (or Victoria, or a trophy). In exergue SMKA or SMKB or SMNA (or SMKA. SMKΓ or SMKΔ, or SMNTA or SMATЄ) (Rasche Lex. Num. iv. 932, 1740, 1746, Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] vii. 210 f. nos. 1—3 with fig. of no. 2).

[3] Euseb. hist. eccl. 9. 9. 1 bis Ἰόβιος Μαξιμῖνος Σεβαστὸς Σαβίνῳ, Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 420, 22 ff. (=G. Deschamps and G. Cousin in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1888 xii. 101 ff. no. 22, 22 ff.) an inscription from the precinct of Zeus Panámaros (supra i. 18 ff.) honouring a certain priest and priestess ἐφ' ὧν ἱερωμένων καὶ | ἡ θειότης τοῦ δεσπότου | ἡμῶν, τοῦ ἀηττήτου Σεβαστοῦ | Ἰοβίου Μαξιμίνου ἐν τῇ πα[τρ]ίδι | ἐπέλαμψεν καὶ τὰ ληστήρια | ἐξέκοψεν.

A bronze medallion of Maximinus, now at Paris, has obv. IOVIVS MAXIMINVS NOB CAES A bust of the emperor, laureate and armed, holding sceptre and mappa (Cohen struck perhaps by the fact that, so far as names were concerned, Iovius Maximinus was a tolerable imitation of Iupiter Optimus Maximus. Theoteknos in importing the novel cult very probably designed to win the favour of his imperial master. Quasi-Dionysiac rites practised in the name of Zeus would be quite in the line of the profligate Iovius.

Alas for his calculations. A few pages further on Eusebios[1] tells us what happened:

'Theoteknos too was summoned by Justice, who had no intention of forgetting the harm he did to Christians. On the strength of the xóanon[2] that he had set up at Antiocheia he expected to take life easily, and was in fact already promoted by Maximinus to the post of governor. But Licinius had no sooner set foot in the city of the Antiochenes than he ordered all impostors to be brought in, and put the prophets and priests of the new-fangled xóanon to the torture, asking them how they came to play such a lying part. Hard pressed by the tortures, they could conceal the facts no longer, but explained that the whole mystery was a fraud contrived by the wily Theoteknos. Thereupon Licinius punished them all according to their deserts. He first condemned Theoteknos, and then the partners of his imposture, to death, after inflicting upon them the greatest possible torments.'

For all that, the cult of Zeus Philios once started was not easily suppressed. Fifty years later Julian wintered at Antiocheia (362—363 A.D.) and, as we gather from his own Misopógon, was diligent in visiting the temple of Zeus Philios[3].

Fig. 1004.

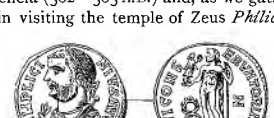

Fig. 1005.

Fig. 1006.

Fig. 1007.

Monn. emp. rom.[2] vii. 155 no. 134 fig., Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 132 no. 1 pl. 129, 5 roughly retouched). Another, with the same legend, had for obverse type the bare head of Maximinus (Rasche Lex. Num. iv. 932, Suppl. iii. 163, Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] vii. 155 no. 135, Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 132 no. 2). One of his coppers, struck at Antiocheia, ventures on a new title: rev. IOVIO PROPAGAT. ORBIS TERRARVM Maximinus, with bay-wreath and toga, stands holding Victoria on a globe: to the right is a burning altar; on either side of him, the letter A and a star; in the exergue, ANT (Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] vii. 153 no. 130 fig.).

[1] Euseb. hist. eccl. 9. 11. 5 f.

[2] For the implications of this term see now an excellent paper by Miss F. M. Bennett 'A study of the word ΞΟΑΝΟΝ' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1917 xxi. 8—21.

[3] Ioul. misopog. p. 446, 10 ff. Hertlein ἡ Σύρων ἥκει νουμηνία, καὶ ὁ καῖσαρ αὖθις εἰς Φιλίου Διός· εἶτα ἡ πάγκοινος ἑορτή, καὶ ὁ καῖσαρ εἰς τὸ τῆς Τύχης ἔρχεται τέμενος. ἐπισχὼν δὲ τὴν ἀποφράδα πάλιν ἐς Φιλίου Διὸς τὰς εὐχὰς ἀναλαμβάνει κατὰ τὰ πάτρια. καὶ τίς ἀνέξεται τοσαυτάκις εἰς ἱερὰ φοιτῶντος καίσαρος, ἐξὸν ἅπαξ ἢ δὶς ἐνοχλεῖν τοῖς θεοῖς, κ.τ.λ. Cp. Liban. or. 1. 122 (i. 1. 141, 19 ff. Foerster) ἦκε δέ ποτε εἰς Διὸς Φιλίου θύσων κ.τ.λ.

Again, Libanios the Antiochene, when petitioning Theodosios to protect the pagan temples against the depredations of the Christian monks (384[1] A.D.), expressly notes that certain temples—those of Tyche, Zeus, Athena, and Dionysos—are still untouched[2].

Antiocheia was a city where Christians and pagans jostled each other in the street[3]; and it is possible that, as the former found their centre in the great Constantinian church, so the latter had a nucleus and rallying-point in the temple of Zeus Philios. Indeed, between the two rival cults there was a certain superficial resemblance. On the one hand, Zeus Philios was a god of love, who brought even enemies together[4], encouraged love-feasts among the faithful here, and held out hopes of a celestial banquet hereafter[5]. If his initiations and purifications[6] savoured somewhat of Sabazios, it must be remembered that the Hebrew Godhead was by successive pagan blunderers confused with Iupiter Sabazius, Bacchus, Liber Pater, and Dionysos[7]. On the other hand, the Christians themselves—as I shall hope to prove in a third volume—had not scrupled to employ the art-types of Zeus and Dionysos for the representation of Christ, and that on objects of the most solemn and sacred character.

The strongest support for this assertion, so far as Antiocheia was concerned, is to be derived from the famous chalice recently published by Dr G. A. Eisen. It appears that early in the year 1910 certain Arabs, who were digging a cellar or a well at Antakieh (Antiocheia), lit upon underground chambers partially choked with débris. In the débris were embedded various objects of value. In addition to the chalice of carved silver that is here in question, there was a second chalice of plain silver with inscriptions of the sixth or seventh century A.D.; there were also three silver book-covers decorated with saints and referable to the fourth or fifth century; and there was a large ceremonial cross inscribed on front and back, not to mention a sackful of crumbled silver fragments. A smaller cross, likewise of silver, supposed to be from the same find, passed into the possession of Monsieur W. Froehner. Since the spot where these objects were discovered was, according to local tradition, the site of an ancient cathedral[8], it is clear that we have to do with a church-treasure

[1] Libanios ed. R. Foerster iii. 80 n. 3.

[2] Liban. or. 30. 51 (iii. 116, 1 ff. Foerster) εἰπέ μοι, διὰ τί τὸ τῆς Τύχης τοῦτο σῶν ἐστιν ἱερὸν καὶ τὸ τοῦ Διὸς καὶ τὸ τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς καὶ τὸ τοῦ Διονύσου; ἆρ' ὅτι βούλοισθ' ἂν αὐτὰ μένειν; οὔ, ἀλλ' ὅτι μηδεὶς τὴν ἐπ' αὐτὰ δέδωκεν ὑμῖν ἐξουσίαν.

[3] The most careful and thorough-going monograph on Antiocheia in general is still C. O. Müller Antiquitates Antiochenae Gottingae 1839 pp. viii, 134 with map and pl. of coins etc. Other works of importance in particular directions are J. M. Neale A History of the Holy Eastern Church. The Patriarchate of Antioch London 1873 pp. lx, 229, R. Förster 'Antiochia am Orontes' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1897 xii. 103—149 with twelve figs. and pl. 6, id. 'Skulpturen von Antiocheia' ib. 1898 xiii. 177—191 with figs. and pl. 11, S. Krauss 'Antioche' in the Revue des Études Juives 1902 xlv. 27—49 (classical records largely supplemented from Rabbinic sources), K. Bauer Antiochia in der ältesten Kirchengeschichte Tübingen 1919 pp. 1—47, H. Dieckmann Antiochien, ein Mittelpunkt urchristlicher Missionstätigkeit Aachen 1920 pp. 1—56.

[4] Supra p. 1176 f.

[5] Supra p. 1161 ff.

[6] Supra p. 1186.

[7] Supra i. 234 n. 4.

[8] Mr C. L. Woolley in The Times Literary Supplement for July 10, 1924 p. 436 tells a very different tale. He says of the chalice: 'I believe myself to be fully justified buried either accidentally by earthquake or intentionally to escape some threatened danger. The treasure trove, at first divided among the finders and widely dispersed (two pieces were carried off to Mesopotamia), was recovered piecemeal by Messieurs S. and C. Kouchakji and forwarded to Monsieur G. Kouchakji in Paris. Here the principal chalice, coated with oxide to a thickness of several millimetres, was skilfully deoxidised by Monsieur A. André. He found the silver matrix already crystalline in texture and so brittle that he dared not rectify a compression of the cup caused by a blow received in ancient times[1]. In 1914 the chalice, for safety's sake, was sent over to Messieurs H. and F. Kouchakji in New York, where since 1915 it has been exhaustively studied by Dr Eisen[2], formerly Curator of the California University Academy of Sciences.

The chalice stands $0{\cdot}19^{m}$ in height and measured originally about $0{\cdot}15^{m}$ in diameter. It consists of three parts—an inner bowl rudely hammered out of a in stating that it was found in a small mound close to Ma'arit il Na'aman, a village situated south of Aleppo, on the Aleppo-Homs railway, about a hundred miles from Antioch. It was discovered, together with a silver cup or bowl and a silver crucifix, by a peasant, who sold it for £3 to a man in Ma'arit il Na'aman, who sold it for £70 to a group of three antiquity dealers at Aleppo.... I derive my information from the dealers concerned, who had no motive for telling me an untruth and were able to give me a very fair description of the object before any photographs of it had been published.'

This account is detailed and circumstantial. But, in reply to enquiries, Messrs Kouchakji have informed me by cable (Nov. 9, 1924) that they confirm Dr Eisen's statement. They say: 'Arabs found chalice in Antioch.... Woolley's information absolutely incorrect.'

[1] In 341 A.D., when the 'Golden' Basilica of Antioch, begun by Constantine the Great and finished by his son Constantius ii, was consecrated, the chalice must have been one of its most cherished possessions. Some twenty years later, in 362, Julian, uncle of Julian the Apostate, came to Antioch, closed the churches, and plundered their valuables (Io. Monach. Rhod. vit. S. Artemii 23 (xcvi. 1272 C—D Migne)). It is said that after a futile attempt to intimidate Theodoros, the 'guardian of the treasures' in the great church, he condemned him to torture and death, and that flinging the sacred vessels on the ground he treated them to the grossest indignities (Sozom. hist. eccl. 5. 8, Theodoret. eccl. hist. 3. 12, cp. Ruinart acta prim. mart.[2] p. 588 ff.)—a story of very doubtful historicity (Seeck in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. x. 94). Dr Eisen, however, accepts the tale, and even suggests that the compression of the chalice may be the result of its sacrilegious mishandling by Julian. In that case the chalice must have been concealed again either during the invasion of Chosroes i, who in 538 burned Antioch but spared the Cathedral, or more probably during the conquests of Chosroes ii, who captured Syria in 611. The later date would account for the association of the chalice with the objects of early Byzantine art enumerated above.

[2] G. A. Eisen 'Preliminary Report on the Great Chalice of Antioch containing the Earliest Portraits of Christ and the Apostles' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1916 xx. 426—437 with pl. 19 and four figs., id. 'The Plate with seven Loaves and two Fishes on the Great Chalice of Antioch' ib. 1917 xxi. 77—79 with fig., id. 'The Date of the Great Chalice of Antioch' ib. 1917 xxi. 169—186 with five figs., id. 'Chalice of Antioch and Its Portraits of Christ, Apostles and Evangelists' in the New Era Magazine for Jauuary 1920 pp. 12—15 with four figs., id. 'Identification of Seated Figures on Great Chalice of Antioch' ib. for June and July 1920 pp. 414—417, 526—528 with six figs., id. The Great Chalice of Antioch New York 1923 pp. 1—194 with two diagrams and an atlas of sixty photogravures and etchings. The last-mentioned publication is a monograph de luxe, the plates of which include three whole-page photographs—life-size, enlarged, and larger still—of every figure on the chalice together with an attempted drawing of each head. The accompanying text is less satisfactory, being verbose, over-credulous, and disfigured by unnecessary slips. The book as a whole is obviously meant for wealthy art-lovers

a

The Chalice of Antioch.

b

See page 1197 ff. with fig. 1008.

thick sheet of silver, the rim of which has been bent outwards over itself and left with uneven edge; an outer shell or container of carved open-work, for which the inner bowl now serves as a background; and a support, comprising knop and foot, turned on the lathe out of a solid block of silver. The inner bowl is wholly unadorned and was, when found, quite distinct and separable from the outer shell: the two have since been cemented together for fear of breakage. The base exhibits simple but good decorative work; the knop, surrounded by a wreath of lozenge-shaped leaves, parts lotus-petals above from lotus-petals below. The shell or container is carved à jour with an intricate design. Six vines with double stems rise from the ground-line and cover the whole available surface with a complicated growth of branches. Amid the profusion of tendrils, leaves, and grape-bunches many living creatures can be made out—doves and other birds, a couple of snails, a rabbit, a butterfly, a grasshopper, etc. Moreover, twelve spaces are reserved in the foliage for as many seated persons, arranged in two horizontal alternating rows. These twelve persons fall into two distinct groups, of which one occupies the front, the other the back of the chalice. On the obverse side (pl. xlvii, a) Christ appears as a beardless man, enthroned, with a lamb standing at his right hand. Above his head flies one of the birds, perhaps a dove[1]. His right arm is extended[2]; his left, which is missing, may have held a roll[3]. Beneath his footstool an eagle with spread wings rests upon a basket of fruit[4]. And round him are ranged five of his followers, who turn towards him raising the right arm with a gesture of salutation. On the reverse side (pl. xlvii, b) Christ is represented as a boy, sitting on a round-backed throne, with his right hand held out and a roll in his left. He is again surrounded by five of his followers, who raise their arms as before. Most of the ten, if not all[5], hold rather than scholars, and it is to be hoped that it will be followed at no distant date by a better documented students' edition.

I am indebted to Dr Eisen for sending me his three articles in the New Era Magazine (now out of print) and to Messrs Kouchakji Frères for presenting me, not only with a copy of the big monograph, but also with the special silver-prints from which pl. xlvii and fig. 1008 were made.

[1] G. A. Eisen The Great Chalice of Antioch p. 7: 'over his head soars the Holy Ghost in the form of a dove.'

[2] Id. ib. p. 7: 'at his right hand is a plate with loaves and fishes.' Id. ib. p. 27: 'The objects on the plate are: seven loaves of bread, two fishes, an oval object with minute spheres and a bunch of pointed leaves.' Dr Eisen gives an enlarged drawing (⅘) of the plate in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1917 xxi. 78 fig. 1. I confess that, on the photographs, it looks to me like an ordinary bunch of grapes, partly hidden by over-lying tendrils (the supposed fish) and partly resting on a round piece of background (the supposed plate) left to connect it with the sheep below. But I suspect that the artist originally intended to represent a bird's nest with eggs and later modified his design.

[3] As on the reverse side of the chalice.

[4] G. A. Eisen The Great Chalice of Antioch p. 7: 'a basket with bread.' Id. ib. p. 180: 'The Eagle, perched on one of the Baskets, can only symbolize the Roman Empire, now partaking of the Christian religion as administered by St. Peter and St. Paul.' I see nothing but a basket of fruit, such as might be expected in any vintage scene, and an eagle which is in relation to the figure above, not to the basket below.

[5] Dr Eisen in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1917 xxi. 180 f. fig. 4 and in The Great Chalice of Antioch pp. 31 ff., 41 describes the object in the left hand of no. 2 as possibly the handle of a sword and that in the left hand of no. 5 as resembling a bag or purse. Neither description is free from doubt, and it is more probable that in every case a roll was intended.

rolls in their hands. Two (nos. 12 and 9 on fig. 1008) show the right arm wound with phylactery-bands (?)[1]. Finally, the upper part of the shell is encircled by a narrow strip of thin silver, to which are attached fifty-eight rosettes[2].

It should be noticed that the chalice, long after it was made, came to be gilded, and that at two different dates—at first with pale whitish gold, and later with deep reddish gold. The first gilding affected the whole outer surface of the shell; the second did not extend to its lower part, and was carried out in much thicker gold leaf. Both layers of gold are largely worn away by the fingering of reverent hands, especially in the case of persons and objects that would be deemed most sacred. There are no inscriptions on the chalice. But, between the first and second gildings, upon many of the chairs (perhaps upon all) were added poorly scratched graffiti representing a variety of emblems[3], which—if they can be deciphered—may help to show how the seated figures were interpreted[4] at some doubtful date before the final gilding.

[1] See Dr Eisen in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1917 xxi. 182 ff. fig. 5 and e contra Prof. F. C. Burkitt in The Cambridge Review 1923—1924 xlv. 254 (long tight sleeves, not phylacteries).

[2] G. A. Eisen The Great Chalice of Antioch pp. 7, 19 f., 125 claims that the rosette above the hand of Christ on the obverse side of the chalice is in reality a six-pointed star, the Star of the Nativity.

[3] Dr Eisen in the New Era Magazine for June 1920 p. 415 figures four of the graffiti from the chairs of nos. 2 (two crossed bars or keys), 6 (tree? or ankh? [amulet A.B.C.]), 7 (water jug), 9 (arch with circle [coin C. Renz] above it). The rest are less distinct and as yet undeciphered. See further The Great Chalice of Antioch p. 29 f.

[4] In his initial publication of the chalice Dr Eisen held that its twelve figures portray Christ in older and younger form together with ten of his Apostles. He noted also the suggestion that they are the Baptist with the Lamb at his side, and Christ with ten Apostles. But the number ten was hard to justify; and careful study of the features of each portrait led to the conviction that figures 1 and 8 are related, that figures 2 and 5 possess much in common, and that the heads of figures 10 and 11 are quite different in formation from the rest. Satisfied that the two central figures 1 and 8 are indeed Christ as a man and Christ as a youth, Dr Eisen next observed that 2 closely resembles St Peter as portrayed in the Catacombs (J. Wilpert Die Malereien der Katakomben Roms Freiburg 1903 pl. 94) and in the Viale Manzoni Hypogeum at Rome (Not. Scavi 1920 p. 123 ff.)—an identification seemingly confirmed by the discovery on seat 2 of the graffito representing two crossed bars or keys. The identity of the other figures remained doubtful till it was remarked that no. 6, unlike the rest, has a band round his head but no side-lock of hair. This suggested a Greek as distinct from a Jew, and in that case he must necessarily be St Luke. But, if so, the figures are not all Apostles. Those grouped with St Luke may then be St Matthew (9), St Mark (7), and St John (10). At this point again graffiti were helpful. Tradition said that St Mark had been a water-carrier (Alexandros Monachos (s. vi A.D.) laudatio S. Barnabae Apost. 1. 13 in the Acta Sanctorum edd. Bolland. Antverpiæ 1698 Junius ii. 440D λόγος γὰρ ἦλθεν εἰς ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ γερόντων ὅτι ὁ τὸ κεράμιον βαστάζων τοῦ ὕδατος, ᾧ κατακολουθῆσαι προσέταξεν ὁ Κύριος τοῖς μαθηταῖς, Μάρκος ἦν ὁ υἱὸς τῆς μακαρίας Μαρίας, Severus Bishop of El-Eschmounein in Upper Egypt History of the Patriarchs of the Coptic Church of Alexandria trans. B. T. A. Evetts Paris 1907 1. 1 p. 17 in the Patrologia Orientalis i. 139 'And he (sc. Mark) was among the servants who poured out the water which our Lord turned into wine, at the marriage of Cana in Galilee. And it was he who carried the jar of water into the house of Simon the Cyrenian, at the time of the sacramental Supper'); and on his chair is scratched a water-jar. St Matthew sat at the receipt of custom; his graffito is an archway with a circle above it, presumably the city-gate with a coin in evidence. St Luke, as a physician, has for his emblem an obvious

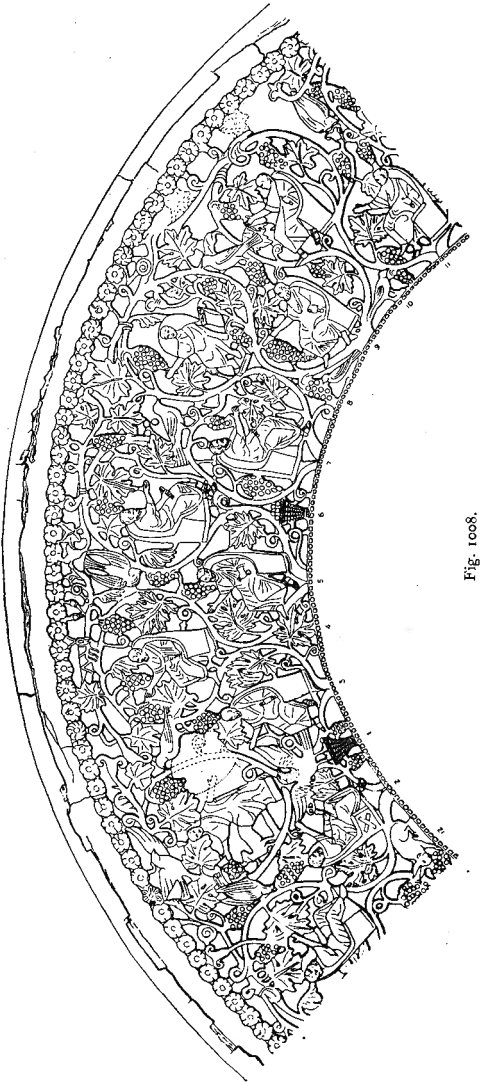

Fig. 1008.

To determine the date of the chalice is a task of primary importance. Sound criticism will rely, not on any à priori notions as to what the early Church could or could not have done, but on definite considerations of shape, technique, style, and subject.

Now the outer shell or container is essentially an ovoid bowl, without handles, supported on a round knop with a low and narrow foot-stand. A cup so constructed suffers from one obvious defect. It is top-heavy and would be easily upset. Such a shape could hardly have been popular for long together. Nor was it. Bronze coins of uncertain denomination struck by Simon Maccabaeus in 136/5 B.C. have for reverse type a closely similar chalice with knop, short stem, and small foot[1]. But silver shekels and half-shekels dating from the First Revolt of the Jews in 66/7—70 A.D. have for obverse type a chalice with smaller knop, longer stem, and broader foot[2]. Coins of the Second Revolt in 132—135 A.D. substitute either a one-handled jug[3] or a two-handled amphora[4], and do not enable us to trace further the evolution of the chalice. But this at least is clear, that on Palestinian soil the old top-heavy chalice was passing out of use as early as 66 A.D. Elsewhere too the same holds good. Two silver cups of similar shape belonging to the Pierpont Morgan collection, exhibited in the Metropolitan Museum of Fine Arts, are justly regarded as excellent samples of Hellenistic work[5]. And silver cups of a like pattern depicted in frescoes from Herculaneum[6] amulet. Again, if 10 is St John, the other beardless figure (11) must be his brother, St James the son of Zebedee. Moreover, St Peter (2) would naturally be balanced by St Paul (3). And the resemblance of the older man 5 to figure 2 suggested St Peter's brother, St Andrew. Lastly, it was surmised that figures 12 and 4, seated respectively on the right and left hand of Christ are St James the Lord's brother and St Jude, his nearest relatives on earth. It is claimed that figure 12 alone is clad in linen, which would suit the tradition that St James despised woollen clothes even in winter and habitually wore thin linen garments (Euseb. hist. eccl. 2. 23. 6 οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐρεοῦν ἐφόρει ἀλλὰ σινδόνας). These are the main arguments advanced by Dr Eisen, whose proposed identifications may be conveniently shown in tabular form :

Front	(12) James the Brother of the Lord	(1) CHRIST as Man	(4) Jude		(6) Luke	(8) CHRIST as Boy	(10) John	Back
	(2) Peter	(3) Paul	(5) Andrew		(7) Mark	(9) Matthew	(11) James the Son of Zebedee

Dr G. H. Rendall in a letter to me (Feb. 16, 1924) very pertinently suggests that 5 may be, not St Andrew, but St Barnabas, whose association with Antioch was most intimate. Accepting the attribution of the Epistle to the Hebrews to St Barnabas, Dr Rendall points out that we should thus have represented on the chalice the whole canon of the New Testament [plus James, son of Zebedee]. His shrewd conjecture of course postulates a date at which the canon was complete. But I see no difficulty in supposing that, at the time when the graffiti were added, those who added them believed the ten seated figures to include portraits of all the New-Testament writers.

[1] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Palestine p. 185 ff. pl. 20, 11—14.

[2] Ib. p. 269 ff. pl. 30, 1—9.

[3] Ib. p. 288 ff. pl. 33, 5 f., 9 f., 14 f., pl. 34, 4—10, 20.

[4] Ib. p. 303 f. pl. 35, 14, pl. 36, 1—3, p. 306 pl. 36, 10.

[5] Miss G. M. A. Richter in Art in America 1918 vi. 171 ff. with pl., Am. Journ. Arch. 1918 xxii. 349 f. fig. 1.

[6] Antichità di Ercolano Napoli 1760 ii (Pitture ii) p. 287 (= Roux—Barré Herc. et Pomp. iv Peintures 3e Série p. 219 pl. 115) preparations for a festival, including a silver jug, a silver cup, three wreaths, a palm-branch, etc., cp. ib. ii pp. 118, 157 a similar but deeper vessel, standing on a square plinth, with a couple of wreaths in it.

must be dated before the fatal year 79 A.D. Plate was naturally imitated in less costly materials; and here again the evidence is in favour of an early date. Very similar to the chalice of Antioch, though without its knop, is a glass vessel in another painting from Herculaneum[1]. Precisely parallel to the chalice in contour and proportions is a small glass cup from Syria, now in a private collection in New York: this, on account of its shallow spiral fluting, has been assigned to the first century A.D.[2] The main point is that after the first century the chalice-shape is entirely superseded. Dr Eisen is, so far as I know, justified in concluding: 'Not one single specimen of this form and with such proportions has been found of a date later than the first century A.D.'[3]

The technique of the chalice is compatible with the same early date. Knop, stem, and foot are chased in solid silver—a procedure somewhat uncommon, but known to occur in Graeco-Roman times[4]. The rest of the container is of carved open-work, the so-called opus interrasile, which is more than once mentioned by the elder Pliny and seems to have been fashionable at Rome in the seventies[5]. Dr Eisen supposes that this shell of open silver was from the first meant to cover the bowl of plain silver within it. But here I demur. Open-work was regularly used with an eye to colour-contrast, and no toreutic artist worthy of the name would have cased a silver bowl in a silver holder[6]. Dr Eisen further maintains that the inner bowl, which is of crude and unfinished appearance, was more ancient than the outer shell and, when that shell was made, must have been already regarded as a venerable relic, too sacred to alter or amend[7]. But many months ago Dr Minns suggested to me that very likely the inner bowl

[1] Ib. ii p. 111 a glass goblet full of eggs.

[2] G. A. Eisen in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1917 xxi. 170 fig. 1, 1, 172, id. The Great Chalice of Antioch p. 143.

[3] G. A. Eisen in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1917 xxi. 171. Note, however, that Dr Eisen himself in the New Era Magazine 1920 p. 12 and in The Great Chalice of Antioch pp. 136, 180 has figured a pottery lamp from a fourth-century grave at Gezer, on which a very similar cup is seen flanked by a pair of doves. Dr Eisen holds that this is a pious representation of the Antiochene chalice with two dove-like souls gazing upon it! I see in it merely a traditional motif, which could, if necessary, be traced back to the days of Nestor. It might, I think, reasonably be urged that the old-fashioned cup has become stereotyped as a decorative detail and should not be taken to imply that cups of this pattern were still in common use. After all, heraldic shields do not portray the equipment of the modern soldier.

The force of the argument from shape is—I concede—to some extent lessened by the possibility that, for ritual purposes, an archaic form might be deliberately preferred. But are we really prepared to maintain that the chalice is the product of an archaising art?

[4] E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 801. A good example is the vase from Herculaneum, now at Naples, representing the apotheosis of Homer (J. Millingen Ancient Unedited Monuments Series ii London 1826 p. 25 f. pl. 13, J. Overbeck Pompeji[4] Leipzig 1884 p. 624 f. figs. b, c, Guida del Mus. Napoli p. 411 no. 25301 fig. 93).

[5] Plin. nat. hist. 12. 94 interrasili auro, 33. 140 interradimus alia.

[6] We can hardly escape from this improbability by urging that the silver holder was richly gilt and so provided the requisite contrast in colour. For even the first of its gildings appears to have been added when the chalice had been in use for years (The Great Chalice of Antioch pp. 17 f., 139).

[7] He poiuts out that in form it resembles the mysterious cup taken from Jerusalem by the Romans and figured, along with the holy vessels of Herod's temple, on the Arch of Titus at Rome (Am. Journ. Arch. 1917 xxi. 170 fig. 1, 4). Since Vespasian is said to have erected before the city-gate of Antioch the bronze Cherubim, which Titus his son had was later, not earlier, than the shell. He argued that the inner bowl appropriate to the shell would be of glass; and this, when broken, might well have been replaced by a silver substitute of later and clumsier make[1]. If so, the shell cannot be earlier than the introduction of open-work over glass. And when did that take place? We think first, no doubt, of the finest extant example, the silver-gilt kántharos found in 1871 in a tomb to the north of Tiflis and now preserved in the Hermitage at Petrograd[2]. Here a vessel of dark violet glass was actually blown into shape within the holder and still bears in places the impress of the silver upon it. Stephani, who published this splendid cup—it is six inches high,—assigns it on account of its hunting-scene to a date c. 200 A.D.; and we note in passing that the rosettes round its rim recall those of the Antioch chalice. But other examples of the art are of much earlier date. To the period of Augustus or Tiberius belongs a skýphos of open-work lead formerly in the Slade collection and now in the British Museum[3]. This curious work, perhaps a goldsmith's model, has blown within it a cup of azure glass, which shows through oval openings in a band about its waist. Above are Bacchic scenes in relief with incised inscriptions[4]. Below is another relief of vine-tendrils and grape-bunches. The two handles also are decorated with masks. Earlier still may be placed the skýphos found in 1876 at Varpelev in Zealand and now in the Museum at Copenhagen[5]. It is a bowl of deep blue glass, the upper part of which is covered with a decorative design of vine-leaves, ivy-leaves, etc. in open-work silver. It was found with coins of Probus (276—282 A.D.), but is itself Greek work[6] of the early found in the temple of Solomon (Io. Malal. chron. 10 p. 260 f. Dindorf), it is just thinkable that this silver cup of special sanctity was presented on the same occasion to the Antiochenes. Dr Eisen, however, does not press the point (Am. Journ. Arch. 1917 xxi. 171 f.) and obviously inclines to a different and a more heroic hypothesis. With the fall of Jerusalem Antioch became the main centre of Christianity in the east. May not the inner bowl of the chalice have been brought thither from Jerusalem? May it not even have been the very vessel used in Apostolic times by the infant Church? Nay more, might it not conceivably have been the actual Cup of the Last Supper? No wonder that in the great Syrian capital, where the disciples were first called Christians, those who obtained possession of a relic so precious lavished all the resources of early imperial art upon its external embellishment.

[1] E. H. Minns in The Cambridge Review of Feb. 15, 1924 (xlv. 216). Sir Martin Conway in The Burlington Magazine for Sept. 1924 (xlv. 109) independently makes the same conjecture: 'I suggest,' he says, 'that this original was of coloured glass.' Mr F. Kouchakji in a letter to me (March 4, 1924) replies by anticipation: 'So far all the open-work over glass cups that have come down to us from antiquity are very small. None of them possessed a glass cup of the size of the inner cup. Then, if a fine glass cup had been broken, it would have been replaced by a finished cup and not by a crudely made one, never finished.'

[2] L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1872 p. 143 ff. Atlas pl. 2, 1 and 2 (in colours), E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 808 fig. 981, H. Blümner Technologie und Terminologie der Gewerbe und Künste bei Griechen und Römern Leipzig 1887 iv. 405 n. 1, A. Kisa Das Glas im Altertume Leipzig 1908 ii. 602 ff. with figs. 208, 208a.

[3] Gerhard Ant. Bildw. p. 327 pl. 87, 1—4, A. Kisa op. cit. ii. 602 with figs. 335, 335 a, 335 b.

[4] (a) DOMITILLAE | STATILIO CONIVGI, (b) SALVS | GEN · HVM. Below the foot is an inscription in relief: (c) · FM · AVG ⅋. Clearly (a) and (b) are later than (c).

[5] C. Engelhardt in the Aarbøger for nordisk Oldkyndighed og Historie 1877 p. 354 with col. pl. 1, A. Kisa op. cit. ii. 604 f. with fig. 209.

[6] Witness the wave-pattern round its rim, broken by the single word ЄΥΤΥΧΩC.

first century, or earlier[1]. Kisa goes further and claims that already in Ptolemaic times craftsmen had begun to cover glass cups with gold and silver[2]. How else are we to understand Athenaios' statement that 'two glass vessels of open-work gold' were carried in the pageant of Ptolemy ii Philadelphos[3]? After this it may be conceded that the technique of the Antioch chalice is no bar to accepting the first-century date suggested by its shape.

A third criterion may be sought in the style of the chalice-decoration. Mr T. Davies Pryce in a recent letter to me (Nov. 12, 1924) says: 'Apart from the Christian figures, the decorative elements are undoubtedly similar to those used by the first and second century sigillata potters.'[4] The vines, though not so purely naturalistic as those of the Augustan age[5], are as yet untouched by the incipient stylisation of the third century[6] and show little, if any, trace of that formality which as time went on became more and more marked[7] till it culminated in the Coptic art of the sixth century[8]. Mr W. A. Watkins draws my attention (Nov. 15, 1924) to the fact that the vines on the chalice resemble, on the one hand, the vine in the Catacomb of Domitilla, which likewise springs from the ground with a double stem and has birds and Cupids among its [1] A. Kisa op. cit. ii. 604 notes that its handles, inlaid with gold, resemble those of Alexandrine silver cups found e.g. at Bosco Reale.

[2] Id. ib. ii. 600.

[3] Kallixenos of Rhodes περὶ Ἀλεξανδρείας 4 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 62 Müller) ap. Athen. 199 F ὑάλινα διάχρυσα δύο.

[4] Mr Pryce's arguments include the following: (a) The vine-scroll is comparable with that on a sherd from Wroxeter dated 90—110 or 120 A.D. (J. P. Bushe-Fox Excavations on the Site of the Roman Town at Wroxeter Shropshire, in 1912 (Reports of the Research Committee of the Society of Antiquaries of London No. 1) Oxford 1913 p. 38 f. no. 23 fig. 12). (b) The eagle with outspread wings and head turned to right or left was a common stock-type with the potters of s. i and ii A.D. (F. Oswald—T. Davies Pryce An Introduction to the study of Terra Sigillata London 1920 pls. 6, 4; 7, 2; 9, 4). (c) The rabbit eating grapes appears in the period Domitian—Trajan (eid. ib. pl. 19, 5). (d) The basket with outspread rim and externally concave sides occurs often on pottery of 100—150 A.D. (eid. ib. pl. 17, 4 in a vintage scene with birds, J. Déchelette Les vases céramiques ornés de la Gaule Romaine Paris 1904 ii. 154 f. types 1082 and 1087). (e) The repeated rosette frequently forms an upper bordering in Italian sigillata designs and is sometimes copied by the later or first-century Gaulish sigillata potters.

[5] A silver bowl of this period, formerly in the Blacas collection and now in the British Museum, is covered with exquisitely natural vine-leaves and tendrils in gilded repoussé-work (Brit. Mus. Cat. Silver Plate p. 22 no. 82 pl. 11).

[6] A circular mirror of about s. iii A.D., found in a woman's grave near Sofia and now in the British Museum, has a frame of silver-gilt bronze with a somewhat schematised vine-scroll and peacocks worked à jour on a backing of wood (ib. p. 28 no. 106 pl. 15).

[7] E.g. L. von Sybel Christliche Antike Marburg 1909 ii figs. 45 (sarcophagus in the Lateran Museum at Rome), 46 (sarcophagus in San Lorenzo at Rome), 74 (ivory throne at Ravenna) = R. Garrucci Storia della arte cristiana nei primi otto secoli della chiesa Prato 1881 v pl. 302, 2 f., v pl. 306, 1—4, vi pl. 414 f.

[8] Sir Martin Conway in The Burlington Magazine for Sept. 1924 (xlv. 106 ff.) compares the chalice with the sculptured semidome of a Coptic niche now in the Cairo Museum (s. vi), with the back and front of a carved ivory fragment in the same collection (s. v—vi), with a panel of the ivory throne at Ravenna (c. 550 A.D.), etc. Accordingly he would date the chalice c. 550 A.D. (ib. p. 110). But on all the monuments cited by him the vines are far advanced in stylisation.

branches[1], on the other hand, the vine-scroll in the Catacomb of Praetextatus, where again birds are seen among the vine-leaves[2]. The cemetery of Domitilla on the Via Ardeatina is believed to go back to Apostolic times[3], while that of Praetextatus on the Via Appia is referred to the second century[4]. The two representations of Christ as a young man and as a boy are imperfectly preserved, but appear to be idealistic rather than realistic figures. The head of the latter at any rate is, as Dr Eisen duly notes[5], reminiscent of a well-known Scopaic type. The other seated persons are at least to some extent individualised[6] and were almost certainly interpreted as portraits at the time when the graffiti were added. We know so little at present about the history of Greek portrait-sculpture in the east during the first few centuries of the Christian era that it is peculiarly difficult to date a given work, especially when executed on a small scale[6]. But if we might assume (a somewhat doubtful assumption) that the development of later Greek portraiture followed the same lines as that of Roman portraiture, we should have little hesitation in referring these life-like but not over-realistic heads to the Flavian period (69—96 A.D.). The preceding Augustan and Julio-Claudian art (31 B.C.—68 A.D.) had been more idealistic and aristocratic. Trajanic portraits (98—117 A.D.), though still life-like, are harder and less sympathetic. In the Hadrianic age (117—138 A.D.) we get a marked loss of individualism owing to the revival of old Hellenic ideals. Antonine and Aurelian carving (138—180 A.D.) is pictorial in effect: loose locks contrast with polished faces and there is a glint of light on plastic eyes. Realism returns with the third century, but is accompanied by various tell-tale innovations, e.g. very short hair shown by pick-marks on a roughened surface. Had the work been later than this, we should have looked to find standing figures frontally arranged with formal hair and eyes monotonously drilled. On the whole it may be contended that the style of the seated persons suits best the end of the first or, possibly, the beginning of the second century A.D. But, I repeat, the scarceness of strictly comparable work and above all the smallness of the scale—each head is only three-eighths of an inch in height—make certainty unattainable.

It remains to speak of the subject represented on the chalice. The nearest parallels were pointed out by Prof. F. C. Burkitt[7] and Sir Martin Conway[8], who both aptly cite a gilded glass or fondo d'oro published by Garrucci (fig. 1009)[9].

[1] G. B. de Rossi Roma sotterranea edd.[1] J. S. Northcote—W. R. Brownlow London 1869 p. 73 with fig. 10 (ed.[2] 1879 ii. 120 ff. fig. 26), R. Garrucci op. cit. Prato 1881 ii. 23 pl. 19, 1. The vine spreads over the vaulted roof in the oldest portion of the catacomb.

[2] G. B. de Rossi op. cit. ed.[1] p. 78 with fig. 12 (ed.[2] ii. 148 ff. fig. 37), R. Garrucci op. cit. ii. 43 f. pl. 37, 1. The vine occupies the third (autumnal) zone of decoration on the Crypt of St Januarius, who was martyred in 162 A.D.

[3] W. Lowrie Christian Art and Archæology New York 1901 p. 65 f., C. M. Kaufmann Handbuch der christlichen Archäologie Paderborn 1913 p. 127.

[4] C. M. Kaufmann op. cit. p. 127 f.

[5] G. A. Eisen in the New Era Magazine for June 1920 p. 416, id. The Great Chalice of Antioch pp. 63 ff., 74.

[6] Whether this individualisation was in any degree due to tooling or retouching of the original figures before the first gilding of the shell is a point that calls for careful investigation.

[7] In The Cambridge Review 1923—1924 xlv. 253 f.

[8] In The Burlington Magazine for Sept. 1924 (xlv. 109).

[9] R. Garrucci Vetri ornati di figure in oro trovati nei cimiteri dei cristiani primitivi di Roma Roma 1858 p. 40 f. pl. 18, 4 (not 3, as both Prof. Burkitt and Sir M. Conway cite

This shows a youthful Christ (CRISTVS) seated with a group of eight or more[1] Saints to right and left of him. As on the chalice, they occupy high chairs with a rounded back, most of them holding rolls, two extending their right hands. The highest pair is inscribed PETRVS and [PA]V[LVS]. The lowest four are TIMOTEVS, SVSTVS, SIMON, FLORVS—Roman Christians of the third or fourth century[2]. The glass itself is assigned to the age of Pope Damasus (366—384 A.D.)[3].

Fig. 1009.

But the makers of these gilded glasses often gave new names to old designs, and Prof. Burkitt[4] rightly traces the type back to a ceiling in the Catacomb of Petrus and Marcellinus. J. Wilpert holds that the ceiling in question dates from the middle of s. iii and depicts the Judgment with the Saints as assessors[5].

It is clear that we have here one element in the design of the Antioch chalice. But that is not all. Prof. Burkitt[6] very justly observes that the left arm of the it), id. Storia della arte cristiana nei primi otto secoli della chiesa Prato 1881 iii. 159 f. pl. 187, 4 (more complete)=my fig. 1009, C. M. Kaufmann Handbuch der christlichen Archäologie Paderborn 1913 p. 623 fig. 253, 7. On the vestments lettered I and J see Garrucci Storia iii. 160.

[1] Originally, perhaps, ten: the glass is broken away to right and left.

[2] Timotheus was martyred in 301 (?), Sustus i.e. Xystus (Sixtus ii) in 258 A.D.

[3] H. Vopel Die altchristlichen Goldgläser Freiburg i. B. 1899 p. 58.

[4] Cp. Vopel op. cit. p. 58 n. 1.

[5] J. Wilpert Ein Cyclus christologischer Gemälde aus der Katakombe der heiligen Petrus und Marcellinus Freiburg im Breisgau 1891 p. 17 pl. 1—2, 1, pl. 3—4, 1

[6] In The Cambridge Review 1923—1924 xlv. 254.

Christ above the eagle (no. 1) and much of the adjoining space are due (vide the key-plan) to a restoration by Monsieur André. He suggests that the disturbing blank was originally filled with a second lamb, the figure being conceived as that of the Good Shepherd. And, if it be objected that the Good Shepherd should be standing not seated, the unusual position is defended by a fifth-century mosaic in the mausoleum of Galla Placidia at Ravenna[1]. It might have been defended by a second-century painting in the cemetery of Callistus at Rome, which shows Christ seated, lyre in hand, between two sheep—the type of the Good Shepherd being definitely influenced by that of Orpheus[2]. I incline therefore to think that Prof. Burkitt's acute divination of the original design is right and that Christ was represented on the chalice in the Orphic or seated type of the Good Shepherd with a sheep on either hand[3]. In this connexion it is interesting to recall that Tertullian, writing between 217 and 222 A.D., mentions chalices of the anti-Montanist party as decorated with representations of the Good Shepherd[4]. It is possible that he had in view cheap imitations of such a masterpiece as the chalice of Antioch.

The combination of the Judge and the Shepherd accounts for much, but not quite for everything. We have yet to explain the eagle beneath his feet. An eagle commonly suggests Zeus, and not least at Antioch where his cult was so familiar[5]. But what exactly is the link between the Shepherd-Judge and Zeus? It is, I think, to be found in the conception of the Divine Ruler, which would easily attach itself either to the figure of the Judge on his judgment-seat or to the seated type of the Shepherd[6]. Dr Eisen[7] remarks that the central figure

[1] R. Garrucci Storia della arte cristiana nei primi otto secoli della chiesa Prato 1881 iv. 41 pl. 233, 2, W. Lowrie Christian Art and Archæology New York 1901 p. 330 f. fig. 141, C. M. Kaufmann Handbuch der christlichen Archäologie Paderborn 1913 p. 456.

[2] G. B. de Rossi Roma sotterranea edd.[1] J. S. Northcote—W. R. Brownlow London 1869 p. 373 col. pl. 11, 2 (ed.[2] 1879 i. 455, ii col. pl. 18, 2), R. Garrucci op. cit. ii. 10 pl. 4, 1, L. von Sybel Christliche Antike Marburg 1906 i. 245 f. fig., 1909 ii. 106, C. M. Kaufmann op. cit. p. 275 f. fig. 102.

It is a curious coincidence, if nothing more, that the Phoenician Ba'al-ḥammân is represented by a Cypriote terra cotta as sitting on a throne with a ram standing on either side of him (supra i. 354 pl. xxvi, 1).

[3] Dr Eisen in a letter to Dr F. J. Foakes Jackson, of which a copy was sent to me by Messrs Kouchakji (March 15, 1924), says: 'An original photograph taken before the cleaning shows that there was no lamb on the other side, and that the design was probably one: branches, leaves, tendrils and bunches of grapes. There is a total absence of symmetry in any part of the Chalice design.' [!]

[4] Tertull. de pud. 7 a parabolis licebit incipias, ubi est ovis perdita a domino requisita et humeris eius revecta. procedant ipsae picturae calicum vestrorum, si vel in illis perlucebit interpretatio pecudis illius, utrumne Christiano an ethnico peccatori de restitutione conlineet, ib. 10 sed cederem tibi, si scriptura Pastoris, quae sola moechos amat, divino instrumento meruisset incidi, si non ab omni concilio ecclesiarum etiam vestrarum inter apocrypha et falsa iudicaretur, adultera et ipsa et inde patrona sociorum, a qua et alias initiaris, cui ille, si forte, patrocinabitur pastor quem in calice depingis, prostitutorem et ipsum Christiani sacramenti, merito et ebrietatis idolum et moechiae asylum post calicem subsecuturae, de quo nihil libentius libas quam ovem paenitentiae secundae (cp. ib. 13).

[5] Supra p. 1186 ff.

[6] The seated Shepherd in the mausoleum of Galla Placidia 'is clothed in imperial purple' (W. Lowrie op. cit. p. 331).

[7] G. A. Eisen in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1916 xx. 432, 434, id. ib. 1917 xxi. 172, 174 fig. 2, 10 ff., 179, id. The Great Chalice of Antioch pp. 31, 34, 143, 147, 179.

enthroned with a footstool bears a strong resemblance in costume, pose, and general effect to the figure of Augustus on a silver skýphos from Bosco Reale[1]. He notes also that on this toreutic triumph, as on the chalice of Antioch, the central figure appears twice—once seated to receive the submission of the barbaric Germans, once enthroned amid the gods as master of the universe. I submit that the artist of the chalice has given to Christ the aspect and position of a divinised emperor[2]. Now Roman emperors were often acclaimed by Greek adulation as Zeus incarnate[3]; and a bust of Zeus, referred to the first or second century A.D., is supported on an eagle with spread wings[4]. We are not, therefore, surprised to find that the head of Caracalla on a coin of Antioch struck between 213 and 217 A.D. has a similar eagle beneath it[5]. In view of these facts it becomes a legitimate conjecture that the eagle beneath the seated Christ marks him as at once human and divine, the true claimant to the throne of Zeus[6].

So, then, the Shepherd-Judge is also the Divine Ruler. And, if it be argued that this multiple rôle is not likely to go back to the first century, I should answer that it is already implied by a great passage in the Gospel[7]: 'But when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all the nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as the shepherd separateth the sheep from the goats.'

It amounts to this. For the Christian artist—trained, it may be, in a pagan school—Christ has dispossessed all rivals and has taken his seat on the very throne of Zeus. But the chalice has a reverse as well as an obverse design, and we have still to ask Why this duplication of Christ in younger form? and Wherein lies the special appropriateness of the vine-symbolism? The problem, so put, suggests its own solution. The boyish figure seated on the divine throne

[1] A. Héron de Villefosse in the Mon. Piot 1899 v. 133 ff. pls. 31—33 = Reinach Rép. Reliefs i. 92 no. 2 f., 93 no. 1 f., 94 no. 1 f.

[2] For a later variation on the same theme see the well-known ivory pyxis at Berlin (R. Garrucci op. cit. vi. 60 pl. 440, 1, L. von Sybel op. cit. ii. 253 fig. 77, C. M. Kaufmann op. cit. pp. 366, 552 fig. 142), which likewise has Christ seated en face on a round-backed throne, with a roll in his hand and a footstool at his feet. He is flanked by two seated Apostles (St Peter and St Paul), who raise their hands in salutation. The other ten stand to right and left of him.

The position assigned to the two foremost Apostles suits their 'Dioscuric' character (supra p. 606). Zeus is supported by the Dioskouroi (supra i. 35 fig. 8, ii. 1230 tail-piece); Christ, by St Peter and St Paul (supra i. 51 fig. 24, ii. 1207 fig. 1009).

[3] See e.g. the examples that I collected in Folk-Lore 1905 xvi. 308 ff.

[4] Supra p. 951 n. 0 with fig. 844.

[5] Supra p. 1193 fig. 1003. The head of Trajan on silver coins struck at Tyre is often supported by an eagle with closed wings (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 300 f. pl. 36, 1, 3—6, Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 268 f. pl. 77, 5). Some specimens, which have the same obverse type, but for reverse Tyche seated with the Orontes at her feet, are assigned doubtfully by G. F. Hill to Tyre (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins pp. cxxxvii f., 302 pl. 36, 9), by G. Macdonald to Antioch (Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 163 f. pl. 72, 19).

[6] I do not deny that the eagle here may have had a further significance. C. M. Kaufmann op. cit. p. 286 discusses its appearance in Christian art 'als...Symbol der Auferstehung...und zwar der in Christo gebotenen felix reparatio temporum (vgl. Ps. 103, 5) im Jenseits.'

[7] Matthew 25. 31 f. Aischylos long since had made Agamemnon, his divine ruler, an ἀγαθὸς προβατογνώμων (Ag. 795).

in the midst of his trusty followers is, to those at least who have in mind the coinage of Lydia and Kilikia[1], reminiscent of the child Zeus or Dionysos seated on his throne with the Kouretes grouped about him; and the framework of grape-vines adds point to the analogy.

On the whole, piecing together the evidence of shape, technique, style, and subject, I conclude that the chalice of Antioch was made at some date not far removed from the year 100 A.D.[2]; that it was then adorned with figures of Christ sitting in Judgment with the Saints[3], ten in number merely because ten was a typical plurality[4]; and that these assessors were later, by means of graffiti, identified with individual Apostles and canonical authors, including perhaps all the recognised writers of the New Testament[5]. Further, I hold that the decoration of the chalice, though essentially Christian, owes certain of its features to pagan antecedents, in particular to Anatolian representations of Zeus and Dionysos[6]. Here, as elsewhere, the art-types of the Greek Father and Son were both taken into the service of the conquering creed and alike used to portray the form of Him who said: 'I and the Father are one[7].'

[1] Supra i. 152 f. figs. 125—128, i. 646 f.

[2] Prof. Strzygowski, after personal inspection of the chalice and prolonged study of its detail, refers it to the first century A.D. (J. Strzygowski 'Der "Silberkelch von Antiochia"' in the Jahrbuch der asiatischen Kunst 1924 pp. 53—61 pl. 28 f., especially p. 61). But when he attributes the Berlin pyxis also to the first century (ib. p. 59), we part company.

[3] Supra p. 1207.

[4] M. H. Farbridge Studies in Biblical and Semitic Symbolism London 1923 p. 140 ff. (citing E. W. Bullinger Number in Scripture Bromley 1894 p. 243).

[5] Supra p. 1200 n. 4. [6] Supra p. 1209 f. [7] John 10. 30.

ADDENDA

ii. 2 n. 4. The painted marble tablet from Tarragona, though accepted as genuine by more than one archaeologist of repute (F. Ladelci in the Atti dell' Accademia pontificia de' nuovi Lincei 1885 xxxviii. 4. 122 ff. pl. 1, Milani Stud. e mat. di arch. e num. 1899—1901 i. 36 ff. fig. 4, A. L. Frothingham in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1916 xx. 209—211 fig. 41), has recently been denounced as a forgery by the eminent connoisseur of Iberian antiquities P. Paris 'Le faux sarcophage égyptien de Tarragone' in the Rev. Arch. 1921 ii. 146—157 with figs. 1—6. I have not myself seen the tablet; but Mr T. W. I. Bullock of Queens' College, Cambridge, who has kindly interviewed on my behalf J. R. Mélida y Alinari, director of the Museo Arqueologico Nacional at Madrid, and F. A. Ossorio, keeper of the Greek and Roman antiquities, reports (Sept. 21, 1923) that both these authorities regard, and always have regarded, the fragment as a mere fabrication.

ii. 7 n. 1. Add Eunap. v. Aedesii 37 (p. 20 Boissonade) τὸ τῶν ὁμιλητῶν ἄριστον πρὸς μυστηριώδη τινὰ σιωπὴν καὶ ἱεροφαντικὴν ἐχεμυθίαν ἐπιρρεπὲς ἦν καὶ συνεκέκλιτο.

ii. 31 n. 7. So also Loukian. somn. 2 ὦ Ζεῦ τεράστιε, cp. Aristoph. pax 41 f. οὐκ ἔσθ' ὅπως | τοῦτ' ἐστὶ τὸ τέρας οὐ Διὸς σκαταβόητον (supra p. 15 n. 1) and Eustath. in Od. p. 1885, 8 f. Διὸς δὲ τέρας ἀλληγορικῶς μὲν τὸ ἐξ ἀέρος· τοιοῦτον γὰρ ἡ, ὡς ἐρρέθη, δίχα νέφους βροντή. ἄλλως δὲ διὰ τὸ πᾶν τέρας ἀνάγεσθαι εἰς ἐκεῖνον, καθὰ καὶ πᾶσαν ὁμφὴν· διὸ καὶ πανομφαῖος ἐλέγετο Ζεύς. See further O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 369.

ii. 32. The relief of Zeus Κραταιβάτης is now figured by Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. pl. 219, 8 (=my fig. 1010).

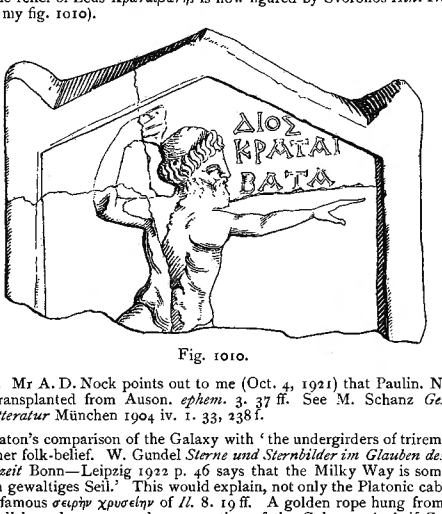

Fig. 1010.

ii. 38 n. 5. Mr A. D. Nock points out to me (Oct. 4, 1921) that Paulin. Nolan. carm. 5. 37 ff. is transplanted from Auson. ephem. 3. 37 ff. See M. Schanz Geschichte der römischen Litteratur München 1904 iv. 1. 33, 238 f.

ii. 44. Platon's comparison of the Galaxy with 'the undergirders of triremes' perhaps rests on another folk-belief. W. Gundel Sterne und Sternbilder im Glauben des Altertums und der Neuzeit Bonn—Leipzig 1922 p. 46 says that the Milky Way is sometimes conceived as 'ein gewaltiges Seil.' This would explain, not only the Platonic cable, but also the yet more famous σειρὴν χρυσείην of Il. 8. 19 ff. A golden rope hung from heaven to earth may well have been a popular conception of the Galaxy. And, if Zeus bound it περὶ ῥίον Οὐλύμποιο (ib. 25), we recall that 'the stars came down at night on Olympus' (supra p. 905 n. 0).

ii. 44 n. 4. The late Mr H. G. Evelyn White kindly supplied me (Sept. 23, 1921) with a Coptic parallel to the Manichaean 'pillar of light.' It occurs in an apocalyptic Gospel from Dêr Abû Makâr in the Wady'n Natrûn (New Texts from Dêr Abû Makâr no. 3, folio 117*recto*): 'There shall be a pillar (ϹΤΫΛΟϹ=στῦλος) of light, like unto silver, in Amenti (Hades): all mankind that is shall come to the place of judgment. But ye upon your thrones within the wall shall order the judgment. But the rest of the just—they who shall not be able to attain to the measure of the judgment—shall sit (or rest, remain) upon a pillar (στῦλος) of light, that they may behold them who do judgment and them who have judgment done upon them.' Mr Evelyn White further noted (Oct. 24, 1921), after Dr M. R. James, a 'great pillar' in the judgment-scene of oracl. Sib. 2. 238 ff. Geffcken ἠρίκα δ' ἀναστήσῃ νέκυας μοῖραν καταλύσας | καὶ καθίσῃ Σαβαὼθ Ἀδωναῖος ὑψικέραυνος | ἐς θρόνον οὐράνιον [τε] μέγαν δέ τε κίονα πήξῃ, | ἥξει δ' ἐν νεφέλῃ πρὸς ἄφθιτον ἄφθιτος αὐτός | ἐν δόξῃ Χριστὸς κ.τ.λ.

ii. 45 n. 1. After repeated inspection of the marble (in the spring of 1922) and examination of a good photograph I incline to think that the arch is intentional, that the pillar is topped by an abacus, and that the inscription should be read as ΙΗΕΥΣ.

ii. 50 ff. F. Haug 'Die Irminsul' in Germania 1918 ii. 68—72 contends that there was but one Irminsûl, that of Ereshurg, probably a huge oak-tree lopped of its boughs but still rooted in the ground, till it was destroyed by Charles the Great in 772 A.D. Haug makes light of Widukind's evidence for a second Irminsûl at Scheidungen, and gives short shrift to the view of Müllenhoff and Mogk that there were several or even many such pillars. He regards the first element in the name as either adjectival ('mächtige, starke, erhabene Säule') or substantival ('für Irmin(e)ssul, d. h. Säule des Gottes oder Halbgottes Irmin').

ii. 50 n. 2. C. Petersen 'Zioter (Zeter) oder Tiodute (Jodute), der Gott des Kriegs und des Rechts bei den Deutschen' in Forschungen zur Deutschen Geschichte 1866 vi. 223—342 must be read with caution.

ii. 51 n. 5. Mr B. Dickins has sent me the following notes in criticism (Oct. 8, 1920) of the view advocated by J. Grimm, K. Simrock, and others:—

'The evidence on which this view is based appears to be as follows:

(a) Stephens, No. 5, taken from Hickes' edition of the A.S. Runic Poem, which glosses ᛉ as both ear and tîr: this poem was however derived from the burnt Cott. Otho B. 10, which seems to have had the characters but no names, the latter being added by Hickes from (b) Stephens, No. 9, taken from Cott. Dom. A. 9, the writer or copyist of which was an ignorant person who confused ᛉ and ᛏ as he had previously failed to distinguish between the names of ᛞ and ᚹ.

(c) Stephens, No. 10, taken from St Gall, 4to, No. 270, p. 52, which gives the value and name of ᛉ as z and aer respectively. This is a pretty faithful copy of the A.S. 28 letter futhorc only partially assimilated to the phonology of O.H.G.; e.g. þ is still preserved, though its name has become dorn, and ᛏ retains the name ti and the value t, though the name and value of ᛞ have become tag and t.

Later a more drastic attempt is made to harmonize the Latin alphabet, the English futhorc and the sounds of O.H.G. þ disappears, though its name þorn in the form dorn is attached to ᚹ; the A.S. name of ᛞ (dæg) is changed to tac and attached to ᛏ, while ᛉ, for which O.H.G. had no use in its proper value ea, is baptised ziu, which corresponds with A.S. tîw (found also in the alphabets as ti and tîr).

However the equation of Bavarian Er and A.S. ear is etymologically unsound, and the association of ᛉ with the god Ziu is quite fortuitous, for the following reasons:—

(1) The use of ᛉ to represent the sound of z [ts] is by no means universal; cf. e.g. Stephens Nos. 13 and 18 where varieties of the Latin z are used and No. 20, where the last letter of the Northumbrian futhorc ᛝ (gaar) is similarly thrust into the gap.

(2) ᛉ is a specifically English letter invented to represent the ēa which arose from Gmc. au: it is not found in inscriptions outside the English area, and where it occurs in O.H.G. futhorcs and alphabets it is legitimate to assume that it has been borrowed from England.

(3) The sound z [z], which existed in the parent Gmc. and was represented by ᛘ in the old futhark, disappeared both in English and German, though the letter kept its place in the series and was sometimes used in the later Runic alphabets to fill the vacant place of the Latin x. When, therefore, by the Fourth Sound-Shifting a new z [ts] developed in O.H.G. it was necessary to find a fresh symbol. Now ᛉ was the last letter of the 28 letter English futhorc found, for instance, on the Thames scramasax [the characters for guttural c and g seem to have been confined to Northumbria]; moreover O.H.G. had no use for an ea character.

Put shortly, the association of the character ᛉ with the name of the god Ziu appears to be due to the following causes:

By a sound-change peculiar to O.H.G. (the Fourth Sound-Shifting) the dentals experienced a general shift round, þ>d>t>z, the effect of which was the loss of þ and the appearance of a new sound z [ts]. The disappearance of þ was welcomed rather than otherwise, since it was an alien which could not be found a place in the Latin alphabet, but it was necessary to find a symbol for z. ᛉ happened not to be needed in its proper A.S. value of ea, and moreover to be the last letter of the non-Northumbrian futhorc. It was therefore taken over, but its original name ear discarded in order to avoid the confusion which would arise if the initial of the name of a letter were other than the letter itself. Naturally it inherited the name ziu which in its shifted form was no longer appropriate to its original possessor ᛏ.'

ii. 57 n. 4. Recent articles on 'Jupiter-columns' are listed by W. Deonna in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1917 xxx. 348, ib. 1918 xxxi. 434. Add F. Hertlein 'Zu älteren Funden des Juppitergigantenkreises' in Germania 1917 i. 101—105 with 2 figs., id. 'Der Zusammenhang der Juppitergigantengruppen' ib. 1917 i. 136—143 with 9 figs. R. Forrer 'Zur Frage der Juppitergigantensäulen' in the Römisch-germanisches Korrespondenzblatt 1912 v. 60 f. questions Hertlein's Germanic interpretation of the columns on two grounds ((1) 'dass an vielen Orten, so z. B. in Zabern, die neben Juppitergigantenresten auf Inschriften gefundenen Personennamen nicht germanische sondern keltische sind'; (2) 'dass schon auf vorrömisch gallischen Münzen eine verwandte Darstellung Platz gegriffen hat').

ii. 86. On the group from Luxeuil see now É. Espérandieu in the Rev. Arch. 1917 i. 72—86 with two figs. (summarised in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1918 xxii. 220). Espérandieu argues that the rider was Iupiter with an astral wheel, that the horse should be restored in a rearing or galloping posture, and that the human head supporting its foot was part of a giant with snaky legs.

ii. 90. Mr C. D. Bicknell notes a second example—British Museum: A Guide to the Antiquities of Roman Britain London 1922 p. 20 f. fig. 10 'Half of a stone octagon, with reliefs in niches of the deities presiding over the days of the week, was found by Horsley in the mill at Chesterford, Essex, where it had been used by the local blacksmith as a water-trough for cooling his iron.'

ii. 90. The 'Jupiter-column' had a long history in front of it as well as behind it—witness the sacred pillars reverenced by thousands today in France and Spain. Miss J. E. Harrison 'The Pillar and the Maiden' in the Proceedings of the Classical Association 1907 v. 65—77 has drawn attention to the cult of La Vierge du Pilier at Chartres and to the multiplied pillar-shrines of her Cathedral (bibliography by U. Chevalier Répertoire des sources historiques du moyen âge Montbéliard 1895 p. 661 ff.). Similarly at Zaragoza the Apostle James (Santiago) built a chapel on the spot where he had seen a vision of the Virgin poised on a pillar of jasper and attended by angels (A. F. Calvert Valladolid, Oviedo, Segovia, Zamora, Avila, & Zaragoza London 1908 p. 158 ff. with pls. 348 and 349 Our Lady del Pilar).

ii. 93 ff. The Column of Mayence continues to provoke discussion. To the bibliography (ii. 93 n. 3) add F. Quilling 'Zur grossen Juppitersäule von Mainz' in the Römisch-germanisches Korrespondenzblatt 1913 vi. 49—53, K. Körber Die grosse Juppitersäule im Altertumsmuseum der Stadt Mainz Mainz 1915 pp. 1—28 with 10 pls. and 9 figs. (reviewed by K. Wigand in the Römisch-germanisches Korrespondenzblatt 1915 viii. 47 f.), F. Drexel 'Zur Mainzer Jupitersäule' in the Römisch-germanisches Korrespondenzblatt 1915 viii. 67—69, F. Quilling 'Zur grossen Juppitersäule in Mainz' in Germania 1917 i. 43—45, id. Die Jupiter-Säule des Samus und Severus Leipzig 1918 pp. 1—236 with many figs. (reviewed by F. Drexel in Germania 1919 iii. 28—32, J. P. Waltzing in Le Musée Belge 1921 xxv. 221—226, cp. Class. Rev. 1922 xxxvi. 141), F. Quilling Die Nerosäule des Samus und Severus Leipzig 1919 pp. 1—32 with 2 figs. ('Nachtrag' to the 1918 volume by the same author), id. Die Juppiter-Votivsäule der Mainzer Canabarii. Eine neue Erklärung ihres Bildschmuckes Frankfurt 1919 pp. 1—16 with figs. and 2 pls. (reviewed by F. Drexel in Germania 1919 iii. 127 f.).

Of points made since my section on the subject (supra p. 93 ff.) was written the most important is the discovery by P. T. Kessler, assistant of the Mayence Museum, that two drums of the column have hitherto been incorrectly placed. Kessler observed that in its first, fourth, and fifth drums the run-holes for lead ('Gussrinnen') were contrived at the back of the shaft. If the same rule was followed for the second and third drums, we must suppose that their front figures were Volcanus and the goddess with the scales. This supposition is confirmed by the fact that a lance-tip carved beneath Ceres' altar on the lower edge of the second drum is now seen to be the point of Neptunus' staff on the first drum —an adjustment further certified by an incised mark ('Versatzmarke') on the two adjacent edges. Another mark above the helmet of Virtus on the second drum is likewise found to fit on to its prolongation below the figure of Pax on the third drum. The whole rearrangement may be set out as follows:

	FRONT	LEFT SIDE	BACK	RIGHT SIDE
SHAFT OF THE COLUMN	IVNO Regina	Luna		Sol
	Genius Neronis	Lar	Bacchus	Lar
	VENVS	Pax	Iuno Sancta	VESTA
	VOLCANVS	Virtus	CERES	Honos
	Victoria	MARS	DIANA	NEPTVNVS
UPPER PLINTH	Inscription	Castor	APOLLO	Pollux
LOWER PLINTH	IVPITER	MERCVRIVS and Maia (?)	Hercules	MINERVA and Fortuna

Quilling now maintains that the entire monument refers to its dedicators, the Canabarii. Virtus and Honos are (as Maass suggested) personifications of Mayence and Castel. Victoria between Mars and Neptunus denotes the success of the fourteenth legion, formerly stationed at Mayence, over the British Boudicca in 61 A.D. Volcanus is there to avert the risk of fire from the corn-ears of Ceres, who represents the harbour-quarter. The goddess with the scales is the patron of Mayence market. She that sets foot on the cow's head and she that has the horse (?) stand for cattle-breeding. Pax is for petty trade. The Genius Neronis becomes the Genius Canabensium. Apollo hails from the Vicus Apollinensis. Etc., etc. But Quilling's views succeed one another at such a pace that the foregoing identifications are, for aught I know, already superannuated.

ii. 97 n. 0. H. Mattingly in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1920 x. 38 described an aureus of Nero, which has rev. IVPPITER LIBERATOR Iupiter enthroned to left with a thunderbolt in his right hand and a sceptre in his left—a thin disguise for the emperor himself. Mr Mattingly supposed that this coin was struck at Corinth (?) in 67 A.D. (Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Emp. i pp. clxxxiii f., 214 no. 110 pl. 40, 15), but he is careful to state that its authenticity has been very seriously questioned (ib. p. clxxxiv n. 1). Coppers of Patrai, issued under Nero, show rev. IVPPITER LIBERATOR Iupiter, nude, standing to left with an eagle on his right hand and a sceptre in his left (Eckhel Doctr. num. vet.[2] ii. 243, 256, B. Pick in the Zeitschr. f. Num. 1890 xvii. 180 ff.).

ii. 98 n. 3. On the statuette from Woodchester see also Farnell Cults of G. States ii. 529 pl. 31, a ('must be a fragment of a statue of Artemis Tauropolos, standing on the bull and carrying a torch'), and S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1913 i. 29 fig. 3 ('Cérès'), i. 422 ('Déméter-Cérès').

ii. 106 n. 2. Add R. Traquair and A. J. B. Wace 'The Base of the Obelisk of Theodosius' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1909 xxix. 60—69 with 7 figs.

ii. 121 ff. on Thracian tattooing. P. Wolters in Hermes 1903 xxxviii. 265—273 explains the name Ἐλαφόστικτος (Lys. or. 13. 19 Θεόκριτον τὸν τοῦ Ἐλαφοστίκτου καλούμενον) as appropriate to a Thracian painted or tattooed. See further O. Crusius in Philologus 1903 lxii. 125—132 (reported in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1903 vii. 477 f.).

At Dikili-Tasch near Philippoi have been found terra-cotta figures of prehistoric (neolithic?) date, which show male heads tattooed, with pointed beards (Bull. Corr. Hell. 1921 xlv. 543 fig. 15).

ii. 131 n. 1. W. B. McDaniel 'The Holiness of the Dischi Sacri' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1924 xxviii. 24—46 figures and discusses eleven such disks; he sees in them (p. 44) 'a sort of compound seal, a composite of signets, peculiar in its design to Tarentum, used for commercial purposes'... 'Pressed in the wax of Tarentum or upon a seal of clay or gypsum.'

ii. 136 ff. Anent the 'Ladder of Salvation' Mr G. G. Coulton kindly refers me to a passage in the vita fratris Leonis (Analecta Franciscana Ad Claras Aquas (Quaracchi) 1897 iii. 71, 19 ff.) semel etiam frater Leo vidit in somnis, quod divinum iudicium parabatur, et in prato quodam Angelis tubicinantibus congregabatur gentium innumerabilis multitudo. et ecce duae scalae, quarum una erat alba, altera rubea, fuerunt positae, una ab una parte illius prati, altera ab alia, quarum proceritas usque ad coelos a terra tendebatur. apparuit autem Christus in summitate scalae rubeae quasi offensus graviter et iratus; et beatus Franciscus erat aliquantulum inferius prope ipsum. qui amplius descendens, fratres suos fortissime clamando vocabat dicens: 'venite, fratres, venite, accedite ad Dominum, qui vos vocat. confidite, ne timeatis.' fratres autem multi currebant ex admonitione Patris et incipiebant ascendere scalam rubeam confidenter. cum autem sic ascenderent, unus cadebat de tertio gradu, alius de quarto, alius de decimo, alii de medio, alii de summo. beatus autem Franciscus ad tantam fratrum ruinam motus compassione, pro filiis iudicem precabatur. Christus vero ostendebat manus et latus, in quibus plagae eius renovari videbantur; et inde sanguis recentissime distillabat, et dicebat: 'ista fecerunt mihi fratres tui.' et dum beatus Franciscus perseveraret misericordiam pro filiis postulando, post brevem morulam aliquantulum per scalam rubeam descendebat et clamabat dicens: 'confidite, fratres, ne desperetis, currite ad scalam albam et ascendite, quia ibi suscipiemini et per eam intrabitis coelum.' currentibus autem fratribus ad scalam albam ex admonitione paterna, ecce beata Virgo apparuit in summitate scalae et recipiebat eos; et ingrediebantur regnum sine labore. Cp. Bartholomaeus de Pisis de conformitate vitae beati Francisci ad vitam Domini Iesu Redemptoris nostri 8. 2 de fratre Leone (Analecta Franciscana Ad Claras Aquas (Quaracchi) 1906 iv. 191, 18 ff.), S. Alfonso de' Liguori Glories of Mary (extr. from The Christian Remembrancer Oct. 1855) London 1856 p. 25 f., The Church Quarterly Review 1902—1903 lv. 55.

ii. 146. A similar sacred trunk adorned with the spoils of the chase was to be seen at Autessiodurum (Auxerre), a town of the Senones in Gallia Lugudunensis, as late as the beginning of s. v A.D. (Acta Sanctorum edd. Bolland. Maius i. 57 C—E (Stephanus Africanus Presbyter vita S. Amatoris Episcopi Autissiodorensis 4. 24) Eo autem tempore quo hæc gesta sunt, Germanus quidam nomine, nobili germine procreatus, territorium Autissiodorense visitatione propria gubernabat: cui mos erat tirunculorum potius industriis indulgere, quam Christianæ religioni operam dare. Is ergo assiduo venatui invigilans, ferarum copiam insidiis atque artis strenuitate frequentissime capiebat. Erat autem arbor pyrus in urbe media, amœnitate gratissima, ad cujus ramusculos ferarum ab eo deprehensarum capita pro admiratione venationis nimiæ dependebant. Quem celebris vir ejusdem civitatis Amator Episcopus, his frequens compellabat eloquiis: Desine, quæso, vir bonorum splendidissime, hæc jocularia, quæ Christianis offensa, Paganis vero imitanda sunt, exercere. Hoc opus idololatricæ culturæ est, non Christianæ elegantissimæ disciplinæ. Et licet hoc vir Deo dignus indesinenter perageret, ille tamen nullo modo admonenti se acquiescere voluit aut obedire. Vir autem Domini iterum atque iterum eum hortabatur, ut non solum à consuetudine male arrepta discederet, verum & ipsam arborem, ne Christianis offendiculum esset, radicitus extirparet. Sed ille nullatenus aurem placidam applicare voluit admonenti. In hujus ergo persuasionis tempore, quadam die præfatus Germanus ex urbe in prædia sui juris secessit. Tunc B. Amator, opportunitatem operiens, sacrilegam arborem cum radicibus abscidit; & ne aliqua ejus incredulis esset memoria, igni concremandam illico deputavit: oscilla vero, quæ tamquam trophei cujusdam certaminis umbrâ dependentia ostentabant, longius à civitatis terminis projici præcepit. Protinus autem [aliquis], gressus suos ad aures sæpedicti Germani retorquens, dictis animum incendit; atque iram suis suasionibus exaggerans, ferocem effecit: ita ut oblitus sanctæ religionis, cujus fuerat ritu atque munere consecratus, mortem viro beatissimo minitaret: & ne ei aliquo modo quorumdam Christianorum conventus furenti resisteret, turbam secum agrestem coadunans civitati improvisus advenit. The upshot was unexpected. Amator, to escape the wrath of Germanus, fled the town, made his way to Augustodunum (Autun), and besought Julius, governor of the province, to sanction the nomination and consecration of Germanus to the episcopal throne of Auxerre in the room of himself. 'For,' said the saint, 'God has revealed to me that my life draweth to a close.' A few days later Amator died, while Germanus became bishop in his stead and ruled the see well (S. Baring-Gould The Lives of the Saints[2] Edinburgh 1914 v. 13 f.). Amator's festival falls on May 1).

There are points about this curious narrative which suggest that we have here in an attenuated, Christianised, form a Gallic parallel to the cult of Diana Nemorensis.

ii. 157 n. 0. F. Courby Les vases grecs à reliefs Paris 1922 pp. 509—513 ('Oenochoés à portraits de reines') enumerates four examples and sundry fragments, which commemorate Arsinoe ii, Berenike ii, and Ptolemy iv Philopator. With unimportant variations, all repeat the same type, derived—according to Courby—from a statue of Arsinoe ii with the attributes of Tyche set up by Ptolemy ii Philadelphos (Athen. 497 B—C) in her temple at Alexandreia (Plin. nat. hist. 37. 108) together with an obelisk eighty cubits high (id. ib. 36. 67 f.).

ii. 174. In the Rev. Arch. 1920 i. 172 C. Picard attempts to discredit the omphalós found by F. Courby within the temple of Apollon. He suggests that it is perhaps a mere weight and that its inscription may not after all be archaic. But Mr C. T. Seltman, who at my request has made a careful examination of the original stone, sends me (Jan. 11, 1923) the following report: 'After our trip to Delphi, from which we returned four days ago, I must write and tell you what I think about the Omphalos, which is now placed in the Museum there. It seems to me that the suggestion of its being a forgery can only be born of madness or malice! The thing is smaller than one expected it to be, but it is to my thinking impossible that it should be a fake. The ∏∏ upon it is clear as are ΛΑ; but the sigma of ΛΑΖ is so mutilated by a large fracture in the stone that it might be almost any letter.'

ii. 176 n. 1. On Themis at Delphoi see also F. Courby in the Fouilles de Delphes ii. 1. 81, who notes the inscription restored by G. Colin in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1903 xxvii. 107 no. 684 B, 14 f. ἐφιορκοῦντι δὲ [Θέμις] καὶ Ἀπόλλων Πύθιος καὶ Λατὼ καὶ Ἄρτεμ[ις καὶ] Ἑστία καὶ πῦρ ἀθάνατον καὶ θεοὶ πά[ντες καὶ πᾶσαι κακίστωι ὀλέθρωι τὴν] | σωτηρίαν μοι [ἀφέλωσι]ν, κ.τ.λ.

In the hymn composed by Aristonoös of Corinth and inscribed on the Athenian Treasury at Delphoi we read how Apollon first occupied the oracular seat πείσας Γαῖαν ἀνθοτρόφον | Θέμιν τ' εὐπλόκαμον θεάν (G. Colin in the Fouilles de Delphes iii. 2. 213 ff. no. 191, 18 f.).

ii. 176 n. 2. W. H. Roscher 'Die Bedeutung des E zu Delphi und die übrigen γράμματα Δελφικά' in Philologus 1900 lix. 21—41 labours to prove that the mystic εἶ is for πρόσει, εἶσει, '"komm her" oder "Willkommen."' This, to my mind, is quite impossible Greek.

ii. 190 n. 0. Further references for the history of rhytá are given by F. W. von Bissing in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1923/24 xxxviii/ix Arch. Anz. pp. 106—109.

ii. 193. On the evolution of the tripod see now K. Schwendemann 'Der Dreifuss' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1921 xxxvi. 98—185 with figs. 1—30. Id. ib. p. 183 f. discusses the relation of the tripod to Zeus on vases and coins.

ii. 193 n. 2. Cp. the twelfth-century fonts at Winchester etc. (C. H. Eden Black Tournai Fonts in England London 1909 pp. 1—32 with good plates), which in appearance at least perpetuate this ancient form of libation-table.

ii. 195 n. 1. A. Furtwängler 'Zum platäischen Weihgeschenk in Delphi' in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1904 pp. 413—417 (Am. Journ. Arch. 1905 ix. 477) figures the upper surface of the highest extant step of the Plataean tripod, and explains three symmetrically arranged slots in it as due to tenons which passed through the top step of the base and thus tethered the tripod-feet to the second step. If so, we must suppose that the legs of the tripod were drawn somewhat closer together than I have placed them (supra p. 194 fig. 134). Furtwängler's inference, however, is not quite secure, since the serpent-coil, which he too takes to have been the central support of the caldron, has left no trace whatever on the second step. It may be that the three slots in question served merely for dowels fastening this step to the one above it, in which serpent-coil and legs were alike embedded.

Re the Plataean tripod see now R. M. Dawkins in Folk-Lore 1924 xxxv. 234 f., 380.

ii. 208 f. In this connexion Miss H. Richardson of Newnham College drew my attention (Oct. 24, 1924) to Plout. de sera num. vind. 22 566 D ἅμα δ' ἐπειρᾶτο προσάγων ἐπιδεικνύειν αὐτῷ τὸ φῶς ἐκ τοῦ τρίποδος, ὡς ἔλεγε, διὰ τῶν κόλπων τῆς Θέμιδος ἀπερειδό- μενον εἰς τὸν Παρνασόν· καὶ προθυμούμενος ἰδεῖν οὐκ εἶδεν ὑπὸ λαμπρότητος, ἀλλ' ἤκουε παριὼν φωνὴν ἐξεῖαν γυναικὸς ἐν μέτρῳ φράζουσαν ἄλλα τέ τινα καὶ χρόνον, ὡς ἔοικε, τῆς ἐκείνου τελευτῆς. We have here, apparently, Themis on the Delphic tripod impregnated by the central pillar of light (= Apollon: cp. supra p. 178).

ii. 222 n. 2. On Iason swallowed by the snake see further P. Ducati 'Giasone e il serpente' in the Rendiconti d. Lincei 1920 xxix. 52—64 (p. 53 fig. 1 kylix from Cervetri, p. 61 fig. 3 bronze kýathos from Felsina).

ii. 229 n. 7. Zeus as Artemis wooing Kallisto is the subject of a painting by F. Boucher (1703—1770 A.D.) (W. Hausenstein Der nackte Mensch in der Kunst aller Zeiten München 1918 p. 122 fig. 84).

ii. 281 n. 4. For the golden vine overhanging the entrance to Herod's temple Mr G. C. Armstrong quotes also Ioseph. de bell. Iud. 5. 5. 4.

ii. 282. Mr B. F. C. Atkinson has kindly supplied me (Apr. 28, 1922) with a Note on the Name Sabazios:—

'I suggest the following etymology for Sabazios. The second part I believe to be Zios, Dios, the Phrygian Zeus. The change of d to a sound represented by zeta in Thracian is frequent and seems regular, whether it be, as Kretschmer suggests (Einleitung p. 196), due to "Assibilation des d vor i," or whether, as is perhaps more probable, a change of d to the voiced dental spirant đ took place over the whole Illyrian—Thracian—Phrygian language area. The disappearance of intervocalic digamma may be due to conscious assimilation by Greek transcribers to Gk. Δία, Διός, etc., although it is well to remember in this connection that there is a form of the stem that contains no μ (Skt. dyām, Gk. Ζῆν, Lat. diem).

The first part of the compound adapts itself with surprising regularity to the root given by Brugmann as ĥeuā*, which appears with varying ablaut in Skt. ávişthas, ávātrás, ávāyati, ávras, Gk. κύος, κῦρος and Bœotian τὰ ππάματα. The root has the general meaning of "swell," "be important," "be master," "possess." Sabazios would thus mean originally "Lord Zeus."

There seems to be another possible etymology for the first part of the compound. The root occurring in Skt. kávis, Gk. κοέω, Lat. caueo, Goth. us-skáus* may be in evidence here. If this is the case, the initial s can be explained in two ways. It may represent an s- sound and illustrate the Thracian treatment of the I.-E. combination sq-. More probably we have in Thracian that form of the stem that shows no initial sibilant (as in the examples cited from Skt., Gk., and Lat.), in which case concealed beneath sigma is the sound ts (final in Eng. thatch). The Messapian and Lycian inscriptions, if correctly interpreted by Deecke, throw light on this view. There we find sigma or zeta used for a sound that represents the I.-E. velar (Messap. zis for quis*, a proper name Plazet with genitive Plaxtas; Lyc. sättäre, "four," etc.: vd. Deecke in Bezz. Beit. Vols. xii, xiii, xiv), though it is true that it is the labialised velar that in these cases undergoes palatalisation. In this case Sabazios would mean "Zeus the wise one" with a hint at prophetical power (cf. caueo), somewhat resembling "augur Apollo." Then we could regard the Sauadai or Saboi, whose connection with the god seems obvious, as his "wise ones" or "seers."

The former of these two etymologies is perhaps the more straightforward; but there is no real barrier to the second (though it would scarcely have been possible apart from the evidence of the Messapian and Lycian inscriptions). In either case the beta represents a v-sound, as the alternative forms (Savuazios, Sauazios, Saoazios, Savazios, Sabadius) make clear, and this derives almost certainly from an earlier μ. The a of the first syllable, whether it represent older e or o, is assimilated to the following a, a practice which seems regular in Illyrian and Thracian (cf., for example, Delminium but Dalmatae, -poris but -para). Thus the former etymology would give us Savaðios, the latter Tşavaðios.'

ii. 282 n. 2. P. Roussel—J. Hatzfeld in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1909 xxxiii. 511 no. 29 publish a marble slab, from a house N.W. of the agorá of Theophrastos in Delos, inscribed in late lettering Δειεὶ Σαβαζίω(ι) ---| κατ' εὐχὴν Μο---| του γεγονότος --| ἐν Δήλωι Αἰ[ίου?]---. See also P. Roussel Délos Colonie athénienne Paris 1916 p. 276 n. 7.

ii. 285 n. 0 no. (3). The relief from Philadelpheia (Ala-Shehir) in Lydia, hitherto incorrectly described, is figured from a photograph (=my fig. 1011) by J. Keil—A. von Premerstein 'Bericht über eine zweite Reise in Lydien' in the Denkschr. d. Akad. Wien 1911 ii Abh. p. 84 no. 2. A bearded man standing erect, in chitón and himátion, holds his garment with his left hand. With his right hand he pours a lihation from a phiále into a kratér, set on the ground, about which two snakes are twined, apparently drinking out of it. Behind the kratér is seen a tree (oak ??), from which a snake lowers itself towards the phiále.

Fig. 1011.

ii. 290 n. 0. Sir W. M. Flinders Petrie 'Funereal Figures in Egypt' in Ancient Egypt 1916 pp. 151—162 draws attention to the existing African custom of treasuring in the family the head of the deceased father and uses it to elucidate certain sepulchral practices of the ancient Egyptians. He shows that in many burials of prehistoric times the head was removed and later replaced in the grave, if not lost or buried elsewhere; that in tomb-shafts of the fourth dynasty a stone image of the head was provided in case the actual head should be lost or injured; that at the break-up of the Old Kingdom a stone image of the mummy came into vogue; and that the addition of hands, arms, etc. led on to the fully developed ushabti figures of the seventeenth and following dynasties.

P. D. Chantepie de la Saussaye The Religion of the Teutons Boston and London 1902 p. 303 notes relevant facts in the Scandinavian area.

ii. 295 n. 1. On "Αδαμνα="Αττις see now W. Vollgraff 'De voce thracia ἀδαπταῖς' in Mnemosyne 1921 xlix. 286—294 (summarised by S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1921 ii. 406 f.).

ii. 322 n. 6. In the Hesycbian gloss on the word κυνακίας J. Alberti rightly conjectured διδόμενοι for διδομένου. He is followed by Wide Lakon. Kulte p. 68.

ii. 326. See now Miss M. A. Murray The Witch-Cult in Western Europe Oxford 1921.

ii. 345. The formula of the Cretan mystics (βοῦς μέγας) may help to clear up an obscure epigram of Kallimachos—'οὗτος ἐμὸς λόγος ὕμμιν ἀληθινός· εἰ δὲ τὸν ἠδὺν | βούλει, Πελλαίου βοῦς μέγας εἰν 'Αΐδῃ' (Kallim. ep. 15. 5 f. with A. W. Mair's note ad loc.).

ii. 345 n. 6. On the survival of this formula into the middle ages see some interesting remarks by W. Deonna in the Rev. Arch. 1921 ii. 412.

ii. 386. The pétasos as a sky-symbol possibly meets us again on the tomb of Porsenna at Clusium as described by Varro ap. Plin. nat. hist. 36. 91—93 (92 pyramides stant quinque...ita fastigatae ut in summo orbis aeneus et petasus unus omnibus sit inpositus, ex quo pendeant exapta catenis tintinabula, etc.). For discussion and attempted restorations see Quatremère de Quincy and the Duc de Luynes in the Ann. d. Inst. 1829 i. 304—309, Mon. d. Inst. i pl. 13, G. Dennis The Cities and Cemeteries of Etruria[2] London 1883 ii. 345—358, J. Martha L'Art Étrusque Paris 1889 p. 206 ff., Durm Baukunst d. Etrusk.[2] p. 140 ff. fig. 165.

ii. 388 n. 4. Janiform busts of Zeus and Hermes are implied by the word Διέρμαι (Prokl. in Plat. Alcib. i. 68 f. Creuzer καὶ περὶ ἕκαστον τῶν θεῶν πληθὸς ἐστι δαιμόνων ἀμόθητον καὶ ταῖς αὐταῖς ἑπωνυμίαις ἀποσεμνυνόμενον τῶν ἡγουμένων θεῶν· Ἀπόλλωνες γὰρ καὶ Δίες καὶ Διέρμαι καλούμενοι χαίρουσιν, ἅτε δὴ καὶ τὴν ἰδιότητα τῶν οἰκείων θεῶν ἀποτυπούμενοι).

ii. 397 n. 0. R. B. Onians in the Class. Rev. 1924 xxxviii. 5 takes Zeus Ἡλακατεύς to mean Zeus 'of the Spindle,' who spins the thread of fate (cp. Od. 4. 207 f. ῥεῖα δ' ἀρίγνωτος γόνος ἀνέρος ᾧ τε Κρονίων | ὄλβον ἐπικλώσῃ γαμέοντί τε γεινομένῳ τε).

ii. 465. For horned female deer see L. P. Hatch 'A Doe with Horns' in The American Naturalist 1870 iii. 279, W. J. Hays 'Does with Horns' ib. 1870 iii. 548—550 and in The Academy 1870 i. 103.

ii. 479 n. 8. J. Kohler 'Bräuche und Mythen der Arandas' [=the Arunta] in the Zeitschrift des Vereins für Volkskunde 1916 xxvi. 283 'hier bildet die Milchstrasse einen grossen Fluss: sie ist mit hohen Bäumen besetzt und von Wasserquellen umgeben, wo Beerenfrüchte in Hülle und Fülle wachsen.'

ii. 479 n. 10. See also D. A. Mackenzie in Folk-Lore 1922 xxxiii. 159.

ii. 482. For the Milky Way conceived as a tree cp. W. Gundel Sterne und Sternbilder im Glauben des Altertums und der Neuzeit Bonn—Leipzig 1922 p. 46: 'Für sich steht die Auffassung der Bakaïri die einen gewaltigen Trommelbaum darin erblicken' (citing K. von den Steinen Unter den Naturvölkern Zentral-Brasiliens Berlin 1894 pp. 360, 436).

ii. 483. Mr R. Campbell Thompson, in a letter passed on to me by Mr Sidney Smith, says: 'The kiškanû is not a common plant, and is rarely, if ever, used in the medical texts. Yet there are three kinds of it—salmu, pišu, and samu—black, white, and red? (or yellow). I doubt it being the astragalus now. I looked about always in Mespot for anything which would coincide and I confess I am baffled. There is nothing at Eridu now—which is as flat and bare, save for low scrub growth in parts, as one's hand. It can hardly be a very special tree, since it is to be found at the mouth of the rivers.'

ii. 484. A. Nehring in the Mitteilungen der Schlesischen Gesellschaft für Volkskunde 1916 xviii. 23 argues that the original form of the name was the vocative Ἄπελλον, because only in the vocative is the ε unaccented, and only unaccented ε becomes ο under the influence of a following ω (ο). This argument was cited by A. H. Krappe in a letter to J. Rendel Harris, who comments: 'He should have added that, with the second syllable unstressed, it was easy to explain the Thessalian Ἄπλουν' (F. Bechtel Die griechischen Dialekte Berlin 1921 i. 172).

ii. 486. The ultimate acceptance of the bay as the tree par excellence of Apollon can be well illustrated from a unique statér of s. iv B.C., struck by some uncertain town in Crete and now preserved in the Hunterian collection at Glasgow (P. Gardner Types of Gk. Coins p. 165 pl. 9, 15 and 16, J. N. Svoronos Numismatique de la Crète ancienne Mâcon 1890 i. 331 pl. 31, 8, Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 200 pl. 43, 7, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 479). Obv. Apollon, seated to right on the trunk of a bay-tree, holding a wreath in his left hand. Rev. Apollon, seated to right on the trunk of a bay-tree, holding a lyre in his left hand. Fig. 1012 is drawn from a cast kindly supplied to me by Mr G. Macdonald.

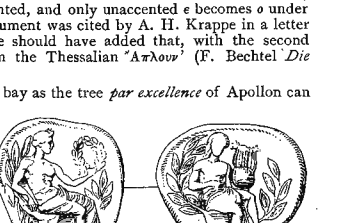

Fig. 1012.

ii. 493. I am indebted to Mr B. F. C. Atkinson for the following important communication (Feb. 25, 1922):—'Note on Apollo and the Apple. It seems to me that the philological obstacles to this connection are not insurmountable. Professor E. H. Sturtevant (Pronunciation of Greek and Latin, Chicago 1920 pp. 91 ff.) has shown that, while in Greek the unvoiced stops were lenes, that is, pronounced without force, and the voiced stops were fortes, the reverse was true in Latin. This is the reason why in certain cases of transliteration from one language into the other g (γ) and k (κ), d (δ) and t (τ), b (β) and p (π) are interchangeable: for references and examples see my article on "Apollo and the Apple" in the Bulletin of the John Rylands Library, Manchester, 1922 vii. 138—140. I have in this article tried to show that in respect of the sets of stops which are fortes or lenes there is a probability of the Illyrian dialects agreeing with Latin rather than Greek. If then, as I have ventured to surmise, the god's name were borrowed by the Greeks from an Illyrian dialect, in which the form had a voiced stop and was connected with the stem meaning "apple," which runs through the northern languages and appears probably in the name of Abella in Campania, the unvoicing of the stop in transmission, that is to say, the change from b to p, need cause us no surprise. The suggestion is somewhat strengthened by the occurrence of the proper names Abellio (dat. Abellionei) in an inscription from Salona on the Dalmatian coast (Corp. inscr. Lat. iii no. 2169, 3) and Abello (gen. Abellonis) in another from Mursa in Pannonia Inferior (ib. iii no. 10271, 3).'

ii. 496 n. 0. On Zeus Περφερέτας or Φερφερέτας as worshipped by the Phrouroi (originally conservators of a particular stretch of the Sacred Way?) see now F. Stählin Das hellenische Thessalien Stuttgart 1924 p. 90 n. 7.

ii. 498 n. 2: 'Has it been noticed etc.?' The answer is, Yes. See Campbell Bonner in the Am. Journ. Philol. 1900 xxi. 433—437.

ii. 500 f. I have doubted, and still doubt, Artemis' northern provenance. But see, on the other side, an interesting paper by Mr J. Whatmough 'Inscribed fragments of stags-horn from North Italy' in the Journ. Rom. Stud. 1921 xi. 245—253. He would equate Ἄρτεμις, not only with Βριτόμαρτις (= Gritómartis), but also with Rehtia at Este and Rit- in Magrè.

ii. 542. W. Gaerte 'Die Bedeutung der kretisch-minoischen Horns of Consecration' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1922 xxi. 91 n. 2 interprets the problematic object between the horns of my fig. 415 f. as the sun between the peaks of an 'Erdsymbol' (mountains).

ii. 575 n. 4. The coin of Euromos that shows the local Zeus with a stag (cp. ii. 575 n. 1) suggests that Zeus has here replaced Artemis Ἐφεσία. Note that the similar Zeus on coins of Mylasa was, like Artemis at Ephesos (ii. 408 n. 0), linked to the ground with fillets (ii. 574), and that the Zeus of Euromos is covered with dots, which may represent breasts (ii. 592 ff.).

ii. 578 n. 4. Add A. Rehm in Milet iii. 330 ff. no. 146, A 17 ff. ἵνα δὲ καὶ διαμηνυόηται τὸν ἀεὶ χρόνον καὶ τηρῆ|ται τὰ δεδογμένα, συνέταξαν τὰ περὶ τούτων ἐψηφισμένα ἀ|ναγράψαι ἐν τοῖς ἑαυτῶν ἱεροῖς τῶι τε τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Ὀσογῶ καὶ τοῦ Διὸς | τοῦ Λαβραύνδου· συνετέλεσαν δὲ καὶ εὐχὰς καὶ θυσίας | τοῖς τε προειρημένοις θεοῖς καὶ τῆι Ἑστίαι καὶ Ἀπόλλωνι Δι[δυμεῖ, B 71 ff. ὅπως δὲ τὰ ἐψηφισμένα ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου | τίμια μνημονεύηται εἰς τὸν ἀεὶ χρόνον, ἀναγράψαι τόδε τὸ ψήφισμα ἐ[ν] | τοῖς ἱεροῖς τῶι τε τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Ὀσογῶ καὶ τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Λαβραύνδου. ἵνα δ[ὲ] | ἕκαστα γίνηται μετὰ τῆς τῶν θεῶν εὐμενείας, τὸμ μὲν στεφανηφόρον | μετὰ τοῦ ἱέρεω τῆι Ἑστίαι θύσαι καὶ τὸν ἱερέα τοῦ Ἀπόλλωνος τοῦ Διδυμέ|ως καὶ τοὺς ἱερεῖς τόν τε τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Ὀσογῶ καὶ τὸν τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Λαβραύ|δου προσαγαγεῖν θυσίαν τοῖς θεοῖς καὶ εὐχὰς ποιήσασθαι συνενεγκεῖν | ταῖς πόλεσιν ἀμφοτέραις τὰ ἐψηφισμένα (in a treaty between Miletos and Mylasa, 209/8 B.C.).

ii. 583. E. W. Fay in the Class. Quart. 1917 xi. 215 derives Ποτ-ειδᾶρων from *ποτι-, 'lord,' and EID, 'to swell.'

ii. 587. Unexpected confirmation of O. Höfer's conjectural Zeus Σπάλαξος has recently come to hand. The British Museum has acquired an imperial bronze coin of Aphrodisias in Karia, on which he actually appears. Mr G. F. Hill kindly allows me to illustrate it here for the first time (fig. 1013). Obv. ΚΡΙCΠΕΙΝΑ ΑΥΓΟΥCΤΑ Bust of Crispina to right. Rev. ΣΕΥCCΠ Α Λ[Α]ΞΟC ΑΦΡΟΔΕΙCΙ [Ε]ΩΝ Zeus Σπάλαξος (less probably Σπάλωξος) enthroned to left with Nike in right hand and long sceptre in left.

Fig. 1013.

ii. 596 fig. 499. In J. G. C. Anderson—F. Cumont—H. Grégoire Recueil des inscriptions grecques et latines du Pont et de l'Arménie (Studia Pontica iii) Bruxelles 1910 i. 161 f. no. 146 H. Grégoire gives a photographic cut of the whole relief, a facsimile of its inscription (which he transcribes as Ζώβῃ (or Ζιώβῃ) | θεᾷ (or θεαῖς) | . . . . σι though various other letters are visible in lines 4, 5, 6), and a commentary.

ii. 619 n. 4. On the Mithraeum of Allmendingen, excavated 1824—1825, see further Lohner in Der Schweizerische Geschichtsforscher 1834 viii (wrongly numbered ix). 430 ff. pl. 5, F. Cumont Textes et monuments figurés relatifs aux mystères de Mithra Bruxelles 1896 ii. 505 figs. 450—455. Seven little hatchets of bronze were found, inscribed IOVI, MINERVAE, etc.

ii. 625 n. 3. Mr A. J. B. Wace, lecturing to the Classical Society at Cambridge on Nov. 27, 1922, described how in the last season's 'dig' at Mykenai the British School had excavated various tombs outside the town. In the entrance to tomb no. 515 were found two sealstones, dating from s. xv B.C., with an almost identical device. Above a stepped base stands a 'Minoan' goddess, flanked by a pair of lions erect upon their hind legs. On her head she supports a double axe, which rises from the centre of a couple of two-headed snakes connected by crossbars—apparently a serpentine substitute for the more usual 'horns of consecration' (cp. Brit. Mus. Cat. Jewellery p. 54 f. no. 762 pls. 6 and 7). Fig. 1014 is enlarged ⅔ from a cast supplied to me by the British Museum. The main difference between the two stones is that on this one the lions' tails curl upwards, on the other downwards. Mr Wace aptly drew attention to Hesych. s. vv. κύβηλις· μάχαιρα. ἄμεινον δὲ πέλεκυν, ᾧ τὰς βοῦς καταβάλλουσι, κυβηλίσαι· πελεκίσαι· κύβηλις γὰρ ὁ πέλεκυς, and accordingly proposed to call the goddess Kybele (id. in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1921 xli. 264 'Kybele or Rhea').

Fig. 1014.

ii. 632 n. 6. Add an axe of dark brown schist, decorated with zigzags and spirals and ending in the forepart of a lioness, found in a 'Middle Minoan iii' vase at Mallia (Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1925 p. 23 f. fig.).

ii. 633 ff. The axes borne by Roman lictors may be illustrated from a fragmentary marble relief now affixed to a wall of the Cryptoporticus on the Palatine. Fig. 1015 is from a photograph taken by my friend and colleague Mr A. Munro, Fellow of Queens' College, Cambridge. It will be observed that the haft of every axe is surmounted by a head (lion, man, ram).

The 'Tomb of the Lictor' at Vetulonia takes its name from an iron double axe (0.27^{m} long) hafted on to an iron rod surrounded by eight hollow rods of iron (last published by D. Randall-MacIver Villanovans and Early Etruscans Oxford 1924 p. 145 fig. 56 after O. Montelius La civilisation primitive en Italie depuis l'introduction des métaux Stockholm 1904 Série B pl. 194, 5). Cp. Sil. It. 8. 483 ff.

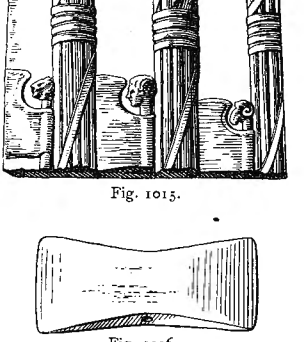

Fig. 1015.

ii. 637. Four fine examples of carving in amber (Eros v. Anteros, Bacchant, female bust, 'Tiergruppe') are figured by H. Maionica in the Führer durch das K. K. Staatsmuseum in Aquileia Wien 1910 p. 71 ff. Finer still (c. 0.40^{m} high) is the archaic koûros of Fiumicino (S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1924 ii. 237).

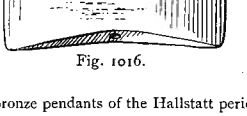

Fig. 1016.

ii. 645 n. 4. See now Sir A. J. Evans in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1925 xlv. 53 ff.

ii. 660. A small double axe of ivory (fig. 1016: scale ½), now in my possession, is said to have come from Pharsalos, but was more probably found at Pherai. With it were an ivory fibula of 'spectacle'-type and two bronze pendants of the Hallstatt period.

ii. 667. Cp. Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 312 no. 8514 pl. 71 a red jasper of imperial date showing a crab with a comic mask as its carapace.

ii. 693 n. 4. See now an interesting study by W. R. Halliday 'Picus-who-is-also-Zeus' in the Class. Rev. 1922 xxxvi. 110—112.

ii. 716. F. J. M. De Waele 'ΧΡΥΣΑΩΡ' in Le Musée Belge 1924 xxviii No. 1 (January) holds that ἄορ in this compound retains its original sense, 'arrow.' See Class. Rev. 1924 xxxviii. 92.

ii. 725 figs. 660, 661. A. della Seta Italia antica Bergamo 1922 p. 252 fig. 281 shows this statue as it stands in the Galleria dei Candelabri of the Vatican, with a bow restored in its right hand and an eagle in its left!

ii. 739. On statuettes of Zeus the thunderer see now S. Casson in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1922 xlii. 211 f. figs. 4—6. He claims that a crude example of the type from Dodona (C. Carapanos Dodone et ses ruines Paris 1878 p. 32 no. 16 pl. 13, 4, S. Casson loc. cit. p. 211 f. fig. 4 (b) = my fig. 1017) is 'of the Geometric period.' If so, this would be the earliest known representation of Zeus in the round. Unfortunately it is not quite certain that Zeus was intended. The subject may be a fighting man, not a thundering god. The holes in his hands would suit spear and shield at least as well as they would suit thunderbolt and eagle. The absence of a helmet, however, tells in favour of Zeus.

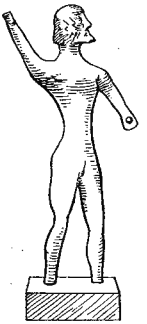

Fig. 1017.

Fig. 1020.

ii. 741 f. K. A. Rhomaios in the Ἀρχ. Δελτ. 1920—21 vi. 169—171 figs. 3—6 (of which figs. 5 and 6 = my figs. 1018 and 1019) puhlishes an archaic bronze statuette of Zeus, found in a wonderful state of preservation at Ambrakia in Aitolia and now installed in the National Museum at Athens (no. 14984. Height 0·165^{m}; with base, 0·188^{m}. Patina, blackish green). The god advances brandishing a bolt in his raised right hand and supporting an eagle on his outstretched left. Yet the action of his legs and arms is by no means strenuous. It agrees rather with the pose of Hageladas' Zeus on the coins of Messene (ii. 742 fig. 673 f.). Accordingly Rhomaios regards the new statuette as made under the influence of Hageladas' work, which he dates c. 480 B.C. (cp. C. Robert Archaeologische Maerchen aus alter und neuer Zeit Berlin 1886 p. 92 ff. and Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. i. 318). But that is definitely to reject the testimony of Paus. 4. 33. 2 (see Sir J. G. Frazer and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner ad loc.). It is safer to conclude that the new statuette was an early faithful copy (c. 480 B.C.), Hageladas' masterpiece a later improved copy (c. 455 B.C.), of the same cult-statue on Mt Ithome, which itself was a modification of the ancient strenuous type (c. 490 B.C.). We thus ohtain the stemma:

ii. 741 f. fig. 674. A rare variety of this Messenian tetradrachm shows Zeus holding, not only an eagle, but also a long sceptre in his left hand. Fig. 1020 is from a well-preserved specimen formerly in the Mavrocordato collection (J. N. Svoronos in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1912 xiv. 29 no. 2052 pl. Z', 8) and now in mine. A second example from the same dies, as I am informed by Mr C. T. Seltman, was in the collection of E. F. Weber (Sammlung Consul Eduard Friedrich Weber† Hamburg München 1908 i. 136 no. 1983 pl. 25). The variation of type is presumably due to the die-sinker and does not reproduce the original aspect of Hageladas' work.

Fig. 1018.

Fig. 1019.

ii. 743 n. 5. More complete is a later example now in my collection (fig. 1021). Zeus, with abundant hair and wreath of large bay-leaves, advances brandishing a three-spiked thunderbolt (one end broken) in his right hand and supporting an eagle erect on his left wrist. Height $3\frac{3}{8}$ inches. Careful work of the Hellenistic age.

ii. 744 n. 3. The Pourtalès amphora is now in the Louvre (G 204): see E. Pottier Vases antiques du Louvre 3me Série Paris 1922 p. 204 f. pl. 129, J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 38 ('in the style of the Berlin painter'), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 65 no. 45.

ii. 757 fig. 700. A second and better preserved specimen of this important coin has lately come to light. I am indebted to Mr C. T. Seltman for the casts from which my illustration of it (fig. 1022) is drawn. The obverse is rrom the same die as that of fig. 701; the reverse, from the same die as that of fig. 700.

Fig. 1021.

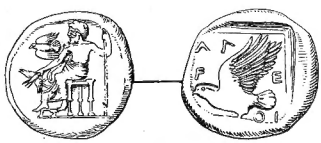

Fig. 1022.

ii. 771 fig. 735. For Zeus enthroned with a lotos in his hand cp. an Arabian imitation of a tetradrachm of Alexander, showing a beardless god enthroned to left with a flower instead of an eagle in his right hand (B. V. Head in the Num. Chron. New Series 1880 xx. 303 ff. pl. 15, 3, G. F. Hill in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Arabia etc. p. lxxxii pl. 50, 5).

ii. 774 n. 4. Miss M. E. H. Lloyd tells me (Oct. 7, 1922) that at Pitigliano in Grosseto during May and June the leaves of the giglio (iris fiorentina) are hung up outside the windows as a charm against lightning. The plant in leaf, before being hung up, is taken to the church to be blessed by the priest.

ii. 798. Mrs A. Strong 'Treasure from Vatican Rubbish' in The Illustrated London News 1922 clxi. 380 fig. 1 (=my fig. 1023) publishes, among other fragments of sculpture found by W. Amelung in magazzini of the Vatican, a neo-Attic relief of s. i A.D., which shows 'a composite divinity, carrying the thunderbolt of Zeus, the trident of Poseidon, and the sword of Ares, while behind him an eagle perches upon a large cornucopia.' See also S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1923 i. 176.

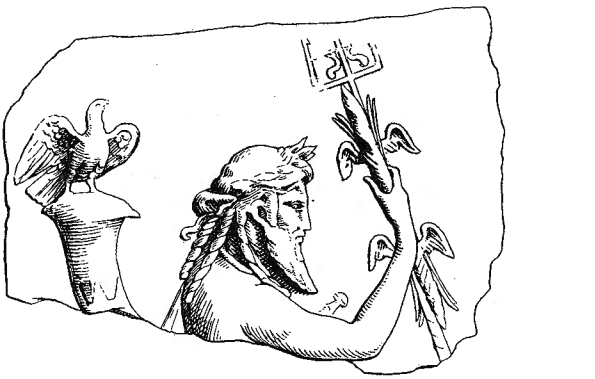

Fig. 1023.

ii. 799 n. 2. A fine bronze trident, which can be converted at will into a bident, was found in the Tomba del Tridente at Vetulonia and is figured by Milani Stud. e mat. di arch. e num. 1905 iii. 83 fig. 415 a, b.

ii. 800 n. 1. A photograph of this vase with the restorations removed is now published by H. Schaal Griechische Vasen aus frankfurter Sammlungen Frankfurt am Main 1923 pl. 30, a.

ii. 802. Mr E. J. Seltman kindly informs me (Aug. 24, 1923) that he has recently seen a terra cotta of the same questionable sort on sale at Naples. He describes it as being 'About 6 inches high, and 4 broad. Hollow. On the back, in the centre, a round boss with T . AT. On the front appear at the top, from left to right, the heads of Poseidon, Zeus, and Hades. Below [Zeus] is the thunderbolt, the trident below Poseidon, and below Hades his bidens. Underneath, an inscription of three short lines beginning DIS——.'

ii. 805 n. 6. For recent discussion of the three-bodied monster see A. Brückner in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1923/24 xxxviii/ix Arch. Anz. pp. 113—115.

ii. 807 n. 5 no. (3). V. Chapot in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1902 xxvi. 168 no. 8 publishes the following inscription from a marble block, hollowed out to serve as a trough, in the village of el-qābūsīje (Seleukeia Pieria): ὁ δῆμος καὶ ἡ προβουλὴ (perhaps a misreading of [ἱε]ρ[ὰ] βουλή) Ϙ | [Γ]νάϊον Πομπήϊον Ζήνωνα, τὸν διὰ βί[*ου νεωκόρον τοῦ Νεικηφόρου Κερα*υ*ν*[ίο]υ καὶ πατέρα τῆς πόλεως, κ.τ.λ. with date ἔτους δϛ΄=95 or 155 A.D.

ii. 818. G. Kazarow 'Nouvelles inscriptions relatives au Dieu Thrace Zbelsourdos' in the Rev. Arch. 1913 i. 340 ff. adds two from the village Golémo-Sélo in the district Dupnitza: (1) Κυρίῳ | θεῷ προ|γονικῷ Ζβελ|σούρδῳ Φλ. Α|μάτοκος Φλ. Α[μ]ατόκου υἱὸς | εὐξά[μ]ενος ἀ|νέθηκεν. (2) Τῷ κυρίῳ | Διὶ Ζβελ|σούρδῳ | ἀνέθηκεν | Τ. Φλα. Ἀμά|το[κ]ος Τ. | Φ[λ.] Ἀ*ματόκου υἱός*].

C. F. Lehmann-Haupt 'Der thrakische Gott Zbelsurdos' in Klio 1921 xvii. 283—285 notes also V. Dobrusky Archäol. Bericht des bulgar. Nationalmuseums 1907 i. 152 no. 203 an inscription from the village Chatrovo in the district Dupnitza Διὶ Ζβε[λ]|σούρδῳ | τῷ κυρίῳ Βελ|βαβρι|ηνοὶ κωμῆται | ἀνέθη|καν.

ii. 822 n. 13. C. F. Lehmann-Haupt loc. cit. proposes Cic. in Pis. 85 a te Iovis Zbelsurdi fanum etc.

ii. 823. J. Whatmough 'The Iovilae-dedications from S. Maria di Capua' in the Class. Quart. 1922 xvi. 181—189 would connect them with the cult of Iuno Lucina as goddess of motherhood and procreation.

ii. 826 n. 3. With the gong at Dodona cp. those discussed by J. Jüthner 'Die Schelle im Thiasos' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1904 vii. 146—150.

ii. 837 n. 1. The Phrygian Zeus ἐξ αὐλῆς is hardly to be connected with Plat. Axioch. 371 A—B εἰ δὲ καὶ ἕτερον βούλει λόγον, ὃν ἐμοὶ ἤγγειλε Γωβρύης, ἀνὴρ μάγος· ἔφη κατὰ τὴν Ξέρξου διάβασιν τὸν πάππον αὐτοῦ καὶ ὁμώνυμον, πεμφθέντα εἰς Δῆλον,...ἐκ τινῶν χαλκέων δέλτων, ἃς ἐξ Ὑπερβορέων ἐκόμισαν Ὦπίς τε καὶ Ἑκαέργη, ἐκμεμαθηκέναι μετὰ τὴν τοῦ σώματος λύσιν τὴν ψυχὴν εἰς τὸν ἅδηλον χωρεῖν τόπον, κατὰ τὴν ὑπόγειον οἴκησιν, ἐν ᾗ βασίλεια Πλούτωνος οὐχ ἥττω τῆς τοῦ Διὸς αὐλῆς, ἅτε τῆς μὲν γῆς ἐχούσης τὰ μέσα τοῦ κόσμου, τοῦ δὲ πόλου ὄντος σφαιροειδοῦς, οὗ τὸ μὲν ἕτερον ἡμισφαίριον θεοὶ ἔλαχον οἱ οὐράνιοι, τὸ δὲ ἕτερον οἱ ὑπένερθεν, οἱ μὲν ἀδελφοὶ ὄντες, οἱ δὲ ἀδελφῶν παῖδες.

ii. 869 n. 2. For Mt Pelion and its cults see now F. Stählin Das hellenische Thessalien Stuttgart 1924 pp. 41—43.

ii. 873 n. 2. Cp. Zeus Καραός of Akarnania (K. A. Rhomaios in the Ἀρχ. Δελτ. 1918 iv. 117 ff. = Suppl. Epigr. Gr. i. no. 213 (near Astakos) ἱερατόλοι Διὸς Καραοῦ· | κ.τ.λ. of s. ii B.C.).

ii. 874 n. 2 (on p. 875). Φάλακρον in Epeiros is not to be distinguished from Φάλακρον in Korkyra.

Schrader Reallex.[2] ii. 245 compares Zeus Φαλακρός with the ancient Roman Divus Pater Falacer (Varr. de ling. Lat. 5. 84, cp. 7. 45), on whom see G. Wissowa in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 1967 f. or in his Rel. Kult. Röm.[2] p. 240 n. 4.

ii. 892 n. 4 line 9. The word ἔθυσεν is well corrected by A. Meineke to τθυσεν, i.e. ran in the Nemean games (K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 622).

ii. 897 n. 5. Mr C. W. Blegen has kindly furnished me (Aug. 16, 1924) with the following note :—'Trial excavations conducted by the American School in 1923 and 1924 brought to light near the summit of Mt. Hymettus a large deposit of ancient pottery. It seems to have been deliberately placed in a great heap and carefully covered with earth and ashes, and is probably, therefore, formed of votive offerings discarded from a small shrine or altar. These vases, of many different shapes and sizes, date almost exclusively from the Geometric Period; and some of them bear incised inscriptions. The material is sadly fragmentary, only one inscription being sufficiently preserved to give an idea of its content. It is of a coarsely vituperative nature, recalling the archaic inscriptions of Thera, and unfortunately gives no clue to the character of the shrine. A slight scattering of sherds of classical pottery and a few fragments of Roman lamps were also found.

The small mountain sanctuary which once occupied this lofty position accordingly appears to have flourished chiefly during the Geometric Age, though it continued to be visited in a small way till Roman times.

Since no trace of a building has yet been discovered, it is possible that the cult possessed merely an open altar.

Until further evidence is forthcoming there can be no certainty in identifying definitely this cult; but it is tempting to conjecture that we have here the site of the worship of Zeus Ombrios, which, according to Pausanias, was somewhere on Mt. Hymettus.'

See now Am. Journ. Arch. 1924 xxviii. 337 (citing Art and Archaeology 1924 xvii. 285 f. and Archaeological Institute of America: 42d Annual Report of the Managing Committee of the American School at Athens, 1922—1923 p. 16 f.) and Journ. Hell. Stud. 1924 xliv. 255 f.

ii. 903 n. 2. For Mt Oite see now F. Stählin Das hellenische Thessalien Stuttgart 1924 p. 192 ff.

ii. 904 n. 1. W. Vollgraff in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1907—1908 xiv. 225: 'Two hours south-east of Almyró, near Paralia, are the insignificant ruins of a large building of the classical period, within a rectangular temenos. It seems to me that these can only be the remains of a temple belonging to the neighbouring city of Halos. Mr. [N. I.] Giannopoulos' view that this is the sanctuary of Zeus Laphystios may perhaps be correct, though no proof can at present be adduced. In the small trial excavation which I made here, a few fragments of black-glazed pottery were found, but nothing of the prehistoric age.'

ii. 904 n. 3. For Mt Ossa and its cults (no sign of Zeus) see F. Stählin Das hellenische Thessalien Stuttgart 1924 p. 40 f.

ii. 904 n. 4. F. Stählin Das hellenische Thessalien Stuttgart 1924 p. 46 f. describes Homolion and states that on its akrópolis (233^{m} above sea-level), beneath the unroofed chapel of St Elias, remains of a temple have come to light together with glazed sherds of the fifth and fourth centuries B.C. Close by was found the foot of a colossal statue (c. 5^{m} high) with a thunderbolt represented on its sandal. This is now preserved in the Museum at Volo, and may fairly be taken as implying the local cult of Zeus ['Ομολώιος?].

ii. 904 n. 6. H. Scheffel 'Eine antike Opferstätte auf dem Olymp' in the Ath. Mitth. 1922 (published 1924) xlvii. 129 f. reports that in the summer of 1923 he climbed the highest peak of Mt Olympos and found there no trace of ancient cult, but that on one of the neighbouring summits (c. 2900^{m} high, i.e. c. 100^{m} below the true top) he recognised remains of an altar and, strewn among the stones of the peak, some hundreds of sherds, badly weathered and broken. Perhaps one half of their number showed traces of ancient black glaze, and the fragments collected must have come from several dozen vessels—small cups, jugs, bowls, etc., mostly of late classical times. Scheffel justly identifies this with the altar of Zeus mentioned by Solin. 8. 6 (supra i. 103 n. 1).

F. Stählin Das hellenische Thessalien Stuttgart 1924 pp. 5—11 gives a good description of the mountain with concise geological, topographical, and historical notes.

But by far the most important source for exact knowledge of Olympos is now M. Kurz Le Mont Olympe (Thessalie) Paris—Neuchâtel 1923. This well-written and brilliantly illustrated monograph contains a historical introduction (pp. 7—35), a full record of successive explorations (pp. 37—157), chapters on cartography (pp. 159—186) and toponomy (pp. 187—207), with sundry appendixes (pp. 209—232). Its illustrations include 3 photographic panoramas, 14 plates, and 2 coloured maps, one of which (scale 1 : 20,000) is a special survey made by the author (supra p. 906 n. 0).

ii. 910 n. 1. B. Pace 'Il tempio di Giove Olimpico in Agrigento' in the Mon. d. Linc. 1922 xxviii. 173—252 with pls. 1—3 and figs. 1—31 gives a historical account of the temple and of the attempts hitherto made to recover its arrangements (pp. 175—198), a fresh discussion of its plan, elevation, roof, doors, Atlantes, and sculpture (pp. 199—236), and an Appendix on ancient buildings with façades involving an uneven number of columns (pp. 237—252). The main conclusions reached by the author are as follows. The temple had a central nave and two side aisles (κρυπτοὶ περίπατοι, cp. Athen. 206 A). The cross-wall at the western end of the nave marked the beginning of an ádyton, which could be entered also from the aisles. The building was hypaethral, the central nave being left open like an atrium, though the ádyton and the side aisles were roofed over. Whether it had pediments is doubtful (R. Pierce on p. 208 ff. is clear that it had not, and on pl. 3 restores it without them). The metopes at either end were carved; those of the long sides were plain. The Atlantes and Caryatids were not placed in the external intercolumniations (supra p. 914 fig. 827), but engaged in the internal pilasters of the hypaethral nave (N. Maggiore 'Nota sulla collocazione dei così detti giganti nell' Olimpico agrigentino' in Due opuscoli archeologici Palermo 1834 p. 21). No ramps are assumed.

ii. 920 n. 0. C. Picard in 1923 reconstructed from remains of sculpture in the Artemision at Delos two lionesses with heads raised in attendance on the goddess. He supposes that this group was set up near the Keraton or altar of horns (G. Glotz La civilisation égtenne Paris 1923 p. 476).

ii. 922 n. 0. See now Rubensohn 'Das Delion von Paros' in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1923/24 xxxviii/ix Arch. Anz. pp. 118—121.

ii. 929 n. 0. W. Aly Der kretische Apollonkult Leipzig 1908 p. 47 n. 4 regards the hound of Praisos (Theophr. περὶ ἐρωτος frag. 113 Wimmer ap. Strab. 478, cp. Ant. Lib. 36 (supra i. 720 n. 4), schol. Od. 19. 518, schol. Pind. Ol. 1. 91 a) as a sort of Kerberos, guardian of the Dictaean Zeus.

ii. 933 n. 0. See now M. M. Gillies 'The Ball of Eros (Ap. Rhod. iii. 135 ff.)' in the Class. Rev. 1924 xxxviii. 50 f.

ii. 957 n. 2 on Zeus at Sardeis. E. Littmann in Sardis vi. 1. 13 (cp. ib. pp. 42, 70) quotes from two Lydian inscriptions the four following phrases:

no. 4 (inv. 1), b 4 f. fakmūt Hūdānś | Artəmuk vqbahēnt, 'then him may Hūdānś and Artemis destroy.'

no. 23 (inv. 7), 1 Hūdān. Artimuŭ daquve.śt, 'is sacred to Hūdānś and Artemis' (?).

no. 23 (inv. 7), 3 f. Hūdāńś Tavśaś | Artimuk Ibśimsis katsarlokid, 'Hūdāńs Tavśaś and Artemis of Ephesos will punish.'

no. 23 (inv. 7), 10 Hūdāńk Artimuk katsarlokid, 'Hūdāńs as well as Artemis will punish.'

W. H. Buckler ib. p. 13 very acutely suggests that Hūdāńś Tavśaś is Ζεὺς Ὕδηνός. He observes: 'Hydē was the ancient, or one of the ancient names, of Sardis (STRAB. XIII, 4. 6), and as in the third century B.C. one could speak of the Carian god Komyros without also calling him Zeus (LYKOPH. Al. 459: καταίθων θύσθλα Κωμύρῳ, and TZETZES ad loc.), so one could probably have mentioned Hūdāńs without the additional name Tavśaś. The Old-Indian god Dyaus (Dyāúś) is the same as Zeus, and since t in Lydian often takes the place of d, Tavśaś might represent D(y)avś-aś, and this would be very similar to Dyaus. In the big stele (No. [23]) sacred to Hūdāńs and Artemis, the god mentioned before Artemis must be an important one. We know that Zeus' temple shared the precinct of Artemis at Sardis, that Tmolos disputed with Crete the honor of Zeus' birthplace, that Zeus was very important in Lydia, being mentioned and depicted on coins of Sardis and many other towns, in short that next to Artemis he was by far the most important local deity.... The termination of Hūdāńś does not seem to be found in any other Lydian adjective denoting origin, but we cannot be sure that it is not a possible form, and it certainly suggests the Greek termination Σαρδι-ανός, or -ηνός. Or perhaps Hūdāńś is no adjective, but the original name of the Lydian Zeus.'

Id. ib. vi. 2. 11 and 44 retains Tavśaś=Ζεύσις (Hesych. s.v. Μηδινεύς cited supra p. 312 n. 5), but now transliterates Pλdāńś (not Hūdaṅś) and refers to O. A. Danielsson 'Zu den lydischen Inschriften' in the Skrifter utgifna af Kungl. Humanistiska Vetenskaps-Samfundet i Uppsala 1917 xx. 2. 24 f., who compares Tavśaś with the man's name *Ταυσᾶς, gen. Ταυσᾶδος (Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 46 a 64=F. Bechtel in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 743 ff. no. 5727 a 64 from Halikarnassos), and equates Pλdāńś with Ἀπόλλων (-λd-=-λλ-, cp. Carian Ὑσσωλδος=Ὑσσωλλος in the last-mentioned inscription).

Mr Buckler informs me (May 19, 1924) that his identification of Tavśaś with Ζεύς has been accepted by Professors A. H. Sayce and J. Fraser. Dr P. Giles, whom I consulted on the point (Dec. 27, 1924), sees no objection.

The Zeus-cults of Lydia in general are listed by J. Keil 'Die Kulte Lydiens' in Anatolian Studies presented to Sir William Mitchell Ramsay edd. W. H. Buckler—W. M. Calder Manchester 1923 pp. 259—261. The list includes no fewer than twenty-five appellatives, eight of which are epithets in -ηνός.

ii. 962 n. o on the Zeus-cults of Miletos. Add A. Rehm in Milet i. 7. 290 ff. no. 203 b 12 f. (cult-regulation of c. 130 B.C.) the priest τοῦ Δήμου τοῦ Ῥωμαίων καὶ τῆς Ῥώμης must have been τελεσθεὶς Διὶ | Τελεσιουργῷ, ib. i. 7. 299 ff. no. 204 a 13 f. (cult-regulation of s. i A.D.) the priest of Asklepios must have been τελεσθὶς Διὶ Τελεσ[ι]ουργῶι with remarks on p. 297 f., ib. i. 7. 347 nos. 275 ('in der zweischiffigen Halle') small altar of white marble decorated with a double axe, to left and right of which is inscribed in late Hellenistic lettering Δι||ὸς Λα||βρα|υν||δέ|ω||ς, 276 ('in der zweischiffigen Halle') small altar decorated with a double axe, beneath which in late Hellenistic letters is Διὸς Λαβρα|ύνδου, 277 ('in der zweischiffigen Halle') small altar of grey-blue marble decorated with a double axe, to left of which is Δέων | Ἱεροκλείους | Διὶ | Λαβραύνδωι, 278 ('in der Füllung der Justinianmauer') small altar of white-grey marble decorated with a double axe, round which is inscribed Δι||ὸς | Κε||ρα|υνίου.

ii. 970 n. o. Other inscriptions relating to Agdistis are as follows: (1) P. Jouguet in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1896 xx. 398 f.=Dittenberger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 28 small slab of white marble, on sale at Gizeh in 1896 but possibly brought from the Fayum, in lettering of reign of Ptolemy ii Philadelphos ὑπὲρ βασιλέως Πτολεμαίου | τοῦ Πτολεμαίου καὶ βασιλίσσης | Ἀρσινόης Μόσχος ὁ ἱερεὺς | τὸν ναὸν καὶ τὸ τέμενος | Ἀγδίστει ἐπηκόωι | ἱδρύσατο.

(2) J. Keil—A. v. Premerstein 'Bericht über eine dritte Reise in Lydien' in the Denkschr. d. Akad. Wien 1914 i. Abh. p. 18 ff. no. 18=O. Weinreich 'Stiftung und Kultsatzungen eines Privatheiligtums in Philadelpheia in Lydien' in the Sitzungsber. d. Heidelb. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1919 Abh. xvi. 1—68=Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 985 a stèle of whitish marble, found at Philadelphia in Lydia and containing in late Hellenistic script (s. i or ii (?) B.C.) the regulations of an οἶκος, or private sanctuary, of Agdistis established by one Dionysios in accordance with a dream vouchsafed to him by Zeus. The inscription enumerates the deities who have altars in the 'house' (vv. 1—11), gives a long list of ritual and moral prescriptions (vv. 12—50), mentions Agdistis as the guardian and mistress of the 'house' (vv. 50—60), and ends with a solemn prayer to Zeus Σωτήρ (vv. 60—64). The first and last portions are as follows: 1 ff. ἀγαθῆι τ[ύχηι]. | ἀνεγράφησαν ἐφ' ὑγιείαι κα[ὶ κοινῆι σωτηρίαι] | καὶ δόξηι τῆι ἀρίστηι τὰ δοθέ[ντα παραγγέλμα]τα Διονυσίωι καθ' ὕπνον π[ρόσοδον διδόν]τ' εἰς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ οἶκον ἀνδρά[σι καὶ γυναιξὶν] | ἐλευθέροις καὶ οἰκέταις· Διὸς [γὰρ ἐν τούτωι] | τοῦ Εὐμενοῦς (supra p. 960 n. 0) καὶ Ἑστίας τ[ῆς παρέδρου αὐ]τοῦ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων θεῶν Σωτ[ήρων καὶ Εὐδαι]-μονίας καὶ Πλούτου καὶ Ἀρετῆς [καὶ Ὑγιείας] | καὶ Τύχης Ἀγαθῆς καὶ Ἀγαθοῦ [Δαίμονος καὶ Μνή]μης καὶ Χαρίτων καὶ Νίκης εἶσιν ἰδ[ρυμένοι βωμοί]. | τοὐτ[ωι] δέδωκεν ὁ Ζεὺς παραγγέλ[-ματα τούς τε ἀ]γνισμοὺς καὶ τοὺς καθαρμοὺς κα[ὶ τὰς θυσίας ἐπι]τελεῖν κατά τε τὰ πάτρια καὶ ὡς νῦν [εἴθισται]· κ.τ.λ. 50 ff. [τὰ παραγγέλμα]τα ταῦτα ἐτέθησαν παρὰ Ἀγγδιστιν [τὴν ἀγιωτάτην] | φύλακα καὶ οἰκοδέσποιναν τοὐδε τοῦ ο[ἴκου, ἥτις ἀγαθὰς] | διανοίας ποιεῖτω ἀνδράσι καὶ γυναιξὶν [ἐλευθέροις καὶ] | δούλοις, ἵνα κατακολουθῶσι τοῖς ὧδε γ[εγραμμένοις, καὶ ἐν] | ταῖς θυσίαις ταῖς τε ἐμμήνοις καὶ ταῖ[ς κατὰ ἐνιαυτὸν ἀ]πτεσθωσαν, ὅσοι πιστεύουσιν ἑα[υτοῖς ἄνδρες τε καὶ] | [γυ]ναῖκες, τῆς γραφῆς ταύτης, ἐν [ᾗι τὰ τοῦ θεοῦ παραγγέλ][μα]τά εἰσιν γεγραμμένα, ἵνα φανεροὶ γίνωνται οἱ κατα][κολου]θοῦ[ντ]ες τοῖς παραγγέλ[μασιν καὶ οἱ μὴ κατακολου][θοῦν]τες. [Διὸ] Σωτ[ῆρ], τὴν ἀφ[ήγησιν ταύτην ἱλέως καὶ] | [εὐμεν]ῶς προσ-δέχου καὶ προ[space for c. 18 letters] | [πάρεχ]ε ἀγαθὰς ἀμοιβάς, [ὑγίειαν, σωτηρίαν, εἰρήνην, ἀσφάλεια]ν ἐπὶ γῆς καὶ ἐπὶ θα[λάσσης ἐμοί τε καὶ τοῖς] | [εἰσπορευο]μένοις ὁμοίω[ς].

(3) J. Keil 'Denkmäler des Meter-Kultes' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1915 xviii. 73 f. fig. 45 republishes (cp. A. Conze in the Arch. Zeit. 1880 xxxviii. 4 pl. 3, 3) a fragmentary votive relief of grey-blue marble, now in the Estense collection at Vienna, which represents a goddess (Agdistis) standing, with a kálathos on her head, a phiále in her right hand, and a large týmpanon in her left, between two lions. To her right stands a youthful god (Attis) in short chitón and chlamýs. To her left (now missing) stood an elderly god (Zeus), whose hand held a sceptre. On the left margin of the relief is a small torch-bearing maiden. Below, in lettering of s. iii B.C., is inscribed Ἀναξιπόλη [– –]| [Ἀ]γδίστε[ι ἀνέθηκεν]. I am indebted to Mr B. F. C. Atkinson for a notice of this inscription.

ii. 1059 on burial in the house. See further H. J. Rose The Roman Questions of Plutarch Oxford 1924 p. 202 (note on quaestt. Rom. 79).

ii. 1065 n. 0. H. Bolkestein 'The Exposure of Children at Athens and the ἐγχυτρίστριαι' in Classical Philology 1922 xvii. 222—239 (summarised in the Class. Quart. 1923 xvii. 206), arguing 'that the current idea as to the normality of expositio is totally unfounded,' interprets ἐγχυτρίζειν 'to throw into a pit (χύτρος = βόθρος), to sacrifice in a pit to the dead' and so 'to burn up, to destroy,' ἐγχυτρίστριαι 'women who sacrificed to the dead.'

ii. 1089. G. Seure 'ΤΕΛΕΣΦΟΡΟΣ-ΤΙΛΕΣΠΟΡΟΣ' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1918 xxxi. 389—398, following up a suggestion of S. Reinach 'Télesphore' ib. 1901 xiv. 343—349 = id. Cultes, Mythes et Religions Paris 1906 ii. 255—261, contends that Telesphoros, though Greek in appearance, was Thracian in origin. He points out that a Thracian name *Τιλε-σπόρις, *Τιλε-σπόρος, of legitimate formation but of unknown significance, might well have been Hellenised into Τελεσφόρος.

ii. 1101 n. 3. F. Hiller von Gaertringen in the Sitzungsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin 1921 p. 442 publishes an inscription from the western slope of the Akrópolis at Athens, where it was built into the wall of a later Lésche: hierὸν | Διὸς Ξενί|ο Θυμαιτί|δος φρα|τρίας. He infers that the phratry Thymaitis had a sanctuary of Zeus Ξένιος near the Lésche.

ii. 1102 n. 0. On the relief in the Terme Museum (fig. 939) see further P. Perdrizet 'D'une certaine espèce de reliefs archaïsants' in the Rev. Arch. 1903 ii. 211—218 with pl. 13.

ii. 1118. G. Welter 'Das Olympieion in Athen' in the Ath. Mitth. 1922 (published 1924) xlvii. 61—71 with pls. 7—10 marks an important advance in our knowledge of the Olympieion.

(1) Within the eastern portion of its foundations there has come to light the lowest course of a pre-Peisistratic perístasis, of which the N. wall was uncovered by F. C. Penrose, the W. by Welter. The wall was 2·50^{m} thick, and the perístasis measured 30·50^{m} broad by c. 60^{m} long. This was τὸ ἀρχαῖον ἱερόν built by Deukalion (Paus. 1. 18. 8).

(2) The temple of the Peisistratidai, begun c. 515 B.C., was a more ambitious structure, having the same proportions, size, and plan as its Hellenistic—Hadrianic successor. It was designed as an Ionic dipteral building with eight columns on the short side and twenty on the long side. Its length and breadth (107·70^{m} × 42·90^{m}) make it comparable with the great Ionic temples of eastern Greece—the Artemision at Ephesos (109·20^{m} × 55·10^{m}) and the second Heraion at Samos (108·73^{m} × 52·41^{m}). The foundations, continuous for the outermost columns, separate for the inner rows, are laid in neat polygonal courses of Akropolis-limestone and Kara-stone with a euthynteria of hard pôros. The stylobate had three steps of pôros. No column-bases have been found. But unfluted drums of pôros show a lower diameter of 2·42^{m} and enable us to conclude that the height of the shafts was c. 16^{m}.

Welter suggests that the Peisistratidai, as a counterbast to the Delphic activities of the Alkmaionidai, not only rebuilt the Telesterion at Eleusis (520—515 B.C.), but also tried to establish a panHellenic Zeus-cult at Athens. He thinks that these two enterprises were not unconnected. Hippias dealt in oracles (Hdt. 5. 93, cp. 90), Hipparchos in dreams (Hdt. 5. 36); and Hipparchos was at one time under the influence of Onomakritos (Hdt. 7. 6). Such men might well honour Zeus as the supreme god of the Orphic cosmogony. But, with the fall of the mystically-minded Peisistratidai, the vast temple was left unfinished, and the democracy reverted to the worship of Athena.

Fig. 1024.

ii. 1133 n. 1. With fig. 957 cp. the Roman mural relief of Mars and Apollo with an oracular bird on a pillar in a cage (G. P. Campana Antiche opere in plastica Roma 1842—1851 pl. 19, Brit. Mus. Cat. Terracottas p. 381 no. D 507, Von Rohden—Winnefeld Ant. Terrakotten iv. 1. 20 f. figs. 29—32).

ii. 1143 fig. 964. A specimen in the British Museum (fig. 1024 from a cast) shows the type somewhat more clearly.

CORRIGENDA

ii. 19 line 2. For 'Kynados' read 'Kounados.'
ii. 67 n. 3. For 'p. 377' ' read 'p. 57.'
ii. 115 n. 2 line 4. For 'οπερ' read 'δπερ.'
ii. 120 n. 1 last quotation. For 'Ομηρος' read '"Ομηρος.'
ii. 133 n. 0. For 'Gaulminus' read 'Gualminus' bis.
ii. 182 n. 1 line 5. For 'Nalionalmus.' read 'Nationalmus.'
ii. 209 n. 2 line 10. For 'Ολμον' read '"Ολμον.'
ii. 241 n. 4 line 6 from bottom of page. For 'Pherekyde' read 'Pherekydes.'
ii. 298 n. 2. For 'Modius' read 'Modius|.'
ii. 423 n. 3 sub fin. For 'Riøbenhavn' read 'Kiøbenhavn.'
ii. 436 n. 7. For '376 f.' read '22 ff.'
ii. 547 n. '2' should be numbered n. '4,' and n. '3' should be numbered n. '5.'
ii. 565 n. 2 line 5. For 'η' read 'ἦ.'
ii. 664 n. 1 line 10. For 'syrinx' read 'sýrinx.'
ii. 714 n. 2 line 2. For 'Εκάτης' read ''Εκάτης.'
ii. 729 n. 0 line 15 from bottom of page. For 'ii 208 f.' read 'ii. 208 f.'
ii. 774 n. 1 line 7. For 'Vishna' read 'Vishnu.'
ii. 784 n. 7. For 'Kentoripai' read 'Kentouripai.'
ii. 806 n. 8. For 'ἀστεροπήτης' read 'ἀστεροπητής.'
ii. 808 n. 0 line 11. For 'δ' read 'δ'.'
ii. 829 line 23. For 'they delay' read 'thy delay.'
ii. 868 n. 6 line 4. For 'pud' read 'apud.'
ii. 874 n. 2 last line. For '874' read '873.'
ii. 916 n. 0 line 15. For 'Ολύμπιος' read ''Ολύμπιος.'
ii. 960 n. 0 line 13 from bottom of page. For 'Hadrianas' read 'Hadrian as.'
ii. 968 n. 0 line 2. For 'νεωκόρ[ος' read 'νεωκόρ]ος.'
ii. 975 n. 0 line 7 from bottom of page. For 'Περειτίουι β' ' read 'Περειτίου ιβ'.'
ii. 977 n. 0 line 14. For 'historica' read 'historical.'
ii. 1088 line 14 from bottom of page. For 'inscr. Gr. i' read 'inscr. Gr. ii.'
ii. 1093 n. 1 line 5. For 'recques' read 'grecques.'
ii. 1128 n. 0 line 1. For 'Αγαθὸν' read ''Αγαθὸν.'
ii. 1140 n. 3 line 4. For 'Lyaea' read 'Lyaea).'
ii. 1178 line 7. For 'Greek' read 'Great.'

Bronze medallion of Commodus, struck 185 A.D. (Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 59 f. no. 74 pl. 83, 2). Supra p. 1209 n. 2.

INDEX I

PERSONS PLACES FESTIVALS

The contents of each item are arranged, as far as possible, under the following heads: Cults Epithets Festivals Oracles Rites Priests Personations Myths Metamorphoses Genealogy Functions Etymology Attributes Types Identifications Assimilations Associations Comparisons Relations Supersedure.

In the Genealogies f. = father, m. = mother, s. = son, d. = daughter, b. = brother, st. = sister, gf. = grandfather, gm. = grandmother, gs. = grandson, h. = husband, w. = wife.

The larger numerals refer to pages, the smaller numerals to foot-notes.

Aalen
  Cult: Iuno Sancta 99_0
Aaron 386_5
Abbaïtis, coins of 565
Abban, St 214_0
Abdera, coins of 271_3 411
Abédat in Phoinike
  Cult: Zeus Οὐράνιος Ὕψιστος Σαυραῖος Ἐπήκοος $886_{0\,(30)}$ 983_4
Abella 1220
Abellio 1220
Abello 1220
Abirenes 64_0
Abirkios, tombstone of 288 ff.
Ablabiai
  Cult: Erythrai in Ionia $1113_{0\,(1)}$
Abonou Teichos
  Cult: Glykon 1083 ff. $1114_{0\,(7)}$
  —— coins of 1084
Aborigines 404_0
Abraham $887_{0\,(31)}$
Abruzzo, Kyklops in folk-tale from the 1001
Acca Larentia (Laurentia) 402_0 1016
Achaean League, revival of 1119_4 1120_0
Achaeans
  Cults: Apollon (?) 458 Athena (?) 458 Zeus 458
  In relation to Aeolians 1123_5 —— oath of 730_0 (i. 16)
Acharnai
  Cults: Apollon Ἀγυιεύς 163 Herakles 168_3
Acheloios
  Cults: Athens 183 f. 1092_2 1117 1118 Megara 1117_7 1138_5 Mykonos 1092_2 Sicily 667_3
  Festival: 667_3
  Rites: sacrifice of a full-grown victim and ten lambs 1092_2
Acheloios (cont.)
  Type: horned and bearded head 1117 1117_7
  Associated with Kallirrhoe (?) and Zeus Μειλίχιος (?) 1117 Nymphs 1118 Zeus 1138_5 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1092_2
Acheron 14 348 467 ff.
Acherusian Lake 347 f.
Achilles
  Cult: Skythia 925_0
  Epithet: 'Lord of the Island' (sc. Leuke) 925_0
  Myths: Apollon 459 Polyxene 117 psychostasia 733 shield 972_1 Telephos 1184_3 Tennes 669 f.
  Genealogy: f. of Pyrrhos 915_2 916_0 —— double-pointed spear of 799
Achna
  Cult: Artemis 157_1
Actaeon 144
Adad
  Cult: Babylon 769_1
  Attributes: axe 546_0 double lightning-fork 769_0 lightning-fork 767_1 769_0 769_1 ox 769_1 770_0
  Types: seated with lightning-fork in his hand 767_1 standing with lightning-fork in either hand 769_1 standing on ox with double lightning-fork in his hand 769_0
  Identified with Marduk 769_1 Theos Hypsistos $886_{0\,(30)}$ Zeus 983_7 —— seal of 769_1
Adalbert, St 214_0
Adam 138_0
Adamna
  Cult: Samothrace 295
  Etymology: 295_1
  Identified with Attis 295 1218
Adiounios Tauros 349

Aditi 1035
Âditya 1035
Admetos 240 241_4 493
Adonaios (Adonai) $889_{0(0)}$
Epithet: ὑψικέραυνος 1212
Identified with Iao $889_{0(0)}$ Theos Hypsistos $889_{0(0)}$ Sabaoth 1212 Zeus 293_0
Adonis
Cults: Assyrioi (=Syrioi) 296_4 Bethlehem 984_1
Myths: killed by boar $886_{0(30)}$ Myrrha 680
Genealogy: h. of Aphrodite 694_0 s. of Kinyras 694_0
Function: crops 557_1
Identified with Attis 294 f. 298 Kronos (?) $886_{0(30)}$
Associated with Aphrodite (Venus) 984_1
Compared with Attis 293 Tammuz and Zeus 345
In relation to Aphrodite 293 552_1
Adorea
Etymology: 1173_1
Adranos See Hadran
Adrasteia
Genealogy: m. of Aither, Chaos, and Erebos by Chronos or Herakles 1022
Type: androgynous 1022
Identified with Ananke 1022
Adrasteia, a Cretan nymph
Myths: makes golden ball for infant Zeus 933_0 puts infant Zeus to sleep in golden liknon 933_0
Genealogy: d. of Melissos by Amaltheia 933_0
Function: protectress of laws 933_0
Adrasteiai (Adresteiai)
Epithet: ἀμόμονες 954_0
Adrastos
Genealogy: b. of Amphios 1072 s. of Merops 1072
Adrastos (Adrestos), s. of Gordios (Gordies) 311_8
Adriana or Adriania See Hadrianeia
Adrianoi in Mysia
Cult: Zeus 127
Aëdon
Myth: Polytechnos 693
Aedui
Rites: burial within the house 1059
Aeneas 472 1071 See also Aineias
Aenona
Cult: Ianus Augustus 325
Aeolians
Cult: Zeus Ὁμολώιος 901_0
In relation to Achaeans 1123_5 Minyai 1149_3
—— in Thessaly and Central Greece regard king as Zeus 1088
Aequi 404_4
Aequitas 99_1
Aer
Genealogy: f. of Mot by Chaos 1038
Aer (cont.)
f. of Motos (?) by Aura 1036 1038
m. of Oulomos by Aither 1037 f. s. of Pothos and Omichle 1036 1038
Aesclapius (sc. Aesculapius) 1086
Aescolapius (sc. Aesculapius) 1086
Aesculapius
Cults: Etruria 1085 f. Narona 1086 Praeneste 1086 Rome 1080 1083 1086 Sardinia 1086 Tiber-island 1083 1086
Epithets: Deus Bonus 724_0 secundus 1088 tertius 1089
Genealogy: b. of Mercurius secundus 1088
Aesernia, coins of $831_{1(2)}$
Aeternus
Cult: Taurini 306_4
Aëtios, king of Troizen 414_2
Aetna, Mt See Aitne, Mt
Aetna
Genealogy: m. of Palicus by Volcanus 909_0
See also Aitne, nymph
Aetos
Myths: serves Zeus in Idaean Cave 933_0 transformed by Hera into eagle 933_0
Genealogy: s. of Ge 933_0
Africa, Roman
Cult: Ba'al-ḥammân 554_3
Agamedes
Function: hypostasis of Zeus (?) 1075
—— bóthros of, at Lebadeia 1075 sleep of, at Delphoi 232_4
Agamemnon
Epithets: ἀγαθὸς προβατογνώμων 1209_7 ἀναξ ἀνδρῶν 1070 εὐρυκρείων 1069
Myths: Briseis 726 dedicates ship of stone to Artemis Βολοσία 906_3 sceptre of Zeus 547_2 956_2 f. Tegea in Crete 1147_6
Genealogy: f. of Elektra 1132_8 f. of Orestes 1179 s. of Atreus 957_0
Functions: aithér 1069 buried king 1130_1 human Zeus 1179
Etymology: 1069 f.
Compared with Zeus 1069 f.
In relation to Menelaos 447_5
—— sceptre of 1132_4 1132_6 soul of, becomes eagle 1132
Agamemnon, the god (?) 1069
Agasthenes 712
Agatha, St, of Catania 347_0
Agathe
Cult: Epidauros 1126_0
Associated with Agathos Theos 1126_0
Agathe Tyche
Cults: Athens 1125_1 1129_0 Delos 1128_0 Peiraieus 1104 f.
Genealogy: w. of Zeus Φίλιος 1104 f.
Attributes: cornu copiae 1128_0 oinochóe 1128_0
Types: Euphranor 1127_0 Praxiteles 1127_0

Agathe Tyche (cont.)
Associated with Agathos Daimon 1125_1 1128_0 cp. 1228
See also Tyche Ἀγαθή
Agathodaemones 1127_0
Agathodaimoniastai 925_0 1129_0
Agathodaimonistai 1129_0
Agathoi Daimones
Cult: Alexandreia 1127_0
Type: snakes 1127_0
Agathos Angelos
Cult: Stratonikeia $880_{0(0)}$
See also Theios Angelos
Agathos Daimon
Cults: Alexandreia 1127_0 1128_0 Athens 1125_1 Delos 1128_0 Eumeneia in Phrygia 970_0 Kentoripa (?) 1129_0 Philadelpheia in Lydia 1229 Phoinike 1127_0 Rhodes the town 925_0 Teos 1066 Thespiai 1125_1 1161
Epithet: Νέος 98_0
Rite: cup of unmixed wine drunk after dinner 1125 1129_0
Personated by Antinoos 1128_0 Nero 98_0 1128_0 Philippus i of Rome 970_0
Functions: chthonian 1129_0 fertility 1125_1 1129_0 male ancestor 1125_1 wealth 1125_1
Attributes: corn-ears 98_0 cornu copiae 1117_7 (?) 1125_1 1128_0 eagle 1125_1 phiále 1125_1 1128_0 poppy-heads 98_0 sceptre 1125_1 skhent 98_0
Types: animal and human 1128_0 bearded 1125_1 beardless 1126_0 Euphranor 1126_0 1127_0 Praxiteles 1127_0 snake 98_0 1127_0 1128_0
Identified with Dionysos 1129_0 Kneph 1127_0 1128_0
Assimilated to Zeus 1125_1
Associated with Agathe Tyche 1125_1 1128_0 cp. 1228 Zeus Ἀραβύριος 925_0
Compared with Zeus Ἐπιτέλειος Φίλιος 1163 Zeus Φίλιος 1161
In relation to Dionysos 1129_0
—— toast of 1129_0
Agathos Deos (sic)
Cult: Athens 985_0
Agathos Theos
Cults: Athens 1129_0 Epidauros 1126_0 Megalopolis 1125_1
Function: a sort of Zeus 1126_0
Attributes: cornu copiae 1126_0 sceptre 1126_0 snake 1126_0
Associated with Agathe 1126_0
Agathyrsi tattooed 123_0
Agaue 347_0 (?)
Agdestis (?) 970_0
Agdistios (?) 970_0
Agdistis
Cults: Egypt 1228 Ikonion 970_0 Pantikapaion 970_0 Pessinous 970_0 Philadelpheia in Lydia 1229 Phrygia 970_0
Epithets: Ἐπήκοος 1228 [τὴν ἀγιωτάτην] φύλακα καὶ οἰκοδέσποιναν τοῦδε τοῦ σ[ἴκου] 1228
Agdistis (cont.)
Myths: 969_4 970_0 castrated by himself 969_4 castrated by the gods 969_4 Liber 969_4
Attributes: kálathos 1229 phiále 1229 týmpanon 1229
Type: standing between two lions with kálathos on head, phiále in right hand and týmpanon in left, flanked by Attis and Zeus 1229
Identified with Kybele 970_0 Mother of the gods 970_0 Rhea 970_0
Associated with Attis and Zeus 1229
Agdos, Mt
Myths: Agdistis 969_4 970_0 Deukalion 970_0 971_0 Zeus and the Magna Mater 969_4
Agedincum
Cults: Mars 99_3 Vesta 99_3 Volcanus 99_3
Agesandros (= Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$
Agesilaos (= Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$ 1168_5
Agesipolis 7
Agis 7
Agis, f. of Amphikles 421
Aglaopes (sc. Asklepios) 1085
Aglaophamos 1024
Aglapios (sc. Asklepios) 1085
Aglibolos
Cult: Emesa 814_3
Agnes, St 1050
Agnostoi Theoi
Cult: Olympia 1100_1
Agnostos Theos
Cult: Athens 942_0
Agon
Cult: Kaulonia (?) 1042
Agonium 19_0
Agra
Cults: Meter 554_2 Meter ἐν Ἄγραις 1142_3 (?) Zeus Μιλίχιος 1142_3 (?)
Rites: Lesser Mysteries (c. Anthesterion 20) 1139
Agreus 715_4 1037
Agrigentum
Cults: Athena 910_1 Zeus Ἀραβύριος 910_1 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 911_0 ff. 1227 Zeus Πολιεύς 910_1
—— coins of 667 667_3 Olympion at 911_0 ff. Porta Aurea at 910_1 tombs for horses at 1146_0
Agrionia 164_0 924_0
Agyieus See Apollon Epithets Ἀγυιεύς and Zeus Epithets Ἀγυιεύς
Agyieus, tbe Hyperborean 169
Agyrion 1146_0
Ahriman
Attributes: key 1054 sceptre 1053 thunderbolt 1053
Types: lion-headed 664_1 1053 with wings on shoulders and haunches, snake coiled about him, key in right hand, sceptre in left, and thunderbolt on breast or at side 1053 f.

Ahura Mazdâh
Myth: cosmic egg 1036
Function: creator 1036
Identified with Zeus Στράτιος 976_0
Aia 904_1
Aiakidai 894_3
Aiakos
Myth: drought 894_3 895_1
Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Aigina d. of Asopos 894_3
Aias 1137_2
Aietes 108
Aigai in Aiolis
Cults: Apollon Χρηστήριος 954_0 Istia Βολλαία (? Βόλλαια) 259_0 Zeus Βόλλαιος 259_0
Aigai in Makedonia
Cult: Zeus Ὕψιστος $878_{0(0)}$ 906_2
Aigaion, Mt
Cults: Aphrodite (?) 927_0 Ariadne (?) 927_0 Zeus 925_1 926_0 927_0
Myth: birth of Zeus 925_1
—— cave on, identified with Psychro Cave 925_1 cave on, wrongly identified with Dictaean Cave 926_0
Aigeirotomoi 497_5
Aigesthios (?) 970_0
Aigeus consults Themis 206 sword of 627_6
Aigialos, katabâsion at 14
Aigina
Cults: Apollon 184 Poseidon 184_6 Zeus Ἑλλάνιος 894_3 Zeus Πανελλήνιος 894_3 895_0 895_1
Aigina, d. of Asopos 187_8 189_0 894_3
Aigion
Cults: Hera 210_0 Herakles 742_5 Zeus Ἀφαῖς 742 f. 749 826_6
Aigipan
Myth: sinews of Zeus 449_0
In relation to Aigokeros 932_1 933_0
Aigle (Aigla), m. of Asklepios $488_{0(0)}$ 1086
Aigokeros
Myths: foster-brother of Zeus on Mt Ide in Crete 932_1 933_0 938_0 helps Zeus against Titans 933_0 invents shell-trumpet 933_0 938_0 transformed into constellation by Zeus 933_0
Genealogy: s. of Aix 933_0
Associated with Zeus 938_0
In relation to Aigipan 932_1 933_0
—— derived from Mesopotamia 938_0 reaches Crete by same route as Zagreus 938_0
Aigolios, a Cretan 929_0
Aigyptos See Egypt
Aigyptos, the river Nile
Epithet: Διπετής 481
Aineias
Myth: sacra of Troy 1068
Etymology: 384_0
See also Aeneas
Ainianes
Cult: Zeus Ὀρομπάραs 869_0
—— coins of 869_0
Ainos in Thrace
Cults: Asklepios 1079 Hermes Περφέραῖος 496_0
—— coins of 1079
Ainos, Mt
Cult: Zeus Αἰνήσιος 907_2
Myth: Boreadai pursue Harpyiai 907_2
—— ascent of 907_2 908_0
Aiolos
Genealogy: 1088 b. of Boiotos 317 f. of Athamas 904_1 f. of Sisyphos 1150_4
—— kings descended from, pose as human Zeus 1088 1122 1159
Aion
Epithets: ἄμβροτος 830_7 καμπύλος 831_0
Festival: Jan. 5 337_2
Genealogy: 981_1 s. of Ianus 337
Type: lion-headed (See Ahriman)
Identified with Ianus 337
Aischlabios (sc. Asklepios) 1085
Aisclapius (sc. Aesculapius) 1085 f.
Aiscolapius (sc. Aesculapius) 1086
Aisculapius (sc. Aesculapius) 1086
Aisklapieus (sc. Asklepios) 1085
Aisklapios (sc. Asklepios) 1085
Aison 211
Aison, the vase-painter 206_1 (?)
Aither
Epithets: νοερός (Lobeck cj. νοτερός) 1022
Genealogy: f. of Eros by Nyx 315_4 1051 f. of Oulomos by Aer 1037 f. f. of Zeus 941_0 s. of Chronos 1024 s. of Chronos or Herakles by Ananke or Adrasteia 1022 s. of Erebos and Nyx 315_4
Aithiopes tattooed 123_0
Aithra, d. of Pittheus 800 (?)
Aitnaia 908_1
Aitne (formerly Inessa)
Cult: Zeus Αἰτναῖος (?) 908_1
Aitne (formerly Katane)
Cults: Silenos 908_1 909_0 Zeus Αἰτναῖος 908_1 909_0
Festival: Aitnaia 908_1
—— coins of 908_1 909_0
Aitne, Mt
Cults: Hadran 630 Hephaistos 630 Zeus Αἰτναῖος 908_1 909_0 910_0
Myths: Polyphemos 909_0 Silenos 909_0 Typhon 449_0
Aitne, nymph
Genealogy: m. of Palikoi by Zeus 909_0
Aix
Myth: transformed into constellation by Zeus 933_0
Genealogy: m. of Aigokeros 933_0
Aix, s. of Python 217_2
Aixone
Cults: Demeter 730_0 Poseidon 730_0 Zeus 730_0
Aizanis (?) 964_3
Aizanitis 964_3
Aizanoi 964_3
Cults: Dioskouroi 313 Hadrian 1120_0

Aizanoi (cont.)
1121$_0$ Iupiter Aezanensis 968$_0$ Iupiter Aezaniticus 968$_0$ Theos Ὕψιστος 882$_{0(23)}$ 968$_0$ Zeus 965$_0$ ff. Zeus (?) Ὕψιστος 882$_{0(23)}$
Festival: Megala Panhellenia 1121$_0$
Priest: νεωκόρος 967$_0$
Rite: sacrifice of fox and hedgehog 964$_3$
Myths: Aizen, s. of Tantalos 964$_3$ Azan, s. of Arkas 964$_3$ Euphorbos 964$_3$
—— coins of 313 964$_3$ f. 968$_0$ named Exouanoun 964$_3$ priestly kings at 964$_3$ f.
Aizen, s. of Tantalos 964$_3$
Akakallis 218$_0$
Akakesion
Cult: Despoina 231$_8$
—— reliefs in precinct near 231$_8$
Akamas (?) 280$_1$
Akarnania
Cults: Artemis 412 Zeus 743$_7$ Zeus Καραός 1226
—— coins of 412 743$_7$ 'one-eyed' monsters of 993$_2$
Ake See Ptolemaïs in Phoinike
Akmon, founder of Akmoneia 312$_5$
Akmoneia
Cults: Dioskouroi 313 Μάνης Δάος (or Δάης) Ἠλιοδρόμος Zeus 312$_5$ Theos Ὕψιστος 882$_{0(23)}$ 968$_1$
Myths: founded by Akmon 312$_5$ Zeus nursed by Rhea under protection of Kouretes 968$_1$
—— coins of 313
Akragas See Agrigentum
Akrai in Sicily
Cults: Zeus [Ἀγο]ραῖος (?) 873$_{0(11)}$ Zens [Ἀκ]ραῖος 873$_{0(11)}$ Zeus Ἀκραῖος 915$_1$
Akraiphia
Cults: Apollon Πτώϊος 238$_0$ Zeus Ἐλευθέριος (=Nero) 97$_0$ Zeus Ὀπωρεύς 1074
Akrisias
Cult: Phrygia 1155 f.
Functions: doublet of Akrisios 1155 mountain (?) 1156 Phrygian Kronos 1155 f.
Etymology: 1156$_6$
Identified with Arkesios (?) or Arkeisios (?) 1156
Akrisios
Cult: Larissa in Thessaly 1155
Myths: Proitos 1146$_0$ slain by Perseus 1155
Functions: doublet of Akrisias 1155 king personating sky-god 1156 mountain (?) 1156
Etymology: 1156$_5$ 1156$_6$
Type: bearded king 1155
Identified with Arkesios (?) or Arkeisios (?) 1156
Ak Tash in Lydia
Cult: Hypsistos 881$_{0(20)}$
See also Temenothyrai
Aktor, reputed f. of Kteatos and Eurytos 1015$_8$
Alabanda
Cults: Apollon Ἐλευθέριος Σεβαστός (=Augustus) 97$_0$ Apollon Κισσίος (less probably Κισσέος) 247$_0$ 248$_0$
—— coins of 247$_0$ 248$_0$
See also Antiocheia in Chrysaoris
Alaisa (Halaesa)
Cult: Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 1158$_6$
——coins of 1158$_6$ Meilichieion at 1158
Alaisiagae
Cult: Borcovicium 51$_1$
Alalkomeneus 898$_6$
Alani
Cult: sword of Mars 548$_0$
Alba Longa, kings of, crowned with oak 417$_5$
Alban Mt
Cults: Iupiter Latiaris 46$_8$ Zeus Κεραύνιος 808$_{0(16)}$
Albania, Kyklopes in folk-tale from 999 f.
Albano 1146$_0$
Albanon 694$_0$
Alektrona See Elektryone
Aleos
Genealogy: f. of Kepheus 1083 1148 f. of Minyas 1150$_5$ gf. of Antinoe 1083
In relation to Athena Ἀλέα 1147
Alexander (sc. Alexandros of Abonou Teichos)
Cult: Blatsche 1084
Alexander the Great adopted by Zeus Ἄμμων 986$_0$ coins of 760 f. lily grows on statue of 773$_0$ receives Celts of the Adriatic 55 reverts to pre-Pheidiac type of Zeus 760 f.
Alexandra, the goddess 1069
Alexandreia
Cults: Agathoi Daimones 1127$_0$ Agathos Daimon 1127$_0$ 1128$_0$ Arsinoe ii 1216 Caesar Ἐπιβατήριος 1180$_4$ Helios 889$_{0(33)}$ Heros 1127$_0$ Nemeseis 889$_{0(33)}$ Nemesis 864$_0$ Nero 1128$_0$ Sarapis 1158 Theos Ὕψιστος καὶ πάντων Ἐπόπτης 889$_{0(33)}$ 984$_2$ Zeus Μειλίχιος 1158 Zeus Νέμειος 1187$_0$ Zeus Οὐράνιος 1158
Rites: torch-lighting 1158 wheaten meal offered to snakes 1127$_0$
Myth: foundation 1127$_0$ 1188
—— coins of 102$_0$ 773$_0$ 986$_0$ 1128$_0$ 1133$_1$ 1136$_4$ 1187$_0$ Sebastion at 1180$_4$ personified 1128$_0$ (?)
Alexandreia in Troas, coins of 485
Alexandros
Myth: judgment of Paris 949$_5$
Alexandros of Abonou Teichos 225 1083 ff.
Alexis, St 134
Algidus, Mt
Cult: Diana 404
Alinda, coins of 572
Aliphera
Cults: Athena (?) 782 Myiagros 782

Alkamenes 1078
Alkmaionidai 1229
Alkyone
Myth: claims that her h. Keyx is Zeus 1088
Genealogy: d. of Aiolos 1088 d. of Atlas 414_2 m. of Hyperes and Anthas by Poseidon 414_2
Alkyoneus 463_1
Allmendingen
Cults: Iupiter 619 1221 Matres 619 Matronae 619 Mercurius 619 Minerva 619 1221 Neptunus 619
—— Mithraeum at 1220
Allobroges
Cults: Baginatiae 570_0 Baginus 570_0 Iupiter Baginas 570_0
Almedha, St 325_8
Alopeke
Cults: Athena (Athenaia) 1115 Ge 1115 Zeus Μιλίχιος 1115
Alopekos 421
Althaimenes
Cult: Rhodes 923_0
Myths: Mt Atabyrion in Rhodes 923_0 Rhodes 922_2 923_0
Althepos 414_2
Altyntash in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βέννιος $883_{0(0)}$ —— tombstones from 836
Alysis, Mt (?)
Cult: Zeus Ἄλσειος (?) 945_1 Zeus Ἀλσύτιος (?) 945_1
Amadokos 452
Amaltheia
Myth: nurses Zeus 928_0 932_1
Genealogy: m. of the nymphs Adrasteia and Eide (Ide) by Melissos 933_0
Functions: goat 932_1 Naiad 932_1
Types: carrying infant Zeus 363_1 (?) goat 746_2 (?)
Amaseia
Cult: Zeus Στράτιος 975_0 f.
—— coins of 975_0 f.
Amasis, the vase-painter 794_0
Amastris
Cults: Hera 707 Zeus Παικτήσιος 1067 Zeus Στρατηγός 707 848 918_0
—— coins of 707 918_0
Amathous
Cults: Theos Ὕψιστος $879_{0(15)}$ 980_3 Zeus Λαβράνιος 598 f. Zeus Ὁρομπάτας 869_0
Amazons
Myth: Ephesos 405
Attributes: battle-axe (σάγαρις, securis) 560 double axe (λάβρυς, πέλεκυς, ἀμφιπέλεκκον (?), bipennis) 560
In relation to Hittites 560
Ambrakia
Cult: Zeus 1222
—— bronze statuette of Zeus from 1222 coins of 162 f. 499
Ameirake, former name of Penelope 691
Amen
Cult: Thebes in Egypt 774_0
See also Amen-Râ, Ammon, Amon, Amoun
Amen-Râ
Attributes: plumes 926_0 solar disk $492_{0(0)}$
Type: ithyphallic 772_1
Identified with Zeus 926_0
See also Amen, Ammon, Amon, Amoun
Amenti 1212
Ammon
Cult: Egypt 767_2
—— horn of 773_0 masks of $808_{0(17)}$
See also Amen, Amen-Râ, Amon, Amoun
Amnisos 942_0
Amon 767_2
See also Amen, Amen-Râ, Ammon, Amoun
Amor 862_{10}
Amorgos
Cult: Zeus Εὐβουλεύς 258_3
—— head from 122_0
Amoun
Cult: Egypt 293_0 $889_{0(0)}$
See also Amen, Amen-Râ, Ammon, Amon
Amphiaraos
Cults: Hellenes 1070 Oropos 1070 ff.
Epithet: ἀναξ 1070
Myth: 1070 f.
Genealogy: descended from Aiolos 1088 f. of Amphilochos $489_{0(4)}$ s. of Oikles 1071
Function: chthonian 1070
Etymology: 1072
Attributes: snake 1071 snake coiled round staff 1071
Types: bearded 1071 beardless (?) 1071 enthroned 1071 laureate 1071
Assimilated to Asklepios 1072
Associated with Hygieia and Pan 1072
Compared with Aeneas 1071 Erechtheus 1071 Latinus 1071 Theodoric the Great 1071 Trophonios (Trephonios) 1075 —— chariot of 815_7
Amphiareion near Oropos 1071 f.
Amphictionic πυλαία 903_2
Amphikles 421 673_3
Amphilochos
Myths: fights Mopsos $489_{0(4)}$ $490_{0(0)}$ 1130_1 founds Mallos in Kilikia $489_{0(4)}$
Genealogy: s. of Alkmaion $489_{0(4)}$ s. of Amphiaraos $489_{0(4)}$
Amphion
Cult: Antiocheia on the Orontes 428
Myths: Dirke 1013 1015 1019 Lykos 1019_2
Genealogy: b. of Zethos 317 s. of Zeus by Antiope 1013 s. of Zeus or Epopeus 445

Amphion (cont.)
Functions: harp-player 1013 one of the Theban Dioskouroi 317 1014
Etymology: 445 673_3 1072
Attribute: lyre 1013
Amphios, s. of Merops 1072
Amphios, s. of Selagos 1072
Amphis, clipped form of Amphiaraos 1072
Amphissos 486
Amphisthenes 421 673_3
Amphithea 673
Amphithea (?) 353_3
Amphitrite
Type: with head-dress of crab's-claws 665_3
Amphitryon
Function: human Zeus 1072
Etymology: 1072
Ampsanctus (Amsanctus) 328_4
Amulius 1016
Amyklai
Cult: Apollon 458 894_0
Amymone 800 (?)
Anagnia
Rites: priests wear fleece as head-dress 377 procession of Salii 375 —— marble relief from 375
Anakeion 1063 f.
Anaktes
Cult: Athens 1135_4
Ananke
Genealogy: m. of Aither, Chaos, and Erebos by Chronos or Herakles 1022 st. of Dike 316_0
Function: cosmic 316_0
Type: androgynous 1022
Identified with Adrasteia 1022
—— spindle of 45 66_0 throne of 129_1 way (Milky Way) of 42 (?)
Anaphe
Cults: Aphrodite 1066 Apollon Αἰγλήτης 816_4 Apollon Ἀσγελάτας 1066 (Zeus) Κτήσιος 1066
Myth: Apollon 816_4
Anat $807_{3(1)}$ (?)
Anatolian association of Mother-goddess with youthful páredros, at once her consort and her child 294
Anaxagoras 11 1024
Anaximandros 1024 1033
Anaximenes 386
Anazarbos
Cults: Phersephone 14_3 θεὸς Καταβάτης 14_3 Zeus Ὀλύβριος or Ὀλύβρις 980_1
Anchesmos, Mt
Cult: Zeus Ἀγχέσμιος 897_4
Anchiale, m. of Idaean Daktyloi 929_0
Anchialos in Thrace
Cults: Asklepios 1079 Zeus Ὕψιστος Ἐπόπτης (?) $878_{0(10)}$ 949_2
—— coins of 1079
Anchises
Myth: sacra of Troy 1068
Andraimon 486
Andrew, St
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1202_0 (?)
Andromeda, picture of 986_0
Andros
Cult: Zeus Μειλίχιος 1156
Anemoi
Cult: Orphists 141, 827
Anemos in Phoenician cosmogony 1037 f.
Angdistis See Agdistis
Angela, St 135 f.
Angelion 232_0
Angeloi Theou $880_{0(19)}$
Angelos See Agathos Angelos, Theios Angelos
Angistis See Agdistis
Ani (= Ianus)
Cult: Etruria 338_3
Anien, the river-god 1016
Anigemius
Cult: Noricum 338_3
Anios 670 f.
Ankyra in Galatia
Cults: Zeus 971_1 Zeus Βροντᾶν 835_5 Zeus Ταουιανός 754_1
—— coins of $491_{0\,(0)}$
Ankyra in Phrygia
Cult: youthful hero on horseback bearing double axe 566
—— coins of 566
Anna, St 1157
Anogeia 935_0
Antaios 134_1
Antandros
Cult: Zeus Ἀστραπαῖος 815
Antauges
Identified with Phanes 1026 1051
Anteros
Type: with Eros 1221
Anthas, king of Troizen 414_2
Anthesteria 1139
Antho 1016
Anthos of Arkadia 414_2 1092
Anthos, s. of Autonoos and Hippodameia 414_2
Antigoneia on the Orontes
Cult: Zeus 1188
Antilibanos, Mt 981_1
Antinoe, d. of Kepheus 1083
Antinoos
Personates Agathos Daimon 1128_0
Types: with lotos-flower on head 773_0 with lotos-wreath 773_0
Antiocheia in Chrysaoris (= Alabanda)
Cults: Apollon Ἰσότιμος 714_2 Zeus Χρυσαορεύς 714_2
Antiocheia on the Maiandros
Cult: Zeus Βουλαῖος 259_0
—— coins of 259_0 f.
Antiocheia on the Orontes
Cults: Amphion and Zethos 428 Apollon (?) 1192_5 Athena 1197 Boule (?) 1193_3 Demos (?) 1192 Dionysos 428 1197 Iupiter Capitolinus 1188 Triptolemos 981_1 Tyche 1196_3 1197 Zeus 1197 Zeus Βοτ-τιαῖος 1187 f. Zeus Βώττιος 1188 Zeus Καπετώλιος (= Iupiter Capitolinus) 1188$_{14}$ Zeus Κεραύνιος 428 Zeus Φίλιος 1178 1186 1196 f.

Antiocheia on the Orontes (cont.)
Myths: founded by Alexander the Great 1187 founded by Kasos and Belos 981$_1$ founded by Seleukos i Nikator 1188
—— chalice from 1197 ff. coins of 1192 ff. 1196$_0$ 1209 1209$_5$ (?) 'Golden' Basilica of 1198$_1$
Antiochos i of Kommagene
Personates Tyche 1136$_4$
Antiochos iv Epiphanes
Epithets: Θεὸς Ἐπιφανὴς 1189 Θεὸς Ἐπιφανὴς Νικηφόρος 1189
Personates Zeus 1188 f.
Antion 1123
Antiope
Myth: 1013 1015
Genealogy: d. of Nykteus 1013 m. of Zethos and Amphion by Zeus 1013 cp. 428$_4$ w. of Epopeus 1013
—— Dionysiac character of 1019$_2$
Antoninus Pius
Personates Zeus 101$_1$ 343$_0$
—— house of, struck by lightning 10
Anxia, helmet from 1159$_1$
Apameia in Phrygia
Cults: Artemis Ἐφεσία 408$_0$ Dioskouroi 313
Myth: Zeus nursed by Rhea under protection of Kouretes 968$_2$
—— coins of 313 408$_0$ 610
Apameia on the Orontes
Cult: Zeus 1192
—— coins of 1192
Apate
Epithets: ἀλλοπρόσαλλος ὀρεστιὰς... δαίμων 942$_0$
Myth: birth of the first Aphrodite 1029
Type: Fury 854
Apelles 828
Apellon See Apollon
Apemosyne
Myth: Mt Atabyrion in Rhodes 923$_0$ 924$_0$
Apesas, Mt
Cults: Zeus Ἀπεσάντιος 892$_4$ Zeus Ἀπέσας 892$_4$ Zeus Ἀφέσιος 892$_4$
Myths: Deukalion 892$_4$ Nemean Lion 892$_4$ Perseus 892$_4$
Etymology: 892$_4$
Aphareus 437
Apharidai 438$_2$
Aphesas 892$_4$
Aphrodisias in Karia
Cults: Aphrodite 573$_7$ Eros 572$_{10}$ Zeus Λαβρᾴϋνδος 585$_3$ Zeus Μέγιστος 585$_3$ Zeus Σπάλαξος (less probably Σπάλωξος) 1220
Rite: tree threatened 681 f.
Myth: Myrrha (?) 681 f.
—— coins of 572 f. 681 1220
Aphrodisiastai Syroi 1157$_3$
Aphrodite
Cults: Mt Aigaion (?) 927$_0$ Anaphe 1066 Aphrodisias in Karia 573$_7$ Argos 1156$_5$ Athens 985$_0$ 1043 Delos 922$_0$ Dorylaeion 281 Elis 68$_1$ Epidauros 1144$_3$ Gortyna 723$_0$ Halikarnassos 872$_{0(5)}$ Hierapytna 723$_0$ Jerusalem 984$_1$ Kition in Kypros 807$_{5(4)}$ Kypros 424 Libye 987$_0$ Lyttos 723$_0$ Megalopolis 1178 Megara 257$_4$ Nisyros 1157$_3$ Paphos 783$_3$ 944$_0$ Paros 875$_{1(5)}$ Pergamon 424 Philadelpheia in Lydia 363 Priansos 723$_0$ Sardeis 424 Sikyon 1165$_1$ Skythia 292$_4$ Smyrna 729$_0$ Troizen 872$_{0(5)}$ 944$_0$
Epithets: Ἀγνή 922$_5$ Ἀκραία 872$_{0(5)}$ Ἀκρία 1156$_5$ Ἀρτιμήασα 293$_0$ ἀφρογενής 1029 ἐγερσίγελως 1029 Ἐπιστροφία 257$_4$ Ἐπιτυμβία 1165$_1$ Κατασκοπία 944$_0$ Μιλιχία 1144$_3$ Οὐρανία 68$_1$ 292$_4$ 854 985$_0$ Παφία 424 Στρατονικίς 729$_0$ Σώζουσα 987$_0$ Ψιθυρος 1043
Rites: emergence from sea 132$_2$ taboo on garlic among priests of Aphrodite in Libye 987$_0$
Worshippers: Ἀφροδισιασταὶ Σύροι 1157$_3$
Myths: reared amid ἀφρός arising from genitals of Ouranos 448$_0$ cp. 448$_1$ sprung from seed of Ouranos falling into sea 1029 sprung from seed of Zeus falling into sea 1029
Genealogy: d. of Aphros by Astynome 693$_4$ 694$_0$ d. of Ouranos 1029 d. of Zeus 1029 w. of Adonis 694$_0$
Functions: cosmic 316$_0$ summer 557$_1$
Attributes: apple 491$_{0(6)}$ 1165$_1$ doves 710 myrtle 1165$_1$ poppy 1165$_1$ rose 1043 water-mint 1166$_0$ wreath 573$_7$
Types: with Eros standing on her arm 1043 with Eros stepping down from behind her shoulder 1044 face with flower in hair 710 with foot on tortoise 68$_1$ holding apple 491$_{0(6)}$ holding poppy and apple 1165$_1$ Kanachos 1165$_1$ on ladder 124$_3$ (?) Pheidias 68$_1$ terminal goddess 854 under arch 363
Identified with Artimpasa (Artimeasa, Argimpasa, Arippasa) 293$_0$
Associated with Hermes 146$_2$ 872$_{0(5)}$ 1043 Peitho 261 1044 (fig. 893) Tammuz (Adonis) 984$_1$
In relation to Adonis 293 552$_1$
Aphrodite, as ship's name 987$_0$
Aphroi (Africans) 693$_4$
Aphros, forefather of Aphroi
Genealogy: f. of Aphrodite by Astynome 693$_4$ 694$_0$ s. of Kronos by Philyra 695$_0$
Apia (Api), the Scythian Ge 293$_0$
Apidanos, river in Thessaly 1025
Apis
Cult: Egypt 942$_0$
Type: double bust (with Isis) 392

Apollo
Epithet: Delphicus 927_1
Associated with Hercules and Diana 59_0
In relation to Castor and Pollux 95 f. Diana 99 f.
Apollon
Cults: Achaeans (?) 458 Acharnai 163 Aigai in Aiolis 954_0 Aigina 184 Akraiphia 238_0 Alabanda 97_0 247_0 248_0 714_2 Amyklai 458 894_0 Anaphe 816_4 1066 Antiocheia in Chrysaoris (=Alabanda) 714_2 Antiocheia on the Orontes (?) 1192_5 Ardettos 1135 Argos 163 173_4 Athens 163 163_4 184 255 730_0 $875_{1(2)}$ 985_0 1121 Aulai 249_2 Axos 816_4 Babylonia (?) 456 Badinlar, in Phrygia 567 f. Bassai 405_3 Bilkon 948_0 Branchidai 920_0 Byzantion 167 f. Corinth 210_0 915_2 (?) 916_0 Crete 457 948_0 Daldeia 250 f. Daphne near Antiocheia on the Orontes 1188 Delos 223_3 249_2 452 ff. 854 Delphoi 457 839 1216 Didyma near Miletos 317 f. 317_2 Dorylaeion 281 Eleuthernai (Eleutherna) 456_7 $491_{0(6)}$ $492_{0(0)}$ Epidauros $487_{3(1)}$ Erythrai in Ionia 730_0 Eumeneia in Phrygia 571 970_0 Gortyna 723_0 731_0 Gryneia $489_{0(4)}$ Halikarnassos 163 Hiera in Lesbos $488_{0(2)}$ Hierapolis in Phrygia 567 Hierapytna 723_0 Mt Hymettos 897_5 Hyperboreoi 501 844 Illyria 458 Itanos 929_0 Kalymna $808_{0(11)}$ Karia 573_{10} 574_1 574_2 574_3 Katane 486_5 Kaulonia 1042 f. Keratia in Attike 237_0 Klaros $489_{0(4)}$ Knidos 729_0 Koloe 568 f. Korkyra 730_0 Kroton 237_0 Kypros 246_1 Lakonike 322 322_6 Larisa on the Caystrian Plain 958_0 Lebadeia 899_2 Mt Lepetymnos 832 Leukas 782 Lopta 971_2 Lykia 453 458 f. Lykoreia 901_2 902_0 Lyttos 723_0 934_0 Magnesia ad Maeandrum 249_2 948_0 Magnesia ad Sipylum 729_0 Magnesia in Thessaly 730_0 Makedonia 458 Cape Malea (Maleai) $488_{0(0)}$ Megalopolis 160_5 163 Megara 165_3 185 Messene 458 Miletos 237_0 250 255 457 486_5 1220 Mykonos 1092_2 Myrrhinous 730_0 Mytilene $488_{0(2)}$ Neapolis in Campania 486_5 Olbia $493_{0(7)}$ Olymos 586_2 Orchia (?) in Lakonike 439 Oropos (?) 1071 Panormos near Kyzikos $882_{0(0)}$ Patara 210 921_0 Peiraieus $487_{3(1)}$ Pergamon 729_0 Phlyeis 251 Praisos 731_0 Prasiai in Lakonike $487_{3(1)}$ Priansos 723_0 Mt Ptoïon 455 Rhegion 680 Rhithymna $492_{0(0)}$ Samos 223_3 Selinous $489_{0(0)}$ Skias in Arkadia (?) 439 Skythia 292_4 Sparta 255 246_1 $487_{3(1)}$ Stelai in Crete 731_0 Sybrita 731_0 Tarentum

Apollon (cont.)
1064 Tarsos 570 Tegea 163 Thera 920_0 921_0 Mt Thornax in Lakonike 893_2 Thrace 458 Thyateira 562 Tilphossa 439 Tralleis 958_9 Trikke $487_{3(1)}$ 1088 Troy 453 Tyana (?) 570
Epithets: ἄγριος 971_2 Ἀγνιεύς 163 f. 456_7 Ἀγνιεὺς Ἀλεξίκακος 163_4 Ἀγνιεὺς Προστατήριος Πατρῷος Πύθιος Κλάριος Παιωόνιος 163_4 Αἰγλήτης 816_4 Ἄκτιος 255 782 Ἀμάδοκος (?) 452 Ἀμυκλαῖος 255 ἄναξ 252_1 Ἀρχηγέτης 237_0 567 Ἀσγελάτας 1066 Ἀσκραῖος 255 486_5 ἄστρων ἡγεμών 255_3 Αὐλαείτης (Αὐλαΐτης, Αὐλίτης, Αὐλητής) 249_2 ἀφήτωρ 180 841 βακχεύς (?) 253_2 Βάκχος 253_3 Βιλκώνιος 948_0 βιοδώτης 252_0 Βοζηνός 568 ff. Βραγχιάτης 255 Γενέτωρ 223_3 Γοιτόσυρος 293_0 Γρύνειος 954_0 Δαφναῖος 265_0 1189_0 Δαφνηφόρος 265_0 Δαφνίτας 265_0 Δειραδιώτης 173_4 210_0 Δελφίνιος 189_8 205_1 230 237_0 456_7 Δήλιος 255 Διδυμαῖος 317 f. Διδυμεύς 317_2 1220 Διδύμων γενάρχης 317_2 Διονυσοδότης (less probably Διονυσόδοτος) 251_2 Δονάκτας (?) 249_3 Δοναστάς (?) 249_3 Δονητής (?) 249_3 Δρομαῖος 456_7 Δρύμαιος 486_5 Δρύμας 486_5 Ἑβδομαγενής 237_0 ἑβδομαγέτης 237_0 Ἑβδομεῖος 237_0 238_0 Εἰκάδιος 456 Ἑκάεργος 1042 ἑκατηβελέτης 1042 ἑκατηβόλος 1042 Ἑκατόμβαιος 1092_2 Ἕκατος 1042 Ἑκβάσιος 1180_4 ἑκηβόλος 1042 Ἐλευθέριος 97_0 ἐλπιδοδώτης 252_0 Ἐμβάσιος 1180_4 ἐνόλμιος, ἐνολμίς, ἔνολμος 209_2 ἐν Πάνδοις 729_0 Ἐπιβατήριος 1180_4 Ἐπικούριος 405_3 Ἐπόψιος 1130_7 Ἐρεθίμιος 630 εὔλυρος 253_3 ζάθεος 204_1 ζηλοδοτήρ (?) 204_1 252_0 ζηνοδοτήρ 204_1 252_0 ζηνόφρων 204_1 ζωογόνος 204_1 Θορνάκιος 893_2 Θύϊος 250 ἰήιος 246_1 Ἰσόστιμος 714_2 Καρινός 167 f. Κάρνειος 456_7 458 κισσεοχαίτης 246_1 κισσεύς 253_2 Κισσίος (less probably Κισσέος) 247_0 248_0 Κλάριος $489_{0(4)}$ 954_0 Κοροπαῖος 730_0 $871_{3(1)}$ Κόρυδος 458 Κουρίδιος 322_6 Κτίστης 98 κυνηγήτης 237_0 Λαιρμηνός (Λαρμηνός, Λαρθηνός, Λειμηνός, Λυρμηνός) 567 f. Λαόδοκος (?) 452 Λαρισηνός 958_0 Λάρριος 599 Λητοΐδης (Λητοΐδας) 455 $490_{0(5)}$ Λοξίας 204_1 Λύκειος 255 453 458 λυκηγενής 455_0 Λυκηγενής (?) 453 Λύκιος 453 729_0 902_0 Λυκωρεύς 901_2 Μαλέαρας (Μαλεάτης) $487_{3(1)}$ 1088 Μαλέαρας Σωτήρ $487_{3(1)}$ Μαλόεις $488_{0(2)}$ μάντις (?) 253_2 Μοιραγέτης 237_0 231 1137_0 (?) Μουσηγέτης 237_0 Μύλας or Μυλάντιος 260_0 Μύστης 250 f. Νόμιος 252 Νομήνιος 456 Νυμφηγέτης 237_0 ξυνοδοτήρ 252_0 ὁ ἐκ Λοπτῶν 971_2 ὁ προπάτωρ θεὸς Ἥλιος Πύθιος...Τυριμναῖος 562 Ὀρχιεύς 439

Apollon (cont.)
Παιάν 253_3 Παιών 223 Πατρῷος 255 730_0 1135 πλουτοδοτήρ 252_0 Προηγέτης 237_0 Προόψιος 897_5 Προστατήριος 163_4 Πτῴος 238_0 Πυθαεύς 458 893_2 Πύθιος 183 184_6 185 f. 223 228_3 233 240 255 457 731_0 816_4 929_0 1216 Πύτιος(=Πύθιος) 723_0 934_0 Σκιασήτης 439 Σμινθεύς 250_2 Σμίνθιος 255 Στυρακίτης $492_{0(0)}$ Σωτήρ $875_{1(2)}$ Ταρσεύς 569 f. 571 Τετράχειρ or Τετράχειρος 322_6 Τετράωτος 322 Τιλφούσιος 439 Τύριμνος 562 Ὑπερβόρειος 223 Ὑπέροχος (?) 452 φιλόδαφνος 253_3 Φοῖβος 234 Φύξιος 902_0 Χρηστήριος 954_0 χρυσάορος 716 χρυσάωρ 716 ψυχοδοτήρ 252_0 ὡρεσιδώτης 252_0
Festivals: birthday (Bysios (7) 236 Boedromia 237_0 Daphnephoria 455_8 Ebdomaia 237_0 first day of month 456 frequent in Asia Minor and islands, rare on Greek mainland 455 Hyakinthia 246_1 455_8 Karneia 237_0 455_8 Pyanopsia or Pyanepsia 237_0 seventh day of month 456 commemoration of Skephros 164_6 455_8 Thargelia 237_0 455_8 twentieth day of month 456
Rites: bay brought from Tempe to Delphoi 249_2 ἑβδομαῖον at Athens on seventh day of some month 237_0 first-fruits sent to Apollon Πύθιος every eight years 240 Hyperborean offerings brought to Delos 249_2 249_3 497 ff. paean 234 f. passes night in temple with prophetess 210 περφερέες 495_6 πυροφορήσας $487_{3(1)}$ sacrifice of asses 463 f. 843 sacrifice of a bull and ten lambs to Apollon Ἑκατόμβαιος 1092_2 sacrifices at Kroton on seventh day of month 237_0 sacrifices by thiasoi in Kypros 246_1 Spartan kings sacrifice on first and seventh days of every month 237_0 straps from hide of ox sacrificed to Apollon Τετράχειρ given as prizes 322_6 sword washed in water from the Kydnos 570 f. worshippers turn towards ground 256
Priests: ἱερεύς 562_2 ἱρεύς 322_6 νεωκόρος 199_2
Priestess: the Pythia 203 ff. 238 322_7 441 841 the Pythia as bride of Apollon 207 ff. thyiás 199_2 virgin 210_0
Worshippers: ἀρχίχορος καὶ ἱεροκάρυξ τῶν ἱερέων $488_{0(2)}$
Personated by boy 241_3 Nero 98_0 254 1128_0 Pythagoras 221 ff.
Myths: Anaphe 816_4 Anios 670 Aristaios 1042 (?) arranges the limbs of Dionysos or Zagreus 1031 arrival at Delphoi 262 ff. boiled in a caldron and pieced together again

Apollon (cont.)
225 born at Araxa 455 born in Arkadia 252 buries Dionysos at Delphoi 218 ff. carries off Kyrene 460_2 chases Hermes 1042 (?)
consorts with Aigle (Koronis) $488_{0(0)}$ Akakallis 218_0 Pythaïs 222 Themis 1217 contest with Marsyas 248_0 249_0 Cygnus 477_7 Daphne 265_0 460_2 486 Daphnis 1042 (?) destroys mice in Rhodes 250_2 Dryope 485 f. 486_5 exiled by Zeus to land of Hyperboreoi 484 493 Hyakinthos $491_{0(0)}$ 1042 (?) Hyperboreoi 459 ff. invents the art of playing flute and kithára 249_2 Kleinis 463_1 Koronis 210_0 Kyknos 477 Kyparissos 981_1 Makrobioi 500_4 Marpessa 439_{14} Molpadia 671 nursed by Leto 252 Orestes 453 1042 (?) Parthenos 671 Periphas 1121 f. purified by Chrysothemis 190_0 purified by Karmanor 190_0 Pylades 453 restores Dionysos 251_2 Rhoio 670 sends raven to get water 832_7 serves Admetos 240 a sevenmonths' child 237_0 sheds tears of amber 484 slain by Python and buried in Delphic tripod 221 ff. slays Hyakinthos with diskos 1156 slays Kyklopes or their sons 241_4 slays Python 217_2 239_0 taught by Athena to flute 249_2 Telephos 671 Trojan War 459 winters in Lykia 455
Metamorphosed into snake 486 tortoise 486
Genealogy: f. of Amphissos by Dryope 486 f. of Anios by Rhoio 670 f. of Asklepios 1077 1083 f. of Asklepios by Aigle (Koronis) $488_{0(0)}$ f. of Dryops 486_5 f. of Idmon 471 f. of Kentauros by Stilbe 1134 f. f. of Lapithes by Stilbe 684_2 1134 f. f. of Lykoros by Korykia 901_5 f. of Phylakides and Philandros by Akakallis 218_0 f. of Platon 237_0 f. of Pythagoras by Pythaïs 222 not ab initio the twin b. of Artemis 501 s. of Dionysos by Demeter 252 s. of Leto (Lato) 237_0 456 484 s. of Leto (Lato) by Zeus 453 s. of Silenos 221 252
Functions: ancestral god of Attic nobility 730_0 destiny 231 fire 234 flocks and herds 457 heaven, earth, underworld 256 f. lighting 816_4 lustration 1042 (?) mills 260_0 oracles 457 prophétes of Zeus 203_0 204_1 841 song 244_4 sun 338_4 457 495 1156 sun and moon (?) 318 tela (bow and arrows) 244_4 transition from sky-god (?) to sun-god 500
Etymology: 234_2 (α + πολύς) 484 500 (ἀπελλόν) 487 ff. 1219 f. ('apple'-god)

Apollon (cont.)
Attributes: agonistic urn 562 apple (?) 487 ff. 844 three apples $490_{0(5)}$ five apples $490_{0(5)}$ $491_{0(0)}$ arrow 1192_5 arrows 257 ball of resin (?) $492_{0(0)}$ bay 244_4 264_2 841 1219 bay-branch 186 203_0 207_0 562 bay-tree 486 844 bay-wreath 388 black-poplar 486 black-poplars 500 844 bow 202_1 1192_5 bow-case and quiver 160_0 car drawn by four winged horses 453_3 car drawn by swans 459 f. Charites 249_2 crow $490_{0(5)}$ diskos 1156 double axe 562 571 eagle 246_1 247_0 248_0 flutes 246 golden mitra 459 griffin 160_0 257 ivy-leaves 246 kálathos $493_{0(7)}$ kithára $882_{0(0)}$ lion 920_0 921_0 lyre 160_0 256 459 1219 Nike 246_1 oak-wreath 486_5 486 oil-flask $493_{0(7)}$ omphalós 1189_3 omphalós twined with snake $882_{0(0)}$ palm-branch 246_1 palms 262_5 pan-pipes 246 pomegranate (?) $493_{0(7)}$ poplar-trees (?) 485 ram 247_0 248_0 raven 160_0 571 scroll (?) 246_1 stone (?) $491_{0(6)}$ sword 570 f. 716 trident 570 f. tripod 160_0 193 ff. wreath 1219
Types: aniconic 169_2 archaic 'Apollon'-torso from Dyrrbachion 499_9 archaic statuette from Naxos $493_{0(7)}$ archer 459 with attributes of Zeus 246_1 Bryaxis (?) 921_0 in car drawn by swans 460_2 with Charites in left hand 249_2 with Charites in right hand 232_0 Dionysiac 244 246 ff. double bust (with Silenos) 388 erect with double axe and agonistic urn 562 erect with double axe and bay-branch 562 erect with double axe and raven 571 four-eared 322 322_6 four-handed 322_6 Gigantomachia 973_1 grasping deer 264_3 head in radiate circle $491_{0(6)}$ with himátion wrapped about his legs 203_0 Pheidias (?) 921_0 pillar 163 ff. 167 ff. pillar of light 1217 playing lyre 163_4 165_0 181 184 f. pyramid 168_1 radiate 562 riding on swan 460_2 seated on bay-trunk holding wreath or lyre 1219 seated on omphalós 207_0 1189_3 1192_5 seated on tripod 201 ff. 921_0 slaying Niobids 475_7 in solar chariot 562 square 160_5 164_7 standing by omphalós $882_{0(0)}$ standing by tripod 196 205_0 standing on throne 894_0 standing with phiále in right hand and kithára in left $882_{0(0)}$ standing with three Charites on his right hand 232_0 youthful 234 Identified with Asklepios 241_4 Chrysaor (?) 457 Dionysos 252 ff. Helios 164_1 562 568 Helios and Dionysos 253 f. Horos 252 255 Ianus 339_6 Lairbenos 566 ff. Lairmenos 566 ff.

Apollon (cont.)
Liber 244_4 Mithras 250 Oitosyros (Goitosyros, Gongosyros) 293_0 Sol and Liber Pater 256 f. Tyrimnos 561 f. Velchanos 948_0
Assimilated to Dionysos 244 246 ff. Zeus 246_1
Associated with Artemis 164_6 181 f. $488_{0(2)}$ 586_2 Artemis and Leto (see Leto and Artemis) Asklepios $487_{3(1)}$ Asklepios Σωτήρ $487_{3(1)}$ Azosioi Theoi $487_{3(1)}$ Dionysos 164 233 ff. Herakles 241_1 Leto 567 Leto and Artemis 202_1 203_0 317_2 Maenads 461_0 Maleates $487_{3(1)}$ Satyroi 461_0 Zeus 317 317_2 Zeus and Athena 458 1094_0 Zeus, Athena, Herakles $875_{1(2)}$ Zeus and Themis 730_0
Compared with Dionysos 252 Zeus 201 ff.
In relation to Artemis 452 ff. Dionysos 267 Erinys 1102_7 Pythagoras 223_1 Zeus 267 730_0
Supersedes Dionysos 243 ff. 839 841 Rhea 921_0 Zeus 816 902_0
Superseded by Helios 730_0
—— ἀποδημίαι and ἐπιδημίαι of 233 ff. 238_2 as migratory god 459 cave of, at Aulai near Magnesia ad Maeandrum 249_2 epiphanies of 455 f. epithets of, often derived from place-names 455 five Apollons 252 gold statue of 220 in the plural 252_3 1219 provenance of 453 ff. 843 soul of 1042 tomb of 221 225 wrath of 1042 (?)
Apollonia in Aitolia 499
Apollonia in Akarnania 499
Apollonia in Illyria
Cults: Apollon (?) 499_9 Helios 485 Nymphs (? Heliades) 485 —— coins of 161 ff. 485 499 Nymphaion at 485
Apollonia in Makedonia 500
Apollonia in Thrace 500
Apollonia, later name of Eleuthernai $492_{0(0)}$
Apollonia on Mt Athos 500
Apollonia (Tripolis) in Lydia
Cult: youthful hero (?) on horseback bearing double axe 563
—— coins of 563
Apolloniatis, a Tegeate tribe 1148 1149_0
Apollonios of Tyana 569_4
Aprospatheia 867
Apsinthos
Cult: Dionysos Πλείστωρος (?) 270
Apsyrtos 1097_2
Aptereoi 190_0
Apulia, persistence of 'Minoan' motifs in 541 ff.
Apulum
Cults: Glykon 1084 Iupiter O(ptimus) M(aximus) Tavianus 754_1
Aquarius 43_4 430_0 (?) 430_1 (?) 664_1 (?)

Aquila 477_8 933_0 938_0
Aquileia in Venetia
Cults: Iupiter Ambisagrus 842 Iupiter Dianus 328 842 Iupiter Optimus Maximus Co(nservator) et Ambisagrus 328
Aquincum
Cult: Iuno Caelestis 68_2
Aquitania
Cult: Fagus 402_1
Aquites 471
Ara 664_1
Arabia
Cults: Azizos and Monimos 428 f. Zeus (?) 1224
—— coins of 1224
Arachnaion, Mt
Cults: Hera 894_1 Zeus 894_1
Arachova 505_6 993_2
Arai 1101
Arantides 1101 1102_4
Aratos, s. of Asklepios (not Kleinias) by Aristodama 1082
Araxa 455
Arbios, Mt 945_2
Arbios, Mt
Cult: Zeus Ἄρβιος 945_2 946_0
Etymology: 946_0
Arbor intrat 303_2
Arcadians, common hearth of, at Tegea 1148 See also Arkadia
Archelaos (=Hades) 1168_5(?)
Archemoros 245_5 $490_{0(5)}$
Archonides, head of, consulted by Kleomenes 290_0
Ardettos
Cults: Apollon Πατρῷος 1135 Demeter 1135 Zeus Βασιλεύς 1135
Rite: oath of dikastaí 730_0
Areimanios or Areimanes See Ahriman
Areion 892_4
Areïos the Argonaut 1072
Ares
Cults: Athens 729_0 Gortyna 723_0 Hierapytna 723_0 Karmania 464 Kyaneai 101_1 Lyttos 723_0 Magnesia ad Sipylum 729_0 Olympia (?) 706_5 Pergamon 729_0 955_0 Priansos 723_0 Skythia 292_4 547_3 Smyrna 729_0 Sparta 729_0
Epithets: Θοῦρος $876_{0(8)}$ κελαινεγχής 438 Μέγας 101_1
Rites: human sacrifice 548_0 sacrifice of asses 464 yearly sacrifice of sheep and horses 548_0
Myth: Kaldene 973_1
Genealogy: f. of Minyas 1150_5 f. of Solymos by Kaldene d. of Pisias (Pisidēs?) 973_1
Attributes: chariot 436_1 sword 1225
Type: iron scimitar 548_0
Identified with Azizos 428 430 Zeus and Poseidon 1225 Ziu 50
In relation to Dionysos 565_2
—— horses of 436_1
Ares, the planet
Myth: slays the giant Kaukasos 694_0
Identified with Thouros and Baal or Bel 694_0
Arete
Cult: Philadelpheia in Lydia 1229
Identified with Athena 1029
Argaios, Mt 977_1 ff.
Cults: Dioskouroi 980_0 emperor (?) 978_9 980_0 Sarapis (?) 978_0 Zeus 980_0
Etymology: 977_1
—— eagle on 978_9 980_0 flanked by radiate pillars 980_0 held by Sarapis 978_0 hound chasing goat or stag on 978_0 image of, on altar 978_9 image of, as head-dress 978_0 image of, within temple 978_9 oath by 978_0 radiate figure on 978_9 980_0 rock-cut habitations on 978_0 snake guards plant on 977_1 980_0 surmounted by Egyptian symbol (lotos?) 976_0
See also Kaisareia in Kappadokia
Argarizon, Mt See Gerizim, Mt
Arge See Hekaerge
Argenidas, relief of 1062 ff.
Arges 828 1023
Argimpasa See Artimpasa
Argo, the constellation 477_8
Argonauts
Epithet: Μανύαι 1150_5
Myths: Eridanos 484 Heliades 484 Idmon 471
Argos
Cults: Aphrodite Ἀκρία 1156_5 Apollon Ἀγυιεύς 163 Apollon Δειραδιώτης 173_4 Artemis 1144_2 Artemis Ἀκρία 1156_5 Athena 892_5 893_0 1144_2 Athena Ἀκρία 1156_5 Athena Ὀξυδερκής or Ὀξυδερκώ 502_2 Epidotas 321_1 Hera 290_0 515 1144_2 Hera Ἀκρία 1156_5 Leto (Lato) Ἀσιᾶτις 455 pillars set up by Danaos (?) 1144_2 Zeus 1230 Zeus Ἀφέσιος 179 1144_2 Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(12)}$ Zeus Λαρισαῖος 892_5 893_0 1144_2 Zeus Λαρισσεύς 1144_2 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1143 f. Zeus Μηχανεύς 1144_2 Zeus Νέμειος 1143_5 Zeus Σωτήρ 1144_2 Zeus Τέτιος 164_5 164_4 1144_2 Zeus Ὕψιστος $878_{0(4)}$ 1144_2 Zeus Φαλακρός 874_2 893_1 1099_0 1144_2 Zeus Φύξιος 1144_2 Zeus with three eyes 892_5 1144_2
Myths: Amphilochos $489_{0(4)}$ Areïos 1072 Danaos 1144_2 Pelasgos 1144_2 Pelopidai 956_2 957_0 —— coins of 1079 1143 omphalós at 173
Argos, watcher of Io
Myths: Nemea 892_4 slain by Hermes 379 f.
Function: sky 379
Attributes: club 380 lion-skin (?) 380 panther-skin 380 pétasos 380 386
Types: bifrontal 341_0 379 f. Janiform

Argos, watcher of Io (cont.)
(bearded + beardless) 387 with numerous eyes 380
Compared with Zeus 379
Ariadne
Cult: Mt Aigaion (?) 927_0
Myth: Daidalos 600 f.
Attributes: ivy-wreath 390 (?) sceptre 788_0 (?)
Type: double bust (with Dionysos) 390 (?) 391 392_1 (?)
Associated with Dionysos 245_0 245_5 261 390 (?) 391 661 (?)
Aricia
Cults: Diana 420_1 Diana Nemorensis 147
Aries 16_1 103_0 664_1
Arignote 1024
Arima
Myth: Typhon (Typhoeus) 826 909_0
Arimian Cave 449_0
Arippasa See Artimpasa
Aristaios
Cult: Arkadia 1112_6
Myth: Apollon 1042 (?)
In relation to Zeus 1112_6
Ariste Chthonia (=Hekate) $1114_{0(4)}$
Aristodama, m. of Aratos by Asklepios (not Kleinias) 1082
Aristodemos 436
Aristogeiton 1172
Aristomenes sacrifices 300 persons to Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 891_0
Aristonous of Aigina 740 1222
Aristophanes on Zeus 2
Aristophanes, the painter 902_2 (?)
Aristotle 805_6
Arkadia
Cults: Aristaios 1112_6 Artemis 412 Kallisto $1114_{0(6)}$ Zeus Ἐρεχθεύς 793 Zeus Λύκαιος 760 f. 849
Myths: Arkas 228_5 birth of Apollon Νόμιος 252
—— coins of 757 760 849
Arkas 212 228_5 964_3 1148
Arkeisios
Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Euryodeia (Eurydia) 1152_4
Arkesilaos (?) 1156
Arkesine
Cults: Dionysos κισσοκόμας 246_1 Muses 1157_9 Zeus Ἀναδώτης 1157_0 Zeus Ἀποτρόπαιος 1157_9 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1156 Zeus Σωτήρ 1156_{13} Zeus Τέλειος 1156_{13}
Arkesion, a cave on Mt Ide in Crete
Myth: Kouretes hide from Kronos 549_1 939_0
Etymology: 939_0
—— to be identified with the Idaean Cave, not with the Kamares grotto 939_0
Arkesios (?) or Arkeisios (?) 1156
Armenios 54 114
Arnaia, former name of Penelope 691 f.
Arnakia, former name of Penelope 691 f.
Arne in Boiotia, apsidal temple of 900_0
Arne, a spring near Mantineia 692
Arnea (?) See Arnaia
Arnepolis (? in Mesopotamia)
Cult: Herakles 469_1
Arpi, coins of 1159_1
Arsalos 972_0
Arsinoe, d. of Leukippos 1089
Arsinoe ii
Cult: Alexandreia 1216
—— personates Tyche 1216 wears horn of Zeus Ἄμμων 778_0 1136_4
Arsippos 1089
Arslan Apa, in Phrygia
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος (=Zeus Βέννιος or Βεννεύς) $883_{0(0)}$ 969_3
Artemiche, d. of Kleinis 463_1
Artemis
Cults: Achna 157_1 Akarnania 412 Apameia in Phrygia 408_0 Argos 1144_2 1156_5 Arkadia 412 Athens 115_2 163_4 410_1 Delos 452 ff. 501 1227 Delphoi 1216 Divlit near Koloë 975_0 Eleuthernai $492_{0(0)}$ Ephesos 405 ff. 962_2 1082 Epidauros 413_7 Geraistos 906_3 Gortyna 723_0 Halikarnassos 164_8 Heleia 931_0 Hiera in Lesbos $488_{0(2)}$ Hierapytna 723_0 Hittites (?) 410_1 Hyperboreoi (?) 501 Kadoi 408_0 Korkyra 457 Mt Koryphon (Koryphaion) 869_1 Kyrene 1177_3 Lousoi 646 Lykia 681_1 Lyttos 934_0 Magnesia ad Sipylum 729_0 Magnesia in Thessaly 730_0 Miletos 410_1 Mounychia 115 Myra (?) 681_1 Olymos 586_2 Pagai, port of Megara (?) $488_{0(3)}$ Paionia 500 Panormos near Kyzikos $881_{0(21)}$ Pergamon 729_0 955_0 Pogla (?) 363 Priansos 723_0 Rhegion 680 Sardeis 1227 f. Smyrna 729_0 Sparta 421 f. 457 640_0 647 Stymphalos 692 Syracuse 1140 Thebes in Boiotia 412 Thrace 411 500 f. Troizen 413 ff. Troy 453
Epithets: Ἀγροτέρα 1177_3 Ἀκρία 1156_5 Ἀναείτις (Ἀναεῖτις?) 975_0 Ἄργη (?) 452 Βασίλεια 495 500 f. Βολοσία 906_3 Βούσβατος (See Bousbatos) Βραυρωνία 228_4 Δίκτυννα 414_0 δρυμονίη 412_4 Ἐκαέργη 452 Ἐκβατηρία 1180_4 Ἐλευθέρα 681_1 ἐν ὄρεσι δρυογόνοισι κόραν...ἀγροτέραν 412_5 Εὐκλεια 118_3 Ἐφεσία 405 ff. 962_2 1220 ἣ κατέχεις ὀρέων δρυμούς 412_4 ἰοχέαιρα 405_3 ἱπποσόα 465 501 Ἰωλκία 730_0 $871_{3(1)}$ Καλλίστη 228_4 Λαφρία 599 Λοχία 183 Λυαία 1140_3 Λυγοδέσμα 421_5 μεγάλη 963_0 Ὀρθία 421 f. 501 (?) 640_0 647 Ὀρθωσία 422_1 Περγαία 363 (?) Πηνελόπη (?) 691 f. Σαρωνία 413_7 414_0 Σαρωνίς 413 417 Στυμφαλία 692 Σώτειρα $488_{0(3)}$ Ταυροπόλος 729_0 955_0 1214 (?) Φακελῖτις or Φακελίνη 680 Φωσφόρος 115

Artemis (cont.)
Χιτώνη 409 410_1 Χιτωνία 410_1 χρυσάορος 716 Ὦπις 452
Festivals: Marathon (Boedromion 6) 854 Saronia 413_7
Rites: βωμονίκαι 421_3 contest of rustic singers wearing stag-horns 1140 διαμαστίγωσις 421_3 wheaten straw used in sacrifice by women of Thrace and Paionia 500 f.
Priestess: Kallisto 228_4 pursues a man as Artemis pursued Leimon 164_6 virgin 210_0
Worshippers: ἀρχίχορος καὶ λεροκάρυξ τῶν ἱερέων $488_{0(2)}$
Myths: Astrabakos and Alopekos 421 Atalante 412 born at Araxa 455 born at Ortygia near Ephesos 962_2 Bouphagos 894_0 Hippolytos 393 Hyperboreoi (?) 501_5 Kallisto 228_5 Kleinis 463_1 Orestes 421_3 680 Saron 413 f. wooed by Otos 130
Metamorphosed into doe (?) 413_3
Genealogy: d. of Demeter 1032 d. of Dionysos by Demeter 252 d. of Leto (Lato) 456 465 501 d. of Zeus 164_8 342_0 d. of Zeus by Leto (Lato) 453 not ab initio the twin sister of Apollon 501
Functions: fertility 457 growth 421 f. moon 854 motherhood 410_0 nature 457 vegetation 411 younger form of Anatolian mother-goddess 501 844
Etymology: 1220
Attributes: bee 407_0 birds (?) 457 bow 202_1 453_3 bull 1214 (?) crab 407_0 crown 147_1 doves (?) 457 fawn 152_0 griffin 406_0 f. horned doe 854 lion 406_0 f. lions (?) 457 two lionesses 1227 mountains (?) 457 necklace of acorns 405 407_0 410_0 ox 407_0 phiále $882_{0(0)}$ quiver 453_3 ram (?) $488_{0(3)}$ rosette 407_0 Skylla 407_0 snakes (?) 457 Sphinx 407_0 409_0 (?) stag 406_0 ff. 453_3 sword 716 torch 412 $882_{0(0)}$ 1214 (?) torches $488_{0(3)}$ (?) Victories 407_0 409_0 wreath of flowers 405 407_0
Types: archaistic 152_0 Διοπετές 963_0 Ἐφεσία not descended from πότνια θηρῶν 410_0 with fillets hanging from hands 409_0 f. with fillets tethering hands 408_0 f. filling phiále of Apollon 181 fire 115_2 holding torches 187_4 (?) many-breasted 406_0 ff. multimammia 410_0 πολύμαστος 410_0 riding horned doe 854 shooting arrow 473 $492_{0(0)}$ slaying Niobids 475_7 standing with phiále in right hand and torch in left $882_{0(0)}$ with temple on head 406_0 ff.
Identified with Bendis 501 Boubastis 252 Bousbatos 501_3 Hekate 1029 1032
Associated with Apollon 164_6 181 f. $488_{0(2)}$ 586_2 Apollon and Leto 317_2

Artemis (cont.)
Asklepios 1082 Hippolytos 149 Zeus and Athena 1144_2
In relation to Apollon 452 ff. bear 680 Hippolytos 414 417 Leto 501 Saron 413 f.
Superseded by Zeus 1220
—— effigy of, carved on trees near Thebes 412 elm-tree of 405_3 image of, made from fruitful oak-tree 409 f. image of, set up beneath oak-tree 405 oak-tree of 405 ff. provenance of 453 ff. sacred grove of 975_0
Artemision in Euboia 854
Artimeasa See Artimpasa
Artimpasa (Artimeasa, Argimpasa, Aripassa), the Scythian Aphrodite Οὐρανία 293_0
Artimuk (=Artemis)
Cult: Sardeis 1227 f.
Epithet: Ibšimeis (=Ἐφεσία ?) 1227
Arvi, 'Minoan' settlement at 945_2 946_0
Arvi, the cleft at 945_2
Aschlapios (sc. Asklepios) 1085
Ashur, the god
Attributes: flowers (?) 771_0 lightnings (?) 770_2
Asia personified 854
Askalaphos
Genealogy: descended from Aiolos 1088
Askalpios (sc. Asklepios) 1085
Asklapios (sc. Asklepios) 1085 1088
Asklepieion at Trikke 1088
Asklepios
Cults: Ainos 1079 Anchialos 1079 Athens 1065 1078 Bizye 1079 Bononia 1085 Delos 1088 Epidauros 413_7 1076 ff. 1085 1177 f. Epidauros Limera 1082 Gortyna 1085 Gortys 1090 Herakleia Salbake 1080 Kos 1088 Kyllene 1078 Lakonike 1085 Lebena 1082 Mantineia 1078 Megalopolis 1090 Miletos 1228 Mytilene 259_0 1079 Neapolis in Samaria 1080 Orchomenos in Boiotia 1085 Panamara 1066 Peiraieus $487_{3(1)}$ 1105 1107_5 (?) 1107_6 (?) 1173 Pergamon 954_0 956_0 1077 1079 f. Phlious 1090 Rome 1088 1090 Serdike 1079 Sikyon 1080 f. 1082 1090 Sparta 1085 Thalamai 1085 Thelpousa 1090 Trikke 1079 1088 Troizen 1085
Epithets: ἀνακ 1088 βασιλεύς 1088 δεύτερος 1089 Ζεὺς Τέλειος 1076 f. 1089 ἠπιόδωρος 1086 ἠπιοδώτης 1086 ἤπιος 1086 ἠπιόφρων 1086 ἰητὴρ θεῶν... κλειτός 954_0 ἰητὴρ νόσων ... λυγρῶν 954_0 Καῖσαρ (=Claudius) 1088 Παιήων 954_0 Σωτὴρ $487_{3(1)}$ 956_0 1076 f. Τελεσφόρος (?) 1089 τρίτος 1089
Oracles: 1083 f.
Rites: incubation 1082 preliminary sacrifice to Apollon Μαλεάτας 1088

Asklepios (cont.)
πυροφορεῖν 413_7 1076 sacrifice of three-year-old ox 287_2 954_0
Priest: Alexandros of Abonou Teichos 1083 ff.
Personated by Claudius 1088
Myths: buried in Arkadia 1089 buried in Epidauros 1089 buried at Kynosoura in Lakonike 1088 f. Ophiüchus 1087 raises dead at Delphoi 241_4 raises Glaukos from dead 1087 raises Hippolytos from dead 394_2 1087 rears his snake on Mt Pelion 1087 slain by Zeus at Delphoi 241_4 struck by thunderbolt 23 f.
Metamorphosed into snake 1082 ff.
Genealogy: descended from Aiolos 1088 f. of Aratos by Aristodama (w. of Kleinias) 1082 h. of Epione (Epio) 1086 s. of Aigle 1086 s. of Apollon 1077 1083 s. of Apollon by Aigla (Koronis) $488_{0\,(i)}$ s. of Arsippos by Arsinoe d. of Leukippos 1089 s. of Isohys by Koronis 1089 s. of Koronis 833_0
Function: healing 127 954_0
Etymology: 1085 ff.
Attributes: dog 1079 globe 1082 goose 1079 human-headed or lion-headed snake (Glykon or Khnemu) 1084 Nike 1080 pine-cone 1080 f. ram's-head 1080 raven (?) 1084 sceptre 1079 snake 1077 1079 1111 snake coiled round sceptre 1080 snake coiled round staff 1075 1082 wreath 1076 ff.
Types: Alkamenes 1078 bearded 1078 beardless 1080 1090 infant 1090 on couch, feeding snake 1077 Kalamis 1080 f. Phyromachos 1079 seated 1078 ff. seated with goose in right hand and sceptre in left 1079 seated with pine-cone in right hand and snake round sceptre in left 1080 standing 1078 1084 standing with serpent-staff in right hand and Nike in left 1082 Thrasymedes of Paros 1078 f. with sceptre and pine-cone 1081 Xenophilos and Straton 1079
Identified with Apollon 241_4 Ophiouchos 241_4 Zeus 1076 ff.
Assimilated to Zeus 1078 ff.
Associated with Apollon Μαλεάτας $487_{3\,(i)}$ Artemis 1082 Herakles 241_4 Hygieia and Telesphoros 1078 Telesphoros 1082
Compared with Herakles 241_4 Trophonios 1075
Contrasted with Zeus 1081 f.
In relation to Zeus Φίλιος 1178 —— grave of 1088 f. underground ádyton of 1088 variant forms of the name 1085 f.
Askles 1086
Asopos, the river 898_6
Asopos, the river-god 898_6 1151_3
Assklepios (sc. Asklepios) 1085
Assos
Cults: (Athena) Παρθένος 728_0 Octavianus 728_0 Zeus Ὁμονῶος 857_6 Zeus Σωτήρ 728_0
Assyria
Cult: Baal or Bel 694_0
Assyrioi (= Syrioi)
Cult: Adonis 296_4
—— tattooed 123_0
Astakos, s. of Poseidon 665_3
Astakos in Akarnania 666_0
Astakos in Bithynia, coins of 665_3
Astarte
Cult: Chytroi 157_1
Type: riding lion (?) 869_0
Asterioi 663
Asterion 663
Astrabakos 421
Astraios 230
Astrapai
Cult: Batbos 827
Astrape, personification of lightning 828 851
Astros $1145_{1\,(b)}$
Astyagyia 1122
Astynome, m. of Aphrodite 693_4 694_0
Astyoche, w. of Telephos 281_4 1184_3
Ataburus 588_1
Atabyrion, Mt, in Rhodes
Cults: Athena (?) 923_0 Zeus Ἀταβύριος 922_5 923_0 924_0 925_0
Myths: Althaimenes 923_0 Apemosyne 923_0 Katreus 923_0
Atabyrion, Mt, in Sicily See Agrigentum
Atabyris (Tabyris) See Atabyrion, Mt, in Rhodes
Atalante
Myth: dedicates oak to Artemis in Arkadia 412
Ate 1099_2 1100_0
Atella, coins of $831_{1\,(2)}$
Athamas
Myths: founds Halos 904_1 golden ram 899_1 plots death of Phrixos 904_1
Genealogy: h. of Ino 904_1 s. of Aiolos and f. of Phrixos 904_1
—— eldest descendant of, must never enter Prytaneion 904_1
Athanaïstai 925_0
Athaneatis, a Tegeate tribe 1148 cp. 1149_0
Athena
Cults: Achaeans (?) 458 Agrigentum 910_1 Aliphera (?) 782 Alopeke 1115 Antiocheia on the Orontes 1197 Argos 502_2 892_5 893_0 1144_2 1156_5 Assos 728_0 Mt Atabyrion in Rhodes (?) 923_0 Athens 259_0 729_0 730_0 757 $875_{1\,(2)}$ 922_0 944_0 1147 1169_4 1230 Boiotia 731_0 Chersonesos Taurike 729_0 Delos 919_0 920_0 921_0 922_0 Delphoi 231 Eilenia 625

Athena (cont.)
Elateia in Phokis 1158$_{10}$ Elis 291$_0$ Emesa 814$_3$ Epidauros 502$_2$ Erythrai in Ionia 1157$_0$ Gonnoi 870$_0$ Gortyna 723$_0$ 731$_0$ Heleia 931$_0$ Hierapytna 723$_0$ Ilion 950$_0$ Itanos 929$_0$ Kolonos 1152$_5$ Mt Kynthos 919$_0$ 920$_0$ 921$_0$ 922$_0$ Larisa at Argos 892$_5$ 893$_0$ Larissa in Thessaly 1155 Lindos 346$_0$ 923$_0$ 925$_0$ Lyttos 723$_0$ Magnesia ad Sipylum 729$_0$ Megalopolis 164$_7$ Olympos in Lykia 972$_1$ Ouxenton (?) 386$_1$ Oxyrhynchite nome 625 Paros 922$_0$ Pergamon 287$_2$ 729$_0$ 882$_{0(0)}$ 954$_0$ 955$_0$ Phlyeis 1066 Phokis 731$_0$ Praisos 731$_0$ Priansos 723$_0$ Rhodes (?) 923$_0$ Selinous 489$_{0(0)}$ Skythia 925$_0$ Smyrna 729$_0$ Sparta 261$_0$ 502$_2$ 729$_0$ 739$_1$ 1101$_3$ Stelai in Crete 731$_0$ Sybrita 731$_0$ Tegea 593 f. 1147 Tralleis 958$_0$ Troizen 416$_3$

Epithets: ἀγνή 728$_0$ Ἀκρία 1156$_5$ Ἀλέα 593 f. 1147 Ἀμβουλία 261$_0$ Ἀποτροπαία 1157$_0$ Ἀρεία 729$_0$ 955$_0$ ἀτρυτώνη 954$_0$ Βαλενίκη 833$_7$ Βελενίκη 833$_7$ Βελονίκη 833$_7$ Βουλαία 259$_0$ caesia 503$_0$ γλαυκῶπις 502$_2$ 954$_0$ γοργῶπις 502$_2$ Ἐργάνη 164$_7$ ἡγεμὼν τῶν Κουρήτων 1029 Ἰλιάς 950$_0$ Κραναία 1158$_{10}$ Κτησία 1065 Κυνθία 919$_0$ 920$_0$ 921$_0$ 922$_0$ Λυδία 925$_0$ Νικηφόρος 287$_2$ 955$_0$ Ξενία 1101$_3$ ὀβριμοδερκής 502$_2$ Ὁμολωΐς 901$_0$ Ὀξυδέρκα 502$_2$ Ὀξυδερκής or Ὀξυδερκώ 502$_2$ Ὁπλοσμία 290$_0$ 291$_0$ Ὀπτιλέτις or Ὀπτιλία 502$_2$ Ὀφθαλμῖτις 502$_2$ Παλλάς 1031 1130$_1$ Παρθένος 728$_0$ 729$_0$ 757 πάτριος 728$_0$ πολεμηδόκος 954$_0$ Πολιάς 723$_0$ 870$_0$ 923$_0$ 929$_0$ 1147 Πολιοῦχος 731$_0$ 1152$_5$ Προναία 231 Πτιλλία (See Ὀπτιλία) quarta 869$_1$ Σαλμωνία 728$_0$ Σθενιάς 416$_3$ Σώτειρα 1169$_4$ τετάρτη (See quarta) Τιθρωνή 1066 Τριτογένεια 954$_0$ Τριτώνη (?) 1066 Ὑπάτη 875$_{1(2)}$ Φρατρία 730$_0$ Χαλκίοικος 739$_1$ Ὡλερία 723$_0$

Festival: Panathenaia 1121$_0$

Rites: πέπλος at Athens 1136 πέπλος at Tegea 1148 sacrifice of cow 902$_2$ sacrifice of two-year-old heifer 287$_2$ 954$_0$

Priests: boy at Tegea 1147 ζακόρος 921$_0$ ἱερεύς 921$_0$ κλειδοῦχος 921$_0$

Priestess: virgin 210$_0$

Personated by Demetrios Poliorketes (?) 1136$_4$ Helene, consort of Simon Magus 726$_0$

Myths: Aleos 1147 birth from head of Zeus 709 721$_2$ 753$_3$ 785 1029 Epeios 625 Kepheus s. of Aleos 1148 Medousa 1148 Orestes 1098$_4$ puts on chitôn of Zeus 744$_4$ rescues the heart of Dionysos or Zagreus 1031 Sterope, d. of Kepheus 1147$_{11}$

Athena (cont.)
teaches Apollon to flute 249$_2$ teaches Kouretes to dance 1029

Genealogy: d. of Brontaios 833$_7$ d. of Bronteas 833$_7$ d. of Zeus by Koryphe 869$_1$ (cp. i. 155)

Functions: daneing 1029 second self of Zeus 502$_2$ spinning 66$_0$ 1029 virtue of the leading gods 1029 weaving 66$_0$ 1029 wisdom of the creator 1029

Attributes: aigis 903$_9$ chariot 721$_2$ couch 1147 double axe 625 f. 847 helmet 90$^3_0$ lance 794$_0$ owl 955$_0$ snakes 1111 spear 908$_3$ sword 713 716

Types: bearing Nike and double axe 625 birth from head of Zeus 709–753$_3$ 785 in crested Corinthian helmet 162$_1$ Διοτρεὲς Παλλάδιον 963$_0$ with double axe 625 f. Gigantomachy 713 introduction of Herakles to Olympos 735 ff. Janiform (?) 386$_1$ Myron 1078 spears Enkelados 777$_2$ square 164$_7$

Identified with Arete 1029 Tefênet 626$_0$

Associated with Hephaistos 1137 Zeus 259$_0$ 920$_0$ 923$_0$ 955$_0$ 1101$_3$ Zeus and Apollon 458 1094$_3$ Zeus and Artemis 1144$_2$ Zeus and Hera (= Capitoline triad) 319$_7$ Zeus and Herakles 1078 Zeus, Herakles, Apollon 875$_{1(2)}$ Zeus Ἀραβύριος and Dionysos 925$_0$ Zeus Μιλίχιος and Ge 1115 Zeus Σαβάζιος 287$_2$ Zeus Σωτήρ 1169$_4$

In relation to Cretan mother-goddess 625 Erikepaios (Erikapaios) 1032 Gorgon 502$_2$

Supersedes 'Minoan' goddess (?) 922$_0$

Superseded by St Maria de' Grieci 910$_1$

Athens

Cults: Acheloios 1092$_3$ 1117 1118 Agathe Tyche 1125$_1$ 1129$_0$ Agathos Daimon 1125$_1$ Agathos Deos (sic) 985$_0$ Agathos Theos 1129$_0$ Agnostos Theos 942$_0$ Anaktes 1135$_4$ Aphrodite Οὐρανία 985$_0$ Aphrodite Ψίθυρος 1043 Apollon 730$_0$ 985$_0$ 1121 Apollon Ἀγυιεύς 163 Apollon Ἀγυιεὺς Ἀλεξίκακος 163$_4$ Apollon Ἀγυιεὺς Προστατήριος Πατρῷος Πύθιος Κλάριος Πανιώνιος 163$_4$ Apollon Πατρῷος 255 730$_0$ Apollon Προστατήριος 163$_4$ Apollon Σωτήρ 875$_{1(2)}$ Ares 729$_0$ Artemis 163$_4$ Artemis Φωσφόρος 115$_2$ Artemis Χιτώνη (?) 410$_1$ Asklepios 1065 1078 Athena 729$_0$ 730$_0$ 922$_0$ 944$_0$ 1230 Athena Ἀρεία 729$_0$ Athena Βουλαία 259$_0$ Athena Παρθένος 757 Athena Πολιάς 1147 Athena Σώτειρα 1169$_4$ Athena Φρατρία 730$_0$ Athena Ὑπάτη 875$_{1(2)}$ Bendis 1032 f. Demeter 729$_0$ 730$_0$ Dionysos 985$_0$ Dionysos Μελπόμενος 245$_5$ Dioskouroi 1135$_4$ Erechtheus

Athens (cont.)
793 f. Eros Ψίθυρος 1043 Ge 729_0 Hadrian 1120_0 1121_0 Harpokrates 985_0 Helios 729_0 1114 Hera 1119_4 Herakles 163_4 $875_{1(2)}$ 1116 f. Hermes 1117 Hermes Καταιβάτης 14 Hermes Χθόνιος 14 Hermes Ψιθυριστής 1043 Heroës 1123 Hestia Βουλαία 259_0 Horos 985_0 Isis Ταποσειριάς 985_0 Kallirrhoe, d. of Acheloios 1117 (?) Kronos 554_2 Leto 163_4 St Marina 1114 Meter ἐν Ἄγρας 1119_0 1142_3 (?) Moirai 231_8 Mother of the gods 985_0 Nymphs 1118 Παναγία εἰς τὴν Πέτραν 1119_0 Philia 1163 St Photeine 1116 Poseidon 729_0 730_0 Psithyros the hero 1044 (Sarapis) ἐν Κανώπῳ 985_0 ἡ ὑπεραγία Θεοτόκος 1119_4 Tyche Ἀγαθή 1163 Zeus 729_0 730_0 817 1229 Zeus Ἀγαμέμνων (?) 1061 Zeus Ἀστραπαῖος 815 Zeus Βασιλεύς 730_0 Zeus Βουλαῖος 259_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 1135_4 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος (=Domitian) 97_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος (=Hadrian) 98_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος Ἀντωνῖνος Σωτὴρ Ὀλύμπιος (?) (=Antoninus Pius) 101_1 Zeus Ἑξακεστήρ 1093_1 Zeus Ἐπιτέλειος Φίλιος 1163 Zeus Ἐπόψιος 1121 1123 Zeus Ἐρεχθεύς 793 Zeus Ἑρκεῖος 730_0 Zeus Ἱκέσιος 1093_1 Zeus Καθάρσιος 1093_1 1100_1 Zeus Κάσιος 985_0 Zeus Καταιβάτης 20 f. Zeus Κήπαιος (Κηναῖος) 903_0 Zeus Κτήσιος 1065 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1091 f. 1103 1114 ff. 1121 1123 1149 1151 1161 Zeus Μοιραγέτης 231_8 Zeus Μόριος 20 Zeus Νάιος 1117 (?) Zeus Ξένιος 1229 Zeus Ὀλόμπιος 20 1078 1118 1123 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος (=Hadrian) (?) 959_0 Zeus Πανελλήνιος 1119_4 1120_0 Zeus Πατρῷος 111_0 Zeus Πολιεύς 897_2 Zeus Στράτιος 976_0 Zeus Σωτήρ 1121 1123 1147 1169 Zeus Τέλειος 1123 1147 1163_2 Zeus Τροπαῖος 111_0 Zeus Ὕπατος 163_4 $875_{1(2)}$ 897_2 Zeus Ὕψιστος $876_{1(1)}$ 897_3 Zeus Φίλιος 1161 ff. Zeus Φράτριος 730_0
Festivals: Anthesteria (Antheserion 11—13) 1139 City Dionysia 244_2 Diasia (Antheserion 22 or 23) 1137 ff. Lenaia 244_2 Megala Panhellenia 1121_0 Panathenaia 1121_0 Panhellenia 1119_4 1121_0 Pyanopsia or Pyanepsia 237_0 Thargelia 237_0
Rites: Bacchants cover their breasts with iron bowls 346_0 burial within the house 1060 1065 ἐγχυτρίστριαι 1065 ἔφυγον κακόν, εὗρον ἄμεινον 1166_1 first-fruits taken to Delphoi 816 f. need-fire brought from Delphoi 816 f. πιθοιγία (Antheserion 11) 1139 procession to Delphoi headed by axe-bearers 628 817 847

Athens (cont.)
sacred tripod fetched from Delphoi 816 f. sacrifice of pig to Zeus Φίλιος 1161 sacrifice of white ox to Zeus Κτήσιος $1065\,1067$ χόες (Antheserion 12—13) 1139 χύτροι (Antheserion 13) 1139 wearing of white-poplar 470 women slide down rock to obtain children 1114
Priestess: πυρφόρος 817_0
Myths: Akropolis struck with trident by Poseidon 793 Deukalion 1118 1139 1229 Erichthonios 944_0 Kekrops $875_{1(2)}$ Periphas 1121 ff. sea-water on Akropolis 581
—— Asklepieion at 1078 coins of 232_0 674_1 675_1 1078 Erechtheion at 24 789_7 792 965_0 1148 Kyklops in folk-tale from 990 ff. old Hekatompedon at 757_1 Olympieion at 1118 ff. 1135 1229 f. Parthenon at (See Parthenon) Prytaneion at 1094_0 1095_0 Pythion at 201_1 202_1 1135 Stoa Basileios at 1094_0 1095_0 1135_4 Stoa Poikile at 1135_4 Stoa of Zeus Ἐλευθέριος at 1135_4 talisman of 1148
Athos, Mt
Cult: Zeus Ἀθῷος 906_1
—— altars on 906_1 Macrobii on 500 monasteries on 906_1
Athribis
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος $889_{0(33)}$ 984_3
Athtar 430_4
Atlas
Cult: Heleia 931_0
Genealogy: f. of Alkyone 414_2
See also Index II Atlantes
Atlas, Mt
Myths: garden of Hera 1021 Hesperides 1021
Atreus
Myth: sceptre of Zeus 547_2 956_2 1132_4 1132_5
Genealogy: s. of Pelops and f. of Agamemnon 957_0
Etymology: 569_2
Atropos 1023
Attabokaoi 310_2
Attaleia in Pamphylia
Cult: Zeus Τροπαιοῦχος 111_0
Attalos
Etymology: 569_2
Attes 292_3 296_4 297_0
See also Attis
Attes, s. of Kalaos 444
Attike
Cults: Zeus Ἀγαμέμνων (?) 1069 Zeus Μειλίχιος 291_2
Myth: Theseus purified by Phytalidai at altar of Zeus Μειλίχιος 291_2
Attis
Cults: Hierapolis in Phrygia 306_1 Ostia 297 ff. 303_2 Pessinous 970_0 Phrygia 313 Rome 303_2 306_5
Epithets: Aeternus (?) 306_4 αἰπόλος

Attis (cont.)
296_4 307_1 ἄκαρπος 296_4 βασιλεύς 303_2 βουκόλος 307_1 bubulcus 307_1 Christianus (!) 307 formosus adulescens 307_3 Invictus 303_2 Μητροτύραννος 303_2 Menotyrannus (Menoturanus, Minoturanus) 303_2 νέκυς 296_4 Πάπας or Παπᾶς 292 ff. pastor 307_1 Pileatus 307 ποιμήν 307_1 ποιμὴν λευκῶν ἄστρων 296_4 297_0 Sanctus 303_2 συρικτάς 296_4 Τῆς 292_3 χλοερὸς στάχυς ἀμηθεὶς 296_4
Festivals: arbor intrat 303_2 Hilaria 306_1
Rites: those polluted with wine may not enter his sanctuary 969_4 criobolium 306 effigy affixed to pine-tree 303 effigy worn by votaries 299 ff. formula of exhortation 306 illumination 306 lamentation over prostrate body 303 taurobolium 306 unction 306_1
Myths: betrothed to Ia 970_0 conceived by Nana after putting fruit in her bosom 969_4 loved by Agdistis 969_4 loved by Mother of the gods 969_4 Lydian version (Attis killed by boar) 969_4 mutilates himself under pine-tree 970_0 nurtured on goat's milk 969_4 Phrygian version (Attis mutilated under pine-tree) 969_4 970_0 tended by he-goat 969_4
Genealogy: s. of almond-tree 295 s. of Kronos 294 s. of Nana, d. of Sangarios 969_4 s. of Rhea 294 296 s. of Zeus 294
Functions: divine king 303_2 emblem of resurrection 309 rain 292 rebirth of Πάπας (Παπᾶς) 294 ripe corn 295_2 shepherd of his devotees 306 f. spring flowers 295_2 tree-spirit (?) 303_2 young corn 295_2
Etymology: 293 969_4
Attributes: almonds 298 corn-ears 297 ff. flowers 297 f. frnit 297 lagobólon 300 moon 298 Phrygian cap 298 pileum 307_3 pine-cones 298 pine-tree 951_0 pomegranates 298 poppy-heads 298 starry pilos 386
Types: duplicated 300 f. 308 ff. effeminate youth reclining on rock 297 f. goatherd 295 green ear of corn 295 half-length figure 301 piper 295 radiate 298 recumbent 300 shepherd 296
Identified with Adamna 295 1218 Adonis 294 f. 298 Dionysos 294 296 298 Korybas 295 Men 295 298 Osiris 294 f. Pan 296 Zeus 292
Assimilated to Cautes and Cautopates 309
Associated with Agdistis and Zeus 1229 Kybele 301_1 Mater deum 306_5
Compared with Adonis 293
In relation to Christianity 303 ff.
Attis (cont.)
Dioskouroi 307 ff. Kybele 293 842 Papas 317
—— formula of devotion to 278_2
Attis, priest of the Mother of the gods 310 f.
Attouda
Cult: Zeus 743_7
—— coins of 743_7
Atys, s. of Kroisos 311
Atys, s. of Manes 311 f. with Kotys as Dioskouroi (?) 312
Augeias
Etymology: 384_0
Augustine, St 140
Augustus
Cults: Assos 728_0 Dorylaeion 281 Paphlagonia 729_0 Pergamon 1179 1182 Termessos (Termessus Maior) 973_1
Priest: ἀρχιερεύς 973_7
Personates Iupiter 1091 Zeus 97_0 260_0
—— birthday of 419_1 house of 147 statue of, struck by lightning 10 tree at Nemi planted by 418 419_2 419_3
Aulai
Cult: Apollon 249_2
Aule
Cult: Pan 249_2
Aulikomis 1141
Aura
Genealogy: d. of Pothos and Omichle 1036 1038 m. of Motos (?) by Aer 1036 1038
Aurelii 321
Auriga 477 477_8
Autessiodurum, sacred pear-tree at 1215 f.
Autochthon Οὐρανός See Epigeios Οὐρανός
Autonoe 347_0 (?)
Autonoos, a Delphic hero 452
Autonoos, f. of Anthos 414_2
Auxesia
Cults: Bryseai 890_2 Epidauros $487_{3(1)}$ Sparta 890_2
Axenos See Euxeinos
Axieros
Cult: Thrace 314 f.
Function: rebirth of Axiokersos 314 f.
Etymology: 315 664
Identified with Demeter (?) 314_2
Axiokersa
Cult: Thrace 314 f.
Function: earth 315
Etymology: 314 664
Identified with Persephone (?) 314_2
Axiokersos
Cult: Thrace 314 f.
Function: sky 315
Etymology: 314 f. 664
Identified with Hades (?) 314_2
Axios, f. of Pelegon 588_0
Axos
Cults: Apollon 816_4 Zeus 816_4
—— coins of 816_4
Azan, s. of Arkas 964_3

Azizos
Cults: Arabia 428 f. Baitokaike 431 Edessa 428
Etymology: 428
Type: male figure on column 429 f.
Identified with Ares 428 430
Azosioi Theoi
Cult: Epidauros $487_{3(1)}$

Ba'al (Baal, Bel)
Cults: Assyria 694_0 Berytos $886_{0(30)}$
Function: solar $886_{0(30)}$
Identified with Kronos 558_0 Thouros and the planet Ares 694_0 Zeus Ὄρειος 869_0
Superseded by Zeus 1192 (?)
—— axe dedicated to 510_5 distinguished from Belos 694_0
Ba'al-ḥammân
Cults: Kypros 1208_2 Roman Africa 554_3
Type: enthroned between two rams 1208_2
Identified with Kronos 554_3 Saturnus 554_3
Ba'al Milik (Melek, Molok)
Cults: Peiraieus (?) 1108 Phoinike 1108
Identified with Milichus (?) 1110_0 Zeus Μειλίχιος (Μιλίχιος) (?) 1108
Ba'al Qarnaim 554_3
Ba'al-šamin
Identified with Zeus Ὕψιστος $886_{0(0)}$ 889
Ba'al-tars
Cult: Tarsos 761 f.
Type: seated with eagle in right hand and sceptre in left 762
Babylon
Cults: Adad 769_1 god with dagger and double axe 714_1 Marduk 128_2 769_1 Zeus Βῆλος 128_4 675
Rites: sacrifice of asses 463_1 sacrifice of goats, sheep, and oxen 463_1
Myth: Kleinis 463_1
—— Hittite relief from 766_1 pillars of Herakles beyond 422
Babylonia
Cults: Apollon (?) 456 fire 34_1
Bacchus
Identified with Jehovah 1197
—— on the column of Mayence 96
Badinlar, in Phrygia
Cults: Apollon Λαιρμηνός (Λαρμηνός, Λαρβηνός, Λειμηνός, Λυρμηνός) 567 f. Helios Apollon Λερμηνός (Λνερμηνός) 568 Lairmenos 567 Μήτηρ Leto 567 568_6
Baganda 450_1
Baginatiae
Cult: Allobroges 570_0
Baginus
Cult: Allobroges 570_0
Bagis 570
Baitokaike
Cult: Azizos and Monimos 431
Bakchapollon (?) 253_3
Bakchoi See Zeus Worshippers
Bakchos
Etymology: 268_4
Identified with Zeus 287 1184
Balder See Baldr
Baldr
Myth: stabbed by Hǫdhr with lance of mistletoe 305_0
Genealogy: h. of Nanna 305_0 s. of Odhin 305_0
Identified with Apollo (?) 110_5 844 Phol (?) 110_5 844
Ballenaion, Mt 270_5 271_0
Ballenaion, a Phrygian festival 270_5
Ballenaios, s. of Ganymedes 270_5
Barbillea 962_2
Bargasa 958_0
Bargylia 721_2
Baris
Cult: double Herakles 446 f.
—— coins of 446 f.
Barnabas, St 1096_4
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1202_0 (?)
Baronga 434
Basil the Great, St 116 891_0
Basileia See Queen of the Underworld
Basileia, festival of Zeus Βασιλεύς 900_0
Bassai
Cult: Apollon Ἐπικούριος 405_3
Bastarnae 55
Batavi
Cults: Haeva 64_0 Hercules Magusanus 64_0
Bathild, St 135
Bathos
Cults: Astrapai 827 Brontai 827 Thyellai 827
Myth: Gigantomachia 827
Bathykolpos
Cult: Saron 414_1
Baton, charioteer of Amphiaraos 1071
Battakes, priest of the Mother of the gods 310 f.
Baubo
Cult: Paros 131
Genealogy: m. of Protogone and Misa 131 w. of Dysaules 131
Function: Underworld 132
Attribute: ladder 131
Type: seated on pig 131
Associated with Zeus, Hera, Demeter Θεσμοφόρος, Kore 259_0
Baucis 1096_4
Bavian, rock-carving at 769_0
Bazis 569
Beda, a goddess of the Frisii
Cult: Borcovicium 51_1
Bejad in Phrygia
Cult: (Zeus) Πάπας or Παπᾶς 292_4
Bel See Ba'al
Belchania $948_{0(4)}$
Belchanos (?) = Velchanos
Cult: Lyttos (?) $948_{0(4)}$

Bellerophon (Bellerophontes) 720 f. 1129_1
Myth: Pegasos 721_2 1018
Type: on horseback 717_2
Belos
Cult: Emesa (?) 814_3
Genealogy: s. of Inachos and b. of Kasos 981_1 s. of Nebrod (Nimrod) Orion Kronos by Semiramis Rhea 693_4 694_0 s. of Pikos who is also Zeus by Hera 694_0 695_0
—— distinguished from Ba'al (Baal, Bel) 694_0
Bendis
Cults: Athens 1032 f. Imbros 314_0 Lemnos 314_0 Mounychia 115 Paionia 500 f. Samothrace 314_0 Thasos 314_0 Thrace 303_2 314_0 411 501
Rite: oak-wreath 411 f.
Etymology: 303_2
Identified with Artemis Βασίλεια 501 Hekate 314_0 Kabeiro 314_0
Associated with Maenads 314_0
Beneventum by euphemism for Maleventum 1112_7 Trajan's Arch at 1181_0
Benneitai $883_{0(0)}$
Bennis See Zeus Epithets Βεννεύς
Berekyndai 587_7
Berekyntes 587_7 970_0
Berekynthos
Etymology: 587_5
Bernard Ptolemy, St 135
Beroe, nurse of Semele 1031
Berouth, w. of Elioun Ὕψιστος $886_{0(30)}$
Berytos
Cults: Ba'al $886_{0(30)}$ Theos Ὕψιστος 983_5
Bes
Cults: Egypt 457 Gaza 674
Types: facing 674 mask 674
Supersedes Zeus 675
Bessoi, oracle of Dionysos among 269
Bethel 127 f.
Bethlehem
Cult: Tammuz (Adonis) 984_1
Beuyuk Evlia near Amaseia
Cults: St Elias 975_0 Zeus Στράτιος 974_1 ff.
Rite: dramatic shows 976_0
Biaros, Mt See Viarus, Mt
Bibracte 1059
Bilkon
Cult: Apollon Βιλκώνιος 948_0
Bios
Attributes: knife 866 868 scales 865 f.
Type: naked or half-naked runner with wheels beneath his feet 865 ff.
Identified with Kairos 864
Bithynia
Cults: Phyllis the river-god 904_1 Theos Ὕψιστος (?) $883_{0(24)}$ Zeus Ἀστραπαῖος 815 Zeus Βάληος 271_0 Zeus Βροντῶν 835_5 Zeus Ἐπιδήμιος 1180_4 Zeus Πάτρας or Παπᾶς 292_4
Myth: Bormos 295_2
—— coins of 296_0
Bituriges
Cult: sword (?) 548_0
—— coins of 548_0
Bizye 282_1
Cult: Asklepios 1079
—— coins of 1079
Blasios, St 1104_2
Blatsche, between Skoupoi and Stoboi
Cults: Alexander (sc. Alexandros of Abonou Teichos) 1084 Draccena (= Δράκαινα) 1084 Dracco (= Δράκων, i.e. Glykon) 1084 Iuno 1084 Iupiter 1084
Blaudos in Mysia
Cult: Zeus Σαάξιος (for Σαάξιος = Σαβάζιος) 284_0
Blaundos
Cult: youthful hero on horseback bearing double axe 563
—— coins of 563
Boaz 426 f.
Boedromia 237_0
Boegia 318_0
Boghaz-Keui
Cult: youthful god standing on lioness (?) 560
—— Hittite rock-carvings at 550 ff. 599_2
Boibe 500_6
Boibeïs, Lake 500_8
Boiotia
Cults: Athena 731_0 Dan 342_0 Demeter 716_5 Dionysos Ἐνδενδρος 946_0 Hera Βασίλεια 731_0 Poseidon 583_3 731_0 Zeus Βασιλεύς 731_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 238_0 Zeus Καραιός 873_2 Zeus Κάριος 873_2 Zeus Ὁμολώιος 900_1 Zeus Ὕπατος $875_{1(1)}$
—— terra cotta from 123_0
Boiotos 317 1150
Bologna, gongs from 649 ff.
See also Bononia
Bombos (Bombros) 214_3
Bona Dea
Rite: wine not brought into her temple except under name of milk in a vessel called the honey-pot 1142_6
Superseded by St Agatha of Catania 347_0
Bona Fortuna
Type: Praxiteles 1127_0
Bononia
Cult: Asklepios 1085
See also Bologna
Bonus Eventus
Attributes: corn-ear 1126_0 patera 1126_0 poppies 1126_0
Types: Euphranor 1126_0 1127_0 Praxiteles 1127_0
Associated with week-days 71
Bora, Mt 494 ff.
Borcovicium
Cults: Alaisiagae 51_1 Beda 51_1 Fimmilena 51_1 Mars Thingsus 51_1 Mithras 1053 numina Augustorum 51_1

Boreadai
Myth: pursue Harpyiai 907_2
Boreas
Cult: Thrace 380
Myth: pursues Oreithyia 380
Genealogy: f. of Zetes and Kalaïs by Oreithyia, d. of Erechtheus 444
Etymology: 494 ff.
Types: bifrontal 341_0 380 444 horse 830_7 Janiform (dark+light) 387 winged man 380
Compared with Zeus 444
—— land beyond blast of 465
See also Hyperborean Maidens, Hyperboreoi
Bormos 295_2
Bosco Reale, skýphos from 1209
Bosporos
Cult: Zeus Οὔριος 707
Bosporos Kimmerios
Cults: Ge 729_0 Helios 729_0 Theos Ὕψιστος $883_{0(27)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ $885_{0(0)}$. Zeus 729_0
Bŏttia (Bŏttiaia, Bŏttiaiis), district in Makedonia
Rite: clay loaves etc. (?) 1187_4
Myth: Botton 1187_4
Bŏttia, village on the Orontes
Cult: Zeus Βόττιος 1187_4
—— maiden sacrificed at 1188
Botton 1187_4
Boubastis
Identified with Artemis 252
Boubastos 671
Boucheta (Bouchetos, Boucheton, Bouchetion)
Myth: Themis riding on ox comes thither during Deukalion's flood 267_5 348_5
Boukatia 233
Boule
Cult: Antiocheia on the Orontes (?) 1193_2
Bousbatos
Cult: Thrace 501_3
Identified with Artemis 501_3
Boutes
Genealogy: s. of Poseidon 793_{12}
Bouthroton (Bouthrotos) 348
Cult: Zeus 348
Myth: founded by Helenos on spot where escaped sacrificial ox fell 348_6
Bouzygai 1163_2
Bouzyge 217_2
Bovianum Undecimanorum
Cult: Venus Caelestis 68_2
Brachmanes 7_2
Brahma 1035
Myth: birth 1036
Brahmā
Cult: India 367 774_1
Myth: Vishnu 774_1
Genealogy: h. of Sarasvatī 774_1
Function: solar (?) 774_1
Brahmā (cont.)
Attribute: lotos 774_1
Types: four-faced 367 seated on lotos 774_1
Identified with Hiraṇyagarbha 1035
Brahman 1035
Branchidai
Cult: Apollon 920_0
—— as centre of earth 167 omphalós (?) at 180 oracular centre at 170_1 votive lions at 920_0
Brasiai
Myth: Semele and Dionysos 671
Brathy, Mt 981_1
Brauronia 228_4
Bria
Cult: Dioskouroi 313
—— coins of 313
Briareos 1023
—— pillars of 422
Bricia See Brixia
Bridget, St 116
Brilettos, Mt 898_0
Brioc, St 116
Briseïs 726
Britanni tattooed 123_0
Britomartis
Cult: Lyttos 934_0
Myth: pursued by Minos 939_1
Etymology: 1220
Brittany, two sons with gold star and daughter with silver star in folk-tale from 1010 f. 1013_1
Brixia, a goddess at Luxovium 86 86_3
Brixia in Cisalpine Gaul
Cult: Iupiter Iurarius 726_0
Brontai
Cults: Bathos 827 Orphists 141_1 827
Brontaios 833_7
Bronte, horse of Helios 828 851
Bronte, personification of thunder 28 828 851
Bronteas 833_7
Brontes 784 828 851 1023
Bruńdisium
Etymology: 30_3
Bruttii
Cult: Zeus 709
—— coins of 709 $831_{1(2)}$
Bryaxis 921_0
Brygos 245_5 777_2 800
Bryseai
Cult: Auxesia and Damoia 890_2
Buddha, ladder of 129_3
Bunarbashi in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_4
Burdigala
Rite: natalici viribus 306_4
Byblis 413_1
Byblos in Phoinike
Cults: Adonis (?) $886_{0(30)}$ Kronos (?) $886_{0(30)}$ $887_{0(0)}$ Moloch $887_{0(0)}$ Zeus Ὕψιστος $887_{0(0)}$ 983_6
Myths: Berouth $886_{0(30)}$ Elioun Ὕψιστος $886_{0(30)}$ Epigeios (Autochthon)

Byblos in Phoinike (cont.)
Οὐρανός $886_{0(30)}$ head of Osiris 290_0
—— coins of 552 845
Byzantion
Cults: Apollon Καρινός (?) 167 f. Poseidon 798
Rite: axe-bearers 635
—— coins of 162 f. 167 f. 798 omphalós at 167 ff.

Cadenet
Cults: Dexsiva 619 Mars 619
Caeculus
Myth: birth 1059
Caelus
Genealogy: f. of Ianus by Hecate 368_3 f. of Iupiter 941_0
Caesar
Cult: Alexandreia 1180_4
Epithet: Ἐπιβατήριος 1180_4
Caeus See Koios
Caligula slays rex Nemorensis 147
Callistus, Cemetery of 1208
Cameses, an Italian king 530_0
Campus Martius, personified 103_0
Camulodunum
Cult: Janiform god 324
—— coins of 324
Canabarii 93 1214
Canabenses 93_4
Cancer 41 42 45_4
Candlemas 325_8 326_4
Canens
Genealogy: d. of Ianus 394_3
Canna intrat 299_3
Cannophori
Festival: canna intrat 299_3
Capricornus 16_1 41 42 558_0 932_1 933_0 938_0
Capua, coins of 370 $831_{1(2)}$ cp. 331 tomb near 1146_0
Caracalla
Cult: Laodikeia on the Lykos 1186
Personates Zeus 1186
Carian place-names in -yma, -ymos 318
Carnuntum
Cult: Mithras Deus Sol Invictus 1194_4
Carthage
Cults: Saturnus Balcaranensis (Balcaranesis, Balcharanensis, Balkharanensis) 554_3 555_0 Tanit 69_0
—— bronze bull (of Phalaris ?) at 910_1 razor from 630_2
Carthago Nova, in Spain 557_0
Castor
Cult: Tusculum 1170 f.
—— couch of 1171 on column of Mayence 96
Cautes 309
Cautopates 309
Celsus on syncretism $889_{0(0)}$
Celts
Cults: Dexia 619_3 Dexsiva 619 Dis 326 Iupiter 86 f. Iupiter Taranus 32
Celts (cont.)
Iupiter Taranucus 32 Janiform god 323 ff. 842 Llyr 326 Sucaelus 620 Taranis 32 Taranucnus 32 Zeus 111_0
Myths: Otherworld-visit 1166_2
—— coins of 323 ff. fear lest sky should fall 55 folk-tales of 224_1 682 f. 848
Centaurs
Attributes: branch 615 tree 615
Types: attacked by Theseus 628 fighting Herakles 615_2(?) fighting Lapiths 615_2(?) fighting Zeus (?) 614 f.
Centaurus, the constellation 477_8
Ceraunobolia 828
Ceres
Epithet: Eleusinia 928_0
Festival: Ludi Cereri 19_0
Functions: one of the Penates 1059 plenty 99
Etymology: 549_6
Attribute: corn-topped sceptre 99
Identified with Luna, Diana, Iuno, Proserpina 256 Virgo 734_3
Associated with Iuno and Mercurius 1181_0
—— on column of Mayence 96 98
Chaironeia
Cult: sceptre of Zeus 547_2 1132
Rite: daily oblation to sceptre of Zeus 547_2 1132_6
Chalcea, m. of Olympus (?) 973_1
Chaldaioi 255
Chaldene, m. of Solymos 973_1
Chalkis near Beroia 981_0 (?)
Chalkis in Euboia
Cults: Hera 981_3 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1157 Zeus Παλαμναῖος 1098_7
—— coins of 870_0 981_0
Chalkis sub Libano
Cult: Zeus 981_0
—— coins of 980_7 981_0
Chalon-sur-Saône, bronze statuette from 747_1
Chalybes 472 617 715
Cham See Ham
Chaos
Epithet: ἄπειρον 1022
Genealogy: child of Chronos 1024 child of Chronos or Herakles by Ananke or Adrasteia 1022 m. of Mot by Aer 1038
Function: primeval power 315
Etymology: 1039 1051
Identified with Ianus 335_9
Charalambos, St 1150_9
Chares 254_5
Charila 240 242
Charites
Cults: Orchomenos in Boiotia 238_0 1150_{10} Philadelphia in Lydia 1229
Rite: libation from second kratér (?) 1124_0
Attributes: lyre, flutes, pan-pipes 249_2 249_3

Charites (cont.)
Types: in bay-wreath 1193 three small females on hand of Apollon 232_0 three small females on hand of Zeus 232_0
Superseded by ἡ Θεοτόκος 1150_{10}
Charon
Cult: Etruria 627_3 803
Functions: ferryman of the dead 641_2 Underworld 641
Etymology: 641
Attributes: fork (?) 803 hammer 627_3 641
Contrasted with Zeus 641_2
—— eyes of 642_0
Charos 641_2 See also Charon
Chartres
Cult: La Vierge du Pilier 1213
Charun 641_2 See also Charon
Chedworth, Roman villa at 604 f.
Cheiron
Cult: Mt Pelion 869_2 871_0
Myth: teaches Peleus to use double spear 799
Genealogy: s. of Kronos by Philyra 695_0 871_0
Cheleidon, eponym of the Chelidoniai Islands 971_2
Chelidonis
Myth: Polytechnos 693
Chersonesos Taurike
Cults: (Athena) Παρθένος 729_0 Ge 729_0 Helios 729_0 heroes 729_0 Zeus 729_0
Cherubim 1203_7
Chiliokomon 596
Chimaira, Mt, fire springing from ground on 972_1
China 66_0 479 495
Chios
Cults: St Anna 1157 Dionysos Ὠμάδιος 667 f. Herakles 1157_1 Zeus Μιλίχιος 1157_1 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 1157_1 Zeus Πελινναῖος 922_4
Rite: human sacrifice 667 f.
Type: under winged arch 362
Choes 1139
Chonai, cleft of 115
Chous (Cush) 693_4 694_0
Chousor (?) 1037
Chousoros
Genealogy: s. of Oulomos 1037 f.
Function: opener of cosmic egg 1037
Christ
Epithet: Αὐθέντης 945_0
Types: bearded man 1050 beardless man 1050 1199 1200_4 1202_0 1206 1207 boy 1199 1200_4 1202_0 1206 on the cross 305_0 descent into Hell 305_0 Dionysos 1197 Good Shepherd seated 1208 Good Shepherd standing 1050 1208 half-length figure flanked by sun and moon 138_0 harrowing of Hell 138_0 Orphic 1208 Scopaic 1206 seated between two lambs (sheep) 1208 seated with a lamb (sheep) beside him 1199 shepherd 305_0 youth raising right hand to bless 288 ff. Zeus 1197
Attributes: eagle 1199 1209 lamb 1199 lyre 1208 roll 1199 vines 1199 1210
Associated with St Peter and St Paul 1209_2
Compared with Phanes 1026
Supersedes: Dionysos 1209 f. Theos Hypsistos $879_{0(17)}$ Zeus 1209 —— resurrection of 941_0
Christopher, St 1076
Chronos
Epithets: ἀγήραος 1022 1024 τετράπορος 831_0
Myth: makes cosmic egg 1026 1051
Genealogy: f. of Aither and Chaos 1024 f. of Aither, Chaos, and Erebos by Ananke or Adrasteia 1022
Attribute: knife 864
Types: globe beneath foot 864 Lysippos (?) 864 snake with heads of god, snake, lion 1023 winged snake with heads of god, bull, lion 1022
Identified with Herakles 1022 Kairos 861 864 Kronos 374 861
Associated with Zas and Chthonia (Chthonie) 351_1
—— chariot of 831_0 in Phoenician cosmogony 1036 1038
Chrysaor, the Carian hero 714 f. 720
Chrysaor, twin-b. of Pegasos
Epithet: μέγας 716
Myth: birth from neck of Medousa 716 ff.
Genealogy: b. of Pegasos 317 1018 f. of Geryoneus by Kallirrhoe, d. of Okeanos 716 s. of Medousa 457
Function: lightning (?) 721 f.
Etymology: 715 f. 1222
Attribute: sword 716
Chryses, s. of Zeus by Hesione d. of Danaos 1150_2
Chrysippos 855_2
Chrysogone, d. of Halmos 1150_4
Chrysor, the Phoenician Hephaistos
Identified with Zeus Μειλίχιος 715 1037
Chrysaoreis 714
Chrysaoris 714
Chrysothemis, s. of Karmanor 190_0
Chrysothemis, w. of Staphylos 670
Chthonia (Chthonie)
Function: primeval power 316
Identified with Ge 351_1
Chytroi
Cult: Astarte 157_1
Chytroi, the festival 1139
Cimbri 799_5
City Dionysia 244_2
Çiva
Cult: India 790 f.
Attributes: bull 791_2 trident 790 f. wreath 791_2
Type: three-faced 791_2

Clunia in Spain
Cult: Iupiter Augustus Ultor 1102$_8$
Clusium, tomb of Porsenna at 1219
Collorgues, carved slabs from 690
Commodus
Cult: Pergamon 1185
Personates Zeus 1185
Compitalia 1171$_2$
Coralli 108 111$_0$
Cordeilla See Cordelia (Cordalia)
Cordelia (Cordalia) 325 f.
Corinium in Dalmatia
Cult: Ianus Pater 325
Corinth
Cults: Apollon 915$_2$ (?) 916$_0$ Apollon Δειραδιώτης 210$_0$ Iupiter Liberator (Nero) (?) 1214 Zenoposeidon (?) 878$_{0(3)}$ Zeus 878$_{0(3)}$ Zeus Καπετώλιος (= Κορυφαῖος) 869$_1$ Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 916$_0$ Zeus Ὕψιστος 878$_{0(3)}$ 892$_3$ Zeus Χθόνιος 878$_{0(3)}$
Corne, Mt
Cult: Diana 403
Corneto, Tomba del Letto funebre at 1170$_8$
Corvus 664$_1$
Corycian Cave 449$_0$
Crater 664$_1$
Crete
Cults: Apollon Βιλκώνιος 948$_0$ Apollon Πύθιος 457 Diktynna 986$_0$ Kronos 548 f. Pikos who is also Zeus (?) 697$_0$ Talos 890$_2$ 948$_1$ Tan 342$_0$ Zagreus 352 667 Zan 344 f. Zeus 344 f. 352 354 727 743$_7$ Zeus Ἀστέριος 230$_0$ Zeus Βοτριαῖος (?) 1187$_4$ Zeus Ἐλαφρός 599 Zeus Ἐπιρρύτιος 946$_0$ Zeus Ἰδαῖος 932$_1$ ff. Zeus Ξένιος 1169$_5$
Rites: bovine omophagy 539 Kouretes sacrifice children to Kronos 548
Myths: Adiounios Tauros 349 birth of Zeus 1228 op. 925$_1$ 927$_1$ 932$_1$ Botton 1187$_4$ nurses of Zeus 228 reign of Kronos and Rhea 548 Talos 645$_0$ Zeus a prince slain by wild boar and buried in Crete 522 727
In relation to Delphoi 189$_8$ Rhodes 923$_0$
—— coins of 743$_7$ 933$_0$ tomb of Zeus in 219 940$_0$ ff.
Culśanś 378 See also Ianus
Cuprius, Vicus 401
Curiatii 363 f.
Cuthbert, St 116
Cygnus 477$_7$ See also Olor
Cynthianum 419$_3$ See also Genzano

Daai (Daoi, Dahae), a Scythian tribe 312$_5$
Daci 114$_0$
—— tattooed 123$_0$
Daeira 312$_5$
Daes (?), consort of Daeira 312$_5$
Dahae See Daai
Daidala Megala 898$_6$ 977$_0$
Daidala Mikra 898$_6$
Daidale 898$_6$
Daidalos
Myth: makes dancing-ground for Ariadne 600 f.
Genealogy: f. of Iapyx 30
Function: sculptor 322$_7$ 739$_1$
Daimou
Epithets: ἠγήτορα φρικτόν, | μειλίχιον Δία, παγγενέτην, βιοδώτορα θνητῶν, | Ζῆνα μέγαν, πολύπλαγκτον, ἁλάστορα, παμβασιλῆα, | πλουτοδότην, κ.τ.λ. 1160$_4$
Identified with Zeus 1160$_4$ Zeus Μειλίχιος 1160$_4$
—— Orphic hymn to 1160
Daimones
Cult: Thespiai 1150$_9$
Epithets: ἐσθλοί, ἐπιχθόνιοι, φύλακες θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων, |...| πλουτοδόται 1130$_1$ 1160
Function: buried kings (?) 1150$_0$
Etymology: 1159$_1$
Associated with Hermes 1150$_9$
Daiso See Daita or Daito
Daita or Daito (Daiso), m. of Enorches 1021
Daktyloi
Cult: Mt Ide in Crete 232$_0$ 929$_0$
Epithets: πολέων μοιρηγέται ἠδὲ πάρεδροι | μητέρος Ἰδαίης 232$_0$
Rites: head wrapped in fleece of black ram 934$_0$ lying prone beside sea and river 934$_0$ purification with thunderstone (belemnite ?) 934$_0$
Myths: born in Dictaean Cave 929$_0$ born on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949$_5$ discover iron 949$_5$ learn iron-working from Mother of the gods 949$_5$
Genealogy: sons of Aigesthios (Agdestis ?) by Ide 970$_0$ sons of Anchiale 929$_0$
See also Index II Stones, thumb-shaped
Daldeia
Cult: Apollon Μύστης 250 f.
—— coin of 251$_1$
Dalmatia 440$_2$
Damaskos
Cults: Zeus Κεραύνιος 807$_{5(2)}$ Zeus Μέγιστος Ὕψιστος 886$_{0(0)}$
Damastes 626 f.
Damoia
Cults: Bryseai 890$_2$ Sparta 890$_2$
Damokles 703
Dan
Cult: Boiotia 342$_0$ 344$_0$ op. 583$_0$
See also Zeus
Danaë
Myths: consorts with Zeus 1131$_1$ sent to sea in coffer 671 1018
Genealogy: m. of Perseus 464 m. of Perseus by Pikos 1187$_2$
Danaïdes: Hesione 1150 Hippodameia 1150$_2$ Isonoe (?) 1150$_2$ Polydora 486
Danaoi 961$_0$

Danaos
Myth: Argos 1144_2
Genealogy: f. of Hesione 1150_2 f. of Hippodameia 1150_2 f. of Isonoe (?) 1150_2
Daoi, the nomad Persians 312_5
Daoi, a Scythian tribe See Daai
Daos, 'the Wolf' (?) 312_5
Daphne
Myth: Apollon 265_0 460_2 486
Daphne, near Antiocheia on the Orontes
Cults: Apollon Δαφναῖος 1188 Nemesis 1191_5 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 1188 f. (?) 1191 Zeus Σωτήρ 1191
Festival: Olympia 1191 f.
Rite: resurrection (?) 1191_2
Daphnephoria 158_1 242_1 455_8
Daphnis
Myth: Apollon 1042 (?)
Daphnis the mountain-nymph 176_1
Dardanos
Genealogy: b. of Iasos 317 s. of Zeus 8
Dasimos (Dazimos) 1159_1
Dasios (Dazios) 1159_1
Datcha, relief-ware from 615
Dazimas 1159_1
Dazimos See Dasimos
Dazios See Dasios
Dea Augusta Vocontiorum
Rite: loco vires conditae 306_4
Dea Roma See Roma, the personification of Rome
Dea Syria
Identified with Virgo 734_3
Deana 339_5 See Diana
Death
Functions: mower 868 reaper 868
Attributes: hour-glass 868 scythe 868
Type: straw puppet 868
—— dance of 868_4
See also Thanatos
Deia, a tribe at Dorylaeion 281
Deia, the festival 320_0
Deia Sebasta Oikoumenika 320_0
Deipatyros 277_3
Delos
Cults: Agathe Tyche 1128_0 Agathos Daimon 1128_0 Aphrodite Ἀγνή 922_0 Apollon 249_2 452 ff. 854 Apollon Γενέτωρ 223_3 Artemis 452 ff. 501 1227 Asklepios 1088 Athena Κυνθία 919_6 920_0 921_0 922_0 Isis 922_0 Kronos (?) 920_0 Rhea (?) 920_0 921_0 Sarapis 922_0 Tachnepsis 985_0 Theos Μέγας 985_0 Zeus Εὐβουλεύς 259_0 1105 Zeus Ἱκέσιος 1095_0 1096_0 Zeus Κάσιος 907_0 (?) 985_0 Zeus Κύνθιος 919_0 920_0 921_0 922_0 Zeus Σαβάζιος 1217
Rite: Hyperborean offerings sent to Apollon 497 ff. περφερέες 495_0
Priests: ζακόρος 921_0 922_0 ἱερεύς 921_0 922_0 ἱεροποιοί 921_0 κλειδοῦχος 921_0 922_0
Delos (cont.)
Myths: Hyperborean maidens 452 466 Hyperoche and Laodike 452 f. 501 Opis and Hekaerge (Arge) 452 501 1226 Opis and Hekaergos 452 f.
—— Artemision at 1227 as centre of earth 167 confederacy of 854 Keraton at 1227 temple-inventory of 346_0 votive lions in 920_0 921_0
Delphoi
Cults: Apollon 457 839 Apollon Μοιραγέτης 231 Apollon Πύθιος 1216 Artemis 1216 Athena Προναία 231 Autonoös 452 Dionysos 218 ff. 233 ff. 839 841 (Dionysos) Βρόμιος 219 Dionysos Ἰατρός 250 Dionysos Νυκτέλιος 257_4 (Dionysos) Παιάν 250 Gaia 500 1216 Ge Θέμις (?) 841 Hestia 1216 Leto (Lato) 1216 Moirai 231 Orphic Dionysos 218 ff. Phoibe 500 Phoibos 839 Phylakos 452 Poseidon 176_1 177_0 Themis 176_1 500 1216 Zeus 231 ff. 816 817 902_0 Zeus Ἀφέσιος (?) 179 f. 841 Zeus Εὔσπνοος 231 f. Zeus Λυκώρειος 901_2 902_0 Zeus Μοιραγέτης 231 Zeus Πατρῷος 233 244 Zeus Πολιεύς 231 Zeus Σωτήρ 232 f.
Festivals: birthday of Apollon (Bysios 7) 236 Boukatia 235 brumal rites of Dionysos 235 Charila 240 242 Heroïs 240 242 Pythian games 240 Soteria 232 f. Stepterion 240 242 vernal rites of Dionysos (Theoxenia ?) 235 244_2
Rites: caldron of apothéosis 210 ff. 241_4 dance of young men round tripod 460 incubation 231 f. paean 460 procession from Athens headed by axe-bearers 628 817 847 πῦρ ἀθάνατον 1216 sacrifice sent by Pythaïstai 815 ff. tent with cosmic roof 178_7
Priestesses: Thyiads 242
Myths: Asklepios raises dead 241_4 Asklepios slain by Zeus 241_4 death and burial of the Orphic Dionysos 218 ff. 841 Dionysos gives oracles from tripod 239_0 Dionysos torn in pieces and boiled in caldron 239 foundation of oracle 169 Hyperboreans 452 Hyperochos and Amadokos 452 Hyperochos and Laodokos 452 Neoptolemos 170_2 Nyx 238_4 Pagasos and Agyieus 169 177 499 Phylakos and Autonoös 452 Python 1087 Python slain by Apollon 239_0 Themis gives oracles 239_0 Themis on tripod impregnated by pillar of light (=Apollon) 1217 Theseus 628 Trophonios and Agamedes 232_4
In relation to Crete 189_8
—— as centre of earth 167 as vital centre of Greek religion 841 calendar at 235 f. Cnidian Lésche at 122_0

Delphoi (cont.)
coins of 176_2 218_0 267_1 $490_{0(5)}$ E at 176_2 178 1216 eagles at 179 ff. frieze of Siphnian Treasury at $831_{1(4)}$ inhabitants of, called Lykoreis 901_2 inner chapel in temple of Apollon at 239 inscribed axe from 628 omphalós at 169 ff. 841 1216 pediments of temple at 267_1 Plataean tripod at 170_2 193 ff. 1216 precinct of, represented in archaïstic reliefs 199 ff. stepped pyramid on plinth near $1146_{0(0)}$ succession of cults at 231 239 266 f. trophy from spoils of 'Marathon' at 1137_2 votive double axes from 629 669_3
Delphos 176_1
Delphyne 449_0
Demaratos, oath of 728_0
Demeter
Cults: Aixone 730_0 Ardettos 1135 Athens 729_0 730_0 Boiotia 716_5 Dotion 497_5 683 f. Eleusis 314_0 314_2 730_0 Erythrai in Ionia 730_0 Eteonos 1152 Hermione 1077 Kios 815_5 Kolonos 1152_5 Korkyra 730_0 Megalopolis 1178 Mostene (?) 564 Myrrhinous 730_0 Nisaia, port of Megara $488_{0(3)}$ Pagai, port of Megara (?) $488_{0(3)}$ Paros 131 Pergamon 729_0 955_0 Pheneos 1136_4 Phlyeis 1066 Prostanna (?) 973_0 Samothrace 314_0 314_2 Selinous $489_{0(0)}$ Sparta 729_0 Tegea 1140_5 Thebes in Boiotia 900_1 901_0
Epithets: Ἀνησιδώρα 1066 Ἐνναία 1075 Ἐρινύς (Ἐριννύς) 1075 Ἔρκυννα 1075 (See also Herkyna) Εὐρυόδεια 1152 Θεσμοθέτις 268_2 Θεσμοφόρος 131 259_0 Καρποφόρος 815_5 Κιδαρία 1136_4 Μαλοφόρος $488_{0(3)}$ $489_{0(0)}$ Μηλοφόρος $489_{0(0)}$ ξιφηφόρος 716_5 Ὁμολῴα 900_1 cp. 901_0 Χθονία 1077 Χλόη 413_2 χρυσάορος 716
Festivals: Herkynia 1075 τελετὴ μείζων at Pheneos 1136_4
Myths: boiling of Pelops 212_6 consorts with Zeus 1029 Erysichthon 497_5 683 f. Iambe 821 851 reveals fig to Phytalos 291_2 1092_6 1103
Metamorphosed into snake 1029
Genealogy: m. of Artemis 252 m. of Artemis or Hekate 1032 m. by Zeus of Phersephone or Kore 1029 w. of Poseidon 584_0
Functions: Corn-mother 295_2 earth 584_1 585_1 1152
Etymology: 584_0 584_1 585_1 1159_1
Attributes: corn-ears 564 (?) double axe 564 (?) drépanon 448_0 hárpe 448_0 kálathos 564 (?) oak-tree 683 f. pig 1140_5 poplar-tree 683 poppies 1165_1 ram (?) $488_{0(3)}$ snake 1111 sword 716 716_5 torches $488_{0(3)}$ (?)
Type: with kálathos, corn-ears, and double axe (?) 564
Demeter (cont.)
Identified with Axieros (?) 314_2 Isis 252 Rhea 1029 1032
Associated with Kore $1113_{0(3)}$ 1178 Kore and Zeus 258_8 259_0 Zeus, Hera, Kore, Baubo 259_0
In relation to bees and honey 1142_7 Persephone 501
Demetrios Poliorketes
Personates Athena (?) 1136_4
Demoi of Antiocheia on the Orontes (?) and Seleukeia Pieria (?) 1192
Demokritos of Abdera 701_0
Demos
Cults: Antiocheia on the Orontes (?) 1192 Kaulonia (?) 1042 Seleukeia Pieria (?) 1192
—— in Aristophanes 212
Demos of Rome
Cult: Miletos 1228
Demotionidai, oath of 728_0
Den 344_0 583_0 583_3
See also Zeus
Denderah
Cults: Horos 773_0 Osiris 773_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος Σεβαστός (= Augustus) 97_0
Deo
Myth: Zeus 132_2
Rite: union with Zeus 132_2 $345_{6(2)}$
See also Demeter
Deonysos 271
See also Dionysos
Deos (Dios), the Phrygian Zeus 278 ff.
Function: sky 279 f.
Associated with Semele 279 f.
—— tribe Deia named after (?) 281
Despoina
Cult: Akakesion 231_8
Deukalidai 892_4
Deukalion
Myths: takes stones from Mt Agdos to people the world 971_0 Athens 1118 1139 1229 builds altar of Zeus Ἀφέσιος 892_4 Lykoreia 901_2 Mt Parnassos 902_0
Genealogy: h. of Pyrrha 971_0 s. of Minos, s. of Zeus 793_7
Etymology: 892_4
—— grave of 1118
Deunysos 272_0
See also Dionysos
Deus 344_0
See also Zeus
Deus Altissimus
Cult: Hadrumetum $889_{0(34)}$
Epithets: Pelagicus Aerius $889_{0(34)}$
Identified with Iao $889_{0(34)}$
Deus Casius
Cult: Heddernheim 983_0
See also Zeus Epithets Κάσιος (Κάσσιος)
Deus Magnus Pantheus
Associated with Vires 306_4
Deverra 643_8

Deviana 339_0
See Diana
Dexia 619_3
Dexsiva
Cult: Cadenet 619
Dia, d. of Lykaon 486_1
Dia, old name of Tralleis 587_2 958_0
Dia, w. of Ixion
Myth: wooed by Zeus 1088
Dian (?), consort of Diane (?) 351_0
Diana
Cults: Mt Algidus 404 Aricia 420_1 Mt Corne 403 Kolchoi 411 Nemi 149 393 399 f. 403_1 842 f. Nemus 417 ff. Rome 400 f. 421 Mt Tifata 404 Tusculum 403
Epithets: Facelitis 421_3 Latonia 412_7 Lyaea 1140_3 nemoralis Delia 412_6 Nemorensis 146 411_3 (?) 414 417 841 1216 Trivia 412_6 virgo potens nemorum 412_6
Rites: liknon 149 puppies wreathed 149 oak decked with weapons and spoils of chase 412_6 weapons laid aside 149
Priests: Caligula 403_1 rex Nemorensis 146 f. 394 f. 399 f. 403_1 417_5 418
Myths: Actaeon 144 Virbius 393
Genealogy: consort of Dianus (Ianus) 363 394 399 405
Functions: birth 339_0 chase 69 moon 338_4 339_6
Etymology: 338 ff.
Attributes: crown 147_1 hound 69 hounds 144 modius 148 oak 400 ff. sceptre 148
Types: club-like pillar 147 149 841 herm 149 huntress 144 log 146 three-faced 411 triune 412_7 (?) with modius 149
Identified with Egeria (?) 418_0 Luna, Ceres, Iuno, Proserpina 256 Vesta 417_5
Associated with Apollo and Hercules 59_0 Dianus (Ianus) 363 394 399 405 Mercurius 67 (?)
In relation to Virbius 414 417 842
Survives as country demon 339_1
—— oak-tree of 400 ff. on column of Mayence 96 99 f. pillars of 143 ff. tree of, at Nemi 417 ff.
Dianus
Etymology: 339_1 352
Type: archway 363 405
Associated with Diana 363 394 399 405
See also Ianus
Dias, a form of Zeus 352
See also Zeus
Dias, one of the Pelopidai 352_2
Dias, one of the Titans 352
Diasia 1138 ff.
Di certi 13_1
Dictaean Cave, votive double axes from 639_2
See also Dikte, Mt
Dido 1059
Didyma near Miletos
Cults: Apollon Διδυμαῖος 317 f. Apollon Διδυμεύς 317_2 Zeus Διδυμαῖος 317 Zeus Σωτήρ 317_2 Zeus Τέτιος 318_0
Rite: βοηγία 318_0
Diermai 1219
Dies 3_0
Diespiter
Function: thunder 830_0
Etymology: 277_2 841_0
See also Iupiter
Diias See Dias, one of the Titans
Dike
Epithets: πᾶσιν ἀρωγός 1033_1 πολύποινος 1033_1
Genealogy: st. of Ananke 316_0
Functions: cosmic 316_0 gate-opener 316_0 justice 931_0 laws 1095_0
Attribute: Διὸς μάκελλα 806_1
Associated with Zeus 1029 1033_1 Zeus and Themis 897_3
Dikte, headland on south coast of Crete 928_0
Dikte, Mt
Cult: Iupiter Dictaeus 927_1 Zeus Δικταῖος 927_1 928_0 929_0
Epithet: Κορυβαντίδος...πέτρης 942_0
Myths: Anchiale bears Idaean Daktyloi 929_0 birth of Zeus 928_0 986_0 Britomartis 939_1 city founded by Zeus 928_0 929_0 Epimenides sleeps in Dictaean Cave 929_0 infancy of Zeus 928_0 929_0 Kouretes rear Zeus 928_0 Meliai 933_0 Minos descends into Dictaean Cave and returns with laws of Zeus 929_0 Zeus consorts with Europe 929_0
Etymology: 928_0
—— identified with mountain-range south-west of Praisos 929_0 identified wrongly with Mt Lasithi 929_0 Dictaean Cave on, identified wrongly with Psychro Cave 929_0 Dictaean Cave on, not yet discovered 929_0 Dictaean Cave on 928_0 929_0
Dikton, cape near Mt Ide in Crete 945_1
Diktynna
Cult: Crete 986_0
Diktys
Myths: drowned in river while reaching for onions 986_0 nursed by Isis 986_0
Etymology: 986_0
Dindymene 970_0
Dings
Identified with Ziu (?) 50 f.
Dinos 2_4
Diobessi, a Thracian tribe 276_7
Diocletian
Personates Iupiter 1194
Diogenes of Apollonia 1024
Dioi, a Thracian tribe 276_7
Diokaisareia in Kilikia
Cults: thunderbolt 810 Zeus (?) 810
—— coins of 810 851

Dion, an early Laconian king
Myth: entertains Apollo and Liber Pater 353
Dion (?), consort of Dione
Cult: Dodona 350_6
Function: sky 350_6
Superseded by Zeus 353
Dion in Makedonia
Cult: Zeus 1111
—— coins of 1111
Dione
Cults: Dodona 350 350_6 353 Termessos (Termessus Maior) 974_0
Myth: consorts with Zeus 1029
Function: sky 350_6
Etymology: 341_4 350
Type: laureate and veiled 162_1
Associated with Zeus 974_0 1029
Dionnysos 272
See also Dionysos
Dionysalexandros 253_3 277_3
Dionysiastai 925_0
Dionysiastai Eurythemidioi 1157_3
Dionysopolis in Phrygia
Cults: youthful hero (? Lairmenos) on horseback bearing double axe 566 Zeus Ποτηος (accent unknown) 285
—— coins of 285_1 566
Dionysos
Cults: Antiocheia on the Orontes 428 1197 Apsinthos 270 Arkesine 246_1 Athens 245_5 985_0 Bessoi 269 Boiotia 946_0 Chios 667 f. Delphoi 218 ff. 233 ff. 250 257_4 839 841 Dorylaeion 280_1 Elis 823_1 932_0 Euromos 575_1 Hagia Triada (?) 522 524 Hierokaisareia in Lydia 1025 Imbros 314_0 Karia 565_2 Kaulonia (?) 1041 Krastonia 114 f. Kypros 599_2 (?) Mt Laphystion in Boiotia 899_1 Lemnos 314_0 Lerne 599_2 Lesbos 1021 Lindos 925_0 Maidike 270 Megara 257_4 Mytilene 238_0 1022 Naxos 250 1092_9 1093_0 Nisyros 1157_3 Nuserat in Mysia $882_{0(0)}$ Odrysai 269_1 Odrysai (?) 661 f. Orchomenos in Boiotia 899_1 Pagasai 660 Paionia 250_4 270 Panormos near Kyzikos (?) $882_{0(0)}$ Pergamon 287_2 288_0 954_0 1184_1 Phigaleia 244_4 Rhodes 250 Saboi 270 Samos 1021 Samothrace 314_0 Satrai 269_1 Synnada (?) 362 f. Tenedos 522 658 ff. (?) 662 667 f. Thasos 314_0 Thespiai (?) 599_2 Thrace 269 ff. 314_0 821 851 Thraco-Phrygians 268 ff. Tralleis 960_0 Troizen 599_2
Epithets: ἄγριος 661_1 Ἀγνιεύς 164 Ἀκρατοφόρος 244_4 ἀναξ 243_3 (?) 246_1 659 Ἀνθρωποῤῥαίστης 243_3 522 662 ἄῤῥητος 661_1 Ἀσδούλης 270 Αὐλός 251_0 270 Βακχεύς 1093_0 Βάκχος 243_3 250_4 957_2 1030 Βάλιν or Βαλήν 270_5 271_0 Βαλιός (?) 271_0 βοτρυόκομος 250_4 Βότρυς 413_2 βραῖτάς (?) 243_3 Βρόμιος 219 243_3 838 852 $882_{0(0)}$ δεύτερος

Dionysos (cont.)
ἄλλος...ὑέτιος Ζεύς 276_1 Delius 250_4 Διθύραμβος 243_3 δίκερως 661_1 δίμορφος 661 Διὸς φώς 273 Dryalos (?) 250_4 Δύαλος 250_4 270 Ἑβδομεύς 238_0 Egyptian 29 εἰραφιώτης 957_2 Ἐλευθεριεύς 97_0 Ἐνδενδρος 946_0 Ἐνόρχης 1021 1022 ἐρίβρομος 957_2 Εὔαιος (leg. Εὐιος) 275_8 Εὐβουλεύς (?) 119_0 Euhius 250_4 εὔιος 234_5 243_3 (?) 246_1 Εὐρυβάλωνδος 270_5 271_0 ζείδωρος 275 Ἠριεπαῖος 1025 Ἥρως 823_1 θυρσεγχής (?) 250_4 θυρσήρης (?) 243_3 Ἰαμβαδούλης 820_3 821 851 Ἰατρός 250 Ἰσοδαίτης 234 Καθηγεμών 287_2 288_0 (?) 1184_1 κισσοκόμης (κισσοκόμας) 246_1 Κισσός 413_2 κισσοχαίτης 243_3 (?) 246_1 κρύφιος 661_1 λαθικηδής 954_0 Λαφύστιος 899_1 μαινομέναις ἀνθέουτα τιμαῖσι 234_5 Μάσαρις 565_2 Μειλίχιος 1092_9 1093_0 1112_8 Μελπόμενος 245_5 μιαιφόνος 275 Μουσαγέτης 250 Νέος 96 Νυκτέλιος 234 257_4 νυκτέριος 257_4 νυκτίπολος 257_4 νυκτιφαής 257_4 ὀρσιγύναικα (acc.) 234_5 Παιάν 250 Παώνιος 250_4 Πέλεκυς (not Πελεκᾶς or Πελεκῶνος, nor Πελάγιος) 660 Πλείσταρος (?) 270 πολύμνιος 1022 Πολύμνος (?) 1022 Σαβάζιος 270 Σάβος 270 Σαώτης 599_2 Σμίνθιος (?) 250 Συκεάτης $488_{0(0)}$ Τγιάτης 250_3 Τηης 275 ὑποκόλπιος 250_4 Φαλλήν 522_0 φυσίζωος 954_0 χρυσεγχής 250_4 Ὠμάδιος 667 f.
Festivals: brumal rites 235 discussed by Pherekydes of Leros 275 Lenaia 236 Phallagogia 1022 Rural Dionysia 236 vernal rites (Theoxenia ?) 235
Rites: advent in spring 243 f. awakened from annual sleep by axe striking caldron (?) 660_0 Bacchants put bowls of bronze or iron over their breasts 346_0 βουφόνον...θεράποντα 659_1 death and resurrection 234 dithyramb 234 f. human sacrifice at Apsinthos 270_4 human sacrifice in Chios 667 f. human sacrifice in Lesbos 1022 human sacrifice at Orchomenos in Boiotia 899_1 human sacrifice in Tenedos 667 f. human sacrifice in Thrace 1022 mysteries 1030 nocturnal 257_4 sacrifice by Labyadai 235 243 f. wearing of white-poplar 471
Priests: Euneidai 245_5 ἱερεὺς διὰ γένους 1184_1 ἱεροφάντης 1025 Vologaisos 269_1
Priestess: πρόμαντις 269_1
Worshippers: Διονυσιασταί 925_0 Διονυσιασταὶ Εὐρυθεμίδιοι 1157_3 θυιάδες 1022 θυστάδες 1022
Personated by Antinoos 97_0 Antiochos vi 97_0 M. Antonius 97_0 Caligula 97_0

Dionysos (cont.)
Cretan prince (?) 522 Demetrios Poliorketes 97_0 Hadrian (?) 97_0 kings of Thrace 271_0 Mithradates vi Eupator 96_3 245_0 Nero 96_3 (?) 97_0 254 (?) 1128_0 Ptolemy xiii Auletes 96_3 various scions of the imperial house 97_0

Myths: Brasiai 671 brings Semele up from spring at Lerna 1022 buried by Apollon at Delphoi 218 ff. cut up, boiled, roasted, and eaten by Titans 218 f. 239 1030 f. Delpboi 239_0 descent to Hades 1022 destroys mice in Rhodes 250_2 guarded by Apollon and Kouretes 1030 his beart placed in a gypsum image by Zeus 1031 his heart rescued by Athena 1031 his limbs arranged by Apollon 1031 instructed and equipped by Mystis 346_0 invades India 7_2 invents wine 250_3 nursed by Dryades 276 nursed by Hyades 274 f. nursed by Ma 565_2 nursed by Maenads 347_0 nursed by Nymphs 1030 nursed by Polyhymno 1022 Polyhymnos 1022 put together again by Rhea 1032 reborn as Thyonianus (?) 393_9 restored by Apollon 251_2 resurrection 1032 a seven-months' child 237_0 sits on throne of Zeus 1030 slain in bovine form 1030 Telepbos 1184_3 Titans 199_2 218 ff. 251_2 841 1030 f.

Metamorphosed into bull 932_0 cp. 1030 jay (?) 524 Zeus, Kronos, babe, youth, lion, horse, horned snake, tiger, bull 1030

Genealogy: s. of Semele 220 s. of Zeus 317 1098_9 s. of Zeus by Persephone 1135_4 s. of Zeus by Phersephone or Kore 1029

Functions: chthonian 471 1029 figs 1092_9 1093_0 health 250_3 rain 274 ff. rebirth of Zeus 381 823_1 snow 275 thunder 852 wine 557_1

Etymology: 271 ff.

Attributes: ass 464 bay-wreath 244 390 (?) double axe 661 drinking-horn 661 grape-bunch 960_0 ivy-wreath 388 jay 275_8 524 kántharos 661 960_0 1133_1 lyre 244 838 nebris 270_3 nightingale (?) 275_8 panther 261 270_3 φρυγίλος (?) 275_8 swallow (?) 275_8 thýrsos 261 ff. tripod 841 vine-branch 1133_1

Types: Apollíne 244 ff. 838 bearded 388 661 in car drawn by panthers 245_0 double bust (with Ariadne) 390 (?) 391 392_1 (?) cp. 661 double bust (with Hermes) 388 double bust (with Satyr) 388 double bust (with Zeus) 388 fire 114 f. horned 244_4 horned babe 1029 on horseback 270_3 821 infant nursed by Nymph

Dionysos (cont.)
245_0 Janiform (bearded + beardless) 387 light 114 f. with lyre in art, but not in literature 246_0 pillar 164 riding on bull 661 seated as child amid Kouretes 1210 seated as lyre-player 245_5 standing with grape-bunch in raised right hand and kántharos in lowered left 960_0 two bearded masks hung back to back on pillar 381 with wings on bead 388 youthful head 575_1 Zeus-like 662 f. 847

Identified with Agathos Daimon 1129_0 Apollon 252 ff. Apollon and Helios 253 f. Attis 294 296 298 Ešmun 314_0 Hittite god bearing grape-bunches and corn-ears 565 Jehovah 1197 younger Kabeiros 664_1 Liber 1031 Liber Pater 220_0 Osiris 252 Phanes 1026 1051 Sabazios 275 Zagreus 234 1029 Zeus 282 287 f. 288_0

Assimilated to Apollon 244 ff. Thracian rider-god 821 823

Associated with Apollon 164 233 ff. Ariadne 245_0 245_5 261 390 (?) 391 661 (?) Athena and Zeus Ἀραβύριος 925_0 the Egyptian Herakles 7_2 Kore 120_1 Maenads 115 246_0 262 f. 265 Nero 97_0 Oistros (?) 1041 Satyrs 245_5 246_0 262 f. 265 314_0 Silenoi 661 Zeus and Themis 261 f.

Compared with Apollon 252

In relation to Agathos Daimon 1129_0 Apollon 267 Ares 565_2 mankind 1032 Semele 663 Zeus 267 ff. 522 1210

Superseded by Apollon 243 ff. 839 841 Christ 1209 f.

—— as one of the first three Dioskouroi 1135_4 attendants of, boiled by Medeia 212 effigy of, dedicated to Zeus 958_9 epitaph of 220 mystics of 124_4 mysteries of $882_{0(0)}$ nurses of 347_0 pillars of 423 in the plural 252_3 sceptre of 1026 tomb of 219 231 239 toys of 1030 tripod of 231

Diōnysos 272
See also Dionysos

Diopetes See Artemis Types Διοπετές

Dios, island off coast of Kephallenia 908_0

Dios, the Thracian Zens
Cults: Thrace 277 ff. 288 313 824 Thraco-Phrygians 277 ff. 313 842
Epithets: Νῶσος (hence the Hellenic Διόννσος) 277 288 313 842 Πάπας 277
Functions: sky 277 842 twofold, as Father and Son 288 842
Etymology: 824
Superseded by Zeus Δίος 280 f.

Diosatabyriastai 924_0 925_0 1129_0 1157_3

Dios Bous 318_0

Dios Elpides
Cult: Miletos 962_0

Dios Gonai in Boiotia 961_0
Dios Gonai in Lydia 961_0
Dioskouroi
Cults: Aizanoi 313 Akmoneia 313 Apameia 313 Mt Argaios 980_0 Athens 1135_4 Bria 313 Etruria 431 f. 1064 Euromos 574 f. Sparta 261_0 436 ff. 1062 Synnada 313 Tarentum 1064 Tauion 1064 Temenothyrai 313 Themisonion (?) 313 Therapne 1064 Tusculum (?) 368_2 Tyndaris 918_0
Epithets: Ἀμβούλιοι 261_0 Ἄνακτες 311 1135_4 Λαπέρσα 1069
Festival: Theoxenia 443 1064
Rites: lectisternium 443 sacrifice of oxen 606_3
Personated by Aristomenes and friend 436_9 Atys and Kotys (?) 312 L. Aurelius Commodus and Antoninus 443 Epiphanes and Kallinikos 442 f. kings of Sparta 436 440 Nero Caesar and Drusus Caesar 442 Tiberius and Germanicus 441 f.
Myths: alive and dead on alternate days 433 their descendants found temple on Mt Kasion in Egypt 984_4 feud with sons of Aphareus 437 Gigantomachy 435 in Iliad 436 in Kypria 438 f. in Lykophron 439 in Odyssey 437 in Pindar 437 f. life underground 1064
Genealogy: sons of Tyndareos 918_0
Functions: anthropomorphic sky-pillars 980_0 both mortal men 436 one mortal, the other immortal 437 f. 440 halves of the sky 432 ff. 843 ἡ συμφωνία τῶν ἀπάντων 434_3 incarnate in kings of Sparta (?) 436 440 living and dead on alternate days 437 ff.
Attributes: amphorae 1062 ff. black and white piloi 435 caps with stars 313_2 313_4 313_6 433 574 f. 1062 dagger 432_3 dōkana 160 f. 436_8 841 1063 f. horses 313_2 313_5 313_8 knife 432_3 Phrygian caps 432_2 (See also caps with stars) piloi 307 1063 (See also caps with stars) semicircles 434 sepulchral jars 436_8 1062 ff. stars 980_0 (See also caps with stars)
Types: aniconic pillars crowned with rays 980_0 bearded and beardless 451 on short column or altar 606_3 driving two-horse chariot 1064 Etruscan 160 with heads connected by forked bar 432_3 with heads connected by pediment 431 432_2 on horseback 442 479 1064 male and female 451 with one arm apiece 432 with one wing apiece 432 radiate 432_3 reclining in cave 1064 reclining at feast 1064 standing with horses 1064 standing without horses 1062 1063 1064
Dioskouroi (cont.)
Associated with Helene 1003 ff. Zeus 1209_2
Compared with children in 'Expulsion' tales 1014
In relation to Attis 307 ff.
Superseded by St Peter and St Paul 606
—— in folk-tales 1003 ff. jars of 1062 ff.
Diosmilichiastai 1157
Diosphoros (?) 970_0
Diotima 130_7 1167
Diphilos 1167
Dipoinos 739
Dipsakos 904_1
Dirke, the spring 1013
Dirke
Myths: Antiope 1013 1015 Zethos and Amphion 1013 1015 1019
Type: dragged by bull 1019
Dis (Δίς) 344_0
See also Zeus
Dis
Cult: Celts 326
Rite: drink-offering of honey and pure wine 1142_7
Dius
Cults: Rome 724_0 ff. Tiber-island 726_0
Epithets: Fidius 724_0 ff. 849 Sancus 724_0 Sancus Sanctus Semo 724_0 Semo Sancus 724_0 Semo Sancus Sanctus 724_0 725_0
Rites: aenei orbes 724_0 725_0 (?) oath under open sky 724_0
Functions: lightning 726_0 849 sky 724_0 725_0
Type: archaic 'Apollon' 725_0 op. 1222
Identified with Herakles (?) 724_0 Simon Magus 726_0
Diviana 338_4
See also Diana
Divitia
Cults: Mercurius 64_0 Victoria 64_0
Divlit near Koloë
Cults: Artemis Ἀναείτις (Ἀναεῖτις?) 975_0 Zeus Σαβάζιος 975_0
—— sacred trees at 975_0
Dodona
Cults: Dione 350 350_6 353 Ge (Gaia) 350_1 Zeus 350 353 693_3 855_2 960_0 Zeus Δωδωναῖος (=Hadrian) 959_0 Zeus Νάιος 350_0 763_1 826
Epithet: δυσχείμερος 960_0
Rites: caldron of hot water 214 ff. Hyperborean offerings 497 oracular caldron 214 priests go with unwashen feet 960_0 priests sleep on ground 960_0
Priests: Ἕλλοι 677 f. Σελλοί 960_0 τόμαροι (τάμουροι) 693_3
Priestesses: 'Fly' 215_1 πελειάδες 350 693_3
Myth: Hellos 677 f. 848
—— bronze statuettes of Zeus from 739 1222 (?) Corcyraean whip at 826 851 double axe of iron from 678

Dodona (cont.)
gong at 133_0 214_1 826 1226 oak at 413_2 677 692 848 painting of 677 small votive axes from 648 677
Dogs-heads 679
Dokimeion, coin of 756_2
Doliche
Cult: Zeus Δολιχαῖος 745_1
Domitian
Personates Zeus 97_0 1194 cp. 811_5
Domitilla, Catacomb of 1205 f.
Donar
Functions: autumn 62 f. fertility 63_1 thunder 63_1
Etymology: 63_1
Attributes: hammer 64_0 609 birch (?) 642_3
Identified with Hercules 62 f. 63_1 64_0 94_1 Iupiter 64_0 95_2 Volcanus 63_1
Donatus as author of the scholia P. Danielis on the commentaries of Servius 1059 cp. 468_1
Donuca, Mt 55
Dorians, Agyieis-pillars of 165 f. originally an Illyrian tribe 341
Dorylaeion
Cults: Aphrodite 281 Apollon 281 Augustus 281 Dionysos 280_1 Homonoia Σεβαστή 280_1 Mother of the gods 281 Poseidon 281 Sarapis 281 Zeus Βροντῶν 280_1 835_4 836 Zeus Δῖος (rather than Δῖος) 280 f. Zeus Μελησός 280_1 Zeus Παπίας Σωτήρ 292_4 Zeus Πατρῷος 280_1 Zeus Σημαντικός 280_1
—— bust of Zeus Βροντῶν from 836 coins of 280_1 seven tribes at 281
Dorylaos (?) 280_1
Dotion
Cult: Demeter 497_5 683 f.
Myth: Erysichthon 497_5 683 f. 848
Douris 122_0
Draccena (= Δράκαινα)
Cult: Blatsche 1084
Dracco (= Δράκων, i.e. Glykon)
Cult: Blatsche 1084
Drakon, king of Thebes in Boiotia 1087
Drakon, the river See Orontes
Drepanon in Achaia
Myth: so called after the δρέπανον of Kronos 448_0
Drepanon (Drepane) in Bithynia
Myth: so called after the δρέπανον of Zeus 448_0
Drepanon (Drepane) = Phaiakia or Korkyra 448_0
Drepanon = Zankle in Sicily 448_0
Dreros
Cult: Zeus Ταλλαῖος 948_1
—— oath of 730_0
Drios, Mt, in Naxos
Cult: Zeus Μηλώσιος 918_1
Droiophoroi 411_9
Druids regarded oak-mistletoe as fallen from heaven 643
Dryades 276 683 f.
Dryope
Myth: loved by Apollon 485 f. 486_5
Metamorphosed into black-poplar 486 lotus-tree 486_2
Genealogy: m. of Amphissos by Apollon 486 w. of Andraimon, s. of Oxylos 486
Superseded by Daphne 486
Dryopes
Cult: πόποι 293_0
—— migration of 458 (?) 1123 (?)
Dryops
Genealogy: s. of Apollon by Dia, d. of Lykaon 486_1 486_5 s. of Sperchelos by the Danaïd Polydora 486
Dryos 972_0
Duana 339_0 See Diana
Durocortorum 359_3
Dyauš 1228
Dyrrhachion by euphemism for Epidamnos (?) 1112_7 coins of 1159_1
Dysaules (= Hades ?) 131 f.
Genealogy: f. of Eubouleus and Triptolemos 132 f. of Protogone and Misa by Baubo 131

Ebal, Mt, and Mt Gerizim as two-peaked cosmic mountain (?) $888_{0(0)}$
Ebdomaia 237_0
Ebimi near Amaseia
Cult: Zeus Στράτιος 976_0
Echekrates 209_3
Edessa
Cults: Helios 428 Monimos and Azizos 428 Tyche 429 f.
—— coins of 429 f. columns of 428 ff.
Eëtion 317
Egeria
Etymology: 418_0 (?)
Identified with Diana (?) 418_0
Egesta See Segesta
Egypt
Cults: Agdistis Ἐπήκοος 1228 Ammon 767_2 Amoun 293_0 $889_{0(0)}$ ape 987_0 Apis 942_0 baboon 987_0 benefactors of society 1132_6 Bes 457 cat 987_0 crocodile 987_0 double axe 545_0 fire 34_1 HA of the Double Axe 545_0 Hermes 382_2 Horos 255 ibis 987_0 Knepb 1127_0 Min 767_2 Mouth (= Isis) 1038 Tefênet 626_0 Zeus 1023
Rite: head buried separately from body and replaced by stone image 1218
Myths: anthropogony 1023 cosmic egg 1035 flight of the gods from Typhoeus 449_0 zoögony 1023
—— Homer indebted to 481_9 pyramids of $1145_{1(a)}$ $1145_{1(b)}$
Eide (Ide), a Cretan Nymph
Genealogy: d. of Melissos by Amaltheia and st. of Adrasteia 933_0
Function: protectress of laws 933_0

Eikthyrnir 305_0
Eileithyia
Cults: Gortyna 723_0 Hierapytna 723_0 Megara 168_1 Phaleron 183 Prianso 723_0 Tegea (?) 1148_4
Epithets: Βινταία 723_0 ἡπία 184_2 λυσίζωνος 184_2
Function: child-birth 709
Attributes: girdle 184 torch (?) 1148_4
Eilenia
Cult: Athena 625
—— Epeios' axe in temple at 625
Eirene
Cult: Eumeneia in Phrygia 970_0
Epithets: εὐσεβεστάτη Σεβαστή 970_0 λιπαρή 954_0 φίλολβος 931_0
Personated by Marcia Otacilia Severa, w. of Philippus i 970_0
Eisenlaci 224_1
Ekbatana, axe-head from 632_6 Ktesias on 832
Ektenes 824_6
El
Identified with Kronos 558_0
Elagabalos
Cult: Emesa (?) 814_3
Elaia in Aiolis
Cults: Theos Βασιλεὺς Εὐμένης Σωτήρ (=Eumenes ii) 960_0 Zeus Σωτήρ 955_0
Elakataion, Mt, in Thessaly
Cult: Zeus Ἠλακαταῖος or Ἠλακατεύς 397_0
Elaphebolia 1140_4
Elasson in Thessaly
Cult: Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(13)}$
Elateia in Phokis
Cult: Athena Κραναία 1158_{10}
Elaton, charioteer of Amphiaraos 1071
Elatos, f. of Ischys 1089
Elatos, Lapith chief 471
Elchanos (?) = Velchanos
Cult: Knossos $948_{0(3)}$
Elektor
Etymology: 397_0 947_0
See also Helios Epithets ἠλέκτωρ
Elektra, d. of Agamemnon 1132_6
Etymology: 397_0 947_0
Elektryon
Etymology: 397_0
Elektryone (Alektrona)
Cult: Ialysos 499
Rite: precinct must not be entered by horse, ass, mule, etc., nor by any one with sandals or articles made of pig-skin 499_5
Eleos
In relation to Zeus $875_{1(2)}$
—— altar of $875_{1(2)}$
Eleusis
Cults: Demeter 314_0 314_2 730_0 Hades 314_0 314_2 Kore 314_0 314_2 Persephone 132_2
Rites: burial within the house 1060 exhibition of corn-ear 291_2 292_0
Eleusis (cont.)
295_2 myrtle-wreaths 1165_1 mysteries 132_2 poppy-heads 1165_1
Priest: ἱεροφάντης 291_2 292_0
—— katabásion at 14 Telesterion at 1229
Eleuther 190_0
Eleutherai
Myth: Antiope 1013
Eleutheria
Cult: Kyaneai 101_1
Epithets: Ἀρχηγέτις Ἐπιφανής 101_1
Eleutheria, the festival 974_0 (?) 1121_0
Eleuthernai (Eleutherna)
Cults: Apollon 456_7 Apollon Στυρακίτης $491_{0(6)}$ $492_{0(6)}$ Artemis $492_{0(6)}$
Myth: Eleuther (?) 190_0
—— coins of $491_{0(6)}$
Ἐλ Ὁλάμ
Identified with Jehovah 1037
Elias, St
Cults: Beuyuk Evlia near Amaseia 975_0 Mt Helikon 898_5 Homolion 1227 Mt Hymettos 897_5 Lebadeia 899_2 Paros $875_{1(5)}$
Epithets: Dry 251_0 Wet 251_0
Attribute: chariot 820
Supersedes Zeus $875_{1(5)}$ 894_1 894_3 897_5 898_5 899_2 902_1 906_0 922_4 1073 1227
—— ascends to heaven by the Milky Way 38_5
Elijah 138_0
Elioun
Cult: Byblos $886_{0(30)}$
Epithet: Ὕψιστος $886_{0(30)}$
Genealogy: f. of Epigeios (Autochthon) Οὐρανός and Ge by Berouth $886_{0(30)}$
Elis
Cults: Aphrodite Οὐρανία 68_1 Athena Ὁπλοσμία 291_0 Dionysos 932_0 Dionysos Ἥρως 823_1 Hera Ὁπλοσμία 291_0 Myiacores 783 Sosipolis 1151 Zeus Ἀπόμυιος 783 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 728_0
Myth: Salmoneus 825
Elisha 1134_4
Elmo, St, fires of 980_0
Elnes (?) $1149_{2(1)}$
Elpides See Dios Elpides
Elysian Plain (Fields) 22_4 117 465 469
Elysian Way 36 ff. 117 840
Elysium 22 133 840
Emathia, hill at Antiocheia on the Orontes
Cult: Zeus Βορταῖος 1187 f.
Emesa
Cults: Aglibolos 814_3 Athena 814_3 Belos (?) 814_3 Elagabalos (?) 814_3 Iarebolos 814_3 Keraunos 814_3 Malachbelos (?) 814_3 Seimia (?) 814_3 Semiramis (?) 814_3
—— relief from 814_3
Emmeram, St 135
Emona
Cult: Laburus 609_3

Empedokles 358_6 432 (?) 505_1 852 1024 1033
Emporia 94_3 (?)
Emporion
Cults: Eros 1040 Persephone 1040
—— coins of 1039 f.
Endoios 410_0
Enhodia
Cult: Larissa in Thessaly 1155
Epithet: Φαστικά (? from Thracian tribe Ἀσταί) 1155_4
Associated with Zeus Μειλίχιος and Polis 1155
Eniautos (?) 1029 (in Prokl. in Plat. Cratyl. p. 110, 20 Pasquali ἐνιαυτὸς Kern would read Ἐνιαυτὸς)
Enipeus 460
Enkelados
Myths: Athena 713 777_2 909_0 Zeus 909_0
—— in town-arms of Girgenti 915_0
Enneakrounos 1119 1119_4
Ennius, the twelve deities of 100
Enoch 38_5 138_0
Enorches
Myths: born from egg laid by Daita or Daito (Daiso) w. of Thyestes 1021 founds temple of Dionysos Ἐνόρχης 1021
Etymology: 1021
Enyeus, f. of Homoloia 900_1
Eos See Heos
Epaphos
Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Io 961_0
Epeios
Myth: wooden horse 625
Attribute: axe 613 625
Epeiros
Cult: Hadrian 1121_0
—— coins of 763_1 folk-song from 828 f. folk-tales from 671 f. 1006 f.
Ephesos
Cults: Artemis 1082 Artemis Ἐφεσία 405 ff. 962_2 Nyx 1021 Zeus 728_0 743_7 962_2 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 962_2
Festivals: Barbillea 962_2 Hadrianeia 1121_0 Hadrianeia (Adriana, Adriania) Olympia 962_2
Rites: oath by Zeus taken over boar 728_0 thigh-pieces of oxen sacrificed to Zeus 962_2
Myths: Amazons 405 Hippo 405_3
—— Artemision at 580_7 637 f. 1230 coins of 408_0 409_0 743_7 962_2 963_0 columns dedicated by Kroisos etc. at 580_7 oak-tree at 405 Olympieion at 962_2
Ephesos, personification of the town 319_5
Ephialtes, b. of Otos 129 f. 130_4 317 712
Epoka, sacred spring at Palmyra $885_{0(20)}$
Ephraem the Syrian, St 116
Epidamnos See Dyrrhachion
Epidauros
Cults: Agathe 1126_0 Agathos Theos 1126_0 Aphrodite Μιλιχία 1144_3
Epidauros (cont.)
Apollon Μαλεάτας (Μαλεάτης) $487_{3(1)}$
Apollon Μαλεάτας Σωτήρ $487_{3(1)}$
Artemis Σαρωνία 413_7 Asklepios 413_7 1085 1177 f. Asklepios Ζεὺς Τέλειος 1076 f. Athena Ὀξυδέρκα 502_2 Auxesia $487_{3(1)}$ Azosioi Theoi $487_{3(1)}$ Ourania, the Carthaginian goddess $487_{3(1)}$ Tychai $487_{3(1)}$ Zeus Ἀποτρόπαιος 1157_0 Zeus Ἀσκληπιός 1061 1076 f. Zeus Ἀσκληπιὸς Σωτήρ 1076 f. Zeus Κάσιος 894_2 Zeus Κτήσιος 1066 Zeus Μιλίχιος (?) 1144_3 Zeus Φίλιος 1177 f.
Rite: πυροφορήσας 1126_0
Priest: ἱεραπολήσας 1126_0
Myth: Askles 1086
—— coins of 1078 f. metopes (?) from temple of Asklepios at 1081 f.
Epidauros Limera
Cult: Asklepios 1082
Myth: Asklepios arrives as snake on shipboard 1082
Epidotai
Cult: Pagasai 321_1
Epidotas
Cult: Argos 321_1
Epigeios (Autochthon) Οὐρανός, s. of Elioun Ὕψιστος by Berouth $886_{0(30)}$
Epigonos 955_0
Epikouros, portrait-herm of (with Metrodoros) 390
Epimenides 191 222 451 929_0 933_0 934_0 940_0 (?) 941_0 942_0
Epio, short form of Epione 1086
Epione, w. of Asklepios 1086
Epona 99_4 (?)
Epopeus
Personates Zeus (?) 1146
Myth: 1013
Genealogy: f. of Marathon f. of Sikyon 1146
Identified with Zeus 445
Epula Iovis (Sept. 13 and Nov. 13) 1172_0
Er, ancestor of Joseph 54_1
Er, s. of Armenios 54 114
Er, the Germanic sky-god
Cult: Bavaria 51 1212
Identified with Ziu 50 f. 114
Erato, w. of Malos $488_{0(0)}$
Erebos
Epithet: ὁμιχλῶδες 1022
Genealogy: child of Chronos or Herakles by Ananke or Adrasteia 1022 f. by Nyx of Aither, Eros, Metis 315_4 cp. 1050 f.
Erechtheion at Athens 24 789_7 792 965_0 1148
Erechtheus
Cult: Athens 793 f.
Myths: slain by Poseidon 794 slain by Zeus 794 struck by thunderbolt 24
Genealogy: f. of Metion f. of Sikyon 1146 f. of Oreithyia 444 f. of Sikyon 1146 f. of Thespios 1151

Erechtheus (cont.)
Functions: king regarded as lightning-god 794 1071 lightning 793
Etymology: 793 1146
Identified with Poseidon 793 Zeus 793
Compared with Aleos 1147 Amphiaraos, Latinus, Aeneas 1071
Eresos
Cults: Helios 729_0 Zeus 729_0
Eretria
Cult: Zeus Ὁμολώιος 901_0
—— coin of 903_0
Erichthonios
Myth: buried in precinct of Athena at Athens 944_0
Eridanos
Myths: Phaethon and Heliades 472 ff. set in sky as constellation Eridanus or Flumen 476
Etymology: 481 483 (?) 1025
Attributes: branch 479 poplar 468 snake 479
Identified with Padus 476 Rhodanus 476
—— at first none other than Milky Way 481
Eridanos, as original name of Phaethon 476_5
Eridanus, the constellation 476 481 483_2
Identified with Neilos 481 1025 Okeanos 481 1025
Eridu 482 f.
Erikepaios (Erikapaios)
Cult: Thrace (?) 1025
Myth: swallowed by Zeus 1027
Functions: ἑτέρας ἔφορος δυνάμεως 1025 ζωή 1024 ζωοδοτήρ 1024
Etymology: 1025
Identified with Eros 1039 Metis (masc.) 1024 1039 Phanes 1024 1039 Protogonos 1027 1039
In relation to Athena 1032
—— sceptre of 1026
Erineos 1103
Erinyes
Epithets: Ἀβλαβίαι $1113_{0(1)}$ Εὐμενίδες 1112_7 $1113_{0(1)}$ Σεμναί 1112_7 $1113_{0(1)}$
Rites: offerings without wine 1097_2
Myth: sprung from blood of Ouranos falling on Gaia 447_8
Type: deformed 1100_0
Associated with Zeus, Ge, and Helios 728_0 f.
—— euphemistic titles of 1112_7 $1113_{0(1)}$ increasingly subordinated to Zeus 1102_7
Erinys
Epithets: ἠεροφοῖτις 1102_7 νυμφόκλαυτος 1102_7 ὄρπα 315_3 ὑστερόποινος 1102_7
Functions: angry ghost 207_0 soul of murdered man 1100_0 1101
Associated with Zeus and Moira 1102_7
In relation to Apollon 1102_7 Eros 315_3 Iupiter 1102_7 Pan 1102_7 Zeus 1102_7
Eriza, coins of 565
Ermine Street 91
Eros
Cults: Aphrodisias 572_{10} Athens 1043 Emporion 1040 Plarasa 572_{10}
Epithets: Ἄρπυς 315_3 Βακχεύς 316_6 θεῶν πάτερ ἠδὲ καὶ υἱέ 316_6 πολυτερπής 316_6 1028 στίλβων νῶτον πτερύγοιν χρυσαῖν 1020 1050 Φίλιος (?) 1176_3 Ψίθυρος 1043
Rite: mysteries 1167 f.
Myths: judgment of Eros 949_5 springs from egg laid by Nyx 1039 Typhoeus 449_0 Zeus transforms himself into Eros when about to create the world 316
Genealogy: a bone of contention 316_0 s. of Aphrodite (?) and Ouranos 316_0 s. of Aphrodite and Zeus 316_0 s. of Ge and Ouranos 315_4 s. of Nyx 1020 s. of Nyx and Aither 315_4 1051 s. of Nyx and Erebos 315_4 1050 f. (?)
Functions: cosmogonic 316 1019 ff. 1038 ff. funerary 309 male Erinys 315_3 male Harpy 315_3 primeval power 315 f. soul 1039 ff. 1050 soul of the sky-god 315_3 specialised form of Ker 315_3
Etymology: 315_3
Attributes: chlamys 1045 club 1046 globe 1047 lion-skin 1046 thunderbolt 1045 f. torch 309
Types: with Anteros 1221 with attributes of Herakles 1046 with attributes of Herakles and Zeus 1046 f. with attributes of Zeus 1045 ff. babe 1045 with bird-wings 1050 boy 1044 breaking thunderbolt 1045 bust 572_{10} Byzantine 1050 carrying globe 1047 chasing butterfly 1047 child 1045 clinging to swan 1045 in cosmic egg 1048 with crossed legs and torch reversed (= Thanatos) 1045 embracing Psyche 1050 emerging from head of Pegasos 1040 genre 1045 ff. Graeco-Roman 1045 Hellenistic 860 1044 f. holding thunderbolt 1045 hovering youth 124_3 261 737 on ladder 124_3 Lysippos (?) 1046 modern 1050 nursed by Hermaphroditos 152_9 pantheistic 1047 planting foot on globe 1047 psychostasia 734_3 Renaissance 1050 riding horse 1040 riding Psyche round race-course 1047 sailing on wine-jar 1047 schoolboy 1048 schoolmaster 1048 sitting on globe 1047 soul 315_3 standing on Aphrodite's arm 1043 steering murex-shell 1047 stepping down from behind shoulder of Aphrodite 1044 stripping Herakles of his weapons (?) 1046 torch-bearing 309 vintage 1050 winged mannikin 1039 ff. wingless (?) 1050

Eros (cont.)
as Zeus with thunderbolt and sceptre (?) 1045
Identified with Erikepaios 1039 Metis (masc.) 1039 Phanes 1026 1039 Protogonos 1039 Zeus 1028
Assimilated to Herakles 1046 Zeus 1045 ff.
Associated with Psyche 1045
In relation to Ker 315_3 Psyche 315_3 Wind 1039 Zeus 316_2 316_5
Survives as early Renaissance putto 1050
Erotes
Types: coining money (?) 1047 f. fulling clothes 1048 genre 1047 f. making oil 1047 in nest 1049 selling wine 1048 twining garlands 1047 winged 1050 wingless 1050
Associated with Psychai 1047 f.
Erymne, old name of Tralleis 587_2
Erysichthon
Myths: Dotion 497_5 683 f. 848 Prasiai 497
—— hunger of 683 f.
Erysichthon the Giant 684_4
Erythrai in Ionia
Cults: Ablabiai $1113_{0(1)}$ Apollon 730_0 Athena Ἀποτροπαία 1157_0 Demeter 730_0 Zeus 730_0 Zeus Ἀποτρόπαιος 1157_0
Esculapius (sc. Aesculapius) 1086
Ešmun
Cults: Kition 1095_0 Phoinike 314_0
Type: obelisk 1095_0
Identified with Dionysos Σαβάζιος 314_0 Kadmilos 314_0
Esquilinus, Mons 401
Essir-keui in Bithynia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_5
Este
Cult: Rehtia 1220
Esus
Cults: Gallia Belgica 547_0 Gallia Lugudunensis 547_0 619
Attribute: axe 619
Associated with Iovis and Volcanus 547_0 619 Mercurius and Rosmerta (?) 547_0
Eteo-Cretans at Praisos 930_0
Eteokles
Genealogy: f. of Orchomenos and Minyas 1150_5 s. and b. of Oidipous 825_2
Eteonos
Cults: Demeter Εὐρυόδεια 1152 Oidipous 1151 ff.
Myth: Oidipous 1152
Etruria
Cults: Aesculapius 1085 f. Ani (=Ianus) 338_3 Charon 627_3 803 Culśanś 378 Dioskouroi 431 f. 1064 god of the Underworld 805 f. 850 Tina (=Iupiter) 338_3 Tiv 339_0 Uni (=Iuno) 338_3 Usil 339_0
—— gold necklace from 528
Etrusci, lightning-lore of 5_5 805 mirrors of 160
Euboia, three golden children in folk-tale from 1007 f.
Eubouleus (=Hades) 118_4 $1113_{0(2)}$
Functions: one of the first three Dioskouroi 1135_4 s. of the nether Zeus (?) 119_0
Identified with Phanes 1026
Euboulos 190_0
Euchaites (=Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$
Eudaimonia
Cult: Philadelpheia in Lydia 1229
Eudoxos 222
Eueides (=Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$
Euhemeros 342_0 554_3 588 927_1 928_0 981_1 1087 1135_4 cp. 940_0
Eukleia, the goddess 118_3
Eukleia, the festival 118_3
Eukleides, s. of Kleagoras 1106 f.
Eukles (=Hades) 118_3 $1113_{0(2)}$
See also Euklos
Euklos (=Hades) 118_3
See also Eukles
Eukoline (=Hekate) $1114_{0(4)}$
Eumeneia in Phrygia
Cults: Agathos Daimon (=the emperor Philippus i) 970_0 Apollon 571 970_0 εὐσεβεστάτη Σεβαστὴ Εἰρήνη (=Marcia Otacilia Severa, w. of Philippus i) 970_0 Men Ἀσκαηνός 970_0 Meter Theon Ἀνγδιστις (=Ἄγδιστις) 970_0 Zeus Σωτὴρ 970_0
—— coins of 565 f. 571
Eumenes i divinised as Zeus Εὐμένης 960_0 1228 f.
Eumenes ii divinised as Theos Βασιλεὺς Εὐμένης Σωτὴρ 960_0
Eumenides
Rites: libation of μελίκρατον (water and honey) 1142_0 νηφάλια 1142
Genealogy: daughters of Nyx 825_1
Function: avenge bloodshed 1130_1
—— euphemistic names of $1113_{0(1)}$
Eumolpos, a flute-player 670
Euneidai 245_5
Euneos 245_5
Eunomia 954_0
Euphorbos, priestly ruler of Aizanoi 964_3
Euphranor 1126_0 1127_0
Euphronios 121_3
Euripides, portrait-herm of (with Sophokles) 389 tomb of, struck by lightning 9
Euromos
Cults: Dionysos 575_1 Dioskouroi 574 f. Zeus 572_7 573_4 574 f. 1220 Zeus Εὐρωμεύς (?) 589_0
Priests: dedicate temple-columns 580 —— coins of 572 ff. 1220 site of 588_7
Europe
Myth: Zeus 348 929_0 1131_1
Compared with Themis 267_5
Euros
Type: horse 830_7

Euryale 718
Eurydike
Myth: Orpheus 211_2 1022
Eurykomis 1141
Eurymede, m. of Bellerophon 721_2
Euryodeia (Euryodia)
Genealogy: m. of Arkeisios by Zeus 1152_4
Function: earth 1152_4
Eurypylos 281_4
Eurytos
Genealogy: b. of Kteatos 317 s. of Molione, nominally by Aktor, really by Poseidon 1015_8
Eusebeia, former name of Kaisareia in Kappadokia 978_0
Eustasia 954_0
Euthymos, statues of, struck by lightning 9
Euxeinos by euphemism for Axenos 1112_7
Exouanoun, old name of Aizanoi 964_3
Eyuk, Hittite sculptures at 620 f.

Fagus
Cult: Aquitania 402_1
Fagutal 401 403_0
Falacer
Cult: Rome 1226
Epithet: Divus Pater 1226
Falerii
Cult: Ianus 373
Festival: Struppearia 1171_1
Fama 915_0 (?)
Faolan 683
Fata
Attributes: baskets 862_{10} scales 862_{10}
Types: spinning 862_{10} weighing 862_{10}
Fauna
Epithet: Bona Dea 724_0
Faunus
Associated with Picus 400
Faunus, king of Aborigines 404_0
Faustulus 1016
Felicitas 71 (?) 98_1
Fenians 682
Fenrir (Fenris-wolf) 62_1 305_0
Feralia 19_0
Finmilena
Cult: Borcovicium 51_1
Fin 682 f.
Fintra 682
Fisos (Fisovios)
Cult: Umbria 724_0
Epithet: Sancios 724_0
Fiumicino, koûros of 1221
Florianus, M. Annius, statue of, struck by lightning 10
Flumen, the constellation 476
Fons
Cults: Ianiculum 368_3 Lambaesis 369_0
Associated with (Aqua) Ventina and Vires 306_4
See also Fontus
Fonteii 368_2
Fontes
Cult: Rome 369_0 401_0
Associated with Iupiter Optimus Maximus Caelestinus 369_0 Iupiter Optimus Maximus Caelestinus and Minerva 401_0
Fontus
Cult: Tusculum (?) 368_2
Genealogy: s. of Ianus 368 394_3
Type: bifrontal 368
See also Fons
Forrinae See Nymphs
Fortuna
Cult: Rome 1195_2
Function: one of the Penates 1059
Attributes: cornu copiae 95_1 globe beneath foot 862_{10} steering-paddle 95_1 wheel 57_6
Associated with Iupiter 1195_2 Minerva 95_1 96
In relation to Minerva 95
—— on Iupiter-column (?) 71
Frampton, Roman villa at 604
Freyia 682
Frija
Attribute: necklace 61_0
Identified with Iuno 59 94_1
Differentiated into Iuno and Venus 67
Furiae $808_{0(17)}$ 1102_7
Furii 368_2
Furor 862_{10}
Furrina
Cult: Rome $808_{0(17)}$

Gabriel 793_4
Gadeira
Cult: Herakles 423
Gaia
Cults: Delphoi 500 1216 Dodona 350_1 Laodikeia on the Lykos 1186 Pergamon 1185
Epithets: ἀνθοτρόφος 1216 εὐρύστερνος 176_1 Μήτηρ 350_1
Rite: drink-offering of honey and pure wine 1142_5
Myth: birth of Zeus 925_1
Genealogy: d. of Phanes by Nyx 1026 m. of Kronos 447_8 w. of Ouranos 447_8
Function: primeval power 315
Attributes: corn-ears 1186 cornu copiae 1185 1186 turreted crown 1185
Types: recumbent 1885 standing 1185 f.
See also Ge
Gala 40_3 43_4
See also Galaxias, Milky Way
Galaria or Galarina
Cults: Dionysos 1133_1 Zeus Σωτήρ 1133_1
—— coins of 1133_1
Galatia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_5
Galaxias 42_3 42_4 43_4
See also Gala, Milky Way
Galba 7

Galerius
Personates Iupiter 1194
Galla Placidia, Mausoleum of 1208 1208_6
Galli
Rite: use vervain for casting lots and chanting oracles 395_2
Gallia Aquitanica, coins of 1040
Gallia Belgica
Cults: Esus 547_0 Mercurius 547_0 Rosmerta (?) 547_0
Gallia Lugudunensis
Cults: Esus 547_0 619 Iovis 547_0 619 pear-tree 1215 f. Volcanus 547_0 619
—— burial within the house in 1059 tombstones dedicated sub ascia in 547_0
Gallos, king of Pessinous (?) 970_0
Ganymedes
Myths: buried on Mt Olympos in Mysia 953_2 Mt Gargaron (Gargara) $.950_0$ golden vine 281_4 Tantalos 212_6 953_2 Zeus 188_0 281_4 933_0
Genealogy: f. of Ballenaios by Medesigiste 270_6
Types: with eagle 188_0 189_0 with eagle and golden vine (?) 281_4
Gargaris, the district 949_6
Gargaron (Gargara), Mt 949_5 ff.
Cult: Zeus 950_0 ff.
Myths: Ganymedes 950_0 Paris 950_0 Zeus consorts with Hera 950_0
Gargaros, the town 950_0 951_0 f.
Gargaros, s. of Zeus at (by?) Larissa in Thessaly 950_0
Gaza
Cults: Bes 674 Janiform god and goddess 673 f. Kronos (?) 675 Marnas 675 Rhea (?) 675 Satyric god 674 Zeus Ἀλδήμιος or Ἄλδος 675 1187_0 Zeus Κρηταγενής 675 —— coins of 673 ff. cosmic picture at 828
Gazaka
Cult: fire 34_1
Ge
Cults: Alopeke 1115 Athens 729_0 Bosporos Kimmerios 729_0 Chersonesos Taurike 729_0 Delphoi 176_1 841 Dodona 350_1 Karia 729_0 Knidos 729_0 Magnesia ad Sipylum 729_0 Paphlagonia 729_0 Pergamon 729_0 955_0 Phaselis 729_0 Smyrna 729_0 Sparta $487_{3(1)}$ 729_0 Thermos in Aitolia 729_0
Epithets: Εὐρυστέρνα 176_1 Εὐρύστερνος 176_1 Θεμέλη (= Σεμέλη) 279_3 Θέμις 176_1 266 f. (?) 268_0 841 (?) Θυώνη 279_3 Καρποφόρος 21_4 μᾶ 294_0 μέλαινα 176_1 μήτηρ 1023
Rite: οὐλαί, οὐλόχυται 18_3
Myths: golden apples 1020 f. Palikoi 909_0 sends up fig-tree to shelter Sykeas or Sykeus 1103_8
Genealogy: d. of Elioun Ὕψιστος by Berouth $886_{0(30)}$ d. of Phanes by Nyx 1026 m. by Ouranos of Klotho, Lachesis, Atropos, the Hekatoncheires Kottos, Gyges, Briareos, and the Kyklopes Brontes, Steropes, Arges 1023 m. of Aetos 933_0 m. of Eros by Ouranos 315_4 m. of Kekrops 1121 m. of Manes by Zeus 312 m. of Okeanos and Tethys by Ouranos 1020 m. of Titanes by Ouranos 1023 m. of Typhon by Tartaros 448_2 m. of Zeus 294_0 w. of Zeus 292_4
Functions: fertility 267 crops 350_1
Attributes: kteis 268_0 lamp 268_0 marjoram 268_0 omphalós 231 239 841 sword 268_0
Type: praying Zeus to rain 21_4
Identified with Apia (Api) 293_0 Chthonie 351_1 Semele 279_3 Themis 176_1
Associated with Poseidon 176_1 Zeus 266 f. 292_4 Zeus and Helios 729_0 $884_{0(0)}$ Zeus, Helios, and Erinyes 728_0 f. Zeus Μαλίχιος and Athenaia 1115 —— omphalós of 231 239 1216
See also Gaia
Gebeleïzis
Cult: Getai 227 805 822
Etymology: 227_4 805 822 f.
Identified with Salmoxis (Zalmoxis) 227 822
See also Zibeleïzis
Gela
Myth: Entimos and Antiphemos are bidden to beware of τὸν Τετράωτον 322_6 322_7
Gelas, the river in Sicily
Type: bull 910_1
Geloni tattooed 123_0
Gemini 430 477_8
—— Didyma named after (?) 318
Genes, river in Pontos 617
Genetaean headland
Cults: Zeus Γενηταῖος 616 Zeus Εὔξεινος 617 1097_0 Zeus Ξένιος 617
Genii
In relation to Manes, Lemures, Larvae, Lares familiares 1059
Genius
Cult: Mogontiacum 96_2
Epithet: generis nostri parens 1059
Genealogy: f. of Tages 1060 s. of Iupiter 1060
Attributes: acerra 1060 patera 1060
Types: anthropomorphic 1060 snake 1060
Identified with Iupiter 1060 Lar 1059
Assimilated to Nero 1060
—— of a man corresponds with Iuno of a woman 1059 on Iupiter-columns (?) 71
Genius Caeli Moutis
Cult: Rome 400_{11}

Genius Canabensium (?) 1214
Genius Fontis
Cult: Lambaesis 369_0
Associated with Iupiter Propagator Conservator 369_0
Genius huius loci
Cult: Sirmium 1194_4
Associated with Iupiter Optimus Maximus 1194_4
See also Genius loci
Genius Iovialis
Function: one of the Penates 1059
Genius Iovii Augusti
Cult: Rome 1194_4
Genius Iovis 1060
Genius loci
Cults: Divitia 64_0 Mogontiacum 620_2
See also Genius huius loci
Genius Neronis 96 98 cp. 1060
Genzano 419 f. 420_1
George, St 925_0
Geraistos
Cult: Artemis Βολοσία 906_3
Geraistos, Cape
Cult: Zeus (?) 903
Geraistos, eponym of Cape Geraistos
Genealogy: s. of Zeus and b. of Tainaros 903_1
Gerania, Mt
Cult: Zeus (?) 897_1
Myth: Megaros (Megareus) 897_1
Gerizim, Mt
Cults: Iupiter Peregrinus $887_{0(31)}$ Iupiter Sarapis (?) $888_{0(0)}$ 983_0 Jehovah $887_{0(31)}$ mountain-top $888_{0(0)}$ the Virgin $888_{0(0)}$ Zeus Ἑλλήνιος $887_{0(31)}$ 983_9 Zeus Ξένιος $887_{0(31)}$ 983_9 Zeus Ὕψιστος $887_{0(31)}$ $888_{0(0)}$ 983_0
—— Antiochos iv Epiphanes and 1189_1 and Mt Ebal as two-peaked cosmic mountain (?) $888_{0(0)}$ ruins on $888_{0(0)}$
Gerlando, St
Supersedes Zeus Ἀταβύριος or Πολιεύς 910_1
Germanicus Caesar
Personates Zeus 260_0
—— house of 147
Germans, divination of 635
Germanus, St 214_0
Geryones or Geryoneus
Myth: Milky Way 37_2
Epithet: τρικέφαλος 716
Geta
Cult: Pergamon 1186
Personates Zeus 1186
Getai
Cults: Gebeleïzis 227 805 822 (See also Zibeleïzis) Salmoxis (Zalmoxis) 227 822 851 Zibeleïzis 822 851 (See also Gebeleïzis)
—— spoils of 982_0 tattooed 123_0
Ghel-Ghiraz near Amaseia
Cult: Zeus Στράτιος 976_0
Giant
Attributes: club 80 82 pair of clubs 80
Types: bovine 953_3 with snaky legs 76_0 82
Gigantes
Myths: attempt to reach heaven in folk-tale from Zakynthos 505 f. Gigantomachia 82 712 f. 752_4 830_7 831_1 911_0 953_3 973_1 men made from their blood 1032 sprung from blood of Ouranos falling on Gaia 447_8
Types: hoplites 712 with horns 399_1 with leaf-shaped ear 399_1 with snaky legs 399_1 973_1 1213
—— as arms of Girgenti 911_0 915_0
Girgenti, arms of 911_0 915_0 See also Agrigentum
Gjölde in Lydia
Cult: Thea Τύχη $881_{0(20)}$
Glanum 359_2
Glaukos of Anthedon 414_1
Glaukos, s. of Minos
Myths: Iapyges 30 raised from dead by Asklepios 1087
Glaukos, s. of Sisyphos 720 721_2
Glykon
Cults: Abonou Teichos 1083 ff. $1114_{0(7)}$ Apulum 1084 Nikomedeia 1084
Epithets: βασιλεύς 225 Dracco (= Δράκων) 1084
Oracles: 225 1083 f.
Rite: mysteries 1084
Priests: δᾳδοῦχοι 1084 ἱεροφάνται 1084
Types: snake with human head 1084 snake with more or less human face 1084
Identified with Khnemu-snake 1084
Gnathia, terra-cotta group from 831_1
Gnossus See Knossos
Gnostics, amulets of 625 f. 938_9 (?) 1084 double axe survives in teaching of 611 ff. formulae of 1084 tattooed 123_0
Goitosyros See Oitosyros
Golgoi
Cults: Theos Ὕψιστος $879_{0(15)}$ 980_3 Valc(b)anos (?) = Velchanos $948_{0(5)}$ Zeus Ϝαλκάνος (?) or Ϝαλχάνος (?) = Ϝελχάνος $948_{0(5)}$ —— sarcophagus from 717 f.
Gomphoi
Cults: Zeus Ἀκραῖος $871_{3(2)}$ Zeus Παλάμνιος 1099_0
Gonai Dios Hyetiou (later Deusiou ?), on Mt Tmolos 957_2
See also Dios Gonai
Gongosyros See Oitosyros
Gongyle (?) 824_7
Gonnoi
Cult: Athena Πολιάς 870_0
Gordios (Gordies), s. of Midas 311_8
Gorgippia
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος $883_{0(27)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ 948_2

Gorgon
Type: with two snakes rising from shoulders aud two others held in hands 930_0
Compared with 'Minoan' snake-goddess 930_0
In relation to Athena 502_2
See also Gorgoneion, Gorgones, Medousa
Gorgoneion 123_0 375 377 457 717 757_6 $808_{0(17)}$ 930_0 1155_7
See also Gorgon, Gorgones, Medousa
Gorgones 718
Gortyna
Cults: Aphrodite 723_0 Apollon Πύθιος 731_0 Apollon Πύτιος (= Πύθιος) 723_0 Ares 723_0 Artemis 723_0 Asklepios 1085 Athena Πολιοῦχος 731_0 Athena Ὠλερία 723_0 Eileithyia Βυνατία 723_0 Europe 946_0 947_0 Hera 723_0 Hermes 723_0 Hestia 723_0 Korybantes (Kyrbantes) 723_0 Kouretes (Koretes) 723_0 Leto (Lato) 723_0 Nymphs 723_0 731_0 Velchanos (?) $947_{0(2)}$ Zeus 947_0 Zeus Βιδάτας 723_0 Zeus Δικταῖος (?) 723_0 (Zeus) Ϝελχάνιος (?) $947_{0(2)}$ Zeus Κρηταγενής 731_0 Zeus Ὀράτριος 723_0 Zeus Σκύλιος 723_0
Festival: Velchania (?) $947_{0(2)}$
Myths: Zeus and Europe 947_0
—— coins of 946_0 Pythion at 948_0 treaties of 934_0
Gortynia, district of the Morea, Kyklops in folk-tale from 993
Gortys
Cult: Asklepios 1090
Gosforth, the sculptured cross at 305_0
Gothia
Cult: Iupiter (Thor) 620
Goths 107_3
Gournia, 'Minoan' shrine at 538
Graeco-Libyans
Cult: Zeus 1111
Graeco-Scythian kings, coins of 607 f. 613
Greece, burial within the house in 1060 f.
Sun, Moon, and Star in folk-tale from 1003 f.
Greuthungi 107_0
Gryneion (Gryneia)
Cult: Apollon $489_{0(4)}$
Myth: contest of Kalchas with Mopsos $489_{0(4)}$
—— omphalós at 167
Gümbet in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_4
—— altar from 836
Günjarik in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_4
Gunther 447_5
Gwydion 52
Gyges 559 561 1023
Gythion
Cults: Helios 259_0 Selene 259_0 Zeus Βουλαῖος 259_0 Zeus Τεράστιος 31
HA of the Double Axe
Cult: Egypt 545_0
Type: a mountain with two or more crests 545_0
Hades
Cults: Eleusis 314_0 314_2 Samothrace 314_0 314_2
Epithets: Ἀγεσίλαος $1113_{0(2)}$ Ἀγήσανδρος $1113_{0(2)}$ Ἀγησίλαος $1113_{0(2)}$ 1168_5 Ἀρκεσίλαος (?) 1156 Ἀρχέλαος (?) 1168_5 Δυσαύλης (?) 131 δυσκίνητος 1164_0 Εὐβουλεύς 118_3 $1113_{0(2)}$ Εὐειδής 118_3 $1113_{0(2)}$ Εὐκλειής (?) 118_3 Εὐκλῆις (?) 118_3 Εὐκλῆς 118_3 $1113_{0(2)}$ Εὔκλος 118_3 Εὔκολος (?) 118_3 Εὐχαίτης 118_3 $1113_{0(2)}$ Ἡγεσίλαος $1113_{0(2)}$ Ἡγησίλεως $1113_{0(2)}$ Ἰσοδαίτης $1113_{0(2)}$ Κλύμενος $1113_{0(2)}$ $1113_{0(3)}$ κρατερός $1113_{0(2)}$ μέγας 666_2 Πασιάναξ $1113_{0(2)}$ Περικλύμενος $1113_{0(2)}$ Πλούτων $1113_{0(2)}$ Πολύαρχος $1113_{0(2)}$ 1168_5 Πολυδαίμων $1113_{0(2)}$ Πολυδέγμων $1113_{0(2)}$ Πολυδέκτης $1113_{0(2)}$ Πολύξενος (?) $1113_{0(2)}$ πολυξενώτατον Ζῆνα (v. l. Δία) τῶν κεκμηκότων $1113_{0(2)}$ Πολυτήμων (?) 627_3 Πυλάοχος $1113_{0(2)}$ πυλάρτης $1113_{0(2)}$, πυλάρτης κρατερός $1113_{0(2)}$ τοῦ κατὰ χθονός | Διὸς (ἄιδου codd.) νεκρῶν Σωτῆρος 1125_0
Attributes: fork (?) 227_4 798 ff. 850 1225 horn (?) 785 rod 166_4 trident 806_6 two-pronged spear (?) 798 ff. white-poplar 471
Identified with Axiokersos (?) 314_2 Milky Way 42 43 Zeus 1058 Zeus καταχθόνιος 582_4
Associated with Zeus and Poseidon 785
—— in Greek epitaphs 1164_0 marriage with 1164 ff. name of, taboo 1114_0
Hadran
Cults: Mt Aitne 630 Syria 910_0
Genealogy: f. of Palikoi 910_0
Identified with Hephaistos 630
Hadrian
Cults: Aizanoi 1120_0 1121_0 Athens 1120_0 1121_0 Epeiros 1121_0
Epithets: νέος Πύθιος 1120_0 Ὀλύμπιος 1120_0 1121_0 Πανελλήνιος 1120_0 1121_0 Πύθιος 1120_0 Ζεὺς Δωδωναῖος 1121_0
Festivals: Hadrianeia 1121_0 Hadrianeia (Adriana, Adriania) Olympia 962_2
Priest: president of Panhellenic council 1120_0 1121_0
Personates Zeus 260_0 280_1 343_0 956_0 959_0 f. 962_2 1120_0 1121_0
—— as favourite of Zeus Κάσιος 986_0
Hadrianeia 1121_0
Hadrianeia (Adriana, Adriania) Olympia 962_2
Hadrumetum
Cult: Deus Pelagicus Aerius Altissimus Ἰάω $889_{0(34)}$

Haeva
Cult: Batavi 64_0
Hageladas 741 ff. 749 890_6 1222 1223
Hageladas, the younger (?) 742_3 742_4
Hagia Triada
Cults: Dionysos (?) 522 524 double axe 522 Velchanos $947_{0(1)}$ Zagreus (?) 522 (Zeus) Fευχάνος $947_{0(1)}$
Rite: sacrifice of bull 517 522
—— sarcophagus of painted limestone from 516 ff. 652 657 677 692 845
Hagios Onuphrios, spear-head from 799
Haimonioi
Cult: Korybas 295
Haimos, Mt 108
Myth: Zeus fights Typhon 449_0
Halaesa See Alaisa
Halieus 715_4 1037
Halikarnassos
Cults: Aphrodite (Ἀκραία ?) $872_{0(5)}$ Apollon Ἀγυιεύς 163 Artemis 164_8 Hermes $872_{0(5)}$ Zeus Ἀκραῖος $872_{0(5)}$ cp. $872_{0(3)}$ 963_3 Zeus Ἀσκραῖος $872_{0(5)}$ Zeus Κώμυρος 1228 Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 585_3
Myth: Pegasos 721_2
—— coins of 721_2 $872_{0(5)}$ the Mausoleion at $1146_{0(0)}$
Hallowmas 326_4
Hallstatt, axe-heads from 618 632_6 635
Halmos, s. of Sisyphos and f. of Chrysogone 1150_4
Halos
Cult: Zeus Λαφύστιος 904_1 1226
—— coins of 904_1
Ham 35
Hamar (Hamer) 660_1
Hapi Kema 772_1
Hapi Mehit 772_1
Hariasa 57_3
Harii tattooed 123_0
Harma near Mykalessos 815_7 816_0
Harma near Phyle 815 831_0 898_0
Harmodios 1172
Harpasa 958_0
Harpasos, s. of Kleinis 463_1
Harpe = Phaiakia or Korkyra 448_0
Harpe, w. of Kleinis 463_1
Harpokrates
Cults: Athens 985_0 Pelousion 986_0
Function: youthful Horos 986_0
Attributes: hem-hem crown 986_0 pomegranate 986_0 sceptre 986_0
Associated with Pan 986_0
Harpolykos 713 (?)
Harpy
In relation to Eros 315_3
Harpyiai
Myth: pursued by Boreadai 907_2
Hathor 409_0
Hati 305_0
Hebe
Epithet: πότνια 584_0
Type: introduction of Herakles to Olympos 737
Hebrews 115_2
Hecate
Cult: Rome 835_6
Genealogy: m. of Ianus by Caelus 368_3
See also Hekate
Heddernheim
Cult: Deus Casius 983_0
Hegesilaos (= Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$
Heimdallr 305_0
Hekaerge (Arge) 452 452_{11} 501 1226
Hekaergos 452 f.
Hekate
Cults: Lagina 714_2 Panamara $879_{0(17)}$ Panormos near Kyzikos (?) $882_{0(3)}$ Rome 307_0 Stratonikeia 714_2 714_3
Epithets: Ἀρίστη Χθονία $1114_{0(4)}$ Δαδοφόρος 714_3 Εὐκολίνη $1114_{0(4)}$ θεῶν μήτηρ 328_7 καλλιγένεθλος 328_7 Καλλίστη $1114_{0(4)}$ Κράταιις $1114_{0(4)}$ μεγασθενής 328_7 πολυώνυμος 328_7 προθυραῖα (προθύραιε?) 328_7 Σώτειρα $879_{0(17)}$ Χθονία $1114_{0(4)}$ Χθονική (sic) 695_0
Festival: παννυχίδες 714_2
Rite: libation of honey 1142_8
Priest: hierofanta 307_0
Genealogy: d. of Demeter 1032
Attributes: kálathos with crescent 714_2 torch 714_2
Types: Hecatae 307_0 holding torches 187_4 (?)
Identified with Artemis 1029 1032 Bendis 314_0 Kabeiro 314_0 Semiramis 695_0
Associated with Zeus 714_2 714_3 (Zeus) Βροντῶν 835_6 838
See also Hecate
Hekatoncheires
Genealogy: sons of Ouranos by Ge 1023
Hektor
Cult: Thebes in Boiotia 961_0
Myths: Apollon 459 buried at Ophrynion 961_0 sacrifices to Zeus 950_0 cp. 8
In relation to Paris 447_5 Zeus 8
Heleia 930_0
Cults: Artemis 931_0 Athena 931_0 Atlas 931_0 Hera 931_0 Leto (?) 931_0 Nike 931_0 Poseidon (?) 931_0 Zeus 931_0 Zeus Δικταῖος 930_0 931_0 932_0
See also Palaikastro
Helene
Cult: Tyndaris 918_0
Myths: brought up as d. of Leda 1015 dedicates electrum cup, modelled on her own breast, in temple of Athena at Lindos 346_0 Menelaos 1044
Genealogy: d. of Tyndareos 918_0 d. of Zeus by Leda and st. of Klytaimestra 1015_7 d. of Zeus by Nemesis 1131_1
Type: radiate 432_2 (?)

Helene (cont.)
Associated with Dioskouroi 432_2 (?) 1003 ff.
—— in folk-tales 1003 ff.
Helenos
Myth: founds Bouthroton (Bouthrotos) in Epeiros 348_6
Heliadai 479
Heliades
Myths: escort Parmenides up Milky Way 42 f. 476 shed tears of amber $484\ 499_4$
Metamorphosed into alders 472 black-poplars 472 484 f. larches (?) 402_0 472_9 oaks 472_{10} poplars 472 483 495
Types: mourning 479 transformation into trees 473 ff.
Helikon, Mt
Cults: St Elias 898_5 Zeus Ἑλικώνιος 898_5
Myths: Muses dance round Hippokrene and altar of Zeus 898_5 singing-match with Mt Kithairon 899_0
Heliopolis in Syria
Cults: Iupiter $886_{0(30)}$ Iupiter Heliopolitanus 745_1 Zeus $886_{0(30)}$
Helios
Cults: Alexandreia $889_{0(33)}$ Apollonia in Illyria 485 Athens 729_0 1114 Badinlar, in Phrygia 568 Bosporos Kimmerios 729_0 Chersonesos Taurike 729_0 Edessa 428 Eresos 729_0 Gythion 259_0 Karia 729_0 Magnesia ad Sipylum 729_0 Paphlagonia 729_0 Pergamon 729_0 955_0 1185 Phaselis 729_0 Rhodes 469 Sahin in Phoinike (?) $886_{0(30)}$ Smyrna 729_0 Sparta 729_0 Mt Taleton 890_2 Thermos in Aitolia 729_0
Epithets: Ἀνίκητος (?) $886_{0(30)}$ ἡλέκτωρ 499_9 499_3 499_1 Νέος 98_0 ὁ προπάτωρ θεὸς...Πύθιος Ἀπόλλων Τυρμναῖος 562 δι πάντ' ἐφορᾷς καὶ πάντ' ἐπακούεις 728_0 πατήρ 1130_1
See also Elektor, Hyperion
Festival: Tlapolemeia 469
Rite: sacrifice of horses on Mt Taleton 890_2
Priest: ἱερεύς 562_2
Personated by Nero 98_0 254 254_5
Myths: Auriga 477_7 Cygnus 477_7 Eridanus 477_7 Hyades 477_7 Phaethon 473 ff.
Genealogy: f. of Elektryone (Alektrona) 499 f. of Pasiphae 947_0 f. of Phaethon by Klymene 473_3 f. of Triopas by Rhodos 684_2 forefather of Idomeneus 947_0
Attributes: cock 947_0 torch 478 wreath of white-poplar 469
Types: bust 1185 bust on couch 1171_3 colossal 254_5 in four-horse chariot 975_0 on horseback 473 475 475_6 478 radiate bust with crescent (!) 664_1 radiate head, facing 469_7 seated 479
Helios (cont.)
Identified with Antoninus Pius 321 f. Apollon 164_1 562 568 Apollon and Dionysos 253 f. Lairmenos 568 Mithras $886_{0(30)}$ (?) Phanes 1051 Theos Hypsistos $882_{0(0)}$ Tyrimnos 562
Associated with Monimos and Azizos 428 Selene 1171_3 Zeus and Ge 729_0 $884_{0(0)}$ Zeus, Gē, and Erinyes 728_0 f. Zeus, rivers, earth, and chthonian powers 728_0 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1114
Supersedes Apollon 730_0
Superseded by Phoibos Ἀπόλλων 500
—— connected with Aurelii 321 gates of 41 horses of 828 851
Hell
Types: gaping monster 138_0 harrowing of Hell 138_0
Hellanikos 1023
Hellas personified 853
Helle
Myth: golden ram 899_1
Hellenes, the Thessalian tribe 894_3
Helloi 677
Hellos 677 f. 848
Hemithea
Cults: Kastabos 670 f. Tenedos 670 f. 847
Myths: sent to sea in a coffer 669 ff. swallowed by earth 670
Functions: childbirth 671 cures 671 earth 670 f. 673
Henny-penny 54_3
Heos (Eos)
Myths: psychostasia 734 supplicates Zeus 753_3
Genealogy: m. of Memnon by Tithonos 281_4 cp. 734
Hephaistia in Lemnos
Cult: Ἐπήκοος Theos Ὕψιστος $878_{0(7)}$
Hephaistion (Hephaistia) in Lykia 972_1
Hephaistos
Cults: Mt Aitne 630 Olympia 706_5 Olympos in Lykia 972_1 Siderous 972_1
Epithet: Ὀλύμπιος in Lykia 972_1
Myths: presents Hephaistos with double axe 693 sceptre of Zeus 547_2 956_2 1132_4 1132_6 shield of Achilles 972_1
Genealogy: f. of crabs 665 667 f. of Palikoi 910_0 f. of Thaleia and gf. of Palikoi 909_0
Attributes: blue pilos 386_5 dogs 630 double axe 709 f. perpetual fire 630
Identified with Chrysor 715 Hadran 630 Ptah 34_1 Zeus Μειλίχιος 715
Associated with Athena 1137 Zeus 972_1
—— road-making sons of (= Athenians) 817 cp. 628_4
Hephaistos, Mts of, in Lykia 972_1
Hera
Cults: Aigion 210_0 Amastris 707 Mt Arachnaion 894_1 Argos 290_0 515

Hera (cont.)
1144$_2$ 1156$_5$ Athens 1119$_4$ Boiotia 731$_0$ Chalkis in Euboia 981$_0$ Elis 291$_0$ Gortyna 723$_0$ Heleia 931$_0$ Hierapytna 342$_0$ 723$_0$ 1157$_4$ Itanos 929$_0$ Kebrenioi 130 Mt Kithairon 898$_6$ 899$_0$ Mt Kokkygion 893$_2$ Kroton 1021 Lebadeia 899$_2$ Lyttos 723$_0$ Messene 728$_0$ Mykenai 515 Mylasa 592 Olympia 706$_5$ Orchomenos in Boiotia 1150 Panionion 259$_0$ Paros 131 Phokis 731$_0$ Plataiai 899$_0$ Priansos 723$_0$ Mt Pron 893$_2$ Sparta 515 Sykaiboai 130 Tenedos (?) 662 Thebes in Boiotia 899$_0$ Thespiai 899$_0$ Triphylia 291$_0$

Epithets: Ἀκρία 1156$_5$ Βασίλεια 731$_0$ Βασιλίς 900$_0$ Ἐξακεστηρία 1093$_1$ Ζυγία 60$_0$ 695$_0$ 723$_0$ 954$_0$ ἰσοτελὴς 1029 Κιθαιρωνία 899$_0$ Λακινία 291$_0$ 1021 λευκώλενος 343$_0$ Μηλιχία (=Μελιχία) 1157$_4$ Ὁπλοσμία 290$_0$ 291$_0$ πότνια 583 584$_0$ Τελεία 893$_2$ 1150

Rite: libation from first kratêr to Zeus and Hera 1123$_7$ 1124$_0$

Priests: among Kebrenioi 130 among Sykaiboai 130

Priestess: virgin 210$_0$

Personated by Alkyone 1088

Myths: consorts with Zeus on Mt Gargaron 950$_0$ consorts with Zeus on Mt Oche 902$_1$ consorts with Zeus in Rhapsodic theogony 1029 golden apples 1021 Iason 1088 Kallisto 228$_6$ Merops (?) 1132$_1$ reconciled to Zeus on Mt Kithairon 898$_8$ retires to Euboia 898$_8$ rouses Titans to attack Zagreus 1030 sends crab to attack Herakles 665$_3$ taken by Rhea to Okeanos and Tethys 1020 transforms Aetos into eagle 933$_0$ wooed by Ephialtes 130 wooed by Ixion 1088 wooed by Zeus clandestinely 1020 wooed by Zeus on Mt Kokkygion 893$_2$

Genealogy: d. of Phanes by Nyx 1026 w. of Zeus 584$_1$ 954$_0$

Attributes: cuckoo-sceptre 893$_2$ lilies 515 lion-skin 515 sceptre 707 1178 (See also cuckoo-sceptre) sword 713 716 vervain 395$_2$ vine-wreath 515

Types: branch of tree 899$_0$ enthroned 706$_5$ Gigantomachy 713 introduction of Herakles to Olympos 771 Janiform head (with Zeus) (?) 662 lopped tree-trunk 899$_0$ Polykleitos 893$_2$ 1143$_1$ 1178 with vine-wreath and lion-skin 515

Identified with Semiramis 695$_0$

Associated with Zeus 259$_0$ 592 707 776$_3$ 893$_2$ 894$_1$ 900$_0$ 1137 1144$_2$ 1150 1157 Zeus and Athena (=Capitoline triad) 319$_7$ Zeus, Demeter Θεσμοφόρος, Kore, Baubo 259$_0$

Hera (cont.)
In relation to Zeus 693
Supersedes Rhea 515
Superseded by ἡ ὑπεραγία Θεοτόκος 1119$_4$ —— garden of 1021 meadow of 1021 tear of (vervain) 395$_2$

Heraia 757

Herakleia ad Latmum
Cult: Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 585$_3$
—— treaty of, with Miletos 318$_0$

Herakleia Pontike
Cult: Zeus Στράτιος 976$_0$
Myth: Herakles plants two oaks 976$_0$
—— coins of 560$_3$

Herakleia Salbake
Cult: Asklepios 1080
—— coins of 1080

Herakleitos 12 13$_1$ 130$_7$ 805$_6$ 852 855$_2$ 856$_0$ 858$_6$ 1024 (?) 1033

Herakles
Cults: Acharnai 163$_3$ Aigion 742$_5$ Aruepolis (? in Mesopotamia) 469$_1$ Athens 163$_4$ 875$_{1(2)}$ 1116 f. Baris in Pisidia 446 f. Chios 1157$_1$ Gadeira 423 Kaulonia (?) 1041 f. Mt Laphystion in Boiotia 899$_1$ Mt Oite 903$_2$ Rhodes 469 Rome 783 Selge 492$_{0(0)}$ Selinous 489$_{0(0)}$ Senones (?) 445 f. Skythia 292$_4$ Tarsos 560 Tyre 423 f.
Epithets: Ἀλγύπτιος 7$_2$ ἀνίκητος 292$_4$ Ἀπόμυιος 783 Διὸς παῖς 273 Χάροψ 899$_1$
Personated by Nero 98$_0$
Myths: Antaios 134$_1$ apples of Hesperides 134$_1$ brings white-poplar from banks of Acheron 469 brings wild-olive from land of Hyperboreoi to Olympia 466 brings wild-olive from Istrian land 501 Cerynean hind 465 f. 843 cuts club from wild-olive on Saronic Gulf 466 Geryones 37$_2$ Hesperides 1017 Hippolyte 559 f. Hydra 665$_3$ Hyperboreoi 1041 (?) Kerberos 469 899$_1$ Kerkopes 1041 f. (?) Kyknos 274$_0$ makes wild-olive spring up at Troizen 466 Omphale 559 560$_3$ pillars 422 f. plants two oaks beside altar of Zeus Στράτιος at Herakleia Pontike 976$_0$ pyre 23 903$_2$ rape of Delphic tripod 199$_2$ sacks Oichalia 902$_2$ sacrifices to Zeus on Mt Kenaion 902$_2$ sacrifices to Zeus at Olympia 467 slays Kalchas, of Siris in Lucania 490$_{0(0)}$ Tarsos 570$_1$ worried by flies at Olympia 783
Genealogy: b. of Iphikles 317 1017 f. of Tlepolemos 469
Functions: ἡ δύναμις τῆς φόσεως 434$_3$ time 469$_1$ world-creating 1023
Attributes: apple (?) 445 bow and club 446 knife (?) 445 lion-skin 1116 sword, bow, and club 446 wreath of poplar 388$_8$ wreath of white-poplar 469

Herakles (cont.)
Types: beardless 742_6 dicephalous 445 ff. double bust (with Hermes) 388 fighting Centaur 615_2 (?) four-armed 446 Gigantomachia 777_2 Hageladas 742_5 introduction to Olympos 735 ff. 771 1167 Janiform (bearded + beardless) (?) 388_8 Lysippos 1046 Myron 1078 snake with heads of god, snake, lion 1023 stripped of weapons by Eros 1046 winged snake with heads of god, bull, lion 1022 with club and bow (?) 903_2 with Theseus and Peirithoos 211_2 wreathed with white-poplar 469
Identified with Dius Fidius (?) 724_0 Ophiouchos 241_4 Sandas 560
Associated with Apollon 241_1 Asklepios 241_4 Zeus $492_{0(0)}$ Zeus and Athena 1078 Zeus, Athena, Apollon $875_{1(2)}$ Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 1157_1 Zeus Παπίας Σωτήρ 292_4
Compared with Asklepios 241_4
In relation to Iphikles 445 447_5
—— hunger of 683 pillars of 422 f. pyre of, on Mt Oite 903_2
See also Hercules
Herculaneum, paintings from 143 f. 1202 f.
Hercules
Cults: Batavi 64_0 Rome 400_{11} 469 783 Thessalonike 1194_4 Tibur 328_3
Epithets: Augustus 65_0 1194_4 Barbatus 64_0 Deusoniensis 57_3 Iulianus 400_{11} Magusanus 57_3 64_0 Maliator 64_0
Personated by Commodus 255_0 400_{11} (?) 903_2 Maximian (Herculius) 903_2
Myth: Myiagrus 783
Function: autumn 62 f. 94_1
Attribute: club 62 f.
Types: bearded 62 64_0 colossal 254_5
Identified with Donar 62 f. 63_1 64_0 94_1
Associated with Apollo and Diana 59_0 Iuno, Mercurius, Minerva 57 ff. Iupiter 1194_4 Minerva and Iuno 89
In relation to Iupiter 95_2
—— on column of Mayence 96
See also Herakles
Hercynian Forest 466
Herkyna
Cult: Lebadeia 1073 1075
Myth: Kore 1075
Function: stream-goddess 1075
Attributes: goose 1075 snake coiled round staff 1075
Associated with Zeus 1073 1075
Compared with Demeter 1075 Hygieia 1075
Herkynia 1075
Hermaïzontes 1157_3
Hermaon See Hermes
Hermaphroditos
Myth: reared by Naiades on Mt Ide in Crete 933_0
Types: herm 1091 nursing Eros 152_0
Hermeias See Hermes
Hermeraclae 388
Hermes
Cults: Ainos in Thrace 496_0 Athens 1043 1117 Egypt 382_2 Gortyna 723_0 Halikarnassos $872_{0(5)}$ Hierapytna 723_0 Kaulonia (?) 1042 Kyzikos 834 Magnesia ad Sipylum (?) 957_0 Metapontum 118_3 Mostene 563 Nisyros 1157_3 Olympia 231_8 859 $878_{0(5)}$ Orchomenos in Boiotia 1150_0 Peiraieus $487_{3(1)}$ Polyrrhenion 1042 Priansos 723_0 Tallaia range 948_1 Thespiai 1150_0 Troizen 466 Volaterrae (?) 383
Epithets: Ἀγώνιος 1042 (?) Ἀργειφόντης 385_0 ἀργειφόντης 384_0 956_2 διάκτορος 384_0 954_9 956_2 διπρόσωπος 382_2 Δρόμιος 1042 δῶτορ ἐάων (ἐάων) 385_0 Ἐναγώνιος 859 Εὔκολος 118_3 θέσμιος $876_{0(8)}$ θυραῖος 955_0 Καταιβάτης 14 κερδῷος 31_7 Κτάριος 384_0 οὐνιος (?) 1042 Περφεραῖος 496_0 Πολύγιος 466 Τρισμέγιστος 611 943_0 χαριδῶτα 385_0 Χθόνιος 14 1130_1 Ψιθυριστής 1043 ψυχοπομπός 563
Rite: libation from first krater 1124_0
Worshippers: Ἑρμαΐζοντες 1157_3
Myths: Amphion 1013 conducts goddesses to judgment of Paris 266 conducts Io to Zeus 961_0 consorts with Apemosyne 923_3 924_0 Lykos 1013 sceptre of Zeus 547_2 956_2 sinews of Zeus 449_0 slays Argos 379 f. steals oxen of Apollon 1042 (?) uses Typhon's sinews as lyre-strings 450_0 Zethos and Amphion 1019_2
Genealogy: f. of Pan by Penelope 691 s. of Pikos who is also Zeus 942_0 s. of Polyktor 384_0 s. of Zeus 385_0
Functions: bearer of oblations to the dead 384_0 chthonian 385_0 1068 1075 dispenser of treasures 385_0 divinised ancestor (?) 1068 messenger 479 phallic 1068 pillar 383 slayer of Argos (?) 385_0 slayer with lightning-flash (?) 385_0
Etymology: 383_7
Attributes: caduceus 1117 endromides 713 lance 713 oinochoe 1117 pétasos 383 386 388 713 snakes 1111 vervain 395_2 winged caduceus 718 winged cap 718 winged hat 388 winged sandals 718
Types: bifrontal 341_0 382 f. column or pillar of stone 384_0 double bust (with Dionysos) 388 double bust (with Herakles) 388 double bust (with Hestia) 392 double bust (with Zeus) 388 (?) Gigantomachy 713 heap of stones 383_7 384_0 herm 152_0 384_0 834 955_0 Janiform head (with Zeus) 1219 Lysippos (?) 859_8 phallic post 384_0 Pheidias 479_6 psychostasia 733 resting 859_8 seated 751_1

Hermes (cont.)
Identified with Kasmilos 314$_2$ Monimos 428 Phaunos 694$_0$ 943$_0$ Thoth 611 Trophonios (Trephonios) 1075
Associated with Aphrodite 146$_2$ 872$_{0(5)}$ 1043 Daimones 1150$_0$ Polis 1155$_5$ Zeus 957$_0$ (?)
Compared with Plouton 385$_0$ Zeus 385$_0$ Zeus Κτήσιος 384$_2$ Zeus Κτήσιος and Penates 1068 Zeus Πλουτοδότης 385$_0$ —— blood of (vervain) 395$_2$ sceptre of 1132$_4$ 1132$_6$
Hermes, the planet
Function: λόγος 558$_0$
Hermione
Cults: Demeter Χθονία 1077 Trajan 1180$_4$ Zeus Ἀσκλαπιός 1077 Zeus Ἀσκληπιός 1061 Zeus Ἐμβατήριος (= Trajan) 100$_6$ 1180$_4$
Hermippe, d. of Boiotos 1150
Hermopolis
Cults: ogdoad 701$_0$ Ostanes 701$_0$
Herodotos, portrait-herm of (with Thoukydides) 389 f.
Heroës
Cult: Athens 1123
Rites: food fallen on floor reserved for them 1129$_2$ libation from second krατήr 1123
Heroïs 240 242
Heros
Cults: Alexandreia 1127$_0$ Megara 896$_0$ 897$_0$ Olympia 897$_0$
Hesiod, portrait-herm of (with Homer) 389
Hesione, d. of Danaos 1150
Hesperides
Epithet: λιγύφωνοι 1030
Myth: golden apples 1017 1021
Hesperos 261 430$_4$ 430$_5$
Hestia
Cults: Aigai in Aiolis 259$_0$ Athens 259$_0$ Delphoi 1216 Gortyna 723$_0$ Hierapytna 342$_0$ 723$_0$ Kos 19$_0$ 238$_0$ Lyttos 723$_0$ 934$_0$ Miletos 317$_2$ 1220 Paros 875$_{1(5)}$ Pergamon 259$_0$ Phaleron 183 f. Philadelpheia in Lydia 960$_0$ 1229 Priansos 723$_0$ Skythia 292$_4$ Sparta 259$_0$ Syracuse 916$_0$
Epithets: Βολλαία (? Βόλλαια) 259$_0$ Βουλαία 259$_0$ 317$_2$ Δημίη 875$_{1(5)}$ Ταμία 19$_0$ 238$_0$
Rite: meal burnt 19$_0$
Personated by Agrippina, w. of Germanicus Caesar 260$_0$
Function: cosmic 43 316$_0$
Types: double bust (with Hermes) 392
Identified with Tabiti 293$_0$
Associated with Zeus 259$_0$ 317$_2$ 960$_0$ Zeus Εὐμένης 1228
Heudonos 587
Hiera in Lesbos
Cults: Apollon Μαλόεις 488$_{0(2)}$ Artemis 488$_{0(2)}$
Hierapolis in Phrygia
Cults: Apolline hero 571 Apollon Ἀρχηγέτης 567 Attis 306$_1$ emperor 571 Lairbenos 566 Mother of the gods 306$_1$ youthful hero (? Lairbenos) on horseback bearing double axe 566 Zeus Βοζτος (Βωζτος) 570 Zeus Τρώιος 571$_6$ Festival: Hilaria 306$_1$
—— coins of 565 f. 571 1158$_9$ katabásion at 14
Hierapytna
Cults: Aphrodite 723$_0$ Apollon Πύτιος (= Πύθιος) 723$_0$ Ares 723$_0$ Artemis 723$_0$ Athena Πολιάς 723$_0$ Athena Σαλμωνία 723$_0$ Athena Ὠλερία 723$_0$ Eileithyia Βωναία 723$_0$ Hera 342$_0$ 723$_0$ Hera Μηλιχία 1157$_4$ Hermes 723$_0$ Hestia 342$_0$ 723$_0$ Koryhantes (Kyrbantes) 723$_0$ Kouretes (Koretes) 723$_0$ Leto (Lato) 723$_0$ Nymphs 723$_0$ Zeus Βιδάτας 723$_0$ 934$_0$ Zeus Δικταῖος 342$_0$ 723$_0$ 929$_0$ cp. 930$_0$ Zeus Μηλίχιος 1157$_4$ Zeus Μονίτιος 723$_0$ Zeus Ὀράτριος (= Frάτριος) 342$_0$ 723$_0$ Zeus Σκύλιος 723$_0$
—— coins of 342$_0$ oath of 723$_0$ 731$_0$ 929$_0$
Hiera Syke 1103
Rite: exhibition of fig (?) 291$_2$ cp. 292$_0$ 1103
Myth: Demeter reveals fig to Phytalos 291$_2$ 1092$_3$ 1103
Hierokaisareia in Lydia
Cults: Dionysos Ἡρικεπαῖος 1025 Theos Ὕψιστος 881$_{0(20)}$
Priest: ἱεροφάντης 1025
Hieron Oros in Crete 945$_2$
Hieron, the potter 777
Hieronymos 1023
Hiketesia 1040
Hilaeira
Cult: Sparta 1015$_7$
Associated with Phoibe 1015$_7$
Hilaria 306$_1$
Himera, coin of 558$_1$
Hippa See Hipta
Hippodameia, d. of Danaos 1150$_2$
Hippodameia, d. of Oinomaos 706$_5$
Hippodameia, w. of Autonoos 414$_2$
Hippokrene 898$_5$
Hippolyte, queen of the Amazons
Myth: Herakles 559 f.
Hippolytos
Myths: Artemis 393 buried beside temple of Aphrodite Κατασκοπία at Troizen 944$_0$ death 414 ff. Nemi 149 Phaidra and Theseus 1043 raised from dead by Asklepios 394$_2$ 1087
Genealogy: s. of Theseus 1087
Functions: mythical prototype of rex Nemorensis 399
Type: Janiform (with Virbius) 392 ff.
In relation to Artemis 149 414 417

Hippothoïtis, a Tegeate tribe 1148 1149_0
Hippothoon 1137_2
Hippothoos, s. of Lethos 1154_3
Hipta 347_0 (?) 957_2 (?)
Hiram 425
Hiranyagarbha 1035
Identified with Brahmā 1035 Prajāpati 1035
Histie See Hestia
Hittites
Cults: Artemis (?) 410_1 bull of bronze or iron or silver 910_1 dagger-god (akin to Kronos?) 550 ff. 845 god with grape-bunches and corn-ears 564 f. lion-god (akin to Kronos?) 550 ff. Sutekh 621 f. 623 Tešub 766_1 767_0 910_1 winged deities 457 youthful god bearing double axe 599_2 youthful god on lioness (?) 552
In relation to Amazons 560 Artemis Χιτώνη (?) 410_1 Iupiter Dolichenus 615 Tenedos 662 Zeus Ἀταβύριος in Rhodes 615 —— axes of 560 double eagle of 779_2 reliefs of, from Babylon 766_1 767_0 reliefs of, at Eyuk 620 f. reliefs of, from Sinjerli 767_0 rock-carvings of, at Boghaz-Keui 550 ff. 845 thunder-weapon of 790
Hlóðyn 66_0
Hludana 65_1 See also Hluθena
Hluθena 65_1 See also Hludana
Hǫdhr
Myth: stabs Baldr with lance of mistletoe 305_0
Holda 66_0
Functions: snow 66_0 spinning 65 66_0 winter 65 66_0
Identified with Minerva 65 66_0 94_1
In relation to Milky Way 66_0
Holden 66_0
Holi 66_0
Holle 66_0
Holmos (?) 209_2
Holy Cross Day 326_4
Homer, apotheosis of 1203_4 indebted to early Orphic theogony 1020 omits mere magic 989 portrait-herm of (with Hesiod) 389
Homole (Homolos), Mt
Cult: Zeus Ὁμολώιος (?) 904_4
Homolion
Cults: St Elias 1227 Zeus Ὁμολώιος (?) 1227
—— bronze rings from 166_2
Homoloïa, d. of Enyeus 900_1
Homoloïa, festival of Zeus Ὁμολώιος 900_1
Homoloïon, Mt, near Thebes in Boiotia
Cult: Zeus Ὁμολώιος (?) 900_1
Homonoia
Cult: Dorylaeion 280_1
Epithet: Σεβαστή 280_1
Homoroka 558_0
Honos
Type: with sheathed sword and captured armour 99
—— on column of Mayence 96 100
Hopladamos (Hoplodamos?) 291_0
Horae
Associated with Ianus 336_0
Horai
Genealogy: daughters of Zeus by Themis 37_1 94_2
Functions: attendants of Zeus 94_2 seasons 479 year 94_2
Etymology: 94_2
Types: four Seasons pass over starry globe beside Tellus reclining under vine 373 four Seasons sent forth from the orbis annuus held by Iupiter 372 f.
Associated with Apollon and Pan (?) 165_0 Zeus 94_2
—— as attribute of Zeus 1138_5 symbols of 1054
Horatii 363 f.
Horatius Cocles, statue of, struck by lightning 9
Horkos
Genealogy: s. of Eris 723_0 s. of Zeus 723_0
Horomazes See Ahura Mazdâh
Horos
Cults: Athens 985_0 Denderah 773_0 Egypt 255 Koptos 450_0
Myths: eye swallowed by Typhon 450_0 nursed by Isis 986_0
Genealogy: s. of Isis 126
Etymology: 255
Types: child seated on lotos 773_0 hawk on lotos 774_0 holding genitals of Typhon 450_0
Identified with Apollon 252 255
—— ladder of 126 soul of, identified with Orion 450_0
Hortensii 147
Hrimnir 682
Hûdânś (= Τδηνός?)
Cult: Sardeis 1227 f.
But see Pλdânś
Hulda 66_0
Hulle 66_0
Hungary, prince with golden sun and princess with golden moon in folk-tale from 1012_1
Hunni
Myth: sword of Mars 548_0
Hyades 274 f.
Hyades, the constellation 477
Hyakinthia 246_1
Hyakinthos
Myth: slain by dîskos of Apollon 1156
In relation to Apollon $491_{0(6)}$ (?) 1042 (?) Dioskouroi 435 (?)
Hyde, old name of Sardeis 1228
Hydisos
Cult: Zeus Ἄρειος 705 f. 848
—— coins of 705 f.

Hydra
Myth: Herakles 665_3
Hygieia
Cults: Oropos 1072 Philadelphia in Lydia (?) 1229
Epithet: θεσπεσίη 954_0
Attributes: sceptre 1077 snake 1075
Type: seated 1072 1077
Identified with Salus 94_3
Associated with Amphiaraos and Pan 1072 Asklepios and Telesphoros 1078
Compared with Herkyna 1075
Hyllos 902_2 (?)
Hymenaios 1164_0
Hymettos, Mt
Cults: Apollon Προόψιος 897_5 Zeus 873_1 Zeus Ὄμβριος 897_5 1226 Zeus Τμήτιος 897_5
Hymnarion, Mt
Cult: Zeus Τνναρεύς 987_1
Etymology: 987_1
Hypaipa
Cult: youthful hero with double axe and bay-branch in guise of Apollon Τόρμνος 564
Hypata
Cults: Hermes 1155_5 Polis 1155_5
Hypatios, St 32 f.
Hypatos, Mt
Cult: Zeus Ὕπατος $875_{1(1)}$ 898_2
Hyperbios 712
Hyperborean Land 465
Hyperborean Maidens, arrival of, in Delos 453_3 bring bronze tablets to Delos 1226 grave of, in Delos 466 names of 452 f.
Hyperboreoi 493 ff.
Cults: Apollon 501 844 Artemis Ὀρθία (?) 501
Epithets: δᾶμον...Ἀπόλλωνος θεράποντα 465 χιλιετεῖς 465 500_4
Rites: offerings sent to Apollon at Delos 497 ff. with pl. xxvi περφερέες 495_8 sacred tbings wrapped in wheaten straw 497 498_2 500 f. sacrifice of asses to Apollon 463 f. 843
Myths: Apollon 459 ff. 484 493 843 Delos 452 f. Delphoi 169 452 499 844 Herakles 466 1041 (?) Kroisos 465
Etymology: 494 ff. 495_6
In relation to Agyieús-pillars 169 499 f. amber-routes 493 f. 497 ff. China (?) 495
Hyperes, king of Troizen 414_2
Hyperion
Epithet: ἠλέκτωρ 499_2 947_0
Function: sun 947_0
Hyperoche 452 f. 466 501
Hyperochos 452
Hyperphas 1122_7
Hypnos
Cult: Sikyon 321_1
Epithet: Ἐπιδώτης 321_1
Hypnos (cont.)
Genealogy: b. of Thanatos 317
Attribute: horn 1127_0
Types: 1127_0
Hypseus 1123
Hypsistarioi $885_{0(28)}$
Hypsistianoi $885_{0(28)}$
Hypsistos
Cults: Ak Tash (Temenothyrai ?) in Lydia $881_{0(20)}$ Ioudaia $888_{0(32)}$ $889_{0(0)}$ Kappadokia $885_{0(28)}$ Sari-Tsam in Lydia $881_{0(20)}$
Epithet: Παντοκράτωρ $885_{0(28)}$
Rite: lamp-lighting $881_{0(20)}$
Worshippers: Ὑψιστάριοι or Ὑψιστιανοί $885_{0(28)}$
See also Elioun, Theos Hypsistos
Hypsouranios 715_4 981_1 1037
Hyria 30
Hysmine 1141
Hysminias 1141

Ia, betrothed to Attis 970_0
Iakchos
Epithet: Νέος 97_0
Personated by Antinoos 97_0
Ialysos
Cult: Elektryone (Alektrona) 499
Iambe
Myth: Demeter 821 851
Ian
Identified with Zan 341 344 353 842
—— in the Salian hymn 330_0 331_0 341
See also Ianus
Iana
Epithet: Arquis 339_6
Functions: arches 339_6 moon 339_6
Etymology: 338_6 340_2
See also Diana
Ianiculum 368_3
Ianos See Ianus
Ianus
Cults: Aenona 325 Corinium in Dalmatia 325 Etruria 378 Falerii 373 Iulia Apta 325 Lambaesis 369_0 Noricum 324 Ouxenton (?) 386_1 Philadelphia in Lydia 374 Rome 364 ff. Salonae (?) 325 Tusculum (?) 368_2 Volaterrae (?) 383
Epithets: anni origo 336_{10} annorum nitidique sator pulcherrime mundi 336_{10} antiquissimus divom 335_1 Augustus 325 biceps 336_{10} Cameses or Camises (?) 330_0 331_0 Conservator (?) 327 327_{11} Culšanš 378 Curiatius 364 deorum deus 337_4 divom deus 337 duonus (duenos ?) 330_0 331_0 duonus Cerus (duenos Ceros ?) 330_0 331_0 724_0 ἔφορος πάσης πράξεως 338_3 ἔφορος τοῦ παντὸς χρόνου 336_8 Geminus 324 337_4 338_3 358 360 365 lucifer annorum 336_{10} Iunonius 336_8 Matutinus 338 Pater 325 335_1 336_5 337_4 338 369_0 377_1 Pater Augustus 325 Πατάνων 338_3

Ianus (cont.)
προπάτωρ 328_7 πρῶτος τῶν ἀρχαίων θεῶν 335_9 quadrifrons 360_3 Quirinus 364_1 377_2 temporis auctor 336_6 θεὸς ἀρχαιότατος τῆς Ἰταλίας 335_2 ὕπατος Ζεύς 328_7 (See also Ζεὺς ἄφθιτος) Vaeosus 325 veterum promerios recum (vetesom promesios recom?) 330_0 331_0 Zeu Loidorie (Ieu Loidosie?) 330_0 331_0 Zεὺς ἄφθιτος 328_7 (See also ὕπατος Ζεύς)
Festivals: Kalendae Ianuariae 336_9 Kalendae Octobres 364
Rites: archway at entrance of Roman Forum closed in peace, opened in war 341_0 358_5 cakes (πόπανα) offered on the Kalendae 338_3 Ianuli chanted by Salii 375 f. passing under the yoke (?) 359_6 twelve altars to suit twelve months 336_8
Personated by Caracalla 371 Commodus 370 Cn. Pompeius Magnus 371 Salii (?) 375 f.
Myths: drives Sabines out of Rome by flood of water 394_3 first king of Italy 368_3 founds Ianiculum 368_3
Genealogy: f. of Aion 337 f. of Canens 394_3 f. of Fontus 368 394_3 f. of Tiber 394_2 h. of Iuturna 368_3 394_3 s. of Caelus and Hecate 368_3
Functions: air 335 archway 330_0 bright sky combined with dark sky (?) 378 chaos 335 cosmic power 336 day 336 doorway 340_2 eternity 336 initiator 1090 Kalendae 336_8 king 330_0 months 336 an older Iupiter 335 ff. oldest god of Italy 335 seasons 336 sky 335 337 ff. 338_0 354 f. 842 sun 336 time 336 universe 335 year 336
Etymology: 335_0 338 ff. 340_2
Attributes: pētasos 383 (?) 386 staff 385
Types: archway 354 ff. 405 842 bearded bifrontal head 326 ff. 331 ff. bearded and beardless bifrontal head 387 (?) cp. 842 beardless bifrontal head 331 334 368 ff. bifrontal god 341_0 367 ff. 378 bifrontal god standing beneath arch 365 f. 842 face of Alexander combined with face of Antoninus 371 face of Commodus combined with face of Iupiter (?) 370 quadruple 373 triple (?) 373_5 vault (See archway)
Identified with Aion 337 Apollon 339_6 Celtic Janiform god 324 ff. Chaos 335_9 Iupiter 328 365 Kronos 374 Llyr 326 Saturnus 374 Zeus 328_7
Associated with Horae 336_9
In relation to Iupiter 328_6 331 335 ff. 353 842 Penates 335 Zan 842
Superseded by January 373 f.
—— and Iupiter on coins 331 ff. and Iupiter in the Salian hymn 328 ff. archway of, at entrance of Roman Forum 341_0 355 ff. in the plural (=anni) 336_{10} significance of the double face of 378 ff. transformed into Persephone 370
See also Ani, Anigemius, Ian
Ianus, an Italian king 330_0
Iao
Identified with Adonaï $889_{0(0)}$ Deus Altissimus $889_{0(34)}$ Theos Hypsistos $889_{0(0)}$
Iaon, river in Peloponnesos 413_1
Iapetos 894_0
Iapheth (Japheth) 694_0
Iapodes tattooed 123_0
Iapyges 29 ff. 559
Iapygia 29 f. 559
Iapyx
Genealogy: s. of Daidalos 30
Iardanos, river in Crete 1025
Iardanos, river in Elis, 1025
Iardanos, river in Lydia 1025
Iarebolos
Cult: Emesa 814_3
See also Iaribolos
Iaribolos
Cult: Palmyra $885_{0(29)}$
See also Iarebolos
Iason
Myths: caldron of apotheosis 211 Hera 1088 Kirke 1097_2
Genealogy: descended from Aiolos 1088
Type: swallowed by snake 222_2 1217
Iasos
Cults: Zeus $879_{0(17)}$ Zeus Ὕψιστος $879_{0(17)}$ 963_5
Iasos, b. of Dardanos 317
Iberians 340_3
Idaean Cave, excavation of 935_0 ff. in relation to Hagia Triada 522_4 rock crystal from 927_0 tympana from 697_0 770_2
See also Ide, Mt, in Crete
Idaean Daktyloi See Daktyloi
Idaia, as name of Crete 940_0
Idaia, w. of Zeus 940_0
Idalion, silver bowl from 553
Idas
Myths: Leukippides 438_2 Marpessa 439_{14} Tyndaridai 437 ff.
Genealogy: b. of Lynkeus 317
Ide, Mt, in Crete 932_1
Cults: Daktyloi 232_0 929_0 Holy Cross (Timios Stauros) 935_0 Zagreus 838 934_0 Zan 934_0 Zeus 941_0 Zeus Βιδάτας 934_0 Zeus Ἰδαῖος 549 838 932_1 ff. 980_5
Festival: trieteric 934_0
Rites: annual dance of modern Cretans on summit 939_0 funeral offering to Zeus 934_0 942_0 thrice nine days spent in Idaean Cave 934_9 942_9 throne strown annually for the god 934_0 942_0 cp. 940_0 wearing of black wool 934_0 942_0

Ide, Mt, in Crete (cont.)
Myths: Hermaphroditos reared by Naiades 933_0 Kouretes 549 Kronos 549 Telchines 933_0 Zeus 230 932_1 933_0
Etymology: 932_1
—— Arkesion, a cave on 549 939_0 ascent of 939_0 fruitful poplar (or willow) in mouth of Idaean Cave on 932_1 Idaean Cave on 230 933_0 ff. 935_0 ff. Idaean Cave on, visited by Epimenides 933_0 934_0 Idaean Cave on, visited by Pythagoras 933_0 934_0 plateau of Nida on 935_0 937_0 summit of called Psiloriti 935_0
See also Daktyloi, Idaean Cave
Ide, Mt, in Phrygia 949_5 ff.
Cults: Kybele 950_0 Mater Idaea 950_0 Meter Ἰδαία 950_0 Zeus $85\bar{5}_2$ Zeus Ἴδαῖος 297_5(?) 950_0 ff. Zeus Πατρῷος 950_0
Epithets: μητέρα θηρῶν 950_0 πολυπτίδαξ 949_5 950_0 πολύπτυχος 950_0 σκολοπενδρώδης 949_5
Myths: birth of Daktyloi 949_5 Daktyloi sons of Aigesthios (Agdestis?) by Ide 970_0 Διὸς ἀπάτη 1021 Ide, d. of Melisseus 949_5 judgment of Eros 949_5 judgment of Paris 949_5
Etymology: 932_1 949_5
—— in relation to Hyperboreoi (?) 453 solar phenomenon on 949_5
Ide, personification of Mt Ide in Phrygia
Type: wreathed with fir 949_5
Ide, d. of Melisseus 949_5
Ide, m. of Idaean Daktyloi 970_0
Idmon 471
Idomeneus
Myth: Phaistos 947_0
Genealogy: descended from Helios 947_0 s. of Deukalion, s. of Minos, s. of Zeus 793_7
Idrieus 715
Iguvium
Cult: Iupater Sancius 724_0 f.
Iki kilisse in Galatia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_5
Ikonion
Cults: Agdistis (Angdistis) 970_0 Meter Βοηθηνή 970_0 Meter Theon 970_0 Theoi Σωτῆρες 970_0
—— stēle from 799
Ilia 1016
Ilion
Cults: Athena Ἰλιάς 950_0 Zeus Ἴδαῖος 950_0 f.
—— coins of 950_0
Ilissos 1115 ff. 1123 1135 1138_5 1139
—— small Ionic temple on 1118_4 1119_0
Ilissos-'island' 1119_4
Illyrioi
Cults: Apollon 458 sky-god (Ianus, Zan) 349 (?) 353 (?) 842 (?)
In relation to Dorians 341 Leleges 354_9 Ligures 340_3
Illyrioi (cont.)
—— Agyieús-pillars of 165 f. eight-year cycle of 440_2 tattooed 123_0
Ilos
Myths: foundation of Troy 349 Palladion 8
Genealogy: gf. of Priamos 8
Imbros
Cults: Bendis 314_0 Dionysos 314_0 Zeus Ὕψιστος $878_{0(8)}$ 922_1
Inachos
Myth: drives Io from home 503
Genealogy: f. of Kasos and Belos 981_1
India
Cults: Brahmā 774_1 Çiva 790 f. iron tridents and stone axes 790 792 850 Kāma 774_1 Krishna 774_1 Lakshmī 774_1 Rudra 791 Sarasvatī 774_1 Vishnu 774_1
Myths: cosmic egg 1035 f. Egyptian Herakles and Dionysos 7_2 —— pillars of Herakles and Dionysos in 423
Inessa 908_1
Inhissar in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_4
Ino
Myths: lashes Maenads with ivy-sprays 1041 plots death of Phrixos 904_1
Type: Bacchant milking herself 347_0 (?)
Inönü in Phrygia
Cults: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_4 Zeus ἐξ Αὐλῆς 249_2 Zeus ἐξ Αὐλῆς Ἐπήκοος Θεός 836 ff. 1226 Zeus Τελεσφόρος 838 1089 —— altars from 836 ff.
Intercidona 643_8
Invidia 505_2
Io
Myths: bride of Zeus 961_0 driven from home by Inachos 503 pursued by Zeus as fly (?) 782_1
Genealogy: m. of Epaphos by Zeus 961_0
Types: heifer 379 horned maiden 379
Ione
Cults: fire (πῦρ ἀθάνατον) 1187 Zeus Ἐπικάρπιος 1186 Zeus Κεραύνιος 1187 Zeus Νέμειος 1186
Myths: Perseus 1186 f. Triptolemos 1186
Iopolis 1187_2 1188
Ioudaia
Cults: Hypsistos $888_{0(32)}$ $889_{0(0)}$ Jehovah $888_{0(32)}$ $889_{0(0)}$ Theos Ὕψιστος $888_{0(32)}$ $889_{0(0)}$
—— coins of 1202
Iovilae See Iūvilas
Iovis
Cult: Gallia Lugudunensis 547_0 619
Associated with Esus and Volcanus 619
Iphikles
Genealogy: b. of Herakles 317 1017

Iphikles (cont.)
In relation to Herakles 445 447$_5$
See also Iphiklos (=Iphikles)
Iphiklos (=Iphikles) 451 f.
See also Iphikles
Iphiklos, s. of Phylakos
Myth: cured by Melampous 452 684 f.
Iphithea (?) 353$_3$
Iphitos, king of Elis 466 f.
Ipsara See Psara
Irbos (=Virbius?) 421
Iring
Identified with Ziu (?) 51 f.
—— road of 52
Iris
Type: with spread wings and outstretched arms 473
Irmin
Etymology: 52$_6$ 1212
Identified with Ziu 52 114
In relation to Armenios (?) 54 114
Irminsûl 50 ff.
—— as effigy of sky-god 57 as link between earth and heaven 82 as prototype of column at Mayence 109 as support of sky 56 as vehicle of sky-god 56 f. as wooden trunk 74 1212 compared with Ayyieiîs-pillar 166 178 compared with Diana-pillar 157 166
Isauroi 973$_1$
Ischys, s. of Elatos 1089
Isinoe (?), d. of Danaos 1150$_2$
Isis
Cults: Athens 985$_0$ Delos 922$_0$
Epithets: Pharia 928$_0$ Ταποσειριάς 985$_0$
Rites: effigy of Osiris buried in pine-tree 303$_2$ libation of milk from golden bowl shaped like female breast 347$_0$
Myths: founds Pelousion 986$_0$ nurses Diktys 986$_0$ nurses Horos 986$_0$ nurses Pelousios 986$_0$
Function: earth 557$_1$
Attributes: leafy spray (?) 1129$_0$ modius (?) 1129$_0$ poppy 1165$_1$
Types: bust on couch 1171$_3$ double bust (with Apis) 392 enthroned under arch 362
Identified with Demeter 252 Tethys 481$_0$
Associated with Sarapis (Serapis) 1128$_0$ (?) 1171$_3$ Zeus Κώθιος and Sarapis 922$_0$ —— soul of, identified with Kyon by Greeks, with Sothis by Egyptians 450$_0$
Isityche 1128$_0$ (?)
Islands of the Blest 36 117 465
Isodaites (=Plouton) 1113$_{0(2)}$
Isopata, gold ring from 49$_1$
Ištar
Attribute: axe (i.e. woodpecker?) 696$_0$
Associated with Sin and Šibitti 545$_0$
Isthmia, the festival 490$_{0(5)}$ 951$_0$
Istia See Hestia
Istros, springs of 465 494
Italy
Cults: Lares 1059 Penates 1059 Picus 696$_0$
Rite: burial within the house 1059
—— coins of 1063
Itanos
Cults: Apollon Πύθιος 929$_0$ Athena Πολιάς 929$_0$ Hera 929$_0$ Zeus Ἀγοραῖος 929$_0$ Zeus Δικταῖος 929$_0$ cp. 930$_0$ Zeus Ἐπήϊος 1130$_7$
—— coins of 1130$_7$ oath of 929$_0$
Ithake, coins of 706$_5$ the cave in 42
Ithomaiâ (Ithomaïa, Ithomaïs) 741$_4$ 890$_6$
Ithome, Mt
Cult: Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 741 ff. 890$_6$ 1222
Festival: Ithomaiâ (Ithomaïa, Ithomaïs) 741$_4$ 890$_6$
Rites: human sacrifice 890$_6$ water from Klepsydra brought daily to sanctuary of Zeus 890$_6$
Myth: Zeus brought up by nymphs Ithome and Neda 890$_6$
Ithome, the nymph 890$_6$
Iulia Apta
Cult: Ianus Vaeosus 325
Iuno
Cults: Aquincum 68$_2$ Blatsche 1084 Mogontiacum 96$_1$ 96$_2$ Rome 364 Thibursicum Bure 68$_2$ Urbs Salvia (?) 803
Epithets: Augusta 61$_0$ Caelestis 68$_2$ Cinxia 899$_0$ Lucetia 61$_0$ Lucina 59$_3$ 60$_0$ 61$_0$ 1226 Pronuba 61$_0$ Regina 59$_3$ 87$_3$ 95$_1$ 96 96$_1$ 96$_2$ 98 Sancta 96 98 Sororia 364
Festivals: Kalendae Martiae 61$_0$ Kalendae Octobres 364
Rite: brandishing torches 61$_0$
Metamorphosed into Beroe 1031
Functions: Kalendae 336$_8$ light 61$_0$ marriage 61$_0$ motherhood 1226 procreation 1226 spring 59 61$_0$ 94$_1$
Attributes: flower 61$_0$ girdle (?) 61$_0$ iris (?) 61$_0$ lily 61$_0$ peacock 60$_0$ 67 sceptre 98 f. torch or torches 59 61$_0$ two snakes (?) 61$_0$
Types: bearing babe and flower 61$_0$ bearing babe and lily or iris (?) 61$_0$ bearing babe and torch 60$_0$ bearing patera and sceptre 60$_0$ bearing torch or torches 59 clad in goat-skin (?) 60$_0$ grouped with children 60$_0$ 61$_0$ standing on cow 99$_0$ veiled 60$_0$ with foot on head of cow 98 f. with foot on head of ox 98$_3$
Identified with Frija 59 94$_1$ Luna, Diana, Ceres, Proserpina 256
Associated with Hercules and Minerva 89 Iupiter Optimus Maximus 96$_1$ 96$_2$ Mercurius and Ceres 1181$_0$ Mercurius, Hercules, Minerva 57 ff. Mercurius and Minerva 89

Iuno (cont.)
In relation to Frija 67
—— breasts of 37_2 of a woman corresponds with Genius of a man 1059
Iupater
Cults: Iguvium 724_0 f. Umbria 724_0
Epithet: Sancius 724_0
Rite: calf offered by man holding wheel 724_0 f.
See also Diespiter, Iupiter
Iupiter
Cults: Aizanoi 968_0 Alban Mt 46_3 Allmendingen 619 1221 Allobroges 570_0 Antiocheia on the Orontes 1188 Apulum 754_1 Aquileia in Venetia 328 842 Blatsche 1084 Brixia in Cisalpine Gaul 726_0 Clunia in Spain 1102_8 Corinth (?) 1214 Mt Dikte 927_1 928_0 Mt Gerizim $887_{0(31)}$ $888_{0(0)}$ 983_0 (?) Gothia 620 Heliopolis in Syria 745_1 Jerusalem 984_1 Kassiope 906_3 Mt Ladicus in Gallaecia 320_0 Lambaesis 369_0 Luxovium in Germania Superior (?) 1213 Matilica 401_0 Mogontiacum 96_1 96_2 Naissos 948_4 Napoca 754_1 Pannonia $823_{1(2)}$ Patrai 1214 Pergamon 1179 f. Pompeii 1158 Ravenna 1091 Rome 45 46 46_0 111_0 369_0 400_{11} 401_0 403_0 546_0 601 708 708_5 835_6 838 f. 1102_8 1103_0 1172_0 1181_0 1195_1 Salonae 69_0 401_0 Mt Silpion (?) 1188 Sirmium 1194_4 Spoletium 803_2 Tiber-island 726_0 Tomoi $823_{1(1)}$ Urbs Salvia 803 ff. Venafrum 69_0 401_0 Vichy 285_0
Epithets: Aepilofius (= Ἐπιλόφιος) 948_4 Aezanensis 968_0 Aezaniticus 968_0 Ambisagrus (= Ambisacrus rather than Ambisager) 328 421_6 673_3 842 Amicalis (= Zeus Φίλιος) 1177_2 1179 f. 1186_6 Ataburius 588_1 auctor bonarum Tempestatium 94_2 Augustus Ultor 1102_8 Buginas 570_0 Bronton 835_6 Caelestinus 369_0 401_0 Caelestis 69_0 400_{11} 401_0 caelipotens 401_0 Caelius 400_{11} Caelus (?) 400_{11} Capitolinus 601 1188 Casius 588_1 Casius (Cassius) in Korkyra 906_3 Cenaeus 902_2 Conservator 88_1 327 328 369_0 1195_1 Custos 367_1 (?) 1181_0 Dapalis 1172 Deus 958_0 deus unus et idem (?) 1060 Dianus 328 842 Dictaeus 927_1 928_0 Dictaeus rex 928_0 divom pater atque hominum rex 1070 Dolichenus 99_0 609 614 f. Epulo 1172_0 Fagutalis 403_0 Farreus 1172 Feretrius 111_0 546_0 601 613 Fulgur 46_0 fulgurator 815_4 Genetaeus 616_5 Heliopolitanus 745_1 Heros $823_{1(1)}$ $823_{1(2)}$ Hospitalis (= Zeus Ξένιος) 1101_3 1177_2 Idaeus 950_0 Imperator 708 848 917_0 Iurarius 726_0 Iutor 803 ff. 850 Labryandius 588_1 Ladicus 320_0 Lapis 260_0 546_0 Laprius 588_1 599 Latiaris 46_3 Liberator (Nero) 1214 matutinus
Iupiter (cont.)
338_1 Milichius 1158 Militaris 706 848 Molio 588_1 omnipotens rerum regumque repertor (?) 1060 Optimus Maximus 10 87_2 87_3 88_1 88_2 89_6 89_8 90 f. 91_1 93 95_1 96 96_1 96_2 328 361 620 1194_4 1196 Optimus Maximus Caelestinus 401_0 Optimus Maximus Celestis Patronus 401_0 Optimus Maximus Conservator 88_1 Optimus Maximus Heros $823_{1(1)}$ $823_{1(2)}$ Optimus Maximus Paternus Aepilofius 948_4 Optimus Maximus Tavianus 754_1 Paternus Aepilofius (= Zeus Πατρῷος Ἐπιλόφιος) 948_4 Patronus 401_0 Peregrinus $887_{0(31)}$ Pistor 260_0 prodigialis 19_0 progenitor genetrixque deum 1060 Propagator 369_0 706_8 (?) Propugnator 707_0 Ruminus 365_4 Sabasius (= Sabazius) 285_0 Sabazius 1197 Sanctus Bronton 835_6 836 838 Sarapis $888_{0(0)}$ (?) 983_0 (?) Stator 46_0 422_1 708_5 Summanus (?) 319 725_0 Summus (?) 319 Svelsurdus (?) 822_{13} Tanarus 32 Taranucus 32 Tavianus 754_1 Tempestatium divinarum potens 94_2 Terminalis 1090 f. 1133_1 (?) Terminus 1090 tertius 940_0 Tigillus 110_5 363 365 Tonans 39_1 60_0 111_0 505_2 811 835_6 1041 (?) Triumphator 706_3 Tropaeophorus 706_8 Ultor 1102_8 1103_0 Urius (?) 822_{13} Velsurus (?) 822_{13} Victor 708 848 Zbelsurdus (?) 1226
Festivals: Epula Iovis (Sept. 13 and Nov. 13) 1172_0 May 94_2 Quinquennalia 601
Rites: feast of roast flesh and wine 1172_4 lectisternia 1170_6 1171 oath by Iupiter Lapis with flint in hand 546_0 ox as piaculum 803_2 spolia opima 601 summanalia 725_0 table swept with vervain 395_2 397_0 treaty struck with flint of Iupiter Feretrius 546_0
Priest: flamen Dialis 341_0 828
Personated by Antoninus Pius 811 Augustus 1091 Diocletian (Iovius) 903_2 1194_4 Domitian 338_1 811 emperor 100 ff. forefather of family 1059 Galerius 1194 king 633 847 1059 Licinius 1195 Licinius Iunior 1195 Maximinus ii 1194 f. Nero 1214 Romulus Silvius 24_4 Titus (?) 810 Trajan 810 f. triumphing general 361 Vespasian (?) 810
Myths: consorts with Semele 1031 drives Saturnus from his kingdom 448_1 mutilates Saturnus 448_1 Palicus 909_0
Genealogy: f. of Genius 1060 f. of Liber by Proserpina 1031 f. of Olympus (?) by the nymph Chalcea 973_1 gf. of Tages 1060 s. of Caelus 941_0 s. of Saturnus 940_0 941_0

Iupiter (cont.)
Functions: aether 1090 celestial 1090 (See also sky) chthonian 1090 container and sustainer of the world 110_6 earth 803 father and mother of the gods 1060 flesh, wine, and bread 1173 (?) good weather 94_2 holder of scales 734_3 lightning by night 725_0 nocturnal sky 725_0 nurture 365_4 oak-tree 570_0 sea 803 sky 337 340 f. 373 803 (See also celestial) thunder 830_6 Thursday 70 treaties 725_0 universe 335_5 a younger Ianus 335 ff.
Attributes: bay-wreath 751_2 dog (?) 367_1 dolphin 803 f. double axe 609 eagle 400_{11} 751_2 812 eagle on globe 95_2 feretrum 601 f. 613 fork 850 mallet 620 sceptre 400_{11} 812 spear 711 f. 848 thunderbolt 803 f. 810 ff. 850 trident 803 f. 850 trophy 1195_2 two-pronged fork 803 ff. violet mantle 803 wheel 57_6 1213
Types: advancing with thunderbolt, trident, and fork 803 f. bearded head 331 334 bundle of herbs clothed as puppet 1171 bust 1133_1 bust with thunderbolt in right hand and spear in left 712 on column 46 eating sacrificial meal (?) 1172_0 enthroned on a pillar 47 flint (unhafted neolithic celt?) 546_0 grasping or hurling thunderbolt in chariot 82 831_1 cp. 76_0 handing thunderbolt to Trajan 1181_0 on horseback with uplifted bolt 82 Janiform 326 ff. protecting emperor 104_1 seated with thunderbolt in right hand and sceptre in left 1103_0 1194_4 1214 seated with Victory in right hand and sceptre in left 1103_0 (fig. 940) sending forth the four Seasons from the orbis annuus 372 f. standing with eagle on right hand and sceptre in left 1214 standing with sceptre in raised right hand and thunderbolt in lowered left 751 standing with spear (sceptre?) in raised right hand and thunderbolt in lowered left 708_5 standing with thunderbolt in lowered right hand and sceptre in raised left 70_1 standing with thunderbolt (?) in outstretched right hand and spear in raised left 711 f. standing with thunderbolt, sceptre, and eagle 285_0 1194_4 standing with thunderbolt and sceptre under arch 367 standing with thunderbolt and sceptre in four-horse chariot driven by Victory 331 334 $831_{1(2)}$ tree-trunk 109
Identified with Donar 64_0 95_2 Genius 1060 Ianus 328 365 Jehovah 1197 Sucaelus 620 Theos Hypsistos
Iupiter (cont.)
$886_{0(30)}$ Thor 620 Vediovis (?) 726_0
Assimilated to Hercules 95_2
Associated with Fontes 369_0 Fontes and Minerva 401_0 Fortuna 1195_2 Genius Fontis 369_0 Genius huius loci 1194_4 Hercules 1194_4 Iuno Regina 96_1 96_2 Lares 751 Mater Phrygia 950_0 Victoria 1195_2
In relation to emperor 708 Erinys 1102_7 Furiae 1102_7 Hercules 95_2 Ianus 328_6 331 335 ff. 353 842
—— acorn of (walnut) 775_0 beard of (silver-bush) 775_0 chariot of 76_0 82 331 334 830_6 831_1 flame of (a flower) 775_0 footprints of 37_2 pullus Iovis 35_0 regalia of 811 f. statue of, made of armour 46_3 throne of 1102_7 and Ianus on coins 331 ff. and Ianus in the Salian hymn 328 ff.
See also Diespiter, Iupater
Iupiter, the planet 480_5
Iustitia 99_1
Iuturna
Genealogy: w. of Ianus 368_3 394_3
Iůvilas 823 1226
Ivríz 564 f.
Ixion
Myths: Hera 1088 Zeus 1098_4
Genealogy: descended from Aiolos 1088 s. of Antion s. of Periphas s. (or f.) of Lapithes 1122 f.

Jachin 426 f.
Jacob and Esau 451_1 ladder of 127 f. 129_1 136
Jains, sacred column of 150_2
James, St, b. of the Lord
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1202_0
James, St, s. of Zebedee
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1200_4 1202_0
Janina
Etymology: 350
—— folk-tale from 678 f.
Jehovah
Cults: Mt Gerizim $887_{0(31)}$ Ioudaia $888_{0(32)}$ $889_{0(0)}$
Epithets: Κύριος Ὕψιστος $888_{0(32)}$ Theos Zῶν 1102_8 Theos Ὕψιστος $888_{0(32)}$ $889_{0(0)}$ Ὕψιστος $888_{0(32)}$ $889_{0(0)}$
Rite: θυσίαι ἐντελεῖς ὁλόκαυτοι...καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν $888_{0(32)}$
Priest: ἀρχιερεύς $889_{0(0)}$
Function: hills $887_{0(31)}$
Identified with Bacchus 1197 Dionysos 1197 Ἐl Ὁlâm 1037 Iupiter Sabazius 1197 Liber Pater 1197 Zeus Ὕψιστος 889
Jerusalem
Cults: Aphrodite (Venus) 984_1 Liber Pater (supposed) 282_0 Zeus (Iupiter) 984_1
—— Antiochos iv Epiphanes and 1189_1 'cup-marks' at 793_4 golden vine

Jerusalem (cont.)
at 281_4 pyramids built by Helene of Adiabene near 1146_0 tomb of 'Zechariah' near $1146_{0(d)}$
Jews
Cult: Theos "Υψιστος $884_{0(i)}$ —— of the Dispersion propagate the cult of Theos Hypsistos 889 f. use gentile formula ὑπὸ Δία, Γῆν, "Ηλιον $884_{0(i)}$
Jodute See Tiodute
John, St
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1200_4 1202_0
Supersedes Zeus 'Αραβύριος in Rhodes 923_0
—— on the marriage supper of the Lamb 1168
John Klimax, St 134 f.
Jordan, as name of Milky Way 480
Jude, St
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1202_0
Juktas, Mt
Cults: Authentes Christos 945_0 Panagia 945_0 Rhea (?) 944_0
Festival: Transfiguration (Aug. 6) 945_0
Rite: annual pilgrimage to church on summit 945_0
Myths: Britomartis pursued by Minos 939_1 burial of Minos (?) 944_0
Etymology: 939_1
—— profile of Zeus (originally Minos?) on 939_1 940_0 remains on summit of 943_0 944_0 tomb of Zeus on 940_0 ff.

Kabeirion, apsidal temple of Theban 900_0
Kabeiro
Identified with Bendis 314_0 Hekate 314_0
Kabeiroi
Cults: Lemnos 663 ff. Pergamon 953_3 f. Phoinike 314_0 Samothrace 313 842 Thrace 313 ff.
Epithet: Μεγάλοι Θεοί 313 f. 954_0
Rite: mysteries 314_2 953_3 f.
Myth: witness birth of Zeus 954_0
Genealogy: sons of Ouranos 954_0
Functions: control storms 953_3 Father and Son 317 Mother (Axiokersa), Father (Axiokersos), and Son (Axieros) conceived as rebirth of the Father 314
Etymology: 313_{11} 313_{12}
Attributes: double axe 953_3 ram's head 954_0 sword 953_3
Types: two youthful males 953_3 two youthful warriors 953_3
Identified with crabs 664 f. Zeus and Dionysos 664_1
Associated with Zeus Σαβάζιος (?) 664_1
Kabeiros, a Pergamene prýtanis 953_3
Kadmilos
Cults: Phoinike 314_0 Samothrace 314_0
Identified with Ešmun 314_0
See also Kasmilos
Kadmos
Myths: helps Zeus against Typhoens 449_6 seeks Europe 449_6 takes charge of Semele's child 28 f.
Kadoi
Cult: Artemis 'Εφεσία 408_0
—— coins of 408_0
Ka-Hegal 483
Kaikias $488_{0(2)}$
Kaineus
Myth: sets up his spear as a god 547_2
Kairos 859 ff.
Cult: Olympia 859
Genealogy: youngest s. of Zeus 859 861
Etymology: 860 f.
Attributes: butterfly 860 globe 860 mirror (?) 863_1 razor 859 f. 861 f. rudder 862 wheel 863 863_1 whip 863_1
Types: bearded runner 860 f. female figure (Occasio) on little wheel 863 Lysippos 859 f. 864 Pheidias (?) 862 f. winged runner in military dress (?) 863_1 youthful runner 859 f. 861 f.
Identified with Bios 864 Chronos 861 864
Assimilated to Kronos 861
Kaisareia in Kappadokia
Cults: Mt Argaios 977_1 ff. Sarapis 978_0 Tyche (Tranquillina) 978_0 —— coins of 978_0 ff. 983_0 earlier names of 978_0
Kalaïs
Genealogy: s. of Boreas by Oreithyia, d. of Erechtheus 444
Etymology: 444
Kalaos, f. of Attes 444
Kalaureia
Cult: Zeus Σωτήρ 728_0
Kalchas, of Siris in Lucania
Myth: slain by Herakles $490_{0(i)}$
Kalchas, s. of Thestor
Myth: contest with Mopsos $489_{0(4)}$
Kalchedon
Cult: Zeus Βουλαῖος 259_0
—— coins of 461_0
Kalchedonia, m. of Solymos 973_1
Kalchos, king of Daunia $490_{0(i)}$
Kaldene, d. of Pisias (Pisides?) 973_1
Kalikantzaraioi See Kallikantzaroi
Kallikantzaroi
Myth: attack the tree or column or columns supporting the earth or sky 56_2
Kalliope
Genealogy: m. of Orpheus 1024
Kallirrhoe, spring adjoining Ilissos 1116 1119 1119_4
Kallirrhoe (Kalliroe), d. of Acheloios
Cults: Athens 1117 (?) Phaleron 183
Attributes: cornu copiae and phiále 1117 (?)
Type: Caryatid 184

Kallirrhoe (Kalliroe), d. of Acheloios (cont.)
Associated with Acheloios and Zeus Μειλίχιος (?) 1117 Hestia, Kephisos, Apollon Πύθιος, Leto, Artemis Λοχία, Eileithyia, Acheloios, the Geraistian birth-nymphs, Rhapso 183
Kallirrhoe, d. of Okeanos 716
Kalliste (= Hekate) $1114_{0(4)}$
Kallisto
Cult: Arkadia $1114_{0(6)}$
Myth: Zeus 228_4 228_7 1217
Metamorphosed into bear 228 f.
Function: bear-goddess (?) $1114_{0(6)}$
Kalydon
Myth: Calydonian boar 799
Kalymna
Cults: Apollon $808_{0(11)}$ Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(11)}$
Kāma
Cult: India 774_1
Function: love 774_1
Kamares, Mt
Cults: Rhea (?) 934_0 Zeus Ἰδαῖος (?) 935_0
—— Maurospelaion on 934_0 935_0
Kameiros, relief-ware from 614 f.
Kamikos 30
Kamise, st. and w. of Ianos 330_0
Kanachos 1165_1
Kanai (Kane)
Cult: Zeus Καναῖος 902_2
Kanake 684_2
Kandaules 559
Kane See Kanai
Kanobos (Kanopos)
Cult: Sarapis 985_0
Myth: Io, touched by Zeus, becomes m. of Epaphos 961_0
Kapaneus
Myth: struck by lightning 23 824 f.
Genealogy: f. of Sthenelos 824_5 892_5
Kappadokia
Cults: Mt Argaios 977_1 ff. Hypsistos $885_{0(28)}$ Zeus Δακιηνός 616 Zeus Στράτιος 594_8 595_0
—— coins of 296_0 Kyklops in folk-tale from 992 f.
Kar, s. of Phoroneus 168_1 257_4
Karbina 29
Karia
Cults: Apollon 573_{10} 574_1 574_2 574_3 Dionysos Μάσαρις 565_2 Ge 729_0 Helios 729_0 Zeus 573 f. 705 729_0 745_1 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 763_1 Zeus Κάριος 577 Zeus Λαβραδεύς 559 f. 572
—— coins of 573 f.
Karia, akrópolis of Megara 168_1 257_4
Karia, personification of the district 320_0
Karien, near Mt Pangaion
Cults: Zeus Ἐρκεῖος Πατρῷος 1066 Zeus Κτήσιος 1066
Karkinar 666_2
Karko 666_2
Karmania
Cult: Ares 464
Karmanor 190_0
Karme 190_0
Karneades 237_0
Karneia 237_0
Karousa
Cult: Zeus Δικαιόσυνος Μέγας 1092_8
Karyanda
Festival: bull-sports 582_5
Karystos
Rite: Hyperborean offerings 497
Kasion, Mt, in Egypt 984_4 f.
Cult: Zeus Κάσιος 907_0 984_4 f.
Myth: temple founded by descendants of Dioskouroi 984_4
Etymology: 981_1
Kasion, Mt, in Syria 981_1
Cults: Triptolemos 981_1 Zeus Κάσιος 907_0 981_1 ff. 1191 f.
Rites: hecatomb 982_0 incubation 982_0 (?)
Myths: Kyparissos 981_1 Seleucides aves 981_1 Zeus fights Typhon 449_0 981_1
Etymology: 981_1
—— injured by earthquake 1191
Kasion, town in Egypt 984_4 f.
Kasios, eponym of Mt Kasion in Egypt
Cult: Pelousion 986_0 987_0
Epithet: ὁ ναύκληρος 987_0
Kasios, eponym of Mt Kasion in Syria 981_1
Kasiu, an Aramaean god 983_0
Kasmilos
Identified with Hermes 314_2
See also Kadmilos
Kasos, f. of Kleomachos 981_1
Kasos, one of the Kyklades 981_1
Kasos, s. of Inachos 981_1
Kassiope
Cults: Iupiter Casius (Cassius) 906_3 Zeus (?) 907_0 Zeus Κάσιος (Κάσσιος) 906_3 907_0
Kastabos
Cult: Hemithea 670
Myth: Staphylos and his daughters Molpadia, Rhoio, Parthenos 670 f.
Kastalia 460
Kastalios 190_0
Kastor
Epithet: ἱππόδαμος 436
Genealogy: b. of Polydeukes 317 1015_7 ep. 1097_2 s. of Zeus by Leda 1015_7
Type: fights Calydonian boar 799
See also Dioskouroi
Katabasion of Trophonios at Lebadeia 1075 f. 1088
Katane 908_1
Cult: Apollon 486_5
—— coins of 486_5
See also Aitne
Kato Zakro, clay seal-impression from 623 652
Katreus
Myth: 923_0 924_0
Genealogy: s. of Minos and f. of Althaimenes and Apemosyne 923_0

Kaukasos, the giant 694_{0}
Kaulon or Kaulos 1042 (?)
Kaulonia
Cults: Agon (?) 1042 Apollon 1042 f. Demos (?) 1042 Dionysos 1041 (?) Herakles 1041 f. (?) Hermes Ἀγώνιος (?) 1042 Hermes Δρόμιος (?) 1042 wind-god (?) 1042 Zephyros (?) 1042
Festival: Hiketesia 1040
Myth: Kaulon or Kaulos 1042 (?)
—— coins of 1040 ff.
Kebrenioi 130
Kekrops
Myth: founds altar of Zeus Ὕπατος $875_{1(2)}$
Genealogy: s. of Ge 1121
Kelaino 176_{1}
Keleos, a Cretan 929_{0}
Keltoi
Cult: Zeus 570_{0}
Myths: Apollon sheds tears of amber 484 843 Kyknos 477
In relation to Sabines 340_{3} —— poplar in land of 468
Kenaion, Mt
Cults: Zeus Κήναιος (Κηναῖος) 902_{2} Zeus Πατρῴος 902_{2}
Myth: Herakles 902_{2}
Kenchreai $1145_{1(b)}$
Kenelm, St 116 f.
Kentauros
Genealogy: s. of Apollon by Stilbe 1134 f.
Type: marine, with head-dress of crab's-claws 665_{3}
See also Centaurs, Centaurus
Kentoripa (Kentouripai)
Cult: Agathos Daimon (?) 1129_{0}
—— coins of 784_{7}
Keos
Myth: Oidipous 1152
Kephallenia
Cult: Zeus Αἰνήσιος 907_{2}
Kepheus, s. of Aleos 1083 1148
Kephisos, river in Attike near Athens 1091 1139_{6}
Kephisos, river in Attike near Eleusis 1103
Kephisos, the river-god
Cult: Phaleron 183 f.
Type: horned (?) 184
Kephissos, river in Phokis 460
Ker
In relation to Eros 315_{3}
Keramos in Karia
Cults: long-haired god (Zeus?) with double axe and sceptre or spear 575 f. Zeus 575 f. Zeus Λαβράϋνδος (?) 599_{2}
—— coins of 575 f. 599_{2}
Keraunia $807_{3(1)}$
Keraunios
Cult: Kition $807_{3(1)}$ Mytilene $807_{3(3)}$ Syria $807_{3(2)}$
Epithet: Ὕψιστος $807_{3(3)}$
See also Zeus Epithets Κεραύνιος
Keraunos
Cult: Emesa 814_{3}
Epithet: ἀστεροβλῆτα (?) 119_{1}
Types: god in oriental military costume 814_{3} small male figure embodying thunderbolt (?) 784
Identified with Zeus 12 f. 119_{1}
See also Index II s.v. 'Thunderbolt'
Kerberos
Myths: Dionysos 256 Herakles 469 899_{1}
Rite: offering of honey-cake 1142_{10}
Type: three-headed 802
Compared with golden hound 1227
Kerberos, a Cretan 929_{0}
Kerdylion
Cults: Theos Ὕψιστος $878_{0(9)}$ Zeus Ὕψιστος 906_{2}
Keres
Functions: avenging deities 1101 souls 1101
Kerkidas 290_{0}
Kerkopes
Myth: Herakles 1041 f. (?)
Kerkops, the Pythagorean 1024
Keteus 228_{5}
Keyne, St 117
Keyx
Myth: claims that his w. Alkyone is Hera 1088
Khem
Type: ithyphallic 772_{1}
Khnemu
Attribute: snake 1084
Type: lion-headed snake with radiate crown 1084
Khonsu 126
Kibuka 450_{1}
Kibyra
Cult: Zeus 771
—— coins of 771
Kierion
Cult: Zeus 743_{7}
—— coins of 743_{7}
Kilikia
Cult: Zeus Βόρειος 380
—— coins of 1210
Kinyras
Myths: buried in sanctuary of Aphrodite at Paphos 944_{0} Myrrha and Adonis 680 848
Genealogy: f. of Adonis 694_{0} f. of Myrrha 680
Kios
Cults: Demeter Καρποφόρος 815_{5} Zeus Ὀλύμπιος καὶ Ἀστραπαῖος 815_{6}
Kirke
Myths: Iason 1097_{2} Medeia 1097_{2} Odysseus 18_{6}
Kithairon, Mt
Cults: Hera Κιθαιρωνία 898_{6} 899_{0} Pan 899_{0} Sphragitides 899_{0} Zeus 581 Zeus Κιθαιρώνιος 898_{6}
Festival: Daidala Megala 977_{0}
Rites: burning of oaken images (δαί-

Kithairon, Mt (cont.)
δαλα) on altar of wood piled with brushwood 898$_6$ 977$_0$ sacrifice of bulls to Zeus and cows to Hera, these victims being filled with wine and incense 898$_6$
Myths: singing-match with Mt Helikon 899$_0$ Zeus pretends marriage with Plataia, d. of Asopos 898$_0$
Kithairon, king of Plataiai 898$_5$
Kition in Kypros
Cults: Aphrodite 807$_{5(4)}$ Esmun 1095$_0$ Keraunios and Keraunia 807$_{3(1)}$ Theos Ὕψιστος 879$_{0(16)}$ 980$_3$ Zeus Κεραύνιος 807$_{5(4)}$ (Zeus?) Κεραύνιος and (?) Κερανία 807$_{3(1)}$
Klareotis, a Tegeate tribe 1148 cp. 1149$_0$
Klaros
Cults: Apollon Κλάριος 489$_{0(4)}$ Zeus Κλάριος 873$_2$
Myth: contest of Kalchas with Mopsos 489$_{0(4)}$
Klazomenai, sarcophagi of 521$_5$
Kleagoras 1106
Kleanthes' Hymn to Zeus 854 ff.
Klearchos of Rhegion 739 875$_{1(4)}$
Kleinis 463$_1$ 501
Kleite, m. of Kaulon or Kaulos 1042
Kleomachos, s. of Kasos 981$_1$
Kleonai, coins of 892$_4$ 1079
Kleophema, w. of Phlegyas 488$_{0(6)}$
Kleophrades 733
Kleostratos 1151
Klepsydra, spring on Mt Ithome 830$_6$
Klodones 133$_0$
Klotho 212$_5$ 1023
Klymene, m. of Phaethon 473$_3$ 479 (?)
Klymenos (=Hades) 1113$_{0(2)}$
Klymenos, f. of Erginos
Function: hypostasis of Zeus (?) 1075
Klytaimestra
Genealogy: d. of Zeus by Leda and st. of Helene 1015$_7$
—— ghost of, seen in mirror 206$_2$
Kneph
Cult: Egypt 1127$_9$
Type: hawk-headed snake 1127$_0$
Identified with Agathos Daimon 1127$_0$ 1128$_0$
Knidos
Cults: Apollon Δύκιος 729$_0$ Ge 729$_0$ Zeus 729$_0$ Zeus Μέγιστος (?) 1157$_6$ Zeus Μειλίχιος 1157
—— Triopion at 684$_2$
Knossos
Cults: Elchanos (?) = Velchanos 948$_{0(3)}$ Rhea 520$_5$ 548 Theos Ὕψιστος 879$_{0(14)}$ two double axes 537 Zeus Ἐλχάνος (?) = Fελχάνος 948$_{0(3)}$
Myths: founded by Hestia 940$_0$ founds Brundisium 30$_3$ —— ancient grove of cypresses at 520$_5$ clay seal-impressions from 552$_1$ 652 coins of 491$_{0(6)}$ gold ring from 49 f. incised gem from 623 oath of 731$_0$
Knossos (cont.)
road from, to Idaean Cave 933$_0$ tomb of Zeus at 695$_0$ wall-painting from 528 f.
Kodros
Myth: dressed as woodman with double axe or bill-hook 627$_6$
—— on trophy at Delphoi 1137$_2$
Koios 915$_0$ (?)
Kokkygion, Mt
Cults: Hera Τελεία 893$_2$ Zeus 893$_2$
Myth: Zeus married to Hera 893$_2$
—— formerly called Thronax (Thornax?), later Kokkyx 893$_2$
Kokynthos, headland of Bruttii 1042 (?)
Kolchis
Cult: Phasis 471
Myth: Phrixos 904$_1$
Kolchoi
Cult: Diana 411
Myth: Orestes 421$_3$
—— Egyptian kýrbeis of 1095$_0$
Kolikantzaroi See Kallikantzaroi
Koloe
Cults: Apollon Βοζηνός 568 Apollon Ταρσεύς 568 f. Theos Ὕψιστος 881$_{0(20)}$ Zeus Κτήσιος 1067 Zeus Σαβάζιος 285$_0$
Kolonai
Myth: Kyknos, s. of Poseidon 669
Kolonos
Cults: Athena Πολιοῦχος 1152$_5$ Demeter 1152$_5$ Zeus (?) 1152$_5$ Zeus Χθόνιος 1154 f.
Myth: Oidipous 1152$_5$
Kolophon
Myth: Polytechnos 693
Kolotes 1078
Komana in Kappadokia
Cult: Ma 616
—— priestly kings at 965$_0$
Komana in Pontos, priestly kings at 965$_0$
Koptos
Cult: Horos 450$_0$
Korakoi (=Philioi Daimones)
Cult: Skythia 1179$_1$
Etymology: 1179$_1$ (?)
Kore
Cults: Eleusis 314$_0$ 314$_2$ Megalopolis 1178 Megara 1117$_7$ Nysa in Lydia (?) 564 Paros 131 Phlyeis 1066 Samothrace 314$_0$ 314$_2$ Selinous 489$_{0(4)}$ Tegea 1140$_5$
Epithets: Μελίβοια (?) 1113$_{0(3)}$ Παστικράτεια 489$_{0(4)}$ Πρωτογόνη 1066
Rite: bridal hymn 132$_2$
Myths: carried off by Plouton 345$_{6(2)}$ consorts with Zeus 1029 Herkyna 1075 Plouton 1103
Genealogy: d. of Zeus by Rhea or Demeter 1029 m. by Zeus of the chthonian Dionysos or Zagreus 1029 w. of Klymenos (=Hades) 1113$_{0(3)}$
Function: Corn-maiden 295$_2$

Kore (cont.)
Attributes: double axe (?) 564 pig 1140$_5$ snake (?) 564 torches 1117$_7$
Type: horned, four-eyed, two-faced 1029
Identified with Phersephone 1029
Associated with Demeter 1113$_{0(3)}$ 1178 Dionysos 120$_1$ Zeus and Demeter 258$_3$ 259$_0$ Zeus, Hera, Demeter Θεσμοφόρος, Baubo 259$_0$
—— Κόρης θήρα(?) near Lebadeia 899$_2$
See also Persephone, Phersephone, Proserpina
Koressos, Mt
Cult: Zeus 962$_2$
—— rock-cut throne on 962$_2$
Koretas 190$_0$
Korkyra
Cults: Apollon 730$_0$ Artemis 457 Demeter 730$_0$ Zeus 675 f. 730$_0$ Zeus Ὕψιστος 879$_{0(12)}$ 907$_1$
—— coins of 906$_3$ 907$_0$ coins struck in 675 f. 'Corcyraean whip' at Dodona 826 851
Koronis
Myths: bears Asklepios to Apollon at Lakereia 484 bears the second Asklepios to Ischys s. of Elatos 1089 cp. 210$_0$
Genealogy: d. of Phlegyas 463$_1$ m. of Asklepios 833$_0$
Korybantes (Kyrbantes)
Cults: Gortyna 723$_0$ Hierapytna 723$_0$ Priansos 723$_0$
Myths: drown cries of infant Zeus 928$_0$ hide Zeus from Kronos 940$_0$
Korybas
Cult: Haimonioi 295
Rite: Eleusinia 133$_0$
Identified with Attis 295
Korykia 901$_2$
Koryphon (Koryphaion), Mt
Cult: Artemis Κορυφαία 869$_1$
Kos
Cults: Asklapios Καῖσαρ (=Claudius) 1088 Hestia (Histie) Ταμία 19$_0$ 238$_0$ Theos Ὕψιστος 880$_{0(18)}$ 964$_1$ Zeus Ἱκέσιος 1095$_0$ Zeus Πολιεύς 238$_0$
Rite: wearing of white-poplar 470
Myth: Merops 1132$_1$
Kosingas 130 505$_5$
Kosmos
Cult: Orphists 141$_1$ 827
Type: four-pillared 141$_1$ 827
Kotiaeion
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835$_4$
Kottos 1023
Kotys, s. of Manes 311 f. with Atys as Dioskouroi (?) 312
Koujounlou in Bithynia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835$_5$
Koula See Koloe
Kounados, Mt, in Paros
Cults: Aphrodite 875$_{1(5)}$ Histie Δημίη
Kounados, Mt, in Paros (cont.)
875$_{1(5)}$ Zeus Καταβάτης 20$_1$ (Zeus) Ὕπατος 875$_{1(5)}$ 918$_2$
Koures
Rite: Eleusinia 133$_0$
—— Epimenides as 191 934$_0$
Kouretes (Koretes)
Cults: Gortyna 723$_0$ Hierapytna 723$_0$ Lyttos 723$_0$ Mylasa 586 f. Priansos 723$_0$
Epithet: Ἰδαῖοι 296$_4$
Rites: personate Zagreus 549 sacrifice children to Kronos 548
Myths: clash shields about infant Zeus 961$_0$ clash weapons to aid Leto against Hera on Mt Solmissos 962$_2$ drown cries of infant Zeus 928$_0$ flee from Kronos 549 Labrandos, Panamoros, and Palaxos or Spalaxos 587 rear Zeus on Mt Dikte 929$_0$ receive infant Zeus from Rhea 931$_0$ taught to dance by Athena 1029 Mt Sipylos 956$_2$ wreathed with olive 1029
Genealogy: sons of Zeus 940$_0$
Function: δαίμονας ἢ προπόλους θεῶν 931$_0$
Types: Assyrian 938$_0$ grouped about the child Zeus or Dionysos 1210
Associated with Zeus 938$_0$ Zeus Κρηταγενής 587
Kourion in Kypros, silver-gilt bowl from 553
Kragaleus 163$_0$
Kragasos 669
Kragos, Mt 971$_2$
Cults: Kragos 971$_2$ Theoi Ἄγριοι 971$_2$
Kragos, eponym of Mt Kragos
Cults: Mt Kragos 971$_2$ Lykia 972$_0$
Epithet: ἀστεργής 972$_0$
Genealogy: f. of Cheleidon 971$_2$ s. of Tremilos (Tremiles?) by the nymph Praxidike, b. of Tloos and Pinalos 971$_2$
Identified with one of the Theoi Ἄγριοι 971$_2$ f. Zeus 972$_0$ 974$_0$
Krannon
Cult: Zeus 833
Rite: rain-charm 831 ff.
Myth: two ravens 832
—— coins of 832 f.
Krariotai See Klareotis
Krastonia
Cult: Dionysos 114 f.
Krataiis (=Hekate) 1114$_{0(4)}$
Krateuas, herbal of 395$_2$
Kres, eponym of Crete, hides Zeus on Mt Dikte 928$_0$
Kresion, Mt 1147$_6$
Kretenia 922$_5$ 923$_0$
Krishna
Cult: India 774$_1$
Function: solar(?) 774$_1$
Attribute: lotos 774$_1$
Kroisos 311$_8$ 465

Kronia, island in Ionian Gulf 555_0
Kronia, later called Hierapolis 554_3
Kronion, in Sicily 555_0
Kronion, Mt, at Olympia 554_2
Kronion, Mt, in Lakonike 554_2
Kronos
Cults: Athens 554_2 Byblos $887_{0(0)}$ Crete 548 f. Delos (?) 920_0 Gaza (?) 675 Mt Kynthos (?) 920_0 Lebadeia 899_2 Olympia 554_2 Phrygia 1155 f. Sicily 910_0 Solymoi 972_0
Epithets: ἀγκυλομήτης 549 845 Ἀκρασίας 1156_1 ἀστράπτων καὶ βροντῶν (?) 558_0 558_1 βροντοκεραυνοπάτωρ 558_1 ἠερόεις 557_1 Ῥέας πόσι, σεμνὲ Προμηθεῦ 549_7 ὑψίπολος 557_1 ὑψίπορος (?) 557_1
Rites: human omophagy (?) 549 sacrifice of children by Kouretes 548 sacrifice at spring equinox by Βασίλαι 554_2
Priests: Βασίλαι at Olympia 554_2
Personated by magician (?) 558_0
Myths: bound beneath oak-trees by Zeus 1027 buried in Sicily 555_0 consulted by Zeus 1027 devours his children 549 928_0 933_0 driven out by Zeus 941_0 942_0 driven out of Assyria by Zeus, reigns over Italy 693_4 694_0 943_0 founds Byblos in Phoinike 552 founds Kronia (= Hierapolis) 554_3 made drunk on honey by Zeus 1027 mutilated by Zeus 448_1 685 1027 mutilates Ouranos 447_8 pursues Kouretes 549 receives from Rhea stone instead of Zeus 793_8 901_1 reigns over Italy, Sicily, most of Libye, and the west 554_3 reigns over the west 695_0 seeks to destroy Zeus 928_0 slays Arsalos, Dryos, and Tosobis 972_0 swallows stone in place of Zeus 191_{10} thrust down by Zeus below earth and sea 1020 yields the kingship of Italy to Zeus 694_0
Genealogy: f. of Aphros and Cheiron by Philyra 695_0 f. of Attis 294 f. of Cheiron by Philyra 871_0 f. of Zan 940_0 f. of Zeus 943_0 f. of Zeus by Rhea 941_0 f. of Zeus, Poseidon, Hades 785 forefather of Pikos who is also Zeus 695_0 h. of Rhea 548 673 845 s. of Okeanos by Tethys 1020 s. of Ouranos by Gaia 447_8 s. of Phanes by Nyx 1026
Functions: dark air 557_1 lightning 558 mountain 554 pole 557_1 rain 557 557_1 558_0 rain, hail, wind, and thunderstorms 558_0 sea 557_1 558_0 sky 601 1156_2 solar (?) 552 thunder and lightning 558_1 water 557_1 winter 557_1
Etymology: 549 557_1 660_1 845 861
Attributes: bulls 553 f. corn-grains (?) 558_1 disk 552 double axe 553 f.
Kronos (cont.)
601 drépanon 448_0 hárpe 447_8 549 f. 550 553 f. 845 861 head-dress of feathers 552 f. sceptre 552 thunderbolt (?) 558_1
Types: aged 861_5 1030 bald-headed 861 four-winged 552 f. Janiform 552 lion-headed (See Ahriman) six-winged 552 stabbing lion 553 standing with double axe and hárpe between two bulls 553 f.
Identified with Adonis (?) $886_{0(30)}$ Ba'alhammân 554_3 Bel 558_0 Chronos 861 El 558_3 Ianus 374 Prometheus 549_7 Saturnus 555_0 Tholathes (?) 558_0
Compared with Zeus 554 ff.
Confused with Chronos 374
Superseded by Saturnus 550 Zeus 554 601 845 —— imitated by Marcus Aurelius 105_0 laws of 933_0 pillars of 422 sceptre of 1026 sweat of 558_0 tear of 557_1 tomb of 555_0 556_0 tower of 36 52
Kronos, the planet
Functions: ὄμκρυ 558_0 rain, hail, wind, and thunderstorms 558_0 558_1
Identified with Nebrod (Nimrod) and Orion 693_4 694_0
Kroton
Cults: Hera Λακινία 1021 Muses 1021 Pythagoras as Apollon Τπερβόρειος 223
Rite: sacrifices to Apollon on seventh day of month 237_0
Myth: Pythagoras' eagle 222_4
In relation to Pythagoreans 45
—— coins of 225 f. garden of Hera Λακινία at 1021
Kteatos
Genealogy: b. of Eurytos 317 s. of Molione, nominally by Aktor, really by Poseidon 1015_8
Ktesios (?) 1066
Kurshumlu in Phrygia
Cults: Phoibos 839 Zeus Βροντῶν 839
Kurtköi in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_4
Kyaneai
Cults: Ares Μέγας 101_1 Eleutheria Ἀρχηγέτις Ἐπιφανής 101_1 Zeus Αὐτοκράτωρ Καῖσαρ Τίτος Αἴλιος Ἀδριανὸς Ἀντωνεῖνος Σεβαστὸς Εὐσεβής (= Antoninus Pius) 101_1
Kybele
Cults: Mt Ide in Phrygia 950_0 Mykenai (?) 1221
Rites: effigy worn by votaries 299 f. tattooing 123_0
Priests: Archigallus 299 ff. Gallus 298 f.
Priestesses: chief priestess 301 f.
Genealogy: w. of Zeus 298
Function: mountain-mother 298
Attributes: lion 299 lions 970_0 1221 (?)

Kybele (cont.)
mural crown 300 pine-tree 951_0 timbrel 300
Types: seated in aedicula with two lions 970_0 standing between two lions with double axe and ritual horns (serpentine?) on her head 1221 (?)
Identified with Agdistis 970_0 Meter Theon 970_0 Rhea 970_0
Associated with Attis 301_1
In relation to Attis 293 842
Kyklopes
Myth: slain by Apollon 241_4
Genealogy: sons of Ouranos by Ge 1023
Function: underground smiths 784 805_6
Attribute: lightning 805_6
Types: one-eyed 828 four-eyed 999 monstrous giants 851
—— two, in Albanian folk-tale 999 f.
Kyklops
Myth: Odysseus 990 997
Functions: sky (?) 989 f. sun (?) 989 f.
Compared with Zeus 990
—— in folk-tales 988 ff.
Kyknos, king of Liguria 477 ff.
Kyknos, s. of Ares
Myth: Herakles 274_0
Kyknos, s. of Poseidon
Myth: Hemithea (Leukothea) and Tennes (Tenes) 669 ff.
Genealogy: h. of Philonome 669 h. of Prokleia 669
Kylikranes tattooed 123_0
Kyllene
Cult: Asklepios 1078
Kylon 1138
Kymak in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_4
Kynados, Mt See Kounados, Mt
Kynon (leg. Κυνῶν, sc. πόλις)
Cult: dog 987_0
Kynortion, Mt $487_{3(1)}$
Kynosoura in Lakonike 1088 f.
Kynosouris in Thessaly (?) 1089
Kynthos, Mt
Cults: Athena Κυνθία 919_0 920_0 921_0 922_0 Kronos (?) 920_0 Rhea (?) 920_0 921_0 Zeus Κύνθιος 919_0 920_0 921_0 922_0 —— cistern-mosaic on 919_0 920_0 922_0
Kyparissos
Myth: 981_1
Kypris
Epithet: Διωναία (Διανάα) 351_0
Function: maddens the lover 1164_0
Kypros
Cults: Aphrodite Παφία 424 Apollon 246_1 Ba'al-hammân 1208_2 Dionysos Σαώτης (?) 599_2 Janiform god and goddess 673 tree 157_1 Zeus Ζητήρ 444_7 1102_8 Zeus Σαώτης (?) 599_2 Zeus Τιμωρός 874_2 1099_0
Kypros (cont.)
—— coins of 424 three-eyed ogre in folk-tale from 995 f.
Kypselos, chest of 451 739_0 golden Zeus dedicated at Olympia by 737 vow of 737_6
Kyrene
Cults: Artemis Ἀγροτέρα 1177_3 Zeus Εὐβουλεύς 259_0 (Zeus) Φίλιος 1177_3
Festival: Karneia 237_0
—— coins of 708_2 leaden anchor from 876_0
Kyrene, eponym of the town
Myth: carried off by Apollon 460_2
Kyrios Sabaoth $884_{0(0)}$
Kyrrhos
Cult: Zeus Καταιβάτης 15 f. 745_1 983_1
Kys
Cult: Zeus Ἐλευθέριος (= Augustus) 97_0
Kytissoros 904_1
Kyzikos
Cults: Hermes 834 Theos Ὕψιστος 953_1 Zeus 743_7 Zeus Βρονταῖος 833 ff. 852 Zeus Ὕψιστος $881_{0(21)}$ 953_1 Zeus Ὕψιστος Βρονταῖος 833 ff. $882_{0(0)}$
Myth: nurses of Zeus 227 f.
—— coins of 180 319_5 460_2 743_7
Kyzikos, personification of the town 319_5

Labaro (?)
Cult: Norba in Lusitania 609_3
Labranda
Cults: Zeus Λαβράϋνδος (Λαμβράϋνδος, Λαβραύνδος, Λαβραιϋνδος (?), Λαβραΐυνδος, Λαβραϋδος (?), Λαβράενδος, Λάβρενδος, Λάβρανδος (?), Λαβρανδεύς, Λαβραδεύς, Λαβρανδηνός) 576 f. 585 ff. 597 846 Zeus Στράτιος 576 ff. 585 591 594 713 722 846 976_0
Priests: distinguished citizens priests for life 576 f.
Etymology: 588 600
—— remains of temple at 588 ff. sacred plane-trees at 590 976_0
Labrandos, the Koures 587
Labrantidai $881_{0(20)}$
Labrayndos, god of Mylasa 586 ff.
See also Zeus Epithets Λαβρᾴϋνδος
Labryandos, the king 588
Laburus
Cult: Emona 609_3
Labyadai
Etymology: 629
—— oaths of 233 233_7 730_0 sacrifice of 243 f.
Labyrinth
Myth: Daidalos 600 f.
Etymology: 600 846
In relation to double axe 600 f.
—— as circular maze-like structure 943_0 as mediaeval maze 601
Labys 629

Lachesis
Genealogy: d. of Ouranos by Ge 1023
Function: cosmic 316_0
Lactora in Aquitania
Rites: vires escepit 306_4 vires tauri consacravit 306_4
Ladicus, Mt, in Gallaecia
Cult: Iupiter Ladicus 320_0
Ladon, the dragon 1017
Lagina
Cults: Hekate 714_2 Zeus Τψιστος 963_6 Zeus Τψιστος καὶ Θεῖος ὁ βασιλικός $879_{0(17)}$
Laïos, a Cretan 929_0
Laïos, f. of Oidipous
Myth: Oidipous 923_0 1154_3
Lairbenos
Cult: Hierapolis in Phrygia 566
Types: radiate bust 566 youthful hero on horseback bearing double axe (?) 566
Identified with Apollon 566 ff. 845
Lairmenos
Cults: Badinlar, in Phrygia 567 Dionysopolis in Phrygia (?) 566
Type: youthful hero on horseback bearing double axe (?) 566
Identified with Apollon 566 ff. 845 Helios 568 845
Lakereia 484
Lakonike
Cults: Apollon Κουρίδιος 322_6 Apollon Τετράχειρ or Τετράχειρος 322_6 Apollon Τετράωτος 322 Asklepios 1085
Lakshmī
Cult: India 774_1
Genealogy: w. of Vishnu 774_1
Attribute: lotos 774_1
Lambaesis
Cults: Fons 369_0 Genius Fontis 369_0 Ianus Pater 369_0 Iupiter Propagator Conservator 369_0
Lamia 666_2 828 f. 994_2 1131
Lamis 694_0
Lammas 325_8 326_4
Lamponeia 951_0 f.
Lampsakos
Cults: Meter Theon Τηρείη 697 Priapos 464
—— coins of 674_1 Xenophon at 1106 f.
Laodike 452 f. 466 501
Laodikeia Katakekaumene
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν καὶ Ἀστράπτων 817
Laodikeia on the Lykos
Cults: Caracalla 1186 Gaia 1186 Thalassa 1186 Theos Τψεστος (sic) $882_{0(23)}$ Theos Τψιστος 968_3 Zeus 319 f. 319_7 745_1 Zeus (= Caracalla) 1186 Zeus Ἀσεὶς 321_0
Festivals: Deia 320_0 Deia Sebasta Oikoumenika 320_0
Myth: Zeus nursed by Rhea under protection of Kouretes 968_3
—— coins of 319_7 571 f. 933_0 1186
Laodikeia, personification of the city on the Lykos
Types: seated with statuette of Zeus in right hand and cornu copiae in left 320_0 seated with statuette of Zeus in right hand and sceptre in left 319_7 standing with phiale in right hand and statuette of Zeus in left 320_0
Laodikeia on the sea
Cult: Zeus 1192
Myth: shepherd struck by lightning $886_{0(30)}$
—— coins of 1192 formerly called Leuke Akte, and before that Ramitha $886_{0(30)}$
Laodokos 452
Laomedon 892_6
Laonoë See Laonome
Laonome (Laonoë) 472
Lapersai
Cult: Zeus Ἀγαμέμνων 1069
Laphystion, Mt, in Boiotia
Cults: Dionysos Λαφύστιος 899_1 Herakles Χάροψ 899_1 Zeus Λαφύστιος 899_1
Lapithai
Myths: Ixion 1088 Periphas 1122 f.
Type: fighting Centaurs 615_2 (?)
—— migration of (?) 1123
Lapithes, eponym of the Lapithai
Genealogy: f. (or s.) of Periphas 1122 1134 s. of Apollon by Stilbe 684_2 1134 f.
Lapps
Cult: Thor (?) 423_3 533_2
Rites: erection of beam pierced by iron nail 423_3 533_2 sacrifice of bare bones 423_3 world-pillars 57_1
Lar
Epithet: familiai...pater 1059
Rite: meal 19_0
Genealogy: Larunda progenitus 1059
Identified with Genius 1059
Larasa in Media 958_0
Lares
Cults: Italy 1059 Rome 401
Epithets: familiares 1059 Querquetulani 401
Festival: Compitalia 1171_2
Rite: corn-ears 19_0
Function: souls of deified ancestors 1159_1
Etymology: 1159_1
Attributes: goat-rhytón 1060 cp. 751_1 pail 1060 cp. 751_1
Types: dancing 1060 seated 751_1 standing 751_1 woollen effigies 1171_2
Assimilated to Attis 308_1
Associated with Genius Neronis 96 98 Iupiter 751
In relation to Manes, Genii, Lemures, Larvae 1059
Larisa at Argos
Cults: Athena 892_5 893_0 three-eyed Zeus 892_5 Zeus Λαρισαῖος 892_5 893_0

Larisa, old name of Tralleis 587_2
Larisa on the Caystrian Plain
Cult: Apollon Λαρισηνός 958_0
Larisa on Mt Messogis
Cult: Zeus Λαράσιος 958_0 ff. Zeus Λαρισαῖος 958_0 Zeus Λαρίσιος 957_3 f.
Larissa in Thessaly
Cults: Akrisios 1155 Athena 1155 Enhodia 1155 Enhodia Γαστικά 1155_4 Polis 1155 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1155 f.
Myths: Akrisios slain by Perseus 1155 Gargaros, s. of Zeus 950_0
Larissa Kremaste
Cults: Hermes 1155_5 Polis 1155_5
—— compared with Larisa on Mt Messogis 957_3
Larunda
Genealogy: m. of Lar 1059
Etymology: 1159_1
Larvae
In relation to Manes, Genii, Lemures, Lares familiares 1059
Lasimos 1159_1
Latinus 1071
Latinus Silvius 404_0
Latmos, Mt 589
Lato See Leto
Latos, oath of 730_0
Lavinium
Cult: Penates 1068
—— caducei of iron and bronze together with Trojan pottery preserved at 1068
Lear 325 f. See also Llyr
Lebadeia
Cults: Apollon 899_2 St Christopher 1076 chthonian Zeus (or Hermes) 233_0 St Elias 899_2 Hera 899_2 Herkyna 1073 1075 Kronos 899_2 Trophonios (Trephonios) 899_2 1073 ff. Zeus 899_2 Zeus Βασιλεύς 899_2 900_0 1073 f. 1076 Zeus Τρεφώνιος or Τροφώνιος 1061 1073 ff.
Festival: Basileia 900_0
Rite: honey-cakes offered to snakes 1074 f.
Myth: Trophonios (Trephonios) swallowed by earth 1075
—— bōthros of Agamedes at 1075 contract for building temple of Zeus Βασιλεύς at 900_0 Katabásion at 14 1075 f. 1088 Κόρης θήρα (?) near 899_2
Lebedos 662
Lebena
Cult: Asklepios 1082
Rite: incubation 1082
—— temple-spring at 1082
Lebuinus, St 117
Lectisternia See Index II
Leda
Myths: consorts with Zeus 1015_7 1131_1 cp. 941_0 keeps egg of Nemesis in chest 1015 lays two eggs containing Castor and Pollux, Clytemnestra and Helena 1015_7
Leda (cont.)
Attribute: Phrygian cap 432_2 (?)
—— egg of (?) 1062
Leibethra (Libethra)
Rite: mysteries 1024
Leicester
Cult: Janiform god 325 f.
Rite: workmen begin the year's work in underground chamber sacred to Janiform god 325 f.
Myth: Cordelia buries King Lear in underground chamber beneath the Soar 325 f.
Leimon 164_6
Leïs 414_2
Leleges 354_9 458_1 666_0 949_5 951_0
Lemnos
Cults: Bendis 314_0 crabs 664 f. Dionysos 314_0 Kabeiroi 663 ff.
Lemures
In relation to Manes, Genii, Larvae, Lares familiares 1059
Lenaia 236 244_2
Leo 43_4 734_3
Leochares 281_4
Leon (leg. Λεόντων, sc. πόλις)
Cult: lion 987_0
Leonard, St 134
Leonidas 6
Lepetymnos
Cult: Mt Lepetymnos 832
Lepetymnos, Mt
Cults: Apollon 832 Lepetymnos 832
Myth: two ravens 832
Lerne (Lerna)
Cult: Dionysos Σαώτης 599_2
—— spring at 1022
Lesbos
Cult: Dionysos Ἐνόρχης 1021
Festival: Theodaisia 1021
Rite: cannibalism 1021
Myths: Enorches 1021 head of Orpheus 290_0
—— name-trick in folk-tale from 999
Leto (Lato)
Cults: Argos 455 Athens 163_4 Badinlar, in Phrygia 567 568_8 Delphoi 1216 Gortyna 723_0 Heleia (?) 931_0 Hierapytna 723_0 Lyttos 723_0 934_0 Phaleron 183 Priansos 723_0
Epithets: Ἀσιάτις 455 Μήτηρ 567 568_8
Myths: aided by Kouretes on Mt Solmissos 962_2 bears Apollon and Artemis to Zeus in Lykia 455_2 Kleinis 463_1
Genealogy: m. of Apollon 237_0 484 m. of Apollon and Artemis by Zeus 453 m. of Apollon and Artemis 456 m. of Artemis 465 501
Etymology: 455
Associated with Apollon 567 Apollon and Artemis 183 202_1 203_0 317_2
In relation to Artemis 501

Leukas
Cult: Apollon Ἄκτιος 782
Rite: ox sacrificed to flies 782
Leuke, d. of Okeanos 468
Leuke, island in Euxine sea 925_0
Leuke Akte $886_{0(30)}$
Leukippides 438_2
Leukippos, b. of Aphareus 438_2 1089
Leukophrys, old name of Tenedos 669
Leukothea 211
Leukothea, st. of Tenes 670
Leuktron or Leuktra in Lakonike
Cult: Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 891_0
Libanos, Mt
Cult: Zeus (Abad) 983_7
Myth: Libanos 981_1
Liber
Cults: Jerusalem (supposed) 282_0 Rome 307_0
Epithets: Bimater 1031 bis genitus 1031 Pater 220_0 244_4 256 282_0 1031 1197
Festival: Magna Corona 244_4
Priest: archibucolus 307_0
Myths: Agdistis 969_4 born in India 1031 descent to the dead 256 reared by Nysus 1031 slain by Titans 1031
Genealogy: s. of Iupiter by Proserpina 1031
Function: triumphs 244_4
Attributes: bay 244_4 ivy 244_4
Identified with Apollo and Sol 256 f. Apollon 244_4 Dionysos 220_0 1031 Jehovah 1197 Osiris 244_4
Associated with Minerva and Hercules 1181_0
Libera (?) 98_1
Libethra See Leibethra
Libye, the country
Cult: Aphrodite 987_0
Rite: taboo on garlic among priests of Aphrodite 987_0
Libye
Type: double bust (with Triton) 392
Lichades 903_0
Licbas 902_2 903_0
Licinius
Personates Iupiter 1195
Licinius Iunior
Personates Iupiter 1195
Ligourio $1145_{1(b)}$
Liguria
Myth: Kyknos 477
Ligurians
In relation to Illyrians and Iberians 340_3 —— rock-engravings of 688_0
Lindos
Cults: Athena 346_0 925_0 Athena Πολιάς 923_0 Dionysos 925_0 Psithyros the god 1044 Zeus Ἀταβύριος 925_0 Zeus Πολιεύς 923_0
Festival: Sminthia 250_2
Myth: Helene dedicates electrum cup to Athena 346_0
Linos 164_5 164_6
Lips in Phoenician cosmogony 1037 f.
Litai 1097_2 1098_0 1099_2 1100_0 1101
Functions: avenging deities 1101 prayers of injured man 1100_0 1101 prayers of injurer 1100_0
Type: halt, wrinkled, squinting 1099_2 1100_0
Literum
Cult: Mater deum 306_4
Rite: (vires) condidit 306_4
Lithuanians
Cults: Sondergötter 13_1 wind-god (Wejopatis) 445_1
Myth: Road of the Birds 38 462
—— star-lore of 158_1
Lityerses 295_2 1096_3
Livia, fresco from house of 145 ff.
Livinus, St 117
Ljod 682
Llyr
Cult: Celts 326
Identified with Ianus 326
Loki 305_0
Longinus, the blind soldier 305_0
Lopta, near Sidyma
Cult: Apollon 971_2
Lotis
Metamorphosed into lotus-tree 486_2
Lousoi
Cult: Artemis 646
Loxo 452_{11}
Lucania
Cult: Zeus 709
—— coins of 709
Ludi Plebei 1172_0
Ludi Romani 1172_0
Lugdunum
Cults: Mars 99_3 Vesta 99_3 Volcanus 99_3
Rite: vires excepit et a Vaticano transtulit 306_4
Lugdunum Convenarum
Cult: Fagus 402_1
Luke, St
Attribute: amulet 1200_3 1200_4
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1200_4 1202_0
Luna
Function: Monday 70
Attribute: torch 1050
Types: bust with crescent on head 555_0 colossal 254_5 driving chariot 96
Identified with Diana, Ceres, Iuno, Proserpina 256
Associated with Sol 59_0 96 98 555_0 1050
Lupercalia 20_0
Lussoius See Luxovius
Luxovium in Germania Superior
Cults: Brixia (Bricia) 86_3 Iupiter (?) 1213 Luxovius (Lussoius) 86_3
Luxovius (Lussoius) 86 86_3
Lydia
Cults: Zeus 1228 Zeus Ἀσκραῖος $872_{0(5)}$ Zeus Κάριος 577 Zeus Κεραύνιος $807_{5(6)}$ Zeus Μηδεύς (Μηδινεύς) 312_5

Lydia (cont.)
Myth: Sandon Herakles 560
—— coins of 296_0 1210 religious prostitution in 959_0 f.
Lyk(abas?)
Cult: Themisonion 312_5 313_8
Epithet: Σώζων 312_5 313_8
Lykabettos, Mt 1115
Lykaion, Mt
Cult: Zeus 423 Zeus Λύκαιος 761 891_3
Rite: human sacrifice 891_0
Myth: Kallisto 228_5
—— bronze statuettes of Zeus from 737 745_9
Lykaon
Myth: 228_5
Genealogy: f. of Dia 486_1 f. of Kallisto 228_5 s. of Pelasgos 1096_4
Lykaonia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν καὶ Ἀστράπτων 817_2 835_5
Lykia
Cults: Apollon 453 Apollon Λύκειος 458 Artemis Ἐλευθέρα 681_1 Theoi Σκληροί 972_0 Zeus Κράγος 972_0
Rite: imprecations by the Theoi Σκληροί 972_0
Myth: Apollon winters there 455
Etymology: 453
—— solar symbol of 698
Lykios, s. of Kleinis 463_1
Lykokatzaraioi See Kallikantzaroi
Lykon (Λύκων, sc. πόλις)
Cult: wolf 987_0
Lykoreia
Cults: Apollon Λυκωρεύς 901_2 902_0 Phoibos Λυκώρειος or Λυκωρεύς 901_2 902_0 Zeus Λυκώρειος 901_2
Myth: Deukalion 901_2
Etymology: 901_2
Lykoreion, Mt
Cult: Zeus Λυκώρειος 901_2 902_0
Lykoreus See Lykoros
Lykoros (Lykoreus), s. of Apollon by Korykia 901_2
Lykos, Boeotian hero
Myths: Antiope 1013 Zethos and Amphion 1013 1015 1019_2
Lykos, god of light (?) 902_0 1013
Lykos, river in Phrygia 572_2
Lykourgos, tomb of, struck by lightning 9
Lyktos 925_1
See also Lyttos
Lymphae
Associated with Vires 306_4
Lynkeus 317 437 ff.
Lyons, marble statuette of Zeus at 759 f.
Lysippos 45 746_2 748_0 749 762 859 f. 864 1046 1139_0 1143_5 1145_0
Lyttos
Cults: Aphrodite 723_0 Apollon Πύθιος (Πύτιος) 723_0 934_0 Ares 723_0 Artemis 934_0 Athena Πολιάς 723_0 Athena Ὠλερία 723_0 Belchanos (?) = Velchanos $948_{0(4)}$ Britomartis 934_0
Lyttos (cont.)
Hera 723_0 Hestia 723_0 934_0 Kouretes (Koretes) 723_0 Leto (Lato) 723_0 934_0 Nymphs 723_0 Zeus 934_0 Zeus Βελχάνος (?) = Fελχάνος $948_{0(4)}$ Zeus Βιδάτας 934_0 Zeus Μοννίτιος 723_0 Zeus Ὀράρτιος 723_0
Festivals: Belchania (May 1?) $948_{0(4)}$ Theodaisia $948_{0(4)}$
—— oath of 723_0 731_0
See also Lyktos

Ma
Cults: Asia Minor 294_0 Komana 616 Mastaura 565_2
Rite: sacrifice of bull 565_2
Priest: διὰ βίου 616_1
Myths: follows Rhea 565_2 nurses Dionysos 565_2
Identified with Rhea 565_2
Ma as equivalent of Μήτηρ 293_4
Machaireus 170_2
Machaon
Genealogy: b. of Podaleirios 317
Function: surgeon 451_1
Etymology: 451_1
Mâcon, silver statuettes from 746_2 755
Macrobii of Apollonia on Mt Athos 500
Maenads
Epithet: Λαφύστιαι 899_1
Myth: lashed with ivy-sprays by Ino 1041
Attribute: thýrsos 461_0
Types: dancing 476 double bust (with Pan) 392 double bust (with Priapos) 392 double bust (with Satyr) 392 milking her breast into goat-rhytón 347_0 neo-Attic 165_0 Skopas 476_3
Associated with Apollon 461_0 Dionysos 115 245_0 246_0 262 f. 265 Satyrs 929_0
—— in amber 1221 on votive tablet 903_0
Magi 33 395_2 507 546_0 701 977_0
Magna Corona 244_4
Magna Mater See Mater
Magnes, a herdsman of Mt Ide in Phrygia, discovers loadstone 949_5
Magnesia ad Maeandrum
Cults: Apollon Αὐλαείτης (Αὐλαΐτης, Αὐλίτης, Αὐλητής) 249_2 Apollon Βλακώνιος 948_0 Zeus Ἀκραῖος $873_{0(7)}$ 963_1
—— coins of 249_2
Magnesia ad Sipylum
Cults: Apollon ἐν Πάνδοις 729_0 Ares 729_0 (Artemis) Ταυροπόλος 729_0 Athena Ἀρεία 729_0 Ge 729_0 Helios 729_0 Hermes (?) 957_0 Meter Σιπυληνή 729_0 ἡ τοῦ βασιλέως Σελεύκου Τύχη 729_0 Zeus 729_0 957_0
—— coins of 957_0
Magnesia in Thessaly
Cults: Apollon Κοροπαῖος 730_0 Artemis Ἰωλκία 730_0 Asklepios 1079 Zeus Ἀκραῖος 730_0 $871_{3(1)}$
—— coins of 1079

Magni, s. of Thor 64_0
Magoi See Magi
Magrè
Cult: Rit- 1220
Mahalinae 64_0
Maia
Identified with Rosmerta 94_3
Associated with Mercurius 96 (?)
Maiandros, river-god 408_0
Maidike
Cult: Dionysos Ἀσδούλης 270
Maionia
Cult: Zeus 745_1
Maira 164_6
Makedonia
Cults: Apollon 458 Arantides 1102_4 Muses 255_3 Zeus Ὕψιστος $878_{0\,(0)}$ —— coins of 323 412 548_0 1136_4 folk-lore in 36
Malachbelos
Cult: Emesa (?) 814_2
See also Malakba'al
Malakba'al (Melekba'al) 1108_2
See also Malachbelos
Malea (Maleai), Cape
Cults: Apollon Μαλεάτης (?) $488_{0\,(0)}$ Zeus Μαλειαῖος $488_{0\,(0)}$ 890_4
Malea, headland in Lesbos $488_{0\,(2)}$
Maleates
Cult: Peiraieus $487_{3\,(1)}$
Associated with Apollon $487_{3\,(1)}$
Maleventum See Beneventum
Malkandros, f. of Palaistinos or Pelousios 986_0
Mallos in Kilikia
Myth: founded by Amphilochos and Mopsos $489_{0\,(4)}$
—— coins of 552 845 983_0 (?)
Maloeis in Lesbos $488_{0\,(2)}$
Malophoros See Demeter Epithets Μαλοφόρος
Malos, s. of Zeus $488_{0\,(0)}$
Malthayiah, rock-cut relief at 769_2
Mandaites 1024
Mandas, bronze shrines from 141 ff. 154
Manes
In relation to Genii, Lemures, Larvae, Lares familiares 1059
Manes, forefather of the Lydians 311 f.
Genealogy: f. of Akmon 312_5 s. of Zeus by Ge 312
Identified with Zeus 312
Manichaeans 44 1211
Manthea (?) 229_1
Mantineia
Cults: (Artemis) Ἠνελόπη (?) 691 f. Asklepios 1078 Poseidon Ἵππιος 581 (Zeus) Ἐπιδώτης (Ἐπιδότης) 321_1 Zeus Εὐβωλεύς 259_0 Zeus Κεραυνός 12 f. 807 Zeus Σωτήρ 321_1
Myths: refounded by Antinoe 1083 sea-water in sanctuary of Poseidon Ἵππιος 581
—— coins of 1078
Manto, d. of Teiresias $488_{0\,(2)}$ $489_{0\,(4)}$
Mantua, relief at 811 f.
Marathon
Cult: Zeus Τταρος $875_{1\,(3)}$ 898_1
—— battle of 854 tetrapolis of $875_{1\,(3)}$
Marathon, the hero
Personates Zeus (?) 1146
Genealogy: f. of Sikyon 1146 s. of Epopeus 1146
Marcellinus See Petrus
Marduk
Cult: Babylon 1282_2 769_1
Epithet: Bêl 1282_2
Function: storm 769_0
Attribute: dragon 769_1 770_0
Type: advancing with double lightning-fork in either hand (?) 769_0
Identified with Adad 769_1
Maria de' Greci, St
Supersedes Athena 910_1
Marina, St 1114
Mark, St
Attribute: water-jar 1200_3 1200_4
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1200_4 1202_0
Marnas
Cult: Gaza 675
Identified with Zeus 675
Maroneia, coins of 271_3
Marpessa 439
Mars
Cults: Agedincum 99_3 Alani 548_0 Borcovicium 51_1 Cadenet 619 Lugdunum 99_3 Rome 547_2 Tiora Matiene 1133_1 1230
Epithets: Thingsus 51 Ultor 114_0
Myth: herdsman finds sword of Mars 548_0
Functions: oracular 1133_1 1230 Tuesday 70
Attributes: goose (?) 51_1 spear 547_2 swan (?) 51_1 wheel 57_6 woodpecker on pillar 1133_1
Type: spear (?) 547_2
Identified with Ziu 50
Associated with Vesta and Volcanus 99_3
—— head of, as shield-sign of Salii 376_2 on the column of Mayence 96 99 sword of 548_0 682_6
Marsyas
Myth: contest with Apollon 248_0 249_0
Etymology: 569_2
Marsyas, river in Karia 590
Marsyas, river-god 408_0
Mārtānda 1035
Martinmas 325_8
Mary Magdalene 305_0
Marys, the three 138_0
Masnes 312
See also Manes, forefather of the Lydians
Mastaura
Cults: Ma 565_2 Rhea 565_2 youthful hero on horseback bearing double axe 563 Zeus Σπάλωξος 587
—— coins of 563

Mater
Cults: Mt Ide in Phrygia 950$_0$ Pessinous 969$_4$ Rome 969$_4$
Epithets: Idaea 950$_0$ Magna 969$_4$ 971$_0$ Phrygia 950$_0$
Myths: Mt Agdos 969$_4$ Attis 969$_4$ 970$_0$ made of stone from Mt Agdos flung by Deukalion 971$_0$
Associated with Iupiter Idaeus 950$_0$
See also Mater deum, Meter, Mother of the gods
Mater deum
Cults: Liternum 306$_3$ Rome 301 f. 306$_5$
Epithets: Idaea 302$_1$ Magna 302$_1$
Priest: sacerdos 306$_4$
Priestess: sacerdos maxima 302$_1$
Associated with Attis 306$_5$
Mater divum
Identified with Virgo 734$_3$
Matilica
Cult: Iupiter Caelestis 401$_0$
Matres
Cult: Allmendingen 619
Matronae
Cult: Allmendingen 619
Matthew, St
Attribute: city-gate with coin above it (?) 1200$_3$ 1200$_4$
Type: on chalice of Antioch 1200$_4$ 1202$_0$
Matutinus 74
Maximinus i, lance of, struck by lightning 10
Maximinus ii
Personates Iupiter 1194 f.
Mayence, column of 93 ff. 1213 f.
Mazaka, old name of Kaisareia in Kappadokia 978$_0$
Medeia
Epithet: ἐψάνδρα 211$_2$
Myths: Kirke 1097$_2$ wooed by Zeus 1088
Medesigiste 270$_5$
Mediomatrici
Cult: Janiform god 324
—— coins of 324
Medousa
Epithet: Γοργάς 1148$_3$
Myth: Perseus 716 ff. 1018
Genealogy: m. of Chrysaor 457
Type: winged 457
Identified with Artemis, Rhea, Kybele, Demeter, etc. as a form of the Great Mother (?) 457 Compared with Tzitzinaina 1018
—— hair of 191$_{10}$ 1148
Mêdûm 1145$_{1(a)}$
Megala Dionysia 250$_1$
Megala Panhellenia 1121$_0$
Megalai Theai
Cult: Megalopolis 1178
Megaloi Theoi See Kabeiroi
Megalopolis
Cults: Agathos Theos 1125$_1$ Aphrodite 1178 Apollon Ἀγυιεύς 160$_5$ 163 Asklepios 1090 Athena Ἐργάνη 164$_7$ Demeter 1178 Ἔργαται 164$_7$ Kore 1178 Megalai Theai 1178 Zeus Φίλιος 1178 f. 1183
Megara
Cults: Acheloios 1117$_7$ 1138$_5$ Agathos Daimon (?) 1117$_7$ Aphrodite Ἐπιστροφία 257$_4$ Apollon Καρνεός 165$_3$ 168$_1$ Demeter (?) 1117$_7$ Dionysos Νυκτέλιος 257$_4$ Eileithyiai 168$_1$ Heros 896$_0$ 897$_0$ Kore 1117$_7$ Megaros (?) 1117$_7$ Muses 1139$_0$ Nyx 257$_4$ Pan 1117$_7$ Plouton (?) 1117$_7$ Saron (?) 414$_1$ Sithnides 1117$_7$ (?) Zeus 257$_4$ 1138$_5$ Zeus Ἀφέσιος 895$_1$ 896$_0$ 897$_0$ Zeus Κόνιος (not Κρόνιος, nor Κώνιος, nor Σκότιος, nor Χθόνιος) 257$_4$ 1139$_0$
Festivals: Πυθάεια 185$_2$ Πυθάεια Σεβαστεῖα 185$_2$
Myth: deluge 1138$_5$
—— coins of 163 168$_1$ 185 f. 1139$_0$ votive relief from 1117$_7$
Megareus See Megaros
Megaris
Cult: Zeus Ἀφέσιος 179
Megaros (Megareus), s. of Zeus by one of the Sithnides 897$_1$ 1117$_7$ (?)
Meidias, the potter 244$_4$
Meilichia 1091 f. 1092$_5$
Meilichieion at Alaisa (Halaesa) 1158
Meilichioi
Cult: Thebes in Boiotia 1154$_6$
Meilichion at Orchomenos in Boiotia 1149
Meilinoe (?) 1114$_{0(5)}$
Mekone
Etymology: 1165$_1$
Melaina 176$_1$
Melampous
Myths: cures Iphiklos, s. of Phylakos 452 684 f. rears snakes in oak before his house 1087
Etymology: 1153$_1$
Type: anguiform (?) 1153$_1$
Compared with Oidipous 1153$_1$
Melanis 176$_1$
Melantheia 176$_1$
Melantho 176$_1$
Meleagrides 497
Meleagros
Myth: meleagrides 497
Meles, river near Smyrna 998$_2$
Meliai, nymphs of Mt Dikte 933$_0$
Meliboia (?) (=Kore) 1113$_{0(3)}$
Melichios See Zeus Μηλίχιος
Melikertes
Myth: caldron of apotheosis 212
Identified with Melqart or Melqarth 1109$_0$
Melindia (?) (=Persephone) 1113$_{0(3)}$
Melindia, m. of Persephone by Aïdes king of the Molossoi 1113$_{0(3)}$
Melinoe (?) 1114$_{0(5)}$
Melinoia (?) (=Persephone) 1113$_{0(3)}$

Melissa
Metamorphosed into bee 928_0
Melisseus 928_0 949_5
Melissos
Genealogy: f. of the nymphs Adrasteia and Ide (Ide) by Amaltheia 933_0 cp. 928_0
Melitodes (=Persephone) $1113_{0(3)}$
Melitone (?) (=Persephone) $1113_{0(3)}$
Melos
Cults: Theoi Ouranioi $808_{0(12)}$ Tyche 1136_4 Zeus Καταιβάτας 16 f. Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(12)}$ —— coins of 788_0 1136_4 incised gem from 544 622 terra-cotta relief from 717
Melqart or Melqarth
Identified with Herakles 762 Melikertes 1109_0 Zeus Μειλίχιος (?) 1109_0
Memnon, s. of Heos
Myths: golden vine 281_4 psychostasia 733 f.
Memphis
Cults: Nefer-Tem 774_0 ox 987_0
Priest: Ostanes 701_0
Men
Cult: Eumeneia in Phrygia 970_0
Epithet: Ἀσκαηνός 970_0
Function: lunar 285_0
Attributes: moon 285_0 starry pilos 386 winged caduceus 285_0
Identified with Attis 295 298
Associated with Zeus Σαβάζιος 285_0
Menelaos
Myth: Helene 1044
In relation to Agamemnon 447_5
—— sceptre of 1132_5
Menestratos 1151
Mercurius
Cults: Allmendingen 619 Divitia 64_0 Gallia Belgica 547_0 Praeneste 397_0
Epithet: secundus 1088
Genealogy: b. of Aesculapius secundus 1088
Functions: summer 62 94_1 Wednesday 70
Attributes: caduceus 70_1 cock 94_3 goat 70_1 purse 70_1 94_3 winged cap 70_1 (?)
Types: running 69_3 running on pillar 69
Identified with Wodan 59 63_0 69 94_1 386_6
Associated with Diana 67 (?) Inno and Ceres 1181_0 Iuno, Hercules, Minerva 57 ff. Maia (?) 94 96 Minerva and Iuno 89 cp. 57 ff. Rosmerta 94_3 547_0 (?) Venus 67
Meridies 74
Merops, king of Kos
Myths: Hera (?) 1132_1 Rhea (?) 1132_1 Zeus 1132_1
Metamorphosed into bee-eater (?) 1132_1 eagle 1132_1 1134_6
Merops, seer of Perkote 1072
Mesraim See Mizraim
Messana
Cult: Poseidon 795
—— coins of 794
See also Zankle
Messapians 30 31_1 1159_1
Messene
Cults: Apollon Κόρυδος 458 Hera 728_0 Zeus 1223 Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 728_0 741 ff.
Festival: Ithomaia 741_4
—— coins of 741 f. 1222 1223
Messenians of Naupaktos 741
Messogis, Mt
Cult: Meter Ἰσοδρόμη 957_3
Metaneira 821_3
Metanoia 862 f. 863_1
Metapontum
Cult: Hermes Εὔκολος 118_3
In relation to Pythagoreans 45
—— coins of 667_3
Meter
Cults: Agra 554_2 1142_3 (?) Athens 1119_0 1142_3 Mt Ide in Phygia 950_0 Ikonion 970_0 Magnesia ad Sipylum 729_0 Mt Messogis 957_3 Mt Sipylos 956_2 Smyrna 729_0
Epithets: Βοηθηνή 970_0 Δινδυμήνη 970_0 ἐν Ἄγραις 1119_0 1142_3 (?) Ἰδαία 950_0 970_0 Ἰσοδρόμη 957_3 Πλαστήνη 956_2 Σπυληνή 729_0 970_0
Associated with youthful paredroi, at once her consort and her child 294 Zeus 950_0 Zeus Μιλίχιος 1142_3
See also Mater, Mater deum, Meter Theon, Mother of the gods
Meter Theon
Cults: Eumeneia in Phrygia 970_0 Ikonion 970_0
Epithets: Ἀγγιστις (=Ἀγδιστις) 970_0 Ἀνγδιστις (=Ἀγδιστις) 970_0
Identified with Kybele 970_0
See also Mater, Mater deum, Meter, Mother of the gods
Methydrion
Cult: Zeus Ὁπλόσμιος 290_0
Myth: Hopladamos (Hoplodamos?) protects Rhea against Kronos 291_0
Metion 1146
Metis
Myth: swallowed by Zeus 12 348_2
Genealogy: d. (?) of Erebos and Nyx 315_4
Metis (masc.)
Epithet: πρῶτος γενέτωρ 1028
Function: βουλή 1024
Etymology: 1025
Identified with Erikepaios 1024 1039 Eros 1039 Phanes 1024 1026 1032 1039 Protogonos 1039 Zeus 1028
In relation to Protogonos (?) 1025 Zeus 1025
Meton, the astronomer 1130_7
Metrodoros, portrait-herm of (with Epikouros) 390

Michael, St
Epithets: Ἅγιος Ἀσώματος 894_3
Myth: cleft of Chonai 115
Types: pillar of fire 115 weighing souls 138_9
Supersedes Zeus 894_3 895_0
—— well of 115
Midas
Myth: Attis 969_4 970_0
Etymology: 312_5
Midhgarðh-serpent 305_3
Mid-Lent, folk-celebrations of 868
Miletos
Cults: Apollon 457 Apollon Βραγχιάτης 255 Apollon Δελφίνιος 237_0 Apollon Διδυμεύς 1220 Apollon Δρύμας 486_5 Apollon Θῶϊος 250 Artemis Χιτώνη 410_1 Asklepios 1228 Demos of Rome 1228 Διὸς Ἐλπίδες 962_0 Ἀγωτατος Theos Ὕψιστος Σωτήρ $879_{0(17)}$ Hestia 1220 Hestia Βουλαία 317_2 Roma 1228 Zeus Βουλαῖος 317_2 Zeus Δουσάρης Σωτήρ (?) 317_2 Zeus Καταιβάτης 962_0 Zeus Κεραύνιος 1228 Zeus Κεραύνιος Σωτήρ 962_0 Zeus Λαβραϊνδεύς 1228 Zeus Λαβραΐνδιος 962_0 Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 1228 Zeus Λαβρένδιος 962_0 Zeus Λαράσιος 962_0 Zeus Λέψυνος 962_0 Zeus Νόσιος 317_2 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος Πεισαῖος 962_0 Zeus Ὁμοβούλιος 962_0 Zeus Σωτήρ 317_2 Zeus Τελεσιουργός 1228 Zeus Τερμινθεύς 962_0 Zeus Ὕψιστος $879_{0(17)}$ 963_2
Festivals: Διὸς βοῦς 318_0 Ebdomaia 237_0
Myth: Neleus, s. of Kodros 405 ff.
See also Didyma near Miletos
Miletos in Crete, lárnax from 49 f.
Miliche
Cult: Thespiai 1151
Milichus
Genealogy: s. of a Satyr by the nymph Myrice 1110_0
Type: horned 1110_0
Identified with Ba'al Milik (Melek, Molok) (?) 1110_0
Milky Way 37 ff.
Myths: Furious Host 62_1 golden rope 1211 Gwydion 52 Iring 52 Kyknos 477 ff. milk-white lily 49_1 Phaethon 476 ff.
Types: hoop 39_0 starry circle 39_0 wavy band 48 f.
Identified with Hades 42 43
In relation to sky-ladder 476 sky-pillar 476 sun 40_3
—— conceived as celestial counterpart of terrestrial road 497 844 conceived as celestial river 479 ff. 516 1219 conceived as celestial road 36 ff. 476 f. 1028 conceived as celestial tree 482 f. 1219 conceived as crown 119 f. conceived as original course of sun 40 conceived as path for Milky Way (cont.)
gods 117 conceived as path for souls 37 ff. 840 conceived as reflection of solar rays 40 conceived as road of the birds 38 462 conceived as rope 44 1211 conceived as source of all rivers 481 conceived as track made by falling star 40 40_4 43_1 476 conceived as two golden bull's-horns 117 1028 constellations traversed by 477_8 names of 37 f. 52 62_1 66_0 119 f. 464 479 ff. 480_0 482 482_2 484 497_1
Milon, the physicist 11
Miltiades
Associated with Athena and Apollon 1137_2
Mimallones 133_0
Mimir 305_0
Min
Cult: Egypt 767_2
Functions: heaven 767_2 thunder 767_2
Minerva
Cults: Allmendingen 619 1221 Rome 369_0 401_0 Urbs Salvia 803
Personated by Salii (?) 376_1
Assimilated to Athena 66_0
Associated with Fortuna 95_1 96 Hercules and Iuno 89 Iuno, Mercurius, Hercules 57 ff. cp. 89 Iupiter Optimus Maximus Caelestinus and Fontes 401_0 Liber and Hercules 1181_0 Mercurius and Iuno 89 cp. 57 ff.
Functions: spinning 65 66_0 weaving 66_0 winter 65 94_1
Identified with Holda 65 66_0 94_1
In relation to Fortuna 95
—— helmet of 95_1
'Minoans' in Iapygia 30 f. snake-goddess of, compared with Gorgon 930_0 thalassocracy of 830_1
Minorca 541
Minos
Epithet: Διὸς μεγάλου δαριστής 940_0
Myths: buried in precinct of Rhea on Mt Juktas (?) 944_0 dedicates cup to Athena Πολιάς and Zeus Πολιεύς at Lindos 923_0 descends into Dictaean Cave and returns with laws of Zeus 929_0 killed at Kamikos 30 prays Zeus for an omen 8 pursues Britomartis 939_1
Metamorphosed into Mt Juktas 939_1
Genealogy: f. of Glaukos 1087 f. of Katreus and gf. of Althaimenes and Apemosyne 923_0 s. of Zeus 8 793_7 s. of Zeus by Europe 342_0 929_0
Functions: human Zan (?) 945_0 human Zeus (?) 940_0 944_0 lawgiver 929_0 940_0 priestly king of Knossos 944_0
Superseded by Zeus 940_0
—— tomb of 940_0 945_0
Minotaur
Type: stone-throwing $491_{0(6)}$

Minyans as Aeolians 1149_3 at Orchomenos in Boiotia 924_0
Minyas
Cult: Orchomenos in Boiotia 1150_9
Personates Zeus (?) 1150
Myth: Orchomenos in Boiotia 1150
Genealogy: f. of Orchomenos 1150_5 s. of Aleos 1150_5 s. of Ares 1150_5 s. of Eteokles and b. of Orchomenos 1150_5 s. of Orchomenos 1150_5 s. of Poseidon by Chrysogone d. of Halmos 1150_4
—— thôlos-tomb of 1150
Misa 131
Mithras
Cults: Borcovicium 1053 Carnuntum 1194_4 Persai 255 Rome 307_0 835_6 838 f. Sahin in Phoinike $886_{0(30)}$
Epithets: Deus Sol Invictus 835_6 1194_4
Rites: ladder 129_1 women excluded 1053
Worshippers: heliodromus 312_5 pater 312_5 pater patrum 307_0 Perses 312_5
Attribute: starry pîlos (?) 386
Types: emerging from rock with egg-shell above him, knife in right hand, torch in left, all within oval zodiac 1053 slaying bull 511 (fig. 390)
Identified with Apollon 255 Helios (?) Ἀνίκητος (?) $886_{0(30)}$ Sol Invictus 307_0 1194_4
Mizraim 35
Mneme
Cult: Philadelpheia in Lydia 1229
Mnemon 670
Mnemosyne
Genealogy: m. of Muses by Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 1157_0
Mochua, St 214_0
Modena, Orphic relief at 1051
Modin 1146_0
Moesia
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος $878_{0(11)}$ 949_1
Mogontiacum 93
Cults: Genius 96_2 Genius loci 620_2 Iuno Regina 96_1 96_2 Iupiter Optimus Maximus 96_1 96_2 Sucaelus 620
Moira
Function: cosmic 316_0
Attribute: roll 479
Type: reading roll 479
Associated with Keraunos 119_1 Zeus and Erinys 1102_7
Moirai
Cults: Athens 231_8 Delphoi 231 Olympia 231_8 $878_{0(5)}$
Myths: Dictaean Cave (?) 929_0 Themis 37_1
Genealogy: daughters of Ouranos by Ge 1023
Type: two standing figures 231
Associated with Apollon 231 Themis 37_1 929_0 Zeus 231
—— as attribute of Zeus 1138_5
Molione
Genealogy: d. of Molos 1015_8 m. of Kteatos and Eurytos, nominally by Aktor, really by Poseidon 1015_8
Moliones
Epithets: λευκίππους κόρους...ἅλικας ἰσοκεφάλους (A. Meineke cj. ἰσοπάλους J. M. Edmonds cj. ἰσοκαρέας), ἐνιγυίους 1015
Myth: born in silver egg 1015
Genealogy: sons of Molioue, nominally by Aktor, really by Poseidon 1015_8
Type: with two heads, four hands, four feet, one body 1015_8 Moloch
Cult: Byblos $887_{0(0)}$
Rite: sacrifice of first-born 1108_2
Functions: human king regarded as divine (?) 1108_2
Molos, f. of Molione 1015_8
Molpadia
Myth: Kastabos 670 f.
Molpos 670
Moneta 99_1
Monimos
Cults: Arabia 428 f. Baitokaike 431 Edessa 428
Etymology: 428
Identified with Hermes 428
Mopsion (?) in Pelasgiotis
Cult: Zeus Περφερέτας or Φερφερέτας 496_0
Mopsos
Myths: contest with Kalchas $489_{0(4)}$ fights Amphilochos $489_{0(4)}$ $490_{0(0)}$ 1130_1 founds Mallos in Kilikia $489_{0(4)}$
Morges 934_0
Morsynos 260_0
Morychos 1093_0
Mosa See Mousa
Moses $889_{0(0)}$ 972_1
Mossynoikoi tattooed 123_0
Mostene
Cults: Demeter (?) 564 Hermes ψυχοπομπός (?) 563 f. youthful hero on horseback bearing double axe, with cypress-tree before him, sometimes radiate, or flanked by sun and moon, or escorted by Hermes 563 f.
—— coins of 563 f. 657_5
Mot
Genealogy: child of Aer and Chaos 1038 parent of Zophasemin 1038
Etymology: 1023 1038
Mother of the gods
Cults: Athens 985_0 Dorylaeion 281 Hierapolis in Phrygia 306_1 Pessinous 310 f. 310_2 Phrygia 697 970_0
Epithets: Διὸς σύνθωκος 298_2 μεγάλη 298_2 παρθένος ἀμήτωρ 298_2 Πεσσινουντίς 970_0 Τηρείη 697
Festivals: arbor intrat 303_2 Hilaria 306_1
Priests: ἀρχιερεύς 311_3 Attis and Battakes 310 f. ἱερεύς 311_3

Mother of the gods (cont.)
Worshippers: Ἀτταβοκαοί 310$_2$
Myth: instructs Idaean Daktyloi in iron-working 949$_5$
Genealogy: m. and w. of Zeus 298$_2$
Identified with Agdistis 970$_0$ Rhea 970$_0$
—— mysteries of 310$_2$
See also Mater, Mater deum, Meter, Meter Theon
Motos (?)
Genealogy: child of Aer and Aura 1036 1038
Mounychia
Cults: Artemis 115 Bendis 115
Mousa
Cult: Thespiai 238$_0$
See also Muses
Mouth
Cult: Egypt 1038
Etymology: 1038
Muhammed 793$_4$
Mukasa 450$_1$
Muses
Cults: Arkesine 1157$_0$ Kroton 1021 Makedonia 255$_3$ Megara 1139$_0$ Mt Pelion (?) 870$_0$
Genealogy: daughters of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος by Mnemosyne 1157$_0$
Type: Lysippos 1139$_0$
Associated with Zeus 898$_5$
See also Mousa
Myiacores
Cult: Elis 783
Myiagros
Cult: Aliphera 782
Myth: Hercules 783
Myiagrus See Myiagros
Myiodes
Cult: Olympia 783
Mykale See Panionion
Mykenai
Cults: Hera 515 Kybele (?) 1221 Rhea (?) 515 525 1221
Rite: cannibalism 1021
—— gold bucrania from 538 652 654 gold rings from 47 ff. 49$_1$ 652 head from 123$_0$
Mykonos
Cults: Acheloios 1092$_2$ Apollon Ἑκατόμβαιος 1092$_2$ Zeus Βουλεύς 258$_3$ 1105
Mylanteioi Theoi 260$_0$
Mylasa
Cults: Hera 592 Kouretes 586 f. Tyche Ἀγαθή 879$_{0(17)}$ Zenoposeidon (Zanopoteidan) 578$_{4(1)}$ 582 663 846 963$_7$ Zeus 574 1220 Zeus Ἄρσηλις (?) 559$_6$ Zeus Κάριος 577 Zeus Κρηταγενής 586 f. Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 663 848 963$_7$ 1220 (See also Labranda Cults) Zeus Ὀσογῶα 576 ff. 578$_{4(3)}$ 579$_{0(8)(10-12)(14-10)(1-5)}$ 580$_{0(7)}$ 663 846 963$_7$ 1220 Zeus Ὀσογῶα Ζηνοποσειδῶν (Ζανοποτειδᾶν) 578$_{4(2)(4)}$ Zeus Ὀσογῶα Zeus Ζηνοποσειδῶν
Mylasa (cont.)
578$_{4(3)(5-7)}$ 579$_{0(9)}$ Zeus Ὀσογῶα Σωτὴρ καὶ Εὐεργέτης τῆς πόλεως 579$_{0(13)}$ (?) Zeus Ὀσογῶος (?) or Ὀσογώου (?) 579$_{0(11)(1)}$ Zeus Ὀτωρκονδέων 579$_{0(2)}$ 580 f. 580$_{10(1)}$ 581$_{0(5)(1-5)}$ Zeus Στράτιος (Στρατεῖος) 591$_2$ 963$_7$ (See also Labranda Cults) Zeus Ὕψιστος 879$_{0(17)}$ 963$_7$
Festival: Taurophonia 582
Priests: dedicate temple-columns 580 νεωκόρος 582
Myth: sea-water appears inland 581
—— as Carian place-name 958$_0$ coins of 572 ff. 577 f. 592$_4$ 597$_3$ 1220 head of Zeus from 597 f. relief at 592 stepped tomb at 1146$_{0(6)}$
Mylasos 715 720$_4$
Mylitta 960$_0$
Myndos
Cult: Zeus Ἀκραῖος 872$_{0(6)}$ 963$_4$
Myra
Cult: Artemis Ἐλευθέρα (?) 681$_1$
Rite: tree threatened 680 ff.
Myth: Myrrha (?) 681 f.
—— coin of 680 f.
Myrice, m. of Milichus 1110$_0$
Myrike, d. of Kinyras 681$_1$
Myrmidones
Cult: Zeus Ἑλλάνιος 894$_3$
Myron 742 1078
Myrrha
Myth: Kinyras 680
Myrrhinous
Cults: Apollon 730$_0$ Demeter 730$_0$ Zeus 730$_0$
Mysia
Cults: Phanakes 1025 Zeus Κάριος 577
Mystis 346$_0$
Mytilene
Cults: Apollon Μαλόεις 488$_{0(2)}$ Asklepios 259$_0$ 1079 Dionysos 1022 Dionysos Ἐβδομεύς 238$_0$ Theoi Akraioi (?) 875$_{0(10)}$ Theos Κεραύνιος Ὕψιστος 807$_{3(3)}$ 882$_{0(22)}$ Theos Ὕψιστος 882$_{0(22)}$ 882$_{0(22)}$ Zeus Ἀκραῖος 922$_3$ Zeus Βουλαῖος 259$_0$ 875$_{0(10)}$ (?) Zeus Ἐλευθέριος Φιλόπατρις (=Theophanes) 97$_0$
Rite: human sacrifice 1022
—— coins of 259$_0$ 1079 votive ladders at 130

Naassene hymns 294 ff.
Nabu, statue of, at Calah 1089
Naiades See Nymphs: Naiades
Naïssos
Cults: Iupiter Optimus Maximus Paternus Aepilofius 948$_4$ Zeus Ἐπιλόφιος 875$_0$ Zeus Πατρῷος Ἐπιλόφιος (?) 948$_4$
Nakoleia
Cults: Theos Ὕψιστος 882$_{0(23)}$ 969$_1$ Zeus Ἀβοζηνός 570 Zeus Βροντῶν 835$_4$ Zeus Βροντῶν καὶ Πατὴρ Θεός

Nakoleia (cont.)
836$_2$ Zeus Βροντῶν Νεικήτωρ Πατήρ
836$_2$ Zeus Πάπας or Παπᾶς 292$_4$
Nana, d. of Sangarios 969$_4$
Nandi 791$_2$
Nanna, w. of Baldr 305$_0$
Napoca
Cult: Iupiter O(ptimus) M(aximus) Tavianus 754$_1$
Narce in the Faliscan district, celt from 509
Narona
Cult: Aesculapius 1086
Nâsatia 313
Nastrand 305$_0$
Nauplia
Cult: Zeus Κραταιβάτης 32 1211
Nauplios 691
Naxos
Cults: Dionysos Βακχεύς 1093$_0$ Dionysos Μειλίχιος 1092$_9$ 1093$_0$ Dionysos Μουσαγέτης 250 Zeus Μηλώσιος 918$_1$
Festival: Megala Dionysia 250$_1$
Neapolis in Campania
Cults: Apollon 486$_5$ Virbius 421
—— coins of 486$_5$
Neapolis in Karia
Cult: Zeus 260$_0$
—— coin of 260$_0$
Neapolis in Samaria
Cults: Artemis Ἐφεσία 408$_0$ f. Asklepios 1080
—— coins of 408$_0$ f. 887$_{0(31)}$ 1080
Neapolis in Skythia (?) 925$_0$
Neaule (= Nea Aule)
Cult: Zeus Σαονάζιος (= Σαβάζιος) Νεαυλείτης 285$_0$
Nebrod See Nimrod
Neda, the nymph 890$_6$
Nefer-Tem
Cult: Memphis 774$_0$
Function: rising sun 774$_0$
Attribute: lotos 773$_0$ 774$_0$
Type: with lotos-flower on head 774$_0$
Nehemâuit 409$_0$
Neilos
Epithet: πολύγονος 1023
Identified with Eridanus the constellation 1025 Okeanos 1025
—— as seed of Osiris 482$_0$
Nekhen, spirits of 126
Neleus, b. of Pelias 317
Neleus, s. of Kodros
Myth: Miletos 405 ff.
Nemausus, ham-shaped coins from fountain at 1141$_0$
Nemea
Etymology: 892$_4$
Nemea, the festival 490$_{0(5)}$ 1226
Nemeseis
Cults: Alexandreia 889$_{0(33)}$ Smyrna 524 864$_0$
Type: drawn by griffins 524 two draped females touching bosom of dress Nemeseis (cont.)
with right hand and holding short rod in left 863$_1$ 864$_0$ Nemesis
Cults: Alexandreia 864$_0$ Daphne, near Antiocheia on the Orontes 1191$_5$ Sinope 363
Epithets: multiformis 695$_0$ ὑπέρδικος 464
Metamorphosed into goose 1015 1131$_1$
Genealogy: m. of Helene by Zeus 1131$_1$
Function: stádion 1191$_5$
Attributes: crown with stags 146 griffin 146$_7$ knife 863$_1$ scales 860 f. 863$_1$ stag 146$_7$ wheel 863$_1$ 1095$_0$
Types: trampling on Hybris 863$_1$ under arch 363
Identified with Semiramis 695$_0$
Assimilated to Kairos 863$_1$
Compared with Spes, Amor, Furor, Occasio, Fortuna, Fata 862$_{10}$
Nemi
Cults: Diana 393 399 f. 403$_1$ Diana Nemorensis 149 417 ff. 842 f. Virbius 392 ff.
Rite: rule of succession to office of king-priest 394 f.
Priest: rex Nemorensis 394 f. 399 f. ξιφήρης 680$_3$
—— Diana's tree at 417 ff.
Nemroud Dagh
Cults: Tyche Νέα 1136$_4$ Zeus Ὡρομάσδης 980$_6$
Neo-Platonists 41 f. 256 f. 557$_1$
Neoptolemos
Myth: Delphoi 170$_2$
Neo-Pythagoreans 1032 f.
Neptunus
Cult: Allmendingen 619
Associated with Vires 306$_4$
—— on column of Mayence 96 99
Nereus
Attribute: trident 788$_0$
Nero
Cult: Alexandreia 1128$_0$
Epithets: Ἀπόλλων 98$_0$ Ἀπόλλων Κτίστης 98$_0$ Ἡρακλῆς 98$_0$ νέος Ἀγαθὸς Δαίμων 98$_0$ 1128$_0$ νέος Ἥλιος 98$_0$ ὁ Ἀγαθὸς Δαίμων τῆς οἰκουμένης 98$_0$ 1128$_0$
Personates Agathos Daimon 98$_0$ 1128$_0$ Apollon 98$_0$ 254 1128$_0$ Dionysos 96$_3$ 97$_0$ 254 1128$_0$ Zeus 97$_0$ 1194
—— contorniate medal of 1128$_0$
Nerthus 82
Nerva
Personates Zeus 1194
Nestor 1203$_3$
Netteia
Cults: Zeus Ἀταβύριος 925$_0$ (Zeus) [Ἱκέ]σιος (?) 1096$_0$
New Year's Day, pagan rites of, denounced by Christians 374$_2$
Nida See Ide, Mt, in Crete

Nikaia in Bithynia
Cults: Pan 349 Zeus Ἀσ(σ)τραπαῖος 815_5 Zeus Ἀιταῖος 1099_2 1100_0 Zeus Μήλιος 918_1
—— coins of 349 918_1 1099_2
Nike
Cults: Heleia 931_0 Olympia 1100_1 Philadelphia in Lydia 1229
Attributes: palm 866 wreath 866 1082
Types: bearing wreath 964_2 fastening helmet to trophy 110_6 flying with fillet 197_1 hovering 261 multiplied for decorative purposes 309 on globe 860_8 964_2 on ship's prow 254_4 Paionios 86 Pheidias 758 849 wreathing city's title 1193_1
Associated with Zeus 853 1100_1
In relation to Zeus 982_0
—— of gold 1190
Nikolaos, St
Cult: Palaikastro 931_0
Function: sea-faring 997
Nikomedeia
Cult: Glykon 1084
—— coins of 1084
Nikopolis in Moesia
Cults: Souras (?) $818_{2(2)}$ 822_{12} Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(9)}$
Nile See Neilos, Nilus
Nilus, the constellation 481
Nimrod (Nebrod)
Myth: Zoroastres 33 f.
Identified with Orion and the planet Kronos 693_4 694_0
Nineui (Nineveh) 693_4
Ninos
Genealogy: h. of Semiramis Rhea 693_4 694_0
Identified with Pikos who is also Zeus 695_0
Niobids 475 475_7
Nisaia, port of Megara
Cult: Demeter Μαλοφόρος $488_{0(3)}$
Nisyros
Cults: Aphrodite 1157_3 Dionysos 1157_3 Hermes 1157_3 Zeus Μιλίχιος 1157_3
Worshippers: Ἀφροδισιασταὶ Σύροι 1157_3 Διονυσιασταὶ Εὐρυθεμίδιοι 1157_3 Διοσμιλιχιασταὶ 1157 1157_3 Ἑρμαΐζοντες 1157_3
Myth: Poseidon 713
Noah, axe of 609 f.
Nomos
Associated with Zeus 1029
Norba in Latium, celt from 509
Norba in Lusitania
Cult: Labaro (?) 609_3
Noricum
Cult: Anigemius 338_3 Ianus Geminus 324
Norsemen 57_1
Notion 958_0
Notos
Type: horse 830_7
—— in Phoenician cosmogony 1037 f.
Nox 74
Nuada Argat-lám 224_1 450_0
Numa Pompilius 23_2
Numina Augustorum
Cult: Borcovicium 51_1
Nuserat in Mysia
Cult: (Dionysos) Βρόμιος $882_{0(\omega)}$
Nut 1035
Nykteus
Genealogy: f. of Antiope 1013 f. of Kallisto 228_5
Nymphs
Cults: Athens 1118 Gortyna 723_0 731_0 Hierapytna 723_0 Lyttos 723_0 Priansos 723_0 Sybrita 731_0
Associated with Acheloios 1118 Vires 306_4
—— Dodonides: Polyhymno 1022 Dryades 276 683 f. Epimelides 31_1 Forrinae $808_{0(17)}$ Geraistian 183 f. Hamadryades 486 Heliades 42 485 (?) Hesperides 134_1 1017 1021 1030 Hyades 274 f. Ithome and Neda 890_6 Meliai 447_8 933_0 Naiades 124_4 394_3 933_0 Naiades: Amaltheia 932_1 Nysai 272 f. Okeanides 473_3 Phryxonides 928_0 Querquetulanae Virae 402_0 Sithnides 897_1 1117_7 Sphragitides 899_0 Thourides 255_3 Tritonides 898_0 as nurses of Dionysos 1030 as nurses of Zagreus 1030 transform two maidens into fir-trees 486
Nymphs' Hill at Athens 1114
Nysa, Mt 449_0 cp. 272
Nysa in Lydia
Cult: Kore (?) with snake (?) and double axe 564
—— coins of 564 801
Nysa, the nymph 272
Nysai 272 f.
Nysaia 273
Nyseïa 273
Nysus
Myth: rears Liber 1031
Nyx
Cults: Ephesos 1021 Megara 257_4
Epithet: μελανόπτερος 1020 1050
Myths: consulted by Zeus 448_1 1027 1029 cosmic egg 1039 1050 Delphoi 238_4 Kronos 448_1
Genealogy: d. and w. of Phanes 1026 m. by Erebos of Aither, Eros, Metis 315_4 m. of Eros 1020 m. of Eros by Aither 1051 m. of Eros by Erebos (?) 1050 f. m. of Furies 825 m. by Phanes of Ge or Gaia and Ouranos, Rhea and Kronos, Hera and Zeus 1026
Functions: prophecy 257_4 448_1 1027 1029 queen 1026
Type: archaic 1021
—— oracle of 257_4 sceptre of 1026

Oaxes, 929_0

Oaxos 929_0 See also Axos
Occasio 862 f.
Oceanus, the constellation 481
Oche, Mt
Cult: Zeus superseded by St Elias 902_1
Myth: union of Zeus with Hera 902_1
Ocrisia
Etymology: 1156_5
Octavianus See Augustus
Odessos in Thrace
Cult: Theos Megas 1126_0
—— coins of 1126_0
Odhin
Myths: fights the fire-demon Surtr 305_0 hangs on the tree as a sacrifice to Odhin 305_0 overcome by Fenrir 305_0 rides down to Mimir's well 305_0 rides through the hall of serpents on Nastrand 305_0
Genealogy: f. of Vidharr 305_0
Attribute: broad hat 386
Type: one-eyed 682
Odrysai
Cult: Dionysos 269_1 661 f. (?)
—— coin of 661 f.
Odysseus
Myths: axes as marriage-test 690 Kyklops 990 997 offers meal to dead 18_6 prays Zeus for omen 8 Telegonos 676 923_0 Telephos 1184_3 tree-bed 690
Functions: fire-god (?) 697 hero 698 sun-god (?) 697 —— raft of 906_3
Oea in Tripolitana 360_2
Ogur (Oguī) in Galatia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_5
Ogygos 824_0
Oichalia 902_2
Oidipodeion at Eteonos 1152 1154
Oidipodes (=Oidipous) 1154_3 1154_5
Oidipous
Cult: Eteonos 1151 ff.
Myths: as explained by S. Freud 451_0 Eteonos 1152 Keos 1152 Kolonos 1152_5 Laïos 923_0 summoned by Zeus Χθόνιος 829 Thebes 1152
Metamorphosed into snake (?) 1155
Genealogy: f. and b. of Eteokles and Polyneikes 825_2 s. of Laïos 1154_3
Function: hypostasis of Zeus Χθόνιος (?) 1154
Etymology: 1152 f.
Type: anguiform 1152 ff.
Compared with Melampous 1153_1 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1154
—— grave of 1154
Oineus 1137_2
Oinoanda
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος $879_{0(16)}$
Oinomaos, house of, at Olympia 706 $808_{0(16)}$ sacrifice of 706
Oistros (?) 1041
Oite, Mt 903_2 1226
Cults: Herakles 903_2 Zeus 903_2
Myths: Dryope 486 pyre of Herakles 941_0 (?) (T. Faber cj. Αἴτνης)
—— meadows that might not be mown on 903_2 pyre of Herakles on 903_2
Oitosyros (Goitosyros, Gongosyros), the Scythian Apollon 293_0
Okeanos
Epithets: ἀθανάτων τε θεῶν γένεσιν θνητῶν τ' ἀνθρώπων 481_9 ἀψόρροος 481_8 θεῶν γένεσις 481_9 καλλίρροος 1020 μέγας 1027 ὃς περ γένεσις πάντεσσι τέτυκται 481_9 πατήρ 1021
Myths: Hera 343_9 Themis 37_1
Genealogy: f. of Leuke 468 f. of Phorkys, Kronos, Rhea, etc. by Tethys 1020 h. of Tethys 473 cp. 343_9 s. of Ouranos by Ge 1020
Functions: celestial river 516 seed of sky-god (?) 481_9
Types: recumbent with head-dress of crab's-claws 665_2
Identified with Eridanus the constellation 1025 Neilos 1025 Osiris 481_9
—— at first none other than Milky Way 481 garden of 1021 woods of Persephone beyond 472
Olaf, St 135
Olbia
Cult: Apollon $493_{0(7)}$
—— coins of $493_{0(7)}$ leaden bucrania and double axes from 540
Olbia, m. of Astakos 665_3
Oleiai 924_0
Olen 455
Olenos in Aitolia
Cult: Zeus 933_0
Myth: Zeus nurtured by goat Amaltheia 933_0
Olenos, s. of Zeus by Hippodameia d. of Danaos 1150_2
Olor, the constellation 477 477_8
Olous
Cult: Zeus Ταλλαῖος 948_1
—— oath of 730_0 treaty of 934_0
Olympos
Cults: Apollon 586_2 Artemis 586_2
Olympe, coins of 161 ff. 499
Olympia
Cults: Agnostoi Theoi 1100_1 Ares (?) 706_5 Hephaistos 706_5 Hera 706_5 Hermes 231_8 $878_{0(5)}$ Hermes Ἐναγώνιος 859 Heros 897_0 Kairos 859 Kronos 554_2 Moirai 231_8 $878_{0(5)}$ Myiodes 783 Nike 1100_1 Pelops 471 Zan 349 Zeus 349 757 ff. 849 916_0 947_0 955_0 1078 1222 1224 Zeus Ἀπόμυιος 783 Zeus Ἄρειος 706 Zeus Ἑρκεῖος $808_{0(15)}$ Zeus Καθάρσιος 1100_1 Zeus Καταιβάτης 21 Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(15)}$ (Zeus) Μοιραγέτας 231_8 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 758_0 761 Zeus Ὅρκιος 722 726 f. Zeus Ὕψιστος 231_8 $878_{0(5)}$ 891_2 Zeus Χθόνιος 1100_1

Olympia (cont.)
Rites: altar of Zeus made of ashes from thighs of victims 955_0 at first no victor received wreath 466 bull sacrificed to Myiodes 783 oath on cut pieces of boar 726 f. ox sacrificed to flies 782 victor receives wreath of wild-olive 467
Priests: μάντεις 466_9 ξυλεύς of Zeus 471
Myths: Herakles and the flies 783 Herakles brings wild-olive from land of Hyperboreoi 466 Pythagoras' eagle 222_4 Pythagoras' golden thigh 224_0 —— altar of Zeus at 21 Áltis at 915_2 coins of 741 757 ff. 780 f. 849 1224 house of Oinomaos at 706 $808_{0(15)}$ Ζᾶνες at 349
Olympia, the festival at Daphne, near Antiocheia on the Orontes 1191 f.
Olympia, the festival at Olympia $490_{0(5)}$
Olympia, the festival at Prousa ad Olympum 964_2
Olympieion at Athens 1118 ff. 1135 1229 f.
Olympieion at Megara 1138_5
Olympieion at Polichna near Syracuse 916_0 917_0
Olympion at Agrigentum 911_0 ff.
Olympos, Mt, in Arkadia 761
Olympos, Mt, in Elis
Cult: Zeus (?) 758 891_1
Olympos, Mt, in Kilikia 980_2
Olympos, Mt, in Kypros 980_4
Olympos, Mt, in Lykia, fire springing from ground on 972_1
Olympos, Mt, in Makedonia 904_8 905_0 906_0 1227
Cults: St Elias 906_0 Zeus 904_8 1227 cp. 760
Epithet: μακρός 1026
Myths: heaven and earth once met on its summit 905_0 Otos and Ephialtes 129 stars come down at night upon it 905_0 1211 Zeus binds golden rope to it 1211 —— gods on summit of 853 remains of altar on 1227
Olympos, Mt, in Mysia
Cult: Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 953_2
Myth: boar 311_8
Olympos, town in Lykia
Cults: Athena 972_1 Hephaistos 972_1 Zeus 972_1
—— coins of 972_1
Olympus (?), s. of Iupiter by the nymph Chalcea 973_1
Omichle
Genealogy: m. of Aer and Aura by Pothos 1036 1038
Omphale
Myth: Herakles 559 560_8
Omphalian Plain 190
Omphalos in Crete 190
Onatas 947_0
Onetor 950_0
Onnes 569_2
Onomakritos 1229
Onoskelis 666_2
Ophiouchos See Ophiuchus
Ophis, king of Salamis 1087
Ophites 307_2 558_0 653
—— double axe in diagram of 610 f.
Ophiuchus 241_4 1087
Ophrynion
Myth: Hektor's bones 961_0
—— Xenophon at 1107 1157
Opis (fem.) 452 501 1226
Opis (masc.) 452 f.
Orchia (?) in Lakonike
Cult: Apollon Ὀρχιεύς 439
Orchomenos in Arkadia, coins of 228_5
Orchomenos in Boiotia
Cults: Asklepios 1085 Charites 238_0 1150_{10} Dionysos 899_1 Hera Τελεία 1150 Hermes 1150_9 Minyas 1150_9 Zeus Καραιός 873_2 898_4 Zeus Μείλιχος 1149 Zeus Σωτήρ 1151 Zeus Τέλειος 1150
Festival: Agrionia 164_6 924_0
Rite: burial within the house 1060
Myth: Minyas 1150
Orchomenos, eponym of Orchomenos in Boiotia
Genealogy: f. of Minyas 1150_5 s. of Eteokles and b. of Minyas 1150_5 s. of Minyas 1150_5
Orchomenos, s. of Zeus by Hesione or Hermippe 1149 f.
Ordion 1015
Oreithyia
Myth: Boreas 380
Genealogy: d. of Erechtheus 444 m. of Zetes and Kalaïs by Boreas 444
Oresteion near Megalopolis 1178 in Skythia 1178 f.
Orestes
Epithet: ξιφήρης (?) 680_3
Myths: Apollon 206_2 1042 (?) Artemis 680 Athena 1098_4 Delphoi 206_2 exile in Oresteion near Megalopolis 1178 Kolchoi 421_3 pursued by Furies 206_2 Rhegion 680 848 Telephos 1179_8 1183
Genealogy: s. of Agamemnon 1179
Functions: human Zeus (?) 1179 hypostasis of Apollon (?) 453
Etymology: 453 1179
Associated with Pylades 1179
Orestia, a division of Megalopolis 1178
Orgas, river-god 408_0
Orikos, coins of 161 ff. 499
Orion
Cult: Persia 35
Epithet: ξιφήρης 680_3
Identified with Nebrod (Nimrod) and the planet Kronos 693_4 694_0
Orion, the constellation 430 483_2 called Σκεπαρνέα 547_0

Ormelle
Cult: Zeus Κτήσιος 1067
—— astragalomantic inscription from $807_{5(5)}$ 1067
Orontes, personification of the river 1209_5
Orontes, the river in Syria
Myth: Kyparissos 981_1
—— formerly called Drakon 1187
Oropos
Cults: Amphiaraos 1070 ff. Apollon (?) 1071 Hygieia 1072 Pan 1072 Zeus Ἀμφιάραος 232 1061 1070 ff.
Rite: incubation 232
—— Amphiareion near 1071 f. coins of 1071 f. temple-inventory of 346_0
Oros, king of Troizen 414_2
Orpheus
Epithet: χρυσάωρ 716
Myths: Eurydike 1022 head floats to Lesbos 290_0 slain by Thracian women 121
Genealogy: s. of Kalliope 1024 s. of Polymnia 1022
Attribute: sword 716
Types: death 121_3 head 290_0 in Christian art 1208 Polygnotos 122_0 with Eurydike and Hermes 211_2
Orphic Dionysos See Dionysos
Orphic Eros See Eros
Orphic Herakles See Herakles
Orphic Zeus See Zeus
Orphists 117 ff. 131 ff.
Cults: Anemoi 141_1 827 Brontai 141_1 827 Kosmos 141_1 827
(See also Aither, Chronos, Demeter, Dionysos, Erikepaios (Erikapaios), Herakles, Kouretes, Nyx, Ouranos, Pan, Phanes, Phersephone, Protogonos, Rhea, Titanes, Zagreus, Zeus, Zeus ἀστράπιος, Zeus Κεραύνιος, etc.)
Myth: Zagreus 838
Rites: ladder 124 ff. seething in milk 217
—— gold tablets of 118 ff. numerical speculation of 236_5 soul-path of 114 117 ff. theogonies of, shown in conspectus 1033 f.
Orthosia, coins of 572 572_2
Ortygia near Ephesos
Myth: birth of Artemis 962_2
Ortygios, s. of Kleinis 463_1
Oscan road-makers' tablet 1158
Oschophoria 1092
Osiris
Cults: Denderah 773_0 Philai 773_0
Rite: effigy buried in pine-tree 303_2
Myths: attacked by Titans 1030 cut up by Typhon 1030 head floats to Byblos 290_0 ladder of Râ 126 wooden phallós 224_1
Genealogy: s. of Râ 126
Function: moisture 557_1
Attribute: lotos 773_0
Osiris (cont.)
Type: mummy 773_0
Identified with Attis 294 f. Dionysos 252 Liber 244_4 Nu 126 Okeanos 481_2 Ptah 34_1 —— seed of 482_0
Ossa the messenger of Zeus 904_3
Ossa, Mt 1227
Cult: Zeus Ὄσσαιος (?) 904_3
Myth: Otos and Ephialtes 129
Ostanes 699_7
Cult: Hermopolis 701_0
Osthanes See Ostanes
Ostia
Cults: Attis 297 ff. Attis Μητρούαννος 303_2
—— hall of Dendrophori at 297 Metroion at 297 298
Othin See Odhin
Othryades 111_0
Otorkondeis 581
Otos 129 f. 130_1 317
Otos (?) See Motos (?)
Ouiaros, Mt See Viarus, Mt
Oulomos
Genealogy: f. of Chousoros 1037 f. s. of Aither and Aer 1037 f.
Etymology: 1037
Oupis = Opis (fem.) 452_{11}
Ourania, the Carthaginian goddess
Cult: Epidauros $487_{3(1)}$
Ouranios $889_{0(0)}$
Ouranos
Epithets: ἀστερόεις 1023 μέγας 1023
Myths: flings his sons into Tartaros 1023 mutilated by Kronos 447_8 Titanes 1023
Genealogy: h. of Zeus 940_5 f. of Aphrodite 1029 f. of Eros by Ge 315_4 f. by Ge of Klotho, Lachesis, Atropos, the Hekatoncheires Kottos, Gyges, Briareos, and the Kyklopes Brontes, Steropes, Arges 1023 f. of Kabeiroi 954_0 f. of Kronos 447_8 f. of Okeanos and Tethys by Ge 1020 f. of Titanes by Ge 1023 h. of Gaia 447_8 s. of Phanes by Nyx 1026 Function: ἐκπύρωσις 557_1
—— sceptre of 1026
Ousoös 981_1 (?)
Ouxenton
Cults: Ianus (?) 386_1 Janiform Athena (?) 386_1 Janiform Roma (?) 386_1
—— coins of 386
Oxylos 486
Oxyrhynchite nome
Cult: Athena 625

Padus 476
Paenitentia 863
Pagai, port of Megara
Cults: Artemis Σώτειρα (?) $488_{0(3)}$ Demeter (?) $488_{0(3)}$
—— coin of $488_{0(3)}$

Pagasai
Cults: Dionysos Πέλεκυς (not Πελεκᾶς or Πελεκῖνος, nor Πελάγιος) 660 Epidotai 321_1
Pagasos the Hyperborean 169
Paiones
Cults: Dionysos Αὐαλός (?) and Δύαλος 270
Paionia
Cults: Artemis Βασίλεια 500 Bendis 500 f. Dionysos Δύαλος 250_4
Paionios 86
Palaia Gargaros 951_0 f.
Palaikastro
Cult: St Nikolaos 931_0
—— excavations at 930_0 931_0 932_0 hymn to Zeus Δικταῖος from 931_0 932_0 lárnax of painted earthenware from 524 529 845 stone moulds from 623 ff. 654
Palaimon $490_{0(5)}$
Palaistinos, s. of Malkandros 986_0
Palamedes 691 902_0
Palaxos or Spalaxos, the Koures 587
Palazzola (Palazzuolo) 1146_0
Pales (masc.)
Function: one of the Penates 1059
Palestine
Rite: burial within the house 1059
Palicus
Metamorphosed into eagle 909_0
Genealogy: s. of Volcanus by Aetna 909_0
Palikoi
Cult: Sicily 909_0
Rite: human sacrifice 909_0
Myth: 909_0
Genealogy: sons of Adranos (the Syrian Hadran) 910_0 sons of Hephaistos 910_0 sons of Zeus by Aitne 909_0 sons of Zeus by Thaleia, d. of Hephaistos 909_0
Functions: nautici dei 909_0 volcanic springs 909_0
Etymology: 909_0
See also Palicus
Palladion 963_0 1044
Palmyra
Cults: Iaribolos $885_{0(20)}$ Theos Μέγας Σαλλουντος (? J. H. Mordtmann cj. Ἀμμουδάτῳ: see O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 290) Ἐνεουάρης (?) $885_{0(29)}$ Zeus Μέγιστος Κεραύνιος $807_{5(1)}$ Zeus Μέγιστος Ὕψιστος 983_2 Zeus Ὕψιστος $885_{0(29)}$ 983_2 Zeus Ὕψιστος καὶ Ἐπήκοος $885_{0(29)}$ $886_{0(0)}$ 983_2 Zeus Ὕψιστος Μέγιστος Ἐπήκοος $885_{0(29)}$ 983_2
Palodes 348
Pan
Cults: Aule 249_2 Mt Kithairon 899_0 Megara 1117_7 Nikaia in Bithynia 349 Pelousion 986_0
Epithets: Μέγας 347 ὀρειβάτης 869_0 death of Pan 347 ff.
Pan (cont.)
Genealogy: s. of Hermes by Penelope 691
Types: androgynous with golden wings and heads of bulls and snake 1022 f. double bust (boy-Pan with girl-Pan) 392 double bust (with Maenad) 392 goat-footed 270_3 with goat's legs and horns 124_2 horned 1117_7 playing lyre 157_0
Identified with Attis 296 Phanes 1051 Protogonos 1023 1039 Zeus 349 1023 1024 1039
Associated with Amphiaraos and Hygieia 1072 Harpokrates 986_0
In relation to Erinys 1102_7
Supersedes Zan (?) 347 ff.
—— cave of, at Aule in Arkadia 249_2
Panakra 933_0
Panamara
Cults: Asklepios 1066 Hekate Σώτειρα $879_{0(17)}$ Tyche 1066 Tyche of Antoninus Pius $879_{0(17)}$ Zeus Καπετώλιος $879_{0(17)}$ Zeus Κτήσιος 1066 Zeus Πανάμαρος 587 963_8 Zeus Πανημέριος 963_8 Zeus Πανήμερος 963_8 Zeus Ὕψισ(σ)τος $879_{0(17)}$ Zeus Ὕψιστος 963_8
Panamoros, the Koures 587
Panathenaia 1121_0 1135 ff.
Pandion
Genealogy: f. of Teuthras 1151
Pangaion, Mt
Myth: Orpheus taught by Kalliope 1024
—— oaks on 411_6
Panhellenia 1119_4 See also Megala Panhellenia
Panionion
Cults: Hera 259_0 Zeus Βουλαῖος 259_0
Pannonia
Cult: Iupiter Optimus Maximus Heros $823_{1(2)}$
—— coin of 323_2 (?)
Panope in Phokis 1132_6
Panormos near Kyzikos
Cults: Apollon $882_{0(0)}$ Artemis $881_{0(21)}$ Dionysos (?) $882_{0(0)}$ Hekate (?) $882_{0(0)}$ Persephone (?) $881_{0(21)}$ Zeus Ὕψιστος $881_{0(21)}$ $882_{0(0)}$
Pantikapaion
Cult: Angistis (= Agdistis) 970_0
Etymology: 1025
—— leaden bucrania and double axes (?) from 540
Pantikapes, river in Sarmatia 1025
Pantokrator, Mt
Cult: Zeus (?) 907_0
Papaios
Cult: Skythia $889_{0(0)}$
See also Zeus Epithets Παπαῖος, Πάπας or Παπᾶς, Παπίας, Παππῶος
Papanios, a Scythian river 293_0
Papas
Cult: Phrygia 292 ff. 313 836

Papas (cont.)
Identified with Zeus Βροντῶν 836 883$_{0(0)}$
In relation to Attis 317 Kybele 842
See also Zeus Epithets Παπαῖος, Πάπας or Παπᾶς, Παπίας, Παππῶος
Paphlagonia
Cults: Augustus 729$_0$ Ge 729$_0$ Helios 729$_0$ Zeus 729$_0$
Paphos
Cult: Aphrodite 783$_3$ 944$_0$
Myth: Kinyras 944$_0$
Pappas 296$_4$
See also Papas
Papylos 1101$_3$
Paramythia, bronze statuettes from 503$_0$ 746$_2$ 752 f.
Parašu-râma 660$_1$
Paris
Myths: judgment 262 266 Mt Gargaron (Gargara) 950$_0$
In relation to Hektor 447$_5$
Parmenides 120$_2$ 315$_4$ 316$_0$ 432 —— journey of 42 f. 43$_1$ 476
Parnassos, Mt
Cults: Apollon 257 453 Dionysos 257 Zeus Λυκώρειος 901$_2$ 902$_0$ Zeus Φύξιος 902$_0$
Myths: Deukalion 902$_0$ Semnai 19$_0$ —— view from summit of 901$_2$
Parnes, Mt
Cults: Zeus Ἀπήμιος 897$_6$ 898$_0$ Zeus Ὄμβριος 897$_6$ 898$_0$ Zeus Παρνήθιος 897$_6$ Zeus Σημαλέος 4 897$_6$
—— Harma on 831$_0$
Paros
Cults: Aphrodite 875$_{1(5)}$ Athena Κυθία 922$_0$ cp. 1227 Baubo 131 Demeter Θεσμοφόρος 131 St Elias 875$_{1(5)}$ Hera 131 Histie Δημίη 875$_{1(5)}$ Kore 131 Zeus Εὐβουλεύς 131 259$_0$ Zeus Καταιβάτης 19 f. (Zeus) Ὕπατος 875$_{1(5)}$ 918$_2$
Rite: nninitiated persons and women may not enter precinct of Zeus Ὕπατος 875$_{1(5)}$
—— Delion at 1227 rock-carvings at 1117$_7$
Parthenon, east frieze of 1135 ff. east pediment of 261 710$_1$ 753 f. metope from north side of 1044
Parthenopaios
Myth: swears by his spear 13$_1$ 547$_2$
Parthenos = Virgo, the constellation 399$_1$
Parthenos, d. of Staphylos
Myths: Boubastos 671 Kastabos 670
Pas (Pa?) as equivalent of Πατήρ, Pater 293$_4$
Pasargadai 974$_1$ 1145$_{1(c)}$
Pasianax (= Hades) 1113$_{0(2)}$
Pasikrateia See Kore Epithets Πασικράτεια
Pasiphae (Pasiphaa)
Cult: Thalamai 31
Genealogy: d. of Helios 947$_0$
Pasiteles 1101$_3$(?)
Passaron
Cult: Zeus Ἄρειος 706
Passienus Crispus 403$_1$
Patara
Cults: Apollon 210 921$_3$ Zeus 921$_0$
—— coin of 186 omphalôs at 167 votive lions at 921$_0$
Patrai
Cult: Iupiter Liberator (Nero) 1214
—— coins of 1214
Paul, St
Types: 'Dioscuric' 606 1209$_2$ on chalice of Antioch 1202$_0$ on gilded glass 1207
Associated with St Peter 606 1207 1209$_2$
—— alludes to Sandas (?) 571$_2$ is taken for Hermes 1096$_4$
Pautalia
Cult: Zeus 743$_7$
—— coins of 743$_7$ 821
Pax
Attributes: caduceus 98 olive-branch 98
Identified with Virgo 734$_3$
—— on column of Mayence 96 98
Paxoi 347
Pe, spirits of 126
Pedasa 958$_9$
Pegasos, the horse
Myths: Bellerophon (Bellerophontes) 721$_2$ 1018 birth from neck of Medousa 716 ff. flight upward to Zeus 716 718
Genealogy: b. of Chrysaor 317 716 ff. 1018
Functions: bearer of thunder and lightning for Zeus 716 721 828 830$_7$ 1017 rain 721$_5$ thundercloud (?) 721$_6$
Types: winged horse 1040 winged horse approaching constellation 1017$_4$ winged horse with Eros emerging from its head 1040 wingless horse 717$_2$
Pegasus, the constellation 1017$_4$ 1018$_0$
Peion, Mt 962$_2$
Peiraieus
Cults: Agathe Tyche 1104 f. Apollon 487$_{3(1)}$ Asklepios 487$_{3(1)}$ 1105 1107$_5$(?) 1107$_6$(?) 1173 Hermes 487$_{3(1)}$ Maleates 487$_{3(1)}$ Zeus Κτήσιος 1065 f. Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 585$_3$ Zeus Μειλίχιος 1104 ff. 1117 1142 1173 ff. Zeus Φίλιος 1104 1173 ff.
Peirene 1018
Peisistratidai 1229 f.
Peitho
Associated with Aphrodite 261 1044 (fig. 893)
Pelagones 588$_0$
Pelargus or Pelasgus
Myth: 1096$_4$
Pelasgians
Cult: Zeus Ἐρεχθεύς (?) 793$_8$
Etymology: 588$_0$
—— at Dotion 683 at Knidos 683 in Thessaly 683 684$_2$

Pelasgos
Myth: buried at Argos 1144_2
Genealogy: f. of Lykaon 1096_4
Pelasgus See Pelargus
Peleg 588_0
Pelegon, s. of Axios 588_0
Pelethronion 1087
Peleus
Myths: fights Calydonian boar 799 teaches Achilles to use double spear 799 Thetis tests his sons in caldron of apotheosis 212
Pelias
Myth: caldron of apotheosis 211
Genealogy: b. of Neleus 317
Pelinnaion, Mt
Cult: Zeus Πελινναῖος 922_4
Pelion, Mt 869_2 869_3 1226
Cults: Cheiron 869_2 871_0 Muses (?) 870_0 Zeus Ἀκραῖος $869_{3(1)}$ (on p. 871) 904_2 Zeus Ἀκταῖος 869_2 870_0 904_2
Rite: procession of men clad in fleeces to sanctuary of Zeus Ἀκταῖος 870_0
Myths: Asklepios 1087 Otos and Ephialtes 129 —— remains on summit of 870_0 871_0
Pella in Makedonia
Cult: Zeus 1187_4
—— Alexandros of Abonou Teichos at 1083 coins of 1187_4
Pelops
Cult: Olympia 471
Rite: wood of white-poplar used for sacrifices at Olympia 471
Personates Zeus (?) 1147
Myths: caldron of apotheosis 211 ivory shoulder 224 224_1 sceptre of Zeus 547_2 956_2 f. Mt Sipylos 956_2
Genealogy: f. of Atreus 957_0 f. of Sikyon 1146 f. of Thyestes 1021 f. of Troizen and Pittheus 414_2 s. of Tantalos 438 957_0 —— sceptre of 956_2 1132_4 1132_6 throne of 956_2
Pelousion
Cults: Harpokrates 986_0 Kasios 986_0 987_0 onion 987_0 Pan 986_0 Zeus Κάσιος 985_1 ff. Zeus Κάσιος Μέγιστος (?) 985_1
Rite: taboo on onions 986_0 f.
Myth: founded by Isis 986_0
—— coins of 986_0
Pelousios, eponym of Pelousion
Myth: nurtured by Isis 986_0
Genealogy: s. of Malkandros 986_0
Penates
Cults: Italy 1059 Lavinium 1068 Rome 1181_0
Epithet: Publici Populi Romani 1181_0
Rite: meal 19_0
Function: divinised ancestors (?) protecting the penus 1068
Type: caducei of iron and bronze together with Trojan pottery 1068
Penates (cont.)
Identified with Fortuna, Ceres, Genius Iovialis, and Pales (masc.) 1059
Compared with Agathos Daimon 1127_0 Hermes 1068 Zeus Κτήσιος 1068
In relation to Ianus 335
—— rendered by θεοὶ Πατρῷοι or Γενέθλιοι or Κτήσιοι or Μύχιοι or Ἕρκιοι (leg. Ἑρκεῖοι) 1068
Peneios, f. of Stilbe 684_2
Penelope (Penelopeia)
Cult: Mantineia (?) 691 f.
Myths: axes as marriage-test 690 848 rescued from sea by wild ducks 691
Genealogy: m. of Pan by Hermes 691
Functions: a divinised duck 691 f. 697 a form of Artemis (?) 691 heroine 698
Etymology: 691
Identified with Artemis (?) 691 f.
Penelope (Penelopeia), a nymph 691_6
Penteskuphia, votive pinakes from 786
Penthesileia 303_2
Pentheus
Function: divine king 303_2
Etymology: 303_2
Penthilos 303_2
Pepromene 1138_5
Peratai 558_0
Perephoneia See Persephone
Pergamon
Cults: Aphrodite Παφία 424 Apollon 729_0 Ares 729_0 955_0 (Artemis) Ταυροπόλος 729_0 955_0 Asklepios 954_0 956_0 1077 1079 f. Asklepios Σωτήρ 956_0 Athena $882_{0(0)}$ 954_0 955_0 Athena Ἀρεία 729_0 955_0 Athena Νικηφόρος 287_2 955_0 Augustus 1179 1182 Commodus 1185 Demeter 729_0 955_0 Dionysos 954_0 Dionysos Καθηγεμών 287_2 288_0 (?) 1184_1 Gaia 1185 Ge 729_0 955_0 Geta 1186 Helios 729_0 955_0 1185 Hestia Βουλαία 259_0 Iupiter Amicalis (= Zeus Φίλιος) 1179 f. Kabeiroi 953_3 f. Poseidon 729_0 955_0 Roma 1179 1182 Selene 1185 Thalassa 1185 Theos Ὕψιστος (= Zeus ?) $882_{0(0)}$ 956_0 Trajan 1179 ff. Zeus 729_0 $882_{0(0)}$ (?) 954_0 ff. Zeus (= Commodus) 1185 Zeus (= Geta) 1186 Zeus Ἀσκληπιός 1061 1077 f. Zeus Βάκχος (= Zeus Σαβάζιος) 287 287_2 288_0 954_0 1184 Zeus Βουλαῖος 259_0 Zeus Εὐαγγέλιος 956_0 Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(8)}$ 956_0 Zeus Κτήσιος 1067 Zeus Μέγιστος 956_0 Zeus Μέγιστος Σωτήρ 956_0 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 956_0 Zeus Σαβάζιος 287_2 954_0 1184 (See also Zeus Βάκχος) Zeus Σωτήρ 955_0 Zeus Τροπαῖος 110_0 956_0 Zeus Φίλιος 956_0 1178 1179 ff.
Festival: Traianeia Deiphileia 1180
Rites: altar of Zeus made of ashes from thighs of victims 955_6 sacrifice of two-year-old heifer to Athena,

Pergamon (cont.)
three-year-old ox to Zeus, to Zeus Βάκχος, and to Asklepios, and feast of bull's flesh 287_2 954_0
Priest: ἱεροφάντης 1067
Myths: birth of Zeus 954_0 Pergamos 1184 Telephos 1179
—— aqueducts of 956_0 art of 862 Asklepieion at 1077 coins of 260_0 424 633_2 953_3 955_0 956_0 1079 f. 1082 1181 f. 1184 ff. great altar at 399_1 684_4 $831_{1(4)}$ 953_3 1179_6 open-air altar of Zeus Φίλιος at 1180 paraphernalia of diviner from 512 riddance of plague at 954_0 temple of Zeus' Ἀσκληπιός at 1077 Traianeum at 1179 ff.
Pergamos, eponym of Pergamon 1184
Perikles
Personates Zeus 816_1
Periklymenos (=Plouton) $1113_{0(2)}$
Periklymenos, f. of Erginos
Metamorphosed into eagle 1134_6
Function: hypostasis of Zeus (?) 1075
Periklymenos, s. of Poseidon 1071
Perillos 924_0
Perinthos
Cults: Zeus Λοφείτης 874_1 949_3 Zeus Σάραπις 773_0
—— coins of 560_3 665_3 773_0
Periphas
Personates Zeus 1121 ff.
Myth: 24_4 1061 1121 ff.
Metamorphosed into eagle 1122 1131 1134_6
Etymology: 1122 1122_5 1122_7
—— both Attic autochthon and Thessalian king (?) 1123
Periphas, s. or f. of Lapithes 1122 f. 1134
Perkúnas
Cult: Romove 93
Perpetua, St 133 f.
Persephassa See Persephone
Persephatta 132_2
See also Persephone, Phersephone, Proserpina
Persephone
Cults: Eleusis 132_2 Emporion 1040 Panormos near Kyzikos (?) $881_{0(21)}$ Sicily 1040 Tarentum 1141_0
Epithets: ἐλαρινή 295_2 ἐπαινή 893_0 Μελιβδία (?) $1113_{0(3)}$ Μελίνοια (?) $1113_{0(3)}$ Μελιτώδης $1113_{0(3)}$ Μελιτώνη (?) $1113_{0(3)}$ ξανθή 1164_0
Rites: tree decked as maiden, brought into town, mourned forty nights, and then burnt 303_2 union with Zeus 132_2
Myth: consorts with Zeus 132_2 1029
Genealogy: d. of Zeus by Rhea or Demeter 1029 m. by Zeus of Meilinoe (?) or Melinoe (?) $1114_{0(5)}$ m. by Zeus of the chthonian Dionysos or Zagreus 1029 m. by Zeus of the Persephone (cont.)
first three Dioskouroi (Tritopatreus, Eubouleus, Dionysos) 1135_4
Functions: chthonian queen 132_2 spring 557_1
Etymology: 295_2
Attributes: corn-wreath 370 pig 1141_0 vervain 395_2
Types: bifrontal 370 head with flowing hair 110_6 rape by Plouton 801
Identified with Axiokersa (?) 314_2
Associated with Zeus καταχθόνιος 893_0
In relation to bees and honey 1142_7 Demeter 501 —— marriage with 1164 ff. name of, taboo 1114_0 plant of (vervain) 395_2 woods of 472
See also Persephatta, Phersephone, Proserpina
Perses 108
Perseus
Myths: Akrisios 1155 1155_7 Danaë 671 1018 Hyperboreoi 463 f. Ione 1186 f. Medousa 716 ff. 1018 sacrifices to Zeus 'Απεσάντιος 892_4 Tarsos 570_4 teaches Persians to worship fire 1187
Genealogy: s. of Danaë 464 s. of Pikos by Danaë 1187_2 s. of Pikos who is also Zeus 694_0 s. of Zeus 665_1 s. of Zeus by Danaë 694_0
Function: solar 1156
Attributes: diskos 1155 f. harpe 721_7 1084 kibisis 718 lobster 665_1 sickle 721_7 sword 721_7 winged caduceus 718 winged cap 718 winged sandals 718
Assimilated to Hermes 718
Perseus, the constellation 464 477_8
Persia
Cults: fire 33 ff. Mithras 255 sky 354 Zeus 33
Rite: sacrifice of horses 890_2
Myth: cosmic egg 1036
—— kings of, regarded as divine 853 r for l in 588_0
Perun
Attribute: iris 774_4
Pessinous
Cults: Agdistis 970_0 Attis 970_0 Magna Mater 969_4 Mother of the gods 310 f. 310_2
Myths: Agdistis 969_4 970_0 Attis 969_4 970_0
—— priestly kings at 965_0
Petelia
Cult: Zeus 708 f.
—— coins of 708 f.
Peter, St
Attribute: keys 1200_3 1200_4
Types: 'Dioscuric' 606 1209_2 in Catacombs 1200_4 on chalice of Antioch 1200_4 1202_0 on gilded glass 1207
Associated with St Paul 606 1207 1209_2
Petrachos, Mt
Cult: Zeus 901_1

Petrachos, Mt (cont.)
Myth: Kronos receives from Rhea stone instead of Zeus 901_1
Petrus and Marcellinus, Catacomb of 1207
Phaethon
Myths: fall from chariot of Helios 40 43_1 484 Milky Way 40 43_1 476 ff. parallel from Pomerania 483 f. sisters turned into larches 402_0
Genealogy: s. of Helios by Klymene 473_3
Type: fall from chariot of Helios 473 478 479
Identified with Phanes 1026 1051
In relation to Milky Way 40 43_1 483
Phaiakia
Myths: called Δρεπάνη, Δρέπανον, Ἄρπη after the δρέπανον of Kronos or Zeus, or after the δρέπανον or ἅρπη of Demeter 448_0 peopled from blood of Ouranos 448_0
Identified with Korkyra 448_0
—— river in 481_6
Phaidra
Myth: Theseus and Hippolytos 1043
Phaistos
Cults: Velchanos 946_0 947_0 Zeus Φελχάνος 946_0 947_0
Myth: Idomeneus 947_0
—— celt from 509 coins of $491_{0(6)}$ 946_0 947_0 double axe at 600_3
Phalakrai, a promontory in Euboia 874_2 (on p. 875)
Phalakron, a mountain near Argos (?) 874_2 (on p. 875) 893_1
Phalakron, a promontory in Korkyra 874_2 (on p. 875) 1226
Phalakron (Phalakra, Phalakrai), the summit of Mt Ide in Phrygia 874_2 (on p. 875)
Phalaris, bull of bronze made for 910_1 924_0
Phalces, the Corallian 108 f.
Phalces, s. of Temenos 110_4
Phalces, the Trojan 110_4
Phaleron
Cults: Acheloios 183 f. Apollon Πύθιος 183 Artemis Λοχία 183 Eileithyia 183 f. Geraistian birth-nymphs 183 f. Hestia 183 f. Kallirhoe (Kallirroe), d. of Acheloios 183 Kephisos 183 f. Leto 183 Rhapso 183 f.
Phallagogia 1022
Phanakes
Cult: Mysia 1025
Phanes
Cult: Thraco-Phrygians (?) 1025
Epithets: αὐτόγονος 1026 μονογενής 1026 πρωτόγονος 1026 (See also Protogonos)
Myths: sprung from cosmic egg 1023 f. swallowed by Zeus 1027
Genealogy: f. by Nyx of Ge or Gaia and Ouranos, Rhea and Kronos, Hera and Zeus 1026 f. of Zeus 1051 parent and h. of Nyx 1026
Phanes (cont.)
Functions: creator 1026 1033 ἔφορος τῆς ζωογόνου δυνάμεως 1025 light 1024 1026 light or daylight or sunlight 1025
Etymology: 1025
Attributes: sceptre 1051 thunderbolt 1051
Types: αἰδοῖον ἔχων ὀπίσω περὶ τὴν πυγήν 1024 f. androgynous 1026 nude youth standing in oval zodiac with egg-shell above and below him, wings on his shoulders, crescent on his back, heads of lion, goat, ram attached to his body, cloven hoofs, and snake coiled about him, bearing thunderbolt and sceptre 1051
Identified with Antauges 1026 1051 Dionysos 1026 1051 Erikepaios 1024 1039 Eros 1026 1039 Eubouleus 1026 Helios 1051 Metis (masc.) 1024 1026 1032 1039 Pan 1051 Phaethon 1026 1051 Priapos 1026 Protogonos 1026 1039 1051
Assimilated to Dionysos (?) 1051 Helios 1051 Pan (?) 1051 Zeus 1051
Compared with Christ 1026
In relation to Zeus 1051
—— sceptre of 1026
Phanotes 217_2
Phaselis
Cults: Ge 729_0 Helios 729_0 Zeus 729_0
Phata in Lydia
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος $881_{0(20)}$
Phaunos
Genealogy: s. of Zeus 694_0 943_0
Identified with Hermes 694_0 943_0
Pheidias 475_7 479_6 598 737 746_0 753 757 ff. 760 f. 849 862 f. (?) 916_0 921_0 1078 1135 1137_2 1138_5 1188 f.
—— career of 757_8
Phemonoe 350_1
Phene
Metamorphosed into vulture 1122 1122_4
Etymology: 1122_5
Pheneos
Cult: Demeter Κιδαρία 1136_4
Festival: τελετὴ μείζων 1136_4
Rite: beating of Underground Folk with rods 1136_4
Pherekydes of Syros 315 f. 344_0 351 852
Persephone
Cult: Anazarbos 14_3
Type: horned, four-eyed, two-faced 1029
Identified with Kore 1029
—— bridal chamber of 1164_0 1164_2
See also Persephatta, Persephone, Proserpina
Phigaleia
Cult: Dionysos Ἀκρατοφόρος 244_4
Philadelpheia in Lydia
Cults: Agathos Daimon 1229 Agdistis (Angdistis) 1228 f. Aphrodite 363 Arete 1229 Charites 1229 Eudai-

Philadelpheia in Lydia (cont.)
monia 1229 Hestia 960_0 1229 Hygieia (?) 1229 Ianus 374 Mneme 1229 Nike 1229 Ploutos 1229 Theoi Σωτῆρες 960_0 1229 Theos Ὕψιστος $881_{0(20)}$ Tyche Ἀγαθή 1229 Zeus Εὐμένης (=Eumenes i) 960_0 1229 Zeus Κορυφαῖος 285_0 869_1 957_1 1217 f. Zeus Σωτήρ 1228 f.
Rite: procession of Ianus on Kalendae Ianuariae 374
—— coins of 363 869_1
Philai
Cults: Osiris 773_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος (=Augustus) 97_0
Philandros, s. of Apollon 218_0
Philemon
Myth: 1096_4
Philia
Cult: Athens 1163
Genealogy: m. of Zeus Ἐπιτέλειος Φίλιος 1163 1169
Associated with Zeus Ἐπιτέλειος Φίλιος and Tyche Ἀγαθή 1163
Philioi Daimones (Orestes and Pylades)
Cult: Skythia 1179
Philioi Theoi 1177_2
Philip of Macedon
Associated with the twelve gods 1137_1
Philippopolis in Thessaly See Gomphoi
Philippopolis in Thrace, coins of $490_{0(5)}$
Philoktetes 903_0
Philomela
Metamorphosed into swallow 693
Philonome 669
Philyra
Genealogy: m. of Aphros and Cheiron by Kronos 695_0 m. of Cheiron by Kronos 871_0
Phlegyai
Etymology: 1134
Phlegyas 463_1 $488_{0(0)}$
Phlious
Cults: Asklepios 1090 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1106 f.
Phlox 981_1
Phlyeis
Cults: Apollon Διονυσοδότης (less probably Διονυσόδοτος) 251_2 Athena Τιθρωνή 1066 Demeter Ἀνησιδώρα 1066 Kore Πρωτογόνη 1066 Semnai 1066 Zeus Κτήσιος 1066
Phobos
Cult: Selinous $489_{0(0)}$
Phoenicians
In relation to 'Minoan' culture 662 —— sacred pillars of 423 425
See also Phoinike
Phoibe
Cults: Delphoi 500 Sparta 1015_7
Function: earth 500
Type: Gigantomachia 399_1
Associated with Hilaeira 1015_7
In relation to Gaia and Themis 500
Phoibe, one of the Heliades 500_{11}
Phoibos
Cults: Delphoi 839 Kurshumlu in Phrygia 839 Lykoreia 901_2
Epithets: Ἀπόλλων 500 844 Λυκώρειος or Λυκωρεύς 901_2 902_0
Functions: interpreter of Zeus 500 sky 500
Etymology: 500 500_{12}
In relation to Zeus 500 844 Zeus Βροντῶν 839
Supersedes Helios 500
Phoinike
Cults: Agathos Daimon 1127_0 Ba'al Milik (Melek, Molok) 1108 benefactors of society 1132_0 Ešmun 314_0 Kabeiroi 314_0 Kadmilos 314_0 Rešef (Rešup) 630 Theos Ὕψιστος $886_{0(30)}$ Zeus Ὄρειος 868_8
Myth: cosmic egg 1036 ff.
—— snake sacred in 1111_1
Phoinike, old name of Tenedos 662
Phoinikous, a name of Mt Olympos in Lykia 972_1
Phokis
Cults: Athena 731_0 Hera Βασίλεια 731_0 Poseidon 731_0 Zeus Βασιλεύς 731_0
Phol 844_6
Etymology: 110_5
Identified with Apollo (?) 110_5 844 Balder (?) 110_5 844 St Paul (??) 110_5
Pholoe, Mt 894_0
Phorkys
Genealogy: s. of Okeanos by Tethys 1020
Phoroneus 168_1 257_4
Phos 981_1
Phosphoros 430_4 430_5 478_2 (?) 609_1
Photeine, St 1116
Phrixos
Myths: golden ram 899_1 904_1 received by Dipsakos 904_1 Zeus Λαφύστιος 904_1 Zeus Φύξιος 902_0
Genealogy: s. of Athamas and f. of Kytissoros 904_1 —— tomb 471
Phrygia
Cults: Agdistis 970_0 Akrisias 1155 f. Attis 313 Deos (Dios) 278 ff. Kronos 1156 Mother of the gods 970_0 Mother of the gods Τηρείη 697 Papas 292 ff. 313 836 Rhea 970_0 Semele 279 Zeus Βαγαῖος 294_0 (?) 295_2 569 Zeus Βέννιος or Βεννεύς $883_{0(0)}$ 969_3 Zeus Βροντῶν 835 f. 838 f. 852 Zeus Λίος 836 Zeus Κεραύνιος $807_{5(5)}$ Zeus Πάπας or Παπᾶς 292_4 Zeus Σαβάζιος 282 Zeus Τετράωτος 322 842
Festivals: arbor intrat 303_2 Ballenaion 270_5
Rite: man bound in sheaf 498_2
Priests: Βεννεῖται $883_{0(0)}$
Myth: Lityerses 295_2
—— coins of 296_0
Phrygia, Mt, pyre of Herakles on 903_2

Phrygia, personification of the district 320_0
Phrygians conceive of the Father as reborn in the Son 294
Phrynos, the potter 785 788_0
Phryxonides 928_0
Phthonos (?) 1098_5
Phylake in Phthiotis
Myth: Melampous cures Iphiklos 684 f. 848
Phylakides, s. of Apollon 218_0
Phylakos, f. of Iphiklos 452 684 f. 848
Phyle 815 897_6 898_0
Phyleus 1137_2
Phyllis, the river-god
Cult: Bithynia 904_1
Myth: receives Phrixos 904_1
Genealogy: f. of Dipsakos 904_1
Phyromachos 1079
Phytalidai 291_2 1091 ff. 1103 1114
Phytalos
Myth: Demeter 291_2 1092_6 1103
Picti tattooed 123_0
Pictones, coins of 1040
Picus
Cult: Italy 696_0
Myth: Canens 394_3
Types: king 696_0 woodpecker 696_0
Associated with Faunus 400
Compared with Benhadad (?) 697_0
Pikos who is also Zeus 693_4 694_0 695_0 696_0 697_0 1222
Cult: Crete (?) 697_0
Myths: buried in Crete 696_0 697_0 943_0 king of Assyria 694_0 695_0 king of Italy 694_0 695_0 reigns over the west 695_0 696_0 942_0 943_0
Genealogy: b. of Belos, Ninos, Hera, and Aphros 693_4 694_0 f. of Belos by Hera 695_0 f. of Hermes 942_0 f. of Perseus by Danaë 1187_2 great-gs. of Kronos 695_0 s. of Nebrod (Nimrod) Orion Kronos by Semiramis Rhea 693_4 694_0
Functions: deceiver 694_0 695_0 magician 694_0 695_0 tie between east and west 696_0
Identified with Ninos 695_0 Plouteus Αἰδώνιος 695_0 Poseidon Χθόνιος 695_0 'Serafin' (Serapis?) 695_0 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 695_0
Compared with Hadadrimmon (?) 697_0
—— tomb of 220_6 342_0
Pikùlas
Cult: Romove 93
Pilumnus 643_8
Pinalos, eponym of the Lycian town Pinara 971_2
Pindos, Mt
Cult: Zeus Ἀκραῖος $871_{3(2)}$ 904_5
Pirot
Cult: Theos Ἐπήκοος Ὕψιστος $878_{0(11)}$ 948_5
Pisces 43_4 103_0 664_1
Pisias (Pisides?), eponym of Pisidai 973_1
Pisidai 973_1
Pisidia
Cults: Zeus Πορεύς (or Πότης or Πότις) 285 287_1 Zeus Σολυμεύς 973_1 f.
Pithoigia 1139
Pittakos 130
Pittheus 414_2 1091
Plain of Zeus 1021
Plakia
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος $882_{0(0)}$
Etymology: 588_0
Plakiane 588_0
Plarasa
Cults: Eros 572_{10} Zeus 573
—— coins of 572 f.
Plastene 956_2
Plataia, d. of Asopos 898_6
Plataiai
Cults: Hera Κιθαιρωνία 899_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 238_0 763_1
Festivals: Daidala Megala 898_6 Daidala Mikra 898_6 Eleutheria 1121_0
Platon 505_1 672_1 840 852 1015_8 1033 1033_1 1060 1065 1118 1132_3 1167 f. 1168_2
—— as s. of Apollon 237_0 portrait-herm of (with Sokrates) 390 (?)
Plādāns (= Apollon?)
Cult: Sardeis 1228
Plouteus
Epithets: Αἰδώνιος 695_0 κοίρανος 1164_0
Identified with Pikos who is also Zeus 695_0
See also Plouton
Plouton
Cult: Delos (?) 1128_0
Epithets: Ἀγέλαστος (?) $1113_{0(2)}$ Ἀγησίλαος or Ἀγεσίλαος $1113_{0(2)}$ Εὐβουλεύς 25_{9_0} Ἰσοδαίτης $1113_{0(2)}$ Κλύμενος 233_0 Περικλύμενος 233_0 $1113_{0(2)}$ Πολυδαίμων $1113_{0(2)}$
Myths: Kore $345_{6(2)}$ 1103 Leuke 468 f.
Attributes: cornu copiae 1117_7 (?) fork (?) 801 f. four-horse chariot 801 modius with oak-leaves and acorns 802 sceptre 801
Types: rape of Persephone 801 seated with Kerberos beside him 802
Associated with Zeus and Poseidon 802 (?)
Compared with Hermes 385_0 Zeus 1105 Zeus Πλουτοδότης 385_0
—— palace of 1226 tomb of 348
Ploutos
Cult: Philadelpheia in Lydia 1229
Pnyx $876_{1(1)}$
Podaleia 451_1
Podaleirios
Genealogy: b. of Machaon 317
Function: physician 451_1
Etymology: 451_1
Pogla
Cult: Artemis Περγαία (?) 363
—— coins of 363

Poinai 1101
Pola
Cult: Venus Caelestis 68_2
Polichna 916_9 917_0
Polis
Cults: Larissa in Thessaly 1155 Skiathos $878_{9(6)}$
Associated with Hermes 1155_5 Zeus Μειλίχιος and Enhodia 1155 Zeus Ὕψιστος $878_{9(6)}$
Pollux 96
See also Polydeukes, Dioskouroi
Polyarches 317
Polyarchos (=Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$ 1168_5
Polybios, the Giant 713
Polyboia 670
Polybotes 713
Polydaimon (=Plouton) $1113_{0(2)}$
Polydegmon (=Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$
Polydektes (=Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$
Polydeukes
Epithets: ἀεθλοφόρος 439_1 ὄζος Ἄρηος 438_3 πύκτης 1097_2 πῶξ ἀγαθός 436
Genealogy: b. of Kastor 317 1015_7 s. of Zeus by Leda 1015_7
See also Pollux, Dioskouroi
Polydora 486
Polygnotos, the painter 122_0
Polygnotos, the vase-painter 197_1
Polyhymno 1022
Polyhymnos
Myth: 1022
Polykleitos 389_2 711_3 (?) 742 749 749_1 893_2 1143 f. 1178
Polykleitos, the younger 1143_1 (?) 1178 (?)
Polyktor 384_0
Polymnia 1022
Polyneikes
Genealogy: s. and b. of Oidipous 825_2
Polypemon 627
Polyphas 1122_7
Polyphemos
Myth: Mt Aitne 909_0
Functions: sky (?) 989 f. sun (?) 989 f.
—— in folk-tales 988 ff.
Polyphemos, s. of Elatos 471
Polyrrhenion
Cult: Hermes Δρόμιος 1042
—— coins of 342_0
Polytechnos
Myths: presented with double axe by Hephaistos 693 pursues Aëdon and Chelidonis 693
Metamorphosed into woodpecker 693
Polyxene 117
Polyxenos (?) (=Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$
Pompeii
Cult: Iupiter Milichius 1158
Pontos
Cults: Poseidon 975_0 Zeus Στράτιος 974_1 ff.
Rite: sacrifices to Zeus Στράτιος on mountain-tops 974_1 ff.
—— pillars of Herakles in 422
Popoi
Cults: Dryopes 293_0 Skythai 293_0
Type: underground effigies 293_0
Poros
Myth: drunk on nectar sleeps in garden of Zeus 1027
Porphyrion, s. of Sisyphos 1150_4
Porsenna, tomb of 1219
Poseidon
Cults: Aigina 184_6 Aixone 730_0 Athens 729_0 730_0 Boiotia 583_3 731_0 Delphoi 176_1 177_0 Dorylaeion 281 Heleia (?) 931_0 Mantineia 581 Messana 795 Pergamon 729_0 955_0 Phokis 731_0 Pontos 975_0 Praisos 731_0 Selinous $489_{0(0)}$ Skythia 292_4 Sparta 729_0 Stelai in Crete 731_0 Syracuse 916_0 Cape Tainaros 890_5 Tralleis 959_0 Zankle 795
Epithets: ἀπότροπος 959_0 ἀργῆς 959_0 ἀσφάλιος 959_0 εἰνάλιος...Κρονίδης 959_0 ἐνοσίχθων 789_3 Ἵππιος 581 ἵππιος 959_0 ἵππιος πουτομέδων ἄναξ 786_1 κορυφαῖος ἐπ' Οὐλύμποιο καρήνων 869_1 ναυμέδων 798_6 Σεισίχθων 959_0 τεμενοῦχος 959_0 Χθόνιος 695_0
Rites: chariot with white horses plunged into sea 975_0 sacrifice of two bulls 902_2 sacrifice of wheat and crops 959_0
Myths: Aithra (?) 800 Amymone (?) 800 Erechtheus 794 Kleinis 463_1 strikes with trident the Akropolis at Athens 793
Genealogy: f. of Althepos by Leïs, d. of Oros 414_2 f. of Astakos by the nymph Olbia 665_3 f. of Boutes 793_{12} f. of Hyperes and Anthas by Alkyone, d. of Atlas 414_2 f. of Kteatos and Eurytos 1015_8 f. of Kyknos 669 f. of Minyas by Chrysogone d. of Halmos 1150_4 f. of Triopas by Kanake 684_2 h. of Demeter 584_0
Functions: earthquakes 959_0 lightning 794 ff. 850 originally a specialised form of Zeus 31_8 582 786 846 850 893_0
Etymology: 582 ff. 1220
Attributes: bident 806_6 eagle 798 Nike 798 rock 713 scaled cuirass 713 sea-monster 798 sword 789 thunderbolt 794 ff. 798 trident 713 785 786 ff. 850 tunny 786
Types: advancing with thunderbolt in raised right hand and left outstretched 794 f. 850 advancing with trident in raised right hand and left outstretched 795_3 Gigantomachy 713 syncretistic 850 with attributes of Zeus 796 ff.
Identified with Erechtheus 793 Pikos who is also Zeus 695_0 Thamimasadas (Thagimasada) 293_0 Zeus 582 ff. Zeus and Ares 1225

Poseidon (cont.)
Associated with Ge 176_1 Zeus 959_0 Zeus and Hades 785 Zeus and Plouton 802 (?)
In relation to Zeus 582 ff. 850
—— crabs sacred to 665_2 'sea' of, on Akropolis at Athens 793 trident-mark of, on Akropolis at Athens 789 792 ff.
Poseidonia, coins of 795_3
Poseidonios 805_6
Pothos
Genealogy: f. of Aer and Aura by Omichle 1036 1038
—— in Phoenician cosmogony 1038 1039
Potrympus
Cult: Romove 93
Praeneste
Cults: Aesculapius 1086 Mercurius (Mircurios, Mirqurios) 397_0
Praetextatus, Catacomb of 1206
Praisos
Cults: Apollon Πύθιος 731_0 Athena 731_0 pig 782_5 Poseidon 731_0 Zeus Ἀκραῖος $871_{3(4)}$ Zeus Δικταῖος 731_0 $871_{3(4)}$ 930_0
Myth: golden hound 1227
—— coins of $871_{3(4)}$
Prajāpati
Myth: birth 1035 f.
Identified with Hiranyagarbha 1035
Prasiai in Attike
Rite: Hyperborean offerings 497
Myth: Erysichthon 497
Prasiai in Lakonike
Cult: (Apollon) Μαλεάτας $487_{3(1)}$
Praxidike, w. of Tremilos (Tremiles ?) 971_2
Praxiergidai 1137_0
Praxiteles 196 598 599_2 749 1018 1101_3 1127_0
Priamidai 1102_7
Priamos
Myths: death 1069 golden vine 281_4 1184_3 prays to Zeus Ἴδαῖος 8 950_0 three-eyed Zeus 892_5
Genealogy: gs. of Ilos 8
Priansos
Cults: Aphrodite 723_0 Apollon Πύθιος (Πύτιος) 723_0 Ares 723_0 Artemis 723_0 Athena Ὠλερία 723_0 Eileithyia Βυατία 723_0 Hera 723_0 Hermes 723_0 Hestia 723_0 Korybantes (Kyrbantes) 723_0 Kouretes (Koretes) 723_0 Leto (Lato) 723_0 Nymphs 723_0 Zeus Βιδάτας 723_0 934_0 Zeus Δικταῖος (?) 723_0 Zeus Ὀράτριος 723_0 Zeus Σκύλιος 723_0
Priapos
Cult: Lampsakos 464
Epithet: ἄναξ 1026
Rite: sacrifice of asses 464
Type: double bust (with Maenad) 392
Identified with Phanes 1026
—— shrine of 154_0
Priene
Cult: Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(7)}$
Prinophorei 411_6
Prinophoros
Cult: Thessalonike 411_6
Priestesses: εὐεία 411_6 θύσα 411_6
Worshippers: πρωνοφόροι 411_6
Proculus Iulius 24
Procyon 477_8
Prognaos (?) 353_3
Proitos
Myth: Akrisios 1146_0
Prokleia 669
Prokne
Metamorphosed into nightingale 693
Prokoptes 626 f.
Prokroustes 626 f.
Prometheus
Epithet: ἀγκυλομήτης 549_7
Myths: receives ring from Zeus 990 thrusts torch into solar wheel 990
Identified with Kronos 549_7
—— in folk-tale from Zakynthos (?) 505_5 picture of 986_0
Pron, Mt
Cult: Hera 893_2
Pronnoi
Cult: Zeus Αἰνήσιος 907_2
—— coins of 907_2
Pronoia 863_1 (?)
Proserpina
Genealogy: m. of Liber by Iupiter 1031
Identified with Luna, Diana, Ceres, Iuno 256
See also Persephatta, Persephone, Phersephone
Prostanna
Cults: Demeter (?) 973_0 Mt Viarus (?) 972_2 f. Zeus 973_0
—— coins of 972_2 f.
Proteus, pillars of 422
Protogone 131
Protogonos
Epithets: πολύμητις 1025 ταυροβόας 1023
Myth: swallowed by Zeus 1027
Type: androgynous with golden wings and heads of bulls and snake 1022 f.
Identified with Erikepaios (Erikapaios) 1027 1039 Eros 1039 Metis (masc.) 1039 Pan 1039 Phanes 1026 1039 1051 Zeus 1039 1051 Zeus or Pan 1023
In relation to Metis (masc.) (?) 1025
Protogonos in Phoenician cosmogony 981_1
Prousa ad Olympum
Cults: Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 964_2 Zeus Παππῶος 292_4
Festivals: Olympia 964_2 Pythia 964_2
Prousias, eponym of Prousa ad Olympum 964_2
Prymnessos
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν 835_4
Psara, blind Kyklops in folk-tale from 996 ff.

Pseira, vases from 526 f. 654
Psiloriti See Ide, Mt, in Crete
Psithyros, the god
Cult: Lindos 1044
Psithyros, the hero
Cult: Athens 1044
Psoloeis 924_0
Psychai
Types: coining money (?) 1047 f. fulling clothes 1048 genre 1047 f. making oil 1047 twining garlands 1047
Associated with Erotes 1047 f.
Psyche
Types: embraced by Eros 1050 Hellenistic 860 ridden by Eros round race-course 1047 vintage 1050 with butterfly-wings 1050
Associated with Eros 1045
In relation to Eros 315_3
Psychro Cave on Mt Lasithi 925_1 926_0 927_0
—— bronze votive tablet from 927_0
Ptah
Function: fire 34_1
Type: potter 1035
Identified with Hephaistos 34_1 Osiris 34_1
Ptelea 405_3
Pteras 190_0
Ptoïon, Mt
Cult: Apollon 455
—— apsidal temple of 900_0
Ptolemaïs in Phoinike
Cult: Kronos 553 f.
—— coins of 553 f. 845
Purgatory 138_0
Puteoli
Cult: Venus Caelestis 68_2
Pyanopsia or Pyanepsia 237_0
Pylades
Etymology: 453
Associated with Orestes 207_0 1179
—— as hypostasis of Apollon (?) 453
Pylaios (Pyleos), s. of Letbos 1154_3
Pylaochos (=Hades) $1113_{0(2)}$
Pyr 981_1
Pyrakmon 784
Pyrkon 176_1
Pyrrha, w. of Deukalion 971_0
Pyrrhos, s. of Achilles 452_{12} 915_2
Pythaeus 173_4
Pythagoras
Myths: brought up with Astraios 230 eagle at Kroton 222_4 eagle at Olympia 222_4 exhibits golden thigh at Kroton 223 purified with thunderstone 835 934_0 visits Idaean Cave 933_0 934_0 942_0
Metamorphosed into cock 223_1
Functions: as rebirth of Apollon 221 ff. as son of Apollon 222 as specially related to Apollon 223_1 225 as Apollon Hyperbóreos or Hyperbóreios 223 as Apollon Paión 223 as Apollon Pýthios 223 as emanation from mind of Zeus 225 distinguished from god and man 223_5
Etymology: 223_3
—— on cycle of life's changes 120_1 on food fallen from table 1129_3 on sound of beaten bronze 649 on tomb of Apollon 221 cp. 252 on tomb of Zeus 345_1 354 934_0 942_0
Pythagoreans
—— at Kroton 225 burial rites of 472 earliest traditions of 223 ἱεροὶ λόγοι of 1024 imbued with Orphism 131 1024 numerical speculation of 236_5 on averting thunderstorms 827_7 on Delphic E 177_0 178_1 on Delphic tripod 178_1 on Delphoi 177 f. on Milky Way 40 ff. 476 840 on sea 557_1 on semicircles of Dioskouroi 434 on spherical earth 432 on tower of Zan 354 primitive lore of 222_1 223 silence of 7_1 use of meal by 19_0 use of symbol Y by 227_4
Pythaïstai 815
Pythia, the festival at Ankyra $491_{0(0)}$ at Delphoi $490_{0(5)}$ at Philippopolis in Thrace $490_{0(5)}$ at Prousa ad Olympum 964_2 at Thyateira 562 at Tralleis $491_{0(0)}$ 959_0 —— oak-wreath precedes bay-wreath at 486 originally celebrated once in eight years 240
Pythia, the priestess
Rite: caldron of apotheosis 210 ff.
Type: seated on tripod 213 841
—— impregnated by mantic pneûma at Delphoi and elsewhere 208_1 208_2 209_1
Pytho 816
See also Delphoi
Python
Myths: slain by Apollon 217_2 239_0 slays Apollon 221 ff.
Functions: king 1087 oracular daimónion 210_1
Type: snake 196 239_0
—— bones and teeth of, kept in Delphic tripod 221 changes from holy snake to unholy dragon 241_3

Queen of the Underworld 118 119_0 119_2 132
Rite: human consort 132 f. cp. 1164 ff.
Quinquennalia 601
Quirinus
Cult: Rome 1165_1
Identified with Romulus 24

Rā
Myth: ladder 126
Types: hawk-headed 774_0 phoenix 1035
—— nostrils of 773_0 774_0
Rāma-ćandra 660_1

Ramah 1059
Ramitha $886_{0(30)}$
Ramman
Etymology: $886_{0(30)}$
Types: seated with lightning-fork 765_1 standing on bull with lightning-fork 766_1 standing on bull with lightning-fork and scimitar (?) 765_1 standing on bull with two lightning-forks 765_1
Identified with Theos Hypsistos $886_{0(30)}$
Ravenna
Cult: Iupiter Ter(minalis) 1091
Rehtia
Cult: Este 1220
Etymology: 1220
Remus
Myths: infancy 1016 nursed by she-wolf 46 443 1016 reigns with Romulus 440 thrown into Tiber 671 1016
Function: one of the Roman Dioskouroi 1014
Attributes: star 443 f. wolf 46 443
See also Romulus
Rerir 682
Rešef (Rešup)
Cults: Kition in Kypros $807_{3(1)}$ (?) Phoinike 630
Rešef Heș See Rešef (Rešup)
Rhapso
Cult: Phaleron 183 f.
Rhea
Cults: Delos 920_0 921_0 Gaza (?) 675 Mt Juktas (?) 944_0 Mt Kamares (?) 934_0 Knossos 520_5 548 Mt Kynthos (?) 920_0 921_0 Mastaura 565_2 Mykenai (?) 515 525 1221 Phrygia 970_0
Epithets: Ma 565_2 μεγάλη 296_4 Φρυγία θεὸς μεγάλη 970_0
Rites: human consort in Crete (?) 522 524 mysteries of Zeus Ἰδαῖος 932_1 sacrifice of bull 565_2 torches carried over mountain 934_0
Myths: bears Zeus in Dictaean Cave 928_0 consorts with Zeus 1029 entrusts infant Zeus to Kouretes 931_0 gives Kronos stone instead of Zeus 793_3 901_1 hides infant Zeus in cave on Mt Aigaion 925_1 Merops (?) 1132_1 protected by Hopladamos (Hoplodamos?) against Kronos 291_0 puts Dionysos or Zagreus together again 1032 rescues Zeus from Kronos 928_0 takes Hera to Okeanos and Tethys 1020
Metamorphosed into snake 1029
Genealogy: d. of Okeanos by Tethys 1020 d. of Ouranos by Gaia 925_1 d. of Phanes by Nyx 1026 m. of Attis 294 296 m. of Phersephone or Kore by Zeus 1029 m. of Zeus 830 925_1 1029 m. of Zeus by Kronos 941_0 w. of Kronos 548 673
Function: earth 515 548 557_1
Rhea (cont.)
Etymology: 557_1
Attributes: cypress 932_1 double axe (?) 601 griffins (?) 524 lilies (?) 525 lion 920_0 921_0 poppies 1165_1 poppy-head 515_5
Types: drawn by griffins (?) 524 f. with plumed head-dress (?) 524 standing between two lions with double axe and ritual horns (serpentine?) on her head 1221 (?)
Identified with Agdistis 970_0 Demeter 1029 1032 Kybele 970_0 Ma 565_2 Mother of the gods 970_0 Semiramis 693_4 694_0 695_0 Tyche 675 (?)
In relation to Zeus 552_1
Superseded by Apollon 921_0 Hera 515 —— thickets of, in Crete 941_0
Rhegion
Cults: Apollon 680 Artemis Φακελῖτις or Φακελίνη 680
Myth: Orestes 680 848
Rheneia
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος $880_{0(19)}$
Rhipai 495
Rhithymna
Cult: Apollon (Σπυρακίτης?) $492_{0(0)}$
—— coins of $492_{0(0)}$
Rhizenia 934_0
Rhodanus 476
Rhode, in Spain
Cult: axe-bearing god (?) 547_0
—— coins of 547_0
Rhodes
Cults: Althaimenes 923_0 Athena (?) 925_0 Dionysos Σμίνθιος (?) 250 Elektryone (Alektrona) 499 Helios 469 Herakles 469 Hermes Καταιβάτης 14 Hermes Χθόνιος 14 Tlepolemos 469 Zeus 615 Zeus Ἀταβύριος 922_5 923_0 924_0 925_0 Zeus Ἐνδενδρος 946_0
Festival: Tlapolemeia 469
Rites: human sacrifice to Zeus Ἀταβύριος (?) 924_0 statues of Harmodios and Aristogeiton invited to banquet 1172
Myths: Althaimenes 922_5 923_0 Apollon and Dionysos destroy mice 250_2
In relation to 'Minoan' Crete 923_0 —— coins of 253 f. 469_7 924_0 colossus of 254_5
Rhodes, the town
Cults: Agathos Daimon 925_0 Zeus Ἀταβύριος 924_0 925_0
Worshippers: Διοσταβυριασταί 924_0 Διοσταβυριασταὶ Ἀγαθοδαιμονιασταί 925_0
Rhodos, w. of Helios 684_2
Rhoikos 1021
Rhoio, d. of Staphylos
Myth: Kastabos 670
Riqqeh $1145_{1(a)}$
Rit-
Cult: Magrè 1220
Etymology: 1220

Robigus 630
Roma, the personification of Rome
Cults: Miletos 1228 Ouxenton (?) 386_1 Pergamon 1179 1182 Teos 1066
Types: Janiform (?) 386_1 seated 103_0 standing 361_5 1181_0
Associated with Penates Publici Populi Romani 1181_0
Rome
Cults: Aesculapius 1080 1083 1086 Asklepios 1088 1090 Attis 306_5 Attis Menotyrannus (Menoturanus, Minoturanus) 303_2 Attis Menotyrannus Invictus 303_2 Attis Sanctus Menotyrannus 303_2 Diana 400 f. 421 Dius Fidius 724_0ff. Divus Pater Falacer 1226 Falacer (See Divus Pater Falacer) Fontes 369_0 401_0 Fortuna 1195_2 Furrina $808_{0(17)}$ Genius Caeli Montis 400_{11} Genius Iovii Augusti 1194_4 Hecatae 307_0 Hecate 835_6 Herakles/Ἀπόμυιος 783 Hercules 469 783 Hercules Iulianus 400_{11} Ianus Curiatius 364 Iuno Sororia 364 Iupiter 45 46 Iupiter Caelius 400_{11} Iupiter Capitolinus 601 Iupiter Conservator 1195_1 Iupiter Custos 1181_0 (Iupiter) Deus Bronton 835_6 Iupiter Epulo 1172_0 Iupiter Fagutalis 403_0 Iupiter Feretrius 111_0 546_0 601 Iupiter Fulgur 46_0 Iupiter Lapis 546_0 Iupiter Optimus Maximus Caelestinus 369_0 401_0 Iupiter Sanctus Bronton 835_6 836 838 f. Iupiter Stator 46_0 708_5 Iupiter Tonans 111_0 835_6 Iupiter Ultor 1102_8 1103_0 Iupiter Victor 708 Lares Querquetulani 401 Liber 307_0 Magna Mater 969_4 Mater deum 301 f. 306_5 Minerva 369_0 401_0 Mithras 307_0 838 f. Mithras Deus Sol Invictus 835_6 Penates Publici Populi Romani 1181_0 Quirinus 1165_1 Semo Sancus Sanctus Deus Fidius 725_0 spear of Mars 547_2 Theos Ὕψιστος $879_{0(13)}$ tigillum sororium 363 ff. Venus Caelestis 68_2 Vesta 1148_9 1172_4 Victoria 1195_2 (Zeus) Θεὸς Ἐπήκοος Βροντῶν 835_6 836 (Zeus) Θεὸς Μέγας Βροντῶν 835_0 836 Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(17)}$ Zeus Πίστιος (=Dius Fidius) 724_0 Zeus Ὕπατος $876_{0(6)}$
Festivals: Epula Iovis 1172_0 Ludi Plebei 1172_0 Ludi Romani 1172_0
Rite: sacrifice to tigillum sororium 364
Myths: Asklepios arrives as golden snake on shipboard 1083 Horatii and Curiatii 363 f.
—— bronze plaque from 664_1 coins of 105 f. 110_8 331 ff. 336_8 357 f. 360 f. 362 366 ff. 631 ff. 707_0 708 708_5 810 f. 850 f. 903_2 1080 1082 1083 1091 1102_8 1103_0 1126_0 1133_1 1134_0
Rome (cont.)
1171 1194_4 1195_{1-3} 1214 Columna Rostrata at 9 Dianium on Aventine at 400 Dianium on Caeliolus (Mons Querquetulanus) at 400 Dianium on Clivus Virbius at 400 f. Kyklops in folk-tale from 1001 f. Mons Caelius at 400_{11} Mons Querquetulanus at 400_{11} pyramids of $1145_{1(b)}$ Tigillum Sororium at 363 ff.
Romove
Cults: Perkúnas 93 Pikùlas 93 Potrympus 93
—— oak of 92 f.
Romuald, St 135
Romulus
Myths: birth 1059 1089 caught up to heaven 24 dedicates spoils to Iupiter Feretrius 111_0 infancy 1016 nursed by she-wolf 46 443 1016 reigns with Remus 440 reigns with Titus Tatius 441 thrown into Tiber 671 1016
Function: one of the Roman Dioskouroi 1014
Attributes: star 443 f. wolf 46 443
Identified with Quirinus 24
See also Remus
Romulus Silvius 24_4
Roodmas 325_8 326_4
Rosarno, pinax of terra cotta from 1043
Rosmerta
Cult: Gallia Belgica 547_0 (?)
Identified with Maia 94_3
Associated with Mercurius 94_3
Rudra
Cult: India 791
Rugiwit 386
Rural Dionysia 236
Russia
Festival: Feast of the Golden-reindeer-horn 465

Sabaoth $889_{0(6)}$
Epithet: ὑψικέραυνος 1212
Identified with Adonaios 1212
Sabas, St, founder of monastery near Jerusalem 116
Sabas, St, the Gothic martyr 1104_3
Sabas, St, the Greek martyr 1104
Sabazios
Epithets: Ὕας 275_8 Ὑεύς 275_9 Ὕης 275_7
Rites: ἔφυγον κακόν, εὗρον ἄμεινον 1166_1 mysteries 133_0
Function: dreams 283_0
Etymology: 1217
Type: on horseback 283_0
Identified with Dionysos 275_6 Zeus 275_5 1184
—— as link between Zeus and Kyrios Sabaoth $884_{0(6)}$
Sabians 129_2
Sabines 340_3
Saboi
Cult: Dionysos Σάβος or Σαβάζιος 270
Sabus, s. of Sancus 724_0

Sadoth, St 134
Saeculum Aureum 373_2
Sæhrîmnir 214_0
Sagittarius 477_8
Sahîn in Phoinike
Cults: Helios (?) Ἀνίκητος (?) Mithras $886_{0(30)}$ Theos Ὕψιστος Οὐράνιος Ὕπατος $886_{0(30)}$ 983_8
Sahsnot
Cult: Saxons 51
Identified with Ziu 50 f.
Salamis
Cult: Zeus Τροπαῖος 110_0
Myth: Ophis 1087
—— full moon at battle of 854
Salapia, coins of 1159_1
Salia, m. of Salios 338_3
Salii 375 ff. 470
Rites: axamenta 376_1 Iunonii 376_1 Minervii 376_1
—— hymn of 294_0 328 ff. 337
Salios, eponym of Salii 338_3
Salmakis $872_{0(5)}$
Salmoneus
Personates Zeus 24_4 1122
Myths: comes from Thessaly to Elis 825 1088 imitates thunders of Zeus 8 833
Genealogy: s. of Aiolos 1088
Salmoxis (Zalmoxis)
Cult: Getai 227 822 851
Rite: messenger sent once in four years 227
Myth: underground retreat in Thrace 226
Etymology: 227
Identified with Gebeleïzis (Zibeleïzis) 227 822
Salonae
Cults: Ianus Pater Augustus (?) 325 Iupiter Caelestis 69_0 401_0 Iupiter Optimus Maximus Celestis Patronus 401_0
Salus 94_3
See also Hygieia
Samaritans
Cult: summit of Mt Gerizim $888_{0(0)}$
Samarra, spiral tower of 128
Šamaš 49_3 483
Same or Samos in Kephallenia 354_9
Samemroumos 981_1
See also Hypsouranios
Samos
Cults: Apollon Πύθιος 223_3 Dionysos Ἐνόρχης 1021 Zan (?) 354_9
Etymology: 354_9
—— second Heraion at 1230
Samos or Samothrace 354_9
See also Samothrace
Samos in Karia 354_9
Samos (Samia, Samikon) in Triphylia 354_9
Samothrace
Cults: Adamna 295 Bendis 314_0 Demeter 314_0 314_2 Dionysos 314_0
Samothrace (cont.)
Hades 314_0 314_2 Kabeiroi 313 842 Kadmilos 314_0 Kore 314_0 314_2
Samuel 1059
Samus 93
Sanchouniathon 553 715 $886_{0(30)}$ 981_1 984_4 1021 1023 1037 f. 1109_0
Sancus See Dius
Sandas
Cult: Tarsos 560
Attributes: bow-case 571 double axe 571 sword 571
Identified with Herakles 560
—— pyramid of 983_0
Sandon 560 See Sandas
Sangarios, river-god in Galatia 969_4
Sappho 8
Saqqâra $1145_{1(a)}$
Sarapis
Cults: Alexandreia 1158 Mt Argaios (?) 978_0 Athens 985_0 Delos 922_0 Dorylaeion 281 Kaisareia in Kappadokia 978_0 Kanobos (Kanopos) 985_0
Epithet: ἐν Κανώπῳ 985_0
Rite: lectisternium 1171_3
Function: healing 127
Attribute: kálathos 1171_3
Types: bearded god 1128_0(?) bust on couch 1171_3 double bust (with Zeus) 388 (?) holding Mt Argaios 978_0 snake with bearded human head 1128_0 (?)
Identified with Pikos who is also Zeus (?) 695_0 Zeus 714_3 (?) 745_1 773_0 1158
Associated with Isis 1171_3 Zeus Κύνθιος and Isis 922_0
Sarasvatī
Cult: India 774_1
Genealogy: w. of Brahmā 774_1 w. of Vishnu 774_1
Types: in lotos-wreath 774_1 seated on lotos 774_1
Sardanapalos 694_0
Sardeis
Cults: Aphrodite Παφία 424 Artimuk (=Artemis) 1227 f. Artimuk Ibšimsis (=Artemis Ἐφεσία?) 1227 Hūdānś (=Ὑδηνός?) 1227 f. Rλdānś (=Ἀπόλλων?) 1228 Tavśaś (=Zeus?) 1227 f.
—— coins of 424 957_2 formerly called Hyde 1228
Sardinia
Cults: Aesculapius 1086 Sardopator or Sardus Pater 143
—— bronze statuettes from 446_1 805 coins of 143
Sardopator See Sardus Pater
Sardus Pater (Sardopator)
Cult: Sardinia 143
Functions: rain 143 sky 143
Type: in feathered head-dress 143
Sari-Tsam in Lydia
Cults: Hypsistos $881_{0(20)}$ Theos Ὕψιστος $881_{0(20)}$

Sarmatai, 'Jupiter-columns' among 108 tattooed 123_0
Saron, the hunter 413 f.
Cults: Bathykolpos 414_1 Megara (?) 414_1
Function: sea 414_1
In relation to Artemis 413 f.
Saron, the place-name or river-name 414_0
Saronia 413_7
Saronic Gulf 412
Satan
Type: harrowing of Hell 138_0
—— euphemistic names of 1112_7 throne of 955_0
Satrai
Cult: Dionysos 269_1
Saturn, the planet 139
Saturnus
Cult: Carthage 554_3 555_0
Epithets: Augustus 555_0 Augustus Balcaranensis 555_0 Balcaranensis Augustus 555_0 Balcaranensis (Balcaranesis, Balcharanensis, Balkharanensis) 554_3 deus magnus Balcaranensis 555_0 Dominus 555_0 Dominus Balcaranensis Augustus 555_0 Sanctus 555_0
Priest: sacerdos 555_0
Myths: driven out by Iupiter 448_1 941_0 mutilated by Iupiter 448_1
Genealogy: f. of Iupiter 940_0 941_0
Functions: cold 557_1 moisture 557_1 Saturday 70
Attributes: bill-hook 550 555_0 bull's head 70_1 hárpe 70_1 550 845 patera 555_0 sickle 550
Type: bust in pediment 555_0
Identified with Ba'al-hammân 554_3 Ianus 374 Kronos 555_0 Supersedes: Kronos 550
Satyroi
Myths: a satyr caught asleep and brought to Sulla 485_3 Milichus s. of a Satyr by the nymph Myrice 1110_0
Attributes: ass 464 ivy-wreath 388
Types: ἀποσκοπεύων 461_0 dancing 476 double bust (with Dionysos) 388 double bust (with Maenad) 392 double bust (with Zeus) 388 Janiform 388_0 playing sýrinx 165_0 with pointed ears 95
Associated with Dionysos 245_5 246_0 262 f. 265 Maenads 929_0
—— on votive tablet 903_0
Scandinavia, rock-carvings of 687 the Volsung saga of 682 848
Scironian Rocks 895_1
Scorpio (Scorpius) 43_4 477_8 483_2 558_0
Scoti tattooed 123_0
Scythia See Skythia
Scythians See Skythai
Sdan (?) 342_0
Seasons See Horai
Seb 1035
Sebastion at Alexandreia 1180_4
Sebastopolis
Cult: Theos (?) Ὕψιστος $883_{0(26)}$
Sebeda 662
Segesta by euphemism for Egesta (?) 1112_7
Seimia
Cult: Emesa (?) 814_3
Seirios, rising of 949_5
Sekhem, the Great 774_0
Sekhet-Hetep 126
Selagos 1072
Selene
Cults: Gythion 259_0 Pergamon 1185
Myth: Nemean Lion 892_4
Types: bust 1185 bust on couch 1171_3 bust with crescent 664_1 on horseback 261
Associated with Helios 1171_3
—— on vase 777_2
Seleukeia, a later name of Tralleis 958_0 960_0
Seleukeia Pieria
Cults: Demos (?) 1192 Theoi Soteres 869_1 thunderbolt 809 Zeus 1192 Zeus Κάσιος 810_0 (?) 981_1 f. Zeus Κεραύνιος $807_{5(3)}$ 809 Zeus Κορυφαῖος 869_1 983_3 (Zeus) Νικηφόρος (Νεικηφόρος) Κεραύνιος 1225 Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 869_1
Priests: κεραυνοφόροι 809
Myth: eagle guides Seleukos i Nikator to site 981_1 f. 1188
—— coins of 809 f. 850 982_0 f. 1192
Selge
Cults: Herakles $492_{0(0)}$ Zeus $492_{0(0)}$
—— coins of $492_{0(0)}$
Selinous
Cults: Apollon $489_{0(0)}$ Athena $489_{0(0)}$ (Demeter) Μαλοφόρος $489_{0(0)}$ Herakles $489_{0(0)}$ (Kore) Πασικράτεια $489_{0(0)}$ Phobos $489_{0(0)}$ Poseidon $489_{0(0)}$ Tyndaridai $489_{0(0)}$ Zeus $489_{0(0)}$
Selinous in Kilikia, coins of 101_0
Selloi 960_0
Selymbria
Cult: Theos Ἅγιος Ὕψιστος $878_{0(10)}$ 949_4
Sem (Shem) 693_4 694_0
Semea 814_3
Semele
Cults: Synnada (?) 362 f. Thraco-Phrygians 842
Epithets: Θυώνη 251_0 Τη 274
Myths: Brasiai 671 brought up from spring at Lerna by Dionysos 1022 drinks potion containing heart of Zagreus and thereby conceives Dionysos 1031 Iupiter 1031 struck by lightning 24 ff. 1031 Zeus 187_8 189_0 731 ff. (?) 956_2
Genealogy: m. of Dionysos 220
Function: earth 279_3
Etymology: 279_3

Semele (cont.)
Type: carrying Dionysos (?) with goat at her feet 363
Identified with Ge 279_3
Associated with Deos (Dios) 279 f.
In relation to Dionysos 663 Zeus 663
—— ascent of 242 nurse of 1031 picture of 828
Semiramel 666_2
Semiramis
Cult: Emesa (?) 814_3
Identified with Hekate Χθονική (sic) 695_0 Hera Ζυγία 695_0 Nemesis 695_0 Rhea 693_4 694_0 695_0
—— and Stabrobates 7
Semiramis Rhea
Genealogy: w. of Nebrod (Nimrod) Orion Kronos 693_4 694_0 w. of Ninos 693_4 694_0
Semites
Cult: snake 1111_1
Semnai
Cult: Phlyeis 1066
—— as euphemistic title of Erinyes 1112_7 $1113_{0(1)}$
Semnai of Parnassos, the three mantic 19_0
Semo Sancus See Dius
Seneca, portrait-herm of (with Sokrates) 390
Senones
Cult: dicephalous Herakles (?) 445 f.
Sept 126
Serapis See Sarapis
Serdike
Cults: Asklepios 1079 Zeus 744_0
—— coins of 744_0 821 1079
Serea in Phrygia
Cult: Zeus Βροντῶν καὶ Βεννεὺς Σερεανὸς $883_{0(0)}$
Seriphos
Rite: burial of lobster 665_1
Myth: Akrisios slain by Perseus 1155_7
—— idol from 122_0 lobster held sacred in 665
Servius Tullius
Myth: birth 1059 1089
Set, ladder of 126
Sethlans
Etymology: 709_9
Severus, s. of Venicarus 93
Shi-Dugal 483
Sibitti
Associated with Ištar and Sin 545_0
Sicily
Cults: Acheloios 667_3 Kronos 910_0 Palikoi 909_0 Persephone 1040 Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(18)}$ 812 ff.
Myths: burial of Kronos 555_0 burial of Kronos' sickle 448_0 555_0
—— Kyklops in folk-tale from 1000 two sons with apples and daughter with star in folk-tale from 1008 ff.
Siculo-Punic coins 1040
Siderous, harbour in Lykia
Cult: Hephaistos 972_1
Sidon
Cult: Astarte 869_0(?)
—— coins of 869_0
Sidyma
Myth: founded by Sidymos, s. of Tloos by Cheleidon d. of Kragos 971_2
—— speech on mythology and ritual of 455_2
Sidymos, eponym of Sidyma 971_2
Siegfried 447_5
Siggeir 682
Sigmund 682
Signy 682
Sigyn 305_0
Sikanoi
Cult: Tetraotos (?) 322
Sikeloi 795 908_1
Sikyon
Cults: Aphrodite 1165_1 Asklepios 1080 f. 1082 1090 Hypnos Ἐπιδώτης 321_1 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος (= Nero) 97_0 Zeus Μειλίχιος 1144 ff.
Myths: Antiope 1013 Asklepios arrives as snake drawn by mules 1082 Asklepios becomes f. of Aratos by Aristodama (w. of Kleinias) 1082 Demeter discovers poppy 1165_1 Epopeus 1013
—— coins of 1145_0 formerly called Mekone 1165_1
Sikyon, the eponymous hero
Genealogy: s. of Erechtheus 1146 s. of Marathon s. of Epopeus 1146 s. of Metion s. of Erechtheus 1146 s. of Pelops 1146
Silandos
Cult: Theos Ὕψιστος $881_{0(20)}$
Silchester, diminutive bronze axes from 699
Silenoi
Types: kneeling 199_2 with wreaths of ivy and vine 95
Associated with Dionysos 661
Silenos
Cult: Aitne (formerly Katane) 908_1 909_0
Myth: Polyphemos 909_0
Genealogy: f. of Apollon 221 252
Attributes: ass 464 ivy-wreath 388 909_0
Types: double bust (with Apollon) 388 Janiform (archaistic + Hellenistic) 387 vintager 270_3
Sillyon
Cult: Zeus 572_{11}(?)
—— coins of 572 (?)
Sillyos, in Pamphylia 573_0
Silpion, Mt
Cults: fire (πῦρ ἀθάνατον) 1187 Iupiter Capitolinus (?) 1188 Zeus Ἐπικάρπιος 1186 Zeus Καπετώλιος (= Iupiter Capitolinus) (?) 1188_{14} Zeus Κεραύνιος 428 1187 Zeus Νέμειος 1186
Silvanus 64_0
Silvii 417_5

Sima 814_3
Simon Magus
Personates Zeus 726_0
Associated with Helene as Zeus and Athena 726_0
Confused with Semo Sancus 726_0
Sin
Associated with Ištar and Sibitti 545_0
Sinis
Myth: Theseus 627_0 1091
Sinjerli, Hittite relief from 767_0 stèle of Esar-haddon from 769_0
Sinope
Cults: Nemesis 363 Theos Μέγας Ὕψιστος $883_{0(25)}$ Theos Ὕψιστος $883_{0(25)}$ Zeus Σάραπις 1171_3
—— coins of 363 $493_{0(7)}$ 1171_3
Siphnos
Cult: Zeus Ἐπιβήμιος 897_3 1180_4
Sipylene 970_0
Sipylos, Mt
Cults: Meter Πλαστήνη 956_2 Zeus Ὕπατος (?) $876_{0(8)}$ 956_2
Myths: Kouretes 956_2 Pelops 956_2 Tantalos 956_2 Zeus born 956_2 Zeus consorts with Semele 956_2
—— throne of Pelops on 956_2
Sipylos, personification of the mountain 957_0
Sirens 178_1
Siris, town in Lucania
Myth: Herakles and Kalchas $490_{0(0)}$
Sirmium
Cults: Genius huius loci 1194_4 Iupiter Optimus Maximus 1194_4
Siscia, coins struck at 604
Sisyphos
Genealogy: f. of Halmos and Porphyrion 1150_4 s. of Aiolos 1150_4
Sithnides 897_1
Skamandria, coins of 949_5
Skamandros 481_6
Skarphe See Eteonos
Skephros 164_6 455_8
Skepsis
Cult: Zeus Ἰδαῖος (Εἰδαῖος) 951_0
—— coins of 949_5 951_0
Skias in Arkadia (?)
Cult: Apollon Σκιατής 439
Skiathos
Cults: Polis $878_{0(6)}$ Zeus Ὕψιστος $878_{0(6)}$ 922_2
Skiron
Myths: Theseus 627_0 tortoise 895_1
Skirtos 430_1
Skoll 305_0
Skopas 405_3 469 476_3 594 1206
Skopeloi Kronioi 554_2
Skylla 407_0
Skyllis 739
Skythai, deities worshipped by, with their Greek equivalents 292_4 293_0 divination of 635 driven out of Thrace 107_0 underground effigies of the gods called πόποι 293_0
Skythia
Cults: Achilles 'Lord of the Island' (sc. Leuke) 925_0 Aphrodite Οὐρανία 292_4 Apollon 292_4 Ares 292_4 547_3 Athena Λυδία 925_0 Herakles 292_4 Hestia 292_4 iron scimitar 547_3 680 Korakoi (= Philioi Daimones) 1179_1 Papaios $889_{0(0)}$ Philioi Daimones (Orestes and Pylades) 1179 Poseidon 292_4 Zeus Ἀραβύριος 925_0 Zeus Παπαῖος 292_4
Rite: Hyperborean offerings 497
Myth: Erysichthon 684
—— axe-heads from 632_6
Sleipnir 305_0
Slingsby and the Snapping Turtle 1151
Sminthe 250_2
Sminthia 250_2
Smyrna
Cults: Aphrodite Στρατονικίς 729_0 Ares 729_0 (Artemis) Ταυροπόλος 729_0 Athena Ἀρεία 729_0 Ge 729_0 Helios 729_0 Meter Σιπυληνή 729_0 Nemeseis 524 864_0 Zeus 729_0 Zeus Ἀκραῖος 319 $873_{0(8)}$ 962_1 Zeus Πατρῷος 280_1
Festival: Hadrianeia 1121_0
—— bronze medallion from 629 f. coins of 319 $873_{0(8)}$ in folk-tale from Psara 997 f.
Smyrna, old name of Ephesos 962_2
Smyrnaioi, old name of Ephesians 962_2
Soa
Cult: (Zeus) Βεννεύς $883_{0(0)}$
Sokrates and Phaidros 1118 and Strepsiades 2 portrait-herm of (with Platon?) 390 portrait-herm of (with Seneca) 390
Sol
Epithet: Invictus 307_0 1194_4
Function: Sunday 70
Types: colossal 254_5 driving chariot 96 radiate bust 555_0
Identified with Apollo and Liber Pater 256 f. Mithras 307_0 1194_4
Associated with Luna 59_0 98 1050
—— in hymn of Salii (?) $329_{0(1)(3)(5)(6)}$
Solmissos, Mt
Myth: Kouretes aid Leto against Hera 962_2
Solomon sends golden pillar to Souron 424_0
—— temple of 425 ff. $888_{0(0)}$ 1204_0
Solon, oath of, by (Zeus) Ἱκέσιος, Καθάρσιος, and Ἑξακεστήρ 1093_1
Solyma See Solymos, Mt
Solymoi
Cults: Kronos 972_0 Zeus Σολυμεύς 973_1 f.
Solymos, Mt
Cult: Zeus Σολυμεύς 973_1 f.
Solymos, eponym of Solymoi 973_1
Genealogy: s. of Ares by Kaldene d. of Pisias (Pisides?) 973_1 s. of Zeus by Chaldene 973_1 s. of Zeus by Kalchedonia 973_1
Identified with Zeus (?) 974_0

Sophokles, portrait-herm of (with Euripides) 389
Sosias, the potter 1167
Sosipolis
Cult: Elis 1151
Sotades, the potter 346_0 (?)
Soteria 232 f.
Souras (?)
Cult: Nikopolis in Moesia $818_{2(2)}$ 822_{12}
Sousa
Cult: god with bovine horns, axe, and double lightning-fork 769_0
Spain, celts from 509
Spalaxos or Palaxos, the Koures 587
Sparta
Cults: Apollon 246_1 Apollon Ἀκρίτας $487_{3(1)}$ Apollon Ἀμυκλαῖος 255 Apollon Μαλεάτης $487_{3(1)}$ Ares 729_0 Artemis 457 Artemis Λυγοδέσμα 421_5 Artemis Ὀρθία 421 f. 640_0 647 Asklepios 1085 Athena Ἀμβουλία 261_0 Athena Ἀρεία 729_0 Athena Ξενία 1101_3 Athena Ὀπτιλέτις or Ὀπτιλία 502_2 Athena Ὀφθαλμῖτις 502_2 Athena Χαλκίοικος 739_1 Auxesia and Damoia 890_2 Demeter 729_0 Dioskouroi 1062 Dioskouroi Ἀμβούλιοι 261_0 Ge $487_{3(1)}$ 729_0 Helios 729_0 Hera 515 Hestia [Βουλαία] 259_0 Hilaeira and Phoibe 1015_7 Poseidon 729_0 Zeus 729_0 Zeus Ἀγαμέμνων 1061 1069 Zeus Ἀμβούλιος 261_0 Zeus Βουλαῖος 259_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 1096_1 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος (=Antoninus Pius) 98_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος Ἀντωνεῖνος Σωτήρ (=Antoninus Pius) 101_1 343_0 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος καὶ Ὀλύμπιος Ἀντωνεῖνος Σωτήρ (=Antoninus Pius) 101_1 Zeus Ἐπιδώτας 321_1 (Zeus) Ἐπιδώτης (Ἐπιδότης) 321_1 Zeus Ἑρκεῖος 728_0 (Zeus?) Ἱκέσιος 321_1 Zeus Ἱκέτας 1096_1 Zeus Λακεδαίμων 436 Zeus Ξένιος 1101_3 Zeus Οὐράνιος 436 Zeus Ταλετίτας 890_2 948_1 Zeus Τροπαῖος 110_0 Zeus Ὕπατος 739_1 $875_{1(4)}$ 890_3
Festival: Hyakinthia 246_1
Rites: kings sacrifice to Apollon 237_0 octennial probation of kings 440_2
Myths: Astrabakos and Alopekos 421 Dioskouroi 436 ff.
—— idol from 122_0
Spercheios 481_6 486
Spes 862_{10}
Sphinx 407_0 409_0 (?) 718 1082
Sphragitides
Cult: Mt Kithairon 899_0
Spoletium
Cult: Iupiter 803_2
Stabrobates 7
Staphylos 670
Stektorion, coins of 566
Stelai in Crete
Cults: Apollon Πύθιος 731_0 Athena 731_0 Poseidon 731_0 Zeus Δικταῖος 731_0
Stephen, St 924_0
Stepterion 240 242
Sterope, d. of Kepheus 1147_{11}
Sterope, horse of Helios 828 851
Sterope, personification of lightning 828 851
Steropes 784 828 851 1023
Sthenelos 824_5 892_5
Stheno 718
Sthenoboia 1129
Stilbe, d. of Peneios
Genealogy: m. of Kentauros by Apollon 1134 f. m. of Lapithes by Apollon 684_2 1134 f.
Stoics 256 432 852 854 ff.
Straton, the sculptor 1079
Stratonikeia
Cults: Agathos Angelos $880_{0(0)}$ Hekate 714_2 Hekate Ἀδοφόρος 714_3 Theios Angelos $880_{0(0)}$ Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 585_3 (cp. 586_3) Zeus Νάκρασος (?) 714_3 Zeus Παναμαρος 714_3 Zeus Ῥεμβήνοδος (?) 714_3 Zeus Σέραπις (?) 714_3 Zeus Ὕψιστος $879_{0(17)}$ $880_{0(0)}$ 963_9 Zeus Ὕψιστος καὶ Θεῖος $879_{0(17)}$ $880_{0(0)}$ Zeus Χρυσαορεύς or Χρυσαόριος 714 ff. 848
—— coins of 573 714_2
Strepsiades 2
Strongyle 824_7
Struppearia 1171_1
Stymphalos
Cult: Artemis Στυμφαλία 692
Styrakion, Mt $492_{0(0)}$
Sucaelus
Cult: Mogontiacum 620
Attribute: mallet 620
Identified with Iupiter Optimus Maximus 620
Šurdh, St 822
Surtr 305_9
Surus (?) 822 823_0
Sutekh
Cult: Hittites 621 f. 623
Suwasa, in Kappadokia
Cult: Zeus Στράτιος (?) 594 f. 846
Svayambhû 1036
Sybrita
Cults: Apollon Πύθιος 731_0 Athena Πολιοῦχος 731_0 Nymphs 731_0 Zeus Κρηταγενής 731_0
Sykaiboai 130
Sykea
Myth: Sykeas or Sykeus 1103_8
Sykeas or Sykeus 1103_8
Syllion, in Kibyratis 573_9
Symaithos, eponym of the river Symaithos 909_0
Symaithos, the river in Sicily 909_0
Synaos, coins of 566
Synesios, hymn of 307_2
Synnada
Cults: Dionysos (?) 362 f. Dioskouroi 313 Semele (?) 362 f.
Myth: Zeus nursed by Rhea 969_2
—— coins of 313 362 f.

Syracuse
Cults: Artemis Ἀναία 1140$_3$ Hestia 916$_0$ Poseidon 916$_0$ Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 763$_1$ Zeus Ὀλύμπιος 915$_2$ 916$_0$ 917$_0$ Zeus Οὔριος 708 917$_0$ 918$_0$
Rite: contest of rustic singers wearing stag-horns 1140
Priest: ἀμφιπολος of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος as eponymous magistrate 916$_0$ —— celt from 509 coins of 110$_6$ 708 918$_0$
Syria
Cults: Hadran 910$_0$ Keraunios 807$_{3(2)}$ Zeus 745$_1$ Zeus Καταιβάτης 15 f. (Zeus ?) Κεραύνιος 807$_{3(3)}$ Zeus Ὕψιστος 886$_{0(0)}$
—— coins of 761 816$_4$ 1189 f. Sun, Moon, and Morning-Star in folk-tale from 1004 ff.
Syrna 451$_1$
Syros
Cult: Zeus Κτήσιος 1066

Taautos See Thoth
Tabai
Cult: Zeus 743$_7$
—— coins of 743$_7$
Tabala
Cult: youthful hero, radiate, on horse-back bearing double axe 564
Tabiti, the Scythian Hestia 293$_0$
Tabyris See Atabyris
Tachnepsis
Cult: Delos 985$_0$
Tacitus, M. Claudius, statue of, struck by lightning 10
Tages
Genealogy: s. of Genius and gs. of Iupiter 1060
Tainaros, Cape
Cults: Poseidon 890$_5$ Zeus (?) 890$_5$
Tainaros, s. of Zeus 890$_5$
Taleton, Mt 890
Cult: Helios 890$_2$
Rite: sacrifice of horses to Helios 890$_2$
Tallaia range
Cults: Hermes 948$_1$ Zeus Ταλλαῖος (?) 948$_1$
Talos
Cult: Crete 890$_2$ 948$_1$
Myth: nail and vein 645$_0$
Function: sun 890$_2$ 948$_1$
Type: stone-throwing 491$_{0(6)}$
Compared with Zeus 948$_1$
Talthybios
Myths: Agamemnon and Briseis 726 Tegea in Crete 1147$_6$
Tammuz
Cults: Bethlehem 984$_1$ Eridu 483
Associated with Aphrodite (Venus) 984$_1$ Šamaš 483
Compared with Adonis and Zeus 345 Zeus 347
Tan
Cults: Crete 662 Hierapytna 342$_0$ Polyrrhenion 342$_0$ Tan (cont.)
—— tomb of 342$_0$
See also Zeus
Tanagra, vases from 123$_0$
Tanais
Cults: Theos Ὕψιστος 884$_{0(0)}$ 948$_3$ Theos Ὕψιστος Ἐπήκοος 884$_{0(0)}$ Tanit
Cult: Carthage 69$_0$
Identified with Iuno Caelestis 68$_2$ Venus Caelestis 68$_2$
Tantalos
Myths: Ganymedes 953$_2$ golden hound 212$_5$ Pelops 212$_5$ perpetual thirst 134$_1$ Mt Sipylos 956$_2$
Genealogy: f. of Aizen 964$_3$ f. of Pelops 438 957$_0$ s. of Zeus 957$_0$
Taouion See Tauion
Taranis 32
Tarantos in Bithynia
Cult: Zeus Ταραντα῀ος 32$_3$
Taranucnus 32
Taras
Etymology: 31 f.
Tarentum 31
Cults: Apollon 1064 Dioskouroi 1064 Persephone 1141$_0$ pillar 29 45 131 161 166 Venti 464 Zeus 762 ff. 1064 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 763$_1$ Zeus Καταιβάτης 29 ff. 45 131 161 559 845
Festival: Theoxenia 1064
Rite: sacrifice of asses to the Winds 464
—— cake-moulds (?) from 131 802 1064 1215 coins of 763$_1$ 1064 compound seals (?) from 1215 Dioscuric reliefs from 1064 disk from 462$_0$ gold sceptre from 763$_1$ persistence of 'Minoan' cult at 543
Tarentum in the Campus Martius 32
Tarraco (Tarragona), coins struck at 604 painted tablet from 2$_4$ 481$_0$ 1039 1211
Tarragona See Tarraco
Tarsos
Cults: Apollon Ταρσεύς 570 Ba'al-tars 761 f. Herakles (Sandas) 560 845 Sandas (Herakles) 560
Rite: sword of Apollon washed in water from the Kydnos 570 f.
Myths: Herakles 570$_4$ Perseus 570$_4$ Titanes 570$_4$
—— coins of 101$_1$ 550$_3$ 571 761 f.
Tartaros (Tartara) 827$_7$ 1023 1032
Epithet: εὐρώεντα 1028
Tartaros
Genealogy: f. of Typhon by Ge 448$_2$
Tat (= Thoth)
Genealogy: s. of Hermes Τρισμέγιστος 943$_0$
Tauion
Cults: Dioskouroi 1064 Zeus 754$_1$
—— coins of 754$_1$ 789$_0$ 1064
Taurini
Cult: Aeternus 306$_4$
Rite: viribus Aeterni taurobolio 306$_4$

Taurophonia 582
Tauros, Mt 449_0
Taurus, the constellation 103_0 664_1
Tavium See Tauion
Tavśaś (= Zeus?)
Cult: Sardeis 1227 f.
Epithet: Hūdānś (= Τδηνός?) 1227 f.
Taygeton, Mt 890_2
Myth: Lynkeus 437 f.
Tchatal Tepe in Lydia
Cult: Theos Τψιστος $881_{0(20)}$
Tefênet
Cult: Egypt 626_0
Identified with Athena 626_0
Tegea
Cults: Apollon Ἀγυιεύς 163 Athena Ἀλέα 593 f. 1147 Demeter 1140_5 Eileithyia (?) 1148_4 Kore 1140_5 Zeus Κεραυνοβόλος 807 Zeus Κλάριος 807_2 873_2 892_1 1148 f. Zeus Μέγιστος 807_2 Zeus Μελίχιος (= Μειλίχιος) 1147 1149 Zeus Στορπᾶος 815 850 Zeus Τέλειος 1147
Festivals: ἀγῶνες Ὀλυμπιακοί 807_2 of Apollon Ἀγυιεύς 164_6 of Skephros 164_6 455_8
Myths: Aleos 1147 Skephros and Leimon 164_6 Sterope, d. of Kepheus 1147_{11} —— coins of 1147 common hearth of Arcadians at 1148 four tribes at 1148 pyramid-on-pillar as form of deity at 1147 relief from 593 talisman of 1148
Tegea in Crete 1147_6
Tegeates, f. of Skephros 164_6
Teiresias $488_{0(2)}$ $489_{0(4)}$
Tektaios 232_0
Telamon in Etruria, coins of 383
Telauges 1024
Telchines
Myth: work 'in Idaean caves' 933_0
Telegonos
Myth: slays Odysseus 676 923_0
—— a parallel to the story of, from the Torres Straits 676_4
Telephidai (= Pergamenes) 954_0
Telephos
Myths: Achilles 1184_3 Auge 671 Dionysos 1184_3 Odysseus 1184_3 Orestes 1179_6 1183 Pergamon 1179
Genealogy: h. of Astyoche 281_4
Etymology: 1183_3
Telesphoros
Function: procreative power of Asklepios 1089
Etymology: 1229
Types: child 1082 phallós draped as man or boy 1089
Associated with Asklepios 1082 Asklepios and Hygieia 1078
Telete Meizon at Pheneos 1136_4
Tellus
Epithet: stabil(ita) 373_3
Type: reclining beneath vine, while Tellus (cont.)
four Seasons pass over starry globe 373
Tembrogios or Tembrios, river in Phrygia 969_3
Temenothyrai
Cult: Dioskouroi 313
—— coins of 313 566
See also Ak Tash
Temnos
Cult: Zeus Ἀκραῖος $873_{0(9)}$ 956_1
—— coins of $873_{0(9)}$
Tempe 457_{13} 458
Tempestates 94_2
Tempus 862
Tenedos
Cults: Dionysos (?) 658 ff. Dionysos Ἀνθρωτορραίστης 522 662 Dionysos (Ἀμάδιος?) 667 f. double axe 522 Hemithea 670 f. 847 Hera (?) 662 sky-god passing from older (Dionysiac Zeus) to younger (Zeus-like Dionysos) form 663 Tennes (Tenes) 673 847 two axes 668 Zeus (?) 662
Rites: human sacrifice 667 f. sacrifice of bull-calf 522
Myths: Hemithea 669 ff. Tennes (Tenes) 669 ff.
Etymology: 662
—— coins of 654 ff. 668 673 847 double axes of 654 ff. formerly named Leukophrys 669 formerly named Phoinike 662 proverbs Τενέδιος ἄνθρωπος, Τενέδιος ξυνήγορος, Τενέδιος πέλεκυς 668 f. seal-stone from 663 weights of 658
Tenedos, on borders of Lykia and Pamphylia 662
Tenes 662
See also Tennes (Tenes)
Tennes (Tenes)
Cult: Tenedos 673 847
Myths: Achilles 669 f. Tenedos 669 ff.
Function: sky 673
Etymology: 662
Types: handsome statue 673 Janiform head (with Hemithea) 673
Tennes, king of Sidon 662
Tenos
Rite: Hyperborean offerings 497
Teos
Cults: Agathos Daimon 1066 Roma 1066 Zeus Καπετώλιος 1066 Zeus Κτήσιος 1066
Terentum in the Campus Martius 32
Tereus
Myth: pursues Prokne and Philomela 692 f.
Metamorphosed into hoopoe 693
Attributes: shield and lance 693_1 spears 693_1 sword 693_1
Termessos (Termessus Maior)
Cults: Augustus 973_1 Dione 974_0 Theos Ἐπήκοος Ὕψιστος (?) $879_{0(16)}$ Zeus Δωτήρ (?) Ἴδαῖος (?) 321_1 Zeus Ἐλευθέριος 974_0 Zeus Σολυμεύς 973_1 f.

Termessos (Termessus Maior) (cont.)
Zeus Σόλυμος 974_0
Festival: Eleutheria (?) 974_0
—— coins of 973_1 974_0
Terminus
Rite: offerings placed in hole 1090
Function: terminator 1090
Terra
Myth: Palici 909_0
Tesub
Cults: Hittites 766_1 767_0 910_1 list of 910_1
Attributes: axe 767_0 lightning-fork 767_0
Type: standing with axe and lightning-fork 766_1 767_0
Tethys
Myth: nurses Hera 343_0
Genealogy: d. of Ouranos by Ge 1020 m. of Phorkys, Kronos, Rhea, etc. by Okeanos 1020 w. of Okeanos 473
Identified with Isis 481_0
Tetraotos, a god
Cult: Sikanoi (?) 322
See also Apollon Τετράωτος, Zeus Τετράωτος
Tetraotos, a Phoenician freebooter 322_6 323_0
Teukros 472
Teuthras
Genealogy: f. of Thespios 1151 s. of Pandion 1151
Thagimasada See Thamimasadas
Thalamai
Cults: Asklepios 1085 Pasiphaa 31 Zeus Καβάτας 17 f. 31
Thalassa
Cults: Laodikeia on the Lykos 1186 Pergamon 1185
Attributes: crab's-claws 665_3 1185 dolphin 1186 steering-paddle 1185
Types: androgynous 558_0 recumbent 1185 standing 1185 f. with head-dress of crab's-claws 665_3 1185
Thalatth 558_0
Thaleia, d. of Hephaistos
Genealogy: m. of Palikoi by Zeus 909_0
Thales 1021
Thalna 709 f.
Thamimasadas (Thagimasada), the Scythian Poseidon 293_0
Thanatos
Genealogy: b. of Hypnos 317
Type: Eros with crossed legs and torch reversed 309 1045 1166
Thanr 709 f.
Thargelia 237_0
Thasos
Cults: Bendis 314_0 Dionysos 314_0 Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{0(10)}$
—— antefix from 123_0 coins of 388_0 relief from 863_1
Thea Hypsiste
Cult: Gjölde in Lydia $881_{0(20)}$
Theai Megalai See Megalai Theai
Theanor 1024
Thebarma
Cult: fire 34_1
Thebes in Boiotia
Cults: Artemis 412 Demeter Ὁμολῴα 900_1 cp. 901_0 Hektor 961_0 Hera Κιθαιρωνία 899_0 Meilichioi 1154_6 Zeus Ὁμολώιος 900_1 Zeus Ὕψιστος $878_{0(2)}$ 898_3
Festivals: Daphnephoria 455_8 Homoloïa 900_1
Myths: Drakon 1087 Ogygos 824_6 Oidipous 1152
—— coins of 110_7 Ὁμολωίδες πύλαι at 900_1 901_0 904_4 Ὕψισται πύλαι at $878_{0(2)}$
Thebes in Egypt
Cults: Amen 774_0 Zeus Θηβαιεύς 960_0
Rite: παλλακίδες of Zeus Θηβαιεύς 960_0
—— relief from 863_1
Theios Angelos
Cult: Stratouikeia $880_{0(0)}$
See also Agathos Angelos
Thelpousa
Cult: Asklepios 1090
Themele (=Semele) 279_3
Themis
Cult: Delphoi 176_1 500 1216
Epithets: ἀρχέγονος 954_0 Βουλαία 258_3 εὐβουλος 37_1 258_3 εὐκταία 723_0 εὐπλόκαμος θεά 1216 ἱκεσία 873_2 καλή (?) 931_0 ὀρθόβουλος 258_3 ὁρκία 728_0 οὐρανία 37_1 πιυτή 258_3 προφῆτις καρτερόβουλος 954_0
Rite: leap 931_0
Myths: Boucheta 267_5 348_5 consorts with Zeus 37_1 Delphoi 239_0 Deukalion 267_6 348_5 971_0 gives oracle to Kronos 928_0 impregnated by pillar of light (=Apollon) 1217
Genealogy: m. of Horai by Zeus 37_1 94_2
Function: supports orator 893_3
Etymology: 268_1
Types: riding on ox 348_5 seated on tripod 206_1 1217
Identified with Ge 176_1
Associated with Moirai 929_0 Zeus 258 723_0 Zeus and Apollon 730_0 Zeus and Dike 897_3 Zeus and Dionysos 261 f.
Compared with Europe 267_5
In relation to Zeus 873_2
—— a possible doublet of Thetis 268
Themisonion
Cults: Dioskouroi (?) 313 Lyk(abas?) Σώζων 312_5 313_3
—— coins of 312_5 313
Theodaisia $948_{0(4)}$ 1021
Theodoric the Great 1071
Theodoros, sculptor of tabula Iliaca 45_1
Theodotos, St 1186_4
Theognetos, the Thessalian 1024
Theoi Agnostoi See Agnostoi Theoi

Theoi Agrioi
Cult: Mt Kragos 971_2
Identified with Kragos and his kin 971_2 f. Titanes 971_2
Theoi Akraioi
Cult: Mytilene (?) $873_{0(10)}$
Theoi Ktesioi 1068
Theoi Ouranioi
Cult: Melos $808_{0(12)}$
Theoi Skirroi See Theoi Skleroi
Theoi Skleroi
Cult: Lykia 972_0
Theoi Soteres
Cults: Ikonion 970_0 Philadelphia in Lydia 960_0 1229 Seleukeia Pieria 869_1
Theophanes
Personates Zeus 97_0
Theos
Etymology: 234_1
Theos Agnostos See Agnostos Theos
Theos Basileus Eumenes Soter (=Eumenes ii)
Cult: Elaia in Aiolis 960_0
Theos Epekoös See Theos Hypsistos
Epithets Ἐπήκοος
Theos Hagios See Theos Hypsistos
Epithets Ἅγιος
Theos Hypsistos
Cults: Aizanoi $882_{0(23)}$ 968_0 Akmoneia $882_{0(23)}$ 968_1 Alexandreia $889_{0(33)}$ 984_2 Amathous $879_{0(15)}$ 980_3 Arslan Apa in Phrygia $883_{0(0)}$ 969_3 Athribis $889_{0(33)}$ 984_3 Berytos 983_5 Bithynia (?) $883_{0(24)}$ Bosporos Kimmerios $883_{0(27)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ $885_{0(0)}$ Golgoi $879_{0(15)}$ 980_3 Gorgippia $883_{0(27)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ 948_2 Hephaistia in Lemnos $878_{0(7)}$ Hierokaisareia in Lydia $881_{0(20)}$ Ioudaia $888_{0(32)}$ $889_{0(0)}$ Kerdylion $878_{0(9)}$ Kition $879_{0(15)}$ 980_3 Knossos $879_{0(14)}$ Koloe $881_{0(20)}$ Kos $880_{0(18)}$ 964_1 Kyzikos 953_1 Laodikeia on the Lykos $882_{0(23)}$ 968_3 Miletos $879_{0(17)}$ Moesia $878_{0(11)}$ 949_1 Mytilene $882_{0(22)}$ Nakoleia $882_{0(23)}$ 969_1 Oinoanda $879_{0(16)}$ Pergamon $882_{0(0)}$ 956_0 Phata in Lydia $881_{0(20)}$ Philadelphia in Lydia $881_{0(20)}$ Phoinike $886_{0(30)}$ Pirot $878_{0(11)}$ 948_5 Plakia $882_{0(0)}$ Rheneia $880_{0(19)}$ Rome $879_{0(13)}$ Sahin in Phoinike $886_{0(30)}$ 983_8 Sari-Tsam in Lydia $881_{0(20)}$ Sebastopolis (?) $883_{0(26)}$ Selymbria $878_{0(10)}$ 949_4 Silandos $881_{0(20)}$ Sinope $883_{0(25)}$ Tanais $884_{0(0)}$ 948_3 Tchatal Tepe in Lydia $881_{0(20)}$ Termessos (?) $879_{0(16)}$ Thyateira $881_{0(20)}$ Tralleis $880_{0(0)}$ 962_0
Epithets: Ἅγιος $878_{0(10)}$ 949_4 Ἁγιώτατος $879_{0(17)}$ Ἐπήκοος $878_{0(7)}$ $878_{0(11)}$ $879_{0(16)}$ (?) $884_{0(0)}$ 948_5 Εὐλογητός $883_{0(27)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ Ἰάω Ἀδωναΐ $889_{0(0)}$ Κεραύνιος $807_{3(3)}$ $882_{0(22)}$ κύριε ὁ
Theos Hypsistos (cont.)
πάντα ἐφορῶν $880_{0(19)}$ κύριον τῶν πνευμάτων καὶ πάσης σαρκός $880_{0(19)}$ Μέγας $883_{0(25)}$ Οὐράνιος $886_{0(30)}$ Οὐράνιος Ὕπατος 983_8 Παντοκράτωρ $883_{0(27)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ πάντων Ἐπόπτης $889_{0(33)}$ 984_2 Σωτήρ $879_{0(17)}$ Ὕπατος $886_{0(30)}$
Rite: lamp $879_{0(16)}$
Priests: ἱερεύς $879_{0(17)}$ προφήτης $879_{0(17)}$
Worshippers: ἀδελφοί $883_{0(25)}$ θίασοι or σύνοδοι, comprising πρεσβύτεροι and εἰσποιητοὶ ἀδελφοί, under control of ἱερεύς, πατὴρ συνόδου, συναγωγός, φιλάγαθος, παραφιλάγαθος, γυμασιάρχης, νεανισκάρχης, γραμματεύς $885_{0(0)}$
Attribute: eagle $884_{0(0)}$ 889
Identified with Adad or Ramman, the Zeus or Iupiter of Heliopolis $886_{0(30)}$ Adonaï $889_{0(0)}$ Helios $882_{0(0)}$ Iao $889_{0(0)}$ Zeus $882_{0(22)}$ $883_{0(0)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ Zeus Βένιος or Βενεύς 969_3
Superseded by Christ $879_{0(17)}$
—— cult of, propagated by Jews of the Dispersion 889 f. sacred light (φῶς) of $889_{0(0)}$
See also Hypsistos, Zeus Epithets Ὕψιστος
Theos Kataibates 14_3
Theos Megas
Cults: Delos 985_0 Odessos in Thrace 1126_0 Palmyra $885_{0(20)}$
Epithets: Σαλλουντος (? J. H. Mordtmann cj. Ἀμμουδάρῳ: see O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 290) Ἐπουάρης (?) $885_{0(20)}$
Attributes: cornu copiae 1126_0 phiale 1126_0
Theos Zon 1102_8
Theoteknos introduces cult of Zeus Φίλιος at Antiocheia on the Orontes 1186 1196
Theoxenia 243_3 244_2 1064 1136_0 (?) 1170
Thera
Cults: Apollon 920_0 921_0 Melichios (See Zeus Μηλίχιος) Zeus Βροντῶν καὶ Ἀστράπτων 817 (Zeus) Ἱκέσιος 1095_0 Zeus Καταιβάτας 17 Zeus Κτήσιος 1066 Zeus Μηλίχιος τῶν περὶ Πολύξενον 1156_{10} Zeus τῶν περὶ Λάκιον 1156_{10} Zeus τῶν περὶ Ὀλυμπιόδωρον 1156_{10}
—— archaic inscriptions of 1226 votive lions in 920_0 921_0
Therapia 996 998 f.
Therapne
Cult: Dioskouroi 1064
Myth: Dioskouroi 437
Therma(s? -ios?), river-god 408_0
Thermos in Aitolia
Cults: Ge 729_0 Helios 729_0 Zeus 729_0
Theseus
Festivals: Meilichia 1091 f. Oschophoria 1092

Theseus (cont.)
Myths: clears road to Delphoi 628 Damastes 626 f. Phaidra and Hippolytos 1043 Phytalidai 291_2 1091 1103 Prokoptes 626 f. Prokroustes 626 f. Sinis 627_6 1091 Skiron 627_6
Genealogy: f. of Hippolytos 1087 gs. of Pittheus 1091
Attributes: double axe 626 ff. 847 sword 627_6
Type: attacking Centaur 628
Associated with Kodros and Phyleus 1137_2 Peirithoos and Herakles 211_2
Thespia, d. of Asopos 1151_3
Thespiai
Cults: Agathos Daimon (Demon) 1125_1 1161 St Charalambos 1150_9 Daimones 1150_9 Dionysos Σαώτης (?) 599_2 Hera Κιθαιρωνία 899_6 Hermes 1150_9 Miliche 1151 Mousa (Mosa) 238_0 Zeus Κτήσιος 1061 1066 Zeus Μίλιχος 1151 Zeus Σαώτης 599_2 1151
Myth: snake slain by Menestratos 1151
—— apsidal temple of 900_0
Thespios, eponym of Thespiai
Genealogy: s. of Erechtheus 1151 s. of Teuthras s. of Pandion 1151
Thesprotia, caldron of 133_0
Thessalonike
Cults: Hercules Augustus 1194_1 Prinophoros 411_6
—— coins of 411_6
Thessaly
Cults: pillar 166_2 (?) Zeus Κάριος 873_2 Zeus Λαφύστιος 899_1 Zeus Ὁμολώιος 900_1 Zeus Ὕπατος (?) $876_{0(7)}$ Zeus Φύξιος 902_0
Rites: burial within the house 1061 φοιβονομεῖσθαι 500_{12}
Myth: Salmoneus 825 833 1088
—— kings of, personate Zeus 1087 ff.
Thetis
Myths: Mnemon 670 supplicates Zeus 45_1 753_3
Etymology: 268_2
Type: with head-dress of crab's-claws 665_3
Compared with Metis 12
Thibursicum Bure
Cult: Iuno Caelestis 68_2
Thmouis
Cult: he-goat 987_0
Thoas 421_3
Tholathes (?) 558_0
Thor
Cults: Gothia 620 Lapps (?) 423_3 533_2
Rite: erection of beam pierced by iron nail (?) 533_2
Myths: brings to life his goats when cooked in caldron 63_1 213_0 leads Thorolfr Mostrarskegg to Iceland 533_2
Genealogy: f. of Magni 64_0 s. of Hlôðyn 66_0
Thor (cont.)
Functions: fertility 63_1 thunder 547_0
Etymology: 32
Attributes: club 64_0 hammer 547_0 mallet 620 sword 305_0 thistle 775_0
Type: bearded 64_0
Identified with Iupiter 620
—— carved on high-seat pillar 533_2 temple of 533_2
Thorikos
Rite: burial within the house 1060
Thornax, Mt, in Lakonike
Cult: Apollon Θορνάκιος or Πυθαεύς 893_2
Thornax, w. of Iapetos 894_0
Thoth
Epithet: Astennu 700_0
Myth: gives wings etc. to the gods 553
Identified with Hermes Τρισμέγιστος 611
See also Tat
Thoukydides, portrait-herm of (with Herodotos) 389 f.
Thourioi 118_2 119
Thouros
Identified with the planet Ares and Baal or Bel 694_0
Thrace
Cults: Apollon 458 Artemis 411 Artemis Βασίλεια 500 f. Axieros 314 f. Axiokersa 314 f. Axiokersos 314 f. Bendis 303_2 314_0 411 501 Boreas 380 Bousbatos 501_3 Dionysos 269 ff. Dionysos Βάλυ 270 (Dionysos) Ἰαμβαδούλης 820_3 821 851 Dionysos Σαβάζιος 314_0 Dios 277 ff. 288 313 824 842 Dios Νῦσος 313 Erikepaios (Erikapaios) (?) 1025 Kabeiroi 313 ff. Κύριος Θεὸς Προγονικὸς Ζβελσοῦρδος 1225 Κύριος Zeus Ζβελσοῦρδος 1225 rider-god 821 823 Zeus Διόνυσος 282 (Zeus) Ζάλμοξις (?) 230 822 Zeus Ζβελσοῦρδος 817 ff. 833 851 Zeus Ζβελσοῦρδος ὁ Κύριος 1225 (Zeus) Ζιβελεΐζις (?) 822 (Zeus) *Ζιβελσοῦρδος (?) 822
Rite: human omophagy 1022
Myths: Kosingas 130 Salmoxis 226 Tereus 692 f.
—— as link betweeu Germany and Greece 114 coins of 1133_1 (?) kings of 271_0
See also Thracians, Thraco-Phrygians
Thracians tattooed 121 123_0
Thraco-Phrygians
Cults: Dionysos 268 ff. 663 673 Dios 277 ff. 663 842 Dios Νῦσος 842 Erikepaios (Erikapaios) (?) 1025 Father and Son 313 Phanes (?) 1025 Semele 673 842 Zeus 1111
Myth: death and burial of Dionysos at Delphoi 218 ff.
—— prepared to accept Christianity 288

Thrakidai 231 268
Thrasyllos, monument of 245_5
Thrasymedes of Paros 1078 f.
Thronax (Thornax ?), Mt, in Argolis 893_2
Thunders See Brontai
Thunor 32
Thyateira
Cults: Apollon Τύρμνος 562 Theos Ὕψιστος $881_{9(20)}$ Tyrimnos 561 f. Zeus Ἀέριος $808_{9(i)}$ Zeus Κεραύνιος $808_{9(i)}$ Zeus Φίλιος (= Trajan) 1184 f.
—— coins of 561 f. 845 coin of, in alliance with Pergamon 1184 f.
Thyellai
Cult: Bathos 827
Thyestes, a storm-god (?) 1022
Thyestes, f. of Enorches
Myth: 1021
Etymology: 1022
Thyestes, s. of Pelops
Myths: banquet 1021 sceptre of Zeus 547_2 956_2
Etymology: 1022
—— sceptre of 1132_4 1132_6
Thyiad, the principal 242
Thyiads 242
Thymaitis, an Athenian phratry 1229
Thyone 29 279_3 1022
Thyonianus as rebirth of Dionysos (?) 893_9
Tiamat 1038
Type: lion-headed monster (?) 769_0
Tiberis, the river-god
Genealogy: h. of Ilia 1016 s. of Ianus 394_3
Attributes: reed 1083 urn 1083
Type: reclining 1083
Tiber-island
Cults: Aesculapius 1083 1086 Dius Fidius 726_0 Iupiter Iurarius 726_0 Simon Magus 726_0
Tibur
Cult: Hercules 328_3
Tifata, Mt
Cult: Diana 404
Etymology: 404
Tiflis, kántharos found near 1204
Tigillum Sororium See Rome
Tilphossa
Cult: Apollon Τιλφούσιος 439
Time
Attributes: hour-glass 867 f. scythe 867 f.
Types: ancient, medieval, and modern 868_1
Tina (Tinia)
Cult: Etruria 338_3 662
Identified with Iupiter 338_3 Zeus 709
Tinia See Tina
Tiodute (Jodute) 1212
Tiora Matiene
Cult: Mars 1133_1 1230
Titanes
Myths: attack Dionysos or Zagreus 218 f. 251_2 549 1030 f. attack Liber 1031 attack Osiris 1030 flung into Tartaros by Zeus 1032 men made from their ashes 1032 reduced to powder (τίτανος) 1032 smear their faces with gypsum 1030 struck with thunderbolt by Zeus 1031 Sykeas or Sykeus pursued by Zeus 1103_3 Tarsos 570_4 Titanomachia 827_7
Genealogy: sons of Ouranos by Ge 1023 cp. 1103_8
Function: chieftains or kings 971_2
Etymology: 1023
Identified with Theoi Agrioi 971_2
In relation to the Cretan Zeus or Zagreus 352
Tithonos 281_4
Titanes (cont.)
Tiu See Ziu
Tiv
Cult: Etruria 339_0
Function: moon 339_0
Tiw See Ziu
Tlapolemeia 469
Tlepolemos 469
Tloos, eponym of the Lycian town Tlos
Genealogy: f. of Sidymos by Cheleidon d. of Kragos 971_2 s. of Tremilos (Tremiles ?) by the nymph Praxidike, b. of Kragos and Pinalos 971_2
Tmolos, Mt
Cults: Zeus Δεύσιος (?) 957_2 Zeus Κορυφαῖος (See Philadelpheia in Lydia) Zeus Τέτιος 957_2
Myths: birth of Zeus 957_2 1228 Zeus Σαβάζιος brings the babe Dionysos thither 957_2
—— place called Γοναὶ Διὸς Τετίου, later Δεύσιον (? Δευσίου) on 957_2
Tomaris in Lydia
Cult: youthful hero on horseback bearing double axe 563
—— coins of 563
Tomis (Tomoi)
Cult: Iupiter Optimus Maximus Heros $823_{1(i)}$
—— coins of 114_0
Torcello, relief at 865 f.
Tosobis 972_0
Tottes 569_2
Trachis
Myths: Alkyone 1088 Keyx 1088
Traianeia Deiphileia 1180
Traianeum at Pergamon 1179 ff.
Traianopolis in Kilikia, coins of 101_0
Traianopolis in Phrygia, coins of 566
Trajan
Cults: Hermione 1180_4 Pergamon 1179 ff.
Epithet: Optimus 1181_0
Festival: Traianeia Deiphileia 1180
Personates Zeus 100_6 1180 1180_4
—— Arch of, at Beneventum 1181_0
Tralleis 957_3 ff.
Cults: Apollon 958_0 Athena 958_0 Dionysos 960_0 Poseidon 959_0 Theos

Tralleis (cont.)
Ὕψιστος $880_{0(0)}$ 962_0 Zeus 958_0 Zeus Εὐμένης (=Eumenes i) 960_0 Zeus Λαράσιος 958_0 ff. Zeus Λαράσιος Σεβαστὸς Εὐμενής (=Hadrian) 959_0 f.
Festival: Pythia 959_0
Rites: ἀνιπτόποδες 959_0 f. παλλακίδες 959_0 f.
Priests etc.: θεοκόλοι 958_0 ἱεροί 958_0 ἱερομνήμονες 958_0 priest of Zeus Λαράσιος (?) has brick palace 958_0
—— coins of $491_{0(0)}$ 957_3 960_0 961_0 f. jewelry from 638 f. reliefs or frescoes at 961_0
Tralleus, eponymous founder of Tralleis 957_3
Trallioi, a Thracian tribe 957_3
Tranquillina as Tyche of Kaisareia in Kappadokia 978_0
Transfiguration (Aug. 6) 945_0
Trapezous in Arkadia
Cult: Zeus Ἀκραῖος $871_{3(3)}$ 892_2
Tremilos (Tremiles ?), eponym of Tremile (=Lykia) 971_2
Trephon (?) 1074 1076
Trikke
Cults: Apollon Μαλεάτας $487_{3(1)}$ 1088 Asklepios 1079 1088
Myths: Asklepios 833_0 Koronis 833_0
—— coins of 1079 underground ádyton at 1088
Triopas (Triops), f. of Erysichthon 683
Genealogy: s. of Helios by Rhodos 684_2 s. of Lapithes, s. of Apollon by Stilbe, d. of Peneios 684_2 s. of Poseidon by Kanake 684_2
Triopidai 683
Triops See Triopas, f. of Erysichthon
Triphylia
Cult: Hera Ὁπλοσμία 291_0
Tripolis in Lydia See Apollonia (Tripolis)
Triptolemos
Cults: Antiocheia on the Orontes 981_1 Mt Kasion in Syria 981_1
Myth: Ione 1186
Genealogy: s. of Polymnia 1022
Triton
Types: double bust (with Libye) 392 with head-dress of lobster's or crab's claws 665_3
Tritonides 898_6
Tritopatreus as one of the first three Dioskouroi 1135_4
Troïlos 475
Troizen
Cults: Aphrodite Ἀκραία $872_{0(5)}$ Aphrodite Κατασκοπία 944_0 Artemis Σαρωνία 413_7 Artemis Σαρωνὶς 413 ff. Asklepios 1085 Athena Σθενιάς 416_3 Dionysos Σαώτης 599_2 Hermes Πολύγιος 466
Myths: Hippolytos 414 ff. 944_0 Saron 413 f.
—— coins of 416 797 kings of 414
Troizen, s. of Pelops 414_2
Trokmoi 754_1
Tropaeum Traiani 114_0
Trophonios (Trephonios)
Cult: Lebadeia 232_4 899_2 1073 ff.
Rite: incubation 232_4
Myths: sleep at Delphoi 232_4 swallowed by earth 1075
Genealogy: descended from Aiolos 1088
Function: hypostasis of Zeus (?) 1075
Attribute: snake coiled round staff 1075
Identified with a chthonian Hermes 1075 Zeus 1075
Associated with Agamedes 232_4 Zeus Βασιλεύς 1073 f.
Compared with Amphiaraos 1075 Asklepios 1075
In relation to Zeus 900_0
Superseded by St Christopher 1076
Troy
Cults: Apollon 453 Artemis 453 Zeus $8\ 950_0$
Myths: birth of Zeus 951_0 capture 911_0 Ilos founds the city where cow lies down 349 wooden horse 625 —— axe-hammers from 635 f.
Trygaios 909_0
Turin, relief at 861 f.
Tusculum
Cults: Castor 1170 f. Diana 403 Dioskouroi (?) 368_2 Fontus (?) 368_2 Ianus (?) 368_2
Tyana
Cults: Apollon Βοζηνός (?) 570 Zeus Ἀσβαμαῖος 569 Zeus Ὅρκιος (?) 569_4 722_5
Tychai
Cult: Epidauros $487_{3(1)}$
Tyche
Cults: Antiocheia on the Orontes 1196_3 1197 Athens 1163 Edessa 429 f. Kaisareia in Kappadokia 978_0 Magnesia ad Sipylum 729_0 Melos 1136_4 Mylasa $879_{0(17)}$ Nemroud Dagh 1136_4 Panamara $879_{0(17)}$ 1066 Peiraieus 1104 f. Philadelpheia in Lydia 1228
Epithets: Ἀγαθή $879_{0(17)}$ 1104 f. 1163 1229 (See also Agathe Tyche) Νέα 1136_4
Personated by Antiochos i of Kommagene 1136_4 Arsinoe ii 1216 benefactor of Melos 1136_4 Tranquillina 978_0
Attribute: pillar 1136_4
Types: holding infant (Ploutos?) 1136_4 seated with Orontes at her feet 1209_5
Identified with Rhea 675 (?)
Associated with Zeus $879_{0(17)}$ Zeus Ἐπιτέλειος Φίλιος and Philia 1163 —— of Antoninus Pius $879_{0(17)}$ of Seleukos ii Kallinikos 729_0
Tyndareos
Genealogy: f. of Dioskouroi and Helene 918_0

Tyndaridai
Cults: Selinous $489_{0(0)}$ Sparta 436
Myths: buried at Therapne 437 feud with Idas and Lynkeus 437
Genealogy: affiliated to Zeus 918_0
Type: supporters of sky 432
Tyndaris
Cults: Dioskouroi (Tyndaridai) 918_0 Helene (Tyndaris) 918_0 Zeus 917_1 918_0
—— coins of 917_1 918_0
Tynnichos 906_3
Typhoeus 826 839_6
See also Typhon
Typhon
Myths: Arima 826 909_0 crushed by Zeus under Mt Aitne 909_0 cuts out sinews of Zeus 228 448_2 cuts up body of Osiris 1030 fight with Zeus 448_2 722_2 731 826 839_6 Hermes uses his sinews as lyre-strings 450_0 pursued by Zeus to Mt Kasion in Syria 981_1 swallows eye of Horos 450_0 tastes mortal fruit 449_0
Genealogy: s. of Ge by Tartaros 448_2
Functions: chthonian 805_6 warmth 557_1
Attribute: thunderbolt (?) 805_6
Types: three-bodied 805_0 winged 448_2 with serpent-legs 448_2 with two wings and snaky tails 731_1
Identified with Arktos 450_0
Tyr
Myth: Fenrir 450_0
See also Ziu
Tyre
Cults: Herakles 423 f. Zeus 424_0
—— coins of 665_3 1036 f. 1209_5
Tyrimneia 561
Tyrimnos
Cult: Thyateira 561 f. 845
Epithets: ὁ προπάτωρ 561_7 ὁ προπάτωρ θεός 561_8
Festivals: Tyrimneia 561 τῶν μεγάλων Σεβαστῶν Τυριμνήων ἀγώνων 561_9
Priest: ἱερεύς 561_8
Type: youthful rider with double axe 561
Identified with Apollon 561 f. 845 Helios 562 845

Umbria
Cults: Fisos (or Fisovios) Sancios 724_0 Iupater Sancius 724_0
Underworld See Index II
Uni (=Iuno)
Cult: Etruria 338_3
Urbs Salvia
Cults: Iuno(?) 803 Iupiter Iutor 803 ff. Minerva 803 Victoria 803 —— painted tiles from 803 ff.
Ursa Maior 336 928_0 1017_4
Ursa Minor 336 928_0
Usil
Cult: Etruria 339_0
Function: sun 339_0

Vale(h)anos (?) (=Velchanos)
Cult: Golgoi $948_{0(5)}$
See also Velchanos
Van, axe-head from 632_6
Vaphio, incised gem from 621
Varpelev, skýphos from 1204 f.
Vediovis
Identified with Iupiter Iurarius (?) 726_0
Velchania (?) $947_{0(2)}$
Velchanos
Cults: Gortyna (?) $947_{0(2)}$ Hagia Triada $947_{0(1)}$ Phaistos 946_0 947_0
Etymology: 947_0
Identified with Apollon 948_0 Volcanus (?) 947_0 Zeus 946_0 ff.
Venafrum
Cult: Iupiter Caelestis 69_0 401_0
Venasa
Cult: Zeus 616
Venti
Cults: Kaulonia (?) 1042 Lithuania 445_1 Tarentum 464
Epithet: bonarum Tempestatium potentes 94_2
Attributes: cock 445_1 fish 445_1 small cask 445_1
Types: four winged heads 1051 Janiform 445_1
Ventina (sc. Aqua)
Associated with Fons and Vires 306_4
Venus
Cults: Bovianum Undecimanorum 68_2 Jerusalem 984_1 Pola 68_2 Puteoli 68_2 Rome 68_2
Epithets: Caelestis 68_2 Libitina 1165_1 Verticordia 98 f.
Myth: sprung from blood of Saturnus and foam of sea 448_1 cp. 448_0
Function: Friday 70
Attributes: mirror 70_1 scales 98 f. 100 tortoise 68_1 water-mint 1166_0
Types: standing with foot on footstool 67 f. with apple in hand $491_{0(6)}$ with apple, sceptre, star, and child 68_2
Associated with Mercurius 67 Tammuz (Adonis) 984_1
In relation to Frija 67
—— mirror of 609_1 on column of Mayence 96
Venus, the planet, symbol of 608 f.
Verbio (=Virbius) in folk-tale of the Romagnoli 420
Verelde 66_0
Vespera 74
Vesta
Cults: Agedincum 99_3 Lugdunum 99_3 Rome 1148_9 1172_4
Festival: Vestalia 20_0
Rites: feast of roast flesh and wine 1172_4 meal 19_0 perpetual fire of oak-wood 417_5
Priestesses: virgines Vestales 1148_9
Attribute: ass 99_4
Identified with Diana Nemorensis 417_5

Vesta (cont.)
Associated with Mars and Volcanus 99_3 Volcanus 99
—— on column of Mayence 96 99 100
Vestalia 20_0
Vettersfelde, celt from 509 f.
Vettii, frescoes from house of 1047 f.
Vetulonia, 'Tomb of the Lictor' at 1221 'Tomb of the Trident' at 1225
Via Egnatia 495
Viarus, Mt
Cult: Zeus (?) 973_0
—— on coins of Prostanna 972_2 f.
Vichy
Cult: Iupiter Sabasius (=Sabazius) 285_0
—— silver bratteae from 285_0
Victoria
Cults: Divitia 64_0 Rome 1195_2 Urbs Salvia 803
Attributes: palm-branch 99 811_5 wreath 811_5
Types: on globe 1196_0 writing on shield 57_0 (fig. 22, 3*b*)
Associated with Iupiter 1195_2
—— on column of Mayence 96 98 on Iupiter-columns 57_6 59_0 71
Vidharr 305_0
Virae
Epithet: Querquetulanae 402_0
Virbius
Cults: Neapolis in Campania 421 Nemi 392 ff.
Priest: flamen Virbialis 421_1
Myth: Diana 393
Functions: consort of Diana 392 ff. 842 growth 421 f. mythical prototype of rex Nemorensis 399
Etymology: 397_0 398_3 399 399_5 421 f.
Type: Janiform (with Hippolytos) 392 ff. 420 f. 842
In relation to Diana 414 417 842 Irbos (?) 421
Virbius, Clivus, at Rome 400 f. 421
Virbius, river in Lakonike (?) 394_2 421
Vires
Function: testicles personified 306_4
Associated with Deus Magnus Pantheus 306_4 Fons and (Aqua) Ventina 306_4 Lymphae 306_4 Neptunus 306_4 Nymphae 306_4
Virgin, the
Cults: Athens 1119_0 1119_4 Chartres 1213 Mt Gerizim $888_{0(0)}$ Mt Juktas 945_0 Zaragoza 1213
Epithets: ἀειπάρθενος $888_{0(0)}$ del Pilar 1213 du Pilier 1213 ἡ ὑπεραγία Θεοτόκος 1119_4 Θεοτόκος $888_{0(0)}$ 1150_{10} Παναγία 891_0 945_0 Παναγία εἰς τὴν Πέτραν 1119_0
Festival: Aug. 15 891_0
Supersedes Charites 1150_{10}
Virgins, the Seven, of Ankyra 1186_4
Virgo
Epithets: spicifera, iusti inventrix, urbium conditrix, ...lance vitam et iura pensitans 734_3
Identified with Mater divum, Pax, Virtus, Ceres, dea Syria 734_3 Virtus
Type: with banner 99
Identified with Virgo 734_3
—— on column of Mayence 96 100
Virvinus, spring in Lakonike (?) 394_2
Vishnu
Cults: India 367 774_1
Myths: Brahmā 774_1 in bubble as Brahma 1036 Paraśu-rāma 660_1 Rāma-ćandra 660_1
Genealogy: h. of Lakshmī 774_1 h. of Sarasvatī 774_1
Function: solar (?) 774_1
Attribute: lotos 367 774_1
Types: four-handed 774_1 seated beneath starry arch 367
—— sixth incarnation of 660_1 seventh incarnation of 660_1
Vitellia, goddess 404_0
Vitellia, town in Latium 404_0
Vitellii 404_0
Volaterrae
Cults: Hermes (?) 383 Ianus (?) 383
—— coins of 382 f.
Volcanus
Cults: Agedincum 99_3 Gallia Lugudunensis 547_0 619 Lugdunum 99_3
Genealogy: f. of Palicus by Aetna 909_0
Function: elemental fire 100
Etymology: 947_0
Identified with Donar 63_1 Velchanos (?) 947_0
Associated with Esus and Iovis 619 Mars and Vesta 99_3 Vesta 99
—— on column of Mayence 96 100 on Jupiter-columns 57_6 59_0 smithy of 784
Volsung 682
Vulci, tomb-painting at 641
Vulturnus 368_3

Weaving Damsel 66_0
Wind-gods See Venti
Winds See Anemoi
Wodan
Rite: sacrifice at beginning of summer 62_1
Myth: contest with Fenris-wolf 62_1
Functions: leader of Wild Hunt or Furious Host 62_1 sky-god 62_1
Attributes: chariot or coach 62_1 gold helmet 62_1 gold ring 62_1 990 throne 62_1
Type: one-eyed 62_1
Identified with Mercurius 59 63_0 69 94_1 386_6
In relation to Ziu 62_1
Woodchester, statuette from 98_3 1214

Xenioi Theoi 1177_2

Xenokles, the potter 785 789_0
Xenokrateia, dedication of 182 ff. (pl. x)
Xenokrates 222
Xenophilos, the sculptor 1079
Xerxes
Personates Zeus 853_4

Yahwe See Jehovah
Yggdrasil 305_0
Yorkshire, Kyklops in folk-tale from 1002 f.

Zagreus
Cults: Crete 352 667 Hagia Triada (?) 522 Mt Ide in Crete 838 934_0 938_0 Mt Zagros (?) 980_5
Rites: 932_1 devoured by Thracian kings 271_0 667 omophagy 934_0 thunder-making 934_0 cp. 838 f. 852 torches carried over mountain 934_0
Worshippers: Bakchoi 934_0 Kouretes 934_0
Personated by Cretan prince (?) 522 Kouretes 549
Myths: 1030 ff. attacked by Titans 549 1030 f. guarded by Apollon and Kouretes 1030 his heart placed in gypsum image by Zeus 1031 his heart rescued by Athena 1031 his limbs arranged by Apollon 1031 nursed by Nymphs 1030 put together again by Rhea 1032 reborn as Dionysos 1031 resurrection 1032 sits on throne of Zeus 838 1030 slain in bovine form 1030
Metamorphosed into Zeus, Kronos, babe, youth, lion, horse, horned snake, tiger, bull 1030 cp. 861_5
Genealogy: s. of Zeus by Phersephone or Kore 1029
Function: annual rebirth of Zeus 934_0 938_0
Etymology: 268_4
Types: Assyrian 697_0 horned babe 1029
Identified with Dionysos 234 1029
Associated with Zeus $1113_{0(2)}$ (?)
Compared with Zeus Βροντῶν 852
In relation to Titans 352 Zeus 522 980_5
—— derived from Mesopotamia (Mt Zagros) 938_0 reaches Crete by same route as Aigokeros 938_0 toys of 1030
Zagros, Mt
Cult: Zagreus (?) 980_5
Zakynthos, Gigantes in folk-tale from 505 f. golden crab in folk-tale from 666_3 Kyklops in folk-tale from 994 f.
Zalmoxis See Salmoxis
Zalmoxis See Salmoxis
Zamama 938_0
Zamis, b. of Rhea 694_0
Zan 344_0 353 f.
Cults: Crete 344 f. Mt Ide in Crete 934_0 942_0 Olympia 349 Samos (?) 354_9
Zan (cont.)
Epithet: Μέγας 341_5 344 f. 842
Rite: eaten annually by his worshippers in form of a divine bull 354
Myth: buried in Crete 345
Genealogy: f. of Minos by Europe 344 s. of Kronos 940_0
Functions: an older Zeus 340 ff. sky 353 f. 842 thunder 341_0 344
Type: Ζᾶνες at Olympia 343_0 349 354
Identified with Great Ox 354 Ian 341 344 353 Zeus 220_6 341_6 342_0 345 942_0
In relation to Ianus (Ian) 842 Zeus 353
Superseded by Pan (?) 347 ff. Zeus 349 f. 842
Survives as Zanos (Ζάνος) in modern Crete 353 —— in the plural (Ζάνες) 343_0 349 354 tomb of 341_6 354 934_0 tower of 178 354 watch-tower of 354
See also Zeus
Zanes, consecrated men despatched to the gods 343_0
Zanes, plural of Zan 343_0 349 354
See also Zan, Zeus
Zanides, Roman empresses (?) so called 343_0
Zankle
Cult: Poseidon 794 f. 850
Myth: called Δρέπανον after δρέπανον of Kronos 448_0
—— coin of 794 f. 850
See also Messana
Zanos 353
Zaragoza
Cult: Our Lady del Pilar 1213
Zas 344_0 351 f. 353
See also Zeus
Zbelsourdos
Etymology: 822 ff. 824_1 851
See also Zeus Epithets Ζβελσούρδος
Zelos 1029
Zemela See Semele
Zen 259_0 293_0 341 344_0 582_4 855_2 See also Zeus
Zenoposeidon
Cults: Corinth (?) $878_{0(3)}$ Mylasa 582 663 846 963_7
Festival: Taurophonia (?) 582
Priest: νεωκόρος 582
Zephyros
Cult: Kaulonia (?) 1042
Myth: Kyparissos 981_1
Type: horse 830_7
Zes 344_0 352_1 See also Zeus
Zeter See Zioter
Zetes
Genealogy: s. of Boreas by Oreithyia, d. of Erechtheus 444
Etymology: 444
In relation to Zethos 445
Zethos
Cult: Antiocheia on the Orontes 428

Zethos (cont.)
Myths: Dirke 1013 1015 1019 Lykos 1019_2
Genealogy: b. of Amphion 317 s. of Zeus by Antiope 1013 s. of Zeus or Epopeus 445
Functions: herdsman 1013 one of the Theban Dioskouroi 1014
Etymology: 445_2
Type: on column 428
In relation to Zetes 445
Zeus
Cults: Abédat in Phoinike $886_{0(30)}$ 983_4 Achaeans 458 Adrianoi in Mysia 127 Aeolians 901_0 Agra 1142_3 (?) Agrigentum 911_0 ff. 1227 Aigai in Aiolis 259_0 Aigai in Makedonia $878_{0(9)}$ 906_2 Aigina 894_3 895_0 895_1 Aigion 742 f. 749 826_6 Ainianes 869_0 Mt Ainos 907_2 Mt Aitne 908_1 909_0 910_0 Aitne (formerly Katane) 908_1 909_0 Aixone 730_0 Aizanoi $882_{0(23)}$ (?) 965_0 ff. Akarnania 743_7 1226 Akmoneia 312_5 Akrai in Sicily 915_1 Akraiphia 97_0 1074 Alaisa (Halaesa) 1158_8 Alban Mt $808_{0(16)}$ Alexandreia 1158 1187_0 Alopeke 1115 Altyntash in Phrygia $883_{0(0)}$ Mt Alysis (?) 945_1 Amaseia 975_0 f. Amastris 707 848 918_0 1067 Amathous 598 f. 869_0 Ambrakia 1222 Amorgos 258_3 Anaphe 1066 Anazarbos 980_1 Mt Anchesmos 897_4 Anchialos in Thrace $878_{0(10)}$ 949_2 Andros 1156 Ankyra in Galatia 754_1 835_5 971_1 Antandros 815 Antigoneia on the Orontes 1188 Antiocheia in Chrysaoris (=Alabanda) 714_2 Antiocheia on the Maiandros 259_0 Antiocheia on the Orontes 428 1178 1186 ff. 1188_{14} 1196 f. Apameia on the Orontes 1192 Mt Apesas 892_4 Aphrodisias in Karia 585_3 1220 Arabia (?) 1224 Mt Arachnaion 894_1 Mt Arbios 945_2 946_0 Ardettos 1135 Mt Argaios 980_0 Mt Argarizon (See Mt Gerizim) Argos 164_5 164_6 179 $808_{0(14)}$ 874_2 $878_{0(4)}$ 892_5 893_0 893_1 1099_0 1143 f. 1143_5 1144_2 1230 Arkadia 760 f. 793 849 Arkesine 1156 1156_{13} 1157_0 Arslan Apa in Phrygia (?) $883_{0(0)}$ Assos 728_0 857_6 Mt Atabyrion in Rhodes 922_5 923_0 924_0 925_0 Mt Atabyrion in Sicily 910_1 Athens 20 f. 97_0 98_0 111_0 231_8 259_0 729_0 730_0 793 815 $875_{1(2)}$ $876_{1(1)}$ 897_2 897_3 903_0 976_0 985_0 1061 (?) 1065 1078 1091 f. 1100_1 1103 f. 1114 ff. 1121 ff. 1135_4 1147 1149 1151 1161 ff. 1169 1229 Mt Athos 906_1 Attaleia in Pamphylia 111_0 Attike 291_2 1069 (?) Attouda 743_7 Axos 816_4 Babylon 128_4 675 714_1 Bejad in Phrygia 292_4 Beuyuk Evlia near Amaseia 974_1 ff. Bithynia 271_0 292_4 815 835_5 1180_4 Blaudos in Mysia 284_0 Boiotia 238_0 731_0 873_2 $875_{1(1)}$ 900_1 Bosporos 707 Bosporos Kimmerios 729_0 Böttia on the Orontes 1187_4 Bouthroton (Bouthrotos) 348 Bruttii 709 Bunarhashi in Phrygia 835_4 Byblos $887_{0(0)}$ 983_6 Celts (See Keltoi) Chaironeia (sceptre of Zeus) 547_2 Chalkis 1098_7 Chalkis in Euboia 1157 Chalkis sub Libano 981_0 Chersonesos Taurike 729_0 Chios 922_4 1157_1 Corinth 869_1 $878_{0(3)}$ 892_3 916_0 Crete 230 344 f. 352 354 599 697_0 727 743_7 925 ff. 1169_5 1187_4 (?) Damaskos $807_{5(2)}$ $886_{0(0)}$ Daphne, near Antiocheia on the Orontes 1191 Delos 259_0 907_0 (?) 919_0 920_2 921_0 922_0 985_0 1095_0 1096_0 1105 1217 Delphoi 179 f. 231 ff. 244 816 841 901_2 902_0 Demotionidai 728_0 Denderah 97_0 Didyma near Miletos 317 317_2 318_0 Mt Dikte 927_1 928_0 929_0 Diokaisareia in Kilikia (?) 810 Dion in Makedonia 1111 Dionysopolis in Phrygia 285 Divlit near Koloë 975_0 Dodona 214 350 350_6 353 693_3 763_1 826 855_2 960_0 Doliche 745_1 Dorylaeion 280 f. 280_1 292_4 835_4 836 Dreros 948_1 Mt Drios 918_1 Ebimi near Amaseia 976_0 Egypt 1023 Elaia in Aiolis 955_0 Mt Elakataion in Thessaly 397_0 Elasson in Thessaly $808_{0(13)}$ Elis 728_0 783 Ematbia, hill at Antiocheia on the Orontes 1187_7 f. Ephesos 728_0 743_7 962_2 Epidauros 894_2 1061 1066 1076 f. 1144_3 (?) 1157_0 1177 f. Eresos 729_0 Eretria 901_0 Erythrai in Ionia 730_0 1157_0 Essir-keui in Bithynia 835_5 Eumeneia in Phrygia 970_0 Euromos 572_7 573_4 574 f. 589_6 (?) 1220 Galaria or Galarina 1131_1 Galatia 835_5 Mt Gargaron (Gargara) 950_0 ff. Gaza 675 1187_0 Genetaean headland 616 f. 1097_0 Cape Geraistos (?) 903 Mt Gerizim $887_{0(30)}$ $888_{0(0)}$ 983_3 Ghel-Ghiraz near Amaseia 976_0 Golgoi (?) $948_{0(5)}$ Gomphoi $871_{3(2)}$ 1099_0 Gortyna 723_0 731_0 $947_{0(2)}$ (?) Graeco-Libyans 1111 Gümbet in Phrygia 835_4 Günjarik in Phrygia 835_4 Gythion 31 259_0 Hagia Triada $947_{0(1)}$ Halikarnassos 585_3 $872_{0(5)}$ 963_3 1228 Halos 904_1 1226 Heleia 930_0 931_0 932_0 Mt Helikon 898_5 Hephaistia in Lemnos $878_{0(7)}$ (?) Herakleia ad Latmum 585_3 Herakleia Pontike 976_0 Hermione 100_6 1061 1077 Hierapolis in Phrygia 570 571_6 Hierapytna 342_0 723_0 929_0 cp. 930_0 1157_4 Mt Homole (Homolos) (?) 904_4 Homolion 1227 Mt Homoloïon near Thebes in Boiotia (?) 900_1 Hydisos 705 f. Mt Hymettos 873_1 897_5 1226 Mt Hynnarion 987_1 Mt Hypatos $875_{1(1)}$ 898_2 Iasos $879_{0(17)}$ 963_5 Mt Ide in Crete 549 838 932_1 ff. 941_0 980_5 Mt Ide in Phrygia 855_2 950_0 ff. Iki kilisse in Galatia 835_5 Ilion 950_0 f. Imbros $878_{0(8)}$ 922_1 Inessa (?) 908_1 Inhissar in Phrygia 835_4 Inönü in Phrygia 249_2 835_4 836 ff. 1226 Ione 1186 f. Itanos 929_0 cp. 930_0 1130_7 Mt Ithome 741 ff. 890_6 1222 Jerusalem 984_1 Kalaureia 728_0 Kalchedon 259_0 Kalymna $808_{0(11)}$ Mt Kamares (?) 935_0 Kanai (Kane) 902_2 Kappadokia 594_8 595_0 616 Karia 559 f. 572 ff. 705 729_0 745_1 763_1 Karien near Mt Pangaion 1066 Karousa 1092_8 Mt Kasion in Egypt 907_0 984_4 f. Mt Kasion in Syria 907_0 981_1 ff. 1191 f. Kassiope 906_3 907_0 Katane (See Aitne) Keltoi 111_0 570_0 Mt Kenaion 902_2 Kephallenia 907_2 Keramos 599_2 Kerdylion $878_{0(0)}$ (?) 906_2 Kibyra 771 Kierion 743_7 Kilikia 380 Kios 815_5 Mt Kithairon 581 898_6 Kition in Kypros $807_{3(1)}$ (?) $807_{5(4)}$ Klaros 873_2 Knidos 729_0 1157 Knossos (?) $948_{0(3)}$ Mt Kokkygion 893_2 Koloë in Lydia 285_0 1067 Kolonos 1152_5 (?) 1154 f. Korkyra 675 f. 730_0 $879_{0(12)}$ 907_1 Kos 238_0 1095_0 Kotiaeion 835_4 Koujounlou in Bithynia 835_5 Mt Kounados 918_2 Krannon 833 Kurshumlu in Phrygia 839 Kurtköi in Phrygia 835_4 Kyaneai 101_1 Kymak in Phrygia 835_4 Mt Kynthos 919_0 920_0 921_0 922_0 Kypros 444_7 599_2 (?) 874_2 1099_0 1102_8 Kyrene 259_0 1177_8 Kyrrhos 15 f. 745_1 983_1 Kys 97_0 Kyzikos 743_7 833 ff. 852 $881_{0(21)}$ $882_{0(0)}$ 953_1 Labranda 576 f. 585 ff. 594 597 713 722 976_0 Lagina $879_{0(17)}$ 963_8 Laodikeia Katakekaumene 817 Laodikeia on the Lykos 319 f. 319_7 745_1 1186 Laodikeia on the sea 1192 Lapersai 1069 Mt Laphystion in Boiotia 899_1 Larisa at Argos 892_5 893_0 Larisa on Mt Messogis 957_3 ff. Larissa in Thessaly 1155 f. Lebadeia 233_0 899_2 900_0 1061 1073 ff. Leuktron or Leuktra in Lakonike 891_0 Mt Libanos 983_7 Lindos 923_0 925_0 Lucania 709 Lydia 312_5 577 $807_{5(0)}$ $872_{0(5)}$ 1228 Mt Lykaion 423 761 891_3 Lykaonia 835_5 Lykia 972_0 Lykoreia 901_2 Mt Lykoreion 901_2 902_0 Lyttos 723_0 934_0 $948_{0(4)}$ (?) Magnesia ad Maeandrum $873_{0(7)}$ 963_1 Magnesia ad Sipylum 729_0 957_0 Magnesia in Thessaly 730_0 $871_{3(1)}$ Maionia 745_1 Makedonia $878_{0(0)}$ Cape Malea (Maleai) $488_{0(0)}$ 890_4 Mantineia 12 f. 259_0 321_1 807 Marathon $875_{1(3)}$ 898_1 Mastaura 587 Megalopolis 1178 f. 1183 Megara 179 257_4 895_1 896_0 897_0 1138_5 1139_0 Melos 16 f. $808_{0(12)}$ Messene 728_0 741 ff. 1223 Methydrion 290_0 Miletos 317_2 $879_{0(17)}$ 962_0 963_2 1228 Mopsion (?) in Pelasgiotis 496_0 mountains 868 ff. Mykonos 258_3 1105 Mylasa 559_6 574 576 ff. 663 $879_{0(17)}$ 963_7 1220 Myndos $872_{0(6)}$ 963_2 Myrmidones 894_3 Myrrhinous 730_0 Mysia 577 Mytilene 97_0 259_0 $873_{0(10)}$ (?) $882_{0(22)}$ 922_3 Naïssos 875_0 948_4 (?) Nakoleia 292_4 570 835_4 836_2 836_3 Nauplia 32 Naxos 918_1 Neapolis in Karia 260_0 Neaule (= Nea Aule) 285_0 Nemroud Dagh 980_6 Netteia 925_0 1096_0 (?) Nicopolis on the Danube $808_{0(9)}$ Nikaia in Bithynia 815_5 918, 1099_2 1100_0 Nisyros 1157_3 Mt Oche 902_1 Ogur (Oguz) in Galatia 835_5 Mt Oite 903_2 Olenos in Aitolia 933_0 Olous 948_1 Olympia 21 231_8 349 706 722 726 f. 757 ff. 758_0 761 783 $808_{0(15)}$ 849 $878_{0(5)}$ 891_2 916_0 947_0 955_0 1078 1100_1 1222 1224 Mt Olympos in Elis (?) 891_1 Olympos in Lykia 972_1 Mt Olympos in Makedonia 904_6 1227 Mt Olympos in Mysia 953_2 Orchomenos in Boiotia 873_2 898_4 1149 1150 1151 Ormelle 1067 Oropos 232 1061 1070 ff. Mt Ossa (?) 904_3 Palmyra $807_{5(1)}$ $885_{0(29)}$ $886_{0(0)}$ 983_2 Panamara 587 $879_{0(17)}$ 963_8 1066 Panionion 259_0 Panormos near Kyzikos $881_{0(21)}$ $882_{0(0)}$ Mt Pantokrator (?) 907_0 Paphlagonia 729_0 Mt Parnassos 901_2 902_0 Mt Parnes 4 873_1 897_6 898_0 Paros 19 f. 131 259_0 $875_{1(5)}$ 918_2 Passaron 706 Patara 921_0 Pautalia 743_7 Peiraieus 585_3 1065 f. 1104 ff. 1117 1142 1173 ff. Mt Pelinnaion 922_4 Mt Pelion 869_2 870_0 871_0 $871_{3(1)}$ 904_2 Pella in Makedonia 1187_4 Pelousion 985_1 ff. Pergamon 110_9 259_0 287 287_2 729_0 $808_{0(8)}$ $882_{0(0)}$ (?) 954_0 ff. 1061 1067 1077 f. 1178 1179 ff. 1184 Perinthos 773_0 874_1 949_3 Persia 33 Petelia 708 f. Phaistos 946_0 947_0 Phaselis 729_0 Philadelpheia in Lydia 285_0 869_1 957_1 960_0 1217 f. 1228 f. Philai 97_0 Philous 1106 f. Phlyeis 1066 Phoinike 868_8 Phokis 731_0 Phrygia 282 ff. 292_4 295_2 322 569 $807_{5(5)}$ 835 ff. 842 852 $883_{0(0)}$ 964 ff. Mt Pindos $871_{3(2)}$ 904_5 Pisidia 287 Plarasa 573 Plataiai 238_0 763_1 Pontos 974_1 ff. Praisos 731_0 $871_{3(4)}$ 930_0 Priansos 723_0 934_0 Priene $808_{0(7)}$ Pronnoi 907_2 Prostanna

Zeus (cont.)

Zeus (cont.)

Zeus (cont.)
973_0 Prousa ad Olympum 292_4 964_2 Prymnessos 835_4 Rhodes 615 922_5 923_0 924_0 925_0 946_0 Rhodes the town 924_0 925_0 Rome 724_0 $808_{0(17)}$ 835_6 $876_{0(6)}$ Salamis 110_9 Sardeis 1227 f. Seleukeia Pieria $807_{5(3)}$ 809 869_1 981_1 f. 983_3 1192 1225 Selge $492_{0(0)}$ Selinous $489_{0(0)}$ Selymbria $878_{0(10)}$ (?) Serdike 744_0 Serea in Phrygia $883_{0(0)}$ Sicily $808_{0(18)}$ 812 ff. Sikyon 97_0 1144 ff. Sillyon 572_{11} (?) Mt Silpion 1186 f. 1188_{14} (?) Sinope 1171_3 Siphnos 897_3 1180_4 Mt Sipylos $876_{0(8)}$ 956_2 (?) Skepsis 951_0 Skiathos $878_{0(0)}$ 922_2 Skythia 292_4 925_0 Smyrna 280_1 319 729_0 $873_{0(8)}$ 962_1 Mt Solymos 973_1 f. Sparta 98_0 110_9 259_0 261_0 321_1 436 728_0 729_0 739_1 $875_{1(4)}$ 890_2 890_3 948_1 1061 1069 1096_1 1101_3 Stelai in Crete 731_0 Stratonikeia 585_3 (cp. 586_3) 714 ff. 714_3 963_9 Suwassa in Kappadokia 594 f. Sybrita 731_0 Syracuse 708 763_1 915_2 916_0 917_0 918_0 Syria 745_1 $807_{3(2)}$ (?) $886_{0(0)}$ Syros 1066 Tabai 743_7 Cape Tainaros (?) 890_5 Tallaia range (?) 948_1 Tarantos in Bithynia 32_3 Tarentum 29 ff. 45 131 161 559 762 ff. 763_1 1064 Tavium 754_1 Tegea 807 815 850 873_3 892_1 1147 ff. Temnos $873_{0(9)}$ 956_1 Tenedos (?) 662 Teos 1066 Termessos (Termessus Maior) 321_1 973_1 f. the tetrapolis of Marathon (See Marathon) Thalamai 17 f. 31 Thasos $808_{0(10)}$ Thebes in Boiotia $878_{0(2)}$ 898_3 900_1 Thebes in Egypt 960_0 Thera 17 817 1066 1095_0 1156 Thermos in Aitolia 729_0 Thespiai 599_2 1061 1066 1151 Thessaly 873_2 $876_{0(7)}$ (?) 899_1 900_1 902_0 Thrace 230 (?) 282 817 ff. 833 851 1225 Thraco-Phrygians 1111 Thyateira $808_{9(0)}$ 1184 f. Mt Tmolos 957_2 Tralleis 958_0 ff. Trapezous in Arkadia $871_{3(3)}$ 892_2, Troy 8 950_0 Tyana 569 722_5 Tyndaris 917_1 918_0 Tyre 424_0 Venasa 616 Mt Viarus (?) 973_0

Epithets: 'Αβοζηνός 570 'Αγαμέμνων 1061 1069 f. 1112 'Αγαμήδης (?) 233_0 1075 "Αγιος 1092_8 ἀγκυλομήτης 549_7 ἀγνός 1122_9 'Αγοραῖος 51_1 260_0 929_0 1177_2 'Αγυιεύς 165 'Αγχέσμιος 897_4 'Αέριος $808_{9(0)}$ 'Αθῷος 906_1 αἰγίοχος 830_7 Αἰθέριος $727_{3(3)}$ Αἰνήσιος 907_2 Αἰτναῖος 908_1 909_0 ἀκαμάτου πυρὸς ὁρμή 1027 ἀκοντιστὴρ κεραυνοῦ 705_3 'Ακραῖος 319 730_0 869 871_8 872_0 873_0 892_2 904_2 904_5 915_1 922_3 956_1 962_1 963_1 963_8 963_4 ἀκρολοφίτας (See also Λοφείτης, 'Επιλόφιος) 343_0 'Ακταῖος 869 904_2 ἀλάστορος 1098 ἀλάστωρ 1098 1101 'Αλδήμιος or "Αλδος 675

Zeus (cont.)
1187_0 ἀληθὴς Ζεὺς ὁ κεράστης (= Pan) 1023 "Αλσειος (?) 945_1 'Αλύσιος (?) 945_1 'Αμβούλιος 261_0 ἄμβροτος (ἀφθιτος) νύμφη 1027 f. "Αμμων 388 986_0 1136_4 'Αμφιάραος 232 794 1061 1070 ff. 1076 1112 ἀμφιθαλής 1072 ἀναδωδωναῖος (sic) 855_2 'Αναδώτης 321_1 1157_0 ἀναξ 855_2 950_0 956_2 960_0 ἄναξ ἀνάκτων 337_4 'Απεσάντιος 892_4 'Απέσας 892_4 'Απήμιος 897_6 898_0 'Απόμυιος 781 ff. 850 'Αποτρόπαιος 1157_0 ἀποτρόπαιος 1099_1 "Αρβιος 945_2 946_0 'Αργαῖος (?) 980_0 ἀργής 980_0 ἀργικέραυνος 806_8 858 1027 f. "Αρειος 705 ff., 848 ἀριστοτέχνης 693_2 "Αρνειος 918_1 "Αρσηλις (?) 559_6 ἄρσην 1027 f. ἀρχή 1033_1 ἀρχὸς ἁπάντων ἀργικέραυνος 1027 'Ασβαμαῖος 569 'Ασείς 321_0 ἀσελγής 348_2 'Ασκλαπιός 1077 'Ασκληπιός 794 1061 1076 ff. 1112 'Ασκληπιὸς Σωτήρ 1076 f. 'Ασκραῖος $872_{0(5)}$ 'Αστέριος 230 ἀστεροπητής 723_0 $727_{3(1)}$ 806_8 954_0 1177_2 'Αστραπαῖος 815 850 'Αστράπιος 1122 ἀστράπτω 806_8 815_4 1100_1 'Αστράπτων 817_3 817_3 850 ἀστράπτων 817_3 'Αταβύριος in Rhodes 922_5 923_0 924_0 925_0 Atabyrius 588_1 αὐξητής 1100_1 αὐτὸς ἁπάντων ἀρχιγένεθλος 1028 'Αφέσιος 179 266 f. (?) 841 892_4 895_1 896_9 897_0 1144_2 ἀφίκτωρ 1096_2 1098 1101 Βαγαῖος 294_0 (?) 295_2 569 Βάκχος 287 954_0 1184 Βάληος 271_0 βαρύγδουπος 204_1 Βασιλεύς $727_{3(1)}$ 730_0 731_0 869_1 899_2 900_0 1073 f. 1076 1135 1135_4 (?) βασιλεύς 954_0 1027 f. 1095_0 βασιλεὺς μέγιστος 1122_9 βασιλικός $879_{0(17)}$ Βελχάνος (?) = Φελχάνος $948_{0(4)}$ Βεννεύς $883_{0(0)}$ 969_3 Βέννιος $883_{0(0)}$ 969_3 Βῆλος 128_4 210_2 675 Βιδάτας 723_0 934_0 Βοῆτιος (Βωῆτιος) 570 Βόλλαιος 259_0 Βόρειος 380 Βοττιαῖος 1187 f. Βουλαῖος 259_0 260_0 317_2 824_4 824_8 $873_{0(10)}$ 897_3 1076 1177_2 Βουλεύς 258_3 1105 Βροντᾶος 833 ff. 852 $882_{9(0)}$ 1100_1 1177_2 Βροντήσιος (= Iupiter Tonans) 111_0 835_6 βροντοποιός 807_2 Βροντῶν 280_1 805_6 835 f. 838 f. 852 $883_{0(0)}$ Βροντῶν (= Iupiter Tonans) 835_6 Βροντῶν καὶ 'Αστράπτων 817 Βροντῶν καὶ Πατὴρ Θεός 836_2 Βροντῶν Νεικήτωρ Πατήρ 836_3 Βωῆτιος (Βοῆτιος) 570 Βώττιος 1187_4 1188 Γαιβόλος (?) 18_3 Casius 588_1 γενέτης (sc. Διονύσου) 616_4 γενέτωρ 1177_2 Γενηταῖος 616 Γιγαντοφόνος 449_0 Γογγυλάτης 260_0 824_4 824_7 Γοναῖος (?) 961_0 Δάης (?) 312_5 δαίμων 856 Δακιηνός 616 Δακίης (?) 616_1 Δάκιος (?) 616_1 Δάος 312_5 Δειπάτυρος (See Deipatyros) Διδυμαῖος 317 Διδύμων γενάρχης 317_2 Δικαιόσυνος 1092_8 Δικαιόσυνος Μέγας 1092_8 δικηφόρος 806_1 Δικταῖος 342_0 723_0

Zeus (cont.)
731_0 $871_{3(4)}$ 927_1 929_0 930_0 931_0 1227 Διν̓δυμαῖος (?) 317_1 (See Διδυμαῖος) Διόνυσος 282 Δῖος (rather than Δῖος) 280 f. 836 842 Δολιχαῖος 614 745_1 Δουσάρης 317_2 Δωδωναῖος 693_3 855_2 960_0 1121_0 Δωδωναῖος (=Hadrian) 959_0 Δωτήρ (?) 321_1 δῶτορ ἀπημονίης 321_1 δῶτορ ἐάων 321_1 ἐγχειακέραυνος 704 Εἰδαῖος (See Ἰδαῖος) εἰς δαίμων 1028 Ἕκτωρ 8_7 ἑλασιβρόντης 830_2 ἑλατὴρ ὑπέρτατε βροντᾶς ἀκαμαντόποδος 94_2 850_4 Ἑλάφριος 599_7 Ἐλαφρός 599 Ἐλευθέριος 97_0 118_1 238_0 343_0 344_0 763_1 974_0 1096_1 1135_4 1158_6 Ἑλικώνιος 898_5 Ἑλλάνιος 894_3 Ἑλλήνιος $887_{0(31)}$ 895_0 988_9 Ἕλλανος (?) = Fελχάνος $948_{0(2)}$ Ἐμβατήριος (=Trajan) 100_6 1180_4 ἑνάλιος $878_{0(3)}$ (?) 893_0 ἐν δέμας βασίλειον 1028 Ἔνδενδρος 946_0 ἐν κράτος 1028 ἐξακέσας (?) 1095_0 Ἐξακεστήρ 1093_1 Ἐξακεστήριος 1093_1 ἐξ Αὐλῆς 249_2 836 f. 1226 ἐξ Αὐλῆς Ἐπήκοος Θεός 837_1 Ἐπάκριος 873 Ἐπερνύτιος (See Ἐπιρνύτιος) Ἐπήκοος 249_2 837_1 $885_{0(29)}$ $886_{0(0)}$ $886_{0(30)}$ 983_2 983_4 Ἐπήκοος Βροντῶν 835_6 836 Ἐπιβήμιος 897_3 1180_4 Ἐπιδήμιος 1180_4 Ἐπιδότης (?) 321 Ἐπιδώτας 321_1 Ἐπιδώτης (Ἐπιδότης) 321_1 Ἐπικάρπιος 260_0 1065 1177_2 1186 Ἐπιλόφιος (?) 875_0 948_4 Ἐπιρνύτιος 946_0 Ἐπιστάσιος (=Iupiter Stator) 708_5 Ἐπίστιος 311_3 (See also Ἐφέστιος) Ἐπιτέλειος Φίλιος 1163 1169 ἐπιτιμήτωρ ἱκετάων τε ξείνων τε 1097_0 Ἐπόπτης $878_{0(10)}$ (?) cp. $889_{0(33)}$ 949_2 (?) Ἐπόψιος 697 1121 1123 1130 f. 1130_3 1130_7 1159 ἐπόψιος 1130_4 1130_5 Ἐρεχθεύς 793 1146 ἐρίγδουπος 723_0 $727_{3(1)}$ 1099_2 1177_2 ἐρίγδουπος πόσις Ἥρης 584_1 728_0 ἐρισμάραγος 954_0 1122_9 Ἑρκεῖος 723_0 728_0 730_0 $808_{0(15)}$ 893_0 Ἑρκεῖος Πατρῷος 1066 Ἑταιρεῖος (Ἑταίρειος) 1175_4 1176_4 1177_1 ἑταιρεῖος (ἑταίρειος) 260_0 723_0 $727_{3(1)}$ 1177_2 Ἑταιρήϊος 311_3 (See also Ἑταιρεῖος) Εὐαγγέλιος 956_0 Εὐβουλεύς 119_0 131 258_3 259_0 1076 1105 Εὔβουλος (?) 1076 Εὐβωλεύς 259_0 Εὐεργέτης τῆς πόλεως $579_{0(13)}$ (?) Εὐκλειος 118_3 Εὐμένης (=Eumenes i) 960_0 1229 Εὐμενής (=Hadrian) 959_0 f. Εὐξεινος 617 1097_0 εὐρὺ ἀνάσσων 271_0 εὐρυμέδων 1069 εὐρυνεφής 902_2 εὐρύοπα 1089 Εὐρωμεύς (?) 589_0 Εὔσπνοος 231 f. Ἐφέστιος 1176_4 ἐφέστιος 723_0 $727_{3(1)}$ 1177_2 Ἐφόρικος 723_0 Ἔφορος 1130_1 Ϝαλκάνος (?) or Ϝαλχάνος (?) = Fελχάνος $948_{0(5)}$ Fελχάνιος (?) $947_{0(2)}$ Fελχάνος or Ϝελχανός 599_7 947_0 Ϝευχάνος $947_{0(1)}$ Ζάλμοξις (?) 230 822 Ζβελθιοῦρδος 819 Ζβελσοῦρδος 817 ff.

Zeus (cont.)
822_2 833 851 Ζβελσοῦρδος ὁ Κύριος 1225 (See also Κύριος Ζβελσοῦρδος and Κύριος Θεὸς Προγονικὸς Ζβελσοῦρδος) Ζβερθιοῦρδος (?) $818_{2(1)}$ Ζβερθοῦρδος 820_3 821 Zberturdus 822_4 Ζητήρ 444_7 1102_8 Ζιβελείξις (?) 822 *Ζιβελεσοῦρδος (?) 822 Ζιβελσοῦρδος 822_2 Ζλεθοῦρδος 822_3 ζῷον ἐκ ζῴων 1028 f. Ἡλακαταῖος 397_0 Ἡλακατεύς 397_0 1219 Ἡλιοδρόμος 312_5 ἥλιος ἠδὲ σελήνη 1027 Θεῖος $879_{0(17)}$ Θεός 958_0 θεὸς ἐκ θεῶν 1028 f. Θεὸς Ἐπήκοος Βροντῶν 835_8 836 Θεὸς Μέγας Βροντῶν 835_6 836 θεῶν βασιλῆι καὶ ἀνδρῶν 1070 θεῶν τὸν ἄριστον…ἠδὲ μέγιστον 1089 Θηβαιεύς 210_2 Θυέστης (?) 1022 Ἰδαῖος 321_1 (?) Ἰδαῖος in Crete 549 838 932_4 ff. 980_5 Ἰδαῖος in Phrygia 950_0 ff. Ἴδηθεν μεδέων 728_0 855_2 950_0 Ἰθωμάτας 728_0 741 743 890_6 1222 Ἱκέσιος 321_1 (?) 1093 1093_1 1095_0 1096_0 (?) 1097_0 1098_4 1101 1176_4 1177_2 ἱκέσιος 1097 1097_1 Ἱκέτας 1096 1101 ἱκετήσιος 1040 f. 1097 1101 ἱκταῖος (?) 1098 1101 ἱκτήρ 1098 1101 Ἵκτιος (?) 1098_1 Καβάτας 17 f. 31 Καθάρσιος 311_3 1093_1 1095_0 1097_2 1099 f. 1103_7 Καναῖος 902_2 Καπετώλιος $879_{0(17)}$ 941_0 1066 1188_{14} Καπετώλιος (=Κορυφαῖος) 869_1 Καραιός 873 898_4 Καραός 1226 Κάριος 577 591_1 598_1 873_2 καρπῶν τροφεύς 1074 Κάσιος 941_0 Κάσιος in Egypt 984_4 ff. Κάσιος at Epidauros 894_2 Κάσιος (Κάσσιος) in Korkyra 906_3 907_0 (See also Iupiter Casius (Cassius)) Κάσιος (Κάσσιος) in Syria 810_0 (?) 982_0 983_0 1191 f. Κάσι(ο)ς Σώ[ων] 987_0 Κάσις (See Κάσι(ο)ς) Καταιβάτας 16 f. Καταιβάτης 13 ff. 45 131 161 502_2 559 745_1 793 840 845 869_1 962_9 983_1 1075 καταχθόνιος 582_4 893_0 Κατεβάτης (=Καταιβάτης) 16_1 κελαινεφὴς 858 950_0 982_0 κεράστης (=Pan) 1023 κερανεγχὴς 704 κεραύνειος $.9_5$ 806_8 807_4 Κεραύνιος 428 807 ff. 850 941_0 956_0 983_0 1100_1 1187 1225 1228 Κεραύνιος Σωτήρ 962_0 Κερανυοβόλος 807 850 κερανυοβόλος 807_2 κερανυοβρόντης 806_8 Κεραυνός 11 ff. 807 814 840 850 κεφαλή 1027 f. Κήναιος (Κηναῖος) 902_2 903_0 Κιθαιρώνιος 898_6 Κλάριος 807_2 873_2 892_1 1148 f. Κλάριος 873_2 Κλύμενος (?) 1075 κοίρανος ἀθανάτων 982_0 Κόνιος (not Κρόνιος, nor Κώνιος, nor Σκότιος, nor Χθόνιος) 257_4 1139_0 Κορυφαῖος 285_0 868 f. 869_1 957_1 983_3 1218 f. (See also Καπετώλιος) κορυφαῖος τῆς τῶν ἄστρων περιφορᾶς καὶ διωήσεως καὶ χορείας καὶ δρόμου 869_1 κουρίζων 928_0 κοῦρος 928_0 (See also Μέγιστε Κοῦρε…Κρόνιε) Κράγος 972_0 Κραταιβάτης 32 1211 κρείων 1089 Κρητα-

Zeus (cont.)
γενής 238_0 587 675 731_0 Κρονίδης 204_1 321_1 954_0 1095_0 Κρόνιος (See Μέγιστε Κοῦρε...Κρόνιε) Κρονίων 734_3 831_0 950_0 956_2 1028 1099_2 1219 Κρόνου παῖς 908_1 Κρόνου υἱός 957_2 Κτεβάτης (=Καταιβάτης) 16_1 Κτήσιος 3_0 321 384_0 1054 ff. 1112 1140 κύδιμε δαῖμον 957_2 κύδιστ' ἀθανάτων 855 κύδιστος 728_0 950_0 Κύνθιος 919_0 920_0 921_0 922_0 Κύριος Ζβελσούρδος 1225 Κύριος Θεὸς Προγονικὸς Ζβελσοῦρδος 1225 Κώμυρος 1228 Λαβραδεύς 559 f. 572 Λαβράνιος 598 f. Λαβραϊῦνδεύς 1228 Λαβραΰνδιος 962_0 Λαβράϊυνδος (Λαμβράϊυνδος, Λαβραύνυδος, Λαβραάϊνδος (?), Λαβραίυνδος, Λαβράϊνδος (?), Λαβράενδος, Λάβρενδος, Λάβρανδος (?), Λαβρανδεύς, Λαβραδεύς, Λαβρανδηνός) 576 f. 585 ff. 585_3 597 ff. 598_1 614 663 846 848 $884_{0(0)}$ 963_7 1220 1228 Λαβρένδιος 962_0 Labrios (?) 599_5 Labryandius 588_1 Λακεδαίμων 436 Laodicensis (?) 320_0 Laodicenus (?) 320_0 Λαοδικεύς (?) 320_0 Λαοδικηνός (?) 320_0 Λαπέρσιος 599 Laprius 588_1 599 Λαράσιος 958_0 ff. 962_0 Λαράσιος Σεβαστὸς Εὐμενής (=Hadrian) 959_0 f. Λαρισαῖος 892_3 958_0 1144_2 Λαρίσιος 957_3 f. Λαρισσεύς 893_0 1144_2 Λατιάριος 941_0 Λάφριος (?) 599 Λαφύστιος in Boiotia 899_1 Λαφύστιος in Thessaly 904_1 1226 Λέψινος 962_0 Libos (=Iupiter Lapis) 546_0 λιμενοσκόπος 343_0 Λιταῖος 1099 1100_0 Λοφείτης 873 f. 949_3 Λύκαιος 187 761 849 891_3 927_1 1013 1092 1105 1167 Λυκώρειος 901_2 902_0 Μαζεύς (?) 294_0 570_0 μάκαρ 954_0 955_0 μακάρων μακάρτατε 337_4 Μαλειαῖος $488_{0(0)}$ 890_4 Μάνης 312 312_5 μαντικός 1097_2 μεγαβρόντης $727_{3(1)}$ Μέγας 344 f. 350_1 μέγας 295_2 298_2 321_1 342_0 569_7 $727_{3(3)}$ 925_1 940_0 1099_2 1122_9 1130_1 1160 1160_4 μέγας ἀρχὸς ἁπάντων 1028 μέγας βοῦς 345_4 Μέγας Βροντῶν 835_6 836 μεγασθενὴς 693_3 Μέγιστος 585_3 Μέγιστε Κοῦρε... Κρόνιε 931_0 Μέγιστος 807_2 $885_{0(29)}$ 956_0 983_2 985_1 (?) 1157_5 (?) (See also Μέγιστε Κοῦρε...Κρόνιε) μέγιστος 728_0 950_0 Μέγιστος Κεραύνιος $807_{5(1)}$ Μέγιστος Σωτὴρ 956_0 Μέγιστος Ὕψιστος $886_{0(0)}$ 983_2 Μειλίχιος 291_2 321 (?) 715 1037 1061 1091 ff. 1154 1155 1156 ff. 1159 f. 1161 1173 ff. 1177_2 Μείλιχος 1149 1160 μείλιχος 1092_3 Μεληνός 280_1 Μελισσαῖος 928_0 1112_6 Μελίχιος (=Μειλίχιος) 1147 1149 μέσσα 1027 f. 1033_1 Μηδεύς (Μηδινεύς) 312_8 Μήλιος 918_1 Μηλίχιος (=Μειλίχιος) 1156 1157_4 Μηλώσιος 918_1 μητίετα 1025 1147 μητιέτης 259_0 μητιόεις 716 721_3 1017 1147 Μητίων (?) 1146 Μηχανεύς 1144_2

Zeus (cont.)
Μιλίχιος (=Μειλίχιος) 1105 1108 1115 1142 1144_3 (?) 1157_1 Μίλιχος (=Μείλιχος) 1151 Μοιραγέτας 231_8 Μοιραγέτης 187_1 231 1137_0 Molio 588_1 Μονυίτιος 723_0 Μόριος 20_4 502_2 Μυλεύς 260_0 824_4 824_9 Νάσιος 350_6 763_1 826 869_0 1117 (?) Νάκρασος (?) 714_3 Νεαυλείτης 285_0 1217 f. Νεικήτωρ 836_3 Νέμειος 259_0 1143_5 1186 1187_0 νεφεληγερέτα 723_0 $727_{3(1)}$ 950_0 1177_2 Νικηφόρος (Νεικηφόρος) Κεραύνιος 1225 νόμου μέτα πάντα κυβερνῶν 855 Νόσιος 317_2 Νωδαῖος (?) 932_1 ξείνιος 1097_2 ξείνιος, ὅς ξείνοισιν ἄμ' αἰδοίοισιν ὀπηδεῖ 1097_0 1101 Ξένιος 260_0 617 723_0 $727_{3(1)}$ $887_{0(31)}$ 983_9 1097_2 1101 1102_0 1102_7 1142 1169_5 1176_4 1177_2 1229 Ξένιος καὶ Φίλιος 1177_2 οἰκοφύλαξ ὁσίων ἀνδρῶν 1125_0 ὄλβιος 337_4 955_0 ὁλοποιός 1030 Ὀλύβριος or Ὀλύβριε 980_1 Ὀλύμπιος 343_0 695_0 723_9 $727_{3(2)}$ 941_0 1074 1157_6 Ὀλύμπιος at Akragas 911_0 Ὀλύμπιος at Athens 1078 1118 1121_0 1123 Ὀλύμπιος in Bithynia 815_5 Ὀλύμπιος in Chios 1157_1 Ὀλύμπιος at Corinth 916_0 Ὀλύμπιος at Daphne, near Antiocheia on the Orontes 1191 Ὀλύμπιος at Elis 728_0 Ὀλύμπιος at Ephesos 962_2 Ὀλύμπιος in Lykia 972_1 Ὀλύμπιος in Mysia 953_2 Ὀλύμπιος at Olympia 18 758_9 761 1188 Ὀλύμπιος at Pergamon 956_0 Ὀλύμπιος at Prousa ad Olympum 964_2 Ὀλύμπιος at Seleukeia Pieria 869_1 Ὀλύμπιος at Syracuse 915_2 916_0 917_0 Ὀλύμπιος (=Hadrian) 959_0 Ὀλύμπιος Πεισαῖος 962_9 Ὄμβριος 895_7 897_6 898_0 1226 Ὀμοβούλιος 962_0 Ὁμόγνιος 1176_3 1176_4 1177_2 ὁμόγνιος 723_9 1177_2 Ὁμολώιος 857_6 900_1 901_0 904_4 1227 Ὁμολῶος 857_6 Ὁμονῶος 857_6 Ὁμόριος (?) 1090 ὁ πᾶς κόσμος 1028 f. Ὀπλόσμιος 290_0 Ὀπωρεύς 1074 Ὁράτριος (=Ἐράτριος) 342_0 723_0 Ὄρειος 868 Ὀρέστης (?) 1179 1183 Ὀρθώσιος (=Iupiter Stator) 422_1 708_5 Ὅριος (=Iupiter Terminus or Terminalis) 1090 Ὅρκιος 569_4 722 722_5 726 f. $727_{3(1)}$ 1176_4 1177_2 ὅρκιος 723_0 Ὁρομπάτας 869_0 Ὀσογῶα $578_{4(3)}$ $579_{0(8)}$ $_{(10-12)(14-16)(1-5)}$ $580_{0(7)}$ 598_1 616_1 663 715 790_0 846 963_7 1220 Ὀσογῶα Ζηνοποσειδῶν (Ζανοποτειδᾶν) $578_{4(2)(4)}$ Ὀσογῶα Σωτὴρ καὶ Εὐεργέτης τῆς πόλεως $579_{0(13)}$ (?) Ὀσογῶα Ζεὺς Ζηνοποσειδῶν $578_{4(3)(5-7)}$ $579_{0(9)}$ Ὀσογῶος (?) or Ὀσογώου (?) $579_{0(11)(1)}$ Ὅσσαιος 904_3 ὁ τὰ περὶ τῆς φιλίας ἐπισκοπῶν 1176_5 1177_0 ὁ (τῆς) φιλίας ἔφορος 1176_5 1177_0 ὁ τῆς φιλίας προστάτης 1177_0 ὁ τῶν θεῶν κορυφαῖος 1188_7 ὁ τῶν θεῶν ὕπατός τε καὶ ὑπέρτατος 891_0 Ὀτωρκονδέων

Zeus (cont.)
$579_{0(2)}$ 580 $580_{10(1)}$ $581_{0(5)(1-5)}$ Οὐδαῖος (=Plouton) 343_0 Οὐράνιος 436 869_1 1065 1158 Οὐράνιος Ὕψιστος Σααρναῖος Ἐπήκοος $886_{0(30)}$ 983_4 Οὔριος 707 f. 917_0 918_0 πᾶ (?) 294_0 570_0 παγγενέτης 1122_9 παγκρατὲς αἰεί 855 παγκρατὲς γάνος 931_0 Παγχαῖος 342_0 (?) Παῖς 742 f. 749 826_6 Παλαμναῖος 260_0 1097_2 1098 1098_5 1099_1 1101 παλαμναίων τιμήορον ἱκεσιάων 1097_2 Παλάμναιος 1099_0 πάμμεγας 349_{20} Πανάμαρος 587 714_3 963_8 1195_3 (See also Πανημέριος, Πανήμερος) πάνδωρος 858 Πανελλήνιος 894_3 895_0 895_1 1119_4 1120_0 Πανημέριος 963_8 Πανήμερος 963_8 (See also Πανάμαρος) Πανκτήσιος 1067 Πανύχιος 941_0 Πανομφαῖος 1097_2 1211 Πανόπτης 1130 παντοτινάκτης 1100_1 πάντων διατάκτωρ καὶ ὅλου τοῦ κόσμου 1023 1051 πανυπέρτατος 321_1 Παπαῖος 292_4 Πάπας or Παπᾶς 292 Παπίας 292_4 Παππῶος 292_4 Παρνήθιος 897_6 πασιάναξ $1113_{0(2)}$ Πάσιος 1095_0 πάτερ (voc.) 271_0 584_1 693_3 728_0 855_2 858 922_5 950_9 957_2 1094_0 1130_1 πάτερ εἰρήνης βαθυκάρπου] $875_{1(2)}$ Πατήρ 836_2 836_3 πατὴρ 1023 1030 πατραλοίας 942_0 Πάτριος 1141 Πατρῷος 233 244 280_1 723_0 902_2 950_9 1066 1095_0 Πατρῷος Ἐπιλόφιος (?) 948_4 πανσίλυπος 1123_7 1124_0 Πεισαῖος 962_0 Πελασγικός 960_0 Πελινναῖος 922_4 Περικλύμενος (?) 1075 περίφαντος 1122 Περίφας (?) 1122 Περφερέτας 496_0 1220 Πῖκος 697_0 (See further Pikos who is also Zeus) Πίστιος (=Fidius) 724_0 Πλουτοδότης 251_2 385_0 πνοιὴ πάντων 1027 Πολιεύς 260_0 869_1 Πολιεύς at Athens 897_2 897_3 Πολιεύς at Delphoi 231 Πολιεύς in Kos 238_0 Πολιεύς at Lindos 923_0 Πολιοῦχος 941_0 πολύξενος (?) $1113_{0(2)}$ πολυξενώτατος $1113_{0(2)}$ πολύσταχυς 295_2 569_7 Πολύτεχνος (?) 693 πολυώνυμος 855 πόντου ῥίζα 1027 Ποτεύς (or Πότης or Πότις) 285 287_1 Ποτηος (accent unknown) 285 πρευμενής 1098_4 Προγονικός 1225 Προπάτωρ 941_0 προστρόπαιος (προστροπαῖος) 1097_2 1098 f. 1099_0 1101 πρῶτος 1027 f. πυθμὴν γαίης τε καὶ οὐρανοῦ ἀστερόεντος 1027 f. Ῥεμβήνοδος (?) 714_3 Σαδίκιος (for Σαδίζιος=Σαβάζιος) 284_0 Σααρναῖος $886_{0(30)}$ 983_4 Σαβάζιος 282 285_0 287_2 664_1 (?) 745_1 954_0 957_2 975_0 1184 1217 Σαουάδιος (=Σαβάδιος) 285_0 1217 f. Σάραπις 1171_3 cp. 773_9 (See also Σέραπις) Σαώτης 599_2 1151 Σεβαστός (=Hadrian) 959_0 f. σεισίχθων 1100_1 Σέραπις 714_3 (?) (See also Σάραπις) Σερεανός $883_{0(0)}$ Σημαλέος $4\,897_6$ Σημαντικός 280_1 σκαταβότης (?) 15_1 1211 Σκύλιος 723_0

Zeus (cont.)
Σκυλοφόρος (=Iupiter Feretrius) 111_0 Σολυμεύς 973_1 f. Σόλυμος 974_0 Σπάλαξος (less probably Σπάλωξος) 1220 Σπάλωξος 587 Στάτωρ (=Iupiter Stator) 708_5 στεροπηγερέτα 806_8 Στήσιος (=Iupiter Stator) 708_5 Στορπᾶος 815 850 1095_0 Στρατεῖος 591_2 Στρατηγός 707 f. 848 918_0 Στράτιος 111_0 585 591 591_2 594 594_8 595 (?) 595_0 598_1 705 713 715 722 846 848 $884_{0(0)}$ 963_7 974_1 ff. Συκάσιος 1103 σχέτλιος $727_{3(1)}$ Σώζων 987_0 Σωσίπολις (?) 1151 (cp. i. 58) Σωτὴρ 233 292_4 317_2 321_1 343_0 434_3 $727_{3(3)}$ 728_0 763_1 $884_{0(0)}$ 955_0 962_0 970_0 1121 1123 1129_0 1133_1 1141 1142_1 1144_2 1147 1151 1156_{13} 1159 1162 1169 1191 1228 f. [Σωτὴρ ἅπαν]τος ἀνθρώπων γένο[υς] 280_1 [Σωτὴρ] τοῦ σύμπαντος ἀν[θρωπείου γένους] 280_1 Σωτὴρ Τέλειος 1123_7 σωτήριος 1123_7 1124_0 Ταλαιός 948_1 Ταλεΐτας 890_2 948_1 Ταλλαῖος 948_1 ταμίης πολέμοιο 734_3 Ταουιανός 754_1 Ταραντᾶος 32_3 Τέλειος 1076 f. 1089 1123_7 1124_0 1147 1150 1156_{13} 1159 1162 1163_2 1175 Τέλειος Σωτὴρ 1124_0 Τελεσιουργός 1228 Τελεσφόρος 838 1089 τελεσφόρος 1089 τελέων τελειότατον κράτος 337_4 Τεράστιος 31 1211 Τερμωθεύς 962_0 τερπικέραυνος 502_2 779 ff. 806_8 822 1067 1070 1097_0 Τετράωτος 322 842 Τηρεύς (?) 693 697 Τιμωρός 874_2 1099_0 1101 τοῦ κατὰ χθονὸς | Διὸς νεκρῶν Σωτῆρος 1125_0 Τρεφώνιος or Τροφώνιος 233_0 794 1061 1073 ff. 1112 Τριφύλιος 1095_0 Τροπαῖος 110_9 111_0 956_0 Τροπαιοῦχος 111_0 Τροπαιοῦχος (=Iupiter Feretrius) 111_0 Τροπαιοφόρος (=Iupiter Feretrius) 111_0 Τροφώνιος (See Τρεφώνιος) Τρώιος 571_8 τῶν περὶ Λάκιον 1156_{10} τῶν περὶ Ὀλυμπιόδωρον 1156_{10} τῶν περὶ Πολύξενον 1156_{10} τῶν φιλικῶν καθηκόντων ἔφορος 1177_0 Ὑδηγός (?) 1227 f. Ὑέτιος 164_5 164_8 318_0 869_1 1144_2 ὑέτιος 276_1 Ὑμήττιος 897_5 Ὑνναρεύς (Ὑνναριεύς?) 987_1 Ὕπατος 163_4 737 875 890_3 897_2 898_1 898_2 956_2 (?) ὕπατος 271_0 ὕπατος βασιλεὺς διὰ παντός 856 ὕπατος θεῶν 1125_1 Ὑπερβερέτας 496_0 ὑπερμενὴς 1028 Ὑπερφερέτης (=Iupiter Feretrius) 111_0 496_0 ὑστατος 1027 f. ὑψιβρεμέτης 830_1 838 ὑψίδρομων (Pierson cj. ὑψίβρομον) πυριανγέα κόσμον ἑλαύνων 830_1 ὑψίζυγος 830_1 ὑψιμέδων $875_{1(2)}$ 907_2 Ὕψιστος 231_8 293_0 876 876_1 ff. 891_3 892_3 897_3 898_3 906_2 907_1 922_1 922_2 953_1 956_0 (?) 963_2 963_{5-9} 983_2 983_4 983_6 983_9 1144_2 ὑψιστος 890_1 Ὕψιστος Βρονταῖος 834 f. Ὕψιστος καὶ Ἐπήκοος $885_{0(29)}$ $886_{0(0)}$ 983_2 Ὕψιστος Ἐπόπτης (?) 949_2 Ὕψιστος Μέγιστος

Zeus (cont.)
Ἐπήκοος $885_{0(29)}$ 983_2 Φαλακρός 874_2 893_1 1099_0 1144_2 1226 Φερέτριος (= Iupiter Feretrius) 111_0 Φερ-φερέτας 496_0 1220 Φηγός (?) 413_2 φιλάνθρωπος 1177_2 Φίλιος 260_0 722_0 $727_{3(1)}$ $727_{3(2)}$ 728_0 956_0 1061 1092_8 1119_0 1141 1160 ff. 1173 ff. 1186 1196 f. φίλιος 1167 φίλτατος 1167_5 φοινικοστερόπας 806_8 Φράτριος 723_0 728_0 730_0 1177_2 Φύξιος 902_0 1097_2 1144_2 1177_2 φύσεως ἀρχηγέ 855 φυτάλιος 1100_1 φυτάλμιος 260_0 1177_2 Χαριδότης 1065 Χθόνιος 829 $878_{0(3)}$ 1100_1 1119_0 1155 Χρυσαορεύς or Χρυσαόριος 714 ff. 722 848 Χρυσ-αορεύς $884_{0(9)}$ ὠδαῖος (?) 932_1 Ὡρο-μάσδης 386 980_6

Festivals: Aitnaia 908_1 Basileia 900_0 Boukatia 235 Daidala Megala 977_0 Deia 320_0 Deia Sebasta Oikoumenika 320_0 Diasia 1138 ff. Διὸς βοῦς (See Rites) Eleutheria (?) 974_0 Homoloïa 900_1 Ithomaia (Ithomaïs) 890_6 Megala Panhellenia 1121_0 Meilichia 1091 f. 1092_5 New Year's Day 931_0 Olympia 964_2 Panhellenia 1119_4 pentaeteris 1179 Traianeia Dei-phileia 1180 trieteris 934_0 Xan-thikos 23 981_1 f. yearly sacrifice and panêgyris 576_2

Rites: altars at Olympia and Perga-mon made of ashes from thighs of victims 955_0 ἀνιπτόποδες at Tralleis 959_0 f. banquet for all present at sacrifice to Zeus Στράτιος 974_1 bovine omophagy 539 cp. 934_0 burial of bull 345 539 ceremonial purity 934_0 communion-feast 1173 daily oblation to sceptre of Zeus at Chaironeia 547_2 Διὸς βοῦς 318_0 Διὸς κώδιον 1065 effigy worn by votaries 299 ff. first-fruits $872_{0(5)}$ funeral offering in Idaean Cave 934_0 942_0 god killed and eaten in form of bull 345 hecatomb sacrificed to Zeus Κάσιος on Mt Kasion in Syria 982_0 1192 hecatomb sacrificed to Zeus Νέμειος at Argos 1144_2 human consort 128_4 210_2 (See also infra παλλακίδες) human sacrifice to Zeus Ἀταβύριος in Rhodes (?) 924_0 human sacrifice to Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 890_6 human sacrifice to Zeus Λα-φύστιος at Halos 904_1 (?) human sacrifice to Zeus Λαφύστιος on Mt Laphystion 899_1 human sacrifice to Zeus-like deity Θυέστης at My-kenai (?) 1022 incubation $232\,982_0$ (?) initiation 1186 jars of Zeus Κτή-σιος 1054 ff. libation from first kratêr to Zeus and Hera 1123_7 1124_0 libation from first kratêr to Zeus Ὀλύμπιος and the Olympians 1123 libation from third kratêr to

Zeus (cont.)
Zeus Σωτήρ 1123_7 1124_0 1125_0 liba-tion from third kratêr to (Zeus) Σωτήρ and Ὀλύμπιος 1124_0 libation from third kratêr to Zeus Σωτήρ or Τέλειος 1123 libation from third kratêr to Zeus Σωτὴρ Τέλειος 1123_7 libation to Zeus Διδυμαῖος with ivy-leaves 317_1 libation and prayer to Zeus Ἰδαῖος 950_0 libation to Zeus Κτήσιος 1058 libation to Zeus τερπικέραυνος 1097_0 love-feast 1197 lying prone 835 mysteries at Antio-cheia on the Orontes 1186_6 my-steries in Crete 345 mysteries at Pergamon 288_0 new fire (?) $1149_{2(1)}$ νηφάλια 1142_3 no wine- or animal-offerings on altar of Zeus Ὕπατος at Athens $875_{1(2)}$ oak-brides burnt on Mt Kithairon 977_0 oath taken over boar 726 f. 728_0 offering of meal (?) 18 omophagy 934_0 cp. 539 παγκάρπεια 1058 παλλακίδες at Thebes in Egypt 960_0 παλλακίδες at Tralleis 959_0 f. (See also supra human consort) πέλανος 1058 pro-cession up Mt Pelion 870_0 proces-sions at Pergamon 288_0 purifica-tion by figs (?) 1103_4 1103_7 purifica-tion in cult of Zeus Φίλιος 1186 sacrifice by Labyadai (Boukatia) 235 sacrifice of bull to Zeus Βροντ-αῖος 835 sacrifice of bull to Zeus Στράτιος 975_0 sacrifice of nine bulls to Zeus Κήναιος 902_2 sacrifice of cakes moulded into forms of ani-mals 1138_2 1140 sacrifice of seven cakes to Zeus Ἡλιεύς 238_0 sacrifice of goat to Zeus Ἀσκραῖος $872_{0(5)}$ sacrifice of humped bull to Zeus Σωλυμεύς 973_1 sacrifice of milk, honey, wine, oil, incense to Zeus Στράτιος 974_1 977_0 sacrifice of ox to Zeus Ἑρκεῖος 728_0 sacrifice of three-year-old ox to Zeus 287_2 954_0 sacri-fice of three-year-old ox to Zeus Βάκχος 287_2 954_0 sacrifice of pig to Zeus Βουλεύς 1105 sacrifice of pig to Zeus Εὐβουλεύς 1105 sacrifice of pig to Zeus Λύκαιος 1105 sacrifice of pig to Zeus Μειλίχιος 1105 ff. 1140_2 (?) 1142 1157 sacrifice of pig to Zeus Φίλιος 1161 sacrifice of ram to Zeus Λαφύστιος 904_1 sacrifice of ram to Zeus (? Μειλίχιος ? Φίλιος) 1175 sacrifice of sheep to Zeus Μειλίχιος 1138_2 1140 sacrifice of white ox to Zeus Κτήσιος 1065 1067 (See also white victims) sacrifice of singed victim to (Zeus) Μηλίχιος 1156 sacrifice to Zeus at Olympia on logs of white-poplar 467 sacri-fices to Zeus Στράτιος on mountain-tops 974_1 ff. taboo on onions among devotees of Zeus Κάσιος at Pelou-

Zeus (cont.)
sion 987_0 thigh-pieces of oxen burnt for Zeus at Ephesos 962_2 thigh-pieces of oxen burnt for Zeus on Mt Ide in Phrygia 950_0 thigh-pieces of oxen burnt for Zeus at Troy 950_0 throne strown annually in Idaean Cave 934_0 942_0 cp. 940_0 thunder-making 838 f. 852 934_0 θυσία ἄπυρος παγκαρπείας 1058 torch-lighting 1158 uninitiated persons and women may not enter precinct of Zeus Τπατος in Paros $875_{1(5)}$ union with Deo and Persephatta at Eleusis 132_2 water from Klepsydra brought daily to sanctuary of Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 890_6 white victims sacrificed to Zeus Ἀκραῖος $871_{3(1)}$ (See also sacrifice of white ox)

Priests: ἀμφίπολος of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος as eponymous magistrate of Syracuse 916_0 ἀρχιερεύς $579_{0(16)}$ 973_1 at Adrianoi in Mysia 127 at Dodona go with unwashen feet and sleep on ground 960_0 at Mylasa dedicate temple-columns 580 at Mylasa distinguished citizens priests for life 576 f. Βεννεῖται $883_{0(0)}$ ζακόρος 921_0 922_0 head of priest of Zeus Ὀπλόσμιος denounces murderer 290_0 ἱερεύς 578_4 921_0 922_0 ἱερεὺς διὰ βίου 111_0 616_1 973_1 976_0 cp. 576 f. ἱεροποιοί 921_0 κλειδοῦχος 921_0 922_0 νεωκόρος 967_0 976_0 νεωκόρος διὰ βίου 967_0 cp. 1225 ξυλεύς at Olympia 471 of Zeus Ἀκραῖος as eponymous magistrate of Magnetes $871_{3(1)}$ of Zeus Βῆλος 128_4 of Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 743 890_6 of Zeus Παῖς 743 of Zeus Τροπαιοῦχος 111_0 Onetor 950_0 ὁ νικῶν κάλλει 742_5 πατὴρ ἱερήων 1177_3 Σελλοί 960_0 Spartan kings 353 τόμαροι (τόμουροι) 693_3 ὑποφῆται 960_0

Priestesses: buried near temple of Zeus Τψιστος $878_{0(4)}$ Diotima 1167 'Fly' at Dodona 215_1 κανηφόρος 900_0 πελειάδες 350 693_3 προφῆτις 214 ff.

Worshippers: akin to Zeus 950_0 Βάκχοι 934_0 Διοσαταβυριασταί 1157_3 Διοσμιλιχιασταί 1157_3 ἐρανισταί 1161 θιασῶται 585_3 ἱερόδουλοι 616_1 Κουρῆτες 934_0 Salii (?) 328 ff. συνμύσται 282_1

Personated by Agamemnon 1069 f. Aleos (?) 1147 Amphiaraos 1070 ff. Amphitryon 1072 Antiochos iv Epiphanes 1188 f. Antoninus Pius 101_1 343_0 Athenian kings 1135 1142 Augustus 97_0 260_0 Caracalla 1186 1209 Commodus 1185 Cretan prince (?) 522 Domitian 97_0 1194 cp. 811_5 (fig. 777 = Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 48, 4, ii. 229) Epopeus (?) 1146 Eumenes i 960_0

Zeus (cont.)
1228 forefather of family 1061 Germanicus Caesar 260_0 Geta 1186 Hadrian 260_0 280_0 343_0 956_0 959_0 f. 962_2 1120_0 1121_0 Ixion (?) 1088 Keyx 1088 king 24 192 192_5 794 833 897_0 940_0 944_0 945_0 1061 1065 1069 f. 1070 ff. 1073 f. 1076 1088 ff. 1121 ff. 1159 f. 1185 f. kings descended from Aiolos 1159 kings of Delphoi (?) 192_5 kings of Orchomenos in Boiotia (?) 1150 kings of Sparta (?) 353 kings of Thessaly 1087 ff. kings struck by lightning 24 local champion 1070 Marathon (?) 1146 Minos (?) 940_0 944_0 945_0 Minyas (?) 1150 Nero 97_0 1194 Nerva 1194 Pelops (?) 1147 Perikles 816_1 Periphas 24_4 1121 ff. Roman emperors 100 ff. 320_9 (?) 1209 Salmoneus 24_4 1088 1122 Simon Magus 726_0 Theophanes 97_0 Trajan 100_6 1180 1180_4 1209_5 Xerxes 853_4

Myths: Aetos 933_0 Amphiaraos 1071 Asklepios 23 Auriga 477_7 bids Apollon to serve Admetos 241_4 binds Kronos beneath oak-trees 448_1 1027 birth of Athena 721_2 1029 born in a cave of Mt Aigaion 925_1 932_1 born in a cave of Mt Dikte 928_0 932_1 986_0 born in a cave of Mt Ide in Crete (?) 230_6 932_1 951_0 born in a cave of Mt Ide in Phrygia 951_0 born at Dios Gonai in Boiotia 961_0 born at Dios Gonai in Lydia 961_0 born on Mt Sipylos 956_2 born on Mt Tmolos 957_2 brings the babe Dionysos to Mt Tmolos 957_2 brought by Kouretes to Idaean Cave 932_1 cp. 928_0 buried in Crete 219 345 556_0 694_0 943_0 causes Trojan war 261_1 his chariot followed by procession of souls 63_0 childhood 899_0 chooses the eagle 752_4 comes from Crete to Naxos 187_8 consorts with Aigina d. of Asopos 187_8 894_3 Aitne 909_0 Amaltheia 229_1 Chaldene 973_1 Danaë 694_0 1131_1 Demeter 1029 Deo (= Demeter) 132_2 $345_{0(2)}$ Dia 1088 Dione 1029 Europe 187_8 348 929_0 947_0 1131_1 Euryodeia (Euryodia) 1152_4 Hera 343_0 893_2 902_1 950_0 1020 1029 Hermippe d. of Boiotos 1150 Hesione d. of Danaos 1150 Hippodameia d. of Danaos 1150_2 Idaia 940_0 Io 961_0 Kalchedonia 973_1 Kallisto 228_4 228_5 1217 Lamia 1130 f. Leda 1015_7 1131_1 Magna Mater 969_4 Manthea (?) 229_1 Medeia 1088 Nemesis 1015 1131_1 Persephatta (= Kore) 132_2 Persephone $1114_{0(5)}$ Phersephone or Kore 1029 Plouto 449_0 Rhea 1029 Semele 187_8 956_2 one of the Sithnides 897_1 Thaleia

Zeus (cont.)
909_0 Themis 37_1 willow-goddess (?) 947_0
consults Nyx 1029 consults Nyx and Kronos 1027 creates the world anew inside himself 1027 deposited by Typhon in Corycian Cave 449_0 Deukalion builds altar of Zeus 'Αφέσιος 892_4 Deukalion sacrifices to Zeus Φύξιος 902_0 Dionysos sewn up in thigh of Zeus 957_2 Διὸς ἁπάτη 1020 f. Dirke 1019 drives out Kronos 933_0 941_0 942_0 drives Kronos out of Assyria 693_4 694_0 Erechtheus 24 794 exiles Apollon to land of Hyperboreoi 484 493 Flumen 477_7 founds city on Mt Dikte 928_0 929_0 Ganymedes 188_0 189_0 281_4 933_0 Gigantomachia 752_4 830_7 gives Dionysos to Ma to nurse 565_2 gives golden vine to Tros 281_4 gives ring to Prometheus 990 golden hound 1227 golden ram 899_1 golden rope 1029 1211 golden vine 281_4 has Aigokeros or Capricornus for foster-brother 932_1 933_0 has sinews of his hands and feet cut out by Typhon and hidden in a bear-skin under the care of Delphyne 228 449_0 Hektor 950_0 helped by Aigokeros or Capricornus against Titans 933_0 hidden from Kronos by Korybantes 940_0 hidden from Kronos by Kres 928_0 infancy in Dictaean Cave 928_0 929_0 infancy on Mt Ide in Crete 932_1 infancy on a Phrygian mountain 968_{1-3} 969_2 Io 782_1 Ixion 1098_4 jars of good and evil 1067 f. Kapaneus 23 824 f. Kasios 981_1 Kekrops founds altar of Zeus Ὕπατος $875_{1(2)}$ Korybantes drown cries of infant Zeus 928_0 Kouretes drown cries of infant Zeus 928_0 961_0 968_{1-3} leaps upon Phanes and swallows him 1027 Leda 941_0 lets fall drops of blood, from which men arise 1032 lets fly eagles from west and east 179 makes cosmic mantle 351_1 makes Kronos drunk on honey 448_1 1027 Melissa 928_0 Merops 1132_1 mutilated by Typhon 448_2 mutilates Kronos 448_1 685 1027 nurses transformed into bears 227 f.

nursed by Adrasteia 933_0 Amaltheia 928_0 Ithome and Neda 890_6 Nymphs on Mt Ide in Crete 932_1 Rhea 961_0 968_{1-3} 969_2 nurtured by bears 928_0 939_0 bees 928_0 929_0 1112_6 doves 928_0 eagle 928_0 goat 928_0 961_0 968_0 goat Amaltheia 932_1 933_0 pig 928_0

Oidipous 829 Omphalian Plain 190 Ophiuchus 1087 Periphas 1121 ff. Perseus sacrifices to Zeus 'Απεσάντιος 892_4 piles Mt Aitne on

Zeus (cont.)
Enkelados 909_0 piles Mt Aitne on Typhon 909_0 places heart of Dionysos or Zagreus in gypsum image 1031 Polytechnos 693 pounds heart of Zagreus into potion and gives it to Semele to drink 1031 prince slain by wild boar and buried in Crete 522 cp. 727 psychostasia 733 ff. quitting Assyria follows Kronos and becomes king of Italy 694_0 943_0 reared by Kouretes on Mt Dikte 928_0 929_0 refitted with his sinews by Hermes and Aigipan 449_0 Rhea gives Kronos stone instead of him 793_8 901_1 Rhea, pregnant with him, is protected against Kronos by Hopladamos (Hoplodamos?) 291_0 Rhea rescues him from Kronos 928_0 Salmoneus 833 1122 Seleucides aves 981_1 Semele 24 ff. 731 ff. (?) succeeds Kronos as king of Italy 694_0 swallows Metis 12 348_2 Sykeas or Sykeus 1103_8 Thetis 45_1 thrusts Kronos down below earth and sea 1020 Titanes 218 1031 f. 1103_8 transforms Aigokeros or Capricornus and his mother Aix into stars 933_0 transforms Aigolios into owl 929_0 transforms himself into Eros when about to create the world 316 transforms Kallisto into bear 228_7 transforms Keleos the Cretan into green woodpecker 929_0 transforms Kerberos the Cretan into bird 929_0 transforms Laïos the Cretan into blue thrush 929_0 Typhon (Typhoeus) 228 448_2 722_2 731 826 839_6 981_1 Ursa Maior 928_0 Ursa Minor 928_0 visits Hera clandestinely 1020 wraps aithêr round the world and ties up the bundle with golden cord 1029

Metamorphosed into Apollon 228_7 Artemis 228_7 1217 bear 229 bull 348 449_0 929_0 1131_1 1167_5 cuckoo 893_2 1144_2 eagle 187_8 228_7 752 909_0 (?) 941_0 1133 f. Eros 316 fly 782_1 gold 1131_1 hoopoe 697 1130 f. human lover 941_0 snake 941_0 1029 1061 1151 stranger 1096_4 swan 941_0 1015 1015_7 1131_1 vulture 909_0 woodpecker 524 693 (?) 693_4

Genealogy: b. of Ouranos 940_0 f. of Aiakos by Aigina d. of Asopos 894_3 f. of Aphrodite 1029 f. of Apollon and Artemis by Leto 453 f. of Apollonios of Tyana 569_4 f. of Arkas by Kallisto 228_5 f. of Arkeisios by Euryodeia (Euryodia) 1152_4 f. of Artemis 164_8 342_0 453 f. of Athena by Koryphe 869_1 cp. i. 155 f. of Attis 294 f. of Atys and Kotys (?) 312 f. of Chryses by Hesione d. of Danaos 1150_2 f. of Dardanos 8 f.

Zeus (cont.)
of Dionysos 317 1098_0 f. of the chthonian Dionysos or Zagreus by Phersephone or Kore 1029 f. of the first three Dioskouroi (Tritopatreus, Eubouleus, Dionysos) by Persephone 1135_4 f. of Epaphos by Io 961_0 f. of Eros by Aphrodite 316_0 f. of Gargaros at (by?) Larissa in Thessaly 950_0 f. of Geraistos and Tainaros 903_1 f. of Helene 343_0 f. of Helene by Leda 1015_7 f. of Helene by Nemesis 1131_1 f. of Herakles 343_0 f. of Hermes 385_0 f. of Horai by Themis 37_1 94_2 f. of Kairos 859 861 f. of Kastor 437 f. f. of Kastor and Polydeukes, Klytaimestra and Helene, by Leda 1015_7 f. of Kouretes 940_0 f. of Litai 1097_2 1098_0 1099_2 1100_0 f. of Malos $488_{0(0)}$ f. of Manes by Ge 312 f. of Megaros (Megareus) by one of the Sithnides 897_1 1117_7 f. of Meilinoe (?) or Melinoe (?) by Persephone $1114_{0(5)}$ f. of Metis 348_2 f. of Minos by Europe 8 342_0 344 929_0 f. of Minos, f. of Deukalion, f. of Idomeneus 793_7 f. of Muses by Mnemosyne 1157_0 f. of Olenos by Hippodameia, d. of Danaos 1150_2 f. of Orchomenos by Hesione, d. of Danaos, or by Hermippe, d. of Boiotos 1149 f. f. of Palikoi by Thaleia, d. of Hephaistos 909_0 f. of Perseus 665_1 f. of Perseus by Danaë 694_0 f. of Phaunos 694_0 943_0 f. of Phersephone or Kore by Rhea or Demeter 1029 f. of Polydeukes 437 f. f. of Solymos by Chaldene 973_1 f. of Solymos by Kalchedonia 973_1 f. of Tainaros 890_5 f. of Tantalos 957_0 f. of Zethos and Amphion 445 f. of Zethos and Amphion by Antiope 1013 gf. of Eros 316_0 h. of Ge 292_4 h. of Hera 584_1 h. of Hera Ζυγία 954_0 h. of Idaia 940_0 h. of Kybele 298 h. of Tyche Ἀγαθή 1104 f. s. of Aither 941_0 s. of Ge 294_0 s. of Kronos 943_0 s. of Kronos by Rhea 941_0 s. and h. of the Mother of the gods 298_2 s. of Phanes 1051 s. of Phanes by Nyx 1026 s. of Rhea 830 1029 youngest child of Rhea 925_1

Functions: aér 351_0 aithér 557_1 allotments 873_2 all-seeing 258_3 ancestral god of Attic nobility 730_0 ancient king 1135_4 author of days and years 94_2 avenger of impious deeds 1130 bees 1112_8 bright sky 1 840 bringer of a curse 1098 bringer of young folk to maturity 1159 buried king 1139 1142 1159 celestial lights 840 chthonian 18 (?) 31 (?) 119_0 233_0 258_3 836 893_0 1058 1105 1107 $1113_{0(2)}$ 1117 1118 1124_0 1125_0 1125_1 1126_0

Zeus (cont.)
1131 1142 1149 1150 1155 f. 1157_0 1159 1161 1169 f. 1175 1178 chthonian (Zeus Οὐδαῖος = Plouton) 343_0 clear air 557_1 clouds 3 corn and wine (?) 1178 cosmic 117 855_2 1028 f. 1185 cosmic law 855_2 cosmogonic 1230 counsel 317_2 creator of the world 316 1027 crops 1065 1074 1187_0 daylight 436 1013 day-light sky 840 deceased founder of club 1162 deceased kinsman 1163 deceiver 694_0 695_0 destiny 231 Dionysiac 281 ff. 836 847 852 dispenser of good and evil 1067 f. divinised ancestor 1068 dreams 283_0 1175 1228 dust 257_4 earth 823 father 292 ff. father of mankind 855 fertility 591 1142 1149 fighter 590 f. figs 291_2 (?) 1092 f. 1103 f. 1112 1114 food and drink 754_2 food-supply 434_2 forefather 258_3 forefather of clan 1162 generous giver 321_1 giver of animal and vegetable life 1139 giver of wealth 1065 good tidings 966_0 government 855 ff. guardian of friendship 1176 guardian of harbour 343_0 hail 1 healing $877_{0(0)}$ 1061 hearth 873_2 (?) $1149_{2(1)}$ (?) holder of scales 734_3 inspirer of orator 1181_0 justice 852 justice and injustice among men and animals 1130_1 lawgiver 1095_0 life 352_1 352_4 1023 lightning 1 4 385_0 502 ff. 722 ff. 815 ff. 840 850 f. 954_0 1146 lot 1148 f. (?) love 1176 magician 258_3 694_0 695_0 1147 mills (?) 260_0 mind 258_3 1028 f. moisture 351_0 352_4 moon 840 mountains 554 868 ff. 1149 1179 1183 nourishment 594 oak 570_0 $872_{0(5)}$ oaths 233 569_4 706 722 ff. 727_3 849 955_0 1175 f. observer of right and wrong 1130 1130_1 old corn (?) 295_2 omniscience 763 the one God, of whom all other Gods are but parts and manifestations 855_2 oracular 1061 1073 ff. pantheistic 1027 ff. 1051 πνεῦμα 1023 prayers 1099 preserver of the tribe 1159 primeval power 315 f. protector of the bloodguilty 1098 f. protector of descendants 1130 protector of his people 1159 protector of laws and treaties 723_0 protector of suppliants 1093 1097 f. 1130 protector of suppliants and strangers 1097_0 1101 providence 764 849 purification 1099 f. 1103 purifier of the bloodguilty 1092 ff. 1104 1112 1114 1143 rain 1 3 4 179 (?) 274 (?) 275 f. 318_0 351_0 591 833 894_1 897_5 897_6 898_9 941_0 957_2 re-creator of the world 1033 ruler 731 848 ruler of gods 266 ruler of sky, sea, and earth 893_0 rumour 904_3 sea 663 893_0 seafaring 987_0 sender up of souls 1058 sky 298 344 353 458 601 663 823 sleep 231 f. snow 1 343_0 solar 285_0 840 948_1 1130 1130_7 specialised into Poseidon 786 850 spinner of fate 1219· starry sky 436 stars 840 869_1 storm 267 591 705 848 streams 869_0 sun (See solar) suppliant 1096 1098 1101 suppliant-boughs $1149_{2(2)}$ thunder 1 4 344 833 ff. 851 f. 941_0 945_3 1155 thunder and lightning 280_1 817 thunderbolt 179 722 ff. 850 f. trees 946_0 trophy 110_9 111_0 turnips (?) 260_0 underworld 1158 (See also chthonian) universe (See cosmic) upper world 1158 victor 758 victory $489_{0(0)}$ 812_1 813_2 violence 1098 war 705 ff. 848 water 1117_3 (?) weather 1 ff. 840 894_3 wind 444_7 (?) witness 728_0 f. world (See cosmic) a younger Zan 340 ff.

Zeus (cont.)

Etymology: 259_0 855_2 928_0 1102_8 1228

Attributes: agrenón 574 592 aigis 781 1187_0 apple (?) 831_1 bay-wreath 266 597_3 714_2 756_1 924_0 1187_4 1192 f. 1223 bronze bulls 924_0 bronze oxen 924_0 buskins 1178 1184 car (benna) (?) $883_{0(0)}$ chariot 436_1 851 Charites (Moirai? Horai?) 232_0 chitón 597 f. 744 744_4 chlamýs 731_1 744 ff. cock 946_9 947_0 corn-ears 754_1 cornu copiae 1105 1162 crab 577 f. cup 1178 cypress 932_1 dagger 714_1 722 diadem 597_3 double axe 283_0 559 ff. 601 614 615 (?) 664_1 (?) 705 714_1 drépanon 448_0 eagle 283_0 575 f. 577 f. 707 751 f. $808_{0(0)}$ 833 836 838 956_0 961_0 968_0 1133_1 1143 1161 1185 f. 1188 1208 eagles 231 239 841 Egyptian head-dress (?) 987_0 female breasts 592 ff. flower 1224 (?) goat 987_1 (?) globe 980_0 golden ball 933_0 golden calf 354 golden liknon 933_0 golden vine (?) 281_4 grapes 281 287_1 $883_{0(0)}$ hammer 945_2 hárpe 449_0 helmet 705 f. himátion 1082 himátion of gold 916_9 himátion of wool 916_0 Horai 1138_5 jar 1054 ff. jug 1117 kálathos 577 592 f. 593 (?) 597 597_3 598 kratér 283_0 leaf-shaped lance 709 liknon 933_0 lily-wreath 740 lion (?) 575 f. lioness (?) 575 599_2 lion-skin (?) 947_0 lotos 771 1224 mattock 806_1 Moirai 1138_5 moon 980_0 necklace 593 Nike $873_{0(9)}$ 1143 1145_9 1190 1192 1193_1 oak-branch 1177 (?) oak-wreath 348 388 763_1 1187_4 olive-branch 1177 (?) olive-wreath 323_1 palm (?)-tree 284_0 panther (?) 575 599_2 pectoral 574 phiále $881_{0(21)}$ 906_3 1105 1116 (?) 1143 1145_0 1161 f. 1175 1184 pillar 818 pine-wreath 951_0 plane-trees 590 976_0 plough 281 836 pomegranate 986_0 radiate crown 980_0 scales 734_3 sceptre 258 266 547_2 709 731 ff. 763 788_0 1105 1116 1143 1145_0 1188 sélinon (?)-wreath 1187_0 shield 578 705 712 silver knife 354 skýphos 754_1 snake 283_0 284_0 285_0 819 820 823 1111 spear 577 f. 704 ff. 722 848 957_0 stag 575 1220 star 980_0 1187_0 stars 980_0 stick 1102_9 sun 980_0 sword 591 615 (?) 705 712 ff. 722 848 tall head-dress 980_0 (See also tiara) thunderbolt 283_0 722 ff. 785 848 ff. 1145_0 thýrsos surmounted by eagle 1178 tiara 386 (See also tall head-dress) tortoise 895_1 trident 577 798 two doves (?) $872_{0(5)}$ two eagles 179 f. two oaks $872_{0(5)}$ two ravens (?) $872_{0(5)}$ two spears 283_0 two thunderbolts 722 726 f. vervain 396_0 397_0 vine 836 838 vine-staff 909_0 whip 851 willow 946_0 947_0 winged chariot 43 321_1 woodpecker 518_3 (See further Pikos who is also Zeus)

Zeus (cont.)

Types: advancing with thunderbolt in lowered right hand and eagle ou outstretched left 745 advancing with thunderbolt in raised right hand 26_0 795_3 advancing with thunderbolt in raised right hand and eagle on outstretched left 739 ff. 818 f. 963_0 1139_0 1143 1222 f. advancing with thunderbolt in raised right hand, eagle on outstretched left, and snake at his feet 851 advancing with thunderbolt in raised right hand and sceptre as well as eagle in outstretched left 1223 advancing with thunderbolt in raised right hand and sceptre in outstretched left 25_0 26_0 27_0 709 733 advancing with thunderbolt in raised right hand and spear (?) in left 708 f. amours with Leda, Semele, Kallisto, and Ganymedes 228_7 androgynous (?) 292_4 594 androgynous with golden wings and heads of bulls and snake 1022 f. archaistic 744_1 Aristonous 1222 Assyrian 697_0 938_0 bearded head as pendant 302 bearded head at either end of whip-handle 301 beardless 285_0 742 748 946_0 f. 1224 (?) birth of Athena 709 f. 753_3 785 boy with whip (?) 826_6 bronze statuette of 'Geometric' age representing Zeus fulminant (?) 1222 bronze statuettes inlaid with silver eyes 503_0 Bryaxis (?) 921_0 bull (?) 924_0 bust as medallion on wreath 301 bust as support for arm of Attis 297 bust between horns of crescent 712_3 bust facing, with thunderbolt and sceptre to his right and left $887_{0(0)}$ bust supported on eagle with spread wings 1209 in chariot drawn by two eagles 462_0 in chariot drawn by one horse 830 in chariot drawn by two horses 820 823 cp. 285_0 in chariot drawn by four horses 436_1 825 830_8 831_1 (See also driving) in chitón and chlamýs 283_0 in chitón and himátion 574 577 597 f. 745_0 745_1 $881_{9(21)}$ $887_{0(0)}$ 957_0 colossal 754_1 conical stone 981_0 Dionysiac 1178 double 316 ff. with double axe and sceptre 573 ff. with double axe and spear 574 ff. double bust (with Dionysos) 388 double bust (with Hermes?) 388 double bust (with Sarapis?) 388 double bust (with Satyr) 388 driving chariot 950_0 (See also in chariot) driving two-horsed vehicle 285_0 driving winged chariot 321_1 duplicated on coin (standing and seated) 319 duplicated on gem (both seated) 318 ff. with female breasts 592 ff. 846 1220 (?) fighting Centaur (?) 614 f. four-eared 322 842 fulminant in two-horse chariot 820 851 fulminant in four-horse chariot 825 831_1 fulminant on pillar 45 Gigantomachia 712 f. 777_2 820 825 831_1 973_1 gilded eagle 423 with golden bay-wreath 258 with golden bull's-horns 1028 grasping or hurling thunderbolt in (sometimes beside) chariot 831_1 grasping thunderbolt in each hand 722 726 f. Hageladas 741 ff. 749 890_8 1222 f. hero-feast 1163 holding cult-image in his hand 950_0 962_2 holding eagle and thunderbolt 741_3 (See also advancing) on horseback 664_1 (?) infant asleep on mountain 961_0 infant carried by Amaltheia (?) 363_1 infant seated on ground 957_2 instructing Apollon 265 introduction of Herakles to Olympos 735 ff. 771 Janiform 322 ff. 326 ff. Janiform head (with Hera) (?) 662 Janiform head (with Hermes) 1219 with kálathos 597 f. 597_3 with kálathos, double axe, and sceptre 592 with kálathos, double axe, and spear 577 593 (?) linked to ground by means of fillets 574 long-haired 573 575 f. (?) Lysippos 45 762 1139_0 1143_5 1145_0 Myron 1078 oak-tree 111_0 570_0 with olive-wreath 323_1 Papylos 1101_3 Pheidias 475_7 598 757 ff. 849 921_0 (?) 1078 1138_5 pillar capped by pyramid (See pyramid-on-pillar) Polykleitos 1143 f. 1178 Polykleitos the younger (?) 1178 pot 3_0 pouring rain from right hand and holding thunderbolt in left 962_2 psychostasia 734_0 734_3 pursuit of

Zeus (cont.)

Zeus (cont.)
Semele 731 ff. 735_3 pyramid 1144 ff. pyramid-on-pillar 814 f. 1095_0 1147 (?) radiate $872_{0(5)}$ raising hand in attitude of benedictio Latina 291 recumbent on couch 1162 1171_3 recumbent on eagle 102_0 rushing forward with thunderbolt in raised right hand 731 sacred stone 982_0 f. (?) seated as child amid Kouretes 1210 seated on eagle 102_0 462_0 (See also upborne on eagle) seated on mountain 853 962_2 982_0 seated on rock 983_1 seated on rock with eagle flying from right hand and sceptre leaning against right shoulder 758 seated on tree 946_0 f. seated to hurl thunderbolt 473 475 seated to pour rain 962_2 seated with Artemis Ἐφεσία in right hand and sceptre in left 962_2 seated with three Charites (Moirai? Horai?) in right hand 232_0 seated with eagle flying from him 757 758 seated with eagle flying to him 757 seated with eagle in hand 1139_0 1143 seated with eagle in right hand and sceptre in left $871_{3(4)}$ seated with flower in right hand and sceptre in left 1224 (?) seated with jug in both hands above head of Acheloios 1117 seated with Nike in right hand and sceptre in left 319_4 758 760 (?) $873_{0(8)}$ 956_0 961_0 1139_0 1143 1189 1192 1192_6 1220 seated with phiále in right hand 1161 seated with phiále in right hand and cornu copiae in left 1105 seated with phiále in right hand and sceptre in left 1105 1116 f. (?) 1143 1145_0 1175 seated with phiále in right hand, sceptre in left, and eagle behind 280_1 seated with right hand raised to head 762 849 seated with sceptre in left hand 737 1173 seated with sceptre in left hand and phiále in right 736 seated with sceptre in right hand 755 f. (?) seated with sceptre in right hand and Athena Ἰλιάς in left 950_0 seated with sceptre in right hand and Nike in left 964_2 seated with sceptre in right hand and sometimes phiále in left 906_3 seated with sceptre in right hand and thunderbolt in left 756 seated with thunderbolt in right hand and sceptre in left 280_1 318 753 ff. 757 f. seated with thunderbolt in right hand, sceptre in left, and eagle flying before him 1224 seated with thunderbolt and sceptre in right hand and phiále in left 735 seated with vine-staff in right hand and thunderbolt in left 909_0 shouldering axe 621_1 (?) snake

Zeus (cont.)
1061 1107 ff. 1174 soldier 705 f. standing with Artemis Ἐφεσία in right hand 962_2 standing with eagle in left hand 751_5 standing with eagle in right hand 751_5 standing with eagle in right hand and sceptre in left 319_4 951_0 957_0 968_0 standing with Nike in right hand and sceptre in left 1145_0 standing with phiâle in right hand and sceptre in left 280_1 $881_{0(21)}$ standing with sceptre (?) in raised right hand and phiâle (?) in left 752 f. standing with sceptre in raised right hand and thunderbolt in lowered left 749_1 820 f. standing with sceptre in right hand and eagle beside him 1143 1230 standing with spear or sceptre in raised right hand and left covered by himâtion 918_0 standing with spear in right hand and eagle at his feet 707 standing with spear in right hand and thunderbolt in left 957_0 standing with thunderbolt in lowered right hand 280_1 standing with thunderholt in lowered right hand and sceptre in left 734 f. 745 ff. 1145_0 standing with thunderholt in outstretched right hand and sceptre in left 917_1 standing with thunderbolt in raised right hand and eagle on outstretched left 737 739 $819_{0(5)}$ standing with thunderbolt in raised right hand and sceptre in lowered left 833 standing with wreath in outstretched right hand 1192 statuette held by Laodikeia 319_7 320_0 with supported foot 266_1 surrounded by seven stars 238_0 syncretistic 850 τετράγωνος 1147_8 Theokosmos 1138_5 theriomorphic 1151 three-eyed 892_5 1144_2 traveller 1102_0 with trident, eagle, and crab 577_2 with trident, thunderbolt, and eagle 798 with trident, thunderbolt, and sea-monster 798 trophy 111_0 upborne on eagle 951_0 (See also seated on eagle) upborne on eagle between horns of crescent 712_3 winged 1028 xôanon 1196 youthful 861_5 1030 1185 youthful figure holding pomegranate 986_0 Ζῆνες at Olympia 349

Identified with Ādad 983_7 Adonaios 293_0 Agamemnon, the god (?) 1069 Ahura Mazdâh 976_0 Amen-Râ 926_0 Amoun 293_0 Asklepios 1076 ff. Attis 292 Baal 869_0 Ba'al Milik (Melek, Molok) (?) 1108 Ba'al-šamin $886_{0(0)}$ 889 Bakchos 287 1184 Celtic Janiform god 323 Chrysor, the Phoenician Hephaistos 715 1037 Daimon 1160_4 Dionysos 282 287 f. 288_0 Epopeus 445 Erechtheus 793 Eros

Zeus (cont.)
1028 Great Ox 354 Hades 582_4 1058 Hephaistos 715 Ianus 328_7 Jehovah 889 elder Kabeiros 664_1 Kasiu 983_0 (?) Keraunos 12 f. 119_1 Kragos 972_0 974_0 Mars 50 Melqart or Melqarth (?) 1109_0 Metis (masc.) 1028 Pan 349 1023 1024 1039 Papas 836 Pikos 220_6 342_0 693_4 694_0 695_0 696_0 697_0 Poseidon 582 ff. Poseidon and Ares 1225 Protogonos 1023 1039 1051 Roman emperors (See Personated by) Sabaoth 293_0 Sabazios 275 1184 Sarapis 714_3 (?) 745_1 773_0 1158 Solymos (?) 974_0 Theos Hypsistos $882_{0(22)}$ $883_{0(0)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ $886_{0(30)}$ 969_3 Trophonios (Trephonios) 1075 Velchanos 946_0 ff. the world 1028 f. (See also Functions cosmic) Zan 220_6 341_6 342_0 345 942_0

Assimilated to Apollon 986_0 Chaos 1051 Dionysos 1178 Poseidon 327_2 (?) (See also Identified with) Zagreus 980_5

Associated with Acheloios 1092_2 1138_5 Acheloios and Kallirrhoe (?) 1117 Agathos Daimon 925_0 Agdistis and Attis 1229 Aigokeros 938_0 Apollon 317 317_2 Apollon and Themis 730_0 Artemis and Athena 1144_2 Athena 259_0 920_0 923_0 955_0 1101_3 Athena Νικηφόρος 287_2 Athena Σώτειρα 1169_4 Athena and Apollon 458 1094_0 Athena and Herakles 1078 Athena, Herakles, Apollon $875_{1(2)}$ Boule (?) 260_0 daimones 931_0 Demeter and Kore 258_3 259_0 Dike 1029 1033_1 Dione 974_0 1029 Dionysos and Athena 925_0 Dioskouroi 1209_2 Enhodia and Polis 1155 Ge 266 f. 292_4 Ge and Athenaia 1115 Ge and Helios 729_0 $884_{0(0)}$ Ge, Helios, and Erinyes 728_0 f. goddess bearing wheat-ears (cornu copiae?) and torcb (sceptre?) 820 hearth 728_0 Hekate 714_2 714_3 835_6 838 Helios 1114 Helios, rivers, earth, and chthonian powers 728_0 Helios, Selene, Asklepios, Hygieia, etc. 259_0 Hephaistos 972_1 Hera 259_0 592 707 776_3 893_2 894_1 900_0 1137 1144_2 1150 1157 Hera and Athena (= Capitoline triad) 319_7 Hera, Demeter Θεσμοφόρος, Kore, Baubo 259_0 Herakles $492_{0(0)}$ 1157_1 Herakles Ἀρίκηγος 292_4 Herkyna 1073 1075 Hermes (?) 957_0 Hestia 259_0 317_2 960_0 1228 Horai 94_2 Kabeiroi 664_1 (?) Kouretes 587 938_0 Men 285_0 Meter 950_0 Meter ἐν Ἄγραις (?) 1142_3 Moira and Erinys 1102_7 Muses 898_5 Nike 853 1100_1 Nomos 1029 οἱ Σεβαστοί 951_0 Persephone 893_0 Philia and Tyche Ἀγαθή 1163 Polis $878_{0(6)}$

Zeus (cont.)
Poseidon 959_0 Poseidon and Hades 785 Poseidon and Plouton 802 (?) Sarapis and Isis 922_0 table 728_0 Themis 258 723_0 Themis and Dike 897_3 Themis and Dionysos 261 f. Trophonios (Trephonios) 1073 f. Tyche Ἀγαθή $879_{0(17)}$ Zagreus $1113_{0(2)}$
Compared with Adonis and Tammuz 345 Agathos Daimon 1161 1163 Apollon 201 ff. Argos 379 Boreas 444 Hermes 384_0 385_0 1068 Kronos 554 ff. Kyklops 990 Oidipous 1154 Penates 1068 Plouton 385_0 1105 Talos 948_1 Tammuz 347 Thyestes, a storm-god (?) 1022
Contrasted with Asklepios 1081 f. Charon 641_2
In relation to Apollon 267 730_0 Aristaios 1112_6 Asklepios 1178 Dionysos 267 ff. 522 1210 Eleos $875_{1(2)}$ Erinys 1102_7 Hera 693 kings 1074 Kyrios Sabaoth $884_{0(0)}$ men 855 Metis (masc.) 1025 Nike 982_0 Oidipous 1154 f. Orphic Eros 316_5 Pepromene 1138_5 Phanes 1051 Phoibos 500 839 Poseidon 582 ff. 846 850 Pythagoras 225 Rhea 552_1 'Schwanfrauen' 51_1 Semele 663 table 1141_8 Themis 873_2 thunder 827 ff. 851 f. Trajan 1179 ff. tripod 1216 Trophonios (Trephonios) 900_0 1073 ff. twins 422 ff. 843 Zagreus 522 980_5 Zan 353
Supersedes Anatolian mother-goddess or her consort 810 Artemis Ἐφεσία 1220 Ba'al 1192 (?) Dion (?), consort of Dione 353 Dios, the Thraco-Phrygian sky-god 280 f. earth-mother 592 (?) 595 846 hero in snake form (?) 1111 Hittite bull-god 910_1 Kronos 554 601 845 Lykos 1013 Minos 940_0 Zan 349 f. 353 f. 842
Superseded by Apollon 180 816 902_0 Authentes Christos 945_0 Bes 675 Christ 945_0 1209 St Elias $875_{1(5)}$ 894_1 894_3 897_5 898_5 899_2 902_1 906_0 922_4 1073 1227 St Gerlando 910_1 God 506 Holy Cross (Timios Stauros) 935_0 939_0 St John 923_0 St Michael 894_3 895_0
Survives as Zanos (Ζᾶνος) or Zonos (Ζῶνος) in modern Crete 353
—— absent from original Orphic cosmogony (?) 1051 acorn of (chestnut or other species of nut) 775_0 all things created anew in belly of 1027 altars of 15 ff. 187 231_3 259_0 291_2 873_3 $875_{1(2)}$ 892_4 937_0 950_0 ff. 952_0 f. 975_0 f. 1099_2 1100_0 1105 1141 1144_2 1147 1180 f. 1228 annually reborn as Zagreus 934_0 938_0 'appellativisch' 1137_0 (?) back of, aér 1028 belly of, the earth 1028 blood from birth of 928_0 929_0 body of, the various parts of the world 1028 f breast of, aér 1028 bull as theanthropic animal of, in Crete 539 cave of, at Inönü in Phrygia 249_2 chariot of 27 33 43 63_0 820 830 ff. 851 950_0 cherry of 775_0 consecrated men called Ζᾶνες by the Greeks 343_0 dead husband consecrated as Zeus Κτήσιος 1067 decrees of, confirmed by Dionysos 1030 dedication of Zeus Σαονάζιος (= Σαβάζιος) to Zeus Κορυφαῖος 285_0 Dionysiac traits in cult of 909_0 Dionysos called Διὸς φώς 273 distaff of (vervain) 775_0 eagle as messenger of 950_0 ear of 1028 Elpides of 962_0 epiphany of 982_0 epitaph of 220_6 (See also tomb of) eye-brows of (ox-eye) 775_0 eyes of 950_0 eyes of, emit lightning 502 ff. eyes of, the sun and moon 117 1028 feet of, the Underworld 1028 fleece of 1065 1140 1166_3 (?) flower of (carnation?) 775_0 garden of 1017 1021 1027 girdle of, the sea 1028 of gold 1190 golden (?) mattock of 806_1 gravestones dedicated to 292_4 hair of, the stars 1028 head and face of, the sky 1028 hearth of 815 Herakles called Διὸς παῖς 273 herald of 1141 Hittite traits in cult of 615 f. horn of Zeus Ἄμμων worn by Arsinoe ii 773_0 1136_1 horns of, the Milky Way 1028 horse of 830 horses of 436_1 830_7 (See also Types in chariot) house of 44_1 342_0 344_0 hymn to, by Kleanthes 854 ff. hymn to Orphic 1027 1028 images fallen from 963_0 immoralities of, attacked by Christian apologists 942_0 inherits double axe from 'Minoan' sky-god 559 installation of 285_0 invents parasites 1169 jars of 1054 ff. laws of 929_0 933_0 love towards, denied by Aristotle 1167 men the offspring of 855 mind of 321_1 mind of, aithér 1028 f. miraculous spring of, at Tyana 569_4 mysteries of (See Rites mysteries) a name common to the three brothers Zeus, Poseidon, and Hades 582_4 navel of 190 ff. 191_{10} oldest surviving temple of 915_8 in the Orphic theogonies 1051 palace of 1226 pillars of 423 plain of 1021 in the plural (Δίες) 1219 in the plural (Δίες Κτήσιοι) 321 in the plural (Δῖοι) 252_3 in the plural (Ζᾶνες) 343_0 349 profile of, on Mt Juktas 940_0 rays of 876_0 rebirth of 230 381 522 852 road of 36 f. 52 464 840 843 Rumour the messenger of 904_3 sacred eels of 590_3 sacred grove of 975_0 sacred lands of 930_0 sacred meadows of

Zeus (cont.)

Zeus (cont.)
933_0 sacred stone of 982_0 f. in the Salian hymn (?) 328 ff. salt pool of 616_1 scales of 734_3 sceptre of 956_2 1026 1030 1058 1131 1132 shoulders of, aér 1028 sinews of 228 449_0 450_0 spear of 15_0 547_3 704 ff. spring of 569_4 590_3 890_7 1118 f. staff of (vervain) 396_0 397_0 swathing-bands of 929_0 sword of 591 705 712 ff. 848 threatens to cut men in halves 672_1 three gods of the name Zeus (Iupiter) distinguished 941_0 throne of 343_0 475_7 838 1082 1131 toast of Zeus Σωτήρ 1129_6 tomb of 219 341_6 348 354 556_0 694_0 695_0 696_0 934_0 940_0 ff. touch of 961_0 tower of 343_0 354 travestied 1033 treasury of 23 triad of Zeuses 1093_1 watch-tower of 343_0 354 whip of 260_0 824 ff. 851 will of 14_1 261_0 winds as horses of 830_7 wings of 1028 wisdom of 258_3 wrath of 1097_2 1098_1 1098_2
Zeus, as name of a ship 987_0
Zeus Hýpatos, as name of a ship 876_0
Zeus, king of Crete 940_0 941_0 942_0
Zeus, the planet
Function: γένεσις 558_0
Zibeleïzis
Cult: Getai 822 851
Etymology: 823
Zio See Ziu
Ziobe See Zougo
Zioter (Zeter) 1212
Ziu 50 ff.
Functions: sky 50 81 storm 81 sun 81 warrior 50
Identified with Ares 50
Attributes: spear 76 swan (?) 51_1 sword 77 thunderbolt 75_1 76 thunder-drum (?) 83 wheel 77_2 78_1 78_2
Types: bearded 74 ff. beardless 74 f. driver of two-horse chariot 75 rider on horse supported by male giant 74 ff.
Identified with Dings (?) 50 f. Er 50 f. 114 Iring (?) 51 f. Irmin 52 114 Sahsnot 50 f.
Assimilated to Iupiter 74 ff. 78_2 80_2
In relation to Wodan 62_1
—— name of, attached to Runic letter 1212 f.
Zobe See Zougo
Zogui See Zougo
Zonos 353
Zophasemin
Genealogy: children of Mot 1038
Etymology: 1038
Zoroastres 33 ff.
Genealogy: descendant of Ninos and Semiramis Rhea 694_0
Etymology: 33 ff.
Identified with Er, s. of Armenios 54_1
—— perpetual fire on mountain of 33 977_0
Zougo (Zogui)
Cult: bearded and breasted goddess (? Zobe ? Ziobe) 595 f. 846 1220

INDEX II

SUBJECTS AUTHORITIES

The larger numerals refer to pages, the smaller numerals to foot-notes.

Ábata of Zeus on Mt Oite 903_2 of Zeus Δικταῖος 928_0 of Zeus Καταιβάτης 21 f. of Zeus Φίλιος 1178
Abbott, G. F. 3 36_3 480_7 1112_7 1164_1
Abeken, W. 708 918_0
Abel, E. 12_3 1019 1029
Abrahams, Miss E. B. 515_2
Acclamation of imperial house 980_0
Acíeris 630
Acorn of Iupiter (walnut) 775_0 of Zeus (chestnut or other species of nut) 775_0
Acorns 405 407_0 410_0 523 802 965_0 1166_1
Actors, Etruscan 378
Acy, E. d' 690_1
Adam, J. 44_3 44_4 541_1
Adamant 447_8 449_0
Adelphoí in cult of Theos Hypsistos $883_{0(25)}$ $885_{0(0)}$
Adler, E. N. $888_{0(0)}$
Adler, Frau $807_{3(3)}$ 873_2 907_0 981_1 982_0 983_0 987_0
Adulterers in Tenedos slain with two sacred axes 668 f.
Ádyta of Asklepios at Trikke 1088 of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Agrigentum 915_0 1227
Adze held by statuette 387_4(?) in Egypt 545_0 tombstones of Gallia Lugudunensis dedicated sub ascia 547_0
Adze-worship of Gaul 547_0
Aér 611_2 949_5
—— conceived as shoulders, breast, and back of Zeus 1028
Aeraki, G. 935_0
Aerolite 983_0(?)
Agápe, the 'love-supper' of the early Christians 1173
Agnus castus 517_3(?) 972_1 1118
Agonistic amphorae (?) 1064 tables $490_{0(5)}$ $491_{0(0)}$ urns $490_{0(5)}$ $491_{0(0)}$ 562
Agrenón 167 170_3 181_1 187_4 192 574 592
Agyieús-pillar 160 ff. 499 676 841 f. 844
—— compared with Diana-pillar 160 confused with herm 160_5
Ahlwardt, C. W. 855_1
Ahrens, H. L. 294_0 344 463_1 495_6 582
Aigís Salian shield as 377 worn by emperors 1194 worn by Zeus (See Index I Zeus Attributes)
Aithér 611_2 840 949_5 950_0 1026 1029
—— conceived as ear(?) of Zeus 1028_8 conceived as mind of Zeus 1028 f.
Akropóleis sacred to Zeus 873_0
Akrotéria 16_1 1102_8
Alábastron 305_0
Albers, C. 868_8
Alberti, J. 665_0 1218
Alders 472 949_5
Allegorical (?) figure of Kairos by Lysippos 859 f.
Allen, J. Romilly 604
Allen, T. W. 353_1
Allène, H. 118_2
Almonds 154_0 298 300
Almond-tree 295 969_4 970_0
Altar, 'baetylic' 193_2
—— bearing image of Mt Argaios 978_0 before sacred tree 285_0 blood poured over 517_1 decorated with double axe 1228 entwined with snake and flanked by snakes 1175 garlanded 1193 1194_4 holed 1056 1058 in two stages 975_0 of Apollon 163_4 of ashes at Olympia 21 955_0 of ashes at Pergamon 955_0 1181 of brushwood in Skythia 547_3 of Chians at Delphoi 170_2 of horns in Delos 1227 of roughly squared stones in Crete 926_0 of rude stones at Athens 1117 of rude stones on vase 903_0 of silver in Persia 34_1 of wooden blocks on Mt Kithairon 898_6 of Zeus 1141 of Zeus Ἀφέσιος 892_4 of Zeus Βουλαῖος 259_0 of Zeus Ἰδαῖος in Crete 937_0 of Zeus Ἰδαῖος in Phrygia 950_0 ff. of Zeus Καταιβάτης 15 ff. of Zeus Κεραύνιος 1228 of Zeus Λαβραΰνδεύς 1228 of Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 1228 of Zeus Λιταῖος 1099_2 1100_0 of Zeus Λύκαιος 187 1105 of Zeus Στράτιος 975_0 f. of Zeus Τέλειος 1147 of Zeus Τέττιος 1144_2 of Zeus Ὕπατος $875_{1(3)}$ of Zeus Φίλιος 1180 of Zeus Φύξιος 1144_2 portable 1128_0 rock-cut 937_0 952_0 f. stepped 263 surmounted by ritual horns 517 with boar in relief 1063 with festoon-bearing eagle 302 with four legs and central stem 193_2 pl. xi with hollow for libations 983_0 See also Pillar-altars, Table-altar
Altars, bilingual, from Palmyra $885_{0(29)}$ $886_{0(0)}$ dedicated to Zeus on mountain-tops 873_1 fire-altars(?) 426 of Zeus 231_8 twelve dedicated to Ianus as god of months 336_8

Aly, W. 456 925_1 926_0 1227
Amber as Hyperborean offering (?) 498 as juice or sweat of solar rays 499 as tears of Apollon 484 843 as tears of Heliades 484 cp. 477 as tears of meleagrídes 497 associated with sun-god (?) 498–637 beads of 498 636 f. called élektron 397_0 499 carvings in 938_0 1221 collected from trees (?) 473_7 compared with gum tragacanth 483 compared with resin from storax-trees $492_{0(0)}$ double axes of 636 f. studs of 618 with neolithic borings and cup-marks 498
Amber routes 493_2 844
—— correspond with routes of Hyperborean offerings to Apollon at Delos 497 f. from Baltic to Adriatic viâ Elbe, Moldau, Danube, etc. 494 497 f. from Baltic to Black Sea viâ Vistula and Dniester 494 498
Ambrosch, J. A. 641_2 803
Ambrosía 275 928_0
Ambrosia, a mixture of water, oil, and seeds 1058
Ambrosía, lily called 773_0
Amelung, W. 103_0 407_0 409_0 515_2 1079 1225
Ámnion 517_1
Amphora, water spilt from, as rain-charm 832 f.
Amulets 125 f. 141_2 387_4 410_0 528 540 f. 625 f. 699 802 1084 1200_3 1200_4
Anagnórisis 1013_1
Ancestor, buried, represented as phallós 1089
Anchor as symbol of Okeanos 479
—— leaden, inscribed Aphrodite Σώζουσα 987_0 inscribed Zeus Κάσι(ο)ς Σώξ[ωv] 987_0 inscribed Zeus Ὕπατος 876_0
Anderson, J. G. C. $883_{0(0)}$
Anderson, W. J. 965_0
André, A. 1198 1208
Andre, F. 195_1
Andree, R. 479_8 480_2 482_2
Andrian, F. von 236_5 868_6
Androgynous deities at Babylon 675 at Rome 1060 in Egypt 772_1 in Galatia 969_4 of Orphists: Ananke or Adrasteia 1022 of Orphists: Phanes 1026
Angermann, C. T. 350_4 1087
Animal names given to priests and priestesses 215_1
Animals made of bread or wax as surrogates 1140_5
Ankh 1200_3 (?)
Anrich, G. 116_0 123_0
Ansa lunata 542
Anson, L. $491_{0(0)}$ 810_0
Ansted, D. T. 907_2
Anthropogony, Egyptian 1023 Orphic 1032 of Sanchouniathon 1037
Anthropomorphic conception of the sky 1 of thunderbolt 783 f. 810 850 of thunder and lightning 828 of Zeus Μειλίχιος and Zeus Φίλιος 1173
Anthropomorphism, progressive (bundle of herbs, puppet, bust, statue) 1172
Antíphrasis 1112_7
Antonesco, T. 113_0
Anz, W. 129_1
Ape 649_4 (?) 987_0
Apodiopómpesis 1099_1
Apotheosis, caldron of 210 ff. 841 1031 f. of Getai 227 of Homer 1203_4 of 'king' and 'queen' at Athens 1137_2 of Miltiades at Delphoi (?) 1137_2 of Orphic votary 121_1 of Salmoxis 226 f. on eastern frieze of Parthenon 1135 ff.
Apotrópaia 217_0 291_2 367_1 506 ff. 642 f. 645 ff. 654 667_4 702 ff. 712 827 1058 1162_3 1224
Appellative of deity becomes separate personality 1152_4 (Euryodeia) 1089 (Telesphoros) varies from time to time and place to place 1160
Apples 187_4 (?) 672 as prize in athletic contest 467 $490_{0(5)}$ 964_2 (?) golden 134_1 $488_{0(2)}$ 1003 1014 1016 f. 1020 f. 1030 golden, surmounted by cross 609 of Hesperides 134_1 of Manto $488_{0(2)}$ of Venus Caelestis 68_2 on sceptres 763_1 singing 1009 ff. 1016 sons born with 1008 f.
Apple-branch 134_1 1011
Apple-tree as lucky tree 403_0 at Gryneia $489_{0(4)}$ $490_{0(0)}$ in folk-tales 1011 1016 of Diana Nemorensis (?) 420_1 of king Volsung 682
Apsidal temples at Arne in Boiotia, Mt Ptoïon, the Theban Kabeirion, Thespiai 900_0 of Athena Πολιάς at Gonnoi 870_0 of Cheiron (?) on Mt Pelion 870_0 of Kabeiroi at Pergamon (?) 953_3
Aqueducts of Mylasa 591_4 of Pergamon 956_0 of Urbs Salvia 803
Arbois de Jubainville, H. d' 476_{12} 989
Arch above Aphrodite 363 above Artemis Περγαία (?) 363 above Chipa 362 above Isis 362 above Nemesis 363 above Semele (?) carrying Dionysos (?) 362 f. as type of Janus 354 ff. 842 at Oea 360_2 at Rheims 359_3 at Saint Remy 359_2 in Forum Boarium at Rome 360_3 of Constantine 361_5 of Janus at entrance of Roman Forum 355 ff. of Titus 360_1 1203_7 of Trajan at Beneventum 1181_0 of Trajan at Rome 361_5 over gods 365 ff. over goddesses 362 f. starry, in Hindu art 367 triumphal, its original character and purpose 359 ff. winged 362
Archaistic reliefs 199 ff. 1203_3 1229
Arfert, P. 994_1
Arm, golden, in English tale 224_1
Armlets of silver 998
Armstrong, G. C. 1217
Arndt, P. 393_2 598
Arneth, J. 699_4
Arnim, J. von 854_9 855_1 856_1 856_2 856_4 856 858_1 858_4

Arnold, E. 71_5
Arrows of Kāma 774_1
Arrow-head, neolithic, regarded as thunderbolt 528 767_2 set in gold, silver, or bronze 528_5 set in golden lily 528
Arvanitopoullos, A. S. 272_5 815_2 870_0 871_0
Ascia See Adze
Ashby, T. 142_2
Ashes buried in amphorae 870_0 holy 791_0 of Titans made into men 1032
Ash-trees 949_5
Asphodel 1154
Asses connected with Dionysos 464 connected with Satyroi 464 connected with Silenos 464 connected with Vesta 99_4 cult of 464_6 milk of 463_1 must not enter precinct of Elektryone 499_5 sacrificed to Apollon 463 f. 463_1 sacrificed to Ares 464 sacrificed to Priapos 464 sacrificed to Winds 464
Assmann, E. 580_3 600_3
Astragalomantic inscription $807_{5(5)}$ 1067
Astrágalos 1030
Astrapé 11
Astropelékia 506
—— called also astrapopelékia and astrapóboula 506 844
Asylía $578_{4(1)}$
Athanasia in later Platonism 1168_2
Atkinson, B. F. C. 823 824_1 851 947_0 1217 1219 f. 1229
Atlantes 915_0 1227
Atonement, rite of 1097_2
Attribute as intermediate phase between fetish and symbol 617 814
Audollent, A. $889_{0(0)}$ $889_{0(34)}$
Augenblicksgötter 13_1 827 851
aus'm Weerth, E. 74_4
Aust, E. 46_0 724_0 1172_0
Austen, G. E. V. 699
Avellino, F. M. 1041
Axe as curreucy unit 618 (?) 655_1 656_0 as father of she-bear's son 679 as visible token of sky-god 698 as weapon of sky-god 677 bronze, regarded as thunderbolt 559_2 bronze, survives for sacrificial purposes 630 carried by priests and priestesses 620 ff. 847 ceremonial 620 ff. 635 ff. 646 ceremonial, adorned with gold and amber 618 ceremonial, of bronze over clay core 618 ceremonial, of copper 617 combined with animal's head 110_3 combined with hull 622_3 633 combined with forepart of horse 633 f. combined with horse or rider 618 635 combined with lion's head 631 f. combined with stag and hounds 639 combined with tree or column or pillar implies union of sky-god with earth-goddess 533 combined with wolf's head 632 decorated with swastika 647_4 decorated with zigzags and spirals 1221 hafted, symbolises union of sky-father with earth-mother
Axe (cont.)
677 imbedded in stalactite pillar 530 ff. 677 imbedded in tree 677 683 f. 692 imbedded in wooden column 528 f. 677 in connexion with bird and tree 692 in rites of Intercidona 643_8 inscribed, from Delphoi 628 miniature 637 f. miniature, becomes quasi-anthropomorphic pendant 647 ff. miniature, inscribed 619 1221 of iron set up as preservative against lightning and hail 704 of stone or bronze arranged for solar cult (?) 618 of stone engraved with Mithraic subjects 510 f. of stone inscribed 507 510 ff. of stone kept as preservative against fire 506_8 of stone kept as preservative against lightning 506 f. of stone kept as preservative against thunder 703 f. of stone regarded as thunderbolt 505 ff. of stone set in gold 506 510 of stone set in iron 509 of stone worn as apotrópaion 506 509 f. of stone ('thunderstone') worshipped in India 790 792 of Noah 609 f. of Roman lictor 633 ff. 680 847 1221 of Sir Hywel-y-Vwyall 703_2 poised on pole 702 sacred, distinguished by colour, size, or decoration 635 ff. 847 sacred, modified into gong 649 ff. sacred, set upright on throne 545_0 sacred, with green haft 544_3 superstitious practices with 698 ff. 848 suspended by cord 702 f. symbolic 635 f. thrown from boat on river Stour 703_2 two-handled 620 f. used for divination 701 ff. used to kill off aged and infirm (?) 703_2 votive 646 f. 668 f. with crescentic perforated blade 620 f. 622 622_3
—— double, affixed to wooden column 533 845 as heirloom of Lydian kings 572 as unit of currency 655_1 as weapon of sky-god 513 516 518 552 676 845 848 associated with sacred tree 643 at Tenedos 654 ff. belongs primarily to sky-god, secondarily to earth-goddess associated with him 533 625 846 between corn-ears and grape-bunch 564 between horns of bucrania 539 between horns of bull's head 527 538 between ritual horns 539 845 borne by kings of Lydia 559 561 borne by youthful Hittite god 552 hound with fillet 565 573 brought by Arselis from Lydia into Karia 559 572 845 called λάβρυς by Lydians 560 combined with crab 663 combined with lily 774 combined with trident 532_1 577 connected by means of fillet with amphora 657 connected by means of fillet with Nike 657 f. decorated with concentric circles 646 f. decorated with diagonals and zigzags 639 ff. decorated with swastika 647_4 decoration of 635 ff. deity of 543 ff. descending from sky 516 525 845 duplicated to denote god and goddess (?)

Axe (cont.)
537 653 duplication of 652 ff. 668 essentially the weapon of a god, not a goddess 601 flanked by pair of pillars 524 f. from Delphoi 190_0 hafted in leafy stem 528 653 845 hafted in tree-trunk 517 f. 520 f. 533 845 head of, with panther (?) 599_2 held by winged sky-god (?) 544 845 hidden meaning of, in Gnostic teaching 613 imbedded in wooden columns 528 f. 532 845 implies anthropomorphic sky-god 543 ff. in Crete, primarily the attribute of Kronos, secondarily that of Rhea 601 in Egypt 545_6 in Karia 559 f. 561 572 ff. 586 601 601_3 845 f. in Lydia 559 ff. 638 845 in mid air 514 ff. 623_2 (?) in 'Minoan' cult 513 ff. 844 1221 in pairs 308_1 in Phrygia 565 ff. 610 845 in relation to columns or pillars 528 ff. in relation to descending warrior-deity 543 in relation to horns 535 ff. cp. 1221 in relation to labarum 601 ff. 846 in relation to Labyrinth 600 f. 846 in relation to tree- or plant-forms 516 ff. in relief on pithoi 926_0 in western Europe 617 ff. in western and northern Europe gives place to single axe and hammer 620 incised on 'Minoan' pillars 532 f. incised on 'Minoan' wall 532_1 inserted in stalactite pillars 530 ff. 845 of amber 636 f. of bronze 637 of bronze decorated with moth 643 ff. of bronze plated with gold 637 of copper for exchange or ceremony 617 of electrum 637 f. of gold 518 520 538 637 f. of iron in bundle of iron rods 1221 of ivory 640_0 1221 of lead 540 of steatite 535 of Athena 625 f. 847 of Constantine the Great (?) 609 of Epeios 613 of Hellos 677 f. of Hephaistos 709 f. of Hippolyte 559 of Kabeiros 953_3 of Thracian woman 122_0 of Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 559 ff. 845 f. of Zeus Σαβάζιος (?) 283_0 on head of 'Minoan' goddess 1221 on stepped base between two pillars 524 f. 656 passes through successive phases of fetish, attribute, and symbol 617 pictograph of, passes into linear forms, and thence into syllabic and alphabetic characters 613 613_2 scenes from worship of 517 f. 519 ff. shouldered by panther (?) 572 simulating lily-forms 524 527 soul of, represented as butterfly (moth) 315_3 cp. 643 ff. 847 surmounted by raven (?) 518 520 survives in Gnostic teaching 611 ff. 846 survives in Ophite belief 610 f. 846 symbolises union of sky-father with earth-mother 653 657 673 677 twined with snake 565 twined with snake and surmounted by radiate head 565 votive 629 669_3 with duplicated blades 516 518 520 535 538 847 with eagle standing on it

Axe (cont.)
573 with multiple blades 624 654 847 with palm-branches 573 within bay-wreath 565 573

Axe-bearing god 535 543 ff.

—— of 'Minoans' identified with Kronos 548 ff.

Axe-blades and axe-hafts in megalithic art of western Europe 685 ff.

Axe-cult See Axe-worship

Axe-haft, golden 989 silver 989 See also Axe-blades

Axe-hammer 627_5 635 f.

Axe-head adorned with figure of horse or rider 618 combined with animal-head 632_6 combined with lion 632_6 combined with lion and hounds 632_6 combined with two lions and prey 635_3 combined with lioness 1221 of semi-precious stone 635 f. symbolic or model 633

Axe-shaped pendants 647 ff. 698 847

Axe-worship 544_3 ff. development of 609 in Assyria 545_0 in Crete 513 ff. 535 ff. 623 ff. in Crete and Tenedos compared 522 537 668 in Egypt 544_3 545_0 685 in Gaul 547_0 685 ff. in Karia 572 ff. 685 in Lydia 559 ff. 572 587 in Mesopotamia 545_0 546_0 in northern islands of Aegean 314 at Pagasai 660 685 in Persia 546_0 in Phrygia 565 ff. in Rome 546_0 in Tenedos 522 654 ff. 685 847

Axinomanteia 546_0 (?) 701 ff.

Axis of universe 44_3 169 170_1 840

Áxones of Solon 1093_1 1094_0 1095_0

B., G. Ch. 1003_2

Babelon, E. 382_3 429_5 430_1 592_4 635_2 656_4 658_2 674_1 674_3 674_5 675_1 675_7 676_5 707_{2-5} 741 741_2 747_1 755_4 762_0 796_0 975_9 983_0 1085 1172_0 1189_8 1192_2

Baboon worshipped in Egypt 987_0

Bachmann, L. 260_0

Bachmeyer, L. 76_1

Bachofen, J. J. 230_1 680_1

Back, F. 164_6

Bährens, E. $329_{0(4)}$ 337_4

Bahrfeldt, M. 676_1 676_2

Bailey, C. 2_3

Baitylos, anthropomorphised 555_0

Bákchos 199_2

Ball as agonistic type 964_2 (?) as toy of Zagreus 1030 cosmic significance of 933_9 golden, of infant Zeus 933_0 cp. 1227

Band, O. 1137_3 1138_4 1139 1140_2

Banduri, A. 106_2 107_3

Bangert, A. 476_{12}

Banner of Constantine the Great 603

Banquet at sacrifice of Persian kings 974_1 at sacrifice to Zeus Στράτιος 974_1 celestial 1197 in cult of St Elias 975_0 of Thyestes 1021

Banqueting-hall of Nero, circular 254_5

Baptism, Christian 123_0 in blood of bull and ram 306

Bardocucullus 1089
Baring-Gould, S. 671_4 1002
Barley offered to Apollon Γενέτωρ 223_3
Barley-grains 18_6
Bartels, M. 960_0
Barth, H. 905_0
Base, the Chigi 199_2 pl. xii
Basileús on eastern frieze of Parthenon 1135 ff.
Basilídes worn by basileús at Athens 1136
Basilissa (Basilinna) on eastern frieze of Parthenon 1135 ff.
Basket 1175 1199 1205_4 Cabiric 299
Basons, golden 1009
Bassi, D. 641_2
Bate, Miss D. M. A. 939_0
Bates, W. N. 466_2
Bather, A. G. 303_3 827_2
Battle-axe borne by rider-god 312_5
Baud-Bovy, D. 905_0 906_0
Baudissin, Count W. W. 553_2 675_4 $886_{0(30)}$ $887_{0(0)}$ 970_0 981_1 983_0 987_0 1037 1038 1109_0
Bauer, K. 1197_3
Baumeister, A. 154_0 479_2 853_5 854_5 861_7 865_2 874_1 1044
Baumstark, A. 128_4
Baunack, T. 1082
Baur, P. V. C. 615 615_2 615_3
Bay-branch 203_0 207_0 262 ff. 461_0 565_8 630 1170_8 1193
Bayfield, M. A. 502_2 1067 1100_0
Bay-leaves chewed by the Pythia and others for mantic, prophylactic, cathartic, or hygienic reasons 264_2 garland of 302
Bayley, H. 139_3
Bay-tree 308_1 400_{11} 486 710 844 949_5 called tripos 196 highly charged with divinity, but not a vegetable form of Apollon 264_2 not struck by lightning 751_2
Bay-trunk 196
Bay-wreath 244 258 262 ff. 388 390 470 $490_{0(5)}$ 573 577 597_3 714_2 756_1 902_2(?) 924_0 946_0 1091 1158_6 1187_4 1192 f. 1223 embroidered 244_4 enclosing Charites 1193 of gilt bronze 301_1 of gold 301 (?) 464 preceded by oak-wreath as prize at Pythian games 486
Beads, amber 498 636 f. button 647_6 eye 647_6
Beam worshipped at Rome as sort of ianus 364 f.
Beanstalk, Jack and the 88_3
Bear in ancient religion 680_1 in folk-tales from Pyrenees 402_1 in relation to Artemis 680 in relation to Zeus 227 ff. mates with wood-cutting priest 678 f. metamorphosis into 227 ff. priestess of Artemis conceived as 228_4 (?)
Bear's Hole (?) as name of Idaean Cave 939_0
Bears as nurses of Zeus 227 f. 928_0 939_0 sinews of 449_0
'Bears,' worshippers of Artemis Βραυρωνία called 228_4
Bear-goddess (Kallisto) $1114_{0(6)}$
Bear-skin 227 228 449_0 450_0
Beard of Iupiter (silver-bush) 775_0
Beast-bridegroom 666_3
Beasts substituted for new-born children 1012
Beating with sacred rods 635
Beausobre, I. de 44_4
Beauty of the Land 1007 1016
Beazley, J. D. 212_0 731_2 733 733_1 735 777_2 902_2 1223
Bechtel, F. 384_0 444_9 481_4 779_9 815_2 901_0
Becker, J. 88_0
Bed of Prokroustes 627
Beech-tree as ritual equivalent of oak 402 f. not struck by lightning 403_0 of C. Passienus Crispus 403_1 of Diana on Mt Corne 403_1 of Diana Nemorensis (?) 420_1 of Iupiter Fagutalis 403_0 on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5 sacred in Aquitania 402_1
Bees in relation to Demeter and Persephone 1142_7 in relation to Zeus 1112_6 Kronos drunk on honey of 1027 nurture Zeus 928_0 929_0 1112_6 on statue of Artemis Ἐφεσία 407_0 recompensed by Zeus 933_0 sprung from wasps and sun 928_0
Bee-eater in myth of Merops king of Kos 1132_1 in relation to hoopoe 1131_2
Beer, R. 868_6
Beetle, Aetnaean 909_0 wings of 1047
Belemnites regarded as thunderbolts 767_2 932_1
Bell 652
Bellori, G. P. 406_0
Beloch, K. J. 925_1 926_0 929_0
Belt-hooks 432_8
Benedictio Latina derived from attitude of Phrygian Zeus 291
Benefactors of society worshipped in Phoinike and Egypt 1132_6
Benna $888_{0(0)}$
Benndorf, O. 111_1 112_1 265_4 375_1 406_0 455_1 599_2 759_2 859_2 $878_{0(10)}$ 962_2 971_2
Bennett, Miss F. M. 560_4 1196_2
Bennett, S. A. 92_1
Benseler, G. E. 350_4 414_0 451_1 873_2
Bent, J. T. 691_0
Benzinger, I. $888_{0(0)}$
Bérard, V. 1148_{10} 1149_0
Berger, E. H. 482
Berger, P. 613_2
Bergk, T. 37_2 251_2 $329_{0(3)}$ 337_4 812_1 855_1 $872_{0(5)}$
Bernays, J. 343_0
Berneker, E. 487_2
Bernhardy, G. 22_3
Bernoulli, J. J. 389 f.
Bertrand, A. 87_1 285_0
Besnier, M. 726_0
Beth, K. 1025
Bethe, E. 290_0 435 437_6 1019_2 1044 1064 1071 1072

Beulé, E. 157_0 1095_0 1148_2
Bevan, E. R. 1189_2
Biblical tale influences Greek myth 240_7
Bicknell, C. 688_9 690_0
Bicknell, C. D. 1213
Bidens, 'forked lightning,' 'lightning-fork' 805 f.
Bidens, 'sheep' 806
Bident convertible into trident 1225
Bidental 789 792 805 f.
Bieber, Fräulein M. 917_0
Bifrontal deity as local variety of the divine Sky 383 ff. the two faces of, differentiated 387 ff. various types of 341_0 365 ff.
Bill-hook 475 550 627_6
Bingham, C. W. 604_6
Biot, J. B. 1017_4
Birch, S. 1042
Birch-tree 642_3
Bird as numen of sacred tree 692 golden 1012_1 in connexion with axe and tree 692 of Truth 1010 f. 1016 speaking 1009 f. 1012_1 1016 turning men into stone 1005 understanding all languages (Dikjeretto) 1005 1016
Bird's head 833_1
Bird's nest 1199_2 (?)
Birds, language of 1004 1016 not worshipped by Babylonians and Assyrians 696_0 Periphas as king of 1122 Road of the 38 462
Bird-names borne by Greek and Italian tribes 1134_9
Bird-transformations 463_1 928_0
Birks, E. B. 855_1
Birt, T. 328_5 $329_{0(7)}$ 1059 1060
Birthday of Apollon 236
Bischoff, E. 118_3
Bissing, F. W. von 538_5 1216
Black ram 471_{10} 934_0 wool 934_0 942_0
Blackbird 1011 1016
Black-poplar in myth of Dryope 486 of Demeter felled by Erysichthon 497_5
Black-poplars as Otherworld trees 472 843 in relation to Apollon 484 ff. 500 in the Ustrinum Augusti 472 in woods of Persephone 472 on banks of Eridanos 484 f. 843
Black-poplar-leaves 472
Blanchet, A. 618
Blanchet, J. A. 382_3 658_2 747_1 755_4
Blass, F. 728_0
Blaydes, F. H. M. 253_3 277_3 345_5 452_{14} 868_5 1130_1
Blegen, C. W. 1226
Blinkenberg, C. 122_0 346_0 413_7 505 506_7 509_{1-3} 510_2 512_2 528_5 559_2 642 790 923_0 932_1 1076 f.
Bloch, G. 34_1
Bloch, L. 132_0 295_2 315_1 663_6
Blood from birth of Zeus 928_9 929_0 let fall by Zeus gives rise to men 1032 of Agdistis 969_4 of animal victims offered to dead (?) 1056 of bull and ram as Blood (cont.)
means of baptism 306 of Giants made into men 1032 of Hermes (vervain) 395_2 of human victims poured over scimitar of Ares 548_0 of Ouranos 447_8 448_0 of Typhon 449_0 450_0 of young pig in rite of atonement 1097_2 poured over altar 517_1 used for inscription on trophy 111_0
Blue hair of Zetes and Kalaïs 445_0 colour in Ophite diagram 611_2
Blümner, H. 494_0 $878_{0(2)}$ 892_1 899_1 901_1 1076 1137_2 1147_{16} 1222
Boar as badge or standard 108 109_1 as relief on altar 1063 at foot of altar (?) 964_2 Calydonian 799 in myth of Adonis $886_{0(30)}$ in myth of Attis 969_4 in myth of Saron 413 in relation to Cretan Zeus 727 leaps towards altar 964_2 oath on cut pieces of 726 f. oath taken over 728_0 on Mysian Mt Olympos 311_8 Sæhrîmnir 214_0
Boar's head 146
Boat, model of 521 solar 648_2 with bull's head as prow 142_1
Boats made by descendants of Dioskouroi 984_4
Bobeth, W. 1135_4
Boblaye, E. Puillon 892_4
Bochart, S. 230_1 465_{11} 569_4 675_4 751_3 1111_1 1131_2 1187_0
Boeckh, A. 233_4 723_0 857_6 954_0 1077 1154_3
Boehlau, J. 123_0
Boehm 368_3
Boehmer, W. $885_{0(28)}$
Bölte 961_0
Boëthius, A. 628_6 817_0
Boetticher, C. 110_9 150_3 152_0 154_0 160_0 186 f. 199_2 199_3 207_0 282_0 1103_4 1165_1
Boiling, ritual 210 ff.
Boisacq, E. 268_1 291_2 383_7 421_8 444_7 484_5 600_4 723_0 779_9 921_0 932_1 1098_6 1159_1
Boissardus, J. J. 702_2
Boissounas, F. 905_0
Bolkestein, H. 1229
Boll, F. 237_0 666_2
Bolte, J. 666_3 988_5 988_9 988_{11} 995_2
Bone as fetish (?) 544_3
Bones, human, ground for bread 1002 of birds 555_0 of Hektor 961_0 of mammoth 827_2 preserved to ensure sovereignty 35 f. sacrificed by Lapps 423_3
Bonfires on top of Mt Kithairon 898_6 977_0 on tops of mountains in Pontos 974_1 f. 977_0
Bonhote, J. L. 523_5
Bonner, C. 538_5 1220
Bonnet, M. 115_4
Bordeaux, P. 604
Borghesi, B. 402_0 1090
Bormann, E. 1172_0
Borradaile, L. A. 663_3 667_3
Bosanquet, R. C. 342_0 418_3 520_4 524_9 524_{12} 525_1 624_0 625 930_0 931_0
Bóthros 471_{10} 1075 1229

Bouché-Leclercq, A. 9_6 318_3 666_1 702_4 1170_5 1171_3
Bough, golden, on which all birds sing 1003 f. 1016
Boundary-stones 423_1 1090
Bousset, W. 129_1
Bow of Apollon 202_1 1192_5 of Artemis 202_1 453_3 of Eros 1047 (fig. 902) of Herakles 446 903_2 (?)
Bow-case 160_9 571
Bowls of bronze or iron used by Bacchants to cover their breasts 346_0 of terra cotta or metal made to resemble breasts 346_0 347_0
Boyd, Miss H. A. (Mrs Boyd-Hawes) 538
Boyd-Dawkins, W. 926_0
Branch making music 1005 1016
Brand, H. G. 480_1
Brand, J. 374_2
Brandenburg, C. 142_2
Brandt, A. J. H. W. 1024
Braun, E. 326 f. 528_2 641_2 709_7 709_8 711_1 752 801
Breast, golden, in West Highland tale 224_1 of prince with golden sun 1012_1 of princess with golden moon 1012_1
Breasts bared as last appeal 206_2 beaten in mourning for Attis 970_0 copied in bowls of terra cotta or metal 346_0 347_0 cut off by the d. of Gallos' concubine 970_0 of St Agatha 347_0 of Artemis Ἐφεσία 406_0 ff. 410_0 of Bacchants covered with bowls of bronze or iron 346_0 of Helene 346_0 of Isis 347_0 of Iuno 37_2 of 'Minoan' females 515 515_2 of Zeus in Kappadokia 594 f. of Zeus in Karia 592 ff. 1220 (?) of Zeus in Pontos 595 f. reliefs representing $877_{0(6)}$ $879_{0(15)}$
Breccia, E. 157_0
Bremer, O. 50_1
Breuil, H. 792_3
Bridge of spikes 138_0
Bridge, J. 504_6
Briquet, C. M. 139_3
Britten, J. 396_0 471_1 775_0
Brizio, E. 355_5 356
Brontea 507_2
Bronze altar 193_2 car 832 palm-tree 170_2 262_5 pillars 423 425 ff. plaque from Rome 664_1 sheathing of the archway of Ianus 358 sky 358 virtue of beaten 649
Bronze-age remains 31 47 ff. 122_0 123_0 141 f. 154 157 193 509 513 ff. 617 f. 620 ff. 628 635 ff. 643 ff. 926_0 f. 938_0
Bronzes from Delphoi 628 f. Dodona 739 cp. 746_2 752 826 1222 Etruria 377 f. 382 432_2 432_3 Gaul 445 f. (?) 747_1 1089 Idaean Cave 937_0 f. Psychro Cave 530 f. 926_0 f. Sardinia 141 ff. 446_1 Sicily (?) 374 ff.
Broom, folk-lore of 642_3 in rites of Deverra 643_3
Brown, R. 481_2 1025
Brückner, A. 1225
Brüning, A. 45_1
Brugmann, K. 50_1 277_3 413_1 570_0 583 1069 f.
Brunck, R. F. P. 855_1 856_1 856_5 857_3
Brunk, A. 484_1
Brunn, H. 211_2 641_1 740 1143_1 1178
Buck, C. D. 118_3 723_0
Buckland, Miss A. W. 635_7
Buckler, W. H. 282_2 1228
Buckman, J. 605_1
Bucrania 146 157_0 195_2 287_1 $808_{0(17)}$ 838 920_0 938_0 affixed to coffin (?) 540 and double axe 539 and double axe, decadence of 540 ff. garlanded, on metope 112_0 of lead as amulets 540 f. rows of 926_0 cp. 539
Budge, Sir E. A. Wallis 125 126_7 141_2 409_0 544_3
Bücheler, F. 91_1 118_3 119_1 124_4 404_2
Bürchner, L. 318_4 714_6 939_0 945_2
Bugge, S. 305_0
Building-inscription for temple of Zeus Βασιλεύς at Lebadeia 900_0
Bulard, M. 1128_0
Bull, Adiounian, in Crete 349 Antiope dragged by 1015 as centre of procreative power 306 as effigy of river Gelas 910_1 as embodiment of Dionysos 932_0 cp. 1030 as theanthropic animal of Cretan Zeus 539 Dirke dragged by 1013 eaten annually by worshippers of Zan 354 humped 573_5 765, 766_1 960_0 f. 973_1 in bronze 910_1 924_0 938_0 in iron 910_1 in ivory 938_0 in silver 910_1 in terra cotta 938_0 made for Phalaris 910_1 924_0 of Çiva 791_2 of Europe 348 of Zeus in Rhodes utters human voice (shares in human reason?) 924_0 on symbolic or model axe-head 633 ridden by Dionysos 661 sacrificed by Melampous 684 sacrificed on table-altar 517 sacrificed to Zeus Σολυμεύς 973_1 sacrificed to Zeus Στράτιος 975_0 signifies Idas 439 signifies Lynkeus 439 votive 924_0 926_0 938_0 white, sacrificed to Zeus 10 with gadfly on its back 946_0 with tail formed of corn-ears 299_1 Zagreus as 1030
Bulla 699_4
Bull-cult See Bull-worship
Bulle, H. 158_2 748_0 753_1 1060
Bullinger, E. W. 1210_4
Bullock, T. W. I. 1211
Bull's head as prow of boat 142_1 in hand of Saturnus 70_1 on gold lábrys 639 on snake 1022 with double axe between horns 527 538 637
Bull's hide made into glue 934_0 made into timbrels 345_5
Bull's horns connected with double axe 538 f. golden, in the sky 117 1028 supporting dove 142
Bull-slaying at Mylasa 582_5
Bull-sports at Karyanda 582_5
Bull-worship of Hittites 910_1
Bunbury, E. H. 404_1 404_3 476_5

Bunsen, C. C. J. von 1038
Burchett, B. R. 355_1 366_1 373_4
Buresch, K. 957_2
Burgess, J. 150_2
Burial, crouched 1060 f. in pithos 1060 1064 f. of head separately 290_0 of infants in subgrundarium 1059 of twin or twin's placenta 1064 within the house in Gallia Lugudunensis 1059 within the house in Greece 1060 f. 1065 within the house in Italy 1059 1229 within the house in Palestine 1059
Burkitt, F. C. 428_3 1200_1 1206 1206_9 1207
Burkitt, M. C. 643_7 792_3
Burmannus, P., the elder 13 f.
Burne, Miss C. S. 883_3
Burnet, J. 425_5 316_0
Burrows, R. M. 30_3 30_8 600_4
Bursian, C. 394_2 414_0 897_6 898_5 899_1 901_1 901_2 903_0
Burton, Sir R. 1012_1
Bury, J. B. 384_0 437_7 607_4 693_4 695_0 1179_5 1188_{10}
Buschmann, J. C. E. 293_1
Buskins 1178
Buslepp 31_8 164_6
Busolt, G. 910_1 1095_0
Butler, S. 294
Butterfly as soul 315_3 645_4 on chalice of Antioch 1199 on hand of Chronos 860 on pillar 1047 pursued by Eros 1047
Butterfly-wings 645_3
Buttmann, P. 397_0 899_1

Cabbages 646_0
Cades, T. 478_1 1046 f.
Caduceus held by eagle 1193 of Agathos Daimon 1128_0 of Ahriman 1054 of Mercurius 70_1 of Pax 98 originates as lightning-fork (?) 385_0 represents Penates 1068 winged 285_0 441 718 1128
Cahen, E. 1062
Caillemer, E. 1095_0
Cake-moulds (?) 131 802 1215
Cakes called ἔλαφος 1140_4 in shape of wheel (summanalia) 725_0 in shapes of animals 1138_0 1140 of wheat and honey 1162 offered to Apollon Γενέτωρ 223_3
Calder, W. M. 277 278_2 279 429_1
Calderini, G. 106_1
Caldron as gong 826 at Delphoi 210 ff. at Dodona 214 826 compared with sky 204_2 in which Dionysos or Zagreus is cooked 1030 f. of apotheosis 210 ff. 841 1031 f. of apotheosis identified with Delphic tripod 219 841 of boiling oil 1010 1019 of flames 138_0 Thesprotian 133_0 214_1 Titanic, identified with Delphic tripod 1031
Caldron-chariots decorated with birds or birds' heads 833_1
Calendar, Attic 236 Coan 238_0 Delphic 235 f. 841 fourfold division of Julian 59 lunisolar 456 threefold division of Germanic 59
Calf, golden 354 model of 521 of St Abban 214_0 of St Germanus 214_0
Caligae 1089
Calverley, W. S. 305_0
Calvet, S. C. F. 619_3
Cameron, J. 396_0
Campbell, J. F. 722_1 1012_1
Candelabra 424
Cannibalism, ritual 1021 See also Omophagy
Cap, Phrygian 285_0 298 299_6 300 306_4 306_5 308_1 681 surmounted by star 313_2 313_4 313_6 1062 winged 718
Capelle, P. 38_5 41_1 43_4
Capelle, W. 906_1
Car, bronze, shaken in time of drought 831 ff. votive, drawn by ox and ram 926_0 See also Chariot
Carapanos, C. 648_3 677_6 678_1 1222
Cardinali, G. 958_0
Carnoy, A. 549_6
Carolidis, P. 271_0 312_5 569_4 616 f. 616_1 715
Cartailhac, É. 510_4 511_1 528_2 541 690_2
Carter, J. B. 440_4 696_0
Caryatids, archaistic 402_0 at Agrigentum 915_0 1227 origin of 535 Phaethon's sisters as 402_0 473
Casaubon, I. 699
Cassel, J. P. 109_1
Casson, S. 495 1222
Castanets 245_5
Castration by knife 299_6 684 f. by noose of bristles 969_4 of Archigallus in cult of Kybele 299 of Gallus in cult of Kybele 299_6 of Kombabos 299_7 of Kronos by Zeus 448_1 450_1 1027 of Ouranos by Kronos 447_8 450_1 of Zeus by Typhon 448_2 ff. 450_1 See also Emasculation
Cat worshipped in Egypt 987_0
Catalogue of the gods 1135_4
Cattaneo, R. 865_2 866_0
Causimomantia (?) 701_4
Cavallari, F. S. 917_0
Cavedoni, C. 975_0 1042 1051
Cave-gods, syncretism of 839
Cave-sanctuaries called katabásia 14 of Apollon 249_0 971_2 of Cheiron 869_2 870_0 of Dioskouroi 1063 f. of Oidipous 1151 ff. of Pan 249_2 of Theoi Agrioi 971_2 of Zeus Βροντῶν 836 ff. 852 of Zeus Δικταῖος 927_1 928_0 929_0 of Zeus ἐξ Αὐλῆς 249_2 836 f. of Zeus Ἰδαῖος in Crete 838 933_0 ff. on Mt Dikte 920_0 on Mt Ide in Crete 920_0 on Mt Kamares 934_0 935_0 on Mt Kynthos 920_0
Caylus, A. C. P. de Tubières Comte de 86_1 86_2
Ceccaldi, G. Colonna 718_1
Cedar-tree 412 949_5
Celery, taboo on 987_0
Celestial deities, worshippers of, look up 256
Celt, neolithic, held to be thunderbolt 643 767_2 neolithic, with incised Donnerbesen (?) 642 See also Axe of stone

Cenotaph 1059
Ceraunia or Ceraunius lapis 507_2
Cerquand, J. F. 989
Cesnola, A. P. di 424_6
Cesnola, L. P. di 424_8 553 598 f. 718_1
Chadwick, H. M. 32_5 50_1 52_6 303_2 500_8 682_4
Chain, golden 1009
Chalice of anti-Montanists 1208 of Antioch 1197 ff.
Chamberlain, B. H. 480_1
Chambers, R. 150_1
Chamonard, J. 288_5
Champion, local, as embodiment of Zeus 1070
Chandler, R. 585_3 588_7
Chantepie de la Saussaye, P. D. 50 ff. 53_2 88_3 110_5 450_0 844_6 1218
Chantre, E. 616_1
Chapot, V. 107_4 1225
Chariot drawn by eagles 462_0 drawn by griffins 523 drawn by panthers 245_0 drawn by swans 459 f. drawn by winged horses 453_3 in cast bronze 938_0 of Amphiaraos 815_7 1071 of Ares 436_1 of Iupiter 830_6 of Luna 96 of Sol 96 of Zeus 27 33 43 63_9 436_1 830 ff. 851 $883_{0(0)}$ (?) 950_0 solar 96 562 traversing arch of heaven 43 f. two-wheeled and hooded 961_0 with white horses plunged into sea as sacrifice to Poseidon 975_0 See also Car
Charles, R. H. 955_0
Charm to secure wealth 1127_0
Châsma in Orphic cosmogony 1033
Cherry 775_0
Chess 682
Chest of Kypselos 451 739_0
Chestnuts 775_0
Chevalier, U. 1213
Child as amulet 387_4
Children, golden 1007
Chipiez, C. 49_1 108_3 515_1 550_5 551_1 620_5 621 621_0 621_2 622_2 638_8 805_3 915_0
Choisy, A. 900_0 915_0
Christ, W. 5_2 36_7 395_2 625_5 1021 1122_2
Christianity, appeal of, to Thraco-Phrygians 288 842 soil prepared for, by cult of Attis 303 306 f. soil prepared for, by cult of Theos Hypsistos 889 f. soil prepared for, by cult of Zeus and Dionysos 288
Chryselephantine statues of Aphrodite at Sikyon 1165_1 of Aphrodite Οὐρανία at Elis 68_1 of Asklepios at Epidauros 1078 f. of Asklepios at Sikyon 1080 f. of Hera at Argos 893_2 of Zeus at Daphne near Antiocheia on the Orontes 1188 f. of Zeus at Megara 1138_5 of Zeus at Olympia 758 916_0 1189 of Zeus at Syracuse (?) 916_0
Chthonian deities, worshippers of, look down 256 lightning 805_6 thunder 805_6
Chwolsohn, D. 129_2
Ciaceri, E. 915_2 916_0 917_0
Cicalas 460 1118
Cichorius, C. 105_7 113_0 567_3 940_0
Circle of fires or torches in Orphic ritual (?) 120_3
Cire perdue 644 644_1
Cistae, bronze 1144_2
Cistern, curative, on rock-cut altar of Zeus Ἰδαῖος in Phrygia 953_0 of Zeus Κύνθιος and Athena Κυνθία 919_0 920_0 922_0
Clarke, J. Thacher $876_{1(1)}$ 951_0 f.
Clédat, J. 985_0 985_1
Clerc, M. 561_7 1110
Clermont-Ganneau, C. $888_{0(0)}$ 1087 1111_0
Clothes of women worn by men 1137_0
Cloud, fragrant, on Mt Gargaron 950_0
—— on mountain of Zeus Ἕλλάνιος a sign of rain 894_3
Clouds on Mt Athos portend rain 906_1 on Mt Hymettos portend rain, wind, and storm 897_5 on Mt Pelion portend rain or wind 904_2 over Mt Parnes and Phyle portend storm 898_0 Zeus seated on 709 cp. 950_0
Club 383 cut from wild-olive 466 for killing aged and infirm 703_2 of Argos 380 of giant 75_0 80 82 of Hercules 62 f. of Thor 64_0 on back of bull 633_2 symbolism of 469_1 See also Mallet
Cluverius, P. 917_0
Cock as shield-sign of Idomeneus 947_0 of Ahriman 1054 of Helios 947_0 of Mercurius 94_3 on head of Lithuanian wind-god 445_7 on knee of Zeus Φελχάνος 946_0 947_0 on pillar 1133_1 on relief of Argenidas 1063 once Pythagoras 223_1 with tail formed of corn-ears 298 f.
Cock's head 698_2
Cockerell, C. R. 914_0 915_0
Cockerell, S. C. 760_2
Codrington, T. 91_2
Coffer, floating 1018 670 ff. cp. 1006 1010 golden 995
Cohen, H. 361_5 371_0 373_1 373_5 1194_4 1195_1
Cohn, L. 1099_1
Coins belonging to Zeus Κάσιος 907_0 belonging to Zeus Κήναιος 903_0 See also Index I under names of various states and towns
Colebrooke, H. T. 150_3
Colin, G. 817_0 1216
Collignon, M. 49_1 123_0 158_2 287_1 408_9 515_1 805_6 859_8 1019_2 1045 f. 1143_1 1179_7 1222
Colossal statues of Herakles at Athens 1116 of Zeus at Olympia dedicated by Kypselos 737_6 of Zeus at Olympia dedicated by Leontines 741_3 of Zeus at Tarentum by Lysippos 762 of Zeus at Tavium 754_1 of Zeus at Tyndaris 918_0 of Zeus Καπετώλιος (=Iupiter Capitolinus) at Antiocheia (Mt Silpion?) on the Orontes 1188_{13} of Zeus Κύνθιος in Delos (?) 920_0 of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Athens 1078 of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος (?) at Daphne near Antiocheia on the Orontes 1188 1188_{13} 1189_0 of Zeus Ὁμολώιος (?) at Homolion 1227

Colour, variation in, for aesthetic reasons 435 f. See also separate colours
Columba, G. M. 925_1
Column, monolithic 915_2 965_0 of Antoninus Pius 103_0 105 of Arkadios 106_3 of Constantine the Great 609 f. of Marcus Aurelius 106_1 of Mayence 93 ff. 840 1213 f. of Theodosios 106_2 1214 of Trajan 105_7 108 1181_0 spiral 107_4 475 substituted for sacred tree (?) 405_3 surmounted by image of goddess 903_0 tapering downwards 196_6
Columns believed to be full of gold 966_0 dedicated by Kroisos at Ephesos 580_7 in relation to double axe 528 ff. of Rome and Constantinople 840 supporting earth 56_2 130_4 (?) 141_3 with acanthus-band beneath Ionic volutes 965_0 with dedicatory inscriptions by priests of Zeus 580
Columna cochlis 107 128
Combe, T. 1127_0
Communion with the dead by means of food 1162_2 1170 ff.
Comparetti, D. 118_2 119_1 328_3 999_5 1001_2
Conception by almond or pomegranate 969_4 by apple 682 by eye of God 671_{10} by potion 1031 by touch of Zeus 961_0
Cone of limestone, inscribed 1158_{10}
Confarreatio 1173_0
Consecratio-types 101_1 102_0 103_0 951_0 1209
Conspectus of Orphic theogonies 1033 f.
Consulship, double, as successor of dual kingship 441
Contact and quasi-contact between supplicator and supplicated 1099_1 with Mother Earth necessary to priests of Zeus at Dodona 960_0 with Zeus impregnates Io 961_0
Continence, ceremonial 222_0 ceremonial, due to two causes 210_0
Contopoulos, N. 1006_2
Contorniate medals 299_6 1128_0
Conway, Sir M. 1204_1 1206 1206_9
Conway, R. S. 118_3 342_0 600_4 600_5 823
Conybeare, E. 607 f. 846
Conze, A. 284_0 512_3 568_7 569_1 779 $878_{0(8)}$ 1056 1058 1229
Cook, Mrs A. B. 111_0 523_5
Cook, Miss P. M. 54_3 214_0 1047
Cooke, Miss P. B. Mudie (Mrs E. M. W. Tillyard) 206_1
Copper Age 617
Cord, golden 1029
Cork-tree 403_0
Corn-ear, ceremonial 295_2 296_0 1172_2 green, as form of Attis 295
Corn-ears 98_0 297 ff. 313_2 564 571 634 657_5 754_1 820 (?) 1054 1126_0 1133_1 1158_6 1186
Cornfield 832_7
Cornford, F. M. 2_4 43_1 224 316_0 1042 1095_0
Corn-maiden 295_2 1172_2
Corn-mother 295_2
Corn-wreath 370
Cornel-tree 403_0
Cornu copiae as symbol of earth 1050 between corn-ears 573_6 of Agathe Tyche 1129_0 of Agathos Daimon 1117_7 (?) 1125_1 1128_0 of Agatbos Theos 1126_0 of Gaia 1185 f. of Kallirrhoe (?) 1117 of Laodikeia 320_0 of Mt Peion 962_2 of Plouton (?) 1117_7 of Theos Megas 1126_0 of Thracian goddess 820 (?) of Zeus Ἐπιτέλειος Φίλιος 1162 of Zeus Μιλίχιος 1105 with busts of two boys emergent 441 f. with snake twined about it 1128_0
Cosmic egg 1033 ff. robe 1137_0
Cosmogonic Eros 1019 ff.
Cosmogony, Egyptian 1035 Indian 1035 f. Orphic 1019 ff. 1230 Persian 1036 Phoenician 1036 ff.
Cosquin, E. 671_4
Costantin 1033
Coteler, J. B. 35_0
Cotteau, G. 651_1
Couches at Theoxenia, lectisternia, etc. 1169 ff. in precinct of Zeus Κόνθιος 921_0 of Athena at Tegea 1147
Coulton, G. G. 1215
Courby, F. 173_1 174 ff. 191 221_2 239_2 841 1216
Cousin, G. 581_1 973_1 f.
Couve, L. 816_5 817_0
Cow of Ilos 349
Cow, wooden, Cretan queen enclosed in (?) 924_0
Cow's head beneath foot of Iuno Sancta 98 f.
Cow-dung 791_0
Crab attacks Herakles 665_3 combined with double axe 577 cp. 660_0 663 golden, prince changed into 666_3 in riddle 659_1 of Zeus Ὀσογῶα 577 f. on chest of Artemis Ἐφεσία 407_0 with comic mask as carapace 1221
Crabs called children of Hephaistos 665 667 identified with Kabeiroi 664 f. in astrology 666_1 in demonology 666_2 in folk-lore 666_3 in mythology 665_3 in religion 665_2 marked with bull's head (?) 667 marked with double axe 663 marked with Gorgóneion 667 sacred to Poseidon 665_2 worshipped in Lemnos 665
Crab's claws as head-dress of Ampbitrite 665_3 of marine Centaur 665_2 of Okeanos 665_3 of Thalassa 665_3 1185 of Thetis 665_3 of Triton (?) 665_3
Crane, T. F. 671 995_2 1008_1 1012_1
Cranes 1083
Crawley, A. E. 290_0 294_1 1039
Crescent, lunar 624 (?) 983_0 1051 on kálathos 714_2
Cretan garment worn by basileús at Athens 1136
Creuzer, F. 346_0 1037 f.
Criobolium 305_3 954_0
Crocodile worshipped in Egypt 987_0
Crönert, W. 1131_1
Croiset, M. 1013_1

Crook, R. F. 779
Crooke, W. 690_5
Cross at Gosforth 305_0 carved to look like a tree 305_0 described as ladder 139_3 stellar (?) 624 with wheel-head 305_0
Cross-quarter days 326
Crow as prophet of storm 519_0 followed by Plataeans 898_6 in Volsung saga 682 on double axe (?) 518_3
Crow, J. M. $876_{1(1)}$
Crown, green 1170_8 hem-hem 986_0 in Orphic ritual 119 ff. mural $300\ 970_0\ 1185$ of Artemis 147_1 of Diana 147_1 of rex Nemorensis 146 f. radiate $255_0\ 978_9\ 980_0\ 1186\ 1194_4$ set on curule seat for Remus 440 set on sepulchral couch at Corneto $440_6\ 1170_8$ turreted (See mural)
Crucifixion, Hadrian erects statue of Aphrodite (Venus) on site of 984_1 the sacrifice of Odhin on the tree as pagan parallel to $305_0\ 306_0$
Crusius, O. $99_1\ 315_2\ 459_3\ 496_0\ 498_2\ 501\ 684_3\ 1102_4$
Crypt under temple at Aizanoi 965_0
Cuckoo as form of Zeus $893_2\ 1144_2$ in relation to hoopoe 1131_2 in Salian hymn (?) $350_{0(8)}$ on double axe (?) 518_3 on sceptre $893_2\ 1133_1$
Cucumber 154_0
Cuirass, miniature 930_0
Cumont, E. $595_0\ 596_2\ 975_0$
Cumont, F. $67_8\ 67_9\ 69_1\ 71_7\ 73_0\ 102_0\ 129_1\ 131_1\ 270_3\ 280_1\ 288_3\ 288_5\ 297_2\ 309\ 408_0\ 429_1\ 430\ 555_0\ 594_8\ 595_0\ 596\ 666_1\ 814_3\ 836_4\ 836_{11}\ 876_1\ 879_{0(16)}\ 881_{0(21)}\ 882_{0(0)}\ 884_{0(0)}\ 886_{0(0)}\ 889_{0(34)}\ 960_0\ 975_0$ ff. 1051 1054 1085 1221
Cumulative expressions (ἄναξ ἀνάκτων, etc.) 337_4
Cunningham, A. 129_2
Cup on Arch of Titus 1203_7
Cups, votive, in Psychro Cave 926_0
Cup-bearer $882_{0(0)}$
Cuperus (Cuypers), G. $873_{0(0)}$
'Cup-marks,' neolitbic, in France 792 f. in Greece (?) 792 in Palestine 793_4
Curse-tablets $889_{0(34)}\ 1113_{0(2)}$
Cursing, formulae of, on Phrygian tombs 278_2
Curtin, J. $682_7\ 1012_1$
Curtis, C. D. 359_1
Curtis, E. L. 426_4
Curtius, E. $628_5\ 861_7\ 862_0\ 862_3\ 865_2\ 877_{0(0)}\ 892_4\ 1100_1\ 1136_0\ 1154_3$
Cycle of life in Orphic ritual 119 f.
Cymbals from which mystics drink $346_0\ 347_0$ in cult of Attis 300
Cynocephalous deities 701_0
Cypress-leaves 520_5
Cypress-tree as handle of double axe (?) 528 Kyparissos transformed into 981_1 on coin of Troizen (?) 416 with altar before it 563 f.
Cypress-trees, artificial 520_5 Cretan 528 (?) $932_1\ 981_1$ grove of 520_5 in Crete called Cypress-trees (cont.)
δρῦται 932_1 in relation to Rhea or Zeus 932_1
Cypress-wood, roof of $932_1\ 934_0$

Daebritz $459_3\ 494\ 496_0\ 500_4$
Dähnhardt, O. 665_3
Dagger of Babylonian Zeus 714_1 sticking if owner is dead 1011
Dagger-god of Hittites 550 ff.
Daïdouchîa 1168_3
Daïdoûchos 1084
Daïmon, significance of the term $1125_1\ 1159_1$ See also Index I
Daïmones distinguished from theoî 1159 f. 1160_5 See also Index I
Dalechamps, J. 701
Dalton, O. M. $106_2\ 107_3\ 138_1\ 606_1\ 606_3\ 863_1\ 865_2$
Dance, Athena teaches Kouretes their 1029 lunar 336 Messapian 31_1 mimetic 600 'Minoan' 31_1 of Death 868_4 of Kouretes 1030 of naked girl at banquet of Zeus Ὕψιστος $882_{0(0)}$ round altar of Zeus Δικταῖος 931_0 round churchyard on Lammas Day 325_8
Daniell, E. T. 974_0
Danse Macabre See Dance of Death
Dart, double-headed 767_2
Dattari, G. 626_0
Daumet, H. 124_4
David 1134_4
David, T. W. 426_4
Davis, Miss G. M. N. 268_4
Dawkins, R. M. $506_8\ 511_1\ 538_1$ 543 f. 640_0 $647\ 672_0\ 934_0\ 992_1\ 1061$
Day, divisions of the 74 87 89
Dead fed by living 1058 Hellenic offerings to 977_0 make food for living 1058 marriage-banquet of 1164 souls of, animate the year's vegetation 1172
Death conceived as marriage with god or goddess of the Underworld 1164 ff. represented as Love 309 1045 1166 See also Dance of Death
Déchelette, J. $109_1\ 122_0\ 476_4\ 494_1\ 494_2\ 617_6\ 618\ 618_2\ 647\ 647_4\ 647_6\ 648_2\ 649_1\ 656_0$ 685 f. $686_2\ 686_3\ 687_1\ 688_0\ 690_1\ 792_2\ 833_1\ 1059$
Deecke, W. $338_3\ 339_0\ 355\ 383$
Deer in relation to Diana 154_0 nurses children 1008 white 264
Deer-heads (?) 146 f.
Deer-skin 1022
Deification See Apotheôsis
Deissmann, A. $881_{0(0)}$
Deities, dicephalous, of Baris in Pisidia 446 f. dicephalous, of Senones 445 f. Egyptising 626 identified with plants 413_2
Delatte, A. $118_2\ 223_2\ 434_3\ 1024$
Delattre, A. L. 630_3
Delbet, J. $550_5\ 620_5$
Delrio, M. $701_3\ 702_4$
Delubrum 1172_2

Deluge 892_4 897_1 901_2 902_0 1139_7
Demargne, J. 926_0 927_0
Deneken, F. 1069 1170_5
Dennis, G. 1219
Dennison, W. 124_0 135_1
Deonna, W. 594_7 643_7 1213 1218
Desire in primitive psychology 1039
Dessau, H. 1172_0
Dethier, P. A. 195_1
Deubner, L. 14_3 102_0 232_2 232_4 504_4 1087
Devil conceived as black man with six or eight horns 326_3 conceived as goat with four horns 326_3 Janiform 326
De-Vit, V. 402_0 631_1
Dew on cabbages 646_0
Diadem ending in two stars 1189 of Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 597_3 priestly 301 301_1 surmounted by star 1189_3
Diagram, Ophite, of supramundane region 610 f.
Diana-pillars 143 ff. 405_2 412_6 841 compared with Agyieûs-pillar 160 compared with Irminsûl 157 compared with Jain stambha or lât 150_2 compared with May-pole 149 f.
Dickins, B. 52_0 1212 f.
Dickins, G. 757_1 805_6
Dickins, Mrs G. See Hamilton, Miss M.
Dieckmann, H. 1197_3
Diehl, C. 581_1
Diels, H. 43_1 131_5 132_2 236_5 1115_2
Dieterich, A. 12_3 118_2 119_1 120_2 131_5 131_7 267_2 307_1 451_5 1168_7
Dieterich, K. 993_2
Dieulafoy, M. 128_2
Diipetḗs 481_4 481_6 cp. 481_5
Dikjeretto See Bird
Dilthey, K. 1019_2
Dindorf, K. W. 350_4 599_7 728_0 1093_1 1152_5
Dindorf, L. 249_2 1180_4
Dioblês, Dioblętos 22 ff. 436 840
Diopetḗs 963_0
Diosemia 4 ff. 809 840
Diptych 853
Discovery of fire 981_1 of fishing 715_4 1037 of hunting 715_4 1037 of iron 715_4 949_5 1037 of loadstone 949_5 of poppy 1165_1 of rafts and boats 984_4
Disk held by Janiform god at Mallos in Kilikia 552 on pithos from Gournia 538 solar, radiate, on coins of Rhodes 924_0 starry, on Lydian jewelry 639 with crescent and cross (moon and star?) 624 with rayed edge and four spokes (sun?) 624
Disks of bronze dedicated to Semo Sancus (Sangus) 724_0 of gold, with dots or rays, from Idaean Cave 938_9 of gold, with moths, from Mykenai 645
Diskos of Apollon 1156 of Perseus 1155 f.
Diskos-thrower $490_{0(5)}$
Disney, J. 388_{12}
Distaff of Zeus (vervain) 775_0
Dithyramb 659_1
Dittenberger, W. 118_3 233_7 599_7 714_6 817_0 873_2 $880_{9(19)}$ 924_0 1120_0 1121_0
Divination by appearance of Milky Way 482 by axe 701 f. by barley 19_9 by birds 440_5 by entrails of ox 891_0 by inscribed slices of celts 512 by knuckle-bones $807_{5(5)}$ by liver 338_3 339_0 by meal 19_0 by pebbles 221 by phiále 206 by rods 635 by sacrifice of pigs 1107 by severed head 290_0 by sieve 702_2 702_4 by weight 734_3
Diviner, paraphernalia of, from Pergamon 512
Divining-glass See Lekanomanteía
Divining-rod 227_4
Dobrusky, V. 1225
Doe, horned 465 f. 854 1219 in myth of Saron 413
Doehle 31_3
Dörpfeld, W. 21_3 789_7 896_0 916_0 1061 1100_1
Dog as ornament on lamps 367_1 biting arm of lady 138_0 in myth of Katreus 923_0 in pig-skin as surrogate for pig 1140_5 of Asklepios at Epidauros 1079 of Lares in guise of Attis 308_1 worshipped at Kynon polis 987_0
Dogs of Hephaistos (Hadran) on Mt Aitne 630 will not enter temple of Hercules at Rome 783
Dog's skin 1003
Dog-star, rising of 949_5
Dókana 160 f. 436_3 841 1063 f.
Dolphin 205_1 218_0 383 524 (?) 659_1 795 795_3 on either side of obelisk 163_2 round trident 981_0 1071 with sceptre and eagle as emblems of sea, earth, and air (?) 1133_1
Domaszewski, A. von 93_3 93_4 93_6 93_7 94_3 98_{1-3} 99_1 99_4 100_3 106_1 109_1 1181_0
Donnerbesen 642 775_0 847
Donner-von Richter, O. 71_8 74 89_6
D'Ooge, M. L. 789_4 789_7 1148_2
Doorway associated with sacred tree or pillar 178_5 in relation to Ianus 330_0 340_2 cp. 354 ff.
Dottin, G. 341_1 440_2 455_1 688_0
Double axe See Axe, double
Double busts of a single deity 365 ff. of a single deity under diverse aspects 387 of a single man 371 389 of a single man under diverse aspects 371 392 ff. of deities regarded as manifestations of the same power 388 of god and goddess 390 ff. of men likely to be associated in memory 389 f.
Doublet, G. 1042
Douce, F. 868_4
Douglas, Miss E. M. (Mrs Van Buren) 419 420_1
Dove as oblation 535 of marble 896_0 (?) on bronze tablet from Psychro Cave 927_0 on bull's horns 142 142_1 on head of Cnossian goddess 536 on myrtle-tree (?) 710_3 on roof 142 f. on sceptre

Dove (cont.)
1133_1 1134_4 (?) 1134_5 on wing of Ahriman 1054
Doves, bones of, in jar (?) 555_0 in relation to Artemis 457 nurture Zeus in Cretan Cave 928_0 of bronze from Idaean Cave 938_0 of clay in shrine at Gournia 538 on chalice of Antioch 1199 on double axe (?) 518_3 on lamp from Gezer 1203_3 on oak-trees (?) $872_{0(5)}$
Dove-goddess in Cnosian shrine 536
Dragatses, I. Ch. 1105_{8-10} 1173_6 1174_2
Dragon in Greek folk-song 828 in Greek folk-tales 990 ff. 1005 1016 f. of Marduk 769_1 pursued by St Elias 820
Drake, M. and W. 1104_3
Drâkos or Drâkontas 990_3
Dreams, dedication in accordance with 282_2 1177 1228 of Achilles' son 41_4 of Constantine the Great 602 f. of cosmic ladders 127 portending death 1163_6 portending marriage 1163_6 1165_1 sent by dead kings 1071 sent by Sabazios 283_0 sent by Zeus 282_2 1228 the folk of 41
Dressel, A. R. M. 34_1
Dressel, H. 1171_3
Drexel, F. 1213
Drexler, W. 167 f. 254 267_2 294_0 307_1 347_0 566_0 567_3 578_2 578_3 580_3 610_0 626_0 665_3 $807_{3(1)}$ 899_1 928_0 982_0 987_0 1038 1085
Drinking-horn 661
Droop, J. P. 647_1
Drosinos 514
Drought 894_1 894_3 895_1 897_5 See also Rain-charm
Dubois, M. 580_4 586_1
Du Cange, C. d. F. 339_1
Ducati, P. 737 1217
Du Chaillu, P. B. 637_1
Duchesne, L. 307_1
Duck's head 648 698
Ducks as solar symbol (?) 698 in Roman fresco 146
Ducks, wild 691
Dümmler, F. 615_3 615_4
Dürrbach, F. See Durrbach, F.
Duhn, F. von 516_6 517_3 518_3 519_0 520_5 521_4 521_6 524_6 838_8 966_0 1128_0
Dulaure, J. A. 1089
Dulcimer 124_1
Dumont, A. 511_1 638_6
Duncker, M. 559_6
Duplication of Attis 308 ff. of Augustus 1209 of Christ 1209 of double axe 537 652 ff. 668 847 of eagles 189 of Kyklops 999 f. of lotos 769 776 780 of name of Zeus $727_{3(1)}$ of spear-head 799 of thunderbolt 727 of trident-head 797 of Zeus 318 ff. 842
Durand, P. 138_1
Durm, J. 71_5 73_1 359_1 360_5 915_0 1219
Durrbach (Dürrbach), F. 388_6 423_3 583_0 862_0 865_2 1071
Dussaud, R. 430 431_1 431_2 600_4 814_3 $886_{0(0)}$ $886_{0(30)}$ 1111
Dust, a nuisance in Greece 257_4
—— of corpse causes sound sleep 996
Dyer, T. F. Thiselton 396_0
Dýnamis of Zeus $808_{0(0)}$

E at Delphoi 176_2 178 1216
—— as head of Poseidon's trident 177_0 as image of scales 177_0 as image of sky resting on pillars 178 as numeral 177_0 as question or prayer 177_0 as symbol of dialectic 177_0 as symbol of five sages 176_2 as symbol of sun 176_2 as three Charites 177_0 as window 177_0
Eagle as animal counterpart of Zeus 752 as embodiment of Zeus 187 752 941_0 as lightning-bearer 751_2 777 779 849 933_0 1159 as messenger of Zeus 950_0 as shield-boss (?) 938_0 as symbol of resurrection 1209_6 as symbol of sun (See solar) as telephany of sky-god 187 at Olympia 222_4 bearing divinised emperor 101_1 bearing festoon on altar 302 bearing Zeus 102_0 462_0 beneath emperor's head 1193 beneath Mt Gerizim $887_{0(31)}$ bestriding bay-wreath with Charites 1193 black 8 933_6 carrying off asp 283_0 carrying off sacrifice to Zeus 1141 carrying sceptre and wreath 1133_1 double, of Hittites 779_3 flight of 752_2 flying with sceptre towards emperor 1134_0 gilded 423 guides Seleukos i Nikator to site of Seleukeia Pieria 981_1 f. holding caduceus and palm-branch 1193 holding thunderbolt (See on thunderbolt) holding wreath 1186 1193 holding wreath and bay-branch 1193 hovering above altar 280_1 in fig (?)-tree 964_2 in myth (?) of Agamemnon 1132_3 in myth of Kleinis (hýpaleros) 463_1 in myth of Merops 1132_1 in myth of Periklymenos 1134_6 in myth of Periphas 1122 in pediment 961_0 not struck by lightning 751_3 nurtures Zeus in Cretan cave 928_0 of Agathos Demon 1125_1 of Iupiter 400_{11} 811_5 812 of Zeus 502_2 (?) 575 ff. 751 f. $808_{0(0)}$ 836 1122 1131 ff. 1185 f. 1208 f. on altar 892_4 1193 on Mt Argaios 978_0 980_0 on chalice of Antioch 1208 f. on column 968_0 on double axe 518_3 (?) 573 on globe 95_2 578 (?) on Ionic capital $878_{0(0)}$ on Irminsûl 53 178 f. on pine-tree 909_0 on roof of shrine or temple 982_0 on sceptre 1132 f. 1133_1 1134_4 on sceptre of Zeus conceived as alive 1133_1 on stone 186 on terra sigillata 1205_4 on thigh of animal-victim 1193 on thunderbolt 763_1 968_0 1064 1193 on thýrsos 1178 prince changed into 666_2 Roman 978_9 980_0 shouldering sceptre 1133_1 side by side with snake 283_0 solar 186 431 white, at Kroton 222_4 with sceptre and dolphin as emblems of air, earth, and sea (?) 1133_1 See also Index I Aetos, Aquila

Eagle (cont.)
Eagle's head 1134_0
Eagles at Delphoi 179_1 chariot drawn by 462_0 look at sun 230_8 of Zeus 231 239 on Delphic omphalós 179 ff. tamed by Pythagoras 222_4 two, on altar $808_{0(17)}$ votive, at Tralleis 958_0
Earrings 620
Ears, leaf-shaped 399 399_1
Earth conceived as belly of Zeus 1028 conceived as flat disk with central omphalós 167 conceived as flat disk with sky resting on side-props 432 843 conceived as globe enclosed in sphere half light, half dark 432 843 conceived as half of cosmic egg 1020 1023 invoked 728_0 symbolised by cornu copiae 1050
Earth-mother in relation to sky-father 677
Earthquakes 827_2 959_0 994_2 1170_6 1171 1191
Ebeling, H. 481_5
Ebersolt, J. 610_1 610_3 610_{5-7}
Echesaméa 6 f.
Eckhel, J. 249_2 372_4 373_2 402_0 429_5 673 1041 f. 1195_1
Eclipse, solar 450_0 1017_4 (?)
Edmonds, J. M. 699
Eels decked with gold 590
Egbert, J. C. 613_2
Egg as offering to dead 1060 birth of Enorches from 1021 birth of Helene from 1015 birth of Kastor and Polydeukes from 1015 birth of Moliones from 1015 cosmic 422_5 1020 f. 1022 f. 1026 1033 ff. 1051 cosmic, called 'the brilliant chitón' or 'the cloud' 1024 cosmic, containing seated Eros 1048 cosmic, in Egypt 1035 cosmic, in India 1035 f. cosmic, in Orphic theogonies 1050 f. cosmic, in Persia 1036 cosmic, in Phoinike 1036 ff. cosmic, splits into heaven and earth 1035 f. 1037 f. 1048 cosmic, with gold and silver halves 1035 fallen from moon 1015_7 flanked by snakes 1062 golden 1035 f. 1039 halved to form caps of Dioskouroi 1015 hung from roof at Sparta 1015_7 in hand of Asklepios 1077 kept in chest by Leda 1015 laid by Daita or Daito (Daiso) 1021 laid by Nemesis 1015 laid by Nyx 1020 silver 1015 symbolising moon (?) 1015_7
Eggs in bird's nest 1199_2 (?) in glass goblet 1203_1
Eggeling, J. 1035 f.
Egyptism in Aischylos 252
Eight years' distribution of land in Dalmatia 440_2 period in cult and myth 239 ff. tenure of Spartan kings 440_2
Eiresióne 13_1
Eiselastikòs agón 959_0 1179_8
Eisele, T. 284_2 285_0 288_3 307_2
Eisen, G. A. 647_6 1197 ff.
Eisler, R. 88_3 177_0 224_1 386 426 426_4 427_3 545_0 547_0 587_7 588_0 1017_4 1036 1038 1051 1053 1137_0
Eitrem, S. 237_0 267_2 382_3 388_6 388_9 451_1 477_0 $488_{0(0)}$ 1042 1042_{11} 1156_4 1170_8
Elderkin, G. W. 282_0
Electrum, cup of, modelled on the breast of Helene 346_0 double axes of 637 f. earrings of 638
Elegiacs 222_0
Élektron, 'amber' 499
Ellendt, F. 806_1
Elm-tree at Ephesos 405_3 of Artemis 405_3 turns its leaves at solstice 470_0 venerated in France 403_0
Elýsia 22 789 840
Elýsion 36
Emasculation of Agdistis 969_4 of Attis 970_0 of Gallos, king of Pessinous (?) 970_0 of Kronos by Zeus 447 f. of Ouranos by Kronos 447 of sky-god 447 of Zeus by Typhon 448 See also Castration
Emerald 423
Emperor identified with sun-god 321 f.
Enchytrístriai 1065 1229
Endt, J. 123_0
Enelýsia 21 f. 789 840
Engelhardt, C. 1204_5
Engelhardt, C. M. 136_3
Engelmann, R. 739_3 764_2 1044
Enkoímesis See Incubation
Enneeteris 240_3
Enthronement, ritual, in cave of Zeus Βροντῶν 838 852
Entrails, divination by 891_0
Épheboi 1121_0
Ephésia grámmata 410_0
Epiphany of Hector 961_0 of Hemithea 671 of Zeus Κάσιος 982_0
Epitaph of Apollon 221 of Dionysos 220 of Pikos ὁ καὶ Ζεύς 220_0 943_0 of Pikos ὁ καὶ Ζεύς, ὃν καὶ Δία καλοῦσι 943_0 of Zan 354 of Zan Κρόνου 940_0 945_0 of Zan ὃν Δία κυκλήσκουσιν 220_6 942_0 945_0 of Zeus 940_0
Epitaphs, Phrygian, end with a curse on violator of tomb 277 ff.
Epónymoi in trophy from spoils of 'Marathon' at Delphoi 1137_2 on eastern frieze of Parthenon 1137_2
Epoptéia 1168_3
Eranistaí 1161 1170_2
Erman, A. 99_1 127_0
Ernout, A. 404_2
Eschenbach, A. C. 34_1
Escher-Bürkli, J. 476_5
Espérandieu, É. 61_0 71_5 75_0 75_1 78_1 79_1 1213
Etymology, popular, serves religion 401_0
Euhemerism 241_4 696_0
Euphemism 1112_7 1113_0 1114_0
Euphemistic titles of ancestor 1125_1 bear-goddess (?) 228_4 $1114_{0(6)}$ d. of Zeus by Persephone (?) $1114_{0(5)}$ the Devil 1112_7 Erinyes $1113_{0(1)}$ genitals 450_0 Hades

Euphemistic titles of (cont.) $1113_{0(2)}$ Hekate $1114_{0(4)}$ Persephone $1113_{0(3)}$ snake 1152 f. snake-god $1114_{0(7)}$ Zeus 1092_3 1111 f. 1131 1159 1174
Evans, Sir A. J. 30_7 30_8 31_1 47_2 491_{-4} 131_1 143_2 157_0 160_3 161_6 193 514_2 518_3 520_4 527 528_1 528_8 532 f. 535 538_1 538_4 539_1 543 552_1 600_4 613 613_2 623_1 624_0 625 628_7 637_9 639 645_3 652_{10} 653 654 656_6 662_{12} 688_0 794_5 795 799_4 925_1 927_0 929_0 939_1 940_0 943_0 944_0 1221
Evans, Sir J. 505 506_5 506_9 511_1 512_1 528_4 618_1 643_{10}
Evil eye See Eye, evil
Ewald, G. H. A. 1109_0
Ewald, H. 1037 f.
Exposure of children at Athens 1229 in 'Expulsion' tales 1014 ff.
Expurgation in Euripides 1012 f. in Homer 989 in Sophokles 1012
Eye as seat and doorway of sonl 504 evil 502 504 f. 844 evil, personified as Invidia 505_2 giants with one 988 ff. good 504 f. 844 of Apollon good 504_6 of Arkesilas good 504_6 of Athena evil (?) 503_0 of Athena piercing 502_2 of God 671_{10} of Horos 450_0 of Muses good 504_6 of Zeus darts lightning 502 ff. 844 of Zeus evil 504 844 of Zeus flashing 502_2 of Zeus inlaid with silver 503_0 of Zens jealous 503 f. of Zeus witness of right and wrong 502_2
Eyes, four, of Kronos 553 four, of Kyklopes 999 of Zeus 'Ιδαῖος fixed on Ilion 950_0 three, of Zeus 1144_2
Eye-brows of Zeus (ox-eye) 775_0
Eye-sight explained by Empedokles 505_1 explained by Platon 505_1

Fabricius, E. 195_1 196_7 197_2 197_3 935_0 952_0
Facius, J. F. 895_1
Falk, H. 533_2
Farbridge, M. H. 1210_4
Farnell, L. R. 13_1 115_2 118_2 160_3 166_3 238_3 245_5 262_4 267_2 267_5 268_3 291_2 303_2 313 410_1 450_1 453 457 f. 495_6 583_3 692_3 868_6 873_2 1032 1070 1098_4 $1114_{0(6)}$ 1114_0 1214
Farquhar, E. P. 905_0
Fasces of Roman lictors 635 1221
Father and Son as forms of the same deity in Phrygia 287 f. and Son, Greek types of, in Christian art 1210
Father, Son as rebirth of 294 314 ff. 611_2
Fawn of Artemis 152_0
Fay, E. W. 1220
Fazellus, T. 917_0 918_0
Fear that sky may fall 54 ff.
Feathered head-dress 143 143_3 552 f.
Feet of Hephaistos 451_1 of Podaleirios 451_1 unwashen 959_0 f.
Fehrenbach, E. 291_2
Fehrle, E. 210_0
Feist, S. 464_{10} 715_8 1039
Fellows, Sir C. 588 591 591_4 974_0
Ferguson, W. S. 817_0
Fergusson, J. 150_2
Fetish as Egyptian term for 'god' (?) 544_3 becomes first attribute and then symbol 617 814
Fick, A. 277_4 293_2 295_1 354_9 384_0 414_0 451_1 496_0 569 600_5 662 666_0 932_1 947_0 1025 1072 1087 1134_9 1149_3 1156_6 1156_8
Ficker, G. 307_1
'Fig,' a prophylactic gesture known as the 291_2
Figs as means of purification 1103_4 called μείλιχα in Naxos 1092_9 in folk-tales 671_6 672 on altar-top 154_0
Fig-juice, purification by 291_2 (?) 1103 (?)
Fig-tree at Prousa ad Olympum (?) 964_2 at Sykea in Kilikia 1103_8 in myth of Apollon and raven 832_7 in myth of Sykeus or Sykeus 1103_8 lightning-proof 1104_0 of Dionysos Συκέατης $488_{0(0)}$ of Zeus Μειλίχιος (?) 1092 f. 1103 f. 1112 1114 of Zeus Συκάσιος 1103 parable of barren 682_2 St Sabas hung on 1104 white 403_0 wild, at Klaros $489_{0(4)}$ $490_{0(0)}$ wild, at Siris in Lucania $490_{0(0)}$ wild, beside the Eleusinian Kephisos 1103 with eagle on it (?) 964_2
Fig-trees in Crete 946_0 on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5
Fig-wood 1022 1093_0
Filbert-trees 949_5
Fillets linking amphora etc. to double axe 657 f. linking cult-image to ground 408_0 409_0 574 1220 on oak at Dodona 677 radiate 461_0 round sacred stone 981_0 982_0 round thunderbolt 809
Fimmen, D. 890_6
Finamore, G. 1001_1 1001_2 1012_1
Fines payable to Zeus and Hephaistos 972_1 payable to Zeus Σολυμεύς 973_1 f.
Finger, golden, in Epirote tale 224_1 of St Adalbert 214_0 of Attis endowed with perpetual movement 970_0
Fiorelli, G. 118_2 392_9 393
Fir-cone 300 907_3 949_5
Fire carried before Asiatic kings 34_1 carried before Roman emperors 34_1 carried in rites of Asklepios Ζεὺς Τέλειος 1076 descends on Zoroastres 33 ff. discovery of 981_1 in Dictaean Cave 928_0 kindled from lightning by Perseus 1187 new 816 f. $1149_{3(1)}$ perpetual, on Mt Aitne 630 perpetual, at Apollonia in Illyria 485 perpetual, at Athens 1148 perpetual, on Mt Chimaira 972_1 perpetual, on common hearth of primitive folk 1148 perpetual, at Delphoi 1216 perpetual, at Ione, 1187 perpetual, at Nemi (?) 417_5 perpetual, on Mt Olympos in Lykia 972_1 perpetual, at Rome 417_5 perpetual, on mountain of Zoroastres 33 977_0 regarded as divine in Babylonia 34_1 regarded as divine in Egypt 34_1 regarded as divine in Persia 33 ff. 1187 regarded as flower 771 royal

Fire (cont.)
34 sanctuary of, at Ione 1187 springing from ground on Mt Chimaira 972_1 springing from ground on Mt Olympos in Lykia 972_1 worshipped by Hypsistarioi $885_{0(28)}$
Fires of St Elmo 980_0
First-fruits sent to Apollon Δήλιος 497 sent to Apollon Πύθιος 240 816 f. sent to Zeus Ἀσκραῖος $872_{0(5)}$ wrapped in wheaten straw 497 498_2
Fir-trees in myth of Dryope 486 on Mt Ainos 907_2 silver, on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5 silver, reaching through aér to aithér 949_5
Fischbach, F. 606_2
Fish 205_1 414_1 called τομπίλος 448_0 golden, in folk-tale from Hungary 1012_1 in folk-tale from Epeiros 672 in hand of Lithuanian wind-god 445_1 incised on celt 643_7 of Aigokeros or Capricornus 933_0 on chalice of Antioch (?) 1199_2 on lárnax from Palaikastro 524 (?) on vase from Knossos 527 f. tame, at Labranda 590_3
Fish-goat 938_0
Fish-hooks 1151
Fishing in folk-tale from Sicily 1000 inventor of 715_4 1037
Flach, J. 1154_4
Flag 545_0
Flasch, A. 739_0 1136_0
Flather, J. H. 339_1
Fleece as head-dress of priests at Anagnia 377 golden 899_1 in rites of Dionysos or Zagreus 1030 of Zeus 1065 1140 1166_3 (?) worn by procession up Mt Pelion 870_0
Fleming, R. B. 122_0
Flies as emissaries of a god, if not the god himself 782 as sign of storm 782 avoid Mt Carina in Crete 783_3 avoid temple of Aphrodite at Paphos 783_3 avoid temple of Hercules at Rome 783 placated by sacrifice of ox 782
Flint of Iupiter Feretrius 546_0 of Iupiter Lapis 546_0
Flogging of Eros by Silenos 1048 of Maenads with ivy-sprays 1041 of schoolboy by Eros 1048 of Underground Folk at Pheneos 1136_4 of the Vestal Ilia 1016 of young men at altar of Artemis Ὀρθία 421_3
Flood of Deukalion 348_5 892_4 901_2 902_0
Flower of Zeus (carnation ?) 775_0
Flowers 95 298 407_0 515 624 710 771_0 (?) 949_5 977_1 980_0 associated with thunder and lightning 774_4 775_0 776_0
Flower-fays 527
Flute of Archigallus 299 (?) 300
Flute-players 407_6 670
Flutes of Apollon 246 249_2 of Athena 249_2 of Boeotians 898_6 of one of the Charites 249_2 of Hyperboreans 249_2 of Marsyas 249_2 of Satyr 262 on pine-tree 306_5
'Fly,' priestess at Dodona called 215_1
Foal 987_1
Förster, R. 103_9 1164_9 1180_4 1197_3
Folkard, R. 396_0 772_1 1165_1 1166_0
Folk-tales, types of: 'Bluebeard' 995_2 'Danaë' 671 'Dragon-slayer' 1151 'Expulsion' 1003 ff. 1012 ff. 'Floating Coffer' 671_4 1018 'Otherworld-visit' 1166_2 'Polyphemus' 988 ff. 'Strong Hans' 679
Fonts 1216
Food falling from tables is devoted to dead friends 1129 1162 must not be picked up from floor 1129
Forbes, E. 971_2
Forcellini, Ae. 599_7
Forchhammer, P. W. 327
Forefather appears as snake 1060 1061 buried in the house 1059 1060 f. called Lar or Genius 1059 conceived as Iupiter 1059 f. conceived as Zeus 1061
Fork in relation to thunderbolt of Zeus 798 ff. 850 of demon 138_9 of Etruscan god of the Underworld (?) 850 of Hades (?) 227_4 798 ff. of Iupiter Iutor 850
Formigé, J. C. (C. J.) 111_1
Formulae at weddings 1166_1 in rites of Sabazios 1166_1 magical $889_{0(9)}$ 1127_0 mystic 1218
Forrer, R. 80_2 109_1 547_0 606_1 617_6 622_3 632_6 690_3 1040 1213
Forster, E. S. 18_{2-4}
Forty 303_2
Foucart, P. 12 268_4 562_3 586_7 592_4 593_1 594 596_3 1105_4 1105_6 1107 f.
Fougères, G. 779 813_2 814_0
Foundation-deposit 609 f.
Foundation-myths of Alexandreia 1127_0 1188 of Antiocheia on the Orontes 1188 1193 of Boucheta 348 of Bouthroton 348 of Crete 349 of Ephesos 405 of Mt Kasion in Egypt 984_4 of Mantineia 1083 of Miletos 405 ff. of Pelousion 986_0 of Seleukeia Pieria 981_1 f. 1188 of Troy 349
Foundation-sacrifice 1188
Fountain at Orchomenos in Boiotia 1149 in myth of Apollon and raven 833_0 See also Spring
Four-eared See Index I Tetraotos
Four-eyed Phersephone or Kore 1029 warrior from Sardinia 446_1 See also Janiform
Four-handed Apollon 322_6
Foville, J. de $491_{0(6)}$
Fowler, H. N. 211_2 597_2 1148_2
Fowler, W. Warde 100_9 337_4 353_6 354 f. 359_6 363_6 518_3 519_0 546_0 1059 1170_5 1172 f. 1172_0
Fox sacrificed at Aizanoi 964_3
Fox, C. R. 578_1 578_2
Fränkel, M. 268_1 413_7 894_2 954_0 1076 f. 1098_1 1180 1180_1
Frankincense 485

Franz, R. 228_4 $1114_{0(6)}$
Fraser, J. 1228
Frazer, Sir J. G. 92_3 93_1 164_6 224_1 242_1 294_1 295_2 299 303_2 306_2 311_9 328_5 378 392_8 392_9 394 f. 397_0 398_0 400 400_6 403_1 417 f. 420 421_1 434 436_3 440_2 450_1 455_0 465 471_{10}. 498_2 538_5 550_5 551_1 552 559_4 627_3 635_9 643 645_4 672_0 680_{10} 681 f. 685_2 692 817_0 826 833 868_3 892_1 894_3 895_7 896_0 898_3 899_1 901_1 904_1 924_0 960_9 976_0 988 999_5 1059 1071 1076 1081 1089 1096_3 1103 f. 1108_2 1112_7 $1114_{0(6)}$ 1132_6 1135_6 1140_5 1147_{16} 1148_2 1148_5 1148_9 $1149_{2(1)}$ 1151_8 1162_2 1222
Freshfield, D. W. 905_0
Freud, S. 450_1
Frickenhaus, A. 173_5 231_7 381_1 742_3 742_4 758_9 864_3
Friederichs, C. 393_2 862_0 865_2
Friedländer, J. 446 f. 575_5 576_1
Friedländer, P. 670_8 828_{10}
Friend, H. 396_0 774_4 775_0 1165_1 1166_0
Fries, C. 791
Fritze, H. von 18_6 954_0 956_0 1079 1184_1
Fritzsche, H. 806_1
Frobenius, L. 1033
Fröhner, W. 102_9 105_7 296_4 371_0 372_1 373_1 373_2 638_6 1126_0 1197
Frontality 739 1206
Frothingham, A. L. 359 f. 457 937_0 1068 1181_0 1211
Fruit 297 300 517
Fuchs, A. 76_1
Furious Host See Wild Hunt
Furnace, victims cast into 1011 1019
Furneaux, H. 441_3 442_2
Furtwängler, A. 49_1 111_0 112_1 124_1 124_2 265_1 265_2 265_4 309_3 315_3 475_7 478_2 510_1 510_2 514_2 515_1 515_3 597 621 621_2 638_7 641_2 641_4 645_4 646_{1-3} 673_6 718_3 731_1 737_4 749_1 757_1 798_2 798_3 $831_{1(1)}$ 832 f. 852_{11} 853_5 854_7 854_8 863_1 895_0 1043 1045 ff. 1064 1070 1078 1090 1117_7 1126_0 1136_0 1136_4 1143_1 1162_4 1170 1170_7 1216
Fyfe, T. 935_0

Gad-fly on back of bull 946_0
Gaebler, H. 412_2
Gaerte, W. 1220
Gaertringen, F. Hiller von 1147_4
Gaidoz, H. 37 52_4 87_1 479_9 480_{4-6} 1079
Garden of the gods 1021 of Hera 1021 of Okeanos 1021 of Zeus 1017 1021 1027 1119
Gardner, E. A. 240_3 758_9 867 1136_0 1143_1
Gardner, P. 162_1 193_5 370_2 504_8 758 784_1 1042 1072 1095_9 1143 1145_0
Gardthausen, V. 635_0
Garland, golden, in Bacchic procession 120_3 in Orphic ritual (?) 120_3 cp. 1168
Garlic 1172_4 taboo on 987_0
Garnett, Miss L. M. J. 990_7
Garnett, R. 418_3
Garrucci, R. 369_1 606_2 709_1 709_{3-5} 795_3 $831_{1(2)}$ 1042 1050 1206_9 1207_0
Garstang, J. 550_5 551_1 552 560_4 620_5
Gassies, G. 78_1 78_2 108_4
Gastinel, G. 1064
Gates of Day 42 of the gods 42 of men 42 of Night 42 of the sun 41
Gatti, G. 400_{11}
Gauckler, P. $808_{0(17)}$
Gaye, R. K. 1168_2
Gedike, F. 855_1
Geffcken, J. 31_3
Geffroy, A. 107_3
Gelder, H. van 923_0
Geldner, K. F. 1036
Gelzer, H. 696_0
Genitals in fig-wood 1022 kept as relics 450_1 of Attis 970_0 of Jacob 451_1 of Kronos 448_1 of Ouranos 447_8 of Saturnus 448_1 of Typhon 450_0 of Zeus 450_0 1029
Genthe, H. 493_2
Georgiades, A. S. 897_4
Gerhard, E. 125_2 154_0 168_1 250_4 263_2 287_0 315_2 320 f. 327 371 384_0 387_4 432_1 432_2 594 709_7 710_{2-4} 718_2 800_1 805_2 838_3 946_0 980_0 1061 1062 1064 1088 1091 1125_1 1134_2 1204_3
Gerhard, G. A. 349_{20}
Gerth, B. 3_7 1068
Gestures of salutation 1199 1209_2 of supplication 1099_1 1175 prophylactic 291_2 sexual 291_2
Gherkin 154_9
Ghirardini, G. 736_1
Giannopoulos, N. I. 166_2 1226
Giant, one-eyed, blinded by hero 988 ff. See also Index I Giant, Gigantes
Gibbon, E. 607
Gifford, S. K. 133_3
Gigantensäulen See Jupiter-columns
Gigantomachy 82 435_5 436_1 684_4 712 f. 752_4 820 825 830_7 831_1 911_0 953_3 973_1
Gilbert, G. 1148_{12}
Gilbert, O. 11_{1-3} 43_1 120_2 363_6 365_1 432_5 582_8 722_3 789 805_6
Gilded chalice 1200 glasses (See Glasses, gilded) statues of Iupiter 45 46
Giles, H. A. 479_{10} 495_5
Giles, P. 340_2 397_0 421_7 549_6 583 588_0 860_4 1095_5 1154_5 1228
Gillies, M. M. 1227
Ginzel, F. K. 242_3 243_1
Girard, P. 292_0
Giraudon, A. 731_2
Giraux, L. 643_7
Girdle 515_2
Glass cups covered with open-work in gold, silver, or lead 1204 f. mountain 1012_1
Glasses, gilded 606 1206 f.
Globe as seat of Eros 1047 beneath feet of Ahriman 1054 (?) beneath foot of Chronos 864 cp. 860 beneath foot of Eros 1047 beneath foot of Fortuna

Globe (cont.)
862_{10} beneath foot of Kairos 860 860_5 beneath feet of Victoria 1196_0 beside Iupiter 95_2 carried by Eros 1047 cosmic $491_{0(6)}$ 1082 held by deified emperor 978_0 (?) held by Zeus 980_0 (?) solar $491_{0(6)}$ $492_{0(6)}$ starry 373 surmounted by eagle 95_2 578 (?) surmounted by phoenix 373_2
Glotz, G. 727_3
Glue of bull's hide 934_0
Gnecchi, F. 371_0 372_4 1083 1102_8
Goat Amaltheia (?) 746_2 as tattoo-mark 121 122_0 beside long-haired god at Keramos 575_8 (?) beside Semele (?) carrying Dionysos (?) 363 in riddle 659_1 nurtures Attis 969_4 nurtures Phylakides and Philandros 218_0 nurtures Zeus 928_0 961_0 968_0 of Mercurius 70_1 of Zeus Τυναρεύς (?) 987_1 on Mt Argaios 978_0 980_0 on shield 375 (?) 377 (?) sacrificed at Babylon 463_1 sacrificed at Delphoi 217 sacrificed to Zeus Ἀσκραῖος at Halikarnassos $872_{0(5)}$ wild 987_1 with four horns 326_3 worshipped at Thmouis 987_0
Goat's head 146 154_0 405_2(?) 978_0 980_0 1051
Goat's horn as cornu copiae 95_1
Goats discover oracle at Delphoi 217_2 of Apollon 217_2 of Thor 63_1 213_0 votive 938_0 943_0 944_0
Goat-rhytón of Bacchant 347_0 of Lares 1060
Goat-skin 989
Goddess, bearded 596
Godley, A. D. 2_3
Goettling, K. W. 1025 1154_4
Goez, H. 473_1 475 f. 475_0
Gold aigis 261 amides 1065 apple $488_{0(2)}$ 1003 1016 f. apples 763_1 1014 1017 1020 f. 1030 apple surmounted by cross 609 arm 224_1 axe-haft 989 ball 933_0 basons 1009 bay 459 bay-wreath 258 301 (?) believed to be hidden in columns 966_0 bird 1012_1 borders 1065 bough identified with branch plucked by would-be rex Nemorensis 417_5 bough on an evergreen oak near Lake Avernus 417_5 bough on which all birds sing 1003 f. 1016 bowls 853 breast 224_1 brick 853 bucrania 538 652 654 bulla 699_4 bull's head with double axe between horns 538 bull's horns in the sky 117 1028 busts of Romulus and Remus 441 calf 354 chain 1009 chest 671_{10} child 1035 children 1007 coffer 995 cord 1029 crab 666_3 crowns 1157_3 disks 938_0 double axe 518 520 eagles of Zeus at Delphoi 179 eagles of Zeus on Mt Lykaion 423 egg 1035 f. 1039 embryo 1035 equestrian statue of Attalos iii 955_0 finger 224_1 fish 1012_1 fleece 899_1 garlands in Bacchic procession 120_3 glasses 606 Greek name of, a Semitic loan-word 715 hair 1028 helmet
Gold (cont.)
62_1 261 himátion 916_0 horn of reindeer 465 horns of Cernean hind 465 hound 212_5 1227 house of Nero 254_5 key 991 leg 224_1 liknon 933_0 lily-work of Etruscan necklace 528 lyre 520 mattock (?) 806_1 mitra 459 moon 1012_1 Nike 290_0 1190 olive-wreath 261 open-work 1205 ox-horn 982_0 pigeon 677 pillar 422_{12} 423 plane-tree given by Pythios to Dareios 281_4 plane-tree of Persian kings 281_4 plaque in relief 938_0 plinth 853 ram 899_1 ring from Isopata 49_1 rings from Knossos 49 f. 516_3 543 944_0 rings from Mykenai 47 ff. 49_1 514 ff. 525 543 652 ring of Wodan 62_1 990 rope 1211 scales held by Zeus 734_3 sceptre 763_1 seat 1011 1016 snake 1083 spear 261 staff 989 star 1010 f. stars 1014 statue of Apollon 220 220_0 statue of Colchian Diana 411 statue of Zeus dedicated at Daphne by Antiochos iv Epiphanes 1188 ff. statue of Zeus dedicated at Olympia by Kypselos 737 sun 1012_1 tablets of Orphists 118 ff. thigh of Pythagoras 223 ff. throne 1016 thunderbolt 809 810 tripod 201_2 vine at Jerusalem 281_4 1217 vine given by Priamos to Astyoche 281_4 1184_3 vine given (by Priamos) to Tithonos 281_4 vine given by Pythios to Dareios 281_4 vine given by Zeus to Tros 281_4 vine in Delos 282_0 vine of Persian kings 281_4 wand 990 992 994_4 wings 1020 womb 1035 wreath 603
Golden Age 1160
Golden bough See Gold bough
Golther, W. 52_7
Gomme, Sir G. L. 703_2
Gondi, F. Grossi 1128_0
Gong at Dodona 133_0 214_1 826 1226 axe-pendant modified into 649 ff. 847 in relation to kóttabos-stand 1162_3
Gonzenbach, L. 1012_1
Good eye. See Eye, good
Goodwin, C. W. 700_0
Goodyear, W. H. 529_1 772_1 788_1
Goose as form of Zeus 1075 in relation to Penelope 691 of Asklepios 1079 cp. 1083 of Herkyna 1075 of Mars (?) 51_1 presented to Rā 774_0
Goose's egg 1083
Gordon, G. B. 527_2
Gorgóneion See Index I
Gossen 519_0 612_0
Gozzadini, Count G. 650_1 651 652_1
Grabphalli 1089
Gräber, F. 956_0
Graef, B. 195_1 469_2
Graef, P. 359
Graefe, C. F. 410_0
Grævius, J. G. 13
Graffiti 1200 1206 1210
Graillot, H. 293_3 299_3 299_7 300_3 306_2 306_4 592_2 950_0

Granger, F. 392_2 394 f. 400 701_0 1059
Grape-bunches 154_0 281 287_1 540 564 657_5 658 $883_{0(6)}$ 960_0 f. 1204
Grapes 95 1054
Grape-vines 285_0
Grasberger, L. 414_0
Grasshopper 1199
Grassmann, H. 344_3
Graux, C. 611_7
Grave of 'Ascanius' 1146_0 of Asklepios 1088 f. of Cestius $1145_{1(b)}$ of Deukalion 1118 of followers of Proitos and Akrisios 1146_0 of Ganymedes 953_2 of giant 1002 of Hadrian $1145_{1(b)}$ of Hektor 961_0 of Kronos 555_0 556_0 of 'Kyros' $1145_{1(c)}$ of the Maccabees 1146_0 of Minos 940_0 945_0 of Oidipous 1154 of Pelasgos 1144_2 of Penelope 691 of Phytalos 1092_6 of Cn. Pompeius Magnus 984_4 of 'Pompey' 1146_0 of 'Romulus' $1145_{1(b)}$ of 'Scipio' $1145_{1(b)}$ of snake (Agathos Daimon) 1127_0 of Zeus 556_0 694_0 695_0 696_0 934_0 940_0 ff. omphaloid 1057 regarded as shrine of Zeus $883_{0(6)}$ surmounted by 'Dipylon' amphora 1056 surmounted by loutrophóros 1058 surmounted by próthesis-vase 1056 ff.
Green winged horse lightens and thunders 1003
Greenwell, Canon W. 632_6 656 f.
Grégoire, H. 596_3 1220
Gregorio, A. de 374
Grenfell, B. P. 696_0
Grienberger, T. von $330_{0(9)}$
Griffin as support of Minerva's helmet 95_1 eagle-headed 407_0 foreparts of 407_0 lion-headed 407_0 of Apollon 160_0 of Artemis 'Εφεσία 407_0 of Nemesis 146_7 relief of 896_0
Griffin's head 146_2 (?) 146_4 (?) 146_7 (?) 639 698_2
Griffins, chariot drawn by 523
Griffith, F. Ll. 544_3
Grimm, J. 37_6 53_3 88_3 109_1 158_7 230_1 774_4 782_1 844_6 868_2 868_3 1033 1131_2 1212
Grimm, W. 988 f.
Grivaud de la Vincelle, C. M. 1089
Grotefend 337_4
Grueber, H. A. 331_7 371_0 372_4 402_0 635_2 1172_0
Grünwedel, A. 774_1
Grunau, S. 92
Gruppe, O. 14 94_2 99_1 115_2 118_2 119_1 122_0 129_1 131_5 160_3 176_1 232_2 236_5 242_{3-5} 249_2 267_5 268_{2-4} 276_2 294_0 295_3 302_2 315_3 348_2 352_1 410_1 422_1 444_6 444_7 455_2 456 458_2 459_3 464_8 467_2 477_0 486_5 $492_{0(6)}$ 496_0 504_5 515_5 549_5 549_6 553_2 554 558_0 583 600_3 626 627_3 641_2 675_4 680_1 697_2 721 722 791 798_6 806_8 848 857_8 868_8 874_2 $878_{0(3)}$ 892_4 923_0 925_1 933_6 957_2 960_0 963_0 970_0 981_1 987_0 1020 f. 1023 1025 1026 1029 1032 1033 1036 1037 1045 1069 1074 1085 1087 1089 1102_8
Gruppe, O. (cont.) 1103_4 1112_6 $1114_{0(6)}$ 1125_1 1135_4 1156 1164_0 1165_1 1179_3
Gsell, S. 73_0
Guadet, J. 359_1
Gubernatis, A. de 88_3 396_0 402_1 665_3 772_1 1165_1 1166_0
Gudeman, A. 1023
Günther, R. 494
Guhl, E. 406_0
Guillaume, E. 550_5 620_5
Guimet, E. 547_0
Guinea-fowl 497
Gum tragacanth 483
Gundel, W. 1211 1219
Gusman, P. 392_7
Gypsum, image of, containing heart of Dionysos or Zagreus 1031 Titans smeared with 1030

Haakh 308 ff.
Hackman, O. 988 ff. 999_6 1001_3
Haddon, A. C. 189_3 642 676_4
Haeberlin, C. 613_4 625_8
Haebler 666_1
Hahn, J. G. von 671 678 f. 683 995_2 1003 1004_1 1006_1 1006_2 1007_1 1012 f. 1016
Haines, C. R. 939_1
Hair, blue 445_0 crimped or waved by Romans 318_8 dedicated at puberty 859 f. false 30 light and dark, in Janiform head of Boreas 380 'Minoan' fore-lock 519 f. of Attis always grows 970_0 of hermit 1004 of Iupiter 711_9 of Medousa 191_{10} 1148 of Zeus golden 1028 of Zeus Στραγηγός 707 votive, in clay 944_0
Halbherr, F. 770_2 925_1 935_0
Halévy, J. 1038
Half-man, folk-tale of, from Epeiros 671 f.
Hall, Edith H. 538_2
Hall, H. R. 143_2 313_1 409_0 410_1 517_3 518_2 538_3 600_4 601_8
Hall, I. H. 598 f.
Hall, R. W. 605_1
Halliday, W. R. 693_4 734_3 988 990_8 1019_0 1067 1114_0 1134_9 1222
Haltères 1154
Hamaker, H. A. 558_0
Hamilton, Miss M. (Mrs G. Dickins) 232_4 891_0 1114_5
Hamilton, W. J. 923_0 966_0 977_1 980_0
Hammer of Charles Martel 660_1 of Charon 641 of Donar 64_0 609 of Hercules (?) 64_0 of Thor 547_0 of Zeus 945_2 on base of Ahriman 1054 thrown to ratify acquisition of property 703_2
Hammers of Iupiter (Thor) 620
Hammeran, A. 74_4
Ham-shaped coins from fountain at Nemausus 1141_0
Hand of God holding horn full of rays 1134_4 silver, of Nuada 224_1
Hands of goddess curved up over her breasts 535 of goddess raised, one palm

Hands (cont.)
outwards, the other in profile 536 suppliant $881_{0(0)}$ $889_{0(33)}$ 944_0 votive, in bronze $886_{0(30)}$
Hanging 1104
Hannig, F. 720 1018_3
Harding, P. J. 419
Hardouin, J. 1041
Hare 152_0
Harnack, A. 307_1
Hárpe a sickle-knife invented by Thracians 550_1 found among many peoples of Asia Minor 550 of Demeter 448_9 of Kronos 447_6 549 f. of Perseus 718 721_0 721_7 1084 of Saturn 70_1 550 on taurobolic altar 306_4
Harris, J. Rendel 133_3 248_0 291_2 318 428 429_3 430_1 434 442_4 447_6 451 452 487 ff. 487_3 $488_{0(0)}$ 692_9 693_4 697_0 824 844 851 1014 1064 1072 1219
Harrison, E. 412_7
Harrison, Miss J. E. 49_1 118_2 120_2 120_3 121_3 131_5 152_0 160_3 165_0 170_3 177_0 207_0 243_3 258_2 262_7 280_0 313 f. 315_3 375_1 432_4 450_1 458_1 458_5 495 511_1 516_8 517_3 520_5 692_6 693_4 791 931_0 932_0 1022 1030 1039 1056 1058 1062 1067 1083 1089 1095_0 1105_8 1105_9 1107_4 1110 f. 1111_0 $1114_{0(6)}$ 1125_1 1136_9 1137_0 1151_8 1151_9 1160_5 1161 1161_3 1163_3 1213
Harry, J. E. 805_6
Hartland, E. S. 291_0 294_1 451_1 960_0 1018
Hartung, J. A. 365_4
Hartwig, P. 460_2 473_1 473_{3-5} 473_7 475 479_1
Harvest-rites 498_2 1096_2
Hasluck, F. W. 835_5 $881_{0(21)}$ 943_0 1082
Hat of bifrontal sky-god 385 f. of Odhin 386 winged 388
Hatch, L. P. 1219
Hatchet See Axe
Hatzfeld, J. 1217
Hauck, A. 604_4
Haug, F. 57_3 57_5 70_0 70_1 71_{1-3} 71_6 71_7 74_4 75_1 76_9 77_2 87_2 87_3 88_1 88_2 1212
Hauser, F. 473_3 475_7 902_2
Haussoullier, B. 318_0
Hauvette-Besnault, A. 580_4 586_1
Havercamp, S. 1172_0
Haverfield, F. 91_1
Havet, L. $329_{0(2)}$
Hawes, C. H. 166_1 341_3 538_3
Hawes, H. 538_3
Hawk as embodiment of Horos 774_0 as shield-boss (?) 938_0 Egyptising 553 in relation to hoopoe 1131_2 on lotos 774_0 on pillar 1133_1
Hawk-headed god (Rā) 774_0 snake (Kneph) 1127_0
Hays, W. J. 1219
Hazel-tree 403_0
Hazzidakis, J. 925_1 935_0
Head as means of divination 290_0 as seat of the soul 290_0 291_0 buried separately 290_0 1218 of Archonides preserved in honey 290_0 of deceased treasured in Head (cont.)
family (Africa), or buried separately from body and replaced by stone image (ancient Egypt) 1218 of priest of Zeus Ὀπλόσμιος denounces murderer 290_0 of Publius prophesies 290_0
Heads of gods (struppi) placed on sacred couches 1170 ff.
Head, B. V. 162_1 225_6 254 313_3 363_1 429_5 430_0 447 $491_{0(0)}$ 563_1 570_1 572_2 575_5 660 660_3 662 705_9 794_5 810_0 909_0 961_0 1042 1192_9 1224
Head-dress, Egyptian 987_0 of crab's claws 1185 Oriental 980_0
Headlam, W. 345_5 1098_2 1098_3
Healing gods: Asklepios, Hygieia, Telesphoros See Index I. Dionysos Ἰατρός 250_3 Zeus Ὕψιστος $877_{0(0)}$
Health bestowed by dead kings 1071
Heart of Dionysos or Zagreus 1031 of Liber 1031
Hearth, common, of the Arcadians 1148 invoked 728_0 of Zeus Ἀστραπαῖος 815
Heberdey, R. 728_0 757_1 972_1
Hecatomb sacrificed to Zeus Κάσιος on Mt Kasion in Syria 982_0 1192 sacrificed to Zeus Νέμειος at Argos 1144_2
Hecatombs sacrificed to Zeus Μειλίχιος at Athens 1141
Hedén, E. 1102_7
Hedgehog 964_3
Hedýosmos, taboo on 987_0 See also Mint
Heeren, A. H. L. 858_1
Hehn, V. 279_3 466_4
Heim, R. 410_0
Heiss, A. 1040
Helbig, W. 103_9 144_1 154_0 158_2 160_0 165_0 392_9 393 f. 398_1 400 473_7 641_1 652_3
Hellebore, white 903_2
Helm, K. 50_1
Helmet, horned 110_3 miniature 930_0 of Wodan 62_1 of Zeus Ἄρειος 705 f. plumed 376_1 376_2
Hempl, G. $330_{0(8)}$
Henderson, W. 1002
Henzen, W. 804_0
Hepding, H. 124_0 292_4 293_3 306_4 307_1 969_4 f.
Herald of Zeus 1141
Heraldic device 189_1
Herbig, G. 378_2
Herm, double, of Dionysos 381 f. ithyphallic 645_4 1091 of Augustus personating Iupiter 1091 of Diana 149 of Hermaphroditos 1091 of Hermes 152_0 384_0 834 955_0 of Homer with Hesiod 389 of Octavian 1091 phallic 384_0 1150_9
Hermann, G. 296_4
Hermann, K. F. 327
Hermet, F. 690_2
Hero appears as snake 1064 1151 ff. blinds one-eyed giant 988 ff. buried in precinct of god 953_2 buried in sanctuary of goddess 944_0 1152 1155 engulfed in chasm 923_0 escapes by clinging under

Hero (cont.)
sheep, goat, ox, etc. 989 escapes by giving false name 989 999 escapes by putting on sheep-skin, goat-skin, ox-hide, etc. 989 fated to be slain by his own son 923_0
Hero-feast an antecedent of the celestial banquet 1168 as marriage-banquet of the dead 1163 f. satirised by Aristophanes 1166_3
Héron de Villefosse, A. 445 f. 647_4
Herrmann, P. 94_2 1019_2
Hertlein, F. 53_2 57_2 58 ff. 59_1 59_3 61_0 70_0 71 ff. 71_1 71_4 71_5 71_7 74 74_1 74_5 75_0 75_1 76_0 76_1 77_0 77_1 77_2 78_1 78_2 79_{1-3} 80_1 80_2 81 f. 81_1 81_2 81_4 87_2 88 88_0 88_5 89_{1-8} 90_2 93_3 95_1 108_8 109_1 1213
Herwerden, H. van 261_0 271_0
Herzfeld, E. 128_3
Hesseling, D. C. 641_2
Hetairai in service of temples 959_0 f.
Hettner, F. 70_0 74_6 75_1 77_2 88_5 89_8 95_2
Heuzey, L. 124_4 905_0 993_2
Hewitt, J. W. 899_1
Hexameters, buried 1186_5 would-be 101_1 183_2 220_6 278_2 344_0 410_0 612_1(?) 739_0 $875_{1(2)}$ 900_1 911_0 1067 1095_0 1150_7(?) 1154_3 1157_5(?)
Heydemann, H. 207_0 212_4 265_4 853_5 854_4 854_5 861_7 1154_1
Hicks, E. L. 580_7 1157_5 1180_1
Hides, freshly-flayed, strewn on road 923_0 924_0
Hierodouloi 616_1 1175
Hieroi 958_0
Hierophántes 291_2 292_0 1025 1067 1084 1168_3
Hierὸs gámos of Zeus and Hera 1020
High-seat pillars 57_1 533_2
Hild, J. A. 94_2 267_2 1060 1160_5
Hildburgh, W. L. 642_3
Hill, G. F. 105_5 323_2 331_7 349_2 369_1 370_2 372_1 376_2 409_6 412_2 425_1 446_3 447 552_7 553 657_3 657_6 610_9 674_1 675_4 681_1 794_5 869_6 $887_{0(31)}$ 895_0 909_0 950_0 972_1 973_1 974_0 1042 1134_4 1136_0 1172_0 1187_0 1189_2 1209_5 1220 1224
Hiller von Gaertringen, F. 236_1 874_1 1066 1229
Hind, Cerynean, on 'geometric' fibula 466 with golden horns 465 f. 843 with horns in Greek, Latin, and Hebrew writers 465 f. cp. 854 1219
Hinke, W. J. 765_2 766_0
Hirsch, Baron L. de 909_0
Hirschfeld, G. 973_1
Hirschfeld, O. 547_0
Hirschfelder, W. 472_4
Hirt, H. 293_0 455_3
Hirzel, R. 727_3
Hitzig, H. $878_{0(2)}$ 892_1 899_1 901_1 1076 1137_2 1147_{16} 1222
Hoeck, K. 190 f. 723_0
Höfer, O. 32_4 115_2 143_2 246_1 260_0 270_4 271_0 284_0 287_1 293_0 413_6 414_1 416_3 422_1
Höfer, O. (cont.)
455_0 560_8 578_3 587 599 627_1 627_3 692_1 693_1 $807_{3(1)}$ 814_3 828_6 873_2 1026 1036 1044 1066 1099_1 1099_2 1110 1112_7 $1114_{9(4)}$ 1122_7 1122_9 1131_1 1131_4 1150_2 1154 1160_7 1184_1 1211 1220
Höpken, J. 477_0
Hoernes, M. 637 648_1 648_2 649_{1-3} 686_2 687_1 690_1 1059
Hoffmann, E. 549_8
Hoffmann, O. 115_0 118_2 119_1 162_9 452_{14} 471_1 496_0 583 901_0 $948_{0(5)}$ 1102_4
Hoffmann, O. A. 71_5
Hoffmann, S. F. W. 31_3
Hofmann, G. 729_0
Hogarth, D. G. 405_3 410_0 516 530 ff. 530_2 567 569_4 569_5 623_2 637 926_0 927_0
Holder, A. 32_4 32_5 86_3
Holed vases convey liquid offerings to the dead 1056
Holland, R. 99_1 396_0 471_1 497_2 775_0
Holleaux, M. 198_1
Holm, A. 914_0 917_0
Holmes, T. Rice 792_2
Holm-oak as lucky tree 403_0 gigantic 403_1 on Mt Algidus 404 on Mt Corne 403_1 on Mt Tifata 404 See also Oak-tree
Holstenius, L. 406_0
Holthenus, E. 13
Holwerda, A. E. J. 947_0 1020
Homolle, T. 535_2
Honey as ingredient of cake 1140_4 (ἔλαφος) 1162 (πυραμίς) as intoxicant 448_1 1027 as preservative 290_0 in relation to Demeter and Persephone 1142_7 offered to Bona Dea 1142 offered to dead 977_0 1056 1142 offered to Dionysos Μειλίχιος (?) 1112_6 offered to Dis 1142 offered to Eumenides 1142 offered to Gaia 1142 offered to Hekate 1142 offered to Kerberos 1142 offered to snake (?) 1151 offered to Zeus Μειλίχιος (Μιλίχιος) 1112_8 (?) 1142 offered to Zeus Στράτιος 974_1 cp. 977_0
Honey-cake 1074 1151 (?) cp. 1140_4 1162
Hoopoe as form of Zeus 1130 f. compared with woodpecker 692 in relation to cuckoo, hawk, woodpecker, and bee-eater 1131_2 on Cretan sarcophagus (?) 523 used in charms 1131_2
Hoops, J. 487_1
Hopf, L. 665_3
Hopkins, E. W. 1035 f.
Hoppin, J. C. 734_0 737 777_2 1167_6 1223
Horn dedicated to Zeus Σωτήρ 317_2 (Gjallarhorn) held by Heimdallr 305_0 of Zeus Ἄμμων worn by Arsinoe ii 773_0 1136_4
Horns, altar of 1227 charged with vital force of divine beast 540 connected with double axe are probably bovine 538 f. in relation to double axe 535 ff. cp. 1221 of devil, four, six, or eight in number 326_3 phalloi, on lamp 367_1 ritual 517 525 528 535 538 ff. 624 ritual, formed of two-headed snakes (?)

Horns (cont.)
1221 ritual, originally bovine 555_0 ritual, originate in mountain-symbol (?) 1220 ritual, originate in shrine of buried bull 539 f. ritual, with sprays rising from them 927_0
Horse, fore-part of, on lictor's axe 633 f. green winged, that lightens and thunders 1003 1017 in bronze 938_0 marked with double axe 660 must not enter precinct of Elektryone 499_5 of the Plain, winged 1006 f. 1016 1018 red 435 ridden by Eros 1040 white 435 white-faced black 722_1 winged 1003 1006 f. 1016 ff. 1040 (See also Horses and Index I Pegasos) with Eros emerging from its head 1040
Horses, heroes destroyed by 414_2 of Apollon 453_3 of children in 'Expulsion' tales 1014_2 of Dioskouroi 313_2 313_5 313_8 of Helios 851 sacrificed in Persia 890_2 sacrificed to Ares 548_0 sacrificed to Helios 890_2 sacrificed to Poseidon 975_0 tombs for, at Agrigentum 1146_0 victims torn asunder by 1004 1019 white 975_0 winged 453_3 785
Hospitality 1097_0
Houel, J. 917_0
Hound chasing goat or stag on Mt Argaios 978_0 golden 1227 of Diana 69 of Perseus 718 of Tantalos 212_5
Hounds in bronze 938_0 of Diana 144 cp. 149 on axe-head 632_6
Hour-glass of Death 868 of Time 867 f.
Housman, A. E. 264_2
How, W. W. 311_3 436_8
Hrozny, F. 910_1
Hübner, E. 91 91_1 604_6
Hülsen, C. 46_0 106_0 106_1 147_2 147_5 355_5 359_1 361_5 363_8 400_{11} 403_0 404_3 472_7 726_0 1083
Huish, M. B. 717_1
Human sacrifice at foundation of Antiocheia on the Orontes 1188 to Ares in Skythia 548_0 to Dionysos in Mytilene 1022 to Dionysos at Orchomenos in Boiotia 899_1 to (Dionysos) Πλείστωρος at Apsinthos 270_4 to Dionysos Ὠμάδιος in Chios and Tenedos 667 f. to Palikoi in Sicily 909_0 to Zeus Ἀταβύριος in Rhodes (?) 924_0 to Zeus Ἀταβύριος in Sicily (?) 924_0 to Zeus Ἰθωμάτας 890_6 891_0 to Zeus Λαφύστιος in Boiotia 899_1 to Zeus Λαφύστιος in Thessaly 904_1 (?) to a Zeus-like deity Θυέστης at Mykenai (?) 1022 (Ζᾶνες) 343_0
Human victim wrapped in skin of sacred animal 924_0
Hunger of Erysichthon 683 f. of Herakles 683 of she-bear's son 679 683
Hunt, A. S. 696_0
Hunting, inventor of 715_4 1037
Husband, dead, becomes Zeus Κτήσιος 1067
Hutton, Miss C. A. 743_5
Hyde, W. W. 466_3
Hymn to Asklepios at Pergamon 954_0 to Athena at Pergamon 954_0 to Dionysos at Pergamon 954_0 to Zeus at Pergamon 954_0 f. to Zeus by Kleanthes 854 ff. to Zeus Δικταῖος in Crete 931_0 932_0 to Zeus Ἐλευθέριος at Termessos (Termessus Maior) (?) 974_0 to Orphic Zeus 1027 1028
Hypaethral lightning-shrines of Rome 850 roof of Erechtheion 789_7 roof of Olympion at Agrigentum 1227 trident-mark at Athens 850
Hypothymis 1162

Ianus as parent of the triumphal arch 359 f. as simulacrum of the sky 354 f. at entrance of Roman Forum 355 ff.
Ibex 939_0
Ibis worshipped in Egypt 987_0
Ilhm, M. 86_3 94_3 328_5 547_0 619_3 619_4 1059
Ilberg, J. 627_3 1088
Ilex-trees 399 f. 403_1 946_0
Image hidden in bundle of wood 421_3 of Mt Argaios 978_0 983_0 of Mt Kasion in Syria (?) 983_0 See also Statue, Xόανον
Imhoof-Blumer, F. 320_0 363_1 $492_{9(6)}$ 563_1 566_0 572_5 572_5 656 667_4 676_3 681 706_2 981_0 983_0 1072 1095_0 1143 1145_0 1193_{10}
Immerwahr, W. 164_6 1147 $1149_{2(2)}$
Immisch, O. 928_0
Imprecations by the Theoi Skleroi 972_0
Incense 974_1
Incense-burner 921_0
Incense-gathering 124
Incest 680_{10}
Incubation 232 929_0 982_0 (?) 1082
Indigitamenta 13_1
Inghirami, F. 265_4 709_7
Initiates of Demeter and Kore 132_2 of Dionysos and Kore 120_1 of Eros 1167 of Sabazios 133_0 of Zeus Κάσιος in Egypt 987_0 of Zeus Τελεσιουργός 1228 of Zeus Φίλιος 1186 sprinkled with meal 19_0 tattooed 124_4 See also Mysteries
Initiation, five stages of 1168 of Demokritos 701_0 of Pythagoras 1024 to Zeus Τελεσιουργός required of priests at Miletos 1228
Inspiration by eagle on sceptre 1134_4
Iris 774_4 1224
Iron, discovery of 715_4 949_5 1037
'Island-stones' 544 621 ff. 663_1
Ithyphallic Ἀmen-Rā 772_1 Dionysos Ἀκρατοφόρος 2444_1(?) Dionysos Φαλλήν 522_0(?) Hermes 384_0 645_4 1068 cp. 1091 1150_9 Kbem 772_1 Telesphoros 1089
Ivory bull etc. from Idaean Cave 938_0 double axe from Pherai (?) 1221 double axe from Sparta 640_0 fibula from Pherai (?) 1221 ornaments for sword-hilts 926_0 pyxis at Berlin 1209_2 1210_2 shoulder of Pelops 224 throne at Ravenna 1205_7 1205_8

Ivy as antidote to wine 250_3
Ivy-berries 270_2
Ivy-leaves 218_0 263 540 1041 1128_0 1204 as tattoo-mark 122_0 (?) of Apollon 246 used in libation 317_1
Ivy-sprays 244_4 1041
Ivy-wreath 199_2 246_1 247_0 262 f. 265 388 390 909_0 1124_0 1129_0

Jackdaw as prophet of storm 519_0
Jacobi, H. 1036
Jacobs, J. 671_4
Jacobstbal, P. 615_2 711_1 713 764 771 779 781_1 784
Jacoby, F. 695_0 758_0
Jahn, O. 46_1 125_2 131_1 154_0 212_3 265_4 273_3 346_3 379_3 460_2 504_1 645_4 699_3 712_4 713 793_{12} 802 854_8 865_2 1154_3
James, M. R. 325_7 1212
Jameson, R. 788_0
Jan, L. 343_0
Janiform amulets 387_4 Argos 379 f. Boreas 380 devil worshipped by witches 326 Kronos 552 statues of the Slave Coast 378 statues representing twins (?) 378
Janiform deities of Celts 323 ff. 842 of Gaza 673 ff. of Illyrians (?) 340 f. of Kypros 673 of Lakedaimonioi 322 of Lithuanians 445_1 of Phrygians 322 of Romans 326 ff. of Sikanoi (?) 322 of Tenedos 654 ff. 673 significance of 378 ff.
Jars of Dioskouroi 436_8 1062 ff. of Zeus in Iliad 1067 f. of Zeus Κτήσιος 1054 ff. 1062 ff.
Jastrow, M. 128_5 769_1
Jay 248_0 (?) 523 f. 697_0 1016
Jealousy, divine 503 1098_5
Jebb, Sir R. C. 3_6 465 699 699_5 723_0
Jeep, L. 608
Jenner, Mrs H. 1134_4
Jeremias, A. 99_1 127_0 128_2 480_3 483 666_1 1025 1108_2
Jessen, O. 118_3 119_0 260_0 406_0 410_1 567_2 $579_{0(13)}$ 706_7 838_7 857_6 895_0 900_1 918_1 947_0 1018_3 1041 1093_1 1180_4
Jet 701 f. 701_2
Jewelry often originates in magic 637
Jöst, W. 124_0
Johns, C. H. W. 483 1110_0
Johnston, J. B. 326_1
Jolles 94_2
Jones, H. Stuart 45_1 382_1 387_4 392_0 393_2 398_1 406_0
Jonke, A. S. 487_2
Jordan, H. 46_0 106_1 147_2 147_5 $329_{0(1)}$ 337_4 355 355_5 356_2 358 363_6 373_4 400_{11} 403_0 472_7 725_0 726_0 1083
Jouguet, P. 1228
Jowett, B. 1138_3
Judas, A. 553_0
Judeich, W. 214 115_3 567_2 $579_{0(1)}$ 586_2 586_5 789_4 789_7 952_0 1119_0 1119_1 1119_4 1148_2
Judgment of Eros 949_5 of Paris 949_5
Jüthner, J. 1226
Jullian, C. 108 108_6
Jupiter-columns 57 ff. 840 1213 as Romanised Irminsûl 91 influence the commemorative columns of Rome and Constantinople 100 ff. surmounted by driving figure 75 surmounted by riding figure 74 ff. surmounted by sitting or standing figure 89 ff.
Juppitersäulen See Jupiter-columns

Kabbadias, P. 1076 f. 1117_4 1148_2
Kahrstedt, U. 594_4
Kaibel, G. 118_2 119_1 1054 1056
Kálathos of Agdistis 1229 of Apollon $493_{0(?)}$ of Demeter (?) 564 of Hekate 714_2 of Zeus at Mylasa 577 597_3 surmounted by crescent 714_2 See also Modius
Kalinka, E. 874_1 972_1
Kalkmann, A. 265_4 416_6 460_2 969_4 970_0
Kanephóroi 19_0
Kántharos 661 960_0 1133_1
Kárnyx 110_8
Karo, G. 172_0 173_1 173_5 516 518_3 524_9 527_1 599_3 623 623_2 624_0 624_1 625 654_5
Kastner, J. G. 868_4
Kastriotes, P. 1088
Katabásion 14 1075 f. 1088
Katabóthra 998
Kaufmann, C. M. 73_0 307_1 603 606_1 906_1 1168_4 1209_6
Kausche, W. 1102_7
Kawerau, G. 1148_2
Kayser, C. L. 895_1
Kazarow, G. 1225
Keil, B. $948_{0(5)}$
Keil, J. 1025 1217 1228 1229
Keil, K. (or C.) $807_{5(6)}$ $872_{0(5)}$ 970_0 1058
Kekulé von Stradonitz, R. 739_3 739_4 1151_8
Keller, G. 127_6 136_3
Keller, J. 89_8
Keller, O. 230_1 302_2 413_3 447_7 464_6 466_3 519_0 645_4 665_2 665_3 667_3 667_4 676_3 680_1 691_2 751_2 998_1 1079 $1114_{0(6)}$ 1131_2
Kennett, R. H. 703_2 1108_2 1111_1
Kerameus, A. Papadopoulos 138_1
Keramopoullos, A. D. 231_7
Keraunós 11 See also Thunderbolt
Kern, O. 131_5 238_3 268_3 663_6 664_3 666_2 684_3 957_2 958_0 959_0 1019 f. 1023 1032 1077 1125_1
Kershaw, Miss N. (Mrs H. M. Chadwick) 533_2
Kesselwagen See Caldron-chariots
Kessler, P. T. 1213 f.
Kestner, A. 1173_2
Key as lightning-sign (?) 643_7 golden 991 incised on celt 643_7
Keys of Ahriman 1054 of grief and gladness 1160 of St Peter 1200_3
Khell, J. 327_{10}
Kíbisis 718
Kid on altar-top 154_0 Orphic votary as 121 217

Kiepert, H. 46_0 106_0 106_1 361_5 494_9
Kiessling 494 f.
King as human Dionysos 271_0 as human Iupiter 633 847 1059 as human Kronos (?) 1156 as human Zeus 24 192 794 833 897_0 940_0 942_0 944_0 945_0 1061 1065 1069 f. 1070 ff. 1073 f. 1076 1088 ff. 1121 ff. 1159 f. 1185 f. 1189 as weather-maker 1159 bears name denoting Snake 1087 buried, appears as snake 1061 1087 buried, appears with snake in attendance 1087 buried, gives oracles, sends dreams, bestows health 1071 descended from Aiolos personates Zeus 1159 descended from Zeus 1074 divinity of, among Semites 1108_2 divinity of, transmitted to successor by means of eagle-tipped sceptre 1132 ff. of Athens reckoned divine 1121 ff. 1147 of Orchomenos in Boiotia reckoned divine 1149 f. of Persia reckoned divine 853 of Persia sacrifices at Pasargadai 974_1 of Pontos carries wood for sacrifice to Zeus Στράτιος 941_1 of Pontos resides at Amaseia 975_0 of Sparta accompanied by one of the Tyndaridai 436 of Sparta as incarnation of one of the Dioskouroi (?) 436 440 of Sparta as priest of Zeus Λακεδαίμων or Zeus Οὐράνιος 436 of Sparta undergoes octennial probation 440_2 of Tegea reckoned divine (?) 1147 of Thespiai reckoned divine (?) 1150_9 of Thessaly personates Zeus 1087 ff. 1122 priestly, at Aizanoi 964_3 f. priestly, at Knossos 944_9 945_0 priestly, at Komana in Kappadokia 965_0 priestly, at Komana in Pontos 965_0 priestly, at Nemi 394 ff. 403_1 priestly, at Pessinous 965_0 priestly, at Sparta 436 priestly, buried in sanctuary of goddess 944_0 priestly, contest for position of 394 f. $489_{0(4)}$ $490_{0(6)}$ priestly, sacrificed for the community 303_2 specially favoured by Zeus 1074
King, C. W. 512_1
King, J. E. 1059
King, L. W. 765_2 766_0
Kingship, dual, at Carthage 444 dual, at Rome 440 ff. dual, at Sparta 436 440
Kinkel, G. 957_2
Kircher, A. 419
Kirchhoff, A. 1115_2
Kirchner, G. 627_3
Kisa, A. 606_1 1204_2 1204_3 1204_5 1205 1205_1
Kišḫanû-tree 482 f. 1219
Kiste for severed genitals in cult of Kybele 298 f. 300 f.
Kithára 249_2 449_9
Kittel, R. 793_4 833_1
Klebs, E. 143_3 321_4
Kleidoûchos 921_0 922_0
Klein, W. 261_1 1127_0
Knaack, G. 5_2 472_8 473_1 473_3 473_5 475_0 476_{12} 479_5 501_2 970_0 1033
Knife for gelding rams kept in sacred oak 684 f. 848 hidden meaning of, in Gnostic teaching 613 of Bios 866 868 sacrificial (?) 633_2 silver 354
Knight, Miss E. C. 418 420
Knots as protective amulets 192_6 538_5 538_6
Knuckle-bones 1030
Köhler, H. K. E. 783_7
Köhler, R. 346_0 994_1 1012_1
Köpp, F. 80_2
Körber, K. 88_0 89_5 93_3 94_3 98_2 99_1 99_4 1213
Körte, A. 280 280_1 281 322_5 836 $882_{0(23)}$ 965_0
Kohler, J. 1219
Kolbe, W. 18_2 18_3 897_5
Koldewey, R. 128_4 766_1 910_1 914_0 915_0 915_2 917_0
Kondakof, N. 639_1
Kônos 1030
Konstantinides, A. 138_1
Kophiniotis, I. 32_7
Kopó 158_1
Kopp, J. 1037
Kopp, U. F. 480_5
Kortleitner, F. X. 424_0 1108_2 1111_1
Koskinomanteía 702_4
Kóttabos 1162_3
Kouchakji, C. 1198
Kouchakji, F. 1198 1204_1
Kouchakji Frères 1198_0 1199_0
Kouchakji, G. 1198
Kouchakji, H. 1198
Kouchakji, S. 1198
Koumanoudes, S. A. 1058 1095_0 1115_2
Kramer, G. 616_1
Krappe, A. H. 1219
Kraus, F. X. 74_4
Krause, J. H. 94_2
Krauss, S. 1197_3
Krek, G. 988 f.
Kretschmer, P. 268_1 271 ff. 279 279_0 279_3 291_0 292_4 293_1 293_2 351 f. 385_0 440_4 570_0 570_2 583 ff. 585 f. 588_0 600 600_5 713 853_2 946_0 1072 1152 f. 1153_1 1154_5
Kreuzer 1103_8
Kriobólion See Criobolium
Kroll, W. 129_1 611_4 696_0 1020
Krueger, G. 641_2
Krumbacher, K. 135_1 138_1 695_0 696_0 1188_{10}
Kruse, F. C. H. 1104_2
Kteís 133_0 268_0 291_2 302_2 772_1
Kubitschek, J. W. 696_0
Kubitschek, W. 371_0 587 950_0
Kudurru 765_2 766_0 766_1
Küentzle 430_2
Kühner, R. 1068
Küster, E. 1060 1087 1111_1
Kuhn, A. 37_6 40_3 344_3 383_7 482_4 643
Kuhnert, E. 410_0 593_1 595_0 718_1 718_2 718_4 719_1 721_7
Kumanudis, S. A. See Koumanoudes
Kunz, G. F. 508_0 510_4 512_1 701_2
Kunze, F. 642_3
Kurz, M. 905_0 906_0 1227
Kutsch, F. 1089

Kyranides 611
Kýrbeis of Colchians 1095_0 of Solon 815_1 1094_0 1095_0

Labarum, derivation of 606 ff. 613 f. 846 in relation to double axe 601 ff.
Lábrys See Axe, double
Labus, D. G. 811_{10}
Labyrinth See Index I
Labyrinth-pattern on gem in Psychro Cave 926_0
Ladder as amulet 131 as emblem of various saints 134 ff. as tattoo-mark 121 122_0 as trade-mark 139 f. associated with pillar 127 f. Mithraic 129 of St Augustine 140 of bronze 133 of Buddha 129_3 of Jacob 127 f. 136 of Kosingas 130 of Otos and Ephialtes 130 of soul's salvation and road to heaven 136 ff. 1215 of Trygaios 909_0 of virtues 136 Orphic 121 124 f. 134 red 1215 Sabian 129 set against spiral column 475 f. white 1215 See also Soul-ladder
Ladelci, F. 1211
Lagobólon 157_0 165_0 297 299 f. 405_2 1140_3
Lagrange, F. M. J. 516_6 517_3 518_3 519_1 521_4 523_4 1111_0
Laistner, L. 268_2 988
Laistner, M. L. W. 934_0
Lajard, F. $492_{0(0)}$
La Marmora, Count A. de 540 f. 805_2
Lamb on chalice of Antioch 1199 1208 on Christian sarcophagus 1050 sacrificed to Ianus 377
Lambropoulos, A. 741_2
Lamer 859_5 859_3 863_1 864 866_0
Lámnissa 994_2
Lamp-lighting in cult of Hypsistos $881_{0(20)}$
Lamps, Christian 895_1 Cretan 930_0 935_0 938_0 Delian 921_0 of Ge Θέμις 268_0 of Hypsistarioi $885_{0(28)}$ of Hypsistos $881_{0(20)}$ of Theos Hypsistos $879_{0(16)}$ 889 perpetual 1148 Roman 712 903_2 926_0 Thessalian 903_2
Lance of mistletoe 305_0
Lanciani, R. 147 361_5 403_1 820_3
Lanckoroński, K. $879_{0(16)}$ 973_1 f.
Lands, sacred, at Aizanoi 968_0
Lang, A. 450_1 548_1
Langdon, S. 696_0
Lange, K. 1095_0
Langenhau, A. 392_8
Langlois, E. H. 868_4
Lanzone, R. 1035
Lapis lazuli, axe of 510_5 cylindrical bar of 769_1 in Sumerian text 482 f.
Lararium 751_1
Larch-trees on bank of Padus, etc. 402_0 on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5 Phaethon's sisters as 402_0 (?) 472_9 (?)
Larfeld, W. 236_{1-3}
Lark 463_1 (?)
Lárnax from Miletos in Crete 49 f. 543 from Palaikastro 524 f. 529
Larophorum 751_1
Lasaulx, E. von 727_3
Lassen, C. 150_2 559_6 569_4
Lât 150_2
Latham, R. G. 1033
Lattermann, H. 1071
Látyshev, V. V. $884_{0(0)}$
Laws as voice of Zeus 1095_0 of Solon 1093_1 1094_0 1095_0
Lawson, J. C. 4 56_2 505_5 506_0 506_1 641_2 642_0 829 990_5 1163 f.
Layard, A. H. 766_0 769_0 770_0
Lead, imprecatory tablets of $1113_{0(2)}$ statuette of 926_0
Leaf, W. 470_5 502_2 1067 1100_0
Leake, W. M. 110_7 350_3 589_0 901_2 981_0
Leaping as magical means of securing fertility, prosperity, and established Right 931_0 932_0
Leather, Mrs E. M. 703_2
Le Bas, P. 580_4 582 588 833_9 966_0
Lebègue, J. A. 919_0 920_0 921_0 922_0
Lebensbaum 53_2
Lechat, H. 211_2 597_2 711_2 711_4 758_0 $881_{0(21)}$
Leclercq, H. 604_4 1173_2
Lectisternium 443 1170 ff.
Leemans, C. 1131_2
Leeuwen, J. van 676_3
Lefroy, Sir H. 512_1
Leg, golden, in English tale 224_1
Legs of couches 760_2 of thrones 760_2
Legerlotz, G. 344
Legge, F. 307_2 544_3 610 611_1 1053
Legrand, A. 383_7
Legrand, É. 288_5 480_8 480_9 995_2 1003_2
Lehmann, H. 481_4
Lehmann-Haupt, C. F. 1089 1225 1226
Lehrs, K. 1125_1
Lejay, P. 328_4
Lekanomanteía 206 666_2
Leland, C. G. 420
Lenormant, C. 287_0 319 372_4 592_4 662 785_2
Lenormant, F. 131_5 157_0 238_3 245_5 510_4 658 804_0 983_0 1084 1104_2
Lenses (?) 938_0
Lentils 1172_4
Leonardos, B. I. 1071 f.
Leonhard, W. 560_4 560_5
Lersch, L. 69_5
Lessing, J. 158_2
Lethaby, W. R. 405_3
Letters, Anglo-Saxon 51 cruciform, effaced by Mohammedans 976_0 English 613 Etruscan 613_2 Faliscan 613_2 Greek 176 609_1 613 853_1 976_0 1127_0 1128_0 1216 Latin 613 on vestments 1207_0 Phoenician 613 Runic 1212 f. Sabaean 613 Sabellian 613_2 Sicyonian 613_2 Venetic 613_2
Lewy, H. 251_0 587_7 715_8 1110
Libation as drink for soul of dead man 1123 1125 from first, second, and third kratér at banquet 1123_7 1124_0 poured into holed vessel over grave 1056 1064

Libation (cont.)
poured on sacred pillar 193 poured on sacred stone 983_0 to Charites (?) 1124_0 to Dioskouroi 1063 to Hermes 1124_0 to Heroës 1123 to Zeus and Hera 1123_7 1124_0 to Zeus Ἰδαῖος in Phrygia 950_0 to Zeus Ὀλύμπιος and the Olympians 1123 to Zeus Σωτήρ 1124_0 to Zeus Σωτήρ or Τέλειος 1123 to (Zeus) Σωτήρ and Ὀλύμπιος 1124_0 to Zeus Σωτήρ, Herakles, and Dioskouroi 434_3 to Zeus τερπικέραυνος 1097_0
Libation-table 920_0 (?) 926_0 927_0 945_2 1216
Libri linitei 377_4
Lictors, Roman 1181_0 axes of 633 ff. 680 847 1221
Liebrecht, F. 343_0
Light, glaive of 722_1 pillar of 44 54 66_0 100 114 ff. 840 1211 f. 1217
Lightfoot, J. B. 307_1
Lightning as an axe 505 ff. 685 as the dýnamis of Zeus $808_{0(0)}$ as a flame from the aithḗr 11 as a flash carried by nude male winged figure 84 ff. as a flash from the eye of a deity 501 ff. 642_0 as a flash from the eyes of Iupiter 505_2 as a flash from the jealous eye of Zeus 502 ff. 844 as a golden mattock (?) 806_1 as a lance 81 as the spear of Zeus 704 f. 848 as a sword 721 f. 848 as a weapon 505 ff. 600 844 as a whip 824 ff. as the whip of Zeus 851 averted by iris 1224 averted by smacking sounds 827 ball of 1187 caused by green winged horse 1003 1017 chases snakes 820 828_{12} chthonian 641 805 805_2 death by, a kind of euthanasia 23 ff. 29 33 ff. death by, amounts to apotheosis 9 diurnal and nocturnal 11 granted to epic heroes 8 made of same substance as sun 774 men struck by, buried on the spot 23 men struck by, honoured 9 men struck by, imperishable 22 f. men struck by, not to be lifted 23_2 men struck by, not to have funeral rites 23_2 men struck by, treated as divine 23 (See also Lightning, death by) over Mts Parnes, Brilettos, and Hymettos portends storm 898_0 personified 28 828 851 produces mistletoe etc. 642 f. represented by zigzags (?) 639 ff. son of 829 spiral 779 Zeus conceived as 28
Lightning and Thunder, daughter of 828
Lightnings worshipped at Bathos 827
Lightning-fork 764 ff. bipartite 385_0 764 f. 849 f. duplicated 767 769 in Etruria 805 f. in Ionian art 769 f. 849 in Mesopotamian art 764 ff. 849 f. lotiform 769 ff. 849 on bull 767_1 on ox 766_0 on shrine 766_0 tripartite 764 ff. 849 f.
Lightning-lotos, Greek modifications of 776 ff. with central spike like dagger or arrow 784 f. with central spike spirally twisted 779 ff. with flame-lines 780 with petals stylised into rays 776
Lightning-lotos (cont.)
with petals transformed into flames 777 with sepals forming serpent-heads 781 with sepals transformed into fly 781 with sepals transformed into wings 777 with side spikes barbed 784 f. with tendrils 781
Líknon, golden, as cradle of Zeus 933_0 in rites of Diana Nemorensis (?) 149 154_0 405_2 with fruit and phalloid gherkin 154_0 with loaves 1166_1 with phallós 405_2
Lilies combined with double axes 524 f. 527 774 dance in field of 49_1 loved by Hera 515 offered to 'Minoan' goddess (Rhea?) 515 species of, called ambrosia 773_0 worn in hair 49_1 515 525
Lily-wreath 740
Limbs, votive 943_0 1077
Lime-tree See Linden-tree
Linde, S. 337_4 355
Linden-tree turns its leaves at solstice 470_0 venerated in France 403_0
Lindsay, W. M. 3_2 330_0
Linen 1202_0
Linforth, I. M. 227_2
Link, W. 836_1 958_0
Lion as amulet 387_4 as form of Dionysos or Zagreus 1030 holding down sphinxes 930_0 in bronze from Idaean Cave 938_0 in folk-tale from Kypros 996 lunar 892_4 of axe-bearing god at Keramos 575 f. of 'Minoan' goddess 552_1 1221 ridden by Astarte (?) 869_0 signifies Kastor 439 stabbed by four-winged Kronos 553 worshipped at Leonton polis 987_0
Lions as gargoyles 114_0 cp. 930_0 flanking 'tree-of-life' 930_0 in folk-tale from Sicily 1008 f. 1016 of Apollon 920_0 921_0 of Artemis 457 of Artemis Ἐφεσία 406_0 f. of axe-bearing god at Keramos 575 (?) 599_2 (?) of Hittite god at Boghaz-Keui 599_2 (?) of Kybele 299 552_1 (?) 970_0 1221 (?) of 'Minoan' god 552_1 (?) of Rhea 552_1 (?) 920_0 921_0 1221 (?) of Zeus Ὄρειος 869_0 on axe-heads 632_6 on foreposts of throne 810 votive, at Branchidai 920_0 votive, at Patara 921_0 votive, in Delos 920_0 921_0 votive, in Phoinike 868_8 votive, in Thera 920_0 921_0
Lionesses, two, attend Artemis at Delos 1227
Lion-god of Hittites 550 ff.
Lion-goddesses, three, as support of tripod 193
Lion-headed monster (Tiamat?) 769_0
Lion-heads as gargoyles 930_0 cp. 114_0 on gold ring from Mykenai 515
Lion's head as rhytón 190_0 as shield-boss 938_0 on axles of chariot-wheels 831_1 on body of Phanes 1051 on coins of Gaza 674 f. on coins of Pherai 660 on lictor's axe 1221 on sacrificial axe 631 f. on snake 1022 over Zeus Σαβάζιος (?) 664_1

Lion-skin beneath feet of Hera at Argos 515 on throne of Zeus Αἰτναῖος 909_0 on tree of Zeus Fελχάνος at Phaistos 947_0 (?) worn by Argos, watcher of Io 380 (?) worn by Herakles 1116 worn by two-headed Herakles (?) of Baris 446
Lion-skins, two, on coin of Gaza 674
Lion-tomb at Knidos $1145_{1(c)}$
Lippert, P. D. 319
Lippold, G. 478_4 479_1 479_5 1046
Lissauer, A. 617
Littmann, E. 1227
Liver, bronze, from Piacenza 338_3 339_0
Lizard in folk-tale from Zakynthos 994 f. in relation to Asklepios 1087
Lloyd, Miss M. E. H. 641_2 1224
Lloyd, W. Watkiss 435 1042 1136_0
Loadstone, discovery of 949_5
Loaf with wild beasts moulded upon it 1140
Loaves, clay 1187_4 in liknon 1166_1 on chalice of Antioch 1199_2(?) 1199_4(?)
Lobeck, C. A. 129_1 294_0 350_4 971_2 f. 1019 1030 1140_5 1166_1 1168_3
Lobster held sacred in Seriphos 665 on coins of Astakos 665_3
Lobster's claws as head-dress of Triton (?) 665_3
Locusts on Mt Kasion in Syria 981_1
Löbbecke, A. 446_2 681 975_0
Loeschcke, G. 789 1143_1
Loewe, E. 1082
Löwy, E. 1105_4 1105_6
Lohner 1221
Lolling, A. 21_4
Lolling, H. G. 895_1 896_0
Longevity, Hyperborean 465 500
Longfellow, H. W. 140
Longpérier, A. de 545_0 548_0 685
Lorentz, R. 31_3
Lorini, A. 377_5
Loth, J. 237_0
Lotos as symbol of reproduction, resurrection, and rebirth 772_1 associated with sun in Egypt 772 773_0 associated with sun in India 774 (?) 774_1 (?) blue 772_1 774_1 rose 772_1 774_1 surmounting Mt Argaios (?) 978_0 symbolism of 771 ff. 850 white 772_1 See also Lightning-lotos
Lotos-flower beneath seated Vishnu 367 surmounting the head of divinity or divinised mortal 772_1 773_0 774_0
Lotos-flowers offered to Egyptian deities 774_0 offered to 'Minoan' goddess (Rhea?) 515 rise from the mummy Osiris 773_0
Lotos-petals on chalice of Antioch 1199
Lotos-seeds as rosary of Vishnu-devotee 774_1
Lotos-tree as lucky tree 403_0 in myth 486_2
Lotos-wreath of Antinoos 773_0 of Sarasvatī 774_1
Lots 206_1(?)
Love as representation of Death 309 1045 1166 between man and God denied by Aristotle 1167 in relation to God 1167 1167_2 1168 in relation to Zeus 1167 1176 f. 1197 of God as final stage of initiation 1168
Love-feasts of early Christians 1173_2 of Zeus Φίλιος 1173 1197
Lowrie, W. 604_4 1168_4
Lübker, F. 1045 1163_4
Lüdtke, W. 307_1
Lukas, F. 1020 1033
Luschan, F. von 767_0 769_0 972_1
Lustration at Kaulonia 1042 (?) 'Minoan' 628 (?)
Luynes, Honoré d'Albert duc de 1042 1219
Luzel, F. M. 1010_1 1012_1
Lydekker, R. 413_3 413_4 465_7 523_6 524_5 692 692_7
Lyell, A. H. 604_6 605_1
Lynch, R. I. 395
Lynx 572_2(?)
Lyre in cult of Zeus Βρυντών 838 f. 852 of Amphion 1013 of Apollon 160_0 256 263 453_3 459 838_8(?) 1219 of Christ (as Orpheus) 1208 of Dionysos 244 838 of Satyr 262 f. tortoise-shell 245_5 263 with seven strings 453_3 520
Lysons, S. 604_6

Maass, E. 70_0 93_3 94_2 94_3 96_2 100_3 251_2 252_1 346_0 660_1 1112_6 1164_0 1164_2 1214
Macalister, R. A. S. 844_8
Macchioro, V. 199_2
Macdonald, G. 320_0 430_0 430_1 $491_{0(c)}$ $491_{0(6)}$ 592_6 610_0 635_0 656_0 794_5 909_0 951_0 1126_0 1192_0 1209_5 1219
Macdonell, A. A. 1035
MacGregor, J. M. 169_1
Mackail, J. W. 1045
Mackenzie, D. 535_4 601_3 639_2 923_0 940_0
Mackenzie, D. A. 519_0 538_3 1219
Maclean, A. J. 1173_2
Macurdy, Miss G. H. 459_3 495
Madden, F. W. 603 610_0 1172_0
Maddox, H. E. 660_1
Madsen, A. A. 426_4
Maeander-pattern 960_0 965_0
Maehly, J. 1087
Maggiore, N. 1227
Magic as origin of jewelry 637 in cult of Zeus Δικταῖος 932_0 in relation to will-power 1042 f. omitted by Homer 989 traces of, in will of Zeus 261_0
Magical castle 672 dance 932_0 herbs 211_2 949_5 ring 989 f. 1001 f. rites for revival of dead 522 rites for revival of vegetation 521 rod 1043 spell learnt from fish 672 use of divine titles 1114_0
Magician controls lightning, thunder, and rain 558_0 identifies himself with Kronos (?) 558_0 Zeus as 1147
Magnus, L. A. 1012_1
Magpies 518_3(?)
Mahaffy, J. P. 805_6

Maier, A. 485_5
Maionica, H. 1221
Mair, A. W. 1218
Maize 154_0
Mallet, iron, in myth of Prokroustes 627 used to kill off aged and infirm 703_2
Mallets of Iupiter (Thor) 620 of Sucaelus 620
Mallows 1154
Malten, L. 460_3 788_1 791
Manatt, J. I. 49_1 539_2
Mannhardt, W. 53_2 210_3 224_1 268_2 303_2 496_0 498_2 868_3 1096_3
Mantle, cosmic 351_1
Manumission of slaves $883_{0(27)}$ $884_{0(0)}$
Maple-trees 949_5
Mappa 1195_1 1195_3
Maraghiannis, G. 535_8 536_3 654_5
Marcellus, Count de 450_0
Marchant, E. C. 1138_3
Mariani, L. 211_2
Marindin, G. E. 238_3 1170_5
Marjoram 268_0
Marriage first celebrated by Okeanos and Tethys 1020 sacred (See Hierὸs gámos) with god or goddess of the Underworld 1164 ff.
Marriage-banquet of the dead 1164 1168
Marriage-test of Penelope 690 ff. 848
Marshall, F. H. 638_7 763_1 $881_{0(21)}$ $882_{0(0)}$
Marshall, J. H. 524
Martha, J. 1219
Martin, A. 728_0
Martin, T. H. 434 640_3 641_3 722_3 779 1104_0
Mask, comic 1124_0 comic, as carapace of crab 1221 Janiform 326 374 f. (?) 378 of Bes 674 of Demeter Κιδαρία 1136_4 tragic 375
Masks of Ammon $808_{0(17)}$ on handles of skýphos 1204 tragic and comic, combined 388 f. tragic and satyric, combined with mask of Pan 389_1 two bearded, hung back to back on pillar 381
Masner, K. 543_1
Maspero, Sir G. 99_1 127_0 141_2 158_1 426_4 510_4 700_0 1035 1038
Maṣṣebhoth 127_7
Massmann, H. F. 868_4
Mastaba $1145_{1(a)}$
Mastós, a breast-shaped cup used in Kypros, Delos, Boiotia, Attike, etc. 346_0
Matter, J. 626_1
Mattingly, H. 1214
Mattock of Zeus 806_1
Matz, F. 478_4 838_8
Mau, A. 145_1 147_7 158_2 161_3 547_0 798
Maurenbrecher, B. $329_{0(6)}$ 337_4
Maurer, C. 1100_1
Maurice, J. 604
Maybaum 873_2 $875_{1(1)}$ 898_5 899_1 1073 1075
May-day 285_0 $948_{0(4)}$ (?)
Mayer, M. 350 374_3 450_0 459_3 476_{12} 495_5 515_4 542_1 543_1 543_2 549_5 549_7 550_2 553_2
Mayer, M. (cont.) 554_2 555_0 599 600 697_5 712_5 713 831_0 846 1033 1087 1110
May-king 303_2
Mayor, J. B. 1135_4
Mayor, J. E. B. 158_2 450_0 986_0
May-pole compared with Diana-pillar 149 f.
May-queen 303_2
May-tree 303_2
Maze 601
Mazzocchi, A. S. 1041
McClean, J. R. 110_6 667_3
McDaniel, W. B. 1215
McDowall, Miss K. A. 199_2
McLean, N. 696_0 1037 1038 1109_0
Meade, C. F. 905_0
Meadows of Hera 1021 of Zeus 933_0
Meal, ritual use of 18_6 19_0 20_0 1127_0
Meat, abstinence from 922_0
Megalithic art, axes in 685 ff. 848
Meineke, A. 816_1 855_1 856_4 858_1 858_2 1226
Meinhardt, P. 727_3
Meister, R. 16_3 278_2 341 350 350_4 350_6 723_0 1082 1096_1
Meisterhans, K. 1167_7
Melber, J. 6_8
Mélida y Alinari, J. R. 1211
Melikraton 671 See also Nephália
Mély, F. de 611 611_5 611_6 612_0 612_1
Ménant, J. 546_0
Mendel, G. 836_{10}
Menestrier, C. F. 107_0
Menetreius, C. 406_0 410_0
Mengarelli, R. 509_2
Meringer, R. 110_5
Merkel, R. 40
Merry, W. W. 988_1
Messerschmidt, L. 635_3
Mestorf, Fräulein J. 642_4
Metae 423_1
Meurer, M. 73_1 521_5 529_3 594
Meursius (J. de Meurs) 940_0
Meyer, E. 311_9 311_{10} 313_1 456 f. 550_5 552_0 560_4 620_5 620_6 691 789 1108_2
Meyer, E. H. 37_6 230_1 615_2 643_7 721_6 722_1 789 844_6
Meyer, G. 404_2 484_5 779_9
Meyer, L. 22_4 1098_6
Meyer, R. M. 52_7 88_3 844_6
Micali, G. 378_1
Mice called σμίνθοι 250_2
Michaelis, A. 103_6 107_3 625_5 792_1 793_{12} 802_8 802_9 802_{10} 1136_0
Michaelis, W. 1135_4
Michon, É. 647_4 658_3
Middleton, J. H. 389_1 1074
Migeon, G. 606_3
Milani, L. A. 49_1 141_4 142_1 142_2 538_7 621 f. 622_3 623_4 653 1225
Milchhöfer, A. 515_4 539_2 615_2 897_5 1170_1
Milk as diet of newborn soul 41 f. 134 as drink-offering to dead 1056 in Orphic rites 121 217 in rites of Magoi 977_0 in rites of Zeus Σπράτιος 974_1 977_0 of asses 463_1 of sheep, taboo on 987_0

Miller, Eliza B. 137_0
Miller, J. 222_3
Millet 1172_4
Milliet, P. 731_2
Millingen, J. 131 162_2 273_4 717_1 717_2 1154_1 1154_5
Mime-performer $882_{0(0)}$
Minervini, G. 131_1 273_3 379_4
Minns, E. H. 293_0 $493_{0(?)}$ 495_5 510_{1-3} 540_4 632_8 $884_{0(0)}$ 925_0 1203 1204_1
Mint 1166_0 aphrodisiac 1165_1 taboo on 987_0 See also Hedýosmos, Water-mint
Mirabella, V. 917_0
Mirror, as toy of Dionysos 251_2 face of Klytaimestra seen in 206_2 made by Hephaistos 1030 of Kairos (?) 863_1 of Venus 70_1 609_1 showing whole world 1005 1016
Mirrors, Etruscan 160 f. 258_1 431 f. 432_2 560_3 708 ff. 713 848 Roman 1205_6
Mistletoe, Baldr stabbed with lance of 305_0 called Donnerbesen 642 on apple-trees 420_1 on oak-tree 643
Mitre of high priest symbolises sky 386_5
Models offered to gods and heroes 539_2
Modius dedicated by M. Modius Maximus 299 of Agathe Tyche 1128_0 of Agathos Daimon 1128_0 of Diana Nemorensis 149 of god from Idaean Cave 938_0 of Isis (Isityche) 1129_0 of Pluto 802 of Sarapis 1129_0 with oak-leaves and acorns 802 See also Kálathos
Mogk, E. 110_5 533_2 844_6
Mohl, J. 611_6
Mohnike, G. C. F. 854_9
Molinet, C. du 626_1
Mommsen, A. 233 240_2 486_3 1089 1092_3 1121_0 1139
Mommsen, Th. 328_3 364 440_4 440_5 619_4 803_2 1172_0 1195_0
Monier-Williams, Sir M. 660_1
Monogram, Christian, at Chedworth 604 f. Christian, at Frampton 604 Christian, in relation to trophy-cross and double axe 613 f. 846 Christian, on coins of Constantine the Great 604 Christian, on shields 602 Christian, on top of pillar 606 Christian, within wreath as standard of Constantine the Great 603
Monómmatoi (Monómatoi, Monomátai) 993_2
Monotheism, general trend towards 889
Monseur, E. 504_4
Monster, headless 305_0 three-bodied 805_6 1225 wolf-headed 305_0
Montelius, O. 529_1 618_1 636 637_1 647_4 687_2 788_1 1221
Montfaucon, B. de 319 626_7
Montgomery, J. A. $888_{0(0)}$
Month, sidereal or lunar, division of 236_5 synodical, division of 236_5 Months: Ἀγριάνιος 924_0 $948_{0(3)}$ (?) Ἀνθεστηριών 1139 Ἀνθεστηριών 1 equated with kalendae Martiae 1139_7 Ἀπελλαῖος 982_0 Βοηδρομιών 1121_0 Βακίνθιος $948_{0(3)}$ Γα-
Months (cont.)
μηλιών 1142 Διονύσιος 930_0 Ἑκατομβαιών 1091 f. 1139_5 Ἐλάφιος 554_2 Ἐλαφριος 599_7 Ἐλυχάνιος $948_{0(3)}$ Ἑλυχάνιος (?) $947_{0(2)}$ Κρόνιος 1091 Λώιος 901_0 Μαιμακτηριών 1121_0 Μαιμακτήριος $489_{0(0)}$ Μεταγειτνιών 1121_0 Σαν-θικός 982_0 Ὁμολῷος 901_0 Ὁμολώιος, Ὁμολῶος, Ὁμολούιος 900_1 Τύβι (leg. Τυβὶ νεὶ Τῦβι) 1127_0 Ὑπερβερεταῖος 495_6 496_0 Ὑπερβέρετος 496_0 Φεβρουάριος 1142_2
Moon as egg 1015_7 (?) 1035 as eye of Zeus 117 1028 golden, on breast of princess 1012_1
Mooney, G. W. 824_4
Moor, E. 150_8
Mordtmann, A. D. 195_1
Mordtmann, J. H. 270_3
Morell, A. 357_1 358_0
Morey, C. R. 135_1 1134_4
Morey, P. 79_1
Morgan, M. J. de 766_1
Morgan, T. 604
Morpurgo, Miss L. 392_8 392_9 393_1 393_2 398 ff. 398_0 420_1
Mortillet, A. de 686_3 687_1
Mosaic of sacred cistern on Mt Kynthos 919_0 920_0 922_0
Mosso, A. 520_1 544_3 643 646
Moth as soul 645_4 on bronze double axe from Phaistos 643 ff. 847 on golden disks and plaques from Mykenai 645
Moulds, stone, from Palaikastro 623 ff.
Moulton, J. H. 33_4 50_1 313_1 1036
Mountain climbed by children in 'Expulsion' tales 1008 f. 1011 1016 cosmic, two-peaked $888_{0(0)}$ cults of Zeus on 354 868 ff. glass 1012_1 opening at midday 1005
Mountain-god, recumbent 962_2
Mountain-top worshipped by Samaritans $888_{0(0)}$
Mourning-women 1065
Mouth, bad spirits may enter through 1162_3
Movers, F. C. 675_4 715_4 1038 1110_0
Mowat, R. 373_5
Much, R. 52_7
Müllenhoff, K. 52_7 53_3 844_6
Müller, C. 22_3 132_0 270_4 696_0 945_2 1023
Müller, C. O. See Müller, K. O.
Müller, F. Max 383_7 1035
Müller, G. A. 80_2 109_1
Müller, H. D. 549_6 1021 f.
Müller, K. O. 16_1 102_0 130 199_2 228_4 241_3 327 384_0 457 $491_{0(6)}$ 744_3 1042 1045 1048 1151_8 1151_{10} 1191_5 1197_3
Müntz, E. 106_2
Mulberry-trees 946_0
Mule, hind foot of 757_6 must not enter precinct of Elektryone 499_5
Mules, victims torn asunder by 1008 1019
Multiple blades of double axe 624 654 breasts 410_0 ears 322 eyes 446_1 892_5 893_0 types of deities 322_4 341_0 367 893_0
Muñoz, A. 863_1 865_2 866_0 867_6 867_2 867_3

Munro, A. 1221
Murex 1047
Murr, J. 772_1 775_0
Murray, A. S. 405_3 746_2 753_1 $881_{0(21)}$ $882_{0(0)}$
Murray, G. 118_2 119_1 133_2 458 931_0 1019 1096_2
Murray, J. 901_2
Murray, Miss M. A. 326 1218
Musician $882_{0(0)}$
Myers, F. W. H. 482
Myres, J. L. 598_4 599_3 718_1 925_1 944_0
Myrtle, quickening qualities of 1165_1 sacred to Aphrodite 710_3 1165_1
Myrtle-berries at marriage-banquet 1164
Myrtle-branch called verbena 1170_3
Myrtle-leaves, Pythagoreans buried on 472
Myrtle-trees 710_2 (?) 946_0
Myrtle-wreath, possible significance of 1165_1
Mysteries at Agra 1139 at Antiocheia on the Orontes 1186 at Eleusis 132_2 295_2 at Leibethra 1024 at Memphis 701_0 at Pelousion 987_0 at Pergamon 288_0 953_3 f. at Pheneos 1136_4 in Crete 345 838 934_0 987_0 in Samothrace 314_2 of Demeter Κίδαρα 1136_4 of Demeter and Kore 132_2 295_2 345_6 of Dionysos 124_4 1030 of (Dionysos) Βρόμιος $882_{0(0)}$ of Dionysos and Kore 120_1 of Eros 1167 f. of Glykon 1084 of Io (?) 961_0 of the Kabeiroi 314_2 953_3 f. of Morges 934_0 of the Mother of the gods 310_2 of Sabazios 133_0 of the Vine 613 of Zeus in Crete 345 987_0 of Zeus Ἴδαῖος in Crete 838 934_0 of Zeus Κάσιος in Egypt 987_0 of Zeus Σαβάζιος 288_0 of Zeus Φίλιος 1186 personal names taboo in 1114_0 use of meal in 19_0 See also Initiates, Initiation
Mystic formulae: βοῦς ἐπὶ γλώσσῃ μέγας βέβηκεν 345 ἐκ τυμπάνου βέβρωκα, ἐκ κυμβάλου πέπωκα, γέγονα μύστης Ἄττεως $345_{6(1)}$ ἐκ τυμπάνου ἔφαγον, ἐκ κυμβάλου ἔπιον, ἐκερνοφόρησα, ὑπὸ τὸν παστὸν ὑπέδυν $345_{6(2)}$

Naber, S. A. 1124_0
Nail of Talos 645_0 sacred 57_1 423_3 533_2
Naïskoi 1064
Names, assonance of, characteristic of divine twins 310 312 avoidance of 1_7 1114_0 beginning with Ἀμφι- 1072 descriptive, of animals in Greece 1134_9 false, given by hero 989 999 of bird-tribes in Greece and Italy 1134_9 of children in 'Expulsion' tales are stellar 1014 of early kings denoting Snake 1087 of god borne by worshipper 839 of sacred animals given to towns in Egypt 987_0 taboo, concealed under allusive or euphemistic titles 1114_0 theophoric 953_3 1158 well-omened, borne by priests 921_0 See also Appellative, Nursery-names, Place-names
Nativity, site of, occupied by grove of Tammuz (Adonis) 934_1
Natorp, P. 33_3 352_2
Nauck, A. 253_3 806_1 1013_2
Navel of Earth 187_5 of Vishnu 774_1 of Zeus 190 ff. 191_{10} 841
Neale, J. M. 140 1197_3
Nebrís 270_3
Necklace 593
Nectar as drink of infant Zeus 928_0 as intoxicant of Kronos 1027
Neeb, E. 95_3 98_2
Need-fire 816 f.
Neergaard, C. 637_1
Nehring, A. 1219
Neo-Attic reliefs 165_0 1225
Neokóros 629 967_0 968_0 1078 1225
Nephália 1142_3
Neter 544_3
Nettles 395
Neuhaeuser, J. 1125_1
Neumann, K. J. 441_2
Neustadt, E. 928_0
Newberry, P. E. 545_0 555_0 767_2
Newell, E. T. 761_4 762_2
Newman, W. L. 854_9 855_1
Newton, Sir C. T. 589 f. 598_1 1157_5
New Year's Day 931_0
Nicole, G. 124_1 315_3 737
Nicole, J. 757_8
Niemann, G. 112_1 455_1 $879_{0(16)}$ 971_2
Niese, B. 436_6 816_0
Nightingale 693 460
Nikitsky, A. 816_5
Nilsson, M. P. 17 18_{2-5} 118_3 158_1 164_6 237_0 242_4 250_2 410_1 413_3 417_7 453_3 455 f. 469_5 789_7 807_2 904_4 960_0 1033 1054 1060 1061 1064 1075 1125_1 1148_2 1170_3 1170_5
Nino, A. de 1001_1
Nipples inlaid with red copper 747_1 large 319_1
Nissen, T. 307_1
Noack, F. 900_0
Nock, A. D. 124_4 806_1 $881_{0(20)}$ 1211
Nome, divisions of the Pythian 239_0
Nopcsa, Baron 822
Notia 507_2
Noumenia 1196_3
Nudity necessary in capture of the bird Dikjeretto 1005
Nuraghi-civilisation 142_0
Nursery-names applied to gods and goddesses 292 f. 294_0 295_1 (?)
Nurses of Dionysos 274 f. 276 347_0 1022 1030 of Semele 1031 of Zagreus 1030 of Zeus 227 f.
Nuts 775_0
Nyrop, C. 988 989_5 1001_3

Oak-branch 1077 (?) 1177 (?)
Oak-brides of Zeus burnt on Mt Kithairon 977_0
Oak-deities of Akarnania 412 of Mt Algidus 404 of Allobroges 570_0 of Arkadia 412 of Ephesos 405 of Greece 405 ff. of

Oak-deities (cont.)
Italy 400 ff. of Keltoi 570_0 of Makedonia (?) 412 of Miletos 409 f. of Nemi 417 ff. 842 f. of Phrygia (?) 570_0 of Rome 400 ff. of Thebes in Boiotia 412 of Thrace 411 f. of Mt Tifata 404 of Troizen 413 ff.
Oak-leaves 110_3 394 f. 398 ff. 417_5 420 763_1 802 843 965_0 compared with vervain 395_2 396_0
Oak-tree as effigy of Celtic Zeus 111_0 as headquarters of Aequian commander 404_4 as trophy-stand 109 at Dodona 677 693_3 at Eresburg (?) 1212 cp. 53 at Gortyna 946_0 (?) at Nemi 417 ff. at Phylake in Phthiotis 685 848 at Romove 92 f. called barnstokk ('childtree') and apaldr ('apple-tree') 682 called λεύκη 467_4 clothes hung on 414_2 cut down, decked as bride of Zeus, and called Δαιδάλη 898_0 decked with fillets and tablets 683 decked with weapons and spoils of chase 412_6 displaced by beech 402 f. displaced by olive (?) 415 ff. evergreen 92 f. 403_0 404 411 411_6 417_5 591 923_0 gelding knife kept in 685 not personified by priest of Nemi 400 of Apollon 486_5 of Artemis 405 ff. of Aryan thunder-god 417_5 of Asklepios 1087 of Bendis 411 f. of Diana 400 ff. of Iupiter Caelius 400_{11} of Phylakos 685 of Tyndaridai 437 439 of Volsung 682 of Zeus Βαγαῖος 570_0 of Zeus Fελχάνος (?) 946_0 of Zeus Κορυφαῖος 1218 (?) of Zeus Νάιος 413_2 snake reared in 1087 snake twined round 1218 (?) with sacred pillar 152_0 154_0 with sow 324 (?)
Oak-trees, Heliades transformed into 472_{10} in Crete 946_0 Kronos mutilated beneath 448_1 1027 of Querquetulanae Virae 402_0 of Zeus Ἀσκραῖος $872_{0(5)}$ of Zeus Στράτιος 976_0 on the Esquiline 401 on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5 on sarcophagus showing death of Hippolytos 417_3 on simpulum showing amours of Zeus 228_7 stag-beetle lives in 782_3 venerated in Oise 403_0 within Porta Querquetularia 402_0 See also Holm-oak
Oak windows, king of 722_1
Oak-wreath, jewelled 809_3 of Artemis (?) 412 of Bendis 411 f. of Sex. Pompeius 371_1 of Silvii 417_5 of Zeus 348 388 1187_4 of Zeus Νάιος 763_1 on coins of Rhodes 470_0 (?) on coins of Skepsis 951_0 on coins of Thessalonike 411_6 precedes bay-wreath as prize at Pythian games 486
Oath by Apollon, Demeter, Zeus 730_0 by Apollon Πατρῷος, Demeter, Zeus Βασιλεύς 1135 by Apollon, Poseidon, Zeus 233_7 730_0 by Mt Argaios 978_0 by Asklepios 1086 by Dionysos under open sky 724_0 by Dius Fidius under open sky 724_0 by Herakles under open sky 724_0 by Hestia, Zeus,...Poseidon 916_0
Oath (cont.)
by sceptre 723_0 by Zeus colloquially clipped (νὴ Δί᾽, νηδί) $727_{3(3)}$ by Zeus in affirmations of private life 727_3 728_0 849 by Zeus in affirmations of public life 728_0 ff. 849 by Zeus sometimes elliptical (νὴ τὸν —, μὰ τὸν —) 728_0 by Zeus taken over boar 728_0 by (Zeus) Ἱκέσιος, Καθάρσιος, Ἐξακεστῆρ 1093^{2}_{1} cp. 1095_0 by Zeus Ὅρκιος taken over cut pieces of boar 726 f. by Zeus Σωτήρ 955_0 by Zeus, Apollon, Artemis 730_0 $871_{3(3)}$ by Zeus, Apollon, Demeter 729_0 730_0 by Zeus, Apollon, Themis 730_0 by Zeus, Athena, Aphrodite 730_0 (i. 16) by Zeus, Athena, Apollon 730_0 cp. 458$_4$ by Zeus, Demeter, Helios 730_0 by Zeus, Ge, Helios 729_0 cp. $884_{0(0)}$ by Zeus, Poseidon, Demeter 730_0 of Demaratos 728_0 of Demosthenes by Ἀσκλήπιος (not Ἀσκληπιός) 1086 of δίκασται at Ardettos 730_0 of kings and people of Epeiros before Zeus Ἄρειος 706 of Gortyna 723_0 of heliastai at Athens 730_0 of Hierapytna 723_0 929_0 of Itanos 929_0 of Lyttos 723_0 934_0 of Priansos 723_0 of Solon 1093_1 1095_0 of Winged Horse of the Plain 1006 1016 1018 taken over boar 728_0 taken over cut pieces of boar 726 f. taken καθ᾽ ἱερῶν νεοκαύτων 929_0
Oaths in relation to Zeus 727_3 ff.
Oberhummer, E. 270_0 495_2 609_5 610_4 901_1 906_1
Oberlin, J. J. 394_2
Occhiavo 1001 f.
Octopus 205_1
Odelberg, P. $878_{0(3)}$
Oder, E. 693_1 697_2 697_3 697_5 751_2 1122_2 1131_2
Ogre, one-eyed 988 ff. three-eyed 995 f.
Ohnefalsch-Richter, M. 157_1 246_1 539_2 598_3
Oil 974_1 977_0 1056 1058
Oktaeteris 241 ff. Apolline 241 ff. Delphic 239 ff. Dionysiac 242 posterior to trieteris 242 f.
Olck, F. 464_6 464_9 775_0 1103_4
Oldenberg, H. 774_1 1035 1095_0
Oldfather 1041
Oleander 891_0
Olive-branch 98 211_2 527 1042 (?) 1077 (?) 1170_8 1177 (?)
Olive-leaves, Pythagoreans buried on 472
Olive-tree called Writhen Olive at Troizen 415 decked with votive tablets 903_0 Dionysos or Zagreus compared with 1030 displaces oak (?) 415 ff. on gold ring from Mykenai 515_1 (?) on sarcophagus from Hagia Triada 517 (?) resembles evergreen oak (?) 415_2 turns its leaves at solstice 470_0 See also Wild-olive Olive-trees at Epidauros Limera 1082 on Greek sarcophagus 417_3

Olive-wreath 165_0 261 323_1 902_2 1029 1155
See also Wild-olive Olrik, A. 57_1
Olshausen, O. 493_2
Ombria 507_2
Omophagy 934_0 bovine 539 human 549 (?) 667 f. 1022 See also Cannibalism
Omphaloid stone with snake coiled round it 94_3 186 cp. $882_{0(0)}$
Omphalós as centre of disk-shaped earth 167 189 as mound of earth 187 as mound under which the navel-string of Zeus lay buried 191 841 as seat of Apollon 207_0 1189_3 1192_5 as tomb of Dionysos 219_4 associated with pillar 166 ff. 187 841 in Aigina (?) 186 at Argos 173 at Athens (?) 184 at Branchidai (?) 180 at Byzantion 167 ff. 841 at Delphoi 169 ff. 841 1216 at Megara (?) 186 of Ge 231 239 1216 on coins of Antiocheia on the Orontes 1192_5 on coins of Seleukeia Pieria 983_0 replica of Delphic 170_3 twined with snake $882_{0(0)}$ cp. 94_3 186
Onians, R. B. 1219
Onions cause death of Diktys 986_0 grow with waning, wither with waxing moon 986_0 f. in relation to Iupiter 260_0 taboo on 986_0 worshipped at Pelousion 987_0
Opus interrasile 1203 ff.
Oracle delivered by dead king 1071 delivered by snake or snakes 1075 of Apollon 238_0 of Apollon at Delphoi 163_4 164_8 322_7 959_0 $1113_{0(2)}$ of Apollon at Gryneia $489_{0(4)}$ of Apollon Κλάριος at Klaros $489_{0(4)}$ 954_0 cp. $1113_{0(2)}$ of Apollon Κορσαῖος in Thessaly $871_{3(1)}$ of Dionysos in Thrace 269 of Glykon at Abonou Teichos 1083 f. of Mars at Tiora Matiene 1133_1 1230 of Nyx at Megara 257_4 of Pasiphaa at Thalamai 31 of Zeus at Dodona 163_4 214 ff. of Zeus at Philadelpheia in Lydia 1229 (?) of Zeus Κλάριος at Klaros 873_2 of Zeus Τρεφώνιος or Τροφώνιος at Lebadeia 1061 1073 ff. of Zeus Φίλιος at Antiocheia on the Orontes 1186
Orientation of Ianus' statue 358_5 of Iupiter's statue 46
Ornithogonía 463_1 928_0
Orsi, P. 509_4 770_2 917_0 925_1 935_0 937_0
Orth, F. 1079
Osborne, W. 635
Ossorio, F. A. 1211
Oswald, F. 473_1
Ott, L. 727_3
Otto, W. F. 363_6 365_1 1060
Ouvré, H. 570_2
Overbeck, J. 16_1 102_9 125_2 160_3 207_0 327 413_2 460_2 592_4 598_1 625_5 705_9 708_5 713 713_1 717_2 740 746_1 752 760 918_0 1044 1078 1143_1 1178 1189_0 1191_5
Owl called ásκάλαφος 1087 called ôtos 130_4 horned 130_4 1036 f. of Minerva 95_1 on coins of Gaza 674_1 on coins of Pergamon 955_0 on coins of Tyre 1036 f. on thunderbolt 955_0 torments Otos and Ephialtes 130_4
Owl (cont.)
Ox as form of Zeus (' Great Ox ') in Crete 342_0 345 354 bears lightning-fork 766_0 bears shrine with lightning-fork 766_0 in formula of Cretan mystics ('a Great Ox hath come upon my tongue') 345 ridden by Themis 348_5 sacrificed to flies 782 sacrificed to Zeus 728_0 cp. 950_0 tomb of, in Crete 342_0 345 354 worshipped at Memphis 987_0 See also Bull, Calf, Cow
Oxen of bronze on Mt Atabyrion in Rhodes portend disaster by bellowing 924_0 on statuette of Artemis 'Εφεσία 407_0 sacrificed to Apollon 463_1 thigh-pieces of, burnt for Zeus 950_0 votive 930_0 943_0 944_0
Oxé, A. 93_3 94_3 98_1 98_3 99_4
Ox-head, filleted, on altar-top 154_0
Ox-hides 923_0 924_0 989
Ox-horn, golden, dedicated to Zeus Κάσιος 982_0

Pace, B. 915_0 1227
Pagenstecher, R. 499_9
Pail 1060
Pais, E. 365_4
Palace as name of temple 311 of brick at Tralleis 95
Palládion 8
Palm-branch 99 163 246_1 $490_{0(5)}$ $491_{0(0)}$ 1047 1077 (?) 1193 1202_6
Palm-branches 101_1 573 cp. 964_2
Palm-tree at Delos 461_0 (?) at Delphoi 461_0 in bronze at Delphoi 170_2 262_5 of Zeus Σαάξιος (= Σαβάζιος) 284_0 (?) sacred, in Italy 159_0
Palm-trees on Christian sarcophagus 1050 on sarcophagus of Hagia Triada 520_5 (?) 521_4 (?) on wing of Ahriman 1054
Panbabylonismus 938_0
Panic grass 1172_4
Pankarpia 1058
Panofka, T. 165_0 435 451_1 706_5 895_1 947_0 1042 1080 1089
Pan-pipes of Apollon 246 249_2 249_3 of Attis 295 296_4 299 cp. 664_1 of Charis held by Apollon 249_2 249_3 of Pan 157_0
Panspermía 1140_3
Pantheistic Zeus 1027 ff.
Panther of Dionysos 261 270_3 599_2 (?) of god with double axe at Keramos 575 (?) 599_2 (?) of Zeus Λαβράϋνδος 599_2 (?) of Zeus Σαώτης 599_2 (?) with filleted double axe 572 (?) with head of double axe 599_2 (?)
Panthers draw car of Dionysos 245_0 on either side of kratêr 699_4
Pantheress 572_2 838
Panther-skin 380 854 1019_2
Pape, W. 350_4 414_0 451_1 873_2
Pappadakis, N. 903_2 904_0

Paradise, various forms of Greek 465
Parasites invented by Zeus Φίλιος 1169
Páredros of mother-goddess, at once her husband and her child 294 ff. 842
Pareti, L. 758_0
Paribeni, R. 509_2 516_6 517_3 518_1 518_3 520_{2-5} 521 521_3 521_4 522 523_3 524_6 637
Paris, P. 404_1 404_3 686_2 1158_{10} 1211
Parker, C. A. 305_0
Parrot 146
Parsnip 1042
Parsons, J. D. 607_4
Pascal, C. 1170_5
Pashley, R. 945_2
Pasqui, A. 509_2 636
Passow, A. 4 1164_1
Paton, W. R. 234_1 238_0 291_2 307_1 $872_{0(6)}$
Patsch, G. 485_5 1195_0
Pauli, C. 709_7 709_9
Peacock of Iuno 60_0 67 with herm and butterfly 645_4
Peacocks on Roman mirror 1205_6
Pearson, A. C. 161_2 466_1 497_2 676_3 697_2 799_8 806_1 854_9 855_1 856_{2-4} 856_8 856_{10} 858_8 858_4 923_0 1124_0 1131_2 1179_6
Pearson, H. H. W. 482_8
Pear-tree as lucky tree 403_9 sacred, at Autessiodurum 1215 f. wild, in folk-tale from Janina 678
Pectoral 594
Pedersen, H. 494
Pediment, crescent and star in 983_0 star in 980_0
Pediments of Olympion at Agrigentum 911_0 of Parthenon at Athens 753 of fourth-century temple at Delphoi 267_1 of sixth-century temple at Delphoi 267_1
Pedrusi, P. 327
Pedum 308_1
Peet, T. E. 142_0 559_2
Pélanos 1097_2
Pélekys, a much-travelled word 587
Pennell, E. R. 421_0
Penrose, F. C. 1229
Pentaeteris 227 1121_0 1179
Péplos of Athena in eastern frieze of Parthenon 1136_0 1136_4 1137_0 of Athena worn by basileûs at Athens (?) 1136
Perdrizet, P. 270_3 411_6 628_7 629 $819_{0(5)}$ 820_3 863_1 864_0 866_0 $878_{0(9)}$ $879_{0(15)}$ $881_{0(21)}$ $882_{0(0)}$ 1229
Pernier, L. 520_4
Perrot, G. 49_7 515_1 550_5 551_1 620_5 620_6 621 621_2 622_2 638_8 805_3 915_0
Perseïa-tree 468
Persönliche Götter 13_1 851
Persson, P. 860_4
Pervanoglu, P. 199_2 1057
Pestle in rites of Pilumnus 643_8
Pétasos 383 386 388 713
Peter, R. 57_3 470_0 620_1 620_2
Petersen, C. 236_1 344 642_3 854_9 855_1 858_3 1212
Petersen, E. 106_0 106_1 361_5 516_6 518_3 520 f. 520_5 522_0 523_1 524_8 784_2 793 f.
Petersen, E. (cont.) 794_9 799_{10} $879_{0(16)}$ 972_1 973_1 1064 1136_0 1181_9
Petrie, Sir W. M. Flinders 141_2 290_0 325_7 545_0 617 622_3 632_6 799_3 1218
Pettazzoni, R. 143_2 143_3 313 314_2 315_1
Peucerus, C. 702_4
Pfister, F. 414_1 414_2 897_0
Pfuhl, E. 741_5 743_4 817_0
Phallós affixed to column (?) 530_0 anthropomorphic 1089 f. covered with bay and ivy 244_4 dedicated to Theos Ὕψιστος (?) $879_{0(15)}$ horns ending in 367_1 in Ilknon 405_2 in relation to butterfly 645_4 in relation to snail 645_4 kept as relic 450_1 made of deer-skin 1022 made of wood 224_1 of Agdistis 969_4 of Attis 970_0 of Dionysos Ἀκρατοφόρος 244_4 (?) of Dionysos Φαλλήν 522_0 of Gallos, king of Pessinous (?) 970_0 of herm 645_4 1150_9 of Hermes 384_0 1068 of Kibuka 450_1 of Kronos 450_1 of Osiris 224_1 of Ouranos 450_1 of Phanes 1024 f. of Telesphoros 1089 f. of Zeus 450_1 on graves 1089 represented by pillar (?) 426_4 represented by thumb (?) 291_3 represented by trident (?) 791_3 swathed (?) 522_0 weighed 734_3 See also Genitals, Ithyphallic
Pharmakoí 291_2 924_0
Philios, D. 895_1 896_0
Philpot, Mrs J. H. 88_3
Phoenix as form of Rê 1035 on globe 373_2 on palm-tree 1050
Phoutrides, A. E. 905_0
Phylactery-bands 1200 (?)
Piaculum 803_2
Picard, C. 954_0 962_2 1216 1227
Pick, B. $491_{0(6)}$ $493_{0(7)}$ 1126_0 1193_4 1214
Pickard, J. 211_2
Pictograph of double axe 613
Pierce, R. 1227
Piette, E. 189
Pig in parody of mystic formula 345_5 in rite of atonement 1097_2 nurtures Zeus on Mt Dikte 928_0 replaced by dog in pig-skin 1140_8 replaced by ham-shaped coin 1141_0 replaced by terra-cotta pig 1140_5 sacrificed to Iuno Lucina (?) 60_0 sacrificed to Zeus Βουλεύς 1105 sacrificed to Zeus Εὐβουλεύς 1105 sacrificed to Zeus Μειλίχιος 1105 ff. 1140_2 (?) 1157 snout of, in clay 896_0 worshipped at Praisos 782_5
Pigeon, golden, on oak-tree at Dodona 677 on bronze tablet from Psychro Cave 927_0
Pigeons on sarcophagus from Hagia Triada 518_3 (?)
Pighius (S. W. Pighe) 46_0
Pigorini, L. 651_1 652 652_1 652_3
Pig-skin, articles made of, must not be brought into precinct of Elektryone 499_5 dog dressed in 1140_5
Pilíon (pileum) 307_3 386 See also Cap, Phrygian

Pillar as aniconic image of Arcadian god or goddess 814 f. of Esmun 1095_0 of 'Minoan' god 532 of 'Minoan' goddess 533 of Zeus Πάσιος 1095_0 of Zeus Πατρῷος 1095_0 of Zeus Στορπαῖος 815 1095_0 of Zeus Τριφύλιος 1095_0 as axis of spherical world 169 f. associated with ladder 127 f. 141 associated with omphalós 166 ff. marked with double axe 532 f. marking sunrise at winter solstice 1130_7 of early Germanic sky-god (Irminsûl) 52 ff. of early Germanic sky-god Romanised as Jupiter-column 57 ff. of fire 115 115_2 of fire or light in legends of saints 115 ff. of glory 44 of light 44 54 66_0 100 114 ff. 840 1211 f. 1217 sacred, belongs primarily to earth-goddess, secondarily to sky-god associated with her 533 surmounted by cock 1133_1 surmounted by hawk 1133_1 surmounted by horns 142_1 surmounted by pyramid 814 f. 1095_0 1147 surmounted by woodpecker 1133_1 with two bearded masks hung back to back 381

Pillars as divine effigies (?) 423_3 843 in relation to double axe 528 ff. of Briareos 422 of Danaos 1144_2 of Dionysos 423 of Herakles 422 f. of Kronos 422 of Proteus 422 rayed, flanking Mt Argaios 980_0 supporting sky 56_2 126 169 426 431 843 See also Diana-pillars, High-seat pillars, Sky-pillar

Pillar-altars 161_6 193

Pillar-cult at Argos (?) 1144_2 at Delphoi 169 178 in France 1213 in Spain 1213 at Tarentum 29 45 131 161 166 559 at Tegea 814 f. in Thessaly 166_2 (?)

Pillar-shrines 152_0 153_0 1213

Pillet, A. 133_3

Pilos, black 435 blue 386_5 covered with stars 386 of Attis 386 of Dioskouroi 313_2 313_4 313_6 433 435 574 f. 1062 of Hephaistos 386_5 cp. 630 of Men 386 of Mithras 386 surmounted by star 433 white 435 worn by priest 386_5 630

Pinder, M. 577_2

Pine-cone 154_0 298 951_0 1054 1080 f.

Pine-tree, eagle on 909_0 in grove of Diana Nemorensis (?) 146 147 ff. cp. 412 of Attis 303_2 951_0 969_4 970_0 cp. 306_5 of Kybele 951_0 cp. 306_5 on gold ring from Mykenai 515_1 (?) on Mt Viarus 972_2 with effigy of Attis attached to it 303_2 with effigy of Osiris buried in it 303_2 with flutes and Phrygian cap 306_5 with timbrel and pipe 306_5

Pine-trees on Mt Aitne 909_0 on Mt Arbios 946_0 on Mt Atabyrion in Rhodes 923_0 on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5 in Kolchis 411 sacred, near Amaseia 975_0 sacred, near Thebes in Boiotia 412

Pine-wreath as prize at Isthmian games $490_{0(5)}$ 951_0 worn by Zeus 951_0

Pinks 775_0

Pinza, G. 147_2

Pipe $300\ 306_5$

Piper, F. 868_1 1049 f.

Pithos, burial in 1148

Pithoi in Psychro Cave 926_0

Pitrè, G. $1000\ 1008_1\ 1012_1$

Place-names in -edos, -eda 662 in -nd- 586 in -yma, -ymos 318 of 'Twin'-localities 318_5

Plague, ritual to avert 287_2 954_0

Plane-tree at Athens 1118 at Delphoi $200_{0(3)}$ 201_1 at Magnesia ad Maeandrum 891_0 figure of Dionysos found in 891_0 in folk-tale from Janina 679

Plane-trees, sacred, at Labranda 590 976_0

Planets, ladder of the seven (Sabian) 129 seven (Babylonian) 128_5

Platner, S. B. 46_0

Platt, A. 264_2

Plew, E. 660_1

Ploss, H. 960_0

Plough on altars of Zeus Βροντῶν 836 on altar of Zeus Δίος 281 on tombstones from Altyntash 836

Plough-share 987_1

Plumptre, E. H. 1173_2

Plum-tree as lucky-tree 403_0

Plum-trees on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5

Plurality See Multiple

Poerner, J. 928_0

Poirée, E. 612_1

Poland, F. $881_{0(21)}$ 925_0

Polenaar, B. J. 1173_1

Polites, N. G. $4\ 56_2\ 192_3\ 480_7\ 641_2\ 642_0$ 828_{11} 829_1 988 990_8 993_2

Polívka, G. 666_3 988 995_2

Pomegranate held by priest of Attis 300 held by Zeus Κάσιος at Pelousion 986_0 impregnates d. of Sangarios 969_4

Pomegranates, d. of Sangarios fed on 969_4 in garland of Attis 298

Pomegranate-tree, eagle on 710 springs from severed member of Agdistis 969_4 the Malum Punicum at Rome 400_{11}

Pomegranate-trees near Arvi in Crete 946_0

Pomegranate-twigs held by priest of Attis 300 (?)

Pomjalóvskij, I. V. $884_{0(0)}$

Pompîlos 448_0

Pomtow, H. 173 f. 231_7 233_3 243_3

Pontremoli, E. 1179_7

Pópana $487_{3(1)}$

Poplar-tree, fruit-bearing, in mouth of Idaean Cave 230_5 932_1

Poplar-trees beside Eridanos in land of Keltoi 468 on Mt Arbios 946_0 sisters of Phaethon transformed into 495 See also Black-poplar, White-poplar

Poplar-wreath 469 ff. of athletes 470 of Helios 469 of Herakles 388_8 469 of Hermes (?) 388_8 of Salii 470 of Teukros 472 of Trojan crews 472

Poppo, E. F. 1140_2

Poppy held by emperor 571 (?)

Poppies of Aphrodite 1165$_1$ of Bonus Eventus 1126$_0$ of Demeter 1165$_1$ of Isis 1165$_1$ of Rhea 515$_5$ 1165$_1$
Poppy-head in marriage rites 1164 cp. 1166$_3$ (?) of Dioskouroi 313$_6$
Poppy-heads in garland of Attis 298 in rites at Eleusis 1165$_1$ of Agathos Daimon 98$_0$ cp. 1126$_0$ of Rhea 515
Poppy-stalks (?) held by female figure on 'Minoan' mould 624
Poppysmós 827$_{4-6}$
Poralla, P. 353$_3$ 436$_5$
Portraiture in Roman art of various periods 1206
Posnansky, H. 933$_0$
Postgate, J. P. 40$_5$ 862$_5$
Postolakkas, A. 1058
Pott, A. F. 344 1086
Potter, J. 702$_3$
Pottier, E. 123$_0$ 713 1223
Poulsen, F. 770$_2$ 1056 1058 1111$_1$
Powell, B. 916$_0$
Powell, F. York 533$_2$
Pradel, F. 666$_2$
Prætorius, J. 702$_4$
Praschniker, C. 499$_9$
Prayer whispered 1044
Prayers personified (Litai) 1099$_2$ 1100$_0$ 1101
'Prayer-pellets' 944$_0$
Preller, L. 94$_2$ 164$_3$ 355 383$_7$ 660$_1$ 721$_6$ 868$_6$ 1125$_1$
Prellwitz, W. 268$_2$ 494 570$_0$ 600$_4$ 779$_9$ 1077 1087 1098$_6$ 1110 1159$_1$
Premerstein, A. von 1025 1217 1228
Preuss, K. T. 504$_3$
Price, I. M. 510$_4$
Priest assimilated to deity 630 honoured as a god 950$_0$ keeps in his house the statue of his god 741$_4$ 742$_5$ 743
Priests dedicate temple-columns in Asia Minor 580 named after their god 1073 wear stróphion or stroppus 1171$_1$
Priests and priestesses as axe-carriers 620 ff. with animal names 228$_4$ 693$_3$
Priesthood, annual tenure of 741$_4$ 743 916$_0$ 921$_0$ 1132$_6$ 1133$_0$ life-tenure of 959$_0$ 967$_0$ 973$_1$ 976$_0$ 1225 of Athena Ἀλέα held by boy 1147
Priestly king at Tralleis dwells in brick palace 958$_9$ buried in precinct of deity 413 944$_0$ 945$_9$
Prince, Cretan, plays the part of Dionysos or Zagreus, the reborn Zeus (?) 522 Cretan, regarded as consort of Rhea (?) 522 524 Cretan, Zeus in the form of, slain by wild boar 522
Prinz, H. 625$_3$ 630$_3$
Projection of Kouretes (?) 932$_0$ of rite of supplication (?) 1096$_2$
Prokesch-Osten, A. 590$_1$
Promiscuity, primitive 981$_1$
Prophylactics See Apotrópaia
Prost, A. 71$_5$
Prostitution, religious 959$_0$ f.
Prostropé 1099$_1$
Prott, H. von 18$_6$ 890$_2$
Proverbs: βοῦς ἐπὶ γλώσσῃ μέγας | βέβηκεν 345 1218 ἐπὶ ξυροῦ ἵσταται ἀκμῆς 862 ἔφυγον κακόν, εὗρον ἄμεινον 1166$_1$ Κρῆτες ἀεὶ ψεῦσται 940$_0$ ff. Κρῆτες ἀεὶ ψεῦσται, κακὰ θηρία, γαστέρες ἀργαί 942$_0$ μωρότερος Μορύχου 1093$_0$ πλόκιον Γοργάδος 1148$_3$ Τενέδιος ἄνθρωπος, Τενέδιος ξυνήγορος, Τενέδιος πέλεκυς 668 f. τρεῖς θεοί 1093$_1$ 1094$_0$
Pryce, T. Davies 473$_1$ 1205
Prytaneîon 904$_1$ 1148$_9$
Psychóstasia 99$_1$ 734$_3$ by St Michael 138$_0$ in Babylonia 734$_3$ in Egypt 99$_1$ 734$_3$ in Greece 734$_3$ in Italy 99$_1$ 734$_3$ of Achilles and Hektor 734$_0$ 734$_3$ of Achilles and Memnon 733 ff. 734$_3$ of Erotes 734$_3$ of phalloí 734$_3$
Puberty-rites 859 f.
Puchstein, O. 359$_1$ 910$_1$ 914$_0$ 915$_0$ 915$_2$ 917$_0$ 1180$_4$
Pughe, W. Owen 52$_4$
Pullan, R. F. 392$_8$
Punishment of mother in 'Expulsion' tales 1014 ff. 1019
Puppets representing Death 868 representing Iupiter and other deities 1171 f.
Puppies in rites of Diana Nemorensis 149
Purification as first stage of initiation 1168 by figs 1103$_4$ by skin of animal sacrificed to Zeus Μειλίχιος 1092 by thunder-stone 835 enjoined by Zeus at Philadelpheia in Lydia 1229 in rites of Zeus Φίλιος 1186 1197
Purity, ceremonial 922$_0$ 934$_0$
Purse always full 1008 of Mercurius 70$_1$ 94$_3$ on chalice of Antioch 1199$_5$ (?)
Purses on agonistic table 491$_{0(0)}$
Pursuit, ritual, at Tegea 164$_6$
Putto as survival of Eros 1050
Pyramid as form of deity 1144 as form of tomb 1145 as representation of mountain (?) 983$_0$ of Sandas 983$_0$ of Zeus at Sikyon 1144 ff. of Zeus Ἱλάσιος 1095$_0$ of Zeus Πατρῷος 1095$_0$ of Zeus Στορτᾶος 815 1095$_0$ on pillar as form of deity 814 f. 1094$_0$ 1095$_0$ 1147
Pyramîdes, pointed cakes 1162
Pyramids on tomb of Porsenna 1219 smooth-sided 1145$_{1(b)}$ smooth-sided, on plinths 1146$_{0(d)}$ stepped 1145$_{1(a)}$ stepped, on plinths 1145$_{1(c)}$
Pyre as type of sepulchral monument (?) 1145$_1$ of Herakles 23 903$_2$ of Kapaneus 23 of oaken images (δαίδαλα) 898$_0$ 977$_0$ of Zeus Στράτιος 974$_1$ 976$_0$ f. priestess at Dodona burnt on 217

Quadriennial festival of Zeus Βασιλεύς and Hera Βασιλίς 900$_0$ See also Pentaeteris
Quandt, W. 238$_0$ 280$_1$ 565$_2$ 957$_2$
Quaranta, Com. 853$_5$
Quatremère de Quincy, A. C. 1219

Queen of Athens receives diphros 1135 f. of Crete enclosed in wooden cow (?) 924_0
of Egypt has horn of Ammon 773_0
Quests of children in 'Expulsion' tales 1016 ff.
Quilling, F. 98_{1-3} 99_1 99_2 99_4 1213 f.
Quince on sceptre 763_1

Rabbit 1199 1205_4
Radcliffe, W. 676_3
Radermacher, L. 118_2 119_1 290_0
Radet, G. 280 559_6 561_4 561_5 562_1 562_2 570_2 $881_{0(21)}$
Radin, M. 121_1
Rafts 984_4
Rain as sweat of Kronos 558_0 as water through a sieve 2 at begetting of Dionysos 275 blood-red 4 of ambrosia 275 portended by spiders' webs 467 sent by Attis 292 sent by Dionysos 275 sent by Zeus 274 (?) 275 f. 894_1
Rain-charm at Krannon 831 ff.
Raisins 671_6
Ram as akrotérion (?) 16_1 as centre of procreative power 306 685 black 471_{10} golden 899_1 904_1 on coin of Pagai $488_{0(3)}$ sacrificed to Ianus 377 sacrificed to Pelops 471_{10} sacrificed to Zeus 1175 signifies Idas 439 solar (?) 16_1
Ram's head beneath foot of Asklepios (? Zeus Ἀσκληπιός) 1080 on bronze plaque from Rome 664_1 on lictor's axe 1221 on throne-arms of Zeus 1082 on waist of Phanes 1051
Ram's skin in folk-tale from Albania 999 f.
in folk-tale from Psara 997
Rams of Ba'al-hammân 1208_2
Rams' heads on altar of Erikepaios 1025 on Lydian pendant 639
Ramsay, W. 1194_4
Ramsay, Sir W. M. 277 278_3 280 287_0 287_1 288 288_3 288_5 307_1 320_0 408_0 455_1 566_3 567 567_2 568_7 569 569_1 817_2 835 836_{2-4} 836_{11} 838_8 $883_{0(0)}$ 959_0 961_0
Rand, E. K. 1059
Randall-MacIver, D. 1221
Rangabé, R. 1119_4
Rapp, A. 94_2 268_3 548_3 1033 1102_6
Rapp, E. 607 f.
Rapson, E. J. 608_4 791_2
Rasche, J. C. 444_1 572_2 635 1172_0 1195_1
Raspberry-bushes 949_8
Rathbun, Miss M. J. 663_3
Ratti, N. 419 f.
Ravaisson, F. F. 435
Raven as bringer of rain 832 as prophet of fine weather 519_0 as prophet of storm 518_4 as prophet of weather 833_0 as telephany of sky-god (?) 519_0 of Apollon 160_9 248 (?) 571 of Asklepios 1084 (?) on hand of Apollon 248_9 (?) 571 originally white 463_1 perched on double axe 518 (?) 520 (?) perched on wheel of car 832 turned black by Apollon 833_0
Ravens at Delphoi 180 at Krannon 832 garrulous 524 of Zeus Ἀσκραῖος $872_{0(5)}$(?) on Mt Lepetymnos 832 on oak-trees $872_{0(5)}$ (?) on omphalós 186_1 (?) on wheels of car 832
Rawlinson, Sir H. C. 482_6
Ray-fish 676
Razor 630_3 859 f. 861 f.
Rebirth by means of taurobolium and criobolium 306 of Dionysos 234 of infants in Italy 1059 of Zeus 230 381 823_1 839
Red bands binding bull on table-altar 517 in funeral rites 522 522_2 ladder 1215 leather strap round fasces 635 River 480_0 scarves 522
Reduplication in language and art 654
Reed with urn betokens water 285_1 1050 1083
Reeds in Asopos 468 in folk-tale from Zakynthos 505 on basket of Archigallus 299 on wing of Ahriman 1054
Regalia of folk-tale heroes 1016 of Persia 281_4 of Troy 281_4
Rehm, A. 1220 1228
Reichel, W. 587 646_4
Reichhold, K. 436_1 731_1 737_4 852_{11}
Reimar, H. S. 34_1
Reinach, A. J. 110_9 111_0 516_6 517_3 518_3 520_5 521_4 523_2 524_6 560_4 617_6 620_6 622_2 622_3 947_0
Reinach, S. 70_0 90_1 93_3 94_3 98_{1-3} 99_4 100 105_7 106_1 107_0 109_1 118_4 136_2 152_0 160_0 165_0 230_1 261_1 265_4 291_2 307_1 349_{20} 355_5 361_5 445 f. 547_0 550_2 620_1 636 639_1 680_1 685 690_1 726_9 734_0 739_3 799_{10} $819_{0(5)}$ 833_9 865_2 $881_{0(21)}$ $882_{0(0)}$ 966_0 1089 1103 1110 1115_1 1151_8 1164_2 1173_4 1181_0 1214 1225 1229
Reinach, T. 106_2 107_3 707_{2-5} $882_{0(0)}$ 975_0
Reindeer hardly to be identified with Cerynean hind 465 f. in Hercynian Forest 466
Reisch, E. 160_3 161_2 211_2 1078
Relics 190 ff. (ὀμφαλός of Zeus, etc.) 221 (bones and teeth of Python) 1015_7 (egg of Leda) 1203 (inner bowl of Antiochene chalice)
Religion, personal as well as civic 1176_3
Renan, E. 675_4 868_8
Rendall, G. H. 1202_0
Rending of Dionysos or Zagreus 218 f. 234 239 1030 ff.
Renz, C. 1200_3
Resurrection, Attis as emblem of 309 eagle as emblem of 1209_6 Hadrian erects image of Zeus (Iupiter) on site of 984_1 of Christ 941_0 of dead ensured by magic rites of revival 522 of Dionysos or Zagreus 234 1032 of Zeus as Zagreus 934_0 938_9
Resurrection-rite (?) 1191_2
Reusch 32_5
Reuvens, C. J. C. 141_2
Rey, E. G. 431_1

Rhodius, J. 123_{0}
Rhomaios, K. A. 815_{2} 1222
Rhómbos 1030
Rhŷs, Sir J. 326 450_{0}
Rhytón See Vases
Richards, G. C. 628_{6}
Richardson, Miss H. 1216
Richardson, R. B. 916_{0}
Richmond, O. L. 147_{2}
Richter, E. 905_{0}
Richter, Miss G. M. A. 748_{0} 754 f. 754_{3} 754_{4} 1202_{5}
Richter, O. 147_{2} 356_{1} 363_{6} 365_{1} 373_{4} 472_{7} 1083
Ridder, A. de 734_{0} 745_{2} 900_{0}
Riddle by Simonides of Keos 659_{1}
Rider-god 312_{5} cp. 270_{3} 561 ff. 664_{1}
Ridgeway, Sir W. 164_{3} 166_{1} 193_{1} 340_{3} 341 450_{1} 465 466 498_{1} 637_{4} 655_{1} 656_{0} 1179_{6}
Riegl, A. 529_{7} 788_{1}
Riegler, R. 692_{9}
Riese, A. 57_{3} 71_{6} 82 89_{6} 394_{2}
Riess, E. 667_{4} 702_{3} 827_{7}
Riffer, V. 291_{2}
Righetti, P. 382_{1}
Ring changing colour at misfortune 1008 given by Zeus to Prometheus 990 magical, in folk-tales of Kyklops 989 f. 1001 f. of Attis 297 of Wodan 62_{1} 990
Rites de passage 359_{6}
River-god as boar 320_{0} (Kapros) as wolf 320_{0} (Lykos) recumbent 285_{1} (Maiandros) 319_{7} 320_{0} (Kapros, Lykos) 408_{0} (Maiandros, Marsyas) 1083 (Tiber) seated (?) 408_{0} (Orgas, Therma(s?-ios?)) standing 260_{0} (Morsynos)
Rivers invoked 728_{0}
Road of Apollon 499 f. of the Birds 38 462 497 of Zeus 36 f. 52 464 840 843 See also Amber routes and Index I Milky Way
Robbins, F. E. 206_{1}
Robert, C. 45_{1} 94_{2} 164_{6} 261_{1} 262_{0} 384_{0} 476_{12} 591_{1} 626_{2} 627_{0} 706_{5} 721_{6} 789 868_{6} 923_{0} 1045 1125_{1} 1143_{1} 1151_{7} 1222
Roberts, E. S. 240_{3} 1096_{1}
Robert-Tornow, W. 1142_{4}
Robinson, E. 473_{1} 473_{3-5} 473_{7} 475_{5}
Robinson, E. S. G. 470_{0}
Robinson, J. Armitage 133_{3} 133_{4}
Robiou, F. 1170_{5}
Rocco, S. 641_{2}
Rochette, R. 207_{0} 265_{4} 287_{0} 1042 1145_{1}
Rock, women slide down, to obtain children 1114
Rock-cut habitations on Mt Argaios 978_{0}
Rod of Hades 166_{4}
Rods of Roman lictor charged with virtue of sacred axe 635 847 used for divination 635
Rodenwaldt, G. 145_{1} 147_{7} 836_{10} 836_{11}
Roeder, G. 626_{0}
Roehl, H. 1096_{1} 1096_{2}
Rohde, E. 23_{4} 43_{4} 117_{6} 118_{3} 222_{3} 223_{4} 232_{2} 238_{2} 271_{2} 348_{2} 1020 1125_{1}
Rohden, P. von 442_{1}
Rolland, E. 37 52_{4} 479_{3} 480_{4-6}
Rolls on chalice of Antioch 1199 f.
Ronzevalle, S. 814_{3} $887_{0(0)}$
Roof of Iupiter Capitolinus with hole above Terminus 724_{0}
Rope, golden 1211
Rosa, P. 356
Rosary, beads of, sticking if owner is dead 1011
Roscher, W. H. 37_{2} 70_{0} 167 172_{0} 173_{1} 173_{5} 180 191_{10} 236_{5} 238_{0} 238_{2} 242_{3} 322_{3} 327 349_{18} 353_{3} 365_{1} 371 373_{3} 377_{2} 383 394_{3} 502_{1} 691_{9} 691_{10} 721_{6} 1039 1142_{4} 1216
Roscoe, J. 450_{1}
Rose held by Aphrodite 1043 on coins of Rhodes 469_{7} 924_{0} surmounted by radiate solar disk 924_{0}
Rose, H. J. 1229
Rosenberg 440_{4}
Rosette on Mt Argaios 980_{0}
Rosettes on chalice of Antioch 1200 1204 on fresco from Knossos 529 on kántharos from Tiflis 1204 on sheath of Artemis' Ἐφεσία 407_{0} on terra sigillata 1205_{4}
Ross, L. $877_{0(0)}$ 923_{0} 996_{1}
Ross, M. 242_{6}
Rossbach, O. 46_{1} 392_{8} 392_{9} 393_{6} 514_{2} 863_{1} 978_{0}
Rossi, G. B. de 426_{2} 427_{2} 546_{0}
Rossignol, C. 285_{0}
Rostovtzeff, M. See Rostowzew, M.
Rostowzew, M. 143_{4} 146_{0} 146_{1-4} 146_{7} 152_{0} 157_{0} 158_{2} 160_{0} 187_{4} 925_{0}
Rott, H. 594
Rougé, J. de 625_{7}
Rouse, W. H. D. 111_{0} 513_{1} 539_{2} 600_{3} 646_{2} 999_{1} 1140_{5}
Roussel, P. 920_{0} 921_{0} 922_{0} 985_{0} 1217
Royds, T. F. 519_{0}
Rta 1095_{0}
Rubensohn, O. 922_{0} 1227
Ruelle, C. E. 612_{1}
Ruge, W. 617_{3} 971_{2} 972_{1}
Ruggiero, E. de 86_{3} 725_{0}

Sabbath 456
Sacken, E. von 618_{3} 647_{3} 751_{1} 751_{5}
Sacrifice, human (See Human sacrifice) of bull to Zeus Στράτιος 975_{0} of chariot with white horses to Poseidon 975_{0} of deer 926_{0} of dogs 926_{0} of first-born to Moloch 1108_{2} of fox and hedgehog 964_{3} of goat to Zeus Ἀσκραῖος at Halikarnassos $872_{0(5)}$ of ox to placate flies 782 of oxen 926_{0} of pig to Zeus Βουλεύς 1105 of pig to Zeus Εὐβουλεύς 1105 of pig to Zeus Μειλίχιος 1105 ff. of sheep 926_{0} of singed victim to (Zeus) Μηλίχιος 1156 of swine 926_{0} of white ox to Zeus Κτήσιος 1065 1067 of white victims to Zeus Ἀκραῖος $871_{3(1)}$ of wild goats 926_{0} to Zeus Στράτιος on mountain-tops 974_{1} ff.

Sadowski, J. N. von 493_2
Saglio, E. 154_0 160_3 1125_1 1203_4
Sailing, inventor of 715_4 1037
Saintyves, P. 963_0
Sakellarios, A. 995_2
Salač, A. 907_0 983_0 985_0 986_0 987_0
Salinas, A. 812_1
Sallet, A. von $493_{0(7)}$
Salmasius, C. 701
Salzmann, A. 615_1 615_2
Samter, E. 642_3 643_8 1090
Sanctis, G. de 600_2
Sandal with thunderbolt 1227
Sandals, winged 718
Sandys, Sir J. E. 328_3 471_7 547_0 782_8 1092_8 1099_1 1170_7 1188_{10}
Sarasin, P. 779
Sarcophagi, Christian 1050 Cretan 516 ff. 524 f. Cypriote 717 f. Greek 417 521_5 Roman 417 478 1205_7 from Golgoi 717 f. from Hagia Triada 516 ff. from Klazomenai 521_5 from Ostia 478 f.
Sarnow, E. 627_4
Sartorius von Waltershausen, W. 908_1
Sauer, B. 615_2 865_2
Saulcy, F. de $887_{0(31)}$
Sauppe, H. 857_1 857_5
Saussure, F. de 616_1
Savelsberg, J. 273_2
Savignoni, L. 509_1 799_1 799_2 799_4
Savin-tree 981_1
Sayce, A. H. 278_2 779_2 1150_7 1228
Scale-pattern 71
Scales held by Aequitas 99_1 by Aphrodite 734_3 by Bios 865 f. by Eris 734_3 by Eros 734_3 by Fata 862_{10} by Hermes 733 734_0 734_3 by Iupiter 734_3 by Iustitia 99_1 by Kairos 860 ff. by Moneta 99_1 by Nemesis 860 f. by Venus Verticordia 98 f. 99_1 100 by Virgo 734_3 by Zeus 734_3
Scaliger, J. J. 855_1 858_3
Scallop-shell, symbol of Mother-goddess 302 symbol of Poseidon 795
Scape-goat, human 904_1
Sceptre as conventionalised branch with golden apples 763_1 carried by eagle towards emperor 1134_0 carried by eagle with wreath 1133_1 eagle-tipped, transmits divinity of king to successor 1132 ff. filleted 144 gold, from Tarentum 763_1 knobbed, set upright on throne 545_0 lotiform 786 ff. oath by 723_0 of Agamemnon 1132 1132_4 1132_6 of Ahriman 1053 of Asklepios 1079 of Atreus 1132_4 1132_6 of Diana Nemorensis 148 of Dionysos 1026 of Egyptian gods 1131_2 of Erikepaios 1026 of Hera 1178 of Hermes 1132_4 1132_6 of Iupiter 812 of Kronos 1026 of Nyx 1026 of Ouranos 1026 of Pelops 956_2 1132_4 1132_6 of Phanes 1026 1051 of Thracian goddess 820 (?) of Thyestes 1132_4 1132_6 of woodpecker 697_0 of Zeus 547_3 956_2 1026 1030 1058 1122 1131 1132 1188
Sceptre (cont.)
originally belonged to king as weather-maker 1132 ff. shouldered by eagle 1133_1 surmounted by corn-ears 99 surmounted by cuckoo 893_2 1133_1 surmounted by dove 409_0 1133_1 1134_4 (?) 1134_5 surmounted by eagle 318 1132 ff. 1133_1 1134_4 1159 with eagle and dolphin as emblems of earth, air, and sea (?) 1133_1 with snake coiled about it 1080 worshipped at Chaironeia 547_2 1132
Schaal, H. 1225
Schaefer, J. O. 290_0 578_3 578_4 579_0 580_{10} 581_0 581_1 586 592_2 599_3 958_0 959_0 960_0
Schanz, M. 335_6 336_3 336_4 1122_4 1170_7 1211
Scheffel, H. 1227
Scheffer, J. 46_0
Scheftelowitz, I. 538_5
Scheil, F. V. 128_2
Schenck, L. 1089
Scherer, W. 844_6
Schlemm, Fräulein J. 635_{12} 792_2 883_1
Schliemann, H. 515_1 538_5 538_6 645_1 645_2 1150
Schmid, W. 33_5 127_3 127_4 1157_7
Schmidt, A. 241 242_3 242_4
Schmidt, B. 4 504_3 506 506_0 642_0 666_3 705_5 990_8 993_2 994_1 994_2 1112_7 1164_2
Schmidt, H. 222_2
Schmidt, J. 613_2 691_5 803
Schmidt, M. 118_3 271_0 413_1 665_0 1142_2 $1149_{2(1)}$
Schmidt, M. C. P. 775_0
Schmitt-Blank 32_7
Schneider, O. 1122_3
Schneider, R. von 866_0
Schneider, S. 268_4
Schneidewin, F. W. 130_4 296_4 723_0
Schnittger, B. 636_2 637
Schober, A. 499_9
Schöffer, V. von 817_0
Schöll, A. 1151_8 1151_{10}
Schöll, R. 757_8 1157_5
Schoemann, G. F. 242_4 316 1093_1
Schrader, O. 50_7 123_0 396_0 464_{10} 466_3 466_4 494 494_0 635_7 637_4 727_3 932_1 1159 1164_2 1226
Schrammen, J. 1180
Schreiber, T. 145_1 150_3 152_0 157_0 410_1 578_2
Schremmer, B. 602_1 608 ff.
Schroeder, B. 954_0
Schroeder, O. 444_6 459_3 494
Schubart, H. C. 1132_6
Schubert, R. 559_6
Schubring, J. $873_{0(11)}$ 910_1
Schuchhardt, C. 49_1 515_1 515_4
Schürer, E. 876_1 $884_{0(0)}$ $888_{0(32)}$
Schulten, A. 554_3
Schultz, A. 131_5
Schultz, H. 612_0
Schultz, W. 659_1
Schulze, W. 481_5 724_0
Schuster, P. R. 1020

Schwabe, E. 1099_1
Schwabe, J. F. H. 854_9
Schwartz, E. 28_8 33_2 238_1 1054 1123_1
Schwartz, F. L. W. 447 451 501 f. 502_1 505_2 722_1
Schweitzer 629 f.
Schwenck, K. 168_1 346_0
Schwendemann, K. 1216
Schwenn 928_0
Scimitar worshipped by Scythians as form of Ares 547_3 680
Scott, J. A. 697_7
Scourge See Whip
Scythe of Death 868 of Time 867 f.
Sea as androgynous primeval power 558_0 as girdle of Zeus 1028 as name of Milky Way 482_2 as tear of Kronos 557_1 Crimson 1012_1
'Sea' of Poseidon on Akropolis at Athens 793 cp. 581 Seager, R. B. 526 f. 538_2 654_5
Sea-monster 798
Seasons, three 59 four 59 on Jupiter-columns 58 ff. 87 89 94 (?) See also Index I Horae, Horai Seat, golden, in folk-tale from Brittany 1011 1016
Sébillot, P. 88_3 396_0 703 f. 793 988
Secchi, G. 947_0
Secespita 630 f.
Séchan, L. 627_4
Seeck, O. 611_7
Seed as food for dead 1058 of Osiris 482_0 of Ouranos 1029 of Zeus 969_4 1029
Selecides aves 981_1
Seligmann, S. 125_2 291_2 302_2 396_0 504_3 504_6 667_4 702_1
Séligsohn, M. $888_{0(0)}$
Sélinon-wreath as prize at Nemean games $490_{0(5)}$
Seltman, C. T. 366_3 657_2 657_3 709_2 741 757, 761 f. 780 f. 830_1 $871_{3(4)}$ 1136_4 1216 1223 1224
Seltman, E. J. 275_8 432_3 667_3 1225
Semicircles sacred to Dioskouroi 434
Semitelos 1115_2
Serradifalco, D. lo Faso Pietrasanta Duca di 910_1 914_0 915_0 917_0
Service-tree as lucky tree 403_0
Sesame 1140_4 1164
Sestini, D. 446 572_2
Seta, A. della 129_3 1222
Settegast, F. 988
Seure, G. 817 f. 818_2 819_2 821 821_2 822 851 1229
Seven as a number connected with Apollon 236_5 as a number connected with Zeus 238_0 days, sacrifices lasting 287_2 Muses 237_0 stars surrounding Zeus Κρηταγενής 238_0
Seven-months' child, Apollon a 237_0 Dionysos a 237_0
Seventh day of the month, sacrifices to Apollon on 237_0
Shape-shifting of Dionysos 1030 of Periklymenos 1134_6 of prince in folk-tale from Zakynthos 666_3 of Zagreus 861_5 1030
Sharpley, H. 15_1
Shaving 30 See also Razor
Sheaf, animal bound in 498_2 ceremonial, on coins 296_0(?) egg and bread bound in 498_2 man bound in 498_2 cp. 1220
Sheep cooked in its skin 1001 sacrificed to Apollon 463_1 sacrificed to Zeus Μειλίχιος 1138_2 1140 slung over cow's back 152_0
Sheep's head on altar-top 154_0
Sheep's milk, taboo on 987_0
Sheep-skin 374 (?) 989 1000 1002
Shell-trumpet invented by Aigokeros 933_0 938_0
Shield borne by Zeus 712 descending from sky 516 fringed with snakes 712
Shields, Amazonian 308_1 309_0 Argive 1146_0 bronze, from Idaean Cave 938_0 miniature, from Palaikastro 930_0
Shield-boss 930_0
Shield-signs 947_0
Ship, cosmic 44_2 in bronze, from Idaean Cave 938_0 of marble dedicated to Zeus Κάσιος 906_3 of stone dedicated to Artemis Βολοσία 906_3
Ship's name 876_0 987_0
Shirts turning black at failure of owners 1005
Shoulder, ivory, of Pelops 224
Shrines at Gournia 538 at Knossos 535 ff. of buried bull 539 f. See also Temple Sickle made by Gaia of grey adamant 447_8 of cursing (τὸ ἁρπᾶς δρέπανον) $882_{0(23)}$ of Demeter 448_0 of Kronos 447_8 448_0 555_0 of Perseus 721_7 of Saturnus 550 of Zeus 448_0 See also Hárpe
Sickle-sword See Hárpe
Sidgwick, A. 345_5
Sieve used for divination 702_2 702_4
Sieveking, J. 361_5
Sikes, E. E. 19_0 353_1 499_2 503_2 716_5 $1113_{0(2)}$
Silence of Eleusinian mystics 295_2 of Pythagoreans 7_1 1211
Silver alábastron 272_5 appropriate to Zeus 503_0 armlets 998 axe-haft 989 book-covers 1197 bowl from Idalion 553 bowl of Augustan age 1205_5 bowls dedicated to Zeus Κάσιος 982_0 bratteae from Stony Stratford 285_0 bratteae from Vichy 285_0 hull of Teŝub 910_1 chalices 1197 crosses 926_0 1197 cup dedicated by Minos 923_0 egg containing twin Moliones 1015 hand of Nuada 224_1 images of Glykon 1083 incense-burner 921_0 knife of Zeus 354 mastoi and mastia 346_0 open-work 1203 ff. pillar beyond Babylon 422_{12} River (= Milky Way) 480_0 'shrines of Diana' made at Ephesos 285_0 skýphos from

Silver (cont.)
Bosco Reale 1209 star in folk-tale from Brittany 1010 f. 1014 statuette from Vichy 285_0 statuettes from Mâcon 746_2 755
Silver-gilt bowl from Kourion in Kypros 553 statnettes of Zeus 755 ff.
Simpson, W. 1095_0 1171_3
Simrock, K. 396_0 868_2 1212
Sinews of bears 450_0 of Hippolytos 416 of Jacob $45I_1$ of Zeus 449_0 450_0
Single combat $489_{0(4)}$
Sinker, R. 291_2
Siret, L. 509_5 649_2
Sittig, E. 716_7 869_0 873_2 $875_{1(1)}$ 901_0 1158_8
Sittl, C. (or K.) 102_0 291_2 504_6 751_3 752_5 827_5 933_0 1099_1 1133_1
Six, J. 161_3
Six, J. P. 674_1 675
Sixt, G. 75_2
Skeuomorphic conception of thunderbolt 784 f. 850
Skhent 98_0
Skias, A. N. 1060 1115 ff. 1116_2 1117_3 1117_4 1118_4 1119_3 1119_4 1139_5
Skin of sacred animal wrapped round human victim 924_0
Skins of victims sacrificed to Zeus 'Ακραῖος sold $871_{3(1)}$
Skinner, J. 128_1 451_1 1037 1100_0 1111_1
Sky as arch 160 422 as caldron 204_2 as flat disk resting on pillar (?) 157 f. as gateway 160 178 as half of cosmic egg 1020 1023 as hat 386 1219 as head and face of Zeus 1028 as Janiform god 422 as wavy line (?) 49_1 composed of light and dark hemispheres 432 divine, develops into sky-god 840 images fallen from 963_0 imitated by thôlos-tomb 1150 made of bronze (copper) 358 463 made of frozen air 358_6 made of glass 358_8 made of iron 126 needing visible support 54 ff. of a twin character (Night and Day, Sun and Moon, Morning- and Evening-Star) 435 producing Twins of different aspect 435 f. resting on pillar 45 ff. 47 ff. 50 ff. 57 ff. 166 ff. 840 resting on two pillars 426 431 resting on four pillars 126 141 f. 141_1 354 358 827 842 resting on side-supports 160 178 178_7 432 resting on tree 56 88 166 split into Twins 422 supports of, personified 422 ff. 843 symbolised by Hephaistos' cap 386_5 symbolised by high priest's mitre 386_5 talismans and relics fallen from 963_0 twins as children of 434 f. 843
Sky-father in relation to earth-mother 677
Sky-ladder in relation to Milky Way 476
Sky-pillar in Egypt 126 141 in Germanic area 50 ff. 88 in Greece 166 ff. in Italy 45 ff. 166 f. in 'Minoan' area 47 ff. in Sardinia 140 ff. 154 157 in relation to Milky Way 476 in relation to pyramids etc. 1146_0
Sky-pillars, Dioskouroi as 160 431 f. 980_0
Slaves, emancipation of 729_0
Sleep, annual, of Dionysos (?) 660_0 on tripod confers oracular powers 209_2 with eyes open, in Albanian folk-tale 999 See also Incubation
Slime as primal element 1022 1023
Sling-bullets as thunderbolts 812 ff. 850
Smith, A. H. 177_6 469_2 475_7 593_1 594 598_1 860_5 $881_{0(2I)}$ $882_{0(0)}$ 903_0 1135_5 1136_0
Smith, C. Roach 1172_0
Smith, Sir C. H. 17 435_5 633_2
Smith, G. Elliot 504_4
Smith, P. 1079
Smith, R. M. 589
Smith, S. 483 510_5 1219
Smith, V. A. 608_4
Smith, W. Robertson 161_6 426 426_4 569_4 1038
Snail with phallós and butterfly 645_4
Snails on chalice of Antioch 1199
Snake as soul of buried hero 1060 1063 1087 1111 f. 1148 1151 ff. 1174 attacks the hart Eiktbyrnir 305_0 attacks the solar wheel 305_0 bearded and crested 1060 1061 1128_0 beside Eridanos 479 chthonian 1107 1107_3 coiled on couch 1128_0 coiled round Ahriman 1053 coiled round bay-trunk 196 coiled round cornu copiae 1128_0 coiled round omphaloid stone 94_3 coiled round omphalôs $882_{0(0)}$ coiled round Phanes 1051 coiled round sceptre 1080 coiled round staff 1071 f. 1082 drawn by mules 1082 euphemistic names of 1153_1 golden 1083 grave of, at Alexandreia 1127_0 guards plant on Mt Argaios 977_1 980_0 guides Antinoe 1083 hawk-headed (Kneph) 1127_0 horned 1030 human-headed (Glykon) 1084 in goose's egg 1083 in oak-tree 1087 1218 (?) in tomb 1057 in tree of life 138_0 kept in Erechtheion at Athens 1148 lion-headed (Khnemu) 1084 of Agathos Daimon 98_0 1127_0 1128_0 of Amphiaraos 1071 f. of Asklepios 1075 1077 1079 1082 ff. 1111 f. of Demeter 1111 of Dioskouroi 1063 of Erechtheus 1148 of Graeco-Libyan Zeus 1111 of Hesperides 1021 of Oidipous 1151 ff. of Thraco-Phrygian Zeus 1111 of Zeus at Dion in Makedouia 1111 of Zeus Ζβελσοῦρδος 819 820 of Zeus Κτήσιος 1061 1112 of Zeus Μειλίχιος 1107 ff. of Zeus Σαβάζιος 288_0 284_0 285_0 of Zeus Φίλιος 1174 on ship 1082 1083 oracle delivered by 1075 pattern derived from 1058 ridden by Aristodama 1082 slain by Menestratos 1151 swallows Iason 222_2 1217 with heads of god, bull, lion 1022 Zeus transformed into 941_0
Snakes as fringe of shield 712 beneath feet of Nanna 305_0 chased by lightning 820 828_{12} coiled round kratér 1218 flanking egg 1062 forming arch, on

Snakes (cont.)
bronze plaque from Rome 664_1 in bronze from Idaean Cave 938_0 in willow-tree 829 of Apate 854 of Artemis 457 of Athena 1111 of caduceï 1068 of Dioskouroi 1062 of Gorgon 930_0 of Hermes 1111 of Iuno (?) 61_0 of 'Minoan' goddess 538 930_0 1221 of Trophonios (Trephonios) 1074 f. oracle delivered by 1075 reared by Melampous 1087 three, as support of Plataean tripod 193 ff. three, on Attic relief 1175 four, on 'Dipylon' amphora 1056 two-headed (?), on gem from Mykenai 1221
Snake-goddess in shrine at Gournia 538 in shrine at Knossos 930_0 on gem from Mykenai 1221
Snake-heads of terra cotta in shrine at Gournia 538
Snake-worship among Semites 1111_1
Snow conceived as feathers 66_0 sent by Dionysos 275
Sobernheim, M. $886_{0(0)}$
Sogliano, A. 160_0
'Soldiers,' Mithraic, tattooed 123_0
Solmsen, F. 18_{7-4} 279_0 339_6 340_1 384_0 481_4 570_0 691 873_2 918_1 932_1 1149
Solstice, certain trees turn their leaves at 470_0 studied by Meton 1130_7 winter, observed at Itanos 1130_7
Soltau, W. 440_4
Son conceived as rebirth of his own father 294 611_2 See also Father
Sondergötter 13_1 $807_{3(1)}$ 828 f. 851 1072
Sonne, W. 582
Sonny, A. 522_2
Sorb-trees on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5 See also Service-tree
Sorlin-Dorigny, A. 763_1
Soul as bird 1132 (See also Soul-bird) as butterfly 645_4 1047 as Eros 1039 ff. as moth 645 645_4 as quasi-bird (Eros) 1045 as quasi-butterfly (Psyche) 1045 as small winged figure 1039 1045 1057 as snake 1087 1111 f. 1148 (?) 1174 as wind 1039 issues from the mouth 1039 resides in the head 290_0 291_0
Soul-bird 524 524_8 (?) 697_0
Soul-ladder 124 ff. 133 1146_0
Soul-path 36 ff. 114 117 ff. 124 166 840
Sow beneath oak (?)-tree 324 in contest of Kalchas and Mopsos $489_{0(4)}$
Spano, G. 359
Sparrow-hawk 523 (?)
Spear, oath by 13_1 547_2 of Achilles 799 1184_3 of Hera 705_1 of Iupiter 711 f. of Kaineus 547_2 of Kastor 799 of Mars 547_2 of Parthenopaios 13_1 547_2 of Zeus 15_0 547_2 704 ff. of Ziu 76 two-pronged 798 ff. worshipped (See Spear-worship)
Spear-butt, forked 799
Spear-head, double-pointed 799 on coin of Tarentum 763_1
Spear-worship in early times 1132_6 in Greece 547_2 1132_6 in Italy 547_2
Speleum 835_6 838 f.
Sphinxes as decoration on footstools in temple of Zeus Δικταῖος 931_0 held down by lion, on shield from Palaikastro 930_0 in bronze, from Idaean Cave 938_0
Spiders' webs on wild olive at Olympia 467 portend rain 467
Spiers, R. Phené 150_2 965_0
Spinning 65 66_0 1029
Spiral relief of columna cochlis 107
Spits 423_3 1030
'Split' quadrupeds and birds 189_3
Spoon, speaking, in folk-tale from Epeiros 672
Spratt, T. A. B. 945_2 971_2
Sprengel, C. 396_0
Spring, boiling, at Tyana 569_4 Dirke flung into, at Thebes in Boiotia 1013 intermittent, at Bathos 827_2 sacred, on Mt Ithome 890_6 sacred, at Lebena 1082 sacred, at Palmyra $885_{0(29)}$ Semele brought up from, at Lerna 1022
Springs, subterranean, at Athens 1118 f. volcanic (Palikoi) 909_0 See also Fountain, Water, Well
Spring, the, marriage of sky-god with earth-goddess in 521
Squirrels 95
Stade, B. 115_2
Stählin, F. 438_2 1220 1226 1227
Staes, B. 183_{1-4} 184_1 511_1 515_1 1060
Staff, golden 989 iron 995
Stag as tattoo-mark 122_0 in fresco from Pompeii 149 of Artemis 411 453_3 of Zeus 575 cp. 575_1 575_6 (?) 1220 on Mt Argaios 978_0 (?) on coins of Abdera 411 on coins of Euromos 575 575_1 1220 on coins of Kaulonia 1040 1042
Stag's head attached to Diana-pillar 146 cp. 154_0
Stag's horn inscribed 1220
Stags, foreparts of, on sheath of Artemis Ἐφεσία 406_0 f. of Artemis Ἐφεσία 406_0 ff. of St Mochua 214_0 on crown of Nemesis 146
Stag-beetle 782_3
Stag-horns attached to Diana-pillar 154_0 cp. 146 worn by rustic singers at Syracuse 1140
Stalactite pillars of Psychro Cave full of votive bronzes 530 ff. 926_0 927_0
Stamatakes, P. 514
Stambha 150_2
Standard, boar as 108 wheel as 108
Star above Mt Argaios 980_0 as tattoo-mark 122_0 daughter born with 1008 f. 1010 f. 1014 in pediment 980_0 cp. 983_0 of the Nativity 1200_2 (?) of Venus Caelestis 68_2 on coin of Maximinus 1196_0 on coins of Seleukeia Pieria 982_0 983_0 pours out lightning 34 silver 1010 f. 1014 with eight rays 630 with six rays 1200_2 (?)
Stars above Mt Argaios 980_0 above deities at Malthayiah 770_0 above Dioscuric

Stars (cont.)
amphorae 1064 above Dioscuric caps 313_2 313_4 313_6 574 f. 1062 above Dioskouroi 442 above imperial twins 443 above Romulus and Remus 443 f. 1014 above wolf 443 444_1 as golden tresses of Zeus 1028 as lamps hung by cords 158_1 at ends of diadem 1189 come down at night on Mt Olympos in Makedonia 905_0 congenital 1013_1 golden 1010 f. 1014 morning- and evening-, worshipped in Arabia 428 f. of children in 'Expulsion' tales 1014 of Zethos and Amphion 1014 on bronze plaque from Rome 664_1 shepherded by Attis 296 sons born with 1010 f. 1014
'Star,' stone called 270_5
Stark, J. B. 80_1
Stark, K. B. 380_4 380_5 445_2 675_4
Statue, evolution of 149 fallen from Zeus 963_0 first, set up by Assyrians 694_0 linked to ground by means of fillets 408_0 409_0 574 of Attalos iii, equestrian, in gold 955_0 of Dionysos discovered in a broken plane-tree 891_0 of Hera Κιθαιρωνία a lopped tree-trunk or bough 899_0 of one god dedicated to another 958_0 of the Virgin discovered on a tree 891_0 of the Virgin miraculously transported 891_0 of Zeus 'Ιθωμάτας discovered in a burnt wood 891_0 on column 45 ff. 57 ff. 93 ff. 100 ff. 428 f. 955_0 struck by lightning 9 f.
Steering-paddle 1185
Stein, H. 227_7 311_9
Stengel, P. 18_6 977_0 1058
Step, E. 470_5
Stephάne 654_{10}
Stephani, L. 147_1 201_1 232_0 252_1 261_1 262_5 262_8 265_4 302_2 315_3 380_5 410_0 460_2 462_0 464_6 540 645_4 658 660_1 $884_{0(0)}$ 951_0 1045 1075 1204
Stephanus, H. 664_3 862_2 1039
Stephens, G. 305_9
Sterrett, J. R. S. 857_6
Stevens, E. T. 511_1 512_1
Stevens, G. P. 597_2
Stevenson, S. W. 443_2 1172_0
Stiller, H. 1179_7
Stokes, G. T. $885_{0(28)}$ 1186_2
Stokes, J. L. 615_2
Stoll, H. W. 115_2 118_4 164_6 260_0 352_2 445_5 445_6 1018_3 1044 1088 $1114_{0(4)}$
Stolz, F. 1096_7 1178_1
Stone, persons turned into 1004 1005 1007 1009 1011 1016 1018 sacred, as altar with hollow for libations 983_0 sacred, in distyle temple 981_0 sacred, in shrine 982_0 sacred, in tetrastyle temple 983_0 white 989
Stones, precious 281_4 603 thumb-shaped, found in Crete known as Idaei dactyli 932_1
Storax as substitute for white-incense $492_{0(0)}$
Storax-trees at Eleuthernai $492_{0(0)}$ compared with poplar-trees $492_{0(0)}$ surmounted by birds $493_{0(0)}$ worshipped at Selge $492_{0(0)}$
Storax-wreath $492_{0(0)}$
Storks, land of 998 men transformed into 998 transformed into men 998 998_1
Storms portended by ravens, crows, and jackdaws 518_4 519_0 worshipped at Bathos 827
Strack, H. 195_1
Stranger viewed as a god on his travels 1096
Straub, A. 127_6 136_3
Streber, F. 706_5 1042
Strόbilos 1030
Strong, Mrs A. 93_3 94_3 96_3 98_{1-3} 99_4 103_0 106_0 106_1 355_5 361_5 1181_0 1225
Stróphion as priestly head-band 1171_1
Stroppus 1170
Struhe, C. 261_1 315_2
Struppi 1170 f.
Struve, J. T. 1152_5
Strzygowski, J. 107_3 863_1 1210_2
Stuart-Glennie, J. S. 990_7
Studniczka, F. 99_1 113_0 201_1 515_2
Subgrundarium 1059
Sudhaus, S. 1044
Sulphur 23
Sun as disk 724_0(?) as disk hung by cords 158_1 as egg 1035 as eye of Wodan 62_1(?) as eye of Zeus 117 1028 as golden child 1035 as golden ring 990 as radiate crown 81 as wheel 81 109_1 624 (?) 724_0 (?) 725_0 (?) 990 associated with lotos in Egypt 772 associated with lotos in India 774 golden, on breast of prince 1012_1 in diurnal hemisphere is called Apollon, in nocturnal hemisphere is called Dionysos 257 in relation to Milky Way 40_3 made of same substance as lightning 774 seen before sunrise 949_5
Sun-dial 920_0
Sun-god identified with emperor 321 f.
Sun-worship 618 (?) See also Index I Apollon, Helios, Sol
Supka, G. 712_3
Supplication, gesture of 1175
Surrogates for animal sacrifice 1140
Susemihl, F. 1020 1023
Svoronos, J. N. 45_1 56_2 167_4 182 183_4 $490_{0(5)}$ $491_{0(6)}$ 550_3 656_2 946_0 1078 1082 1105_4 1105_6 1107_5 1116_2 1136_4 1173_4 1211 1223
Swainson, C. 523_6 1131_2
Swallow, Philomela transformed into 693 thunderbolt with wings of 781
Swallows sing of Apollon 460
Swan, Eros clings to 1045 Kyknos, king of Liguria, transformed into 477 ff. of Mars (?) 51_1 on wing of Ahriman 1054 ridden by Apollon 460_2 Zeus transformed into 941_0

Swans at Delphoi 180 bring Apollon to (from) land of Hyperboreans 459 ff. 477 chariot drawn by 459 f. 460_2 on the Eridanos 477 solar 648_2 698
Swans' heads on axe-pendants 648 f. on helmet of Zeus 713 on Lycian coins 698
Swathing-bands of Zeus 929_0
Sweat of Herakles 469_1 of Kronos 558_0 of solar rays 499 of Solomon's pillars 428
Swindler, Miss M. H. 160_3 458_1 459
Swine of Molpadia and Parthenos 670 f. See also Pig, Sow
Sword left in tree 680 682 f. of Aigeus 627_6 of Apollon 570 f. of Ares 1225 of Attila 548_6 of Damokles 703 of Demeter 716_5 of Fin 683 of Ge Θέμις 268_0 of Kabeiros 953_3 of Kinyras 680 848 of light 722_1 of Mars 548_0 682_6 of Orestes 680 848 of Perseus 721_7 of St Peter 1199_5(?) of Poseidon 789 of Sandas 571 of Zeus 591 705 712 ff. 848 of Ziu 77
Sword-worship of Alani 548_0 of Bituriges 548_0(?) of Scythians 547_3 548_0
Sybel, L. von 1050 1168_4
Sykophántes, discussion as to origin of the term 291_2 1103
Symbol drawn from ritual usage lives long 868 evolved from fetish through attribute 617 814
Symbolism applied to Litai 1100_0
Syncretism as conceived by Celsus $889_{0(0)}$ of Attis with Adonis, Osiris, Dionysos, etc. 294 ff. of cave-gods 839 of Greek and oriental elements in Zeus Μειλίχιος 1110_6 1111_0 of Jewish and Greek cults $884_{0(0)}$ of Jewish and Persian beliefs $885_{0(28)}$ of Pontic, Greek, and Iranian elements in Zeus Στράτιος 976_0 f. of Zeus with Poseidon 796 ff. 850 of Zeus with Poseidon and Ares 1225 solar 252 ff.
Synoikismós 1123
Sýrinx See Pan-pipes
Szanto, E. 1095_0

Table, agonistic, at Ankyra $491_{0(0)}$ agonistic, at Delphoi $490_{0(5)}$ agonistic, at Philippopolis in Thrace $490_{0(5)}$ agonistic, at Tralleis $491_{0(0)}$ as altar (See Table-altar) invoked 728_0 of Zeus 1141_8 of Zeus Ξένιος 1169_5 of Zeus Σωτήρ 1169_4 of Zeus Φίλιος 1169 f. placed above sacred pillar 193_2 1216 sacred, of Greek church 1119_3
Tables of bronze 921_0 of marble 921_0
Table-altar at Chaironeia 547_2 in relief from Megara 1117_7 on Roman tomb-stone 60_0 on sarcophagus from Hagia Triada 517
Table-altars in Psychro Cave 926_0
Taboo on celery 987_0 on flute-playing 670 on food fallen upon floor 1129 on garlic 987_0 on hedýosmos 987_0 on iron 1165_1 on mint 987_0 on onions 986_0 on Taboo (cont.)
personal names 1114_0 on sheep's milk 987_0 on swine 671 on thunder 827 f. on twins and their mother 1014 on women 985_0 on woollen clothing 985_0
Tabula Iliaca 45_1 1068 1212
Talbot, H. Fox 480_3
Talisman, snake (soul of ancestral king) as 1148
Talismans and relics fallen from sky 963_0
Tamarisk compared with herba Sabina (βράθυ) 981_1 flourishes on the Maiandros 467 f.
Tannery, P. 1020
Taramelli, A. 141_4 142 142_2 925_1 934_0 935_0 943_0
Tascher, R. de 251_2
Tattooing as military mark 123_0 as ritual sign 123_0 in bronze age 122_0 in iron age 123_0 in neolithic times 122_0 1215 (?) in palaeolithic times 122_0 of Thracians 121 123_0 1214 f. of various other races (Agathyrsi, Aithiopes, Assyrioi, Britanni, Geloni, Getai, Harii, Iapodes, Illyrioi, Kylikranes, Mossynoikoi, Picti, Sarmatai, Scoti) 123_0
Taurobolium (tauropolium) 306_4 306_5
Tchihatcheff, P. de 977_1
Tears of Apollon (amber) 484 of Heliades (amber) 484 499_4 of Hera (vervain) 395_2 of Kronos (sea) 557_1 of meleagrides (amber) 497
Teeth of sheep 806
Temme, J. D. H. 93_1
Temple called palace (ἀνάκτορον) 311 dipteral, of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Athens 1229 double, of Zeus and Athena at Pergamon 955_0(?) elliptical, of Zeus Λαβράνιος at Amathous 598 f. heptastyle, of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Agrigentum 911_0 cp. 1227 hypaethral, of Erechtheus at Athens 789_7 850 hypaethral, of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Agrigentum 1227 octostyle, of Zeus at Aizanoi 965_0 octostyle, (of Zeus?) at Tralleis 961_0 octostyle, of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Athens 1229 pseudo-dipteral, of Zeus at Aizanoi 965_0 pseudo-peripteral, of Zeus Ὀλύμπιος at Agrigentum 911_0 round, at Prousa ad Olympum 964_2 the oldest surviving, of Zeus (the Olympieion at Syracuse) 915_2
Temple-estates at Aizanoi 968_0
Ten as a typical plurality 1210
Tent with cosmic roof 178_7
Tepekozis 992_2
Téras 31
Terebinth-trees on Mt Ide in Phrygia 949_5
Testicles of bull in taurobolium 306_4 of Dionysos 1021 of goat 133_0 of Kibuka 450_1 of Zeus 133_0 personified as Vires 306_4
Tet-pillar 141_2
Tetraktýs 178_1

Tettau, W. J. A. von 93_1
Texier, C. 966_0
Thalheim, T. $579_{0(16)}$
Theogonies of Akousilaos 315_4 of Hesiod 315 1039 of Pherekydes of Syros 315 f. Orphic 1019 ff. Orphic (earliest) 316 422_5 1020 ff. 1039 1050 f. Orphic (Hieronymos and Hellanikos) 349 422_5 1022 ff., 1039 1051 Orphic (Rhapsodies) 316 448_1 933_0 1024 ff. 1039 1051
Theologeîon 734_3
Theophilés 1168
Theriomorphic conceptions of Arcadian goddesses 691 f. (?) of Asklepios 1082 ff. of Oidipous 1151 ff. of soul 645 1047 1087 1111 f. 1132 1174 of thunder and lightning 828 of Zeus Κτήσιος 1061 of Zeus Μειλίχιος 1107 1112 1173 of Zeus Σαώτης 1151 (?) of Zeus Φίλιος 1173
Thásos of Agathos Daimon 925_0 1129_0 of Aphrodite 1157_3 of Athena 925_0 of Dionysos 925_0 1157_3 of δροιοφόροι 411_6 of Hermes 1157_3 τῶν Κισάων 246_1 of πρινοφόροι 411_6 Σεβαζιανός $879_{0(0)}$ $884_{0(0)}$ of Theos Hypsistos $885_{0(0)}$ of Zeus Ἀταβύριος 1157_3 of Zeus Λαβραΰνδος 585_3 of Zeus Μειλίχιος (Μιλίχιος) 1108 1157_3 of Zeus Ὕψιστος $882_{0(0)}$ See also Index I Agathodaimoniastai, Agathodaimonistai, Aphrodisiastai Syroi, Athanaïstai, Dionysiastai, Dionysiastai Eurythemidioi, Diosatabyriastai, Diosmilichiastai, Hermaïzontes
Thiele, G. 430_2 862 1025
Thiersch, F. 1133_0 1148_2
Thiersch, H. 895_0 937_0
Thigh, golden, of Pythagoras 223 ff.
Thigh-pieces 950_0 1188
Thistle 775_0
Thólos-tombs of Asklepios at Trikke (?) 1088 of Minyas at Orchomenos in Boiotia 1150 of Trophonios at Lebadeia (?) 1074 1076 1088
Thomopoulos, I. 404_2 560_1
Thompson, D'Arcy W. 275_5 519_0 524_3 676_3 691_2 692 751_2 781_1 998_1 1087 1131_2 1132_1
Thompson, H. B. 791_3
Thompson, M. S. 494_2 1088
Thompson, R. Campbell 482 f. 1219
Thoms, W. J. 703_2
Thomson, J. A. K. 458_5 691 f.
Thorns 1166_1 (?)
Thorn-trees venerated in Oise 403_0
Thraemer, E. 199_2 954_0 955_0 1076 f. 1078 1086 f. 1088 1090
Threatening of barren tree 681 f.
Three as a perfect number 1123_7 1124_0 as a typical plurality 893_0 gods of the name Zeus (Iupiter) distinguished 941_0 sacred trees on 'Minoan' gem 938_0
Three-bodied monster 805_6 1225
Three-eyed xóanon of Zeus at Argos 892_5 1144_2
Throne, golden 1016 of Agathos Daimon 1125_1 of Ananke 129_1 of Asklepios 1079 of Pelops 956_2 of Satan 955_0 of Wodan 62_1 of Zeus 94_2 735 737 838 1082 1122 1131 of Zeus Μειλίχιος (=emperor) 1092_8 rock-cut 838 956_2 962_2 with kneeling Giants on foreposts 812 with lions on foreposts 810 with sphinxes and rams' heads on arms 1082 1105
Throne-cult 893_2
Throne-legs 760_2
Thronismós (Thrónosis) 120_2 940_0 cp. 838
Thulin, C. O. 338_3 339_0 641_3 725_0 805 827_6
Thumb, A. 413_1 723_0 1069 f. 1096_1
Thunder as chariot of Zeus 830 as horse of Zeus 830 as inarticulate sound proceeding from Zeus 851 as music 839_6 as sound caused by chariot of Zeus 830 ff. 851 as sound uttered by Zeus 829 as voice of God 829 chthoniau 641 805_6 829 838 common on Phrygian uplands 835 granted to epic heroes 8 in relation to Zeus 827 ff. made by green winged horse 1003 1017 made by heavy bronze hammers (mallei Ioviales) 620 mimetic 838 f. 852 934_0 938_0 personified 28 828 851
Thunders worshipped at Bathos 827 worshipped by Orphists 141_1 827
Thunderbolt as boy with torch (?) 784_2 as lotos-bud plus lotos-bud 776 cp. 746_2 as lotos-flower 771 cp. 774 as lotos-flower plus lotos-bud 776 as lotos-flower plus lotos-flower 776 as scourge 824 ff. as small male figure 784 bound with fillet and resting on stool 809 850 cp. 810 from the blue 6_5 from the eyes of Zeus 503 gradual elimination of 722 ff. 848 held by Zeus Ὅρκιος in either hand 722 726 f. 848 f. made of gold 809 810 modifications in shape of 764 ff. 849 f. of Zeus 722 ff. of Zeus in relation to fork (?) of Hades 798 ff. 850 of Zeus in relation to trident of Poseidon 786 ff. 850 of Ziu 75_1 (?) 76 on coins of Olympia 780 f. on sandal 1227 resting on stool 809 810 850 resting on tripod 816_4 serpentiform 781 set upright on throne 810 851 shaped like fly 781 spiral 751 849 'star-flung' 119_1 tridentiform 789 twisted $819_{0(5)}$ winged 777 779 1187_4 winged, with human bust attached 1054 with barbed prongs 784 f. with wings furled 781 with wings half-closed 781 with wings spread 780 f. worshipped at Diokaisareia in Kilikia 810 worshipped at Seleukeia Pieria 809
Thunder-drum (?) of Ziu 83
Thunder-flowers 774_4 775_0 850
Thunder-stone used in purification 835
Thunderstorm as repetition of Titanomachy 827_7 evoked by divine king 8
Thunder-truffles 775_0
Thymiatérion 407_0 630

Thýrsos 154_0 261 ff. 461_0 1128_0 surmounted by eagle 1178
Tiara 386
Tiger as form of Dionysos or Zagreus 1030 in folk-tale from Kypros 996
Tigers, kratér flanked by 699_4 (?)
Tillyard, E. M. W. 299_5
Tillyard, H. J. W. 322_6
Timbrel 262 299 300 306_5 852 eating food from, significance of 345_6 made of bull's hide 345_6 made of wolf's skin 345_6 See also Týmpanon
Titanomachy 827_7
Titmouse 463_1
Tocilescu, G. G. 112_1
Tod, M. N. 101_1
Toelken, E. H. 321
Töpffer, J. 130_2 251_0 730_0 817_0 1092_3 1103_4 1123
Toeppen, M. 92_3
Tolstoï, J. 639_1
Tomaschek, W. 251_0 270_4 276_7 276_9 276_{10} 277_1 458_1 822
Tomassetti, G. 419 f. 420_1
Tomb of Apollon 221 225 of Dionysos 218 ff. 231 239 841 of the Great Ox called Zeus 342_0 345 354 of Pikos ὁ καὶ Ζεύς 342_0 694_0 695_0 697_0 943_0 of Zan 341_6 345 354 940_0 942_0 945_0 of Zeus 219 341_6 354 940_0 ff.
Tomb-chapel 521
Tombstones, Danish, marked with Thor's hammer 547_0 Gallic, dedicated sub ascia 547_0 Phrygian, dedicated to Zeus Βροντῶν 836 Roman, with duplicated Attis 308 Termessian, protected by Zeus Σολυμεύς 973_1
Tongs 660_0 667 1054
Tops 1030
Torch between corn-ears 1158_8 bound to Diana-pillar 153_0 154_0 cp. 152_0 bound to horns of wild bull 1015 of Artemis 412 $882_{0(0)}$ 1214 (?) of Dionysos $882_{0(0)}$ (?) of Eros 309 of Etruscan demon 803 of Hekate 714_2 $882_{0(0)}$ (?) of Helios 478 of Iuno 59 of Persephone $882_{0(0)}$ (?) of Thracian goddess 820 (?) thrust into solar wheel 990
Torches bound to Diana-pillar 152_0 in rites of Mountain-mother 934_0 in rites of Sarapis 1158 of Apate 854 of Artemis 187_4 (?) $488_{0(3)}$ (?) of Demeter $488_{0(3)}$ (?) of Hekate 146_3 (?) 187_4 (?) of Kore 1117_7 of Maenad 265 on altar of Mater deum and Attis 306_2
Torch-bearing females 146 maiden 187_4 1229
Torch-holders 930_0
Torii 431_3
Torp, A. 279_0 570_0
Torques 377
Torr, C. 923_0
Tortoise beneath foot of Aphrodite Οὐρανία 68_1 beneath foot of Venus 68_1 in hand of Zeus 895_1
Totenmahl See Hero-feast
Tournaire, A. 195_1
Toutain, J. 371 554_3 555_0 712_1 925_1 926_0 929_0
Tower of Kronos 36 52 of Zan 178 spiral 128 1146_0 stepped 128 1146_0
Toy, C. H. 1039
Toys of Dionysos or Zagreus 1030
Tozer, H. F. 905_0 923_0 977_1 f.
Traquair, R. 1214
'Travelling clairvoyance' 206_0 (?)
Tree as graffito on chalice of Antioch (?) 1200_3 as token of earth-goddess 677 848 barren, threatened 681 f. belongs primarily to earth-goddess, secondarily to sky-god associated with her 533 conventionalised into pillar 157_1 decked as maiden, mourned, and burnt in rites of Persephone 303_2 identified with goddess (Diana) 403_1 loved by C. Passienus Crispus 403_1 Music- 1012_1 sacred, associated with double axe 643 sacred, associated with double axe and bird 692 sacred, at Austa, felled by St Walarieus 92_2 sacred, at Divlit near Koloë 975_0 sacred, at Romove 92_3 sacred, attacked by men with double axes 680 f. sacred, on bronze tablet from Psychro Cave 927_0 sacred, sheds blood 684 sacred, with female image in branches 680 f. Singing- 1012_1 supporting earth 56_2 supporting sky 56 166 three brothers spend night in 997
Trees as life-tokens 1165_1 list of lucky 403_0 sacred, beside altar of Zeus Στράτιος 975_0 f. sacred, three on gem from Idaean Cave 938_0
'Tree-of-life' flanked by lions 930_0 with serpent in it 138_0
Tree-spirit regularly female, as being a vegetable form of the earth-mother 303_2 with male consort to represent the sky-father 303_2
Tree-trunk as effigy of Iupiter 109 as handle of double axe 517 f. 520 f. 528
Tree-worship in Oise 403_0
Tresp, A. 1056
Trevor-Battye, A. 939_0 939_1 945_2 946_0
Triad of sacred trees 927_0 (?) 938_0 of Zeuses $878_{0(3)}$ (?) 1093_1
Trident assimilated to thunderbolt 797 combined with double axe 577 cp. 532_1 convertible into bident 1225 four-pronged 788_0 lotiform 786 ff. of Apollon 570 f. of Çiva 790 f. of Iupiter Iutor 850 of Nereus 788_0 of Poseidon as fish-spear 786 790 f. 850 of Poseidon as lightning-fork 31_8 789 ff. 850 of Poseidon as symbol of rule over third part of world (?) 786 of Poseidon in relation to thunderbolt of Zeus 786 ff. 850 of Zeus 577 with dolphin coiled about it 981_0 1071
Tridents, iron, worshipped in India 790 792

Trident-mark of Poseidon on Akropolis at Athens 789 792 ff.
Trieber, C. 696_0
Trieteris, Cretan (?) 934_0 Delphic 242 Dionysiac 242 f. prior to oktaeteris 242 f.
Trimmatos 995_2 996
Triplication of Greek oaths 730_0
Tripod as celestial seat 204 as seat of Apollon 201 ff. as seat of the Pythia 206_2 209_2 213 841 as seat of Themis 205 f. 1217 as tomb of Apollon 221 225 Cirrhaean 214_1 composed of three lyres 660_0 dance round, at Delphoi 460 dedicated on pillar 199 Delphic 193 ff. 841 Delphic, containing divinatory pebbles 221 Delphic, containing Python's bones and teeth 221 Delphic, covered with Python's skin 221 Delphic, identified with Titanic caldron 1031 evolution of columnar 193 ff. 1216 in relation to Zeus 1216 made of plaster in shrine at Knossos 535 made of plastered earthenware in shrine at Gournia 538 of Dionysos 231 oracular, at Delphoi 677 Plataean 170_2 193 ff. 1216 sacred, brought from Delphoi to Athens 816 f. stolen, wrapped in cloaks, and sent yearly by Boeotians to Delphoi 216 surmounted by thunderbolt 816_4 winged 205_1 with central stem 193 ff. with golden effigies of Asklepios, Hygieia, Telesphoros 1078
Tripods, votive, from Palaikastro 930_0
Tripod-carrying 216_4 816 f.
Trisula 790 790_2 790_3
Triton-shells 528 See also Shell-trumpet
Triumphal arch See Arch, triumphal
Trinmphing general as embodiment of sky-god 361
Trophy 108 ff. as image of Zeus 109 111_0 as prototype of La Turbie 109 ff. as prototype of the monument at Adamklissi 109 ff. from spoils of 'Marathon' at Delphoi 1137_2 of Gallic arms 110_8 112_6 on coins of Licinius and his son 1195_2
Tropby-cross See Trophy-stand
Trophy-stand 572_{10} 601 f. 613
Tsountas, Ch. 49_1 123_0 539_2 621_2 622_2 1061
Tuchmann, J. 702_3
Tucker, T. G. 1072
Tümpel, K. 260_0 691_5 892_4 957_2 1102_4 1148_6 1150_5
Türk 451_1 500_9 500_{11}
Tunny in relation to Poseidon 786
Turnips in relation to Zeus (?) 260_0
Turtle, the Snapping, and Slingsby 1151
Tutulus 1170_8
Twins as children of the sky 434 f. at Delos 452 bearded and beardless 451 in Africa 378 434 f. 1064 in relation to Zeus 422 ff. 843 in Roman historical tradition 440 ff. list of mythical 317 843 male and female 451 843 names of 1072 (?) produced from twofold sky 422
Twins (cont.)
843 represented by Janiform statues (?) 378 strong and weak, in Indo-European saga 447 451 f. 843
Tylor, E. B. 37 f. 88_3 293_1 546_0 702_8 829_3
Týmpanon in bronze from Idaean Cave 938_0 939_0 of Agdistis 1229 See also Timbrel
Tyrwhitt, R. St J. 1173_2
Tzitzinaina 1003 f. 1016 1018

Ullmann, C. $885_{0(29)}$
Ulrichs, H. N. $875_{1(1)}$ $876_{1(1)}$ 898_5 901_3 902_0
Umbilical cord buried in modern Greece etc. 191 f. See also Omphalós
Underworld conceived as feet of Zeus 1028 entrance to, at Eridu 483 exit from, on Mt Laphystion in Boiotia 899_1 exit from, at Lerna 1022 Leuke carried off to 468 f. Parmenides' visit to 43_1 (?) Timarchos' visit to 1024 white-poplar on border of 471
Unger, F. W. 106_2 107_3
Unger, G. F. 242_4 315_2
Unger, R. 970_0
Unshod feet 922_0
Ure, P. N. 699_5
Urlichs, K. L. von 405_2 598_1
Urn, agonistic $490_{0(5)}$ $491_{0(0)}$ 562 964_2 of river-god 478 1083 upset 478 with reed symbolises water 1050 1083
Urquhart, D. 905_0
Ursinus, Fulvius 856_2 857_5
Usener, H. 12_3 13_1 23 31 32_7 92_3 93_2 189 280 344 363_8 397_0 445 445_1 451_1 $488_{0(0)}$ 729_0 730_0 751_2 779 789 793 793_{10} 805 $807_{3(1)}$ $807_{5(6)}$ 810 827_1 851 855_1 858_1 892_4 1013 1071 f. 1074 1122_3 1122_8 1142_{11} 1160
Ushabti 1218

Vaillant, J. F. 429_5
Valckenaer, L. C. 294_0 895_1
Vaníček, A. 1037 1098_6
Vases: amphorae of Dioskouroi 1062 ff. anthropoid 1056 'Apulian' 45 203_0 244_4 245_5 246_0 416 f. 777 780_1 852 ff. 1019_2 1124_0 1159_1 'Arretine' mould 473 ff. Attico-Ionian 712 f. 716 black-figured 123_0 212_3 379 381 435 627_6 645_4 661 710_1 745_0 753_3 776 776_3 785 788_0 794_0 799 896_0 903_2 929_0 black ware with reliefs 720 1129_0 'Caeretan' hydriai 770 'Campanian' 45 734_3 'Chalcidian' 731 771 Corinthian 896_0 'Dareios'-vase 852 ff. 'Dipylon' 1056 1064 Early 'Minoan' 934_0 'François'-vase 451_1 $831_{1(3)}$ 'Geometric' with incised inscriptions 1226 Ionian 123_0 770 f. 788_0 849 'Kamares'-ware 926_0 (See also Middle 'Minoan' ii) Late 'Minoan' 190_0 Late 'Minoan' i 527 637_6 654_5 934_0 (?) 'Laconian' iv 745_0 757 loutrophóroi 1056 1058 'Lucanian' 203_0 721_7 'Megarian' 903_2 Melian 453_3

Vases (cont.)
Middle 'Minoan' i 934_0 943_0 Middle 'Minoan' ii 926_0 934_0 943_0 Middle 'Minoan' iii 934_0 943_0 'Mycenaean' from Kypros 538 f. native ware from Apulia 541 ff. neolithic 934_0 of bronze 921_0 pithoi 1056 prothesis-vases 1056 ff. Ptolemaic (blue porcelain) 157_0 1216 red-figured 122_0 197_1 202_1 205_1 206_1 206_2 212_0 212_4 244_4 245_0 245_5 246_0 248_0 258 261 ff. 379 f. 435 460_2 627 627_6 661 718 731 ff. 745_0 753_3 776_3 777 777_2 785_3 800 804_0 $831_{1(3)}$ 896_0 902_2 1017_4 1044 1077 1140_5 1154 1155_9 1155_{10} 1167 1223 1225 relation between obverse and reverse designs 261_3 relief-ware from Athens 1129_0 relief-ware from Capua 720 relief-ware from Egypt 157_0 1216 relief-ware from Karia 615 relief-ware from Nola 718 ff. relief-ware from Pergamon 157_0 relief-ware from Rhodes 614 f. rhytá 1216 rhytón 190_0 (lioness) 347_0 (goat) 1060 (goat) 1075 (bull) Tanagra-ware 123_0 terra sigillata 718 ff. 720 1205 Trojan 1056 with white ground 121_3
Vegetation animated by souls of the dead 1172 vernal rites to revive 521
Veils over face of giant 994
Venables, E. 602_1 604_4 607
Verbena, 'vervain' 397_0 398_0
Verbenae, 'sacred plants' 1170
Verrall, A. W. 237_0 345_5
Versace, F. 1071
Vervain 395_2 called Διὸς ἡλακάτη 396_0 397_0 775_0 compared with oak 395_2 396_0 described by Dioskorides 395_2 described by Pliny 395_2 used to sweep Iupiter's table 395_2 397_0
Viergötterstein 57 ff. 89 93 ff.
Vigfusson, G. 533_2
Vigouroux, F. 426_5 427_2
Vine, golden 281_4 1184_3 1217 in myth of Ganymedes 281_4 in myth of Priamos 281_4 in myth of Telephos 281_4 1184_3 in myth of Tithonos 281_4 in relief of Asdoules 270_3 lucky 403_0 of Rhea (?) 515 on altars of Zeus Βροντῶν 836 on gold ring from Mykenai 515 (?) on tombstones from Altyntash 836 white 612 with double stem 1199 1205
Vines gradually stylised 1205 on Christian sarcophagi 1050
Vine-branch of Dionysos 1133_1
Vine-leaves on columns as Syrian motif 73_0 on Jupiter-columns 71 on skýphos of open-work silver 1204
Vine-scroll in Catacomb of Praetextatus 1206 on Roman mirror 1205_6 on terra sigillata 1205_4
Vine-staff of Zeus Αἰτναῖος 909_0
Vine-tendrils on skýphos of open-work lead 1204
Vine-wood used for face of Dionysos Βακχεύς 1093_0
Vine-wreath of Hera at Argos 515 on 'Apulian' vase 1124_0 on Rhodian coins (?) 470_0
Vinet, E. 868_4
Vintage in relief of Asdoules 270_3 of Erotes 1050 on 'Arretine' ware 476_1
Violets in myth of Attis 970_0 in rites of Attis 303_2
Virginity of Pythia 209_3 pleasing to Artemis 1029
Vischer, W. 814_0
Visconti, C. L. 147_5 297_1 297_3 297_5 298_3 299_3 400_{11}
Visconti, E. Q. 301_2 388_3 802
Visick, C. H. C. 648_1
Visser, M. W. de 147_1 160_3 981_0 1132_6
Vitet, E. 379_3 380_0 380_4 380_2
Vogüé, C. J. M. de $885_{0(29)}$ $886_{0(0)}$
Voigt, F. A. 238_3 268_3
Voigt, J. 93_1
Vollgraff, C. W. 173_4 243_3 455_6 477_0 599 1218 1226
Vopel, H. 606_1
Voretzsch, H. 723_0 946_0
Voss, I. 665_0
Votive offerings affixed to pillar 143 146 149 152_0 153_0 154_0 157_0 hung from bough 157_1 hung on wall 1077 lying on altar 154_0 magnify the god 46_3 repeat the pattern of local chose sacrée 198 f.
Vowels used in incantation 612_1
Vürtheim, J. 232_4 1075
Vulture in myth of Melampous 684 in myth of Periphas 1122
Vultures in myth of Romulus and Remus 440_5

Wace, A. J. B. 101_1 142_1 494_3 758_0 1088 1214 1221
Wachsmuth, C. 855_1 856_2 857_5 858_4
Wackermann, G. 1170_5
Wada, T. 431_3
Waddington, W. H. 580_4 707_{2-5} 975_0
Waele, F. J. M. de 1222
Wagener, A. 285_0
Wagler, P. 93_1 110_9 411_1
Wagner, E. 77_0 79_3 80_2
Wagner, J. M. 152_0
Wagner, R. 272_5
Waites, Miss M. C. 1159_1
Walde, A. 340_2 341_0 404_2 421_8 631_0 631_1 724_0 947_0 1173_1
Waldmann, F. 493_2
Waldstein, Sir C. See Walston, Sir C.
Waller, J. G. 136_4
Wallis, G. H. 392_8 392_9 393_6
Walnut called 'acorn of Iupiter' (iuglans) 775_0
Walnut-trees venerated in Oise 403_0
Walston (Waldstein), Sir C. 893_2 1136_0
Walters, H. B. 157_0 367_1 461_0 473_1 475_5 476_1 542_2 543_1 649_4 712_2 713_1 746_2 752_6 753_1 786 f. $831_{1(3)}$ 831_1
Wand, golden, in folk-tales 990 992 994_4
Ward, W. H. 161_6 546_0 765_1 767_1

Waser, O. 99_1 309_3 315_3 504_4 641_2 642_0 645_4 803 1025 1045 f. 1050 1087 1160_5
Water as gift to the dead 977_0 1056 1058 as primal element 1021 1022 as seminal fluid of deity 306_4 Dancing 1008 f. 1010 f. 1016 healing 115 in Indian cosmogony 1035 f. 1039 of immortality 1004 of life 1005 1012_1 salt, appears far inland at Athens, Mantineia, and Mylasa 581 salt, changes its nature 581 salt, in relation to Zeus 581 ff. 616_1 symbolised by reed and urn 1050 1083
Water-divinities 393 f. (?) 399 (?) See also River-god
Waterhouse, C. O. 124_2
Water-mint, aphrodisiac properties of 1165_1 1166_0 at Greek weddings 1164
Water-snake 833_0 See also Index I Hydra
Watkins, W. A. 1205
Waxen man in charm to secure wealth 1127_0
Weapon-worship 544 ff. 548_1 1132_6
Weather in relation to Zeus 1 ff. 840
Weather-forecasts 482
Weaving in Chinese myth 66_0 479_{10} in relation to Athena 66_0 1029 in relation to Minerva 66_0
Weber, Sir H. 657
Weber, O. 482_7
Weber, S. 1050
Weber, W. 986_0
Wedd, N. 1178_8
Week, days of the 69 ff.
Weicker, G. 721_1 782_1 1150_2
Weil, H. 12 243_3
Weil, R. 759_1
Weinreich, O. 1085 1228
Weizsäcker, P. 437_6 625_8 1123
Welcker, F. G. 160_3 164_8 315_1 315_2 350_4 383_7 498 693_1 697_2 706_5 786 800 802 802_7 868_8 $877_{0(0)}$ $878_{0(3)}$ 954_0 1069 1072 1087 1131_2
Well, holy, associated with holy tree 88 in garden of Zens 1119 of St Michael 115 See also Fountain, Spring, Water
Wellmann, M. 230_1 447_7 782_1 1122_3
Wells, J. 311_9 436_8 455_1
Weltenmantel 1137_0
Welter, G. 1229 f.
Wendling, E. 76_1
Weniger, L. 238_1 242_8 262_8 466 928_0 1151_7
Wentzel, G. 160_3 $872_{0(5)}$ 1122_2
Were-wolves 414_2
Wernicke, K. 102_9 115_2 160_3 212_3 241_2 264_2 264_3 380_2 410_1 453 484_5 486_3 501 630_2 692_1 744_3 752 753_2 786_0 $878_{0(5)}$ 1070 1088 1098_6 1100_1 1125_1
Wessely, C. 410_9
West, E. W. 1036
Whatmough, J. 331_0 342_0 444_9 1220 1226
Wheat mixed with honey to make pyramides 1162 mixed with honey and sesame to make élaphos 1140_4 offered to Apollon Γενέτωρ 223_3
Wheaten flour 1140_4 See also Meal
Wheaten straw used in sacrifice by women of Thrace and Paionia 500 f. wrapped round Hyperborean offerings 497 498_8
Wheel as Corallian standard 108 as solar emblem in bronze and iron ages 109_1 magical 1030 of Fortuna 57_6 of Iupiter 57_6 of Kairos 863_1 of Mars 57_6 of Nemesis 1095_0 of personification of the Course 479 of Phaethon's car 473 of Ziu 77 f. solar 109_1 473 624 (?) 990
Wheels of bronze dedicated to Semo Sancus (Sangus) 724_0 winged 866
Wheeler, J. R. 597_2
Whip, Corcyraean, at Dodona 826 of Archigallus 300 f. of Eros 1048 of Kairos 863_1 of Zeus 260_0 824 ff. 851 strung with knuckle-bones 300
Whisper of worshipper heroified or deified as Psithyros 1044
White garments worn in precinct on Mt Kynthos 922_0 ladder in dream of Brother Leo 1215 ox sacrificed to Zeus Κτήσιος 1065 1067 stone in folk-tale of Kyklops 989 victims sacrificed to Zeus Ἀκραῖος $871_{3(1)}$
White, H. G. Evelyn 1154_4 1211 f.
Whitehouse, O. C. 426_5
White-poplar as substitute for storax $492_{0(0)}$ brought by Herakles from Acheron 469 brought by Herakles from Thesprotia 467 843 grows beside Acheron 467 ff. in land of Chalybes 472 in Elysian fields 469 in story of Astraios 230 names of, in Greek, Latin, and English 471_1 sacred to Hades 471 sacred to Helios 469 470_0 sacred to Herakles 469 symbolism of 469_1 471 the finest tree in modern Greece 470 turns its leaves at solstice 470_0 used at Olympia for sacrifice to Pelops 471 used at Olympia for sacrifice to Zeus 467 cp. 471 wreath of, in rites of chthonian Dionysos 471 wreath of, worn by victors at Athens and in Kos 470 wreath of, worn by victors in Rhodes 469
Whittaker, E. T. 1017_4
Wick, F. C. 124_4
Wickhoff, F. 1050 1181_0
Wide, S. 123_0 413_3 692 693_3 891_0 1069 1102_0 1218
Wiedemann, A. 544_3
Wiedemann, O. 570_0
Wiegand, T. 757_1
Wiener, L. 79_1
Wieseler, F. 23_7 102_0 124_1 161_2 195_1 197_1 221_5 372_3 372_4 476_{12} 478_3 478_4 $491_{0(6)}$ 717_2 744_3 802_8 802_{10}
Wieten, J. H. 118_2 118_3 119_0 119_1 120_3
Wilamowitz-Moellendorff, U. von 249_2 296_4 385_0 451_1 453 455 ff. 476_{12} 496_0 627_1 641_2 854_2 856_2 856_3 857_1 857_2 857_4 857_8 858_{1-3} $873_{0(11)}$ $878_{0(8)}$ 899_1
Wilcken, U. 987_0

Wild Hunt compared with myth of Phaethon 483 f. compared with Platonic myth 63_0 led by Wodan 62_1 69
Wild-olive a southern plant 466 501 in land of Hyperboreoi (?) 466 at Olympia 466 f. on the Saronic Gulf 466 at Troizen 466 in myth of Herakles 466 f. 501 in myth of Hippolytos 415 f. wreath of, worn by Antiochos iv Epiphanes 1189 wreath of, worn by victors at Olympia $490_{0(5)}$
Wilhelm, A. 115_3 411 561_9 646_4 $880_{0(19)}$ 900_0
Wilisch, E. 721_1
Wilkinson, Sir J. G. 622_3
Williams, Blanche E. 538_2
Willow-tree at Gortyna 946_0 at Phaistos 946_0 947_0 fruit-bearing, in mouth of Idaean Cave 932_1 in folk-song from Epeiros 829 turns its leaves at solstice 470_0
Willow-trees in woods of Persephone 472
Will-power in relation to magic 1042 f.
Willson, St J. B. Wynne 503_2
Wilpert, J. 1207
Wilson, C. T. R. 779
Wilson, Sir C. W. $888_{0(0)}$
Winckelmann, J. J. 319 405_3 798_2 838_8
Wind, primeval 1039
Winds worshipped by Orphists 141_1 827 See also Index I Venti
Wind-egg laid by Nyx 1039
Window in eastern sky 62_1
Windows in temple of Zeus at Labranda 590
Wine as offering to the dead 1056 as offering to Jupiter Dapalis 1172_4 as recent invention 670 offerings without 1097_2 poured on pyre of Zeus Σπράτιος 974_1 977_0 unmixed, drunk in name of Agathos Daimon 1125 1129_0
Wine-jar as boat of Eros 1047
Winged cap of Hermes 388 718 of Mercurius 70_1 (?) of Perseus 718
Wings, archaistic 862 black 1020 1050 deities with four 544 552 f. deities with six 552 golden 1020 1050 hung up like weapons 719 of Ahriman 1053 f. of Boreas 380 of Chronos 1022 of Dionysos 388 of Eros 1020 1039 ff. of Kairos 859 ff. 863_1 (?) of Kalaïs 444 of Kronos 552 f. of Nyx 1020 1050 of Phanes 1051 of Psyche 1050 of words 1039 of Zetes 444 of Zeus 1028 on cap or hat 70_1 (?) 388 718 on head 388 on shoulders and heels of axe-bearing sky-god (?) 544 See also Caduceus, Sandals, Thunderbolt, Wheels and Index I Gorgones, Harpyiai, Iris, Nike, Pegasos, etc.
Winnefeld, H. 739_3 739_4
Wissowa, G. 13_1 30_2 46_0 99_3 99_4 100_1 328_5 339_5 339_6 352_2 353_6 365_1 404_1 554_3 555_0 643_3 724_0 726_0 805_8 $808_{0(17)}$ 1059 1170_5 1172_0 1173_1 1226
Witches cause death of two Jewish maidens (?) $880_{0(19)}$ hold 'Sabbaths' on the four cross-quarter days 326 of southern France worship Janiform devil 326 organisation of, in western Europe 326_2 1218
Witte, J. de 69_5 287_0 733_3 734_0 785_2 1042
Wochengötterstein 69 ff. 89 1213
Wölfflin, H. 359_1
Woeste, F. 643_7
Wolf as emblem of river Lykos 572_2 (?) bites feet of dancers 138_0 called δάος in Phrygia 312_5 statue of, at Rome 46 suckles Romulus and Remus 46 443 f. 1016 worshipped as Δάος (?) 312_5 worshipped as Λυκ(άβας?) Σώζων 312_5 worshipped at Lykon polis 987_0
Wolves on Mt Parnassos 901_2 902_0 on Mt Pelion 870_0 See also Were-wolves Wolf, F. A. 353_1
Wolf, J. W. 482_5
Wolf's head on belt-hooks 432_3 on sacrificial axe 632
Wolf-serpents Hati and Skǫll 305_0
Wolters, P. 122_0 199_2 212_0 393_2 469_2 538_5 862_0 865_2
Women excluded from cult of Theos Megas, Zeus Κάσιος, and Tachnepsis 985_0 excluded from Mithraic rites 1053 excluded from race founded by Amphissos in honour of Dryope 486 slide down rock to obtain children 1114
Wood for sacrifice to Pelops obtained from 'woodman' of Zeus 471 for sacrifice to Zeus Σπράτιος carried by kings of Pontos 974_1
Wood, J. T. 592 594
Woodcock 1087
Woodpecker as form of Cretan Zeus 524 as god in Italy 696_0 as king in Italy 696_0 black 518_3 (?) compared with hoopoe 692 1131_2 compared with jay 523 f. in Mesopotamia 696_0 in north Africa 697_0 names of 692_9 693_3 696_0 697_0 on pillar 1133_1 1230 tends Romulus and Remus 1016 See further Index I Picus, Pikos who is also Zeus
Woodward, A. M. 496_0
Woodwork from Kasion in Egypt 984_4
Wool, bosom of Attis covered with 970_0 white, prophylactio wreathing with 1056 1058
Woollen clothing, taboo on 985_0 effigies of Lares 1171_2 feet of the gods 1171_2
Woolley, C. L. 1197_8 1198_0
Words conceived as having wings 1039
World conceived as Zeus 1028 f. created by Phanes and re-created by Zeus 1033 egg-shaped and originally an egg 1033 1035 figured by Egyptians as circle of air and fire with hawk-headed snake (Kneph) across it 1127_0 worshipped by Orphists 141_1 827
World-empires, relation of four 696_0
World-pillar See Sky-pillar

World-tree in Eridu 483 (?) in France, Germany, etc. 88_3 at Rome 365_4 (?)
Worsaae, J. J. A. 618_1
Worshippers akin to their god (Zeus Πατρῷος) 950_0
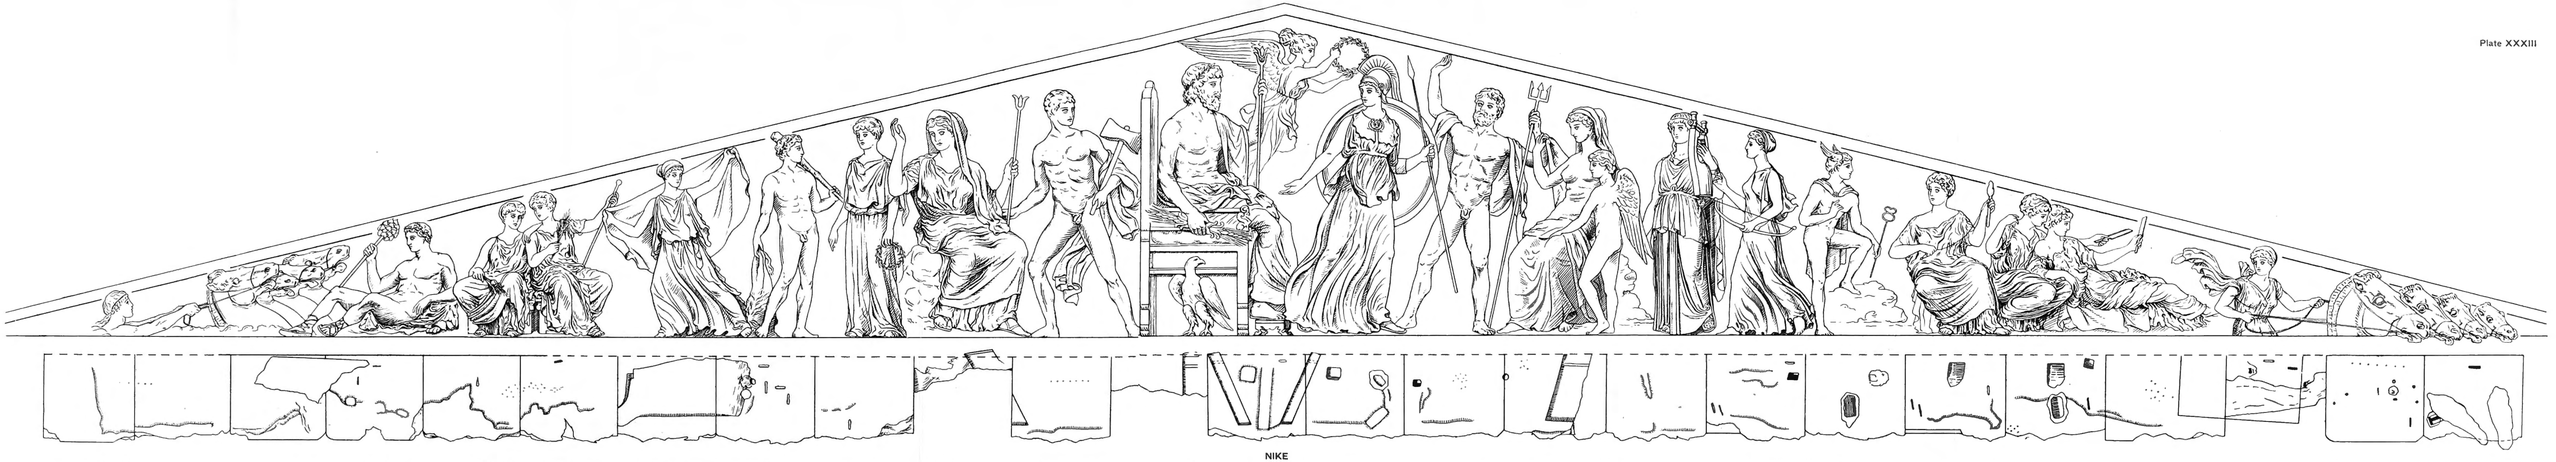
Wreath of bay 244 266 388 390 597_3 714_2 751_2 756_1 924_0 1187_4 1192 f. 1223 of corn 370 of fir 949_5 of flowers 405 407_0 of ivy 388 390 909_0 of lilies 740 of oak 348 388 411_6 412 417_5 763_1 951_0 1187_4 of olive 323_1 1029 of pine 951_0 of poplar 388_8 of sēlinon (?) 1187_0 of thorns (?) and acorns 1166_1 of vine-shoots 515 of white-poplar 469 ff. of wild-olive $490_{0(5)}$
Wroth, W. 16_1 $491_{0(0)}$ $491_{0(6)}$ 572_5 662 706_1 742_7 809_7 961_0 978_0 983_0 1042 1079 1089
Wünsch, R. 504_3 512 512_2 540
Wulff, O. 627_3 627_4
Wundt, W. 504 f. 1039 1087

Xanthoudides, S. A. 623_4 637 931_0
Xenelasía 1101_3
Xóanon 1196_2 made of lucky tree stripped of its bark 1172_2 of Zeus Φίλιος at Antiocheia on the Orontes 1196

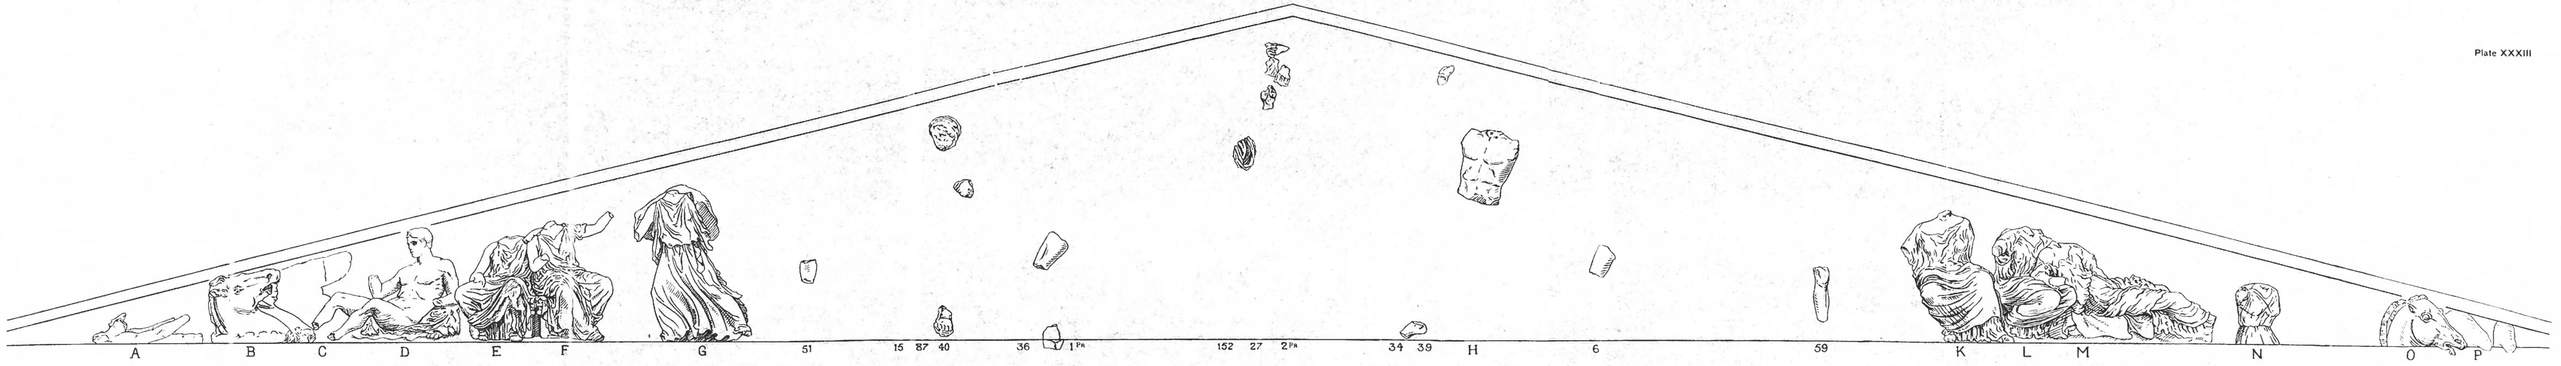
Year, Celtic, from May to November 326_4 (ἐνιαυτός) formerly of eight years' (ἔτη) duration 241_2 Zeus nurtured in Dictaean Cave for a 928_0 See also Priesthood, annual tenure of and Index I New Year's Day
Yellow in Ophite diagram 611_2 stuff (?), prophylactic wreathing with 1056 1058
Yoke as symbol of Ianus Quirinus (?) 364_1 rite of passing under 359_6 364
Yorke, V. W. 827_2

Zakóros 921_0 922_0
Zander, C. M. $329_{0(5)}$ 337_4
Zangemeister, C. 813_2
Zeller, E. 855_2 1023 1024
Ziebarth, E. 727_3 729_0 730_0 $881_{0(2I)}$ $882_{0(0)}$
Ziehen, J. 1088
Ziehen, L. 18_8 1066
Zielinski, T. 453
Zigzags 639 641 847
Zikkurat 128 142_2
Zimmermann, A. 1159_1
Zimmern, H. 510_5
Zingerle, J. 94_3
Zinzow, A. 1045
Zodiac 1051 1053
Zoeckler, O. 607_4
Zoega, G. 160_0 164_2
Zoïstic conception of burning sky 11 f. of day-light sky 840 of sky 1 of thunderbolt 11 ff. 807 814
Zoögony, Egyptian 1023 See also Anthropogony, Cosmogony, Theogonies
Zvetaieff, J. 118_3

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN
BY W. LEWIS AT THE
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

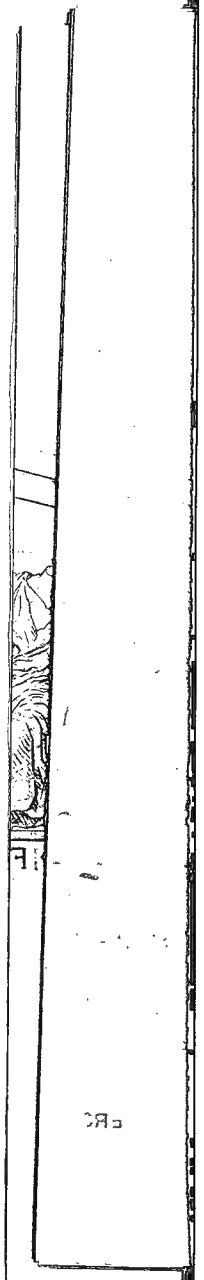


The Eastern Pediment of the Parthenon (Restored)



The Eastern Pediment of the Parthenon (Existing Fragments)

BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY
31197 11972 4331



ZEUS

A STUDY IN ANCIENT RELIGION

VOLUME III

PART I

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
LONDON: BENTLEY HOUSE
NEW YORK, TORONTO, BOMBAY
CALCUTTA, MADRAS: MACMILLAN
TOKYO: MARUZEN COMPANY LTD

All rights reserved

292.
C77
v.3
pt.1

ZEUS

A STUDY IN ANCIENT RELIGION

BY

ARTHUR BERNARD COOK, LITT.D.

VICE-PRESIDENT OF QUEENS' COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE
EMERITUS PROFESSOR OF CLASSICAL ARCHAEOLOGY

VOLUME III

ZEUS GOD OF THE DARK SKY (EARTHQUAKES, CLOUDS, WIND, DEW, RAIN, METEORITES)

χώ Ζεὺς ἄλλοκα μὲν πέλει αἴθριος, ἄλλοκα δ' ὗει

THEOKRITOS 4. 43

PART I

TEXT AND NOTES

Cambridge
at the University Press
1940

BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
PROVO, UTAH

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

HAROLD B. LEE LIBRARY
BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY
PROVO, UTAH

καὶ ὁ Φερεκύδης ἔλεγεν εἰς Ἔρωτα μεταβεβλῆσθαι τὸν Δία μέλλοντα δημιουργεῖν, ὅτι δὴ τὸν κόσμον ἐκ τῶν ἐναντίων συνίστας εἰς ὁμολογίαν καὶ φιλίαν ἤγαγε καὶ ταυτότητα πᾶσιν ἐνέσπειρε καὶ ἕνωσιν τὴν δι' ὅλων διήκουσαν.

PHEREKYDES OF SYROS frag. 3 Diels ap. Prokl. in Plat. Tim. ii. 54, 28 ff. Diehl.

ὁ δὲ ἡμέτερος εἰρηνικὸς καὶ πανταχοῦ πρᾶος, οἷος ἀστασιάστου καὶ ὁμονοούσης τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐπίσκοπος· ὃν ἐγὼ μετὰ τῆς ἐμαυτοῦ τέχνης καὶ τῆς Ἠλείων πόλεως σοφῆς καὶ ἀγαθῆς βουλευσάμενος ἱδρυσάμην, ἥμερον καὶ σεμνὸν ἐν ἀλύπῳ σχήματι, τὸν βίον καὶ ζωῆς καὶ συμπάντων σωτῆρα τῶν ἀγαθῶν, κοινὸν ἀνθρώπων καὶ πατέρα καὶ σωτῆρα φύλακα, ὡς δυνατὸν ἦν θνητῷ διανοηθέντι μιμήσασθαι τὴν θείαν καὶ ἀμήχανον φύσιν.

DION OF PROUSA or. 12 p. 236 f. Dindorf.

PREFACE

VOLUME III with its two Parts comprises the third, and final, instalment of my work on Zeus: numero deus impare gaudet. It may be thought that a task taken in hand as far back as 1907 ought to have been completed long before 1939. But kindly critics will remember that the task itself was one of formidable complexity, that the leisure left to a teacher occupied throughout with College and University duties is necessarily limited, and that the commotions of our time have hardly been conducive to a peaceful investigation of the past. This at least I can claim that, year in, year out, I have steadily pursued the plan originally laid down for the scope and contents of the book. Volume I was to deal with Zeus as god of the Bright Sky, Volume II with Zeus as god of the Dark Sky—an arrangement of essentials approved by the high authority of Otto Weinreich (Archiv f. Rel. 1937 xxxiv. 138). Accordingly, Volume I included not only the Hellenic worship of the Bright Zeus, god of the Upper Sky, but also the Hellenistic attempts to connect him with Sun, Moon, and Stars, while Volume II was devoted to the Dark Zeus, god of Thunder and Lightning, in all his multifarious aspects. Thunder and Lightning proved to be so wide-spread and far-reaching that much had perforce to be left over for a third, at first uncontemplated, volume. This concerns itself with Zeus in his relations to a further series of cosmic phaenomena—Earthquakes, Clouds, Wind, Dew, Rain, and Meteorites. But I need not here enter into a detailed account of sections and subsections, as I have later endeavoured to trace in sequence the whole evolution of the cult of Zeus (pages 943 to 973), concluding with a statement of what I conceive to be its ultimate significance (pp. 973, 974).

The work as a whole sets out to survey the range and influence of the Greek Sky-god. It would, I suppose, have been possible to do this in less discursive fashion by means of tabulated statements and statistics—a list of his cult-centres, an index of his appellations, a classified catalogue of his representations in art—in short, to adopt the dictionary-method, admirably carried out by E. Fehrle, K. Ziegler, and O. Waser towards the end of Roscher's great Lexikon (vi. 564—759). But my notion of a survey is somewhat different. I find a road-map less helpful than an ordnance-sheet.

The former may simplify things and enable you to get more directly to your destination. But the latter invites you to explore the neighbourhood, marks the field-paths, puts in the contour-lines, colours the water-ways, and prints in Gothic lettering the local antiquities. Time is lost, but knowledge is gained, and the traveller returns well-content with his trapesings. So I have deliberately chosen the more devious method, and I can only fall back on Herodotos' plea that 'my subject from the outset demanded digressions.' Indeed, it was just this need for latitude that led me to widen the title Zeus by adding the subtitle 'a Study in Ancient Religion.' That is the real justification for long-winded footnotes and a fringe of Appendixes.

With regard to the Appendixes I regret, not so much the fifteen that I have written, as the three that I have failed to write—letters C, D, and O. Ideally C should have dealt with Zeus at Corinth, D with Zeus at Dodona, O with Zeus at Olympia. I did indeed pen a screed on 'Korinthos son of Zeus,' but I suppressed it because the aetiological myth that I thought to detect implied the existence of customs for which I could produce no adequate evidence. As to Dodona, I have made certain interim observations in the Classical Review for 1903 xvii. 178—186, 268 f., 278; but the problems presented by the oracular cult cannot be securely solved till the oracle itself has been fully excavated (infra p. 1131). On Olympia too I have said my say both in the Classical Review for 1903 xvii. 270—277 and in Folk-Lore for 1904 xv. 397—402. To describe the material remains of the famous témenos was no part of my programme. Dr E. N. Gardiner has covered the ground (Olympia Oxford 1925), and Dr W. Dörpfeld dug deep beneath it (Alt-Olympia Berlin 1935).

The quarter-century that has intervened between the publication of Volume I and that of Volume III has of course brought an annual harvest of discoveries and discussions bearing on the subject of Zeus, all grist to my mill. Hence the mass of miscellaneous Addenda from page 1066 onwards—'1066 and all that'! It was a cheer to find that these additions, almost without exception, fitted well into the framework of the book and very seldom called for the retraction of a definitely expressed opinion.

As before, I write with a sense of profound obligation to others. First and foremost stands my debt of gratitude to the Syndics of the University Press, who once again have borne the whole financial burden of publishing, despite all difficulties, this costly and unprofitable work.

Zeus, I am happy to say, has been begun, continued, and ended under the auspices of two old friends, old in years but young in outlook—Sir James Frazer and Dr Rendel Harris. It was they who first welcomed the inception of the work, and, though quite aware that I often dissent from their findings, they have wished me well from start to finish.

I have further been able to count on the co-operation of many loyal helpers. Where my enquiries have trenched upon unfamiliar ground I have not hesitated to call in expert advisers. On points of Semitic lore I have consulted Professor S. A. Cook (p. 1072), the late Professor S. Langdon (p. 550 n. 0), and the Reverend H. St J. Hart (p. 891). In Mesopotamian matters I have been assisted by Mr Sidney Smith (p. 832 ff.) and Dr H. Frankfort (p. 1196). Egyptian usages have been made plain to me in conversations with Mr Sidney Smith, Mr P. E. Newberry, and the late Mr J. E. Quibell (p. 305). Sir John Marshall gave me his opinion on the origin of Çiva's trident (p. 1156). Professor H. W. Bailey has reported on Sanskrit and Persian etymologies (pp. 916 n. 1, 925 n. 3). Mr A. Waley identified the source of a Chinese inscription and translated it for me (p. 1138). Dr B. F. C. Atkinson allowed me to rifle his unpublished work on Illyrian names (p. 364 n. 8). Lastly, Dr F. R. C. Reed enabled me to determine the material of an ancient cameo, while Dr F. C. Phillips as official mineralogist and petrologist made analyses on my behalf (p. 898 n. 4).

Reviewers in general have been benevolent, but superficial and sometimes woefully misunderstanding. Signal exceptions have been the detailed and very helpful critique of Charles Picard (Revue de l'histoire des religions 1926 xciii. 65—94) and a most heartening notice by Otto Weinreich (Archiv f. Rel. 1937 xxxiv. 137—139). For such shrewd objections and penetrating judgments I can but feel immense respect. Critics of this type are all too rare.

Among friends that have put an active shoulder to my wheel I would name first my colleague Mr C. T. Seltman, who with his amazing knowledge of ancient art and modern art-collectors has been endlessly useful. It was, for example, through his good offices that I secured the unique double axes from Crete and Athens (figs. 894, 895), the new Orpheus-vase published in pl. xvi, and that most notable of all Greek coppers the Mytilene-medallion of pl. i. But Mr Seltman has no monopoly of kindliness. Not a few of my former pupils, while engaged on quests of their own, have spared time to forage on my behalf. In particular, Mr A. D. Trendall, Fellow of Trinity College and our foremost authority on South Italian vases, has sent me a flight of valuable photographs from Athens (pl. xlvi, 2), Capua (pl. lxxv), Rome (pl. lii), Taranto (pls. xiii, xv, 2, lxxi), Berlin (pls. liv, lx), Bonn (pl. xiii, 3), Gotha (pl. lxiii), Leipzig (pls. lxii, lxv, 1), and Vienna (fig. 476). Mr J. D. S. Pendlebury, Fellow of Pembroke College, has more than once put his intimate knowledge of modern Crete at my service (pp. 1070, 1143) and himself photographed for me an early Greek stámnos from Knossos (pl. xxv). Mr E. J. P. Raven procured for me photographs of an interesting ptthos-lid from the same place (pl. lxxxi) and of the relief-plaque from Athens representing a primitive form of Athena (pl. xxvi). And Mr R. M. Cook furnished me with the photograph of a small bronze statuette recently found in Bulgaria and important as being clearly inspired by Pheidias' Zeus Olýmpios (pl. lxxxii).

Others have gone far afield to record mountain-scenes difficult of access. Dr N. Bachtin gave me prints of Mount Ossa and of the chapel on its summit from photographs taken by Mrs Bachtin in 1934 (figs. 908, 909), and three times over climbed Mount Pelion to investigate the alleged discoveries of Arvanitopoulos (p. 1161). Ossa, Pelion, and—to complete the proverbial pile—Olympos. Mr C. M. Sleeman, Fellow of Queens' College, ascended Olympos twice, in 1926 and 1929, bringing home with him a wonderful series of views, which included not only the actual summit (pl. lxviii) but all the principal peaks (figs. 911, 912) and the little chapel of St Elias (fig. 913). Mr Sleeman in 1926 also photographed the summit of Parnassos (fig. 907), and, being an indefatigable mountaineer, in 1936 climbed Mount Argaios and supplied me with striking photographs of the top (fig. 915) and of a rock-pinnacle beneath it (fig. 916). Mr W. K. C. Guthrie, Fellow of Peterhouse and now Public Orator, in 1932 discovered and photographed a double rock-cut throne on Findos Tepe (figs. 858—860). Mr N. G. L. Hammond, Fellow of Clare College, in 1931 told me of Mount Emertsa on the Albanian frontier, which he had found to be locally identified with Dione in repose (p. 1173). But of all these mountain-exploits none is more arresting than the narrative dictated to me by Mr H. Hunt, who in 1929 went on pilgrimage with Bektashite monks to the summit of Mount Tomori near Berat and there actually witnessed the sacrifice of a white bull to 'Zefs' (p. 1171).

For other photographs, too numerous to specify in detail, I am indebted to a host of contributors both at home and abroad. My debt has, I think, always been acknowledged in a footnote. But I cannot refrain from mentioning here certain cases of outstanding interest. Mr Sidney Smith, Honorary Fellow of Queens' College and Keeper of Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities in the British Museum, presented me with a magnificent photograph of the newly-discovered 'Lilith' and added to his kindness by discussing with me her status and attributes (pl. lxi). The late Dr A. H. Lloyd gave me an exquisite plate of the golden barley found amid the dust and débris of a grave near Syracuse (pl. xxxi). Professors G. M. Columba and E. Gàbrici supplied a fine photograph of the Oknos-vase at Palermo (pl. xxxvi); Professor D. M. Robinson, several views of the Bouzyges-vase at Baltimore (pl. xlv); Professor P. P. Jacobsthal, the print of a vase at Marseilles representing, he holds, the oracle of Orpheus' head (pl. xviii).

Casts of coins and gems have again been sent me without charge and without stint by the authorities of the British Museum, to whom I am further indebted for much encouragement and helpful talk. I am particularly beholden to Mr H. Mattingly, Mr E. S. G. Robinson, and Mr Sidney Smith, of whose prompt aid I have availed myself time after time with shameless persistence. Mr R. B. Whitehead also was good enough to send me a series of choice impressions from his own unrivalled store of Bactrian coins (figs. 369, 371). Monsieur le Comte Chandon de Briailles supplied the cast of a gem representing Kroisos on the pyre (fig. 329), and Mr C. D. Bicknell that of a gem in the Lewis Collection showing Athena as a human-headed bird (fig. 608).

Permission to produce or reproduce plans and illustrations has been generously granted by Messrs F. Bruckmann and Co. of Munich (pls. vi, vii, xxiii, xxxvii), by Sir Arthur Evans (figs. 202, 265), by Mr N. Glueck of the American School of Oriental Research, Jerusalem (fig. 876), by the Council of the Hellenic Society (figs. 578, 579), by Dr F. Matz of the Staatliches Lindenau-Museum at Altenburg (fig. 619), by Dr H. Meier of the Warburg Institute (pl. xl), by the late Mr J. E. Quibell (fig. 195), by Monsieur Richard, Conservateur des Musées at Abbeville (fig. 888), by Miss G. M. A.

Richter of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York (pl. xxxv, figs. 776, 883, 897), by Professor Homer A. Thompson (figs. 923, 924), by Professor A. J. B. Wace (fig. 193), by Dr C. Weickert of the Museum at Munich (pl. l), and by the Direktor of the Badisches Landesmuseum at Karlsruhe (pl. li).

In the matter of text-figures I have been lucky enough to retain the services of Miss E. T. Talbot, the artist to whom I owe the bulk of the drawings in Volumes I and II. Her work has throughout maintained a high level of exactitude. Her coins, for instance, are not merely faithful transcripts of originals or casts, but actually 'stilgetreu'—a rare achievement in draughtsmanship.

The cameo in malachite portraying the bust of a Ptolemaic Zeus (pl. xliv) was drawn from the original by Miss F. E. Severs and produced as an experiment in lithography by the Cambridge Press. But most of the colour-plates have been specially painted for me by another artist of quite exceptional powers, Mrs D. K. Kennett. She sketched the Corfu pediment from a full-size cast in the Cambridge Museum of Classical Archaeology (pl. lxiv) and the Sulis Minerva pediment from the original at Bath (pl. lxvi). But her feeling for colour is better shown by the little head of Hera in blue glass from Girgenti (pl. lxxiii), the bust of Sarapis in lapis lazuli (pl. lxxiv), or the bronze mace from Willingham Fen (pl. lxxviii). These are veritable triumphs of sympathetic rendering.

And here I must add a word on another of Mrs Kennett's plates, the neolithic pounder from Ephesos (pl. lxvii). That remarkable object—given me as a souvenir of Sir William Ridgeway by the President of Queens' College and Mrs Venn—has, if I am right in my interpretation of it, presented us for the first time with a prehistoric Greek baitylos, a stone believed to have fallen from heaven and worshipped accordingly. Not the least of its claims upon our attention is the incidental light that it throws on a passage in the New Testament (Acts 19. 35).

The passage in question sets in sharp contrast the old 'Zeus-fallen image' with the new Gospel proclaimed by St Paul. These were in effect the two extremes. Between them lay the whole history of Greek religion with its gradual development, now slower, now faster, from primitive paganism towards complete Christianity —a long story, for the telling of which three volumes would scarce suffice. My contention is that in that development the cult of the Sky-god was one main factor, leading the minds of men upwards and onwards to ever greater heights till Zeus at his noblest joined hands with the Christian conceptions of Deity. If I have succeeded in proving that, I shall feel that the labours of half a lifetime have been well worth while.

ARTHUR BERNARD COOK.

19 CRANMER ROAD, CAMBRIDGE.
22 July 1939.

CONTENTS OF VOLUME III

PART I. CHAPTER II

ZEUS AS GOD OF THE WEATHER

PAGES

§ 5. Zeus and the Earthquakes . . . . . 1—29

§ 6. Zeus and the Clouds . . . . . 30—103

(a) Zeus and the Clouds in Literature 30

(b) Zeus and the Clouds in Art 36

(c) Nephelokokkygia 44

(d) The Clouds personified in Cult and Myth 68

§ 7. Zeus and the Wind . . . . . 103—165

(a) Men believed to control the winds 103

(b) Aiolos Hippotades 106

(c) The Tritopatores or Tritopatreis 112

(d) Zeus Oúrios, íkmenos, Euánemos, Bóreios 140

§ 8. Zeus and the Dew . . . . . 165—283

(a) The Arrhephóroi 165

i. The birth of Erichthonios 181

ii. Hephaistos and Athena 188

(b) The Daughters of Kekrops 237

(c) Zeus Érrhos, Ersaîos, Ikmaîos, Íkmios, Áphrios . . . 261

(d) Zeus Thaúlios 277

§ 9. Zeus and the Rain . . . . . 284—881

(a) Rain-magic 284

i. Rain-magic in modern Greece 284

ii. Rain-magic in ancient Greece 296

iii. Rain-magic in the cult of Zeus 314

(b) Prayers to Zeus for rain 317

(c) The relation of rain to Zeus 319

(d) Rain as water poured through a holed vessel or sieve . . 338

i. The holed vessel in Egypt 338

ii. The holed vessel in Greece 354

(α) Water-carrying in the myth of the Danaïdes . . . 355

(β) Water-carrying in connexion with marriage . . . 370

(γ) Water-carrying in connexion with the mysteries . . 397

(δ) Conclusions with regard to the myth of the Danaïdes . 425

iii. The holed vessel in Italy 427

iv. The holed vessel elsewhere 445

(e) Rain as the seed of Zeus 451

i. Zeus identified with rain 451

ii. Zeus descends in rain to fertilise the earth 452

iii. The myth of Danaë and analogous myths 455

PAGES

(f) Ominous rain sent by Zeus 478
i. Rain of blood 478
ii. Rain of stones 482
iii. Rain of food 495
iv. Pyre-extinguishing rain 506
(g) Zeus Ómbrios 525
(h) Zeus Hyétios 561
i. The Ox-driving of Zeus Hyétios at Didyma . . . 563
ii. The Ox-slaughter of Zeus Polieús at Athens . . . 570
(a) Ritual of the Dipolieia 577
(β) Myths of the Dipolieia: Sopatros 590
(γ) Myths of the Dipolieia: Diomos 593
(δ) Myths of the Dipolieia: Thaulon 596
(ε) Purpose of the Dipolieia 598
(ζ) Zeus as an ox; Zeus Ólbios 605
(η) Zeus struck with a double axe. The birth of Athena . 656
(θ) The birth of Athena in art 662
(ι) Significance of the birth of Athena 726
(κ) The superannuation of Zeus 739
(λ) The attributes of Athena 747
(1) The olive of Athena 749
(2) The snake of Athena 764
(3) The owl of Athena 776
(4) The aigís and Gorgóneion of Athena 837
(5) The aigís of Athena transferred to Zeus . . . 866
(6) The thunderbolt of Zeus transferred to Athena . . 867
(i) Zeus Hýes 873
(j) Zeus and the Hail 875

§ 10. Zeus and the Meteorites . . . . . 881—942
(a) The cult of meteorites 881
(b) Baityloi, Baitýlia, and Zeus Bétylos 887
(c) Kybele and meteorites 893
(d) The stone of Elagabalos 900
(e) The stone of Dousares 907
(f) The stone siderítes or oreítes 920
(g) Ákmon 924
(h) The stone of Kronos 927
(i) Zeus Kappótas 939

§ 11. General Conclusions with regard to Zeus as god of the Dark Sky . . . . . 943—974

PART II

PAGES

APPENDIX P. Floating Islands . . . . . 975—1015

Q. The Prompting Eros . . . . . 1016—1025

R. The Hierὸs Gámos . . . . . 1025—1065

(1) The Hierὸs Gámos at Samos 1027

(2) The Hierὸs Gámos at Knossos 1032

(3) The Hierὸs Gámos on Mount Ide . . . 1032

(4) The Hierὸs Gámos on Mount Oche . . . 1041

(5) The Hierὸs Gámos at Elymnion 1041

(6) The Hierὸs Gámos on Mount Kithairon . . 1042

(7) The Hierὸs Gámos in the Cave of Achilleus . 1043

(8) The Hierὸs Gámos at Argos 1043

(a) Zeus and Hera at Hermione 1043

(β) Zeus and Hera at Argos 1043

(9) The Hierὸs Gámos at Athens 1047

(a) Zeus with Hera behind him 1048

(β) Zeus with Hera beside him 1048

(γ) Zeus with Hera facing him 1049

(δ) Zeus with Hera on the frieze of the Parthenon 1053

(ε) Zeus with Hera in archaistic reliefs . . 1055

(10) The Hierὸs Gámos in the Far West . . . 1062

(11) Inferences concerning the Hierὸs Gámos . . 1064

ADDENDA . . . . . 1066—1197

CORRIGENDA. . . . . 1198—1199

INDEX I (PERSONS, PLACES, FESTIVALS) . . . . . 1201—1263

INDEX II (SUBJECTS, AUTHORITIES) . . . . . 1265—1299

LIST OF PLATES IN VOLUME III

PLATE		to face page
I	Bronze medallion of Mytilene showing Zeus, Poseidon, and Hades as Theoi Akraioi	6
II	Amphora from Vulci, now in the Vatican: Poseidon, shouldering the island, attacks a Giant	14
III	Kýlix from Vulci, now at Paris:
	(A) Poseidon, shouldering the island, attacks a Giant
	(B) Apollon (?), Dionysos, and Ares (?) attack Giants
	(C) Hephaistos, Poseidon, and Hermes (?) attack Giants	16
IV	Fresco from Herculaneum, now at Naples: Zeus reclining amid the clouds	36
V	A frescoed ceiling from a room in the Golden House: Zeus enthroned in heaven, surrounded by gods, goddesses, Tritons, etc.	39
VI	Kýlix from Vulci, now at Berlin:
	(A) Poseidon attacks Polybotes in the presence of Ge
	(B) Ares v. Mimon, Apollon v. Ephialtes, Hera v. Phoitos
	(C) Artemis v. Gaion, Zeus v. Porphyrion, Athena v. Enkelados	56
VII	Amphora from Melos, now at Paris: the Gigantomachy— Zeus, descending from his chariot, attacks Porphyrion	56
VIII	Kratér (amphora?) from Ruvo, now at Petrograd: the Gigantomachy— Porphyrion blasted by the thunderbolts of Zeus	56
IX	Reliefs from the eastern frieze of the great Altar at Pergamon, now in Berlin: Zeus contends with Porphyrion, Athena with Enkelados	57
X	Hydría from Vulci, now in the British Museum: Athena v. Enkelados, Zeus v. Porphyrion (?)	57
XI	Lékythos from Ruvo, now in the British Museum: The Judgment of Paris with the Argive Hera as prize-winner	67
XII	Kratér in the British Museum: the death of Prokris	73
XIII	(1) Kratér from Ceglie, now at Taranto
	(2) Detail of same vase: the birth of Dionysos
	(3) Vase-fragment at Bonn: the birth of Dionysos	82
XIV	(1) Gold bulla from Vulci, now at Paris: Birth of Dionysos
	(2) Gold bulla from Italy, now in the British Museum: Birth of Dionysos	88
XV	(1) Lékythos of early Apulian style from Anxia, now in the British Museum: Herakles suckled by Hera
	(2) Lékythos of early Apulian style, now at Taranto: Herakles suckled by Hera	94
XVI	Hydría at Queens' College, Cambridge: Apollon visits the Lesbian oracle of Orpheus	99

to face page

XVII Etruscan mirrors representing the oracular head of Orpheus:
(1) A mirror from Clusium, now in the Casuccini collection at Chiusi
(2) A mirror now in Paris
(3) A fragmentary mirror formerly in the Borgia collection and now at Naples (?) 102

XVIII Early 'Campanian' amphora in the Musée Borély at Marseilles: a youth consulting the oracle of Orpheus' head (?) . . 102

XIX A stucco-relief in the semi-dome of the subterranean basilica at Rome:
the last voyage of the soul over the waters of death to the Islands of the Blest [with transparent overleaf]. . 135

XX Bronze statuette from Ephesos, now at Queens' College, Cambridge:
a praying Negro 151

XXI Plan of the American excavations on the north slope of the Akropolis 170

XXII Hydría from Chiusi (?), now in the British Museum:
Ge hands Erichthonios to Athena in the presence of Zeus, Nike, and Hebe (?) 182

XXIII Stámnos from Vulci, now at Munich:
Ge hands Erichthonios to Athena in the presence of Hephaistos 184

XXIV Kratér from Chiusi, now at Palermo:
Ge hands Erichthonios to Athena in the presence of Hephaistos and Kekrops 187

XXV Stámnos from Knossos, now at Candia:
(a) and (b) the Snake-goddess repeated as a proto-geometric motif. 189

XXVI Painted terra-cotta plaque from Athens:
the Snake-goddess (Athena?) of late geometric art . . 189

XXVII Kýlix from Nola, now in the British Museum:
Anesidora fashioned by Hephaistos and adorned by Athena 201

XXVIII Votive relief in island marble, found on the Akropolis at Athens:
a husband, with his wife and three children, brings a sow for sacrifice to Athena 225

XXIX Peliké from Kameiros, now in the British Museum:
(a) Athena finds Erichthonios in his basket guarded by two snakes
(b) Aglauros (?) and Herse (?) make off 248

XXX An amphora at Petrograd:
(1) A herôion containing five stalks of bearded wheat, flanked by conventional figures bearing garlands and gifts
(2) A young warrior, wreathed by Nike, between two companions. A domestic scene (his homecoming?)
(3) The whole vase (4) Head of Kore (5) Palmette . . 306

XXXI Three gold ears of barley found in a grave near Syracuse:
and now in the Loeb collection at Murnau . . . 307

to face page

XXXII Reliefs from the Column of Marcus Aurelius at Rome: Iupiter Pluvius and the rain-storm 330

XXXIII The so-called 'Canopic jars' of Egypt, surmounted by the heads of the four children of Horos:
(1) A typical set
(2) A set in veined alabaster, now at Queens' College, Cambridge 345

XXXIV Amphora from the Basilicata, now in the British Museum:
(1*a*—1*b*) Evocation of the Greek Earth-goddess
(2*a*—2*b*) Consultation of an Isiac 'Canopus' 353

XXXV Loutrophóros in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York:
(1) Whole vase showing mourners with loutrophóros above, mourners at próthesis below, and subsidiary zones of lions and horsemen
(2) Detail of same vase 375

XXXVI Lékythos from Monte Saraceno, now at Palermo: the uninitiated in the Underworld, together with Oknos and his ass 400

XXXVII Kratér from Canosa, now at Munich: Orpheus leads a family of initiates into the presence of Hades and Persephone, whose palace is surrounded by the stock denizens of the Underworld 402

XXXVIII Hydria at Boston: the carpenter completes the chest in the presence of Akrisios, Danaë, and the nurse holding the infant Perseus 458

XXXIX A Roman mosaic from Palermo: the amours of Zeus—Antiope, Danaë, Leda 467

XL Das Schlaraffenlandt, 'The Country of Cokaygne,' from a woodcut printed by W. Strauch of Nuremberg . 502

XLI Kratér from Santa Agata dei Goti, now in the British Museum: Alkmene rescued from a fiery death at the hands of Amphitryon and Antenor by the intervention of Zeus . 511

XLII Relief from the eastern frieze of the great Altar at Pergamon, now in Berlin: Zeus fighting Porphyrion 534

XLIII A sardonyx cameo from Ephesos, now in Venice: Zeus with oak-wreath and aigís 538

XLIV A malachite cameo, now at Queens' College, Cambridge: Zeus with oak-wreath and aigís 538

XLV Kratér from Vari, now at Baltimore:
(a—d) Bouzyges ploughing in the presence of Athena and an elderly male spectator 607

XLVI (1) Terra-cotta plaque from a tomb at Hadra (?), now at Queens' College, Cambridge: Europe on the Bull
(2) Bronze mirror from Athens (?), now in Rome: Europe on the Bull 618

		to face page
XLVII	Amphora from Canosa, now at Naples: Europe playing with the Bull	620
XLVIII	A Roman mosaic from Aquileia: Europe on the Bull, escorted by Eros and Poseidon	627
XLIX	(1) Amphora at Munich: Io as a heifer with Argos and Hermes (2) Stámnos from Caere, now at Vienna: Io as a steer (!) with Argos, Hermes, and Zeus	631
L	Amphora at Munich: Zeus in labour, flanked by two Eileithyiai	663
LI	Amphora from Girgenti, now at Karlsruhe: Zeus in labour, with two Eileithyiai and Hermes in attendance	665
LII	Amphora from Vulci, now in the Vatican: Zeus in labour, with one Eileithyia and two gods in attendance	667
LIII	Amphora from Caere, now in the Vatican: Zeus in labour, with one Eileithyia and Hermes (?), Poseidon, Ares in attendance	667
LIV	Amphora from Caere, now at Berlin: Athena born from the head of Zeus, with two Eileithyiai and other deities in attendance	673
LV	Amphora from Vulci, now in the British Museum: Athena born from the head of Zeus, with two Eileithyiai, Hermes, and Hephaistos in attendance	675
LVI	Pelíke from Vulci, now in the British Museum: (a, b) Athena born from the head of Zeus, with one Eileithyia and other deities in attendance	675
LVII	(1) Drawing of the east pediment of the Parthenon by J. Carrey (?) (1674) (2) Restoration by E. A. Gardner (1902) (3) Restoration by K. Schwerzek (1904)	689
LVIII	(1) Restoration by J. N. Svoronos (1912) (2) Restoration by Rhys Carpenter (1933) (3) Restoration by A. B. Cook (1917)	689
LIX	Pelíke in the British Museum: (A) Zeus and Nike (B) Hera and Hebe (?)	733
LX	Amphora from Nola, now at Berlin: a spectator stands before the Owl on the Akropolis	777
LXI	A Sumerian relief in baked clay: Lilith (?), a possible ancestress of the Owl-Athena	832
LXII	Kratér at Leipzig: Perseus presents Athena with the Gorgon's head for her aigís	843
LXIII	Kratér at Gotha: Perseus presents Athena with the Gorgon's head for her shield	843
LXIV	The west pediment of the temple of Artemis at Palaiopolis, Corfu	845

		to face page
LXV	(1) Etruscan kýlix at Leipzig: Pegasos born from the blood of the Gorgon (2) Etruscan kýlix in the British Museum: Pegasos born from the blood of the Gorgon	853
LXVI	Pedimental relief from the temple of Sulis Minerva at Bath	862
LXVII	A battylos (?) from Ephesos, now at Queens' College, Cambridge	898
LXVIII	The highest peak of Mount Olympos (Mítka, the 'Needle')	943
LXIX	Coins, struck by Hadrian, representing the Zeus Olýmpios of Pheidias: (1 a, 1 b) Two differently lighted views of bronze coin now at Paris (2) Bronze coin now at Florence (3) and (4) Bronze coins now at Berlin	959
LXX	(1) A bronze mirror-case in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge: Ganymedes feeds the Eagle in the presence of a Nymph (2) A similar mirror-case in the Lloyd collection, Cambridge	982
LXXI	(1)—(3) Details of kratér from Ceglie, now at Taranto: a group of kalathiskos-dancers	996
LXXII	Fresco from Pompeii, now at Naples: the Hieròs Gámos of Zeus and Hera on Mount Ide in the Troad	1033
LXXIII	A head of Hera Lakinia (?) in blue glass, c. 400 B.C., from Girgenti, now at Queens' College, Cambridge	1039
LXXIV	A bust of Zeus Sarapis in lapis lazuli, c. 300 A.D., now in the British Museum	1071
LXXV	(a) and (b) Amphora in the Museo Campano di Capua: Ixion on his fiery wheel	1072
LXXVI	Antefixal ornament from Italy, now in the British Museum: head of Zeus Ammon	1076
LXXVII	(a) and (b) Terra-cotta group in the British Museum, possibly connected with the cult of Iupiter Dolichenus (?)	1098
LXXVIII	(a—c) A bronze mace from Willingham Fen, now in the Museum of Archaeology and of Ethnology, Cambridge	1099
LXXIX	(a) and (b) Marble head of Iuno Lucina (?), now at Queens' College, Cambridge	1117
LXXX	(a) and (b) Marble head of Pan from Greece, now in the British Museum	1131
LXXXI	Pithos-lid from Knossos, Cretan work of c. 700 B.C.: Zeus advancing with triple lightning-fork and bird	1150
LXXXII	Bronze statuette of Zeus Olýmpios from Bulgaria, now in the Museum of the Augusta Trajana Society at Stara Zagora	1194
LXXXIII	Marble head from Jerash: a third-century Zeus (?), which perhaps served as a fifth-century Christ	1196

ABBREVIATIONS

The following additions should be made to the List of Abbreviations printed in Vol. I pp. xxv—xliii and Vol. II pp. xxiii—xliii.

Albizzati Vasi d. Vaticano = C. Albizzati Vasi antichi dipinti del Vaticano Fasc. 1—6 (pls. 1—60) Roma 1925—1932.

Amelung Sculpt. Vatic. iii, 1 (Sala delle Muse, Sala rotonda, Sala a Croce Greca) von G. Lippold Berlin—Leipzig 1936.

Am. Journ. Arch. From 1932 (vol. xxxvi) onwards the American Journal of Archaeology has been issued in larger format.

Anz. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Wien Phil.-hist. Classe = Anzeiger der Akademie der Wissenschaften Philosophisch-historische Classe Wien 1864— .

Ath. Mitth. From 1901 (vol. xxvi) entitled Mitteilungen des kaiserlich deutschen archaeologischen Instituts: athenische Abteilung, and from 1915 (vol. xl) Mitteilungen des deutschen archäologischen Instituts: athenische Abteilung.

Babelon Monn. gr. rom. II Description historique iv Paris 1926—1932 with Atlas of pls. III Monnaies orientales i Numismatique de la Perse antique par J. de Morgan Paris 1927—1933 with Atlas of pls.

Berl. philol. Woch. So called from 1884 to 1920. Before (1881—1883) and after (1921—) that period the title is simply Philologische Wochenschrift.

Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Cyrenaica 1927 by E. S. G. Robinson.

Brit. Mus. Cat. Finger Rings = F. H. Marshall Catalogue of the Finger Rings, Greek, Etruscan, and Roman, in the Departments of Antiquities, British Museum London 1907.

Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems^2 = H. B. Walters Catalogue of the Engraved Gems and Cameos Greek Etruscan and Roman in the British Museum London 1926.

Brit. Mus. Cat. Paintings and Mosaics = R. P. Hinks Catalogue of the Greek Etruscan and Roman Paintings and Mosaics in the British Museum London 1933.

Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Emp. ii (Vespasian to Domitian) London 1930. iii (Nerva to Hadrian) London 1936.

Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Pottery = H. B. Walters Catalogue of the Roman Pottery in the Departments of Antiquities, British Museum London 1908.

Brit. Mus. Cat. Sculpture^2 = Catalogue of Sculpture in the Department of Greek and Roman Antiquities of the British Museum i. 1 (Prehellenic and early Greek) by F. N. Pryce London 1928. i. 2 (Cypriote and Etruscan) by F. N. Pryce London 1931.

Brit. Mus. Quart. = British Museum Quarterly 1926— .

Brunn—Bruckmann Denkm. der gr. und röm. Sculpt. fortgeführt und mit erläuternden Texten versehen von P. Arndt und G. Lippold iv (Tafeln 651—700) München 1926, v (Tafeln 701—750) München 1932, vi (Tafeln 751—785) München 1939.

Corp. inscr. Gr. sept. iii. 2 Inscriptiones Thessaliae ed. O. Kern, Indices comp. F. Hiller de Gaertringen [Inscriptiones Graecae ix. 2] Berolini 1908.

Corp. inscr. Lat. xi. 2. 2 Inscriptiones Aemiliae, Etruriae, Umbriae Latinae, ed. E. Bormann. Addenda ad partes priores et Indicum capita tria. Berolini 1926. xiv Supplementum Ostiense, ed. L. Wickert Berolini 1930.

Corpusc. poes. ep. Gr. ludib. = Corpusculum poesis epicae Graecae ludibundae i Parodorum epicorum Graecorum et Archestrati reliquiae, ed. P. Brandt Lipsiae 1888, ii Sillographorum Graecorum reliquiae, ed. C. Wachsmuth Lipsiae 1885.

Corp. vas. ant. = Corpus vasorum antiquorum. This great international publication, started by E. Pottier at Paris in 1922, has already (1939) run to 63 parts, of which Belgium has contributed 2, Denmark 6, France 14, Germany 3, Great Britain 11, Greece 1, Holland 2, Italy 12, Poland 3, Spain 1, the United States 6, and Yugoslavia 2.

Délos v Le Portique d' Antigone ou du Nord-est et les constructions voisines par F. Courby. Paris 1912.

ix Description des Revêtements peints à sujets religieux par M. Bulard. Paris 1926.

x Les Vases de l'Héraion par C. Dugas. Paris 1928.

xi Les Sanctuaires et les Cultes du Mont Cynthe par A. Plassart. Paris 1928.

xii Les Temples d' Apollon par F. Courby. Paris 1931.

xii (Planches).

xiii Les Portraits hellénistiques et romains par C. Michalowski. Paris 1932.

xiv Les Mosaïques de la Maison des Masques par J. Chamonard. Paris 1933.

xv Les Vases préhelléniques et géométriques par C. Dugas et C. Rhomaios. Paris 1934.

xvi Le Sanctuaire des Dieux de Samothrace par F. Chapouthier. Paris 1935.

xvii Les Vases orientalisants de style non mélien par C. Dugas. Paris 1935.

xviii Le Mobilier délien par W. Deonna. Paris 1938.

xviii (Planches).

xix L'Agora des Italiens par É. Lapalus. Paris 1939.

Ducange Gloss. med. et inf. Graec. = C. du Fresne Du Cange Glossarium ad Scriptores mediæ & infimæ Græcitatis i, ii Lugduni 1688.

Ebert Reallex. = Reallexikon der Vorgeschichte unter Mitwirkung zahlreicher Fachgelehrter herausgegeben von Max Ebert i—xiv Berlin 1924—1929, xv (Register) Berlin 1932.

Einzelaufnahmen Serie 10 München 1925, Register zu Serie 6—10 München 1929, 11 München 1929, 12 München 1931, 13 München 1932, 14A München 1934, 14B München 1936, 15A München 1937, 15B München 1938, 16A München 1939.

Ernout—Meillet Dict. étym. de la Langue Lat. = Dictionnaire étymologique de la Langue Latine Histoire des mots par A. Ernout et A. Meillet. Paris 1932.

Espérandieu Bas-reliefs de la Gaule Rom. vii—ix (Gaule Germanique 1—3 et Supplément) Paris 1918—1925, x (Supplément et Tables générales) Paris 1928. Complément du Recueil générale des bas-reliefs, statues et bustes de la Gaule Romaine Paris et Bruxelles 1931. xi (Suppléments (suite)) Paris 1938.

Farnell Gk. Hero Cults = L. R. Farnell Greek Hero Cults and Ideas of Immortality Oxford 1921.

Fouilles de Delphes

iii Épigraphie. Texte. Fasc. 5 par Émile Bourguet Paris 1932.

iv Monuments Figurés—Sculpture. Planches complémentaires. Paris 1926.

Frag. gr. Hist. = Die Fragmente der griechischen Historiker von Felix Jacoby Erster Teil: Genealogie und Mythographie Berlin 1923, Zweiter Teil: Zeitgeschichte A Universalgeschichte und Hellenika Berlin 1926, B Spezialgeschichten, Autobiographien, Zeittafeln Berlin 1927, 1929, C Kommentar Berlin 1926, 1927, 1930.

Frag. gr. Kultschr. = Die Fragmente der griechischen Kultschriftsteller gesammelt von Alois Tresp Giessen 1914.

Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Aftermath London 1936.

Frazer Totemism and Exogamy = (Sir) J. G. Frazer Totemism and Exogamy A Treatise on Certain Early Forms of Superstition and Society i—iv London 1910. Totemica: a supplement to 'Totemism and exogamy' London 1937.

Frazer Worship of Nature = Sir J. G. Frazer The Worship of Nature i (Sky, Earth, Sun) London 1926, ii (Sun, Moon, Stars, Fire, Water, Wind, Plants, Animals) London — .

Graef Ant. Vasen Athen iv Berlin 1925, II. Band i Berlin 1929, ii Berlin 1931, iii Berlin 1933.

Head Coins of the Greeks = A Guide to the principal Coins of the Greeks from circ. 700 B.C. to A.D. 270 based on the work of Barclay V. Head. London 1932.

Inscr. Cret. = Inscriptiones Creticae opera et consilio Friderici Halbherr collectae i Tituli Cretae mediae praeter Gortynios curavit Margarita Guarducci Roma 1935.

Inscr. Gr. ins. ix Inscriptiones Euboeae insulae [Inscriptiones Graecae xii. 9] ed. E. Ziebarth Berolini 1915.

Inscr. Gr. ed. min. = Inscriptiones Graecae editio minor i Inscriptiones Atticae Euclidis anno anteriores ed. Fridericus Hiller de Gaertringen Berolini 1924.

ii—iii Inscriptiones Atticae Euclidis anno posteriores ed. Iohannes Kirchner. Pars altera: 1 Tabulae magistratuum Berolini 1927. 2 Catalogi nominum. Instrumenta iuris privati Berolini 1931.

ii—iii Inscriptiones Atticae Euclidis anno posteriores ed. Iohannes Kirchner. Pars tertia: 1 Dedicationes, Tituli honorarii, Tituli sacri Berolini 1935.

ii—iii Inscriptiones Atticae Euclidis anno posteriores ed. Iohannes Kirchner. Pars quarta: Indices 1 Berolini 1918.

iv Inscriptiones Argolidis 1 Inscriptiones Epidauri ed. Fridericus Hiller de Gaertringen Berolini 1929.

ix. 1 Inscriptiones Phocidis Locridis Aetoliae Acarnaniae Insularum Maris Ionii. 1 Inscriptiones Aetoliae ed. Guentherus Klaffenbach Berolini 1932.

Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. From 1918 (vol. xxxiii) onwards the Jahrbuch des kaiserlich deutschen Archäologischen Instituts has been entitled the Jahrbuch des Deutschen Archäologischen Instituts.

L'Antiquité Classique = L'Antiquité Classique Louvain 1932— .

McClean Cat. Coins = Fitzwilliam Museum. Catalogue of the McClean Collection of Greek Coins by S. W. Grose i—iii Cambridge 1923, 1926, 1929.

i Western Europe, Magna Graecia, Sicily.

ii The Greek Mainland, the Aegaean Islands, Crete.

iii Asia Minor, Farther Asia, Egypt, Africa.

Mem. d. Inst. = Memorie dell' Instituto di Corrispondenza Archeologica i Roma 1832, ii (Nuove Memorie dell' Instituto di Corrispondenza Archeologica) Lipsia 1865.

Mendel Cat. Fig. gr. de Terre Cuite Constantinople = Musées Impériaux Ottomans. Catalogue des Figurines grecques de Terre Cuite par Gustave Mendel Constantinople 1908.

Mendel Cat. Sculpt. Constantinople = Musées Impériaux Ottomans. Catalogue des Sculptures grecques, romaines et byzantines par Gustave Mendel i—iii Constantinople 1912, 1914, 1914.

Milet

i. 9 Thermen und Palaestren von Armin von Gerkan und Fritz Krischen mit Beiträgen von Friedrich Drexel, Karl Anton Neugebauer, Albert Rehm und Theodor Wiegand Berlin 1928.

ii. 2 Die milesische Landschaft von Theodor Wiegand mit Beiträgen von Kurt Krause, Albert Rehm und Paul Wilski Berlin 1929.

ii. 3 Die Stadtmauern von Armin von Gerkan mit epigraphischem Beitrag von Albert Rehm Berlin—Leipzig 1935.

iii. 4 Das islamische Milet von Karl Wulzinger, Paul Wittek, Friedrich Sarre unter Mitwirkung von Th. Menzel, J. H. Mordtmann, A. Zippelius Berlin—Leipzig 1935.

iii. 5 Das südliche Jonien von Alfred Philippson Berlin—Leipzig 1936.

Muller Altital. Wörterb. = Altitalisches Wörterbuch von Dr Frederik Muller Jzn Göttingen 1926.

Museo Italiano di Antichità Classica = Museo Italiano di Antichità Classica Firenze 1885— .

Nachr. d. kön. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Göttingen Phil.-hist. Classe. From 1924 onwards entitled Nachr. d. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Göttingen Phil.-hist Classe.

Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. = The Minoan-Mycenaean Religion and its Survival in Greek Religion by Martin P. Nilsson Lund 1927.

Nuov. Mem. d. Inst. See Mem. d. Inst.

Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek = Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek. Billedtavler til Kataloget over antike

Kunstværker Kjøbenhavn 1907. Tillæg til Billedtavler af antike Kunstværker Kjøbenhavn 1915.

Orat. Attic. = Oratores Attici. Recensuerunt adnotaverunt scholia fragmenta indicem nominum addiderunt Io. Georgius Baiterus et Hermannus Sauppius. i Verba oratorum cum adnotationibus criticis Turici 1839—1843. ii Scholia fragmenta indices Turici 1845—1850.

Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Neue Bearbeitung begonnen von Georg Wissowa...herausgegeben von Wilhelm Kroll und Karl Mittelhaus (Zweite Reihe [R—Z]) iii A—Stuttgart 1927— , Supplement v—vi Stuttgart 1931, 1935. This monumental work, begun in 1894 and now nearing completion, at present (1939) covers the entries 'Aal'—'Olympia', 'Pech'—'Philon', 'Ra'—'Tribus' in 48 half-volumes and 6 supplements.

Pergamon

v, 1 Die Paläste der Hochburg von Georg Kawerau und Theodor Wiegand Berlin—Leipzig 1930.

ix Das Temenos für den Herrscherkult ('Prinzessinnen Palais') von Erich Boehringer und Friedrich Krauss Berlin—Leipzig 1937.

x Die hellenistischen Arsenale ('Garten der Königin') von Ákos von Szalay und Erich Boehringer Berlin—Leipzig 1937.

Pfister Rel. Gr. Röm. 1930 = Die Religion der Griechen und Römer. Darstellung und Literaturbericht (1918—1929/30). (Jahresbericht über die Fortschritte der klassischen Altertumswissenschaft Supplementband. Band 229.) Von Friedrich Pfister Leipzig 1930.

Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. = Malerei und Zeichnung der Griechen von Ernst Pfuhl i (Text erste Hälfte), ii (Text zweite Hälfte), iii (Verzeichnisse und Abbildungen) München 1923.

Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. Drittes Buch. ii. Abteilung. Zweite Hälfte. Der troische Kreis: die Nosten. Berlin 1926.

Proc. Brit. Acad. = British Academy. Proceedings. 1903— .

A. Reinach Textes Peint. Anc. = Recueil Milliet. Textes grecs et latins relatifs à l'histoire de la peinture ancienne publiés, traduits et commentés par Adolphe Reinach i Paris 1921.

Reinach Ant. du Bosph. Cimm. = Antiquités du Bosphore Cimmérien (1854) rééditées avec un commentaire nouveau et un index général des Comptes rendus par Salomon Reinach Paris 1892.

Reinach Rép. Stat. vi Mille trois cent cinquante statues antiques Paris 1930. This handy Répertoire (apart from its first volume, the 'Clarac de poche') claims to have published in all no fewer than 19750 statues.

Richter Cat. Bronzes New York = The Metropolitan Museum of Art. Greek, Etruscan and Roman Bronzes by Gisela M. A. Richter New York 1913.

Röm. Mitth. From 1901 (vol. xvi) entitled Mitteilungen des kaiserlich deutschen archaeologischen Instituts: roemische Abteilung, and from 1916 (vol. xxxi) Mitteilungen des deutschen archaeologischen Instituts: roemische Abteilung.

Sardis

i The Excavations. Part 1 (1910—1914) by Howard Crosby Butler Leyden 1922.

ii Architecture. Part 1 The Temple of Artemis by Howard Crosby Butler Leyden 1925.

v Roman and Christian Sculpture. Part 1 The Sarcophagus of Claudia Antonia Sabina and the Asiatic Sarcophagi by Charles Rufus Morey Princeton 1924.

vii Greek and Latin Inscriptions. Part 1 by W. H. Buckler and David M. Robinson Leyden 1932.

x Terra-cottas. Part 1 Architectural Terra-cottas by Theodore Leslie Shear Cambridge 1926.

xiii Jewelry and Gold Work. Part 1 (1910—1914) by C. Densmore Curtis Roma 1925.

Stuart Jones Cat. Sculpt. Pal. d. Conserv. Rome = A Catalogue of the Ancient Sculptures preserved in the Municipal Collections of Rome. The Sculptures of the Palazzo dei Conservatori. By members of the British School at Rome, edited by H. Stuart Jones...with Atlas of pls. Oxford 1926.

Syll. num. Gr. = Sylloge nummorum Graecorum

i. 1 The collection of Capt. E. G. Spencer-Churchill, M.C., of Northwick Park. The Salting collection in the Victoria and Albert Museum. London 1931.

i. 2 The Newnham Davis coins in the Wilson collection of Classical and Eastern Antiquities Marischal College Aberdeen London 1936.

ii. 1—2 The Lloyd collection (Etruria to Thurium). London 1933.

ii. 3—4 The Lloyd collection (Velia to Eryx). London 1934.

ii. 5—6 The Lloyd collection (Galaria to Selinus). London 1935.

ii. 7—8 The Lloyd collection (Syracuse to Lipara). London 1937.

iii. 1 The Lockett collection (Spain—Italy (gold and silver)). London 1938.

iii. 2 The Lockett collection (Sicily—Thrace (gold and silver)). London 1939.

Tiryns

iii Die Architektur der Burg und des Palastes von Kurt Müller. Text, Tafeln. Augsburg 1930.

Verh. d. 26. Philologenversamml. in Würzburg = Verhandlungen der sechsundzwanzigsten Versammlung deutscher Philologen und Schulmänner in Würzburg vom 30. September bis 3. October 1868. Leipzig 1869.

Verh. d. 36. Philologenversamml. in Karlsruhe = Verhandlungen der sechsunddreissigsten Versammlung deutscher Philologen und Schulmänner in Karlsruhe vom 27. bis 30. September 1882. Leipzig 1883.

Walde—Pokorny Vergl. Wörterb. d. indogerm. Spr. = Alois Walde Vergleichendes Wörterbuch der indogermanischen Sprachen herausgegeben und bearbeitet von Julius Pokorny i, ii Berlin—Leipzig 1930, 1927, iii (Register bearbeitet von Konstantin Reichardt) Berlin—Leipzig 1932.

Weber Cat. Coins = The Weber Collection. Greek Coins by L. Forrer i (Auriol Find Class, Hispania, Gallia, Britannia, Italy and Sicily) with Atlas of pls. London 1922, ii (Macedon, Thrace, Thessaly, North Western, Central and Southern Greece) with Atlas of pls. London 1924, iii, 1 (Bosporus, Colchis, Pontus, Paphlagonia, Bythynia, Mysia, Troas, Aeolis, Lesbos, Ionia, Caria, Lydia) London 1926, iii, 2 (Phrygia, Lycia, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Cilicia, Cyprus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Syria, Phoenicia, Palestine, Arabia, Mesopotamia, Persia, Persis, Characene, Bactria, Egypt, Cyrenaica, Libya, Zeugitana, Islands between Africa and Sicily, Numidia, Mauretania, Incerta) London 1929 with Atlas of pls. London 1925.

Woch. f. klass. Philol. = Wochenschrift für klassische Philologie 1884—1920 (then united with the Berl. Philol. Woch. and continued as the Philologische Wochenschrift).

CHAPTER II (continued)

ZEUS AS GOD OF THE WEATHER.

§ 5. Zeus and the Earthquakes.

GREECE is a land of many earthquakes. Reckoning great with small, Count de Montessus de Ballore[1], our foremost authority in seismic geography[2], computes a yearly average of at least 275. C. Davison[3] in a recent monograph states that 3187 were recorded during the six years 1893—1898, and adds that, for every shock felt in Great Britain, 50 are observed in Japan and no less than 158 in Greece[4]. Similarly J. Partsch[5], after consideration of Julius Schmidt's[6] earthquake-catalogue for 1859—1878, concludes 'that [1] F. de Montessus de Ballore Les tremblements de terre: Géographie sismologique Paris 1906 p. 264.

[2] See C. Davison The Founders of Seismology Cambridge 1927 pp. 160—176.

[3] C. Davison A Manual of Seismology Cambridge 1921 p. 161.

[4] F. de Montessus de Ballore 'Introduction à un essai de description sismique du globe et mesure de la sismicité' in the Beiträge zur Geophysik Leipzig 1900 iv. 357 gives the following statistics for the various divisions of Greece (repeated by C. E. Dutton Earthquakes in the light of the new Seismology London 1904 p. 296):

LOCALITIES	EPICENTRES	EARTH-QUAKES	PERIODS OF OBSERVATION
Thessaly	13	76	1863 1867–1868 1895–1897
Euboia and N. Sporades	23	1228	(Euboia) 1857–1878 1895–1897
Attike, Parnassos, and Lokris	43	1979	1858–1878 1895–1897
Akarnania	17	138	1895–1897
Ionian Isles	41	5700	1825–1868 1875 1892–1893 1895–1897
Achaia	22	308	1860–1876 1882–1883 1887–1888 1895–1897
Korinthia and Argolis	28	311	1858–1878 1886–1888 1895–1897
Lakonike	12	54	1858–1862 1867 1876–1877 1895–1897
Messene	21	93	1895–1897
Arkadia	20	75	1895–1897
Crete	8	100	1858–1888
Kyklades	14	141	1860–1863 1867–1874 1895–1897
General or ill-defined	9	32
General or ill-defined (eastern)	9	71
TOTALS	280	10306

[5] C. Neumann—J. Partsch Physikalische Geographie von Griechenland mit besonderer Rücksicht auf das Alterthum Breslau 1885 p. 320.

[6] J. F. Julius Schmidt Studien über Vulkane und Erdbeben Leipzig 1881 ii.[2] 166—360.

in this land hardly a week, in many years hardly a day, goes by without the ground being noticeably shaken at one point or another, while a second eminent geographer, A. Philippson[1], puts it even more forcibly: 'In Greece the soil trembles somewhere almost every day.'

Greek earthquakes, being tectonic, not volcanic, in character, occur normally along certain well-marked structural lines, which correspond with prominent features of the country—the base of a mountain-range, a straight river-valley, a rocky coast-line[2]. These seismic zones may be enumerated as follows: the northern half of the Straits of Euboia together with the Malian Gulf and the islands Skiathos and Skopelos; an elliptical land-tract including Phokis, Lokris, and Boiotia; the northern coast of the Peloponnese from Corinth to Patrai; the western coast of the Peloponnese with Zakynthos, Kephallenia, and Leukas; the valleys that form the heads of the Messenian, Laconian, and Argolic Gulfs—the principal southerly indentations of the Peloponnese[3]. The distribution thus indicated for modern times is fully borne out by the record of ancient earthquakes, of which a well-arranged and critical list for the period 600 B.C.—600 A.D. has been drawn up by W. Capelle[4].

Since most of the seismic lines traceable in Greece are definitely maritime and the rest within easy reach of the sea, it is not surprising to find that the Greeks of the classical age commonly[5]

[1] A. Philippson Das Mittelmeergebiet, seine geographische und kulturelle Eigenart Leipzig 1904 p. 28.

[2] W. H. Hobbs Earthquakes New York 1907 p. 32.

[3] A. Philippson Der Peloponnes. Versuch einer Landeskunde auf geologischer Grundlage Berlin 1892 p. 437 ff. (fig. 41 chart of Messenian earthquake of Aug. 27, 1886), id. Das Mittelmeergebiet etc. p. 28 f., F. de Montessus de Ballore Les tremblements de terre: Géographie séismologique Paris 1906 p. 267 ff. (fig. 40 seismic map of Greece), W. Capelle 'Erdbeben im Altertum' in the Neue Jahrb. f. klass. Altertum 1908 xxi. 604 f., id. in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Suppl. iv. 345.

[4] W. Capelle in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Suppl. iv. 346—358.

[5] Not invariably. Pythagoras taught that earthquakes were due to a concourse (conflict?) of the dead (Ail. var. hist. 4. 19 καὶ τὸν σεισμὸν ἐγγεναλόγει οὐδὲν ἄλλο εἶναι ἢ σύνοδον τῶν τεθνεώτων = H. Diels Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker[3] Berlin 1912 i. 357, 21 f.)—presumably a folk-belief (Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 814 n. 2).

The frequent notion that earthquake-shocks are occasioned by the movements of a subterranean monster or giant or god (J. Grimm Teutonic Mythology trans. J. S. Stallybrass London 1883 ii. 816 f., 1888 iv. 1542, E. B. Tylor Primitive Culture[3] London 1891 i. 364 ff., Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Adonis Attis Osiris[3] i. 197 ff. ('The Earthquake God'), K. Weinhold 'Die Sagen von Loki' in the Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum 1849 vii. 61 f., P. Sébillot Le Folk-Lore de France Paris 1904 i. 423 f., F. Legge Forerunners and Rivals of Christianity Cambridge 1915 ii. 297 (citing F. Cumont Recherches sur le manichéisme i La cosmogonie manichéenne d'après Théodore bar Khôni Bruxelles 1908 Append. ii), P. Alfaric Les écritures manichéennes Paris 1918 i. 40) is found also in classical tradition (M. Mayer Die Giganten und Titanen Berlin 1887 pp. 195 f., 208 ff., 214 f., Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 434 n. 2).

In the upper-pliocene beds of Samos are extensive deposits of fossil bones—Samotherium, Hipparion mediterraneum, Mastodon longirostris, etc. (L. Bürchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i A. 2168, 2171). These bones were attributed by Euphorion to primeval monsters called Νηάδες, who broke the very ground with their cries and occasioned the Samian proverb 'He bawls louder than the Neddes' (Euphor. frag. 25 Meineke ap. Ail. de nat. an. 17. 28 and Apostol. 9. 51). The statement goes back to the early local historian Euagon of Samos frag. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 16 Müller) ap. Phot. lex. s.v. νῆϊς and Herakl. Pont. frag. 10. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 215 Müller) = Aristot. frag. 611. 30 Rose[3], who however used the form Νήϊδες, not Νηάδες. Νήϊδες, which means 'Witless Ones' (cp. h. Dem. 256), must of course be distinguished from Νηίδες or Νηιάδες, the Naiad nymphs, and may be an attempt to make sense of some pre-Greek name. W. R. Halliday in the Class. Rev. 1927 xli. 59 acutely restores Plout. quaestt. Gr. 56 (Panaima in Samos was so named after a bloody battle between Dionysos and the Amazons) τῶν δ' ἐ<λε>φάντων ἀποθανεῖν τινες λέγονται περὶ τὸ Φλοιὸν καὶ τὰ ὀστᾶ δείκνυται αὐτῶν· τινὲς δὲ λέγουσι καὶ τὸ Φλοιὸν ἐπ' ἐκείνων ῥαγῆναι, φθεγγομένων μέγα τι καὶ διάτορον (see further Halliday ad loc. p. 207 ff.). S. Reinach in the Rev. Arch. 1928 ii. 161 quotes with approval Sir A. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1928 ii. 1. 324: 'The delight of the Earth-shaker in bulls, referred to in the Homeric passage [Il. 20. 403 ff.], may itself find a reasonable explanation in the widespread idea...that earthquakes are produced by some huge beast beneath the Earth. Sometimes, as in Japan, it is a monstrous fish, sometimes an elephant or other animal of prodigious size, but, amongst all of these, the bull is the most natural agent. According to the Moslems of Tashkend [J. Troll in the Zeitschrift für Ethnologie 1892 xxiv. 537 f.], Almighty God set to support the Earth a bull of such monstrous size that from his head to the end of his tail was five hundred years' journey, and the space between his two horns another two hundred [and fifty]. The bull, thus heavily laden, prompted by the Devil, shook his head and tried to throw the Earth off him with his horns. Thereat, a midge was sent to sting him in the nostril, and he set up a mighty bellowing, so that he is known unto this day as "the bellower".'

Again, there is an earthquake when the giant Briareus under Mt Aitne shifts to his other shoulder (Kallim. h. Del. 141 ff.), or when Enkelados beneath the same burden changes his weary side (Verg. Aen. 3. 578 ff.). All Sicily trembles when Typhoeus, crushed by its weight, struggles to thrust it from him (Ov. met. 5. 346 ff., Val. Flacc. 2. 23 ff.). A like commotion was caused when Kaineus, buried beneath a huge mound of stocks and stones, tried in vain to lift his head (Ov. met. 12. 514 ff.). Giants laid low by Herakles—Mimas beneath Prochyte, Iapetos beneath Inarime—made the earth shake above them and blasted the soil of Campania (Sil. It. 12. 143 ff., cp. ib. 529). In particular, Alkyoneus (Claud. de rapt. Pros. 3. 184 f.) and other giants with him were thought to lie beneath Mt Vesuvius (Philostr. her. 2. 7), and during the eruption of 79 A.D. many gigantic phantoms appeared by day and night on the mountain, in the neighbouring towns, and in the sky—a prelude to periods of severe drought and appalling earthquakes (Dion Cass. 66. 22). We may venture to compare the happenings described in Matthew 27. 51—53. Analogous beliefs still linger in Greek lands: a short, sharp earthquake accompanied by a peculiar crash occurred in Zakynthos on Aug. 4/16, 1862, and the next day a peasant employed over the currant-crop in the village of Hagios Kyrikos observed with regard to it 'Some building of the giants must have collapsed' (B. Schmidt Das Volksleben der Neugriechen Leipzig 1871 i. 33, 201 κάτι χτίριο τοῦ γιγάντωνε θὰ ἔπεσε. Cp. supra ii. 505 f.). It should, however, be recognised that the express connexion of earthquakes with buried giants or the like is Hellenistic, not Hellenic. Earlier sources (e.g. Hes. theog. 859 ff., Pind. Pyth. 1. 29 ff., Pherekyd. frag. 14 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 72 Müller) = frag. 54 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 76 Jacoby) ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. 2. 1210 ff.) emphasise volcanic rather than seismic effects.

Other gods could on occasion produce a quake. Athena did so at Troy when wroth with Laokoon (Quint. Smyrn. 12. 395 ff.). Dionysos in Soph. Ant. 153 f. ὁ Θήβας δ' ἐλελίχθων (ἐλελίζων cod. L with γρ. ἐλελίχθων written above by scholiast) | Βάκχιος ἄρχοι bears the title of an earthquake-god (the schol. vet. ad loc., followed by Sir R. C. Jebb, is inadequate—ὁ Θήβας δ' ἐλελίζων Βακχεῖος : ὁ κινησίχθων· ἐλελίχθονα δὲ τὸν Διόνυσόν φησι διὰ τὰς ἐν ταῖς Βακχείαις κινήσεις· ἢ τὸν τὴν γῆν σείοντα καὶ ἀναβακχεύοντα ταῖς χορείαις) and in Eur. Bacch. 586 ff., 605 f., 622 f., 632 f. shatters, or at least is believed to shatter, the house of Pentheus (G. Norwood The Riddle of the Bacchae Manchester 1908 p. 37 ff., id. Greek Tragedy London 1920 p. 281 f., A. W. Verrall The Bacchants of Euripides and other Essays Cambridge 1910 pp. 26 ff., 64 ff.)—an exploit compatible with Orphic belief (Orph. h. Perikion. 47. 1 ff. κικλήσκω Βάκχον Περικιόνιον, | μεθυδώτην, | Καδμείοισι δόμοις ὃς ἐλισσόμενος πέρι πάντῃ (so G. Hermann for περὶ πάντα) | ἔστησε κρατεροὺς βρασμοὺς γαίης ἀποπέμψας, | ἠνίκα πυρφόρος αὐγὴ ἐκίνησε (so P. Scriverius for ἐνίκησε) χθόνα πᾶσαν | πρηστῆρος ῥοίζοις· ὁ δ' ἀνέδραμε δεσμὸς ἀπάντων). Nereus, like Poseidon, makes and can therefore unmake earthquakes (Orph. h. Ner. 23. 5 ff. ὃς κλονέεις Δηοῦς ἱερὸν βάθρον (cp. ἐννοσι-Δᾶς infra p. 9 n. o), ἠνίκα πνοιὰς | ἐν μυχίοις (so G. Hermann for ἐννυχίοις) κευθμῶσιν ἑλαυνομένας ἀποκλείεις· | ἀλλά, μάκαρ, σεισμοὺς μὲν ἀπότρεπε, πέμπε δὲ μύσταις | ὄλβον κ.τ.λ.). But Usener's contention that Aloeus, son of Poseidon by Kanake, 'ist der "Drescher" gewiss nicht allein wörtlich als Gott des Landbaues, sondern vorzugsweise bildlich als Erderschütterer, Ἐλελίχθων Ἐννοσίγαιος' (H. Usener in the Rhein. Mus. 1898 liii. 349=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 278) strikes me as far-fetched and improbable.

The epithet ῥηξίχθων (ῥησίχθων), the 'land-breaker,' has reference in all probability to the disruptive effect of earthquakes, and is applied in Orphic hymns to Dionysos (Orph. h. Lys. Len. 50. 5 ῥηξίχθων (E. Abel cj. ῥήξιχθον), ληναῖε, μεγασθενές, αἰολόμορφε, h. triet. 52. 9 ῥηξίχθων (E. Abel cj. ῥήξιχθον), πυριφεγγές, ἐπάφιε, κοῦρε διμήτωρ (so E. Abel for διμάτωρ)) and in magical spells etc. to a variety of chthonian powers including Hekate (C. Wessely Griechische Zauberpapyrus von Paris und London Wien 1888 p. 88 pap. Par. 2722 f. πότνια ῥηξίχθων σκυ|λακάγεια (A. Nauck cj. σκυλακαγέτι) πανδαμάτειρα, Babelon—Blanchet Cat. Bronzes de la Bibl. Nat. p. 701 ff. no. 2296, 10 ff.=W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2646=R. Wünsch in the Corp. inscr. Att. App. defix. p. xv=A. Audollent Defixionum tabellae Luteciae Parisiorum 1904 p. 69 f. no. 38, 10 ff. (a leaden devotio-tablet of s. iii A.D., found at Alexandreia) ἐπ[ι]καλοῦμαί σε τὴν πάντων ἀνθρώ|πων δυνάστειραν, παμ[φοβ]ερά, ῥηξίχθων, ἡ καὶ ἀνενεγ|καμένη τὰ τοῦ μελιού[χ]ου μέλη καὶ αὐτὸν τὸν με|λιοῦχον, Ἐρεσχιγὰλ νεβουτοσουαλὴθ ἐρεβεννή, | ἄρκυια νέκυϊ Ἑκάτη, Ἑκάτη ἀληθῆ, ἕλθετε καὶ τε|λειώσατέ μοι τὴν πραγματείαν ταύτην (on the identification of Ἐρῖσκιγαl with Hekate and the allusion to the dismemberment of Osiris or Adonis (?) see W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1584 ff., 2645 ff.), Miss L. Macdonald in the Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archæology 1891 xiii. 174 no. 1, 30 ff.=W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2646=A. Audollent op. cit. p. 41 no. 22, 30 ff. (a leaden devotio-tablet of late date, found at Kourion in Kypros) ὁρκίζω ὑμᾶ(s), δέμονες πολυάν|δριοι ('of the graveyard (πολυάνδριον)') κὲ βι(αι)οθάνατοι κὲ ἄωροι κὲ ἄποροι ταφῆς, κατὰ τῆς ῥη|[σι]χθόνης τῆς κατενενκάσης μελιούχου τὰ μέλη κὲ αὐτὸν μελιοῦχον—a formula repeated in Miss L. Macdonald loc. cit. p. 176 no. 3, 16 ff., p. 178 no. 5, 20 ff., p. 179 no. 6, 18 f., p. 180 no. 7, 21 ff., p. 181 no. 8, 18 ff., p. 183 no. 9, 22 ff., p. 184 no. 10, 19 ff., p. 185 no. 11, 18 ff., p. 186 no. 12 f., 21 ff., p. 188 no. 15, 18 ff., p. 190 no. 17, 19 ff.=A. Audollent op. cit. p. 45 no. 24, 16 ff., p. 47 no. 26, 20 ff., p. 49 no. 27, 18 f., p. 51 no. 28, 21 ff., p. 53 no. 29, 19 ff., p. 54 no. 30, 23 ff., p. 56 f. no. 31, 18 ff., p. 59 no. 32, 18 ff., p. 62 no. 33, 22 ff., p. 64 f. no. 35, 18 ff., p. 67 no. 37, 19 ff.), Brimo (C. Wessely Neue griechische Zauberpapyri Wien 1893 p. 45 pap. Lond. 121, 757 f.=F. G. Kenyon Greek Papyri in the British Museum London 1893 i. 106 no. 121, 691 f. (of s. iii A.D.) ὧν οὐ δύνῃ | [παρα]κοῦσαι, Βριμὼ ῥηξίχθων), an unnamed goddess who holds the keys of Hades (Miss L. Macdonald loc. cit. p. 175 no. 2, 12 f.=A. Audollent op. cit. p. 44 no. 23, 12 f. (a leaden devotio-tablet of late date, found at Kourion in Kypros) [κὲ σὺ ἡ τὰς] | [κλίδας τοῦ Ἅδου κα]τέχουσα ῥησίχθων—a formula completed from Miss L. Macdonald loc. cit. p. 174 no. 1, 53 f., p. 178 no. 5 a, 39, p. 182 no. 8, 35, p. 186 no. 11, attributed earthquakes to Poseidon[1]. A memorable passage in the Iliad is explicit on the point:

39, p. 189 no. 15 a, 8 = A. Audollent op. cit. p. 41 no. 22, 53 f., p. 48 no. 26, 39, p. 53 no. 29, 36, p. 60 no. 32, 39, p. 65 no. 35, 36), Sterxerx the door-keeper of hell and heaven (Miss L. Macdonald loc. cit. p. 174 no. 1, 19 ff. = W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1217 = R. Wünsch in the Corp. inscr. Att. App. defix. p. xviii no. 1, 19 ff. = A. Audollent op. cit. p. 40 no. 22, 19 ff. κὲ τὸν ἐπὶ τοῦ πυλῶνος τοῦ "A[δους] | [κ]ὲ τῶν κληθρων τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τεταγμένον Στερξερξ ηρ[ηξα ρη]σίχθων αρδαμαχθουρ πρίστευ λαμπάδευ στεναξκτὰ] | [θά]ψατε τὸν προγεγραμμένον ἐπὶ τοῦδε τοῦ φυμωτ[κοῦ] | [κ]αταθέματος—a formula recurring in L. Macdonald loc. cit. p. 176 no. 3, 9 ff., p. 177 no. 5, 12 ff., p. 180 no. 7, 13 ff., p. 181 no. 8, 10 ff., p. 182 no. 9, 13 ff., p. 184 no. 10, 13 ff., p. 185 no. 11, 11 ff., p. 186 no. 12, 12 ff., p. 187 no. 14, 13 ff., p. 188 no. 15, 11 ff., p. 190 no. 17, 11 ff. = A. Audollent op. cit. p. 45 no. 24, 9 ff., p. 47 no. 26, 12 ff., p. 50 no. 28, 13 ff., p. 52 no. 29, 11 ff., p. 54 no. 30, 14 ff., p. 56 no. 31, 12 ff., p. 59 no. 32, 11 ff., p. 61 no. 33, 13 ff., p. 63 no. 34, 13 ff., p. 64 no. 35, 11 ff., p. 67 no. 37, 11 ff. (ηρηξα with variants ειρηξα and ιρηξα is possibly to be connected with ἰέραξ, Ionic ἴρηξ, the 'hawk': πρίστευ suggests a demon 'who saws men asunder' or perhaps 'who gnashes his teeth', λαμπάδευ 'who brandishes a torch': στενακτά is vocative of στενακτής rather than accusative plural of στενακτός, pace Audollent op. cit. p. 42)), a hawk-headed deity with a basket on its head and in its hands a pair of upright sceptres, round one of which twines a serpent (A. D. Nock in The Journal of Egyptian Archaeology 1925 xi. 158 citing Sir C. H. Smith—Miss C. A. Hutton Catalogue of the Antiquities (Greek, Etruscan and Roman) in the collection of the late Wyndham Francis Cook, Esqre. London 1908 p. 55 no. 248 a flat yellow jasper, with bevelled edge, inscribed PHΣ IXΘWN), and an unidentified fire-god (?) of the Underworld, who figures frequently in the formula μασκελλι μασκελλω φνουκενταβαωθ ορεοβαζαγρα ιπποχθων ῥηξιχθων πυριπηγανυξ or the like (e.g. C. Wessely Griechische Zauberpapyrus von Paris und London p. 89 f. pap. Par. 2753 ff., p. 100 pap. Par. 3175 ff., id. Neue griechische Zauberpapyri p. 61 pap. Lond. 123, 10 f. = F. G. Kenyon op. cit. i. 121 no. 123, 10 f. (of s. iv or v A.D.), F. Ll. Griffith—H. Thompson The Demotic Magical Papyrus of London and Leiden London 1904 (i.) 189 verso col. xv, 2 ff., Babelon—Blanchet Cat. Bronzes de la Bibl. Nat. p. 701 ff. no. 2296, 27 ff. = R. Wünsch in the Corp. inscr. Att. App. defix. p. xv = A. Audollent op. cit. p. 70 no. 38, 27 ff., S. Eitrem in Papyri Osloenses Oslo 1925 i. 9 and 16 no. 1, 154 f., 342 ff. (of s. iv A.D.), cp. S. Eitrem Les papyrus magiques grecs de Paris (Videnskapsselskapets Skrifter. II. Hist.-Filos. Klasse. 1923. No. i) Kristiania 1923 p. 28 pap. Mimaut 94, C. Wessely Neue griechische Zauberpapyri p. 30 pap. Lond. 121, 311 = F. G. Kenyon op. cit. i. 94 no. 121, 302 (on which formula with its variants see C. Wessely Ephesia Grammata aus Papyrusrollen, Inschriften, Gemmen etc. Wien 1886 nos. 244—250, T. Hopfner Griechisch-ägyptischer Offenbarungszauber Leipzig 1921 i. 190 § 747, and S. Eitrem in Papyri Osloenses i. 72 f.)). K. Preisendanz Papyri Graecae magicae Leipzig—Berlin 1931 ii. 215 notes that in no. 7 (pap. Lond. 121), 475 A. D. Nock would emend μνη σιεθων into ῥησίχθων? in a formula addressed to θεὸς οὗτος Ἀναγκῶν, 'Du Gott der Zwangsgöttinnen.'

The fact is that any and every subterranean deity invoked by the magician might be expected to cause an earthquake. Jehovah himself is conjured as the god who rends the mountains and breaks the rocks in pieces (1 Kings 19. 11), who makes the earth to tremble and shake (Ps. 77. 18), the hills to move to and fro (Jer. 4. 24) (A. Audollent op. cit. p. 374 no. 271, 17 f., 34 f. = R. Wünsch Antike Fluchtafeln Bonn 1907 p. 22 no. 5, 17 f. (a leaden devotio-tablet of s. iii A.D., found at Hadrumetum) ὁρκίζω σε τὸν συντρείβοντα τὰς πέτρας· | ὁρκί[ζω] σε τὸν ἀτορήξαντα τὰ ὄρη, p. 24 no. 5, 34 f. δι' ὃν ... καὶ τὰ ὄρη τρέμει | καὶ [ἡ γῆ] καὶ ἡ θάλασσα).

[1] Welcker Gr. Götterl. i. 627, L.-F. A. Maury Histoire des Religions de la Grèce antique Paris 1857 i. 416, Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 572, 583 ff., Gilbert Gr. Götterl. p. 172 f.,

The sire of men and gods thundered on high
Horrific, and beneath Poseidon shook
The boundless earth and the tall mountain-tops.
Yea, all the feet of many-fountained Ide
And all her crests were swaying to and fro,
Troy-town to boot and the Achaean ships.
Deep underground Aïdoneus, king of the dead,
Trembled and, trembling, sprang from his throne and shouted
Lest o'er his head Poseidon, shaker of land,
Should cleave the very earth and bring to the ken
Of mortals and immortals his grim realm,
A mouldering realm that ev'n the gods abhor[1].

This passage is well illustrated by a bronze medallion of Mytilene, struck by Valerianus, and hitherto unpublished (pl. i and fig. 1)[2]. The reverse type is an attempt to visualise the foregoing scene. On the left Poseidon, holding a dolphin (?), threatens the ground with his trident. On the right Hades, a rod or sceptre in his hand, springs from his throne in terror. Zeus, standing between them, with himátion and sceptre, raises his hand to quell the tumult. The whole must refer to some historic earthquake, and may have been struck to commemorate it.

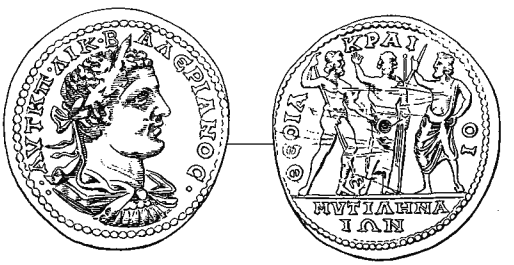

Fig. 1.

The Homeric lines, however effective, are not improbably a late

F. Durrbach in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iv. 60 f., Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 814, 845, 1139 n. 2, E. H. Meyer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2798, 2813 ff., Farnell Cults of Gk. States iv. 7 f.

[1] Il. 20. 56—65.

[2] My specimen came from the cabinet of a Greek collector on May 14, 1928. Obv. ΑΥΤ·Κ·Π·ΑΙΚ·Β ΑΛΕΡΙΑΝΟC. Bust of Valerianus to right. Rev. ΘЄΟΙΑ ΚΡΑΙ ΟΙ|ΜΥΤΙΛΗΝΑ ΙΩΝ. Scene as described above. Pl. i shows the reverse to a scale of $\frac{3}{4}$. L. Holstein's coin (supra ii. 873 n. 0 (10)) had apparently the same reverse combined with an obverse resembling supra ii. 260 fig. 172.

Bronze medallion of Mytilene showing Zeus, Poseidon, and Hades as Theoi Akraioi.

See page 6 n. 2.

interpolation[1]. But in cantos of earlier date Homer calls Poseidon enosíchthon, the 'land-shaker' (?), or ennosígaios, the 'earth-shaker' (?), and often uses both appellatives as substitutes for his name[2]. Pindar

[1] R. C. Jebb Homer: an Introduction to the Iliad and the Odyssey[2] Glasgow 1887 p. 163, W. Leaf in the argument prefixed to his ed. of Il. 20 and in his book A Companion to the Iliad London 1892 p. 331. See, however, D. Mülder Die Ilias und ihre Quellen Berlin 1910 p. 204 f. and in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 1019.

[2] The epithet ἐνοσίχθων is used of Poseidon 23 times in the Iliad, 18 times in the Odyssey (A. Gehring Index Homericus Lipsiae 1891 p. 289), always in the nominative case and always as last word of the hexameter—except Od. 3. 6 ἐνοσίχθονι κυανοχαίτῃ. The usual locution is Ποσειδάων ἐνοσίχθων (24 times), for which κρείων ἐνοσίχθων (7 times) and εὐρυκρείων ἐνοσίχθων (once, Il. 11. 751) are convenient substitutes. Ἐνοσίχθων alone occurs 8 times (H. Ebeling Lexicon Homericum Lipsiae 1885 i. 424).

Ἐννοσίγαιος is similarly used of Poseidon 20 times in the Iliad, 6 times in the Odyssey (A. Gehring op. cit. p. 288). The common phrases are γαιήοχος ἐννοσίγαιος (nom. 4 times, acc. once, dat. twice)—extended in Il. 13. 43 Ποσειδάων γαιήοχος ἐννοσίγαιος (cp. Hom. ep. 6. 1 Ποσειδάων μεγαλοσθενὲς ἐννοσίγαιε—and κλύτος ἐννοσίγαιος (nom. 7 times, acc. twice). Ἐννοσίγαιος alone occurs 6 times (nom. twice, voc. thrice, acc. once), ἐννοσίγαι' εὐρυσθενές thrice. The word mostly occupies the end of the line, but not in Il. 7. 455, 8. 201, 12. 27, 20. 20, 20. 310, 21. 462, Od. 11. 102, 13. 140, h. Pos. 4 (H. Ebeling op. cit. i. 422).

Hence it may be inferred that the old pre-Homeric tags (supra i. 444, ii. 384 n. 0) for dactylic tripodies with anacrusis were Ποσειδάων ἐνοσίχθων and γαιήοχος ἐννοσίγαιος, for dactylic dipodies with anacrusis κρείων ἐνοσίχθων and κλύτος ἐννοσίγαιος. In view of the extreme antiquity of such tags we can hardly expect their interpretation to be free from doubt.

The ν of ἐνοσίχθων becomes νν in ἐννοσίγαιος metri gratia (Cornut. theol. 22 p. 42, 2 Lang has ἐνοσίγαιον, a spelling found in late prose—Souid. ἐνοσίγαιος (cod. A gives νν against the ordo verborum), et. mag. p. 344, 43 ἐνοσίγαιος, Zonar. lex. ἐνοσίγαιος, Favorin. lex. p. 213, 27 ἐνοσίγαιε); and the same reason suffices to explain the lengthened first syllable of εἰνοσίφυλλος (Il. 2. 632, 2. 757, Od. 9. 22, 11. 316. Simon. frag. 41. 1 Bergk[4], 52. 1 Edmonds, 40. 1 Diehl ap. Plout. symp. 8. 3. 4 has ἐννοσίφυλλος, Favorin. lex. p. 658, 59 ἐννοσίφυλλον, Hesych. ἐνοσιφύλλων (A. Meineke cj. ἐνοσίφυλλον)) (W. Schulze Quaestiones epicae Gueterslohae 1892 p. 159 f.). But the common assumption (with query in Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 146, without query ib. p. 521 and in Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. pp. 258, 1080, Walde—Pokorny Vergl. Wörterb. d. indogerm. Spr. i. 254 f.) that ἐνοσι- ἐννοσι- εἰνοσι- are derived from ἐν-Fοθ of ἐνωθέω (Hesych. ἔθει· φθείρει and ἔθων· ... φθείρων are misleading glosses, based on a wrong interpretation of Il. 9. 540, 16. 260. Cp. schol. A. Il. 9. 540) is thoroughly unsatisfactory. ἐν-Fοθ-τι-ς* would have produced, not ἔνοσις, but ἐνFοστις* εἴνοστις* ἔνοστις* (L. Meyer Handb. d. gr. Etym. i. 410, K. F. W. Schmidt in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1913 xlv. 234 n. 3. Boisacq op. cit. p. 1109 and Walde—Pokorny op. cit. i. 255 adduce unconvincingly ὦσις : ὠθέω, πεῖσις : πείθω, etc.). Besides, ἐνωθέω is a late compound (Ap. Rhod. 4. 1243, Plout. v. Lucull. 28) and yields no tolerable sense.

Impressed by these difficulties I endeavoured years ago to divide ἐν-νοσί-γαιος (a compound like ἐμπυριβήτης), 'the earth-god in the water,' cp. Poll. i. 238 γῆ...νότιος, ἔννοτος, ἐννότιος, if not also Eur. I.T. 161 f. γαίας ἐννοτίους (so A. Kirchhoff for ἐν νώτοις) | πηγάς. On this showing ἐνοσίχθων would be a later form due, like εἰνοσίφυλλος, to a misconception (Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 176). The occurrence of Zeus Νόσιος for Νότιος at Miletos (supra i. 733 n. 6, ii. 317 n. 2) might indeed be held to support the connexion with νότιος, νοτίς, etc. and perhaps Neptunus (Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] pp. 516 s.v. 'Neptūnus,' 521 s.v. 'no'). But the suggestion really makes shipwreck on the sense, which I now see to be nonsense. Dr B. F. C. Atkinson improved upon my notion by pointing out to me (Dec. 1925) that ἐ- might be a prothetic vowel, the epithets ἐ-νοσί-χθων, ἐ-ννοσί-γαιος denoting follows suit with Ennosídas[1], and coins fresh compounds to express the god 'that waters the earth.' But, unknown to us both, A. Goebel of Magdeburg had already tried that tack fifty years ago. In a remarkable paper 'Ueber den homerischen Ποσειδάων γαιήοχος ἐννοσίγαιος' (Zeitschrift für die österreichischen Gymnasien 1876 xxvii. 241—252) he had argued that there is in truth no Homeric evidence for Poseidon as an earthquake-god, Il. 20. 56 ff. being a 'späteres Einschiebsel' and ἐννοσίγαιος, ἐνοσίχθων, εἰνοσίφυλλος involving prothetic ε and the root sna of νότιος, νοτίς, etc.—to be rendered 'erdenetzend,' 'Erdbewässerer,' 'feuchtlaubig.'

Another possibility suggested to me by Dr Atkinson (Dec. 1925) is that ἐνο-σί-χθων, ἐννο-σί-γαιος, εἰνο-σί-φυλλος may be related to onus < * enos, 'burden' (Walde op. cit. s.v. 'onus'), and mean 'burdened with the ground,' 'burdened with earth,' 'laden with leaves.' The suffix -σῐ- is frequent in epic compounds (D. B. Monro A Grammar of the Homeric Dialect Oxford 1891 p. 118 f.).

But against all these fancies must be set the solid fact that the said epithets are traditionally interpreted 'shaking the ground,' 'shaking the earth,' 'shaking the leaves' (so all lexicons, ancient or modern). And this tradition must be as old as Hesiod, since ἔνοσις is applied by him to a 'shaking' of the earth (Hes. theog. 681, 706) or sea (Hes. theog. 849). Euripides similarly uses the word of an earthquake (Bacch. 585) or a city's overthrow (Tro. 1326) or the whirling of rhómboi (Hel. 1363). Goebel loc. cit. p. 249 of course maintains that we have here to do with a learned, or unlearned, misunderstanding of ἐνοσί-χθων. On the whole, it is safer to accept the traditional rendering and to assume a verbal stem * ένο- without recognised cognates (L. Meyer op. cit. i. 410).

[1] Pind. Pyth. 4. 57 ff. φάτο δ' Εὐρύπυλος Γα|ιάόχου παῖς ἀφθίτου 'Εννοσίδα | ἔμμεναι (sc. Eurypylos son of Poseidon), 306 ff. δοιοὶ δ' ὑψιχαῖται | ἀνέρες, 'Εννοσίδα | γένος (sc. Periklymenos son of Neleus, son of Poseidon, and Euphemos son of Poseidon).

C. T. Damm Novum lexicon Graecum etymologicum et reale Berolini 1765 p. 2867 bis connects the second element in the compound 'Εννοσί-δας with 'δᾶ dorice pro γῆ.' That δᾶ was Doric for γῆ is indeed affirmed by ancient scholiasts and lexicographers (Aisch. P.v. 568 ἄλευ'ὦ (ἆ ex ὦ factum cod. Med.) δᾶ with schol. ἄλευ' ὦ δᾶ : οἱ Δωριεῖς τὴν γῆν δᾶν καὶ τὸν γνόφον δνόφον (τινὲς οὕτως, ἄλευ ἆ δᾶ· ἄλευ, ἀναχώρει, ἔκκλινε· τὸ δὲ ἆ δᾶ ὦ γῆ. οἱ γὰρ Δωριεῖς τὴν γῆν δῆν καὶ δᾶν φασιν, καὶ τὸν γνόφον δνόφον cod. Med.), Aisch. Ag. 1072 ὀτοτοτοῖ ποποῖ δᾶ, Aisch. Eum. 841 οἵ οἵ δᾶ, φεῦ with schol. δᾶ, φεῦ : δᾶ γῆ (δᾶ : ὦ γῆ cod. Med.) Δωρικῶς, ὅθεν καὶ Δαμάτηρ, Eur. Phoen. 1296 φεῦ δᾶ, φεῦ δᾶ with schol. τινὲς δὲ ἀντὶ τοῦ φεῦ γῆ, κατὰ πάθος μεταβληθέντος τοῦ γάμμα εἰς τὸ δέλτα, ὡς ἐν τῷ Δημήτηρ, πηγή, πηδὴ παρὰ τὸ τὸ ὕδωρ πηδᾶν ἄνω, Aristoph. Lys. 198 φεῦ δᾶ, et. mag. p. 60, 8 ff. ἄλευ' ἆ δᾶ (so J. C. de Pauw for ἀλευάδα) εἴρηται ὡς τὸ φεῦ δᾶ (so J. C. de Pauw for φεύδα). οἱ γὰρ Δωριεῖς τὴν γῆν δᾶν λέγουσι καὶ δαῦαν (so J. C. de Pauw for δίαν Arnald cj. κατ' ἰδίαν H. L. Ahrens cj. ὡς δῖαν cod. Va. has γᾶν καὶ δᾶν but omits καὶ δίαν), ὡς καὶ τὸν γνόφον δνόφον. φεῦ δᾶ (so J. C. de Pauw for φεύδα) οὖν φεῦ γῆ. οὕτως οὖν καὶ τὸ ἄλευ' ἆ δᾶ (so J. C. de Pauw for ἀλευάδα) ἄλευ' ὦ γῆ (sic ego. L. Kulenkamp cj. ἀλεύου γῆ for ἀλέου δᾶ), τοῦ δᾶ ἀντὶ τοῦ γῆ. κειμένου = Favorin. lex. p. 112, 10 ff., Theokr. 4. 17 οὐ Δᾶν (γᾶν cod. k) with schol. vet. p. 139, 12 f. Wendel < οὐ Δᾶν : > οὐ μὰ τὴν Γῆν· οἱ γὰρ Δωριεῖς τὸ γ εἰς δ τρέπουσιν and schol. rec. p. 160, 13 Ahrens οὐ δᾶν : μὰ τὴν γῆν, Theokr. 7. 39 οὐ Δᾶν (γᾶν cod. k) with schol. vet. p. 250, 15 f. Ahrens οὐ δᾶν... : μὰ τὴν γῆν (οὐ γᾶν : οὐ μὰ τὴν γῆν cod. k), Theokr. 18. 25 τᾶν οὐ Δᾶν τις ἄμωμος (so H. L. Ahrens for τᾶν οὐ δᾶν τις ἄμωμος cod. Par. 2833 τᾶν οὐδ' ἄν τις ἄμωμος vulg. H. Köchly cj. τᾶν οὐ μάν τις ἄμωμος A. Meineke cj. τάων οὔτις ἄμωμος F. Bücheler cj. τᾶν οὔτις πανάμωμος J. M. Edmonds cj. τᾶν οὐδ' ἴη τις ἄμωμος), Hesych. δῆ (H. L. Ahrens cj. Δῆ)· γῆ (M. Schmidt ad loc. cites Kyrill. Alex. lex. cod. Dresd. 39 *δῆ*ῶ (sic) ἡ γῆ and Io. Philop. τονικὰ παραγγέλματα 31, 13 δῆ), Souid. Δημήτηρ ἐστὶν ἡ γῆ, οἱονεὶ Γημήτηρ τις οὖσα, Zonar. lex. p. 499 < Δημήτηρ· ἡ γῆ, > οἱονεὶ Γημήτηρ τις οὖσα, Eustath. in Il. p. 436, 41 δάπεδον· γίνεται δὲ παρὰ τὸ δᾶ, ὃ δηλοῖ Δωρικῶς τὴν γῆν, καὶ τὸ πέδον, p. 765, 21 f. ὥσπερ καὶ τὸ Δημήτηρ, ὅ ἐστι γῆ μήτηρ ἀλληγορικῶς, Tzetz. in Hes. o.d. 32 Δημήτηρ γὰρ ἡ γῆ Δωρικῶς. οὗτοι γὰρ ἀντὶ τοῦ γ τιθέασι, δνοφερὸν γνοφερὸν καὶ Δήμητραν Γήμητραν λέγοντες, Greg. Cor. p. 373 n. 35 Schaefer (cod. Voss.) ἀντὶ τοῦ the same idea—elasíchthon[1], 'who smiteth the land,' eleléchthon[2], 'who γ τῷ δ χρῶνται, οἷον Δημήτηρ Γημήτηρ (Schaefer transp. Γημήτηρ Δημήτηρ), γνόφος δνόφος, γνοφερὸν δνοφερόν. In carm. pop. 9 Bergk[4], 50 Diehl ap. Prokl. in Hes. o.d. 389 τριπόλεον δέ (cod. A), where T. Bergk prints τρὶς πολέουσιν and E. Diehl τρίπολον δή, J. M. Edmonds cj. τρίπολος ἡ δῆ). It should, however, be observed that the ancient grammarians in general are by no means committed to this view.

With the dawn of modern philology scholars began to doubt the equation δᾶ=γῆ. H. L. Ahrens De dialecto Dorica Gottingae 1843 p. 80 f. definitely denied it. He explained Ἐννοσίδας either as a simple derivative of ἔνοσις, or as a blundered form of Ἐννοσίγας*, or as equivalent to Ἐννοσίγαιος, Δᾶ being in this case an ancient but unrelated name of the goddess Γᾶ (H. L. Ahrens in Philologus 1866 xxiii. 207 n. 20). Later, on the strength of Cypriote ξᾶ=Attic γῆ (W. Deecke and J. Siegismund in the Studien zur griechischen und lateinischen Grammatik herausgegeben von G. Curtius Leipzig 1875 vii. 221 f., O. Hoffmann Die Griechischen Dialekte Göttingen 1891 i. 221, A. Thumb Handbuch der griechischen Dialekte Heidelberg 1909 p. 292, C. D. Buck Introduction to the Study of the Greek Dialects Boston 1910 p. 55, F. Bechtel Die griechischen Dialekte Berlin 1921 i. 411), Ahrens admitted δᾶ as a Doric form of γῆ (H. L. Ahrens in Philologus 1876 xxxv. 21)—an admission in which he was followed by J. Schmidt in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1881 xxv. 145 ff. and R. Meister Die griechischen Dialekte Göttingen 1889 ii. 221, 254, cp. G. Meyer Griechische Grammatik[3] Leipzig 1896 p. 268 ('δᾶ ist wohl bloss für die Erklärung von Δαΐμᾶτηρ erfunden'). But the normal Doric form of γῆ was γᾶ (É. Boisacq Les dialectes doriens Paris 1891 p. 48 f.), and no recent philologist—even when confronted with Laconian δίφουρα (Hesych. s.v. διφοῦρα (M. Schmidt corr. δίφουρα)· γέφυρα. Λάκωνες) and Gortynian δέφῦρα (D. Comparetti in the Mon. d. Linc. 1893 iii. 293 ff. no. 154, II 14 ff. with facsimile = F. Blass in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 286 f. no. 5000, II ὁ 14 ff. τὰν δὲ ῥοὰν λεί[π][εν ὅττον κατέχει ᾖ (Comparetti reports Δ, a mason's error) ἐπ' ἀγορᾶι δέφυρα ἢ πλίον, μεῖον δὲ μή) = γέφυρα—would support the claim that δᾶ is a legitimate Dorism for γῆ.

That being so, we must abandon the attempt to make Ἐννοσίδας a dialect form of Ἐννοσίγαιος. For all that, it may amount to much the same thing. Personally I incline to the view that Δᾶ was an ancient name of the earth-mother (supra ii. 584 nn. 0, 1, 585 n. 1), Δᾶς an ancient name of the sky-father, ultimately related to Ζεύς (H. L. Ahrens in Philologus 1866 xxiii. 206 f.) and found as second element in the compounds ποτι-Δᾶς, 'Lord Zeus' (supra ii. 582 ff.), and ἀϊ-Δάας ἀϊ-Δᾶς, 'Zeus of the Earth' (Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 175 f., Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 280 ff.); and I should interpret ἐννοσι-Δᾶς as 'He that shaketh Da, the Earth' rather than as 'Das or Zeus of the earthquake' (cp. Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 175). The later accentuation Ποτίδας, Ἀΐδας, Ἐννοσίδας was due—I conceive—to the false analogy of patronymics.

Others prefer to suppose that in the tragic exclamation δᾶ we have the vocative and in the bucolic abjuration οὐ δᾶν the accusative case of Δᾶς, 'Zeus' (so H. L. Ahrens in Philologus 1866 xxiii. 206 f., R. Kühner—F. Blass Ausführliche Grammatik der griechischen Sprache[3] Hannover 1890 i. 144, 459).

[1] Pind. frag. 18 Bergk[4] ap. Eustath. comment. Pind. praef. 16 (opusc. p. 56, 19 f. Tafel) καὶ 'ἐλασίχθονα Ποσειδῶνα' τὸν ἐννοσίγαιον. F. G. Schneidewin in his Eustathii proœmium commentariorum Pindaricorum Gottingae 1837 p. 7 n. 13 says: 'Hoc quoque novum.' But T. Bergk ad loc. adds: 'nisi forte Pyth. VI 50 pro τὸν δ' Ἐλέλιχθον olim etiam Ἐλάσιχθον legebatur.' L. Dindorf in Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. iii. 669 c cp. Hesych. s.v. Ἐλάτης· ὁ Ποσειδῶν, ἐν Ἀθήναις; which, however, J. A. Hartung Die Religion und Mythologie der Griechen Leipzig 1866 iii. 219 and O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2240 would translate 'Rower.' More probably it means 'Driver' of horses (so H. Usener in the Rhein. Mus. 1898 liii. 348 f. = id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 278 and Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1161 n. 4, cp. Farnell Cults of Gk. States iv. 17) = Poseidon Ἵππιος, Ἱππηγέτης, Ἱμψιος.

[2] Pind. Pyth. 6. 50 ff. Ἐλελίχθον... |... |...Ποσειδάν.

maketh the land to reel,' seisíchthon[1], 'who maketh the land to quake.' Sophokles speaks of him as tináktor gaías[2], the 'agitator of the earth.' And the poets in general conceive of him as stirring both land and sea with his trident[3].

But behind the poets lay old-world tradition. The Homeric epithet gaíeochos[4] was an actual cult-title of the god in Lakonike at [1] Pind. Isthm. 1. 76 Κρόνου σεισίχθον' υἱόν (sc. Poseidon), Bakchyl. 16. 57 ff. εἰ | δὲ καὶ σὲ (sc. Theseus) Τροιζηνία σεισίχθονι | φύτευσεν Αἴθρα Ποσει|δᾶνι, κ.τ.λ., 17. 21 f. Κρονίδα Λυταίου | σεισίχθονος τέκος (sc. Sinis son of Poseidon Λυταίος (cp. Steph. Byz. s.v. Λυταί, χωρίον Θεσσαλίας, διὰ τὸ λῦσαι τὰ Τέμπη Ποσειδῶνα καὶ σκεδάσαι τὸ ἀπὸ τοῦ κατακλυσμοῦ ὕδωρ, Hesych. s.v. Λυταίη · Θετταλή)), Dion. Hal. ant. Rom. 2. 31 καλεῖται δὲ ὁ θεός, ᾧ ταῦτα ἐπιτελοῦσι, Κῶνσος ὑπὸ Ῥωμαίων · δν ἐξερμηνεύοντες εἰς τὴν ἡμετέραν γλῶτταν, Ποσειδῶνα σεισίχθονά φασιν εἶναί τινες, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ὑπογείῳ τετιμῆσθαι βωμῷ λέγουσιν, ὅτι τὴν γῆν ὁ θεὸς οὗτος ἔχει. κ.τ.λ., Cornut. theol. 22 p. 42, 1 f. Lang εἶτα ἐνοσίχθονα καὶ ἐνοσίγαιον καὶ σεισίχθονα καὶ τινάκτορα γαίας κ.τ.λ., Gell. 2. 28. 1 antiquissimi Graecorum, qui Neptunum σεισίχθονα appellaverunt, Amm. Marc. 17. 7. 12 Neptunum humentis substantiae potestatem Ennosigaeon et Sisichthona poetae veteres et theologi nuncupaverunt, Orph. Arg. 345 f. αὐτόν τε Κρονίδην σεισίχθονα, κυανοχαίτην, | κύματος ἐκπροβορόντα μολεῖν ἐπιτάρροθον ὅρκων, Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 4. 47. 1 f. = Orph. frag. 2, 1 f. Abel, 285, 1 f. Kern φράζεο δὴ καὶ τόνδε λόγον, τέκος, ὀππότε κεν δὴ | γαῖαν κινήσῃ Σεισίχθων κυανοχαίτης (Cougny and Abel print σεισίχθων Κυανοχαίτης), | κ.τ.λ., oracl. Sib. 3. 402 ff. (cp. 1. 184 ff.) Geffcken ὁππότε κεν Ῥείης μικρὸν γένος ἐν χθονὶ κῦμα (so Wilamowitz for ῥεῦμα, cp. 1. 184) | ἄέναον βίξῃσιν ἀδιψήτοισι τεθηλὸς | αὐτόπρεμνον ἄιστον ἰῇ ἐν νυκτὶ γένηται | ἐν πόλει αὐτάνδρῳ σεισίχθονος (so Castalio (S. Châteillon) for ἀτίσεις χθονὸς cod. Φ and ἀτήσεις χθονὸς cod. Ψ) ἐννοσιγαίου, | ἣν ποτε φημίξουσιν ἐπωνυμίην Δορύλαιον | ἀρχαίης Φρυγίης πολυδακρύτοιο κελαινῆς (allusion to Kelainai). [But in oracl. Sib. 2. 16 ff. Geffcken ὁπόταν σεισίχθων ἀστεροπητής | εἰδώλων ζῆλον θραύσει λαόν τε τινάξει| Ῥώμης ἐπταλόφοιο the reference is to the supreme Deity of the Jews or the Christians.] Cp. et. mag. p. 668, 54 σείσω, σεισίχθων.

Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 267 Ἐπίθετα Ποσειδῶνος (10) κινησίχθονος perhaps originated in a gloss, cp. Hesych. s.v. ἐννοσίγαιος· κινησίγαιος. ἐπίθετον Ποσειδῶνος.

[2] Soph. Trach. 500 ff. καὶ ὅπως Κρονίδαν ἀπάτασεν (sc. how Kypris beguiled Zeus) οὐ λέγω, | οὐδὲ τὸν ἔννυχον Ἄιδαν, | ἢ Ποσειδάωνα τινάκτορα γαίας, Cornut. theol. 22 p. 42, 2 Lang (quoted in the preceding note) = Eudok. viol. 769 (p. 569, 24 f. Flach) εἶτα ἐνοσίχθονα καὶ ἐνοσίγαιον καὶ σεισίχθονα καὶ τινάκτορα γαίας κ.τ.λ. Cp. Nonn. Dion. 21. 155 f. καὶ χθονὸς ἐπρήνυε (sc. Hera) τινάκτορα κυανοχαίτην | γνωτὸν ἑὸν καὶ Ζῆνα πόσιν καὶ μητέρα Ῥείην, κ.τ.λ.

[3] Aisch. P.v. 924 f. θαλασσίαν τε γῆς τινάκτειραν νόσου, | τρίαιναν, αἰχμὴν τὴν Ποσειδῶνος, σκεδᾷ (sc. Zeus) (Wilamowitz, accepting the νόσων of cod. Med.[1], rewrites θαλασσίαν τε γῆς τινάκτειραν νόσων | αἰχμήν, τρίαιναν ἣ Ποσειδῶνος σκεδᾷ), Aristoph. eq. 839 f. τῶν ξυμμάχων τ' ἄρξεις ἔχων τρίαιναν, | ᾗ πολλὰ χρήματ' ἐργάσει σεῖσαι τε καὶ ταράττων (of Demos as Poseidon), nub. 566 f. τόν τε μεγασθενῆ τριαίνης ταμίαν, | γῆς τε καὶ ἁλμυρᾶς θαλάσσης ἄγριον μοχλευτῆν with schol. ad loc. δοκεῖ γὰρ ὁ Ποσειδῶν οὐ τὴν θάλασσαν κινεῖν μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν γῆν, Nikephoros progymn. 7. 12 (C. Walz Rhetores Graeci Stuttgartiae —Tubingae 1832 i. 498, 15 f.) Ποσειδῶν τὴν γῆν ἀνεμόχλευε, cp. Verg. Aen. 2. 418 f., 610 ff.

[4] Homer uses this epithet sometimes with (Il. 13. 43, 20. 34, Od. 1. 68, 3. 55, 8. 322, 8. 350, 9. 528, h. Pos. 6), sometimes without the name of the god (Il. 9. 183, 13. 59, 13. 83, 13. 125, 13. 677, 14. 355, 15. 174, 15. 201, 15. 222, 23. 584, Od. 11. 241, h. Herm. 187), but always of Poseidon. Later poets, misconceiving the second element in the compound, applied it to other deities (Aisch. suppl. 813 ff. σεβί|ξοὺ δ' ἱκέτας σέθεν, γαι|άοχε παγκρατὲς Ζεῦ, Soph. O.T. 159 ff. πρῶτά σε κεκλόμενος, θύγατερ Διός, ἄμβροτ'

Therapne[1] and Gythion[2], in Attike at Athens[3], and in the archi-

Αθάνα, | γαιάοχόν τ' ἀδελφεὸν | Ἄρτεμιν, κ.τ.λ.) in the sense of 'holding' or 'guarding our land.' Nonnos makes it mean 'dwelling on earth' (Nonn. interpr. ev. Io. 1. 5 line 11 f. (xliii. 749 A Migne) ἐν ἀχλυόεντι δὲ κόσμῳ | οὐρανίαις σελάγιζε βολαῖς γαιήοχος αἴγλη). Another and less pardonable blunder in etymology accounts for Bekker anecd. i. 229, 8 γαιήοχος ἵππος, ἀπὸ τοῦ τοῖς ὀχήμασι χαίρειν.

In Hes. theog. 15 ἠδὲ Ποσειδάωνα γαιήοχον ἐννοσίγαιον cod. D reads γεήοχον, which is accepted by K. W. Goettling—J. Flach and H. G. Evelyn White. But the vulgate is defensible as an example of internal shortening (R. Kühner—F. Blass Ausführliche Grammatik der griechischen Sprache[3] Hannover 1890 i. 312 f.).

The supposed derivation from ἔχω gave rise to various forms in -οῦχος (Hesych. s.vv. γαιηούχῳ· τῷ τὴν γῆν ὀχοῦντι, καὶ συνέχοντι, γεοῦχος· ὁ τὴν γῆν ἔχων, γηοῦχος· ὁ τὴν γῆν συνέχων, Souid. s.vv. γαιοῦχος· ὁ τὴν γῆν ὀχῶν, γεοῦχος· ὁ Ποσειδῶν, ὁ τὴν γῆν ἔχων, Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 267 Ἐπίθετα Ποσειδῶνος (4) γαιηούχου. γεούχου δέ, Eustath. in Od. p. 1392, 23 ff. σημείωσαι δὲ ὡς γαιήοχος μὲν μοναχῶς διὰ διφθόγγου, γεοῦχος δὲ καὶ γηοῦχος καθ' Ἡρῳδιανὸν μὲν καὶ Δίδυμον διὰ ἓ ψιλοῦ παρὰ τὴν ψιλογραφουμένην γέαν ἧς συναίρεμα ἡ γῆ· ἄλλοι δὲ διὰ τῆς αι διφθόγγου παρὰ τὴν λοιπὴν γαῖαν ἐξ ἧς καὶ ὁ γαιήοχος).

Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 267 Ἐπίθετα Ποσειδῶνος (3) γαιείου. γαιηΐου δέ possibly preserves a genuine appellative of Poseidon, though the glossator—according to O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 484—was thinking of the phrase Γαιήιος υἱός (Od. 7. 324, Anth. Pal. 14. 23. 1).

[1] Near Therapne was a sanctuary of Poseidon Γαιάοχος (Paus. 3. 20. 2 τούτου δὲ οὐ πολὺ Ποσειδῶνος ἀφέστηκεν ἱερὸν ἐπίκλησιν Γαιαόχου) with a hippodrome, which was visited by Epameinondas' cavalry in 369 B.C. (Xen. Hell. 6. 5. 30 ἐκ τούτου δὴ ἡμέρᾳ τρίτῃ ἢ τετάρτῃ προῆλθον οἱ ἱππεῖς εἰς τὸν ἱππόδρομον εἰς Γαιαόχου κατὰ τάξεις, οἵ τε Θηβαῖοι πάντες καὶ οἱ Ἠλεῖοι καὶ ὅσοι Φωκέων ἢ Θετταλῶν ἢ Δοκρῶν ἱππεῖς παρῆσαν). The festival of the god Γαιάοχος is mentioned repeatedly on a stêle of white marble, which was found in two portions—the one in the monastery of the Ἁγιοι Τεσσαράκοντα or Σαράντα between Sparta and Chrysapha (W. M. Leake Travels in the Morea London 1830 ii. 521 with pl. 71 at end of vol. iii, Roehl Inscr. Gr. ant. no. 79, id. Imagines inscriptionum Græcarum antiquissimarum[3] Berolini 1907 p. 100 no. 17, Roberts Gk. Epigr. i. 262 ff. no. 264, R. Meister in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 10 f. no. 4416, Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 946, M. N. Tod and A. J. B. Wace A Catalogue of the Sparta Museum Oxford 1906 p. 64 f. no. 440), the other in the ruined temple of Athena Χαλκίοικος at Sparta (H. J. W. Tillyard in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1906—1907 xiii. 174—182 with photographic fig., A. M. Woodward ib. p. 178, W. Kolbe in Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. i no. 213). Beneath a spirited, though much damaged, relief of a four-horse chariot driven from right to left (M. N. Tod and A. J. B. Wace op. cit. p. 176 no. 440) comes a long inscription in Doric, to be dated shortly before 431 B.C. The opening lines (1—5) contain a metrical dedication: Δαμόνον | ἀνέθεκε Ἀθαναία[ι] | Πολιάχοι κ.τ.λ. Then follow four lists of victories: (6—34) those of Damonon in chariot-races; (35—49) those of Damonon's son Enymakratidas; (49—65) those of Damonon as a boy; (66—96) those of Damonon and Enymakratidas at the same contests. The record includes various events ἐν Γαιαΐοχω, 'at (the festival) of Gaiâochos' (Inscr. Gr. Arc. Lac. Mess. i no. 213, 6 ff. τάδε ἐνίκαhε Δαμόνο[ν] | τôι αὐτô τεθρίππο[ι] | αὐτὸς ἀνιοχίον· | ἐν Γαιαΐοχο τετράκιν, 49 ff. καὶ Δαμόνον | ἐνίκε παῖς ἰὸν ἐν | Γαιαΐοχο στάδιον καὶ | δ[ί]αυλον, 81 ff. ὑπὸ δὲ Ἀριστῆ ἔφορον | τάδε ἐνίκε Δαμόνον· | ἐν Γαιαΐοχο ἐνηεβόhαις | [hί]πποις αὐτὸς ἀνιοχίον | [κ]αὶ hο κέλεξ μιâς ἁμέρας | [hἁ]μâ ἐνίκε καὶ hο hυιὸς | στάδιον καὶ δίαυλον καὶ | δολιχὸν μιâς ἁμέρας | ἐνίκον πάντες hαμâ, 90 ff. ὑπὸ δὲ Ἐχεμένε ἔφορον | τάδε ἐνίκε Δαμόνον· | ἐν Γαιαΐοχο | ἐνηεβόhαις | hἱπποις αὐτὸς ἀνιοχίον | [κ]αὶ ὁ hυιὸς στάδιον κα[ὶ] | [δίαυλον καὶ δολιχὸν μιâς] | [ἁμέρας hαμâ ἐνίκε]). Cp. Hesych. s.v. γαιήοχος· ὁ τὴν γῆν συνέχων, ἢ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ὀχούμενος (so M. Schmidt for ὑπὸ τῆς γῆς συνεχόμενος cod.). ἢ ὁ ἱππικός, ὁ ἐπὶ τοῖς ὀχήμασιν ἢ ἅρμασι χαίρων (so J. V. Perger for ὀχήμασι ἄρξουσι χαίρειν cod.). Λάκωνες.

[2] There was at Gythion a sanctuary of Demeter and, adjoining it, a statue of Poseidon Γαιάοχος (Paus. 3. 21. 8 καὶ Δήμητρος ἱερὸν ἄγιον καὶ Ποσειδῶνος ἄγαλμα Γαιαόχου (so codd. Va. Ag. Pc. Lb. γαιαούχου codd. Vb. La. R. Pa.)). Both deities figure on coins of the town—Demeter seated, holding corn-ears and sceptre, on a bronze coin struck by Geta (Numismata quædam cujuscunque formæ et metalli musei Honorii Arigoni, Veneti Tarvisii 1741 i. 9 no. 134, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. i. 62 no. 5), Poseidon standing, naked, with dolphin in outstretched right hand and trident in raised left, on a bronze coin struck by Caracalla (Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner op. cit. i. 62 no. 6 pl. O, 3).

[3] Athens had a priest of Poseidon Γαιήοχος and Ἐρεχθεύς (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 276 = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 860, 37 = Roberts—Gardner Gk. Epigr. ii. 469 no. 268 a theatre-seat inscribed shortly before the Christian era ἱερέως | Ποσειδῶνος | Γαιήοχου καὶ | Ἐρεχθέως), otherwise styled Poseidon Ἐρεχθεὺς Γαιήοχος (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 805 = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 790 a base of Pentelic marble, on the akropolis at Athens, recording a statue of C. Iulius Spartiaticus erected in the time of Nero Γά(ϊον) Ἰούλιον Σπαρτια|τικόν, ἀρχιερέα θε[ῶν] Σεβαστῶν κ[αὶ]|[γ€]νους Σε[β]αστῶν | ἐκ τοῦ κοινοῦ τῆ[ς]| Ἀχαΐας διὰ βίου πρῶ|τον τῶν ἀπ' αἰῶνος, | ὁ ἱερεὺς Ποσειδῶνος[ς] | Ἐρεχθέος Γαιήοχου | Τι(βέριος) Κλαύδιος Θεογέν[ης] | Παιανιεὺς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ | φίλον).

These inscriptions imply a rather half-hearted identification of Erechtheus with Poseidon Γαιήοχος. Other available evidence points in the same direction; for, whereas in s. iv B.C. the tribe Erechtheïs is careful to distinguisb its eponymous hero from Poseidon (Corp. inscr. Att. iv. 2 no. 556 c, 1 ff. = J. v. Prott and L. Ziehen Leges Graecorum sacrae ii no. 27, 1 ff. = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. ii—iii. 1 no. 1146, 1 ff. a decree of the tribe Erechtheïs, before 350 B.C. θεοί. | Φίλτων εἶπεν· ἰ[ερᾶσθαι τῶι Ποσειδῶ]νι καὶ τῶι Ἐρε[χθεῖ τὸν ἱερέα τὸν ἀεὶ] | λαχόντα τύχ[τι ἀγαθῆι τῆς βολῆς καὶ] | τοῦ δήμο το[ῦ Ἀθηναίων καὶ τῆς φυλῆς] | τῆς Ἐρεχθη[δος – – – – – –] | πάτρια καὶ κα[– – – – – θύειν δ]|ἐ ταῦρον καὶ τ[– – – – – – –] | κ.τ.λ.)—a distinction observed as late as s. ii A.D. (Paus. 1. 26. 5 ἐσελθοῦσι δὲ (sc. into the Erechtheion) εἰσι βωμοί, Ποσειδῶνος, ἐφ' οὗ καὶ Ἐρεχθεῖ θύουσιν ἕκ του (so R. Porson and É. Clavier for ἑκ τοῦ codd.) μαντεύματος, καὶ ἥρωος Βούτου, τρίτος δὲ Ἡφαίστου. Δελτ. Ἀρχ. 1889 p. 20 f. no. 18 (a fragmentary marble base inscribed in s. ii (?) A.D. and built into a buttress on the southern wall of the akropolis at Athens) [. . . .]α Ποσειδω[ν. . . . .]| [.]άνιον Παιανιέα [. . . . .]|ου Ἀτερνίου Ἄβρω[νος. . . . .] | Ἐρεχθέως [. . . . .]| [. . . . .] is indecisive)—, there was, at least from s. v B.C. onwards, a growing tendency to equate Poseidon with Erechtheus, the earlier occupant of the Erechtheion (supra ii. 793), the result being a syncretistic god called Poseidon Ἐρεχθεύς (Lebas—Foucart Attique no. 104 = Corp. inscr. Att. i no. 387 = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. i no. 580 a small column of Pentelic marble found near the Erechtheion and inscribed in lettering of s. v B.C. Ἐπιτέλες | Οἰνοχάρες | Σοιναύτο | Περγασῆθεν | Ποσειδόνι | Ἐρεχθεῖ | ἀνεθέτεν, Apollod. 3. 15. 1 Πανδίονος δὲ ἀποθανόντος οἱ παῖδες τὰ πατρῷα ἐμερίσαντο, καὶ τὴν <μὲν (ins. I. Bekker) > βασιλείαν Ἐρεχθεὺς λαμβάνει, τὴν δὲ ἱερωσύνην τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς καὶ τοῦ Ποσειδῶνος τοῦ Ἐρεχθέως (so C. G. Heyne, followed by R. Hercher, R. Wagner, Sir J. G. Frazer, for ἐριχθονίου codd. C. Müller, A. Westermann, I. Bekker accept Ἐριχθονίου) Βούτης, [Plout.] de vitis decem oratorum 7 Lykourgos 843 B Μήδειος, ὃς τὴν ἱερωσύνην Ποσειδῶνος Ἐρεχθέως εἶχε, ib. 843 C καὶ Διοκλέα, διετάξατο δὲ καὶ τὴν ἱερωσύνην τοῦ Ποσειδῶνος Ἐρεχθέως (sc. Medeios ii and Diokles iii in the stemma of the Eteoboutadai as given by J. Töpffer Attische Genealogie Bonn 1889 p. 318. [Plout.] loc. cit. 843 E—F states that the insigne of the priesthood was a trident handed on from one man to another, and that a group of successive priests was painted by Ismenias of Chalkis ἐν πίνακι τελείῳ (on a tablet of full-length figures?) and dedicated in the Erechtheion by Habron son of Lykourgos the orator. A. Reinach Textes grecs et latins relatifs à l'histoire de la peinture ancienne Paris 1921 i. 305 n. 4 shows that this ancestral group contained seven figures and must have been executed between 320 and 310 B.C.), Hesych. s.v. Ἐρεχθεύς· Ποσειδῶν ἐν Ἀθήναις (= Favorin. lex. p. 744, 36 f.), schol. Lyk. Al. 158 τὸ δὲ Ἐρεχθεὺς τινὲς μὲν ἐπὶ τοῦ Ποσειδῶνος, ἄλλοι δὲ ἐπὶ τοῦ Διὸς ἤκουσαν, Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 158 ἔστειλεν ὁ Ἐρεχθεὺς ὁ Ζεὺς ἢ ὁ Ποσειδῶν παρὰ τὸ ἐρέχθω τὸ κινῶ λεγόμενος (cp. supra ii. 793)) or less often Ἐρεχθεὺς Poseidon (Athenag. supplicatio pro Christianis 1 p. 1, 12 f. Schwartz ὁ δὲ pelago at Thera[1]. The meaning of the epithet has been the subject of much discussion[2]; but there can nowadays be no doubt that it denotes the 'earth-bearer,' just as aigíochos is the 'aigís-bearer[3].'

'Αθηναῖος 'Ερεχθεῖ Ποσειδῶνι θύει κ.τ.λ., A. N. Skias in the 'Εφ 'Αρχ. 1897 p. 62 ff. no. 49 (=id. ib. 1895 p. 107 f. no. 21+P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1882 vi. 436 ff., two portions of a marble block, which records the dedication, under M. Aurelius or Commodus, of a statue representing the granddaughter of Claudius Demostratos, one of the enemies of Herodes Attikos and his accuser before Aurelius), 21 ff. θυγατέρα Φ[ιλίπ]πης Κλ(αυδίου) Δημοστράτου 'Αθηναίου, ἀρξαντος ἐν τῆ[ι πατρίδι] | τὴν ἐπώνυμον ἀρχήν, στρατηγήσαντος ἐπ[ὶ τὰ ὅπλα,] | γυμνασιαρχήσαντος, κηρυκεύσαντος τῆς [ἐξ 'Αρείου] | πάγου βουλῆς, ἀγωνοθετήσαντος Παν[αθηναίων] | καὶ 'Ελευσινίων, ἐξηγητοῦ μυστηρί[ων, ἱερέως] | 'Ερεχθέως Ποσειδῶν[ος]).

The fact that Poseidon at Athens bore the cult-title Γαιήοχος gives special point to Soph. O.C. 1070 ff. οἳ τὰν ἱππίαν | τιμῶσιν 'Αθάναν | καὶ τὸν πόντιον γαιάοχον | 'Ρέας φίλον υἱόν.

[1] A rough stone, about a foot long, dug up a little below the great wall which supports the eastern side of the agorá at Thera, is inscribed in lettering of s. vi (?) B.C. [Γ]αιάοχος (F. Hiller von Gaertringen in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1899 xiv Arch. Anz. p. 183, id. in Inscr. Gr. ins. iii Suppl. no. 1371 with fig.=my fig. 2, F. Blass in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 169 no. 4723).

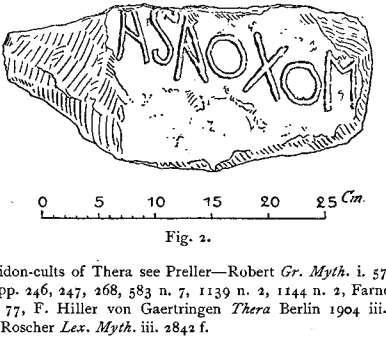

Fig. 2.

On the Poseidon-cults of Thera see Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 575 n. 1, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 246, 247, 268, 583 n. 7, 1139 n. 2, 1144 n. 2, Farnell Cults of Gk. States iv. 90 n. 77, F. Hiller von Gaertringen Thera Berlin 1904 iii. 57 f., 63, 97, E. H. Meyer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2842 f.

[2] Ancient and modern opinions are listed by Welcker Gr. Götterl. i. 627, Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 572 n. 1, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1139 n. 2 sub fin., O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 486. For a fuller discussion leading up to the right derivation, though not to the right interpretation, see A. Goebel in the Zeitschrift für die österreichischen Gymnasien 1876 xxvii. 243—246.

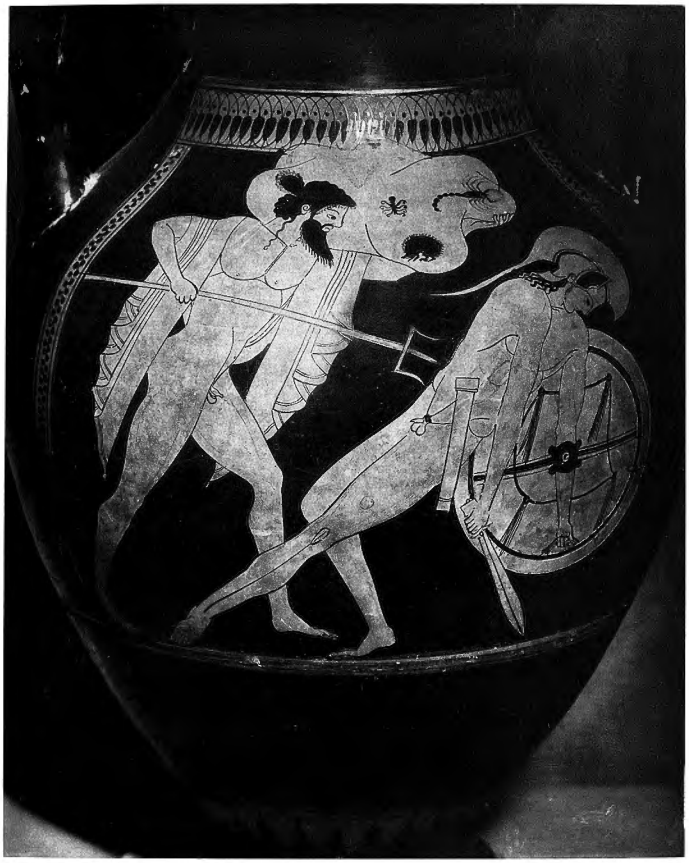
[3] In view of the form Γαιάοχος (supra p. 11 n. 1), philologists are all but unanimous in deriving the compound from γαῖα+-ϝοχος and in referring the second element to ϝεχω=Lat. veho (A. Bezzenberger in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 367 ff. no. 1267, 24 (Sillyon in Pamphylia) ϝεχέτω 'let him bring,' R. Meister Die griechischen Dialekte Göttingen 1889 ii. 168 f. no. 14^{b}, 2 (cp. p. 244 -ϝεχ- 'darbringen')=O. Hoffmann Die Griechischen Dialekte Göttingen 1891 i. 46 no. 66, 2 (Chytroi in Kypros) ἔϝεξε 'he brought' an offering), ὄχος neut. (for ϝέχος*, cp. Hesych. ἔχεσφιν· ἅρμασιν, with ὀ- under the influence of ὄχος masc., ὀχεῖσθαι). See J. Schmidt in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1895 xxxiii. 456, Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.^{2} p. 88 'die Erde bewegend, erschütternd,' Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 139 'qui secoue la terre,' but ib. p. 735 'qui véhicule la terre,' F. Bechtel Lexilogus zu Homer Halle a.d.S. 1914 p. 17 'der die Erde bewegt,' G. Meyer in Philologus 1923 Suppl. xvi. 3. 71 n. 1 'erdbewegend,' Walde—Pokorny Vergl. Wörterb. d. indogerm. Spr. i. 249 'der die Erde bewegt.' The history of ὄχος, ὀχεῖσθαι is—pace the pundits—decisive for the meaning 'earth-carrier' as against 'earth-shaker.'

P. Kretschmer ploughed a lonely and fruitless furrow, when he sought to take the epithet as the equivalent of Γαῖων ὀχεύων 'mating with Gaia' (Glotta 1914 v. 303 and 1924 xiii. 270).

Poseidon appears as 'earth-carrier' in ceramic illustrations of the Gigantomachy (Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Poseidon pp. 328—331 Atlas pl. 4, 6, 8, 12 b, pl. 5, 1 b, 1 c, pl. 12, 25—27, pl. 13, 1, B. N. Staes in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1886 p. 88 pl. 7, 2, M. Mayer Die Giganten und Titanen Berlin 1887 pp. 316—319, H. Dibbelt Quaestiones Coae mythologae Gryphiswaldiae 1891 p. 14 f., Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 70, 584, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 258 n. 16, Frazer Pausanias ii. 48—50, E. H. Meyer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2815 f., H. Bulle ib. iii. 2867, O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Suppl. iii. 659, 669, 686, 754 f., J. Six in the Ath. Mitth. 1925 l. 117 ff. pl. 1). According to the oldest accessible form of the myth 'Polybotes, chased through the sea by Poseidon, came to Kos; whereupon Poseidon, breaking off a piece of that island now called Nisyros, hurled it upon him' (Apollod. 1. 6. 2, cp. Strab. 489, Eustath. in Dionys. per. 525, Plin. nat. hist. 5. 133 f.). A variant version tells how Polybotes, when struck by Zeus, started to swim, and how Poseidon flung a trident at him but failed to hit, the missile becoming the island Nisyros or Porphyris (Steph. Byz. s.v. Νίσυρος (=Eudok. viol. 764, Favorin. lex. pp. 1311, 14 f., 1536, 18 ff.)). Black-figured vases regularly show Poseidon moving from left to right and bearing on his left shoulder the mass of rock with which he is about to overwhelm his opponent (Overbeck op. cit. p. 328 ff. enumerates fourteen such vases). But only one vase, an Ionian amphora, adds the name Polybotes (supra ii. 713 pl. xxx). Red-figured vases of the strong style (c. 500—460 B.C.) give Poseidon in the same attitude, but further characterise his rock as the island by representing on it an assortment of land- and sea-creatures (Overbeck op. cit. p. 330 f. lists eight such vases. Typical are (1) an amphora from Vulci, now in the Vatican, referred by J. D. Beazley Attic Red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 52, Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 111 no. 2 and by Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 206 f. no. 4 to 'the painter of the Diogenes amphora,' a contemporary of Myson and of 'the Eucharides painter' (Mus. Etr. Gregor. ii pl. 56, 1 a (=ii² pl. 60, 1 a), Overbeck op. cit. p. 331 no. 8 Atlas pl. 12, 25, W. Helbig *Führer durch die öffentlichen Sammlungen klassischer Altertümer in Rom*³ Leipzig 1912 i. 308 no. 489, with photographs by Moscioni (no. 8572) and Alinari (no. 35754=my pl. ii)): (2) a kylix from Vulci, now at Berlin (Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin ii. 589 ff. no. 2293), attributed to 'the Brygos painter' (supra ii. 777 n. 2, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 176 no. 6. R. Zahn in Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 257 f. pl. 160 (part=my fig. 3) supersedes E. Gerhard Griechische und etruskische Trinkschalen des königlichen Museums zu Berlin Berlin 1843 pl. 10—11 (part=Overbeck op. cit. p. 330 no. 1 Atlas pl. 4, 12 b)): (3) a kylix from Vulci, now at Paris, assigned by Hoppin to 'the Brygos painter' (Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 136 no. 80), by Beazley to a dexterous but mechanical imitator of his style (J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 189 no. 1) (De Ridder Cat. Vases de la Bibl. Nat. ii. 429 ff. no. 573, P. Milliet—A. Giraudon Vases peints du Cabinet des Médailles & Antiques (Bibliothèque Nationale) Paris 1891 vie classe, xie série ii. pl. 70 interior, pls. 71, 72 exterior, Overbeck op. cit. p. 330 no. 2 Atlas pl. 5, 1 a, 1 b (=my fig. 4), 1 c. My pl. iii is from fresh photographs. The rock on (1) shows a scorpion, a polyp, a hedgehog, and two fronds; on (2) a running fox (so Furtwängler and Zahn: Overbeck represents it as a galloping horse surrounded by a fringe of seaweed (?) etc.); on (3) exterior a hedgehog, a scorpion, a snake, and a goat (?); on (3) interior a snake (?), a fox, and tertium quid).

Only one of the red-figured vases names the Giant, and this calls him not Polybotes



Amphora from Vulci, now in the Vatican:
Poseidon, shouldering the island, attacks a Giant.

See page 14 n. o (1).

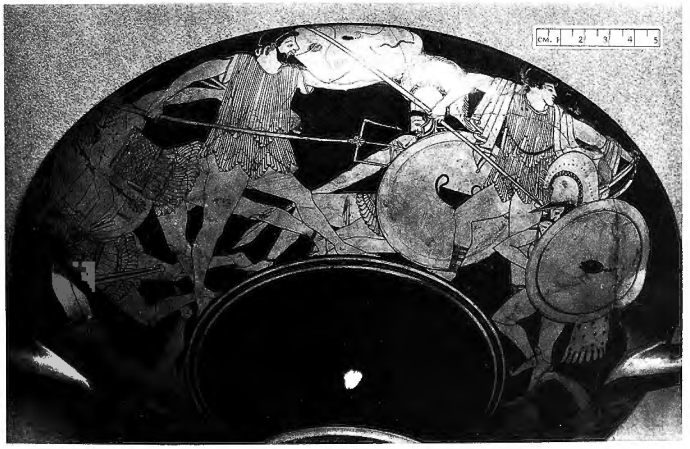
Fig. 3.

Fig. 4.

A

B



C

Kýlix from Vulci, now at Paris:

(A) Poseidon, shouldering the island, attacks a Giant.

(B) Apollon (?), Dionysos, and Ares (?) attack Giants.

(C) Hephaistos, Poseidon, and Hermes (?) attack Giants.

See page 14 n. 0 (3) and page 16 fig. 4.

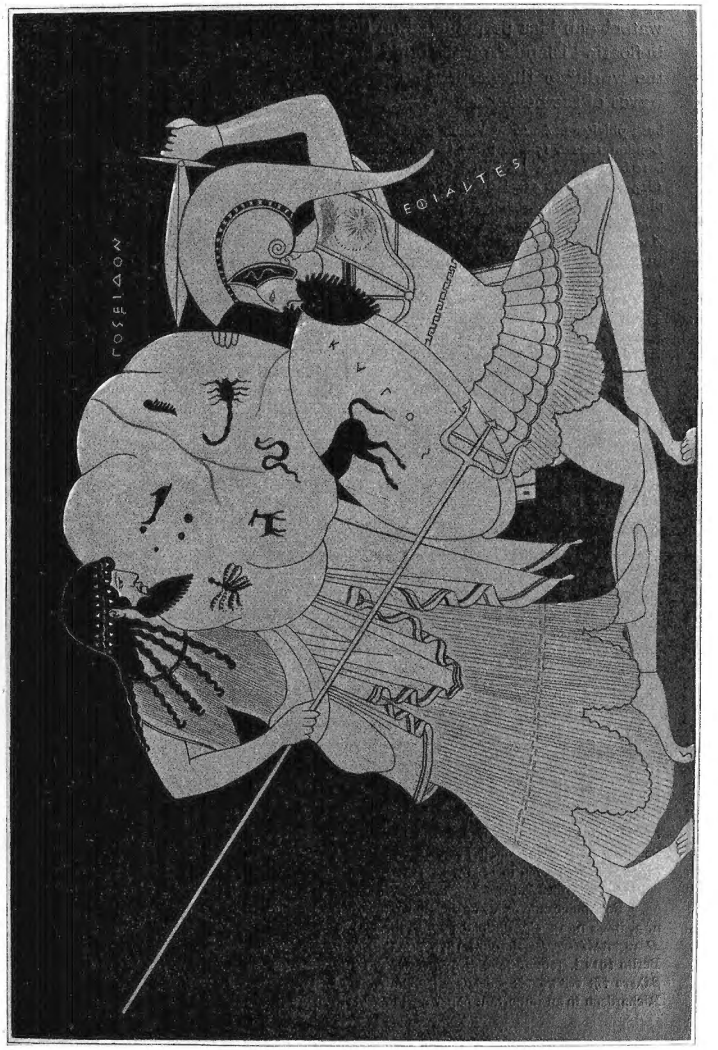

Fig. 5.

It implies the ancient cosmological idea that the earth rests upon water[1]—an idea perpetuated on the one hand by the popular belief in floating islands[2], on the other hand by the philosophic belief that the world[3] or the earth is a ship[4] and that earthquakes are due to waves of the nether sea[5].

but Ephialtes (a kratér at Vienna published by J. Millingen Ancient Unedited Monuments London 1822 i. 17—20 pls. 7 (=my fig. 5) and 8, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 10 f. pl. 5, A. de La Borde Collection des vases grecs de M. le comte de Lamberg Paris 1813—1824 i. pl. 41=Reinach Rép. Vases ii. 188, 1, Overbeck op. cit. p. 330 no. 3 Atlas pl. 13, 1. The rock shows a polyp, a dolphin, etc., a prawn (?), a goat, a snake, and a scorpion). The change of name is ingeniously explained by O. Benndorf in the Arch.-ep. Mitth. 1893 xvi. 106 (followed by O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2784 f.), who conjectures that, just as Nisyros was believed to have been broken from Kos (probably from Cape Chelone: see Paus. 1. 2. 4) and flung by Poseidon at the Giant Polybotes, so Saros was believed to have been broken from Cape Ephialtion (Ptol. 5. 2. 33) in Karpathos and flung by Poseidon at the Giant Ephialtes. It is noteworthy that Nisyros occurs, not only as the name of the island off Kos, but also as that of a town on Kalydna (Plin. nat. hist. 5. 133) and as that of a town on Karpathos (Strab. 489, cp. an inscription from Tristomo in Karpathos published by M. Beaudouin in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1880 iv. 262 f. no. 1, 1 ff.=Inscr. Gr. ins. i no. 1035, 1 ff. Μελάνθιος | Μενεκράτευς | Βρυκούντιος, | Ἐπαίνετος Ῥάδιος | Νισύριος, | Σωσίπολις | Ἀρχικράτεις | Βρυκούντιος, | αἱρεθέντες ἱεραγω[γ]οὶ ὑπὸ τοῦ σύνπαν[τος] δάμου Ποτ[ειδᾶ][ι Πορ]θμί[ωι]). A. Fick Vorgriechische Ortsnamen Göttingen 1905 pp. 51, 119 (Carian), 164 (Hittite, perhaps Lelegian).

[1] So in the cosmogonies of (1) Babylonia (P. Jensen Die Kosmologie der Babylonier Strassburg 1890 pp. 253, 254 f., 257 with pl. (3) (=R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 ii. 628 fig. 80, cp. G. Maspero The Dawn of Civilization[4] London 1901 p. 542 f. with fig.), F. Lukas Die Grundbegriffe in den Kosmogonien der alten Völker Leipzig 1893 pp. 4, 43, M. Jastrow The Religion of Babylonia and Assyria Boston etc. 1898 p. 430, id. Aspects of Religious Belief and Practice in Babylonia and Assyria New York and London 1911 pp. 87—91, F. Hommel Die Insel der Seligen in Mythus und Sage der Vorzeit München 1901 p. 37 fig., A. H. Sayce in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1911 iv. 128 f., A. Jeremias Handbuch der altorientalischen Geisteskultur Leipzig 1913 p. 61 f.); (2) Palestine (J. Skinner A critical and exegetical Commentary on Genesis Edinburgh 1910 pp. 17, 164, S. R. Driver A critical and exegetical Commentary on Deuteronomy[2] Edinburgh 1896 p. 406, C. A. Briggs and E. G. Briggs A critical and exegetical Commentary on the Book of Psalms Edinburgh 1906 i. 215, F. Lukas op. cit. p. 43 f.: see Gen. 7. 11, 8. 2, 49. 25, Ex. 20. 4, Deut. 4. 18, 5. 8, 33. 13, Job 38. 16, Ps. 24. 2, 136. 6, Prov. 8. 28, Am. 7. 4, etc.); (3) Egypt (?) (E. A. Wallis Budge The Gods of the Egyptians London 1904 i. 288 ff., F. Hommel Ethnologie und Geographie des alten Orients München 1926 p. 844 n. 4); (4) India (L. de la Vallée Poussin in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1911 iv. 131 Buddhist cosmogony, H. Jacobi ib. iv. 157 Brâhmaṇa and Upaniṣad cosmogony, id. ib. iv. 158 ff. epic and Purâṇa cosmogony, id. ib. iv. 161 Jain cosmography. See also A. A. Macdonell Vedic Mythology Strassburg 1897 p. 14, supra ii. 1035 f.); (5) Japan (M. Revon in J. Hastings op. cit. iv. 162 f.).

[2] Infra Append. P.

[3] For the cosmic ὅλκάς of the Pythagoreans see Philolaos frag. 12 Diels (supra i. 358 n. 3, ii. 44 n. 2). Cp. Philolaos ap. Stob. ecl. 1. 21. 6[d] p. 186, 27 ff. Wachsmuth=H. Diels Doxographi Graeci Berolini 1879 p. 332 b 19 ff.=id. Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker[3] Berlin 1912 i. 306, 26 f. τὸ δὲ ἡγεμονικὸν ἐν τῷ μεσαιτάτῳ πυρί, ὅπερ τρόπεως δίκην προϋπεβάλετο τῆς τοῦ παντὸς < σφαίρας (suppl. A. H. L. Heeren) > ὁ δημιουργὸς θεός. Miss H. Richardson in an important paper on 'The Myth of Er (Plato, Republic, 616 B)' makes it probable that Platon's picture combining a straight axis of light with a curved periphery of light (supra ii. 44) was derived from the Pythagorean doctrine, which combined a fire at the centre of the universe with a fire girdling the sphere of the universe, and further that Platon's phrase οἷον τὰ ὑποζώματα τῶν τριήρων presupposes the Pythagorean ὁλκάς (Class. Quart. 1926 xx. 113—133).

Georgios the Pisidian, who was deacon of St Sophia and record-keeper at Byzantion under the emperor Herakleios (610—641 A.D.), has introduced the same conception into his ἑξαήμερον ἢ κοσμουργία, a philosophico-theological poem in iambics on the creation of the world (K. Krumbacher Geschichte der byzantinischen Litteratur von Justinian bis zum Ende des Oströmischen Reiches[2] München 1897 p. 710). The passage is as follows: ὦ γῆς ὑποστήριγμα τορευτὸν ὕδωρ, | ἱστῶν δὲ τὴν βρίθουσαν ἀστάτῳ βάσει, | ἢ βάθρον αὐτῇ προσχέων τὸν ἀέρα, | οὐκ οἶδα ποίαν ἐδράσας ἄλλην βάσιν, | ποῖον δὲ ταύτῃ δημιουργῶν πυθμένα, | ὡς μὴ δεηθῇ τοῦ μεθ' αὑτὸν πυθμένος, | σειραῖς δὲ μᾶλλον ἡγνοημέναις ὅλοις | ποιῶν κρεμαστὴν τὴν πάνορμον ὁλκάδα | (ἡ γῆ γὰρ ὁλκάς ἐστιν εἰς ὕδωρ τάχα | ἑστῶσα καὶ φέρουσα τὴν οἰκουμένην), | ψάμμον δὲ τεῖχος τῇ θαλάσσῃ συλλέγων, | καὶ λεπτὸν ἀντίφραγμα τῇ ζάλῃ πλέκων, | κτίζων δὲ βροντήν, ἀστραπὴν δὲ θεσπίσας | ἐκ τῶν ἐνύγρων ἐκτρέχειν πυρεκβόλων (Georg. Pisida hexaemeron 498—512 Hercher (printed in R. Hercher's ed. of Ail. var. hist. ii. 618 f.), a better text than xcii. 1474 A—1475 A Migne).

[4] Thales held that the earth was afloat like wood upon water (Aristot. de caelo 2. 13. 294 a 28 ff. οἱ δ' ἐφ' ὕδατος κεῖσθαι (sc. τὴν γῆν φασι). τοῦτον γὰρ ἀρχαιότατον παρειλήφαμεν τὸν λόγον, ὃν φασιν εἰπεῖν Θαλῆν τὸν Μιλήσιον, ὡς διὰ τὸ πλωτὴν εἶναι μένουσαν ὥσπερ ξύλον ἢ τι τοιοῦτον ἕτερον (καὶ γὰρ τούτων ἐπ' ἀέρος μὲν οὐθὲν πέφυκε μένειν, ἀλλ' ἐφ' ὕδατος), ὥσπερ οὐ τὸν αὐτὸν λόγον ὄντα περὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ τοῦ ὕδατος τοῦ ὑχοῦντος τὴν γῆν· κ.τ.λ., Simpl. in Aristot. de caelo p. 522, 14 ff. Heiberg ἐπ' αὐτῇ δὲ τὴν Θαλοῦ τοῦ Μιλησίου τίθησιν (sc. δόξαν) ἐφ' ὕδατος λέγοντος ὀχεῖσθαι τὴν γῆν ὥσπερ ξύλον ἢ ἄλλο τι τῶν ἐπινήχεσθαι τῷ ὕδατι πεφυκότων. πρὸς ταύτην δὲ τὴν δόξαν ὁ Ἀριστοτέλης ἀντιλέγει μᾶλλον ἴσως ἐπικρατοῦσαν διὰ τὸ καὶ παρ' Αἰγυπτίοις οὕτως ἐν μύθου σχήματι λέγεσθαι καὶ τὸν Θαλῆν ἴσως ἐκεῖθεν τὸν λόγον κεκομικέναι, cp. Aristot. met. 1. 3. 983 b 20 ff. ἀλλὰ Θαλῆς μὲν ὁ τῆς τοιαύτης ἀρχηγὸς φιλοσοφίας ὕδωρ εἶναί φησιν (διὸ καὶ τὴν γῆν ἐφ' ὕδατος ἀπεφαίνετο εἶναι), Simpl. in Aristot. phys. p. 23, 28 f. Diels διὸ πάντων ἀρχὴν ὑπέλαβον (codd. D. E. have ὑπέλαβεν but the reference is to Thales and Hippon) εἶναι τὸ ὕδωρ καὶ τὴν γῆν ἐφ' ὕδατος ἀπεφήναντο κεῖσθαι).

Artemidoros of Ephesos, who c. 100 B.C. issued his Γεωγραφούμενα in eleven books, utilising the results of the Peripatetic Agatharchides and others (H. Berger in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 1329 f., W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1920 ii. 1. 423), seems to have described the earth as floating on the ocean (Plin. nat. hist. 2. 242 pars nostra terrarum, de qua memoro, ambienti, ut dictum est, oceano velut innatans longissime ab ortu ad occasum patet, hoc est ab India ad Herculis columnas Gadibus sacratas |LXXXV|. |LXXVIII| p., ut Artemidoro auctori placet, etc., Diculius liber de mensura orbis terrae 5. 1 (ed. G. Parthey Berolini 1870 p. 18, 1 ff.). Jdem dicit in tertio (Letronne cj. secundo): pars nostrarum terrarum de qua commemoro, ambienti ut dictum est oceano velut innatans, longissime ab ortu ad occasum patet, hoc est ab Jndia ad Herculis columnas Gadibus sacratas, centum mil. sexagies et sexies et XXXta [simpliciter triginta (uncis inclusi A.B.C.)] milia passuum, ut Artemidoro auctori placet). But it is not quite certain that the phrase 'floating on the ocean' goes back beyond Pliny to Artemidoros, nor, if it does, that we should see in it more than a rhetorical flourish.

Somewhat similar in expression, though diverse in origin, is Io. Chrys. hom. in Genes. 12. 2 (liii. 100 Migne) ταύτην αὐτὴν τὴν βαρεῖαν, καὶ τὸν τοσοῦτον κόσμον ἐπὶ τῶν οἰκείων νώτων φέρουσαν ἐπὶ τῶν ὑδάτων ἐθεμελίωσε, καθὼς ὁ προφήτης φησίν, 'ὁ θεμελιώσας ἐπὶ τῶν ὑδάτων τὴν γῆν' (Ps. 135. 6).

[6] Sen. nat. quaestt. 3. 14. 1 quae sequitur Thaletis inepta sententia est. ait enim terrarum orbem aqua sustineri et vehi more navigii mobilitateque eius fluctuare tunc, cum dicitur tremere. non est ergo mirum, si abundet humore (so F. Haase. H. Diels Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker[3] Berlin 1912 i. 11, 7 follows Gercke in reading si abundat humor) ad flumina profundenda, cum in humore sit totus.

Now we have already seen reason to suppose that Poseidon was but a specialised form of Zeus[1], his trident being originally the lightning-fork of a storm-god[2]. We should therefore expect to find at least some traces of the conviction that earthquakes were ultimately caused and controlled by Zeus.

In point of fact, the earliest extant description of an earthquake attributes the phenomenon, naïvely enough, to the action of Zeus, who nods his head, shakes his hair, and thereby makes the mighty mass of Mount Olympos to tremble[3]. That is pure magic[4], and none the less magical because the magician was a god. Later epic writers imitate the scene[5], which must have appealed to folk-belief of a deep-seated and permanent sort. Indeed, the same belief still lurks in the background of the peasant's brain. B. Schmidt[6] pointed out that in Zakynthos, an island peculiarly liable to seismic vibrations[7], people explain them by saying 'God is nodding his head towards the earth' or 'God is shaking his hair[8]'—both expressions being virtually identical with those used in the Homeric episode.

Other poets, classical and post-classical, associate the most awe-inspiring of nature's moods with the anger of the greatest nature-

[1] Supra i. 717 n. 2, ii. 31 n. 8, 582 ff., 786 f., 846, 850, 893 n. o.

[2] Supra ii. 789 ff., 850.

[3] Il. 1. 528 ff. ἦ, καὶ κυανέῃσιν ἐπ' ὀφρύσι νεῦσε Κρονίων· | ἀμβρόσιαι δ' ἄρα χαῖται ἐπερρώσαντο (Eustath. in Od. p. 1885, 60 has ἐπερρώοντο) ἄνακτος (cod. E[b] reads ἄνακτι) | κρατὸς ἀπ' ἀθανάτοιο· μέγαν δ' ἐλέλιξεν Ὄλυμπον with schol. A. ad loc. ἀπὸ τούτων δὲ λέγεται τῶν στίχων Φειδίαν τὸν ἀγαλματοποιὸν ποιῆσαι τὸν ἐν Ἠλιδι χαλκοῦν (sic) ἀνδριάντα οὕτως καμπτόμενον καὶ συνωθούμενον and schol. T. (cp. scholl. L.V.) ad loc. Εὐφράνωρ δὲ Ἀθήνησι τοὺς ⟨ι⟩β' θεοὺς γράφων ἐν τῇ στοᾷ, ὡς ἠπόρει ποῖον ἀρχέτυπον περιθείη Διί, παριὼν ἐν διδασκάλου τῶν ἐπῶν ἤκουσε, κεκραγώς τε ὡς ἔχοι τὸ ἀρχέτυπον ἁπὼν ἔγραψεν. ἴσως οὖν τοῦτο ἐνεφάνισεν αὐτῷ ἡ Ἥρα (cp. Loukian. imagg. 7 ὁ μὲν Εὐφράνωρ χρωσάτω τὴν κόμην οἵαν τῆς Ἥρας ἔγραψεν). The former anecdote is a commonplace (supra i. 2 n. 1). The latter occurs here only and in Eustath. in Il. p. 145, 10 ff., who combines the two (C. Robert in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 1193, A. Reinach Recueil Milliet: Textes grecs et latins relatifs à l'histoire de la peinture ancienne Paris 1921 i. 284 f. no. 356, E. Pfuhl Malerei und Zeichnung der Griechen München 1923 ii. 749 f.).

[4] Supra i. 14 n. 1.

[5] Il. 8. 198 f. ὣς ἔφατ' εὐχόμενος· νεμέσησε δὲ πότνια Ἥρη, | σείσατο δ' εἰνὶ θρόνῳ, ἐλέλιξε δὲ μακρὸν Ὄλυμπον, h. Dion. 13 ff. ἦ, καὶ κυανέῃσιν ἐπ' ὀφρύσι νεῦσε Κρονίων· | ἀμβρόσιαι δ' ἄρα χαῖται ἐπερρώσαντο ἄνακτος | κρατὸς ἀπ' ἀθανάτοιο, μέγαν δ' ἐλέλιξεν Ὄλυμπον. Of these passages Il. 8. 198 f. has been condemned as a late interpolation (W. Leaf in the argument prefixed to his ed. of Il. 8, in his note ad loc., and in his book A Companion to the Iliad London 1892 p. 164) and h. Dion. 13 ff. as an alternative version of h. Dion. 16 ὣς εἰπὼν ἐπένευσε καρήατι μητίετα Ζεύς (T. W. Allen and E. E. Sikes, D. B. Monro, etc. ad loc.). Nonn. Dion. 2. 27 ff. describes the wrath of Typhoeus (supra ii. 449 n. o (2)) in language reminiscent of the Homeric original (29 Ὀλύμπῳ, 32 ἐθείραις, 35 ἐλελίζετο).

[6] B. Schmidt Das Volksleben der Neugriechen Leipzig 1871 i. 33 f.

[7] Supra p. 3 n. o, infra p. 29.

[8] τινάζει τὰ μαλλιά του.

god. At the close of Aischylos' Prometheus bound the defiant Titan challenges the Almighty and bids him do his worst:

> Let his blast rock the earth, roots and all, from its base[1].

And when the answering thunderstorm bursts, the very first symptom of the wrath of Zeus is an earthquake-shock:

> Lo, now in deed and no longer in word
> The earth is a-quake[2].

Similarly in the brilliant exodos of Aristophanes' Birds Pisthetairos, who is clearly conceived as the new Zeus[3], wields the nether thunders and thereby causes an earthquake[4]. The same feeling that the failure of the solid ground can be ascribed to no power lower than the highest prompts the Orphic hymn-writer boldly to transfer the epithet seisichthon, 'who maketh the land to quake,' from Poseidon[5] to Zeus[6] and the author of a Sibylline oracle to use the like language of his supreme Deity[7].

The fact is that, as the centuries went by, Poseidon lost while Zeus gained in religious significance. Earthquakes came to be connected less and less with the former, more and more with the latter. A short series of examples will here be instructive. In 464 B.C. a great earthquake laid waste the town of Sparta: the Spartans themselves believed that this was because they had once put to death certain Helot suppliants, who had fled for refuge to the sanctuary of Poseidon at Cape Tainaros[8]. In 387 B.C.[9] the Spartans under Agesipolis i were invading the Argolid, when they were overtaken near Nemea by an alarming earthquake: they at once raised the paean to Poseidon, and most of them were for beating a retreat; but their commander, putting the best construction he could on the ominous incident, offered sacrifice to that god and pushed on into the territory of the Argives[10]. In 373 B.C. Helike and Boura on or [1] Aisch. P.v. 1046 f. [2] Id. ib. 1080 f.

[3] I have elaborated the point in Essays and Studies presented to William Ridgeway Cambridge 1913 pp. 213—221, infra p. 59 f.

[4] Aristoph. av. 1750 ff. ὦ μέγα χρύσεον ἀστεροπῆς φάος, | ὦ Διὸς ἄμβροτον ἔγχος πυρφόρον (supra ii. 704), | ὦ χθόνιαι βαρυαχέες ὀμβροφόροι θ' ἅμα βρονταί (supra ii. 805 n. 6), | αἷς ὅδε νῦν χθόνα σείει. | Δία δὲ πάντα (διὰ σὲ τὰ πάντα codd. P. P. Dobree cj. δία σκῆπτρα. A. Meineke, followed by B. B. Rogers, cj. δῖα δὲ πάντα) κρατήσας | καὶ πάρεδρον Βασίλειαν ἔχει Διός.

[5] Supra p. 10 n. 1.

[6] Orph. h. Zeus 15. 8 f. σεισίχθων, αὐξητά, καθάρσιε, παντοτινάκτα, | ἀστράπιε, βρονταῖε, κεραύνιε, φυτάλιε Ζεῦ.

[7] Oracl. Sib. 2. 16 ff. Geffcken (cited supra p. 10 n. 1).

[8] Thouk. 1. 128, cp. 1. 101, 3. 54, Paus. 4. 24. 5 f.

[9] E. Meyer Geschichte des Alterthums Stuttgart—Berlin 1902 v. 271.

[10] Xen. Hell. 4. 7. 4 f. For the sequel see supra ii. 7.

near the coast of Achaia were swallowed in a single night[1] by the most appalling of all Greek earthquakes: the catastrophe was attributed to the vengeance of Poseidon, who was angry because the men of these towns had refused to allow their colonists in Ionia to carry off or copy their statue of him or even to sacrifice unmolested on the ancestral altar[2]. Apameia in Phrygia was repeatedly devastated by earthquakes—a fact which, according to Strabon, explains the honours granted to Poseidon by that inland city[3]. But Poseidon was not the only deity concerned. In the days of Apollonios of Tyana (s. i A.D.), when the towns on the left side of the Hellespont were visited by earthquakes, Egyptians and Chaldaeans went about collecting ten talents to defray the cost of sacrifices to Ge as well as to Poseidon[4]. An interesting transitional case is afforded by an earthquake at Tralleis (s. ii A.D.), which was authoritatively set down as due to the wrath felt by Zeus for the city's neglect of Poseidon: the Trallians were ordered to make ample atonement to both gods[5]. But when in 115 A.D. Antiocheia on the Orontes was severely shaken, the survivors of the disaster ignored Poseidon altogether and founded a temple at Daphne for Zeus Sotér[6]. Again, in or about the year 178 A.D. Smyrna was overthrown by an earthquake. P. Aelius Aristeides[7], who was living in the neighbourhood, received divine injunctions to sacrifice an ox in public to Zeus Sotér. At first he hesitated to do so. But he dreamed that he was standing beside the altar of Zeus in the market-place and begging for a sign of the god's approval, when a bright star shot right over the market and confirmed his intention. He carried through the sacrifice, and from that moment the dread disturbances ceased. Moreover, five or six days before the first shock he had been bidden to send and sacrifice at the ancient hearth adjoining the sanctuary of Zeus Olýmpios (at Dios Chorion in Mysia[8]) and also to set up altars on the crest of the Hill of Atys. No sooner were these precautions taken than the earthquake came and spared his estate Laneion, which lay to the south of the Hill[9].

Frequently, of course, an earthquake is recorded without explicit mention of any deity. Neither Poseidon nor Zeus is named as subject of the vague reverential phrases 'He shook[10]' or, more often, 'God

[1] Herakl. Pont. (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 200 n. 2 Müller) ap. Strab. 384.
[2] Id. ib. 385, Diod. 15. 49, Paus. 7. 24. 6 with slight divergence in detail.
[3] Strab. 579.
[4] Philostr. v. Apoll. 6. 41 p. 252 Kayser.
[5] Supra ii. 959 n. 0.
[6] Supra ii. 1191.
[7] Supra ii. 127.
[8] L. Bürchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xii. 677.
[9] Aristeid. or. 25. 317 ff. (i. 497 ff. Dindorf).
[10] Thouk. 4. 52 ἔσεισεν, cp. Aristeid. or. 25. 318 (i. 499 Dindorf) πρότερον ἢ σεῖσαι τὸ ἐξ ἀρχῆς.

shook[1].' Scholars have assumed that the god in question was Poseidon[2]. But the analogy of similar expressions relating to the weather points to the possibility that the name suppressed was that of Zeus[3]. And certainly in late times earthquakes were reckoned as a particular variety of Zeus-sign (Diosemía)[4].

The Romans exhibited, on the whole, a more marked tendency towards cautious anonymity. They said that once during an earthquake a voice was heard from the temple of Iuno on the Capitol directing them to sacrifice a pregnant sow—a direction which earned for the goddess the title of Moneta[5]. A pregnant sow was on other occasions sacrificed to Tellus[6] or Terra Mater[7] or Ceres[8] or Maia[9]

[1] Xen. Hell. 4. 7. 4 ἔσεισεν ὁ θεός, Paus. 3. 5. 8 ἔσεισέ τε δὴ ὁ θεός, cp. Aristoph. Lys. 1142 χὠ θεὸς σείων ἅμα, Paus. 1. 29. 8 Λακεδαιμονίοις τὴν πόλιν τοῦ θεοῦ σείσαντος, 3. 5. 9 οὐ παρίει σείων ὁ θεός, 3. 8. 4 τοῦ θεοῦ σείσαντος, Dion Cass. 68. 25 σείοντος τοῦ θεοῦ.

[2] Schol. Aristoph. Lys. 1142, cp. Aristoph. Ach. 510 f. καὐτοῖς ὁ Ποσειδῶν οὐπὶ Ταινάρῳ (Ταινάρου v.l. in Souid. s.v. Ταίναρον) θεὸς | σείσας ἅπασιν ἐμβάλοι τὰς οἰκίας.

[3] Supra ii. 1 ff. [4] Supra ii. 5.

[5] Cic. de div. 1. 101 (cp. 2. 69) with a useful note by A. S. Pease ad loc. The derivation of Moneta from moneo (Cic. ib. 2. 69, Isid. orig. 16. 18. 8, cp. Souid. s.v. Μονήτα. Hence also Moneta as Latinised Mnemosyne in Livius Andronicus frag. 25 ap. Priscian. inst. 6. 6 (i. 198 Hertz), Cic. de nat. deor. 3. 47, Hyg. fab. praef. pp. 10, 4 and 12, 7 Schmidt) is merely folk-etymology. The attempt to connect it with the Semitic machanat, 'camp,' a legend found on silver Carthaginian coins current in Sicily and Italy before the Punic wars (E. Assmann 'Moneta' in Klio 1906 vi. 477—488, V. Costanzi 'Moneta' ib. 1907 vii. 335—340, G. F. Hill Historical Roman Coins London 1909 p. 8, A. W. Hands 'Juno Moneta' in the Num. Chron. Fourth Series 1910 x. 1—12) is more ingenious than probable. Relation to Gothic mēnōþs, Old High German mānōt, 'month,' implying that Moneta was a moon-goddess (K. F. Johansson Beiträge zur griechischen Sprachkunde (= Upsala Universitets Årsskrift 1890 Abh. iii) Upsala 1891 p. 129 f.), does not adequately account for her ὅ. Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] p. 493 concludes: 'Wohl vielmehr eine Bildung vom Namenstamme, der in Monnius, Monianius usw. (Schulze Eigenn. 195) vorliegt, vgl. zum Suffix Orata, etr. urata, Lepta, Valutius: Val(l)ius (ibd. 195, 396), so dass eine Sondergöttin einer etrusk. gens Monēta vorliegt im Sinne Otto's Rh. Mus. LXIV, 449 ff.'

[6] Fest. p. 238 a 28 f. Müller, p. 274, 6 Lindsay plena sue Tellu<ri sacrificabatur (suppl. J. J. Scaliger)>, Ov. fast. 1. 671 ff. placentur frugum matres, Tellusque Ceresque, | farre suo gravidae visceribusque suis. | officium commune Ceres et Terra tuentur: | haec praebet causam frugibus, illa locum, Arnob. adv. nat. 7. 22 Telluri, inquiunt, matri scrofa inciens (sic vet. lib. Ernstii, marg. Ursini. ingens codd.) immolatur et feta, etc.

[7] Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 32323, 136 f. = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5050, 136 f. (acta sacrorum saeculariorum for June 2, 17 B.C.) Terra mater! uti tibi in ill[is libris scriptum est, quarumque rerum ergo quodque melius siet p. R. Quiritibus,] | uti tibi sue plena propri[a.....sacrum fiat: te quaeso precorque; c]etera [uti supra.] Cp. oracl. Sib. ap. Phlegon frag. 29. 4 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 611 Müller) and ap. Zosim. 2. 6 (p. 70, 2 f. Bekker) = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 6. 214. 10 f. αὐθι δὲ Γαίῃ | πληθομένῃ χοίροις ὅς ἱρεύοιτο μέλαινα (so Dessau after Mommsen. The MS. of Phlegon has πληθογένῃ χώροις ὅτις ἱερεύοιτο μέλαινα, Zosimos gives πληθομένῃ χοῖρός τε καὶ ὃς ἱεροῖτο μέλαινα).

[8] Verg. georg. 1. 345 ff. terque novas circum felix eat hostia fruges, | omnis quam chorus et socii comitentur ovantes, | et Cererem clamore vocent in tecta, Serv. in Verg. georg. 1. 345 'felix hostia' id est fecunda. dicit autem ambarvale sacrificium, quod de porca et saepe fecunda et gravida fieri consueverat, Macrob. Sat. 3. 11. 10 notum autem as a means of communicating fertility to the ground[1], so that it had probably come to be regarded as a victim suited to the earth-goddess and therefore appropriate to a grave disturbance of the earth. Again, in 268 B.C., when Rome was waging war in Picenum, the battlefield was shaken by a seismic crash[2], whereupon P. Sempronius Sophus, the Roman general, vowed a temple to Tellus and in due time paid his vow[3]. But such cases were exceptional. As a rule the Romans were studiously vague and non-committal. Aulus Gellius, who brought out his Attic Nights in 169 A.D.[4], has some interesting remarks on the point[5]:

THAT IT HAS NOT BEEN DISCOVERED TO WHAT GOD SACRIFICE SHOULD BE MADE ON THE OCCASION OF AN EARTHQUAKE.

The ostensible cause of earth-tremors has not been discovered by the common experience and judgment of mankind, nor yet satisfactorily settled by the various schools of natural science[6]. Are they due to the force of winds pent esse non diffitebere, quod a. d. duodecimum Kalendas Ianuarias Herculi et Cereri faciunt sue praegnate, panibus, mulso. Cp. supra n. 6.

[2] Macrob. Sat. 1. 12. 20 adfirmant quidam, quibus Cornelius Labeo (on whom see G. Wissowa in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 1351 ff.) consentit, hanc Maiam cui mense Maio res divina celebratur terram esse hoc adeptam nomen a magnitudine, sicut et Mater Magna in sacris vocatur: adsertionemque aestimationis suae etiam hinc colligunt quod sus praegnans ei mactatur, quae hostia propria est terrae.

The connexion of Maia with magnus, maior, etc. is philologically sound (Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] p. 455, Muller Altital. Wörterb. p. 249 f.) and accords with the cult of Iupiter Maius at Tusculum (Macrob. Sat. 1. 12. 17 sunt qui hunc mensem ad nostros fastos a Tusculanis transisse commemorent, apud quos nunc quoque vocatur deus Maius qui est Iuppiter, a magnitudine scilicet ac maiestate dictus. The inscription from Frascati published by R. Garrucci I piombi antichi raccolti dall' eminentissimo...Cardinale L. Altieri Roma 1847 p. 45 = Orelli—Henzen Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5637 Iovi | Maio | sacrum and by R. Garrucci Sylloge inscriptionum Latinarum aevi Romanae rei publicae Turin 1877 p. 174 under no. 564 Iovi | Maio | sacrum | P. Mucius pater is now held to be of doubtful authenticity: see H. Dessau in the Corp. inscr. Lat. xiv no. 216* and in the Ephem. epigr. 1892 vii. 383 no. 1276).

[1] Arnob. adv. nat. 7. 22 Telluri gravidas atque fetas ob honorem fecunditatis ipsius... et quod Tellus est mater...gravidis accipienda est scrofis—an explanation knocked down by Arnobius, but set on its legs again by Frazer Worship of Nature i. 334.

[2] Iul. Obseq. 26, Oros. 4. 4. 5 ff. In Frontin. strat. 1. 12. 3 the consul is wrongly called T. Sempronius Gracchus.

[3] Flor. epit. 1. 14. For the aedes Telluris on the western slope of the Mons Oppius see O. Richter Topographie der Stadt Rom[2] München 1901 pp. 323—325, H. Jordan—C. Huelsen Topographie der Stadt Rom im Alterthum Berlin 1907 i. 3. 323—326, H. Kiepert et C. Huelsen Formae urbis Romae antiquae[2] Berolini 1912 p. 33, Frazer Worship of Nature i. 336—339, S. B. Platner—T. Ashby A Topographical Dictionary of Ancient Rome Oxford 1929 p. 511.

[4] M. Schanz Geschichte der römischen Litteratur[2] München 1905 iii. 188, K. Hosius in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 993.

[5] Gell. 2. 28. 1—3.

[6] See Plout. de plac. philos. 3. 15 = H. Diels Doxographi Graeci Berolini 1879 p. 379*a* 8 ff., Sen. nat. quaestt. 6. 5 ff., Suet. frag. 159 Reifferscheid ap. Isid. de natura rerum 46.

in caverns and clefts of the ground? Or to the pulsation and undulation of waters that surge in subterranean hollows, as the ancient Greeks, who called Poseidon seisíchthon, seem to have supposed? Or to any other specific cause, or to the force and will of another deity? As I said, belief does not yet amount to certainty. Accordingly the Romans of yore, who in all the affairs of life and above all in the ordering of religious ritual and the tending of immortal gods displayed the utmost propriety and prudence, whenever an earthquake had been perceived or reported, proclaimed by edict a solemn holiday on account of it, but refrained from fixing and publishing as usual the name of the god for whom the holiday was to be kept, lest by naming one in place of another they might bind the people in the bonds of a false prescription. If the said holiday had been polluted by any man and need for a piacular sacrifice had therefore arisen, they slew the victim 'to god or to goddess' (si deo, si deae)[1]; and this regulation was strictly observed in accordance with the decree of the pontiffs, as M. Varro[2] states, because it was uncertain to what force and to which of the gods or goddesses the earthquake was due.

Two centuries later Ammianus Marcellinus, à propos of a devastating earthquake at Nikomedeia in 358 A.D., observes that, when 1—3 (lxxxiii. 1015 B—C Migne) and orig. 14. 1. 2 f., Amm. Marc. 17. 7. 9—12, Serv. in Verg. georg. 2. 479 (=Isid. orig. 14. 1. 2 f.), and the section 'Die wissenschaftliche Seismologie der Griechen' in the valuable article on 'Erdbebenforschung' by W. Capelle in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Suppl. iv. 362—374.

[1] The usage of this formula may be illustrated from Cato de agri cult. 139 lucum conlucare Romano more sic oportet. porco piaculo facito, sic verba concipito: 'si deus, si dea es, quoium illud sacrum est,' etc., Macrob. Sat. 3. 9. 7 est autem carmen huiusmodi quo di evocantur, cum oppugnatione civitas cingitur: 'si deus, si dea est, cui populus civitasque Carthaginiensis est in tutela,' etc., Corp. inscr. Lat. i[1] no. 632=vi no. 110 (ib. no. 30694)= Orelli Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 2135= Wilmanns Ex. inscr. Lat. no. 48=Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 4015 sei deo sei deivae sac(rum). | C. Sextius C. f. Calvinus pr(aetor) | de senati sententia | restituit (on a large altar now standing at the southern angle of the Palatine (H. Jordan—C. Huelsen Topographie der Stadt Rom im Alterthum Berlin 1907 i. 3. 47 n. 31[b])), Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 111=Orelli op. cit. no. 2136=Dessau op. cit. no. 4018 sive deo | sive deae, | C. Ter. Denter | ex voto | posuit (formerly in the church of St Ursus at Rome), Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 2099, ii 3 f.=Orelli op. cit. no. 2270=Wilmanns op. cit. no. 2884=Dessau op. cit. 5047 sive deo sive deae, in cuius tutela hic lucus locusve | est, oves II, Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 2099, ii 10=Orelli op. cit. no. 1798=Wilmanns op. cit. no. 2884=Dessau op. cit. 5047 sive deo sive deae oves II (from the acta fratrum Arvalium for 183 A.D.), Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 2104, a 2 sive deo sive deae ov(es) n(umero) II (from the acta fratrum Arvalium for 218 A.D.), Corp. inscr. Lat. vi no. 2107, a+b 9=Orelli op. cit. no. 961=Wilmanns op. cit. no. 2885=Dessau op. cit. no. 5048 sive deo sive deae verb(eces) $\overline{\text{II}}$ (from the acta fratrum Arvalium for 224 A.D.), J. Schmidt in the Ephem. epigr. 1884 v. 480 f. no. 1043=Corp. inscr. Lat. viii Suppl. 3 no. 21567, B 7 ff. Genio summ[o]| Thasuni et de|o sive deae [nu]|mini sanc[to]| etc. (found at Aftâ in Mauretania Caesariensis and referable to the date 172—174 A.D.), Corp. inscr. Lat. i[1] no. 1114=xiv no. 3572= Orelli op. cit. no. 2137=Orelli—Henzen Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5952=Dessau op. cit. no. 4017 sei deus ! sei dea (found at Tibur on a cippus of local stone), G. Gatti in the Not. Scavi 1890 p. 218=Dessau op. cit. no. 4016 si deo si deai, | Florianus rexs (found at Lanuvium: Florianus was presumably rex sacrorum).

See further D. Vaglieri in Ruggiero Dizion. epigr. ii. 1726 and Wissowa Rel. Kult. Röm.[2] p. 38. The 'sive...sive...' invocations are discussed by E. Norden Agnostos Theos Leipzig—Berlin 1913 p. 144 ff.

[2] Varr. antiquitatum rerum divinarum lib. 8 de feriis frag. 1 (in R. Merkel's ed. of Ov. fast. Berolini 1841 p. cliii f.).

such things happen, the priests prudently abstain from mentioning any deity by name, lest they should indicate some god not really responsible and so incur the guilt of sacrilege[1].

While the clash of creeds was in progress, pagans of course blamed Christians[2] and Christians blamed pagans[3] for all the horrors

[1] Amm. Marc. 17. 7. 10 unde et in ritualibus et pontificiis observatur obtemperantibus sacerdotiis caute, ne alio deo pro alio nominato, cum, quis eorum terram concutiat, sit in abstruso, piacula committantur.

Libanios, who composed a special and somewhat hysterical lamentation for the downfall of Nikomedeia (or. 61 monodia de Nicomedia (iv. 322 ff. Foerster)), appeals in primis to Poseidon (3, 6), but also to Helios (16), etc.

[2] Euseb. hist. eccl. 9. 7. 1 ff. cites in extenso a letter of Maximinus ii (305—313 A.D.), copied from a stele at Tyre, in which he congratulates his eastern subjects on having returned to the faith of their forefathers and, after a characteristic (cp. supra ii. 1194 ff.) laudation of Zeus (hist. eccl. 9. 7. 7 ἐκεῖνος τοιγαροῦν ἐκεῖνος ὁ ὕψιστος καὶ μέγιστος Ζεύς, ὁ προκαθήμενος τῆς λαμπροτάτης ὑμῶν πόλεως, ὁ τοὺς πατρῴους ὑμῶν θεοὺς καὶ γυναῖκας καὶ τέκνα καὶ ἐστίαν καὶ οἴκους ἀπὸ πάσης ὀλεθρίου φθορᾶς ῥυόμενος, ταῖς ὑμετέραις ψυχαῖς τὸ σωτήριον ἐνέπνευσε βούλημα, ἐπιδεικνὺς καὶ ἐμφαίνων ὅπως ἐξαίρετόν ἐστι καὶ λαμπρὸν καὶ σωτηριῶδες μετὰ τοῦ ὀφειλομένου σεβάσματος τῇ θρησκείᾳ καὶ ταῖς ἱεροθρησκείαις τῶν ἀθανάτων θεῶν προσιέναι), explains drought, hurricane, earthquake, etc. as due to divine anger called down by the spread of the new religion (ib. 9. 7. 8 ff.).

Arnob. adv. nat. 1. 3 had recently met, and refuted, a whole string of similar charges. So c. 252 A.D. had Cypr. ad Demetrian. 2—5 (i. 352, 7 ff. Hartel). The calumny crystallised into a proverb (Aug. enarrat. in psalm. 80. 1 (iv. 1225 D ed.[2] Bened.) non pluit deus, duc ad Christianos (variants ib.[2] p. lii), de civ. Dei 2. 3 pluvia defit, causa Christiani sunt). In this connexion earthquakes played a large part (Tertull. apol. 40 si Tiberis ascendit in moenia, si Nilus non ascendit in arva, si caelum stetit, si terra movit, si fames, si lues, statim Christianos ad leonem! adclamatur=ad nat. 1. 9, Orig. in Matth. comment. series 39 (xiii. 1654 A—B Migne) cum haec ergo contigerint mundo, consequens est quasi derelinquentibus hominibus deorum culturam, ut propter multitudinem Christianorum dicant fieri bella et fames et pestilentias. frequenter enim famis causa Christianos culparunt gentes, et quicumque sapiebant quae gentium sunt; sed et pestilentiarum causas ad Christi ecclesiam rettulerunt. scimus autem et apud nos terrae motum factum in locis quibusdam, et factas fuisse quasdam ruinas, ita ut qui erant impii extra fidem causam terrae motus dicerent Christianos, propter quod et persecutiones passae sunt ecclesiae, et incensae sunt. non solum autem illi, sed et qui videbantur prudentes, talia in publico dicerent, quia propter Christianos fiunt gravissimi terrae motus, Firmillianus in Cypr. epist. 75. 10 (ii. 816, 17 ff. Hartel: the letter is of 256 A.D. (A. Jülicher in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 2379)) volo autem vobis et de historia quae apud nos facta est exponere ad hoc ipsum pertinente. ante viginti enim et duos fere annos temporibus post Alexandrum imperatorem multae istic conflictationes et pressurae acciderunt vel in commune omnibus hominibus vel privatim Christianis: terrae etiam motus plurimi et frequentes extiterunt, ut et per Cappadociam et per Pontum multa subruerent, quaedam etiam civitates in profundum recepta (leg. receptae) dirupti soli hiatu devorarentur, ut ex hoc persecutio quoque gravis adversum nos nominis fieret, quae post longam retro aetatis pacem repente oborta de inopinato et insueto malo ad turbandum populum nostrum terribilior effecta est. Serenianus tunc fuit in nostra provincia praeses, acerbus et dirus persecutor. in hac autem perturbatione constitutis fidelibus et huc atque illuc persecutionis metu fugientibus et patrias suas relinquentibus atque in alias regionum partes transeuntibus (erat enim transeundi facultas eo quod persecutio illa non per totum mundum sed localis fuisset), emersit istic subito quaedam mulier quae in extasin constituta propheten se praeferret et quasi sancto spiritu plena sic ageret. ita autem principalium daemoniorum impetu ferebatur ut per longum of a quaking world. But ultimately men in general and moralists in particular settled down to the belief that an earthquake as such was a divine visitation meant to vindicate the power of the Creator[1] or to chasten and reform his erring creatures[2].

Painters and poets, who from time to time personified the Earthquake, naturally reverted to earlier mythological conceptions[3]. Raphael in one of the marvellous tapestries designed by him (1515—1516)[4] for the Sistine Chapel at Rome and woven by Pieter van Aelst of Brussels[5] represented the imprisonment of St Paul at tempus sollicitaret et deciperet fraternitatem, admirabilia quaedam et portentosa perficiens et facere se terram moveri polliceretur: non quod daemoni tanta esset potestas ut terram movere aut elementum concutere vi sua valeret, sed quod nonnumquam nequam spiritus praesciens et intellegens terrae motum futurum id se facturum esse simularet quod futurum videret. etc.). See further J. E. B. Mayor's notes on Tertull. apol. 40.

[3] Obviously two could play at that game, and of the two the Christians were likely to compile the bigger score. Cp. the leges novellas ad Theodosianum pertinentes ed. adiutore Th. Mommseno Paulus M. Meyer Berolini 1905 p. 10 de Iud. Sam. haer. et pag. 3. 8 an diutius perferemus mutari temporum vices irata caeli temperie, quae paganorum exacerbata perfidia nescit naturae libramenta servare? unde enim ver solitam gratiam abiuravit...nisi quod ad inpietatis vindictam transit legis suae natura decretum?

[1] E.g. Io. Chrys. in terrae motum etc. 1 (xlviii. 1027 Migne) εἴδετε Θεοῦ δύναμιν, εἴδετε Θεοῦ φιλανθρωπίαν; δύναμιν, ὅτι ἐτίναξε τὴν οἰκουμένην· φιλανθρωπίαν, ὅτι πίπτουσαν αὐτὴν ἔστησε· κ.τ.λ. (perhaps in allusion to the earthquake which shook Antioch on the Orontes in 396 A.D.: W. Capelle in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Suppl. iv. 356).

[2] E.g. Io. Chrys. ad populum Antiochenum hom. 3. 7 (xlix. 57 Migne) μὴ γὰρ οὐκ ἠδύνατο κωλῦσαι τὰ γεγενημένα ὁ Θεός; ἀλλ' ἀφῆκεν, ἵνα τοὺς καταφρονοῦντας αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ τοῦ συνδούλου φόβῳ σωφρονεστέρους ἐργάσηται, id. in acta Apost. hom. 7. 2 (lx. 66 Migne) εἰ μέμνησθε ὡς, ὅτε τὴν πόλιν ἡμῶν ἔσεισεν ὁ Θεὸς καὶ πάντες ἦσαν συνεσταλμένοι, οὕτω τότε ἐκεῖνοι διέκειντο· οὐδεὶς ὕπουλος ἦν, οὐδεὶς πονηρός. καὶ γὰρ τοιοῦτον φόβος, τοιοῦτον ἡ θλῖψις. κ.τ.λ. (during the earthquake at Constantinople in 400 or 401 A.D.), id. in Acta Apost. hom. 41. 2 (lx. 291 Migne) εἰπὲ γάρ μοι, οὐ πέρυσιν ἐτίναξεν ὁ Θεὸς τὴν πόλιν πᾶσαν; τί δαί; οὐχὶ πάντες ἐπὶ τὸ φώτισμα ἔδραμον; κ.τ.λ. (at Constantinople in 399 A.D.), Philastrius diversarum hereseon liber 102. 1—3 Fabricius (74. 1—3 Marx) alia est heresis quae terrae motum non dei iussione et indignatione fieri, sed de natura ipsa elementorum opinatur,... quod etiam in huiusmodi rebus indignatio dei et potentia operatur et suam commovet creaturam conversionis causa et utilitatis quippe multorum peccantium ac redeuntium ad dominum salvatorem atque creatorem (written c. 385—391 A.D.: M. Schanz Geschichte der römischen Litteratur München 1904 iv. 1. 359), Philostorg. eccl. hist. 12. 9 (lxv. 617 C Migne) καὶ ἄλλα δὲ τοιουτότροπα πάθη τηνικαῦτα ἐνεωχμώθη, δεικνύντα μὴ φυσικῇ τινι ταῦτα προελθεῖν ἀκολουθίᾳ, ὡς Ἑλλήνων παῖδες ληροῦσιν, ἀλλὰ θείας ἀγανακτήσεως μάστιγας ἐπαφεθῆναι, id. ib. 12. 10 (lxv. 620 A Migne) ὅτι διαφόροις ἐπιχειρήμασι κατασκευάζειν πειρᾶται τοὺς σεισμοὺς μήτε διὰ πλημμύραν ὑδάτων συνίστασθαι, μήτε πνευμάτων ἐναπολαμβανομένων τοῖς κόλποις τῆς γῆς, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ γῆς τινος (an leg. τινι?) ὅλως παρεγκλίσει, μόνῃ δὲ τῇ θείᾳ γνώμῃ πρὸς ἐπιστροφὴν καὶ διόρθωσιν τῶν ἁμαρτανομένων (published c. 425—433 A.D.: W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] ii. 2. 1433).

[3] Not so Chrysostom, who in purely rhetorical vein personifies the Antiochene earthquake as a herald announcing God's anger (Io. Chrys. in terrae motum etc. 1 (xlviii. 1027 f. Migne)) and even makes him on another occasion quote Ps. 103. 8 (Io. Chrys. hom.. post terrae motum (l. 714 f. Migne)).

[4] H. Knackfuss Raphael trans. C. Dodgson Bielefeld—Leipzig 1899 p. 102.

[5] H. Strachey Raphael London 1900 p. 30.

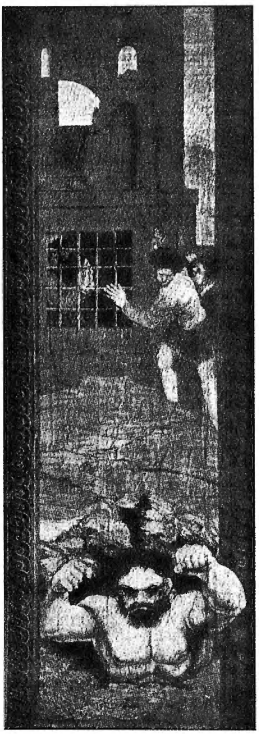

Fig. 6.

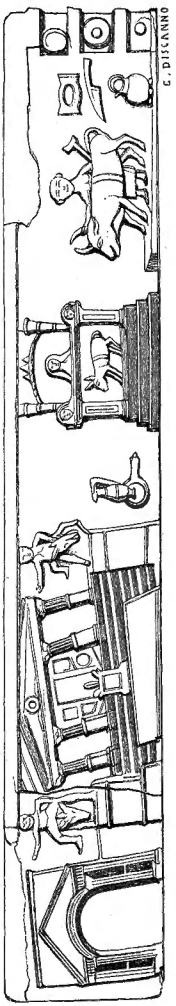

Fig. 7.

Philippoi (fig. 6). Above we see the gaol and the gaoler about to kill himself; below, the earth cracking as a gigantic nude bearded figure emerges breast-high with scowling forehead and uplifted fists[1]. In the Second Part of Goethe's Faust (1827—1832) an earthquake suddenly disturbs the peace of the upper Peneios. Seismos, 'rumbling and grumbling down below,' groans out:

> Heave again with straining muscle,
> With the shoulders shove and hustle,
> So our way to light we justle,
> Where before us all must fly[2].

He is however conscious that he makes the mountains picturesque, and claims that by so doing he benefits the very gods:

> Apollo now dwells blithely yonder,
> With the blest Muses' choir. 'Twas I
> For Jove himself, with all his bolts of thunder,
> That heaved the regal chair on high[3].

Less intelligent, but more intense, and quite refreshingly direct is the attitude of the modern Greek peasant in regions where the earthquake is no theme for artistic representation[4] or academic interest. Natives of Zakynthos, when the shock is felt, will cry out in deprecation 'My God, cease thine anger![5]' And the inhabitants of Arachova on Mount Parnassos fancy that God in rage and fury 'rolls his eyes and is minded to ruin the world, only the Blessed Virgin beseeches him and stays his wrath[6].'

[1] E. Müntz Les tapisseries de Raphaël au Vatican Paris 1897 p. 20 fig. (=my fig. 6), P. Oppé Raphael London 1909 p. 160 f. pl. 115, 2. The cartoons are now in the South Kensington Museum, the tapestries themselves in the Vatican.

[2] Goethe's Faust trans. A. G. Latham London 1908 Part ii. 138.

[3] Ib. Part ii. 139. See further F. Piper Mythologie und Symbolik der christlichen Kunst Weimar 1851 i. 2. 481—489 ('Erdbeben').

[4] A small marble frieze found on the base of a lararium in the house of the auctioneer L. Caecilius Iucundus at Pompeii (J. Overbeck—A. Mau Pompeji[4] Leipzig 1884 p. 69 f. fig. 31 = my fig. 7, C. Weichardt Pompeji vor der Zerstoerung Leipzig s.a. 81 f. fig. 102) has a relief representing the north side of the Forum. We see the façade of the temple of Iupiter, flanked by two equestrian statues, with a commemorative arch to the left and an altar etc. to the right. The slanting forms of the temple and arch have been supposed to show the dire effects produced by the earthquake of 63 A.D. (M. Neumayr Erdgeschichte Leipzig 1886 i. 139 cited by C. Weichardt op. cit. p. 82 n.*, W. H. Hobbs Earthquakes New York 1907 p. 9 fig. 3), but are of course merely due to a careless craftsman who stood too far towards the right in carving the relief (J. Overbeck—A. Mau op. cit.[4] p. 70 'ein unglücklicher Versuch, die perspectivische Verschiebung wiederzugeben' does him too much honour).

[5] B. Schmidt Das Volksleben der Neugriechen Leipzig 1871 i. 34 (Θέ μου, πάψε τὴν ὀργή σου!).

[6] Id. ib. i. 34 n. 1 (γουρλώνει τὰ μάτια του κῆ θέλ' νὰ χαλάσῃ τοὺν κόσμου, ἀλλ' ἡ Παναγιὰ τοὺν παρακαλεῖ κὴ παύ' τ'ν ὀὐργή τ').

D. H. Kerler Die Patronate der Heiligen Ulm 1905 p. 86 f. gives a list of saints

§6. Zeus and the Clouds.

(a) Zeus and the Clouds in Literature.

One of Homer's favourite epithets for Zeus is nephelegeréta, 'the cloud-gatherer.' This arresting compound, which occurs eight times in the Odyssey[1] and twenty-eight times in the Iliad[2], is in reality whose business it is to protect their votaries against earthquake. They include: (1) St Agatha of Catania (Feb. 5), during whose martyrdom in 251 A.D. a fearful earthquake occurred. (2) St Emygdius of Ascoli (Aug. 5), whose father, a prominent citizen of Augusta Trevirorum, tried to make him forswear his faith before a heathen altar till the very ground gave way beneath his feet. Others said that the saint averted an earthquake from Ascoli, where he was martyred in 303 or 304 A.D. (3) St Justus of Catalonia (May 28), bishop of Urgel from before 527 until after 546 A.D., whose body was found uninjured beneath the ruins of a wall that had collapsed above his grave. (4) St Petrus Gonsalez, better known to Spanish sailors as Sant Elmo (April 15), who died in 1240 A.D. He was once preaching in the open air near Bayonne, when an earthquake threatened. The congregation was for fleeing into the town; but the preacher detained it, and all ended well. (5) St Petrus Paschalis (Dec. 6), bishop of Jaen, who was martyred by the Moors at Granada in 1300 A.D. Soon after his death the town was plagued with famine, pestilence, earthquakes, and storms. (6) St Albertus of Trepano (Aug. 7), who died at Messina in 1307 A.D. and is reckoned as patron of all Sicily, an island much given to seismic shocks. (7) St Francesco Borgia (Oct. 10), duke of Gandia, who died in 1572 A.D. In 1625 A.D. he was chosen as a recent and popular saint to protect the new realm of Granada against earthquakes. (8) St Philippus Neri of Rome (May 26), who died in 1595 A.D. When, on June 5, 1688 A.D., an alarming earthquake visited Beneventum, Pope Benedict xiii escaped by lying directly under the saint's reliquary. (9) St Franciscus Solanus of Lima (July 24), who died in 1610 A.D. Seven years before his death he predicted the downfall of the town Truxillo. It was destroyed by earthquake on Feb. 14, 1618 A.D.

[1] Od. 1. 63, 5. 21, 9. 67, 12. 313, 384, 13. 139, 153, 24. 477 νεφεληγερέτα Ζεύς (always at the end of the line). Of these passages two have a noteworthy context: 9. 67 ff. νησοὶ δ' ἐπῶρσ' ἄνεμον Βορέην νεφεληγερέτα Ζεὺς | λαίλαπι θεσπεσίῃ, σὺν δὲ νεφέεσσι κάλυψε | γαῖαν ὁμοῦ καὶ πόντον· ὀρώρει δ' οὐρανόθεν νύξ = 12. 313 ff. ὦρσεν ἔπι ζαὴν ἄνεμον νεφεληγερέτα Ζεὺς | λαίλαπι θεσπεσίῃ, σὺν δὲ νεφέεσσι κάλυψε | γαῖαν ὁμοῦ καὶ πόντον· ὀρώρει δ' οὐρανόθεν νύξ. Much the same is said of Poseidon in Od. 5. 291 ff. ὣς εἰπὼν σύναγεν νεφέλας, ἐτάραξε δὲ πόντον | χερσὶ τρίαιναν ἑλών· πάσας δ ὀρόθυνεν ἀέλλας | παντοίων ἀνέμων, σὺν δὲ νεφέεσσι κάλυψε | γαῖαν ὁμοῦ καὶ πόντον· ὀρώρει δ' οὐρανόθεν νύξ, on which Eustath. in Od. p. 1538, 7 ff. remarks θεωρητέον ὅτι τὸ σύναγε νεφέλας νεφεληγερέτην καὶ τὸν Ποσειδῶνα εἶναι ὑποδηλοῖ. ἐπειδήπερ ὕδωρ ὕλη τοῖς νέφεσιν, εἰς ὃ μεταλαμβάνεται ὁ Ποσειδῶν. ὁκνεῖ δὲ ὅμως ὁ ποιητὴς τὸν τὰς νεφέλας συνάγοντα Ποσειδῶνα καὶ νεφεληγερέτην συνθέτως εἰπεῖν. ἀπεκληρώθη γὰρ τοῦτο Διὶ τῷ ποιητικῷ τῶν νεφελῶν αἰτίῳ.

[2] Il. 1. 511, 517, 560, 4. 30, 5. 764, 888, 7. 280, 454, 8. 38, 469, 10. 552, 11. 318, 14. 293, 312, 341, 15. 220, 16. 666, 17. 198, 20. 19, 215, 22. 182, 24. 64 νεφεληγερέτα Ζεύς (always at the end of the line and, except in 7. 280, 11. 318, 14. 293, 17. 198, 20. 215, preceded by προσέφη). So h. Dem. 78, h. Ap. 312, also Hes. o.d. 53, theog. 558.

Il. 5. 631, 736, 8. 387, 15. 154, 20. 10, 21. 499 Διὸς νεφεληγερέταο (always at the end of the line). So too h. Ap. 96, Hes. o.d. 99, theog. 730, 944.

Nonnos alone places the word in the first half of his hexameter (Dion. 23. 228 f. (Dionysos to Hydaspes) ἐκ νεφέων βλάστησας ἐμοῦ Κρονίδαο τοκῆος, | καὶ νεφεληγερέταο Διὸς βλάστημα διώκεις; 38. 202 f. οὐ νεφέλας Ἥφαιστος ἐοῦ γενετῆρος ἀγείρει, | οὐ νεφεληγερέτης κικλήσκεται οἷα Κρονίων).

a pre-Homeric tag[1] originally descriptive of Zeus as a rain-making[2] magician[3]. In Greece, as elsewhere[4], the primitive rain-maker, probably clad in a sheep-skin to imitate the fleecy vapours[5], mounted some neighbouring height and did his puny best to allay the mid-summer heat by calling the clouds to draw their welcome veil across the sky. This at least seems a plausible inference[6] from one curious Greek custom, the procession of men clad in thick sheep-skins which on the very hottest day of the year toiled up the slopes of Mount

[1] Supra i. 444 n. 6.

[2] Hesych. s.vv. νεφεληγερέτα· νεφεληγερέτης, ὁ τὰς νεφέλας ἀγείρων, ὅ ἐστι συναθροίζων· ὁ τοὺς ὄμβρους ποιῶν. κλητικὴ ἀντὶ εὐθείας, νεφελογερέτης (M. Schmidt cj. νεφεληγερέτης (?). Cp. Tzetz. alleg. Il. 17. 35 Ζεὺς ὁ νεφεληγερέτης)· τὰ αὐτά, et. Gud. p. 406, 46 νεφεληγερέταο· τοῦ τὰς νεφέλας ἀθροίζοντος, et. mag. p. 601, 55 νεφεληγερέτης· ὁ τῶν νεφῶν ἀθροιστικὸς Ζεύς, Favorin. lex. p. 1066, 38 ff. κλητικὰς ἐκφέρειν ἀντὶ εὐθειῶν τῶν Ἀττικῶν ἐστιν, οἷον νεφεληγερέτα Ζεὺς ἀντὶ τοῦ νεφεληγερέτης.

[3] Supra i. 14 n. 1, 758, ii. 258 n. 3, 694 n. 0, 695 n. 0, 1146 f. Cp. Medeia in Ov. met. 7. 201 f. nubila pello | nubilaque induco.

[4] Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art i. 249 f., 256 f., 260 ff., 275, 323.

[5] Theophr. de signis tempest. 1. 13 καὶ ὅταν νεφέλαι πόκοις ἐρίων ὅμοιαι ὦσιν ὕδωρ σημαίνει = Arat. phaen. 206 f. πολλάκι δ' ἐρχομένων ὑετῶν νέφεα προπάροιθεν | οἷα μάλιστα πόκοισιν ἐοικότα ἰνδάλλονται = Plin. nat. hist. 18. 356 si nubes ut vellera lanae spargentur multae ab oriente, aquam in triduum praesagient, Apul. de deo Socr. 10 atque ideo umectiores humilius meant aquilo[nis] agmine, tractu segniore[s]; sudis vero sublimior cursus e<s (ins. P. Thomas) > t, cum lanarum velleribus similes aguntur, cano agmine, volatu perniciore. Accordingly the Latin poets speak of fleecy clouds as vellera (Verg. georg. 1. 397, Varr. Atac. frag. 21 Baehrens ap. anon. brev. expos. Verg. georg. 1. 397 (in the ed. of Servius by G. Thilo and H. Hagen iii. 2. 265, 3 f.), Lucan. 4. 124 f., cp. Mart. ep. 4. 3. 1 f., Prosp. Aquit. in psalm. 147. 16 (li. 420 c Migne))—a usage hardly to be paralleled in Greek.

It is possible that the dappled fawnskin of the Bacchant, trimmed with tufts of white wool (Eur. Bacch. 111 ff. στικτῶν τ' ἐνδυτὰ νεβρίδων | στέφετε λευκοτρίχων πλοκάμων | μαλλοῖς and Sir J. E. Sandys ad loc.), was intended as a rough imitation of the starry, cloud-flecked sky, just as the fawnskin of Dionysos himself, bespangled with pearls (Claud. de quarto cons. Honor. 606 f. talis Erythraeis intextus nebrida gemmis | Liber agit currus), seems to have borne a cosmic character (R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 i. 76, 256 n. 4, who cites Nonn. Dion. 40. 577 f. Ἡρακλέης δὲ | ἀστραίῳ Διόνυσον ἀνεχλαίνωσε χιτῶνι and cp. the vase-painting figured supra ii. 262 pl. xvii).

Attic vases signed by the potter Brygos (c. 505—475 B.C.) or attributed to his painter (lists in Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 106 ff., J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 175 ff.) often show garments decorated with dots (O. S. Tonks 'Brygos: his Characteristics' in Memoirs of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences 1908 xiii. 69, 95, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. i. 460). In view of Brygos' name with its northern connexions (Βρύγοι, Βρύγες = Φρύγες: see W. Pape—G. E. Benseler Wörterbuch der griechischen Eigennamen[3] Braunschweig 1875 i. 231, E. Oberhummer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 920 f.) it is just conceivable that this craftsman was popularising at Athens a custom which originated in Thraco-Phrygian ritual. But the hypothesis would be risquée, since dotted garments are not strictly confined to the output of Brygos (P. Hartwig Die griechischen Meisterschalen der Blütheszeit des strengen rothfigurigen Stiles Stuttgart—Berlin 1893 p. 310 n. 4).

[6] Supra i. 420 n. 3, where I was perhaps unduly sceptical of O. Gilbert's conclusions.

Pelion to the sanctuary of Zeus Aktaîos on its summit[1]. And the sheep-skin of the human magician would be readily transferred to his divine counterpart[2]—witness the title of Zeus Melósios, Zeus 'Clad in a sheep-skin' (meloté)[3]. It is, however, reasonable to suppose that already in Homeric times the word nephelegeréta had lost something of its early import and had taken on a meaning half-religious and half-picturesque. But worse was in store, for in the fifth century B.C. it was frankly travestied. Perikles[4] as the greatest man of his age was dubbed Zeus by the comedians[5] and figures in a brilliant fragment of Kratinos, not as nephelegeréta, 'the cloud-gatherer,' but as kepha-

[1] Supra i. 420, ii. 869 n. 2. [2] Supra i. 11 ff.

[3] Supra i. 164 f. The boundary-inscription of Zeus Μηλώσιος is more accurately published by F. Hiller von Gaertringen in the Inscr. Gr. ins. v. 1 no. 48 ὅρος Διὸς Μηλωσίου. To the literature there cited add E. Preuner in the Ath. Mitth. 1924 xlix. 144.

[4] Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 302.

[5] Kratin. Thressae frag. 1 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 61 f. Meineke) ap. Plout. v. Per. 14 διὸ καὶ πάλιν Κρατῖνος ἐν Θρᾴτταις παίζει πρὸς αὐτόν· 'ὁ σχινοκέφαλος Ζεὺς ὅδε | προσέρχεται (so M. Fuhr and F. Blass, after C. G. Cobet, for ὁ σχινοκέφαλος Ζεὺς ὅδε (I. Bekker and F. A. Gotthold, followed by A. Meineke, cjj. ὀδὶ) προσέρχεται | Περικλέης (A. Meineke cj. ὁ Περικλέης)) τῷδεῖον ἐπὶ τοῦ κρανίου | ἔχων, ἐπειδὴ τοδστρακον παροίχεται.'

Kratin. Nemesis frag. 10 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 85 Meineke) ap. Plout. v. Per. 3 τῶν δὲ κωμικῶν ὁ μὲν Κρατῖνος...καὶ πάλιν ἐν Νεμέσει· 'μόλ', ὦ Ζεῦ Ξένιε καὶ Καραιέ (μακάριε vulg. κάριε libri H. Stephani. K. H. F. Sintenis cj. καραῖε. A. Meineke cj. καραιέ).'

Telekleides fab. incert. frag. 6 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 373 f. Meineke) ap. Plout. v. Per. 3 Τηλεκλείδης δὲ ποτὲ μὲν ὑπὸ τῶν πραγμάτων ἠπορημένον καθῆσθαί φησιν αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ πόλει 'καρηβαροῦντα' (cp. Poll. 2. 41 καὶ καρηβαρικὸν τὸ πάθος Τηλεκλείδης), ποτὲ δὲ 'μόνον ἑκ κεφαλῆς ἐνδεκακλίνου | θόρυβον πολὺν ἐξανατέλλειν.'

Aristoph. Ach. 530 f. ἐντεῦθεν ὀργῇ Περικλέης οὐλύμπιος | ἤστραπτ' (so R. Bentley, K. W. Dindorf, etc. cp. Plin. ep. 1. 20), ἐβρόντα, ξυνεκύκα τὴν Ἑλλάδα—a passage to which later writers make frequent allusion (see F. H. M. Blaydes ad loc.).

Com. anon. frag. 307 (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 677 Meineke) ap. Plout. v. Per. 8 αἱ μέντοι κωμῳδίαι τῶν τότε διδασκάλων σπουδῇ τε πολλὰς καὶ μετὰ γέλωτος ἀφεικότων φωνὰς εἰς αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τῷ λόγῳ μάλιστα τὴν προσωνυμίαν (sc. τοῦ Ὀλυμπίου) γενέσθαι δηλοῦσι, 'βροντᾶν' μὲν αὐτὸν καὶ 'ἀστράπτειν,' ὅτε δημηγοροίη, 'δεινὸν' δὲ 'κεραυνὸν...ἐν γλώσσῃ φέρειν' λεγόντων. F. H. M. Blaydes restores 'δεινὸν κεραυνὸν οὗτος ἐν γλώσσῃ φέρει.' A. Meineke prints γλώττῃ.

Similarly Aspasia was styled Hera by Kratinos (Chirones frag. 4 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 148 Meineke) ap. Plout. v. Per. 24 ἐν δὲ ταῖς κωμῳδίαις Ὀμφάλη τε νέα καὶ Δηϊάνειρα καὶ πάλιν Ἥρα προσαγορεύεται. Κρατῖνος δ' ἀντικρυς παλλακὴν αὐτὴν εἰρηκεν ἐν τούτοις· ἐ"Ηραν τέ οἱ Ἀσπασίαν τίκτει Καταπυγοσύνη (καὶ καταπυγοσύνην codd. T. Bergk del. καὶ. A. Emperius cj. Καταπυγοσύνη) | παλλακὴν κυνώπιδα,' schol. Plat. Menex. 235 E p. 923 b 37 ff. Κρατῖνος δὲ Ὀμφάλην αὐτὴν καλεῖ Χείρωσιν, τύραννον (? τυραννοδαίμονα cp. Hesych. s.v.) δὲ Εὔπολις Φίλοις (so A. Meineke for Κρατῖνος δὲ Ὀμφάλη τύραννον αὐτὴν καλεῖ, χείρων Εὔπολις Φίλοις. T. Bergk cj. Κρατῖνος δὲ τύραννον αὐτὴν καλεῖ Χείρωσιν, Ὀμφάλην Εὔπολις Φίλοις)· ἐν δὲ Προσπαλτίοις Ἑλένην αὐτὴν καλεῖ· ὁ δὲ Κρατῖνος καὶ "Ηραν, ἴσως ὅτι καὶ Περικλῆς Ὀλύμπιος προσηγορεύετο) and perhaps by Eupolis (Hesych. s.v. βοῶπις· μεγαλόφθαλμος, εὐόφθαλμος. μεγαλόφωνος. Εὔπολις δὲ τὴν Ἥραν (Eupol. fab. incert. frag. 81 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 571 Meineke))), possibly also by Aristophanes (yet schol. Hermog. περὶ τῶν στάσεων 72 (C. Walz Rhetores Graeci Stuttgartiae et Tubingae 1833 iv. 186, 14 ff.) καὶ τὰ ἐσχηματισμένα· ἐν οἷς δεῖ τὸν μεταχειριζόμενον ἄλλο μὲν λέγειν, ἄλλο δὲ διὰ τοῦ ἤθους ἐμφαίνειν· οἷον τοῦ Περικλέους Ὀλυμπίου κληθέντος, εἰσηγεῖται Ἀριστοφάνης Ἥραν τὴν Ἀσπασίαν καλεῖν may be a mere slip).

legeréta, 'the crowd-gatherer[1].' Truth to tell, a parody of the old appellative can still raise a laugh. Does not Clough in the immortal Bothie speak of his cheery, cigar-loving friend Lindsay as 'the Piper, the Cloud-compeller?[2]'

Of course, on occasion, magic might be employed, not to collect the clouds, but to scatter them. If for example hail threatened, old-fashioned farmers had recourse to magicians who chased the clouds away[3] and were known as nephodiôktai[4]. Nowadays magic or ancient science has joined hands with science or modern magic, and on many a Swiss hillside may be seen the mortar from which maroons are fired when hail-clouds are gathering above the vineyard.

Less magical but more majestic is a second stock epithet of the epic minstrel—kelainephès Kronion, Kronos' son 'of the dark clouds[5].' For, though sundry scholiasts and lexicographers attempt to render it 'he who gathers the black, or dark, clouds together[6]' and expound

[1] Kratin. Chirones frag. 3 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 147 f. Meineke) ap. Plout. v. Per. 3 τῶν δὲ κωμικῶν ὁ μὲν Κρατῖνος ἐν Χείρωσι· 'Στάσις δὲ' (φησὶ) 'καὶ πρεσβυγενὴς Κρόνος (so anon. for χρόνος vulg.) ἀλλήλοισι μιγέντε μέγιστον | τίκτετον τύραννον, | ὃν δὴ κεφεληγερέταν θεοὶ καλέουσι (A. Meineke prints καλοῦσιν).' I have assumed that Kratinos meant 'collector of heads, crowd-collector,' but there is of course a further hint at the peculiar shape of Perikles' cranium, as is clear from the context. With Kratinos, as with Aristophanes (e.g. supra ii. 2 n. 4, 118 n. 3, 1166 n. 3), word-play tends to produce harmonics.

[2] A. H. Clough The Bothie of Tober-na-vuolich 3. 83.

[3] E. Fehrle Studien zu den griechischen Geoponikern (ΣΤΟΙΧΕΙΑ iii) Leipzig—Berlin 1920 p. 8 cites a text parallel to Geopon. 1. 14 from cod. Parisin. 2313 (Anatolios) περὶ χαλάζης ἀποτροπήν. 1. πλεῖστα μὲν καὶ ἄλλα παρὰ τοῖς ἀρχαίοις εὑρίσκεται βοηθήματα· ἥ τε διὰ τῆς ἐχίδνης θεραπεία· καὶ ἡ διὰ τοῦ ἀσφάλακος· καὶ ἡ διὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων τῶν διωκόντων τὰ νέφη τῆς χαλάζης· καὶ ἄλλα πολλὰ παρὰ πολλοῖς ἀπίθανα· ἃ δὲ εὐκολώτερα καὶ πάγκοινα καὶ εὐκατάληπτα δοκεῖ εἶναι, συνάγομεν.

[4] Pseudo-Iust. Mart. quaestt. et responss. ad orthod. 31 (vi. 1277 C—D Migne) Εἰ νεύματι θείῳ αἱ νεφέλαι τὸν ὑετὸν τῇ γῇ καταπέμπουσι, διὰ τί τὰς νεφέλας οἱ καλούμενοι νεφοδιῶκται ἐπαοιδίαις τισὶ κατασκευάζονται, ἔνθα βούλονται, χαλάζας καὶ ἀμέτρους ὑετοὺς ἀκοντίζειν; Τοῦτο ἐπειδὴ κατὰ τὰς ἁγίας Γραφὰς μαρτυρεῖς, τοὺς ὑετοὺς εἶναι ἐκ τῶν ἐπαοιδῶν ἄπιστον. καὶ γὰρ αὐτὸς ὁ ταύτην περὶ τούτου ἐρωτήσας τὴν ἐρώτησιν, οὐκ ἀφ' ὧν ἐθεάσω γινομένων τὴν ἐρώτησιν πεποίηκας, ἀλλ' ἀφ' ὧν ἤκουσας. Clearly the νεφοδιῶκται claimed the ability to divert the clouds from their course and to precipitate them as hail or drenching rain in any desired direction. Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. iv. 1466 A quotes from the Synod. in Trullo can. 61 καὶ οἱ τύχην καὶ εἱμαρμένην καὶ γενεαλογίαν φωνοῦντες καὶ οἱ λεγόμενοι νεφοδιῶκται, from which we conclude that in s. vii A.D. the superstition was yet living. More, from Latin sources, in Ducange Gloss. med. et inf. Lat. s.v. 'tempestarii, tempestuarii.'

[5] The word is a syncopated form of κελαι[νο]-νεφής, as was clearly perceived by Herodian (περὶ παθῶν frag. 261 (ii. 259, 14 ff. Lentz) ap. et. mag. p. 501, 48 ff., cp. et. Gud. p. 313, 43 ff.), though he erroneously regarded the first element in the compound as a verb κελαίνω=μελαίνω instead of the adjective κελαινός (yet see Herodian. περὶ παθῶν frag. 595 (ii. 363, 25 f. Lentz) ap. et. mag. p. 59, 61 f.). On the etymology of κελαινός consult Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 214 f., Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 430, Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] pp. 113 f., 179.

[6] Hesych. s.v. κελαινεφές·...ὁ (M. Schmidt cj. ὦ (?)) κελαινὰ συνάγων τὰ νέφη, schol. D. Il. 2. 412 κελαινεφές· μελανονεφές, μέλανα νέφη συνάγων πρὸς κατάπληξιν.

it as meaning 'the rain-maker[1],' yet the title itself calls up no such primitive picture, nor has it quite the same claim as nephelegeréta to be recognised as a poetic heirloom of fixed and unalterable pattern[2]. A point deserving of notice is its constant association with Kronion or Kronides. It is seldom, if ever, used of Zeus pure and simple till long after classical times. Normally Zeus is kelainephés as being the son of Kronos; or, more rarely, both the divine names are dropped and kelainephés stands as an independent appellative. It looks as though this particular title had been attached to Zeus in early Homeric days as affiliated successor of the 'Minoan' storm-god Kronos[3].

According to the Iliad, the three sons of Kronos divided the world between them and > Zeus' portion was > Broad heaven in the aithér and the clouds[4].

Zeus sits on the peak of Mount Olympos and, when he is visited by Hera and Athena, the Horai fling wide a cloudy portal to admit them:

> Then Hera with the lash swift smote the steeds,
> And of their own accord the gates of heaven
> Groaned, held by the Horai. These are they who keep > Great heaven and Olympos; theirs the task
> To ope the thick cloud or to close the same.
> So through the gateway guided they their steeds
> Patient o' the goad, and Kronos' son they found > Sitting apart from all the other gods
> On the topmost peak of many-ridged Olympos[5].

[1] Schol. D. Il. 1. 397 κελαινεφεῖ· τῷ τὰς νεφέλας μελαίνοντι, ὁμβροποιῷ. Cp. Orion p. 83, 12 f. κελαινεφής· ὁ Ζεύς. ὁ τὰ νέφη κλονῶν καὶ κινῶν, ἢ μελανοποιῶν ἐν τῷ ὕειν.

[2] At the end of a hexameter we find κελαινεφεῖ Κρονίωνι (Il. 1. 397, 6. 267, 24. 290 (cp. Tzetz. alleg. Il. 24. 162), h. Dem. 91, 468, h. Herakl. Leont. 15. 3, h. Diosk. 17. 4, h. Diosk. 33. 5, Hes. sc. Her. 53), κελαινεφέα Κρονίωνα (Il. 11. 78, h. Aphr. 220), Ζηνὶ κελαινεφεῖ Κρονίωνι (h. Dem. 316), πατρὶ κελαινεφεῖ Κρονίωνι (h. Dem. 396).

At the beginning of a hexameter the formula is Ζηνὶ κελαινεφεῖ Κρονίδῃ (Od. 9. 552, 13. 25, but never in the Iliad). Κρονίδῃ is not omitted except by late authors (Maximus περὶ καταρχῶν 605 Ζηνὶ κελαινεφεῖ refers to the planet Zeus and is followed immediately by a lacuna (see A. Ludwich ad loc.). Tzetz. alleg. Od. 9. 118, 13. 7 (in P. Matranga Anecdota Graeca Romae 1850 i. 277, 293) Ζηνὶ κελαινεφεῖ is more ad rem).

After the caesura κελαινεφές occurs either in conjunction with other vocatives (Il. 2. 412 Ζεῦ κύδιστε, μέγιστε, κελαινεφές, 22. 178 ὦ πάτερ ἀργικέραυνε, κελαινεφές) or standing by itself (Il. 15. 46, Od. 13. 147 where Nikanor read διοτρεφές of Artemis (schol. L.T. Il. 9. 538), Anth. Pal. 6. 332. 7 (Adrianos) cited supra ii. 982 n. 0). Il. 21. 520 κὰδ δ' ἴζον παρὰ πατρὶ κελαινεφεῖ (with variants πὰρ Ζηνὶ κελαινεφεῖ and κελαινεφεῖ πὰρ Ζηνί) is an isolated dative.

[3] Supra ii. 554 ff., 601, 845.

[4] Il. 15. 192 (cited supra i. 25 n. 5), cp. Il. 15. 20 (supra i. 25 f.).

[5] Il. 5. 748 ff. The first half of the passage is repeated in Il. 8. 395 ff.

Similarly Apollon and Iris, when sent by Hera to Mount Ide, discover Zeus seated on the summit of Gargaron[1]—

> And ringed about him was a fragrant cloud[2].

It was on the same mountain-top that Zeus, succumbing to the wiles of Hera, promised privacy within a cloud:

> Hera, fear not: nor god, nor man shall see it;
> So thick the golden cloud that I will wrap > Around us, Helios himself could ne'er—
> Though keen his radiance beyond all—espy us[3].

And Zeus was as good as his word. The sequel tells how > o'er them spread a cloud magnificent

> And golden: glittering dew-drops from it fell[4].

Clearly cloudland is characteristic of the sky-god. Later poets harp on the theme. Aischylos says simply 'the clouds of Zeus[5].' Pindar more suo mints fresh and ringing epithets for Zeus himself—orsinephés, 'he that causeth the clouds to rise[6],' hypsinephés, 'he of the towering clouds[7],' polynephélas, 'the many-clouded' ruler of the sky[8]. There is a would-be return to Homeric naïveté in the Birds of Aristophanes, when the Chorus of songsters chant:

> Then take us for Gods, as is proper and fit,
> And Muses Prophetic ye'll have at your call
> Spring, winter, and summer, and autumn and all.
> And we won't run away from your worship, and sit
> Up above in the clouds, very stately and grand,
> Like Zeus in his tempers: but always at hand
> Health and wealth we'll bestow, as the formula runs,
> ON YOURSELVES, AND YOUR SONS, AND THE SONS OF YOUR SONS[9]— or when Prometheus, much in awe of his Aeschylean persecutor, asks in a scared tone:

> What's Zeus about?
> Clearing the clouds off, or collecting them[10]?

[1] Supra ii. 950 n. o.

[2] Il. 15. 153 ἀμφὶ δέ μιν θυέεν νέφος ἐστεφάνωτο.

[3] Il. 14. 342 ff.

[4] Il. 14. 350 f. (supra i. 154).

[5] Aisch. suppl. 780 μέλας γενοίμαν καπνὸς νέφεσι γειτονῶν Διός.

[6] Pind. Nem. 5. 62 ff. ὁ δ' εὖ φράσθη κατέ|νευσέν τέ οἱ ὀρσινεφὴς ἐξ οὐρανοῦ | Ζεὺς ἀθανάτων βασιλεύς.

[7] Pind. Ol. 5. 39 f. σωτὴρ ὑψινεφὲς | Ζεῦ.

[8] Pind. Nem. 3. 16 f. οὐρανοῦ πο|λυνεφέλᾳ κρέοντι θύγατερ.

[9] Aristoph. av. 723 ff. trans. B. B. Rogers. Lines 726 ff. run κοὐκ ἀποδράντες | καθεδούμεθ' ἄνω σεμνυνόμενοι | παρὰ ταῖς νεφέλαις ὥσπερ χὼ Ζεύς.

[10] Aristoph. av. 1501 f. τί γὰρ ὁ Ζεὺς ποιεῖ; | ἀπαιθριάζει τὰς νεφέλας ἢ ξυννέφει;

Latin poets likewise associate the clouds with the sky-god—Statius for instance speaks of 'cloudy Iupiter[1]'—and the notion passed into the common poetic stock.

(b) Zeus and the Clouds in Art.

This canonical conception of the sky-god sitting among his clouds can be illustrated from early imperial art. A fine fresco from Herculaneum, now in the Museo Nazionale at Naples (pl. iv, fig. 8)[2], shows a fair-haired[3] Zeus reclining amid the clouds. He wears an oak-wreath on his head, a reddish[4] himátion round his left shoulder and both legs, and a sandal on his foot. His right hand grasps a double lotiform thunderbolt, his left a long sceptre. His face, backed by a whitish[5] nimbus, expresses serious thought, and a small winged

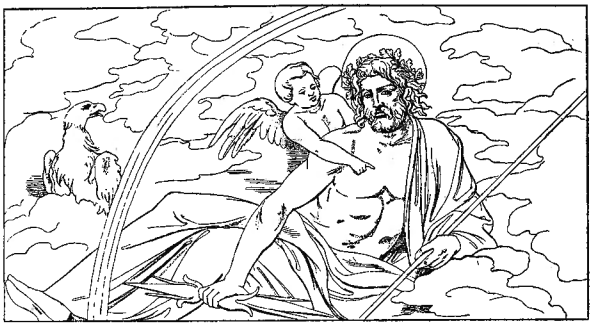

Fig. 8.

[1] Stat. Theb. 12. 650 f. qualis Hyperboreos ubi nubilus institit axes (axe cod. P) | Iuppiter et prima tremefecit sidera bruma, | etc.

[2] Guida del Mus. Napoli p. 289 no. 1259, Helbig Wandgem. Camp. p. 32 f. no. 113, B. Quaranta in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1834 x pl. 23 with text pp. 1—3, E. Braun Vorschule der Kunstmythologie Gotha 1854 p. 10 pl. 15 (= my fig. 8), Welcker Alt. Denkm. iv. 104 f. ('Jupiter im Wolkenrevier'), O. Benndorf 'Zeus und Eros' in the Rhein. Mus. 1864 xix. 442—449 with pl., Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 189 ff. (η) Atlas pl. 1, 43, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 9 no. 7, Herrmann Denkm. d. Malerei pl. 186 (=my pl. iv) Text p. 253.

[3] This detail I owe to Miss P. B. Mudie Cooke (Mrs E. M. W. Tillyard), who kindly inspected for me all the frescoes representing Zeus that are in the Naples collection.

[4] B. Quaranta loc. cit. 'un pallio di color bianco livido,' but W. Helbig loc. cit. 'Ein röthlicher Mantel.'

[5] H. W. Schulz in the Bull. d. Inst. 1841 p. 104 'col nimbo bianco,' L. Stephani Nimbus und Strahlenkrans St Petersburg 1859 p. 13 (extr. from the Mémoires de l'Académie des Sciences de St.-Pétersbourg. vi Série. Sciences politiques, histoire, philologie. ix. 361 ff.) 'weiss,' W. Helbig loc. cit. 'einen weisslichen Nimbus um das Haupt.'

Fresco from Herculaneum, now at Naples:
Zeus reclining amid the clouds.

See page 36 f. with fig. 8.

Eros appearing behind his right shoulder points downwards to some cause of interest, not improbably to Ganymedes or some other of the god's numerous flames[1]. Above the pair stretches the arc of a rainbow, beyond which, half-hidden by the clouds, is perched an eagle looking towards its master. So much is certain. But further, a comparison of this fresco with 'Apulian' vase-paintings[2] or with the relief by Archelaos of Priene[3] raises a suspicion that here, as there, Zeus is really couched on a mountain-top, say the cloudy summit of Olympos. Be that as it may, the painter has managed to combine a variety of Hellenistic motifs—the recumbent Zeus[4], the prompting Eros[5], the expectant eagle[6]—in a fairly consistent and effective whole.

Somewhat similar is the design that adorned the central medallion in the barrel-ceiling of Room 60, the famous Volta Dorata, of Nero's Golden House (fig. 9)[7]. Here against a circular field of blue is seen

[1] F. G. Welcker loc. cit. p. 104 held that Eros is directing attention to the sceptre of Zeus, O. Benndorf loc. cit. p. 444 that he is indicating the heart as the seat of the god's malady. E. Braun loc. cit. had come nearer to the truth, when he assumed that Eros is pointing downwards to some human fair.

[2] Supra i. 127 fig. 96, i. 128 f. pl. xii.

[3] Supra i. 131 fig. 98 pl. xiii.

[4] With the works of art recorded in the two preceding notes cp. a numismatic type supra i. 116 fig. 85. See further Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 161, supra i. 125 ff.

[5] The history of the type is worth tracing. Its several stages are enumerated and exemplified infra Append. Q.

[6] Supra i. 34 Frontispiece and pl. i, 35 pl. ii, 42 pl. vi, 131 pl. xiii and fig. 98, 598 n. 1 fig. 461, 752 fig. 552, ii. 15 f. figs. 4—6, 285 n. 0 fig. 184 f., 400 n. 11 fig. 303, 575 fig. 481, 576 fig. 484, 705 fig. 635, 707 figs. 639, 640, 754 n. 2 fig. 694, 771 fig. 735, 798 fig. 761, 833 fig. 793, 895 n. 1 fig. 821, 956 n. 0 fig. 846, 1125 n. 1 fig. 951, 1143 fig. 964, 1161 fig. 969, 1230 fig. 1024, 1232 tailpiece. Sometimes the eagle hovers (ii. 708 fig. 643), or is perched on a cornu copiae (ii. 1225 fig. 1023) or grape-bunch (i. 596 fig. 457) or tree (ii. 282 n. 2. pl. xix) or on the reins of a car (ii. 285 n. 0 fig. 180) or in the pediment of a temple (ii. 285 n. 0 fig. 186) or on a globe (ii. 95 fig. 54, a, 578 n. 1 fig. 491 (?)) or holds a wreath (i. 42 fig. 12, 276 fig. 202 (?), ii. 232 n. 0 fig. 160 (?), 754 n. 2 fig. 695), or is duplicated to flank a throne (ii. 754 n. 1 fig. 693, cp. 1102 n. 0 fig. 939), or mounts guard over the regalia (ii. 811 fig. 778), or appears in relief on an altar (i. 713 fig. 528). The same bird attends upon Sarapis (i. 188 fig. 137) and Jupiter Dolichenus (i. 611 f. figs. 480, 481), and upon emperors who play the part of Zeus, e.g. Domitian (ii. 811 n. 5 fig. 777), Commodus (ii. 1185 fig. 987), Geta (ii. 1185 f. fig. 988), Caracalla (ii. 1186 fig. 989).

See further K. Sittl Der Adler und die Weltkugel als Attribute des Zeus (Besonderer Abdruck aus dem vierzehnten Supplementbande der Jahrbücher für classische Philologie) Leipzig 1884 pp. 3—42.

[7] P. S. Bartoli—G. P. Bellori Le pitture antiche del Sepolcro de Nasonii nella Via Flaminia Roma 1680 p. 6 ('In un foglio si rappresenta la testudine di una Camera divisata in ripartimenti di vari colori, nel cui mezzo in una sfera celeste sono dipinte le Nozze di Giove, il quale sopra una nubbe, abbraccia Giunone con Amore che scocca verso di lui uno strale. Evvi incontro Pallade, e Mercurio col vaso dell' ambrosia'), G. Turnbull A treatise on ancient painting London 1740 p. 176 pl. 10 ('Jupiter on his Eagle caressing Juno, probably, because Minerva is there; yet he was wont to receive his Daughter

Zeus seated on a cloud with a crimson himátion wrapped about his legs. He turns to embrace the naked and rather effeminate form of Ganymedes[1], who wears turban-wise his Phrygian cap (?) and has a wind-swept chlamýs fluttering from his shoulder. The great eagle, which has just arrived with the beauteous boy, is already nestling—

Fig. 9.

Venus very kindly, according to Virgil' (Aen. 1. 254 ff.)) from a drawing by Bartoli in the Massimi collection = my fig. 9, F. Weege in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1913 xxviii. 176 col. pl. 6 ('Auf einer Wolke sieht man Zeus, von dem Adler getragen, mit einer nackten Frau (oder Ganymed?), vor ihm links die bewaffnete Athena und Hermes mit einer Schale. Von oben schwebt ein Eros auf das Liebespaar zu'), Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 15 no. 2 ('Jupiter, Ganymède, Minerve, Mercure, Eros').

[1] Other identifications (see the preceding note) are much less probable. Iuno would not have been represented as a naked woman, and Venus could at most claim a parental kiss. Besides, the eagle spells Ganymedes.

ula, dextraque plent Tritonum lusus

s, Tritons, etc.

See page 39.

its wings still spread—beneath the left foot of Zeus, to serve him as a living footstool. Eros hovers near at hand with welcoming arms. Hermes in winged pétasos and loosely draped chlamýs holds up, from a lower level of cloud, a phiále—possibly that from which Ganymedes had fed the eagle[1]. In the background to the left Athena, equipped with helmet, spear, and Gorgon-shield, turns her head to address another goddess imperfectly seen behind her. The painting no doubt has merits. The choice of subject suits its position of central importance. The blue circle overhead suggests the sky and helps the spectator to realise that this is no mountain-top but the heaven above it[2]. Hermes' gesture secures uplift[3]. Detachment from earth is complete. Yet the composition in general is not very well adapted to fill the circular space. The fusion of three types—Zeus enthroned, Zeus on the eagle[4], Ganymedes on the eagle—is decidedly awkward. Hermes' action after all is a little meaningless. And the two goddesses, perhaps intended for those of the Capitoline triad, are obviously de trop.

These weaknesses disappear in a third fresco, which again formed the ceiling-decoration in a room of the Golden House (pl. v)[5]. The circular design, according to a sketch of it made by that consistently careful draughtsman P. S. Bartoli, depicts Zeus seated on a cloudy throne with a himátion wrapped about his legs, a thunderbolt brandished in his right hand, and an eagle perched at his side. The medallion was surrounded by a triple row of gods and goddesses with, beyond them, a series of sportive Tritons.

An engraved onyx in my collection (fig. 10)[6] represents the whole company of heaven as conceived in Roman imperial times.

[1] Infra Append. P.

[2] Supra i. 115.

[3] Cp. the attitude of Ganymedes himself, not to mention the eagle and the dog, in the Vatican group after Leochares (supra ii. 281 n. 4).

[4] Supra ii. 102 f. n. 0 figs. 59—64, ii. 462 n. 0.

[5] J. P. Bellorius et M. A. Causseus Picturae antiquae cryptarum Romanarum, et sepulcri Nasonum Romae 1750 p. 89 Append. pl. 6 ('Juppiter nubi insidet, proximè adstante Aquila, dextraque fulmen minax in hominum exitium torquere videtur: circumstant triplici ordine Deorum, Dearumque imagines: quartumque ordinem implent Tritonum lusus') = my pl. v, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 9 no. 5.

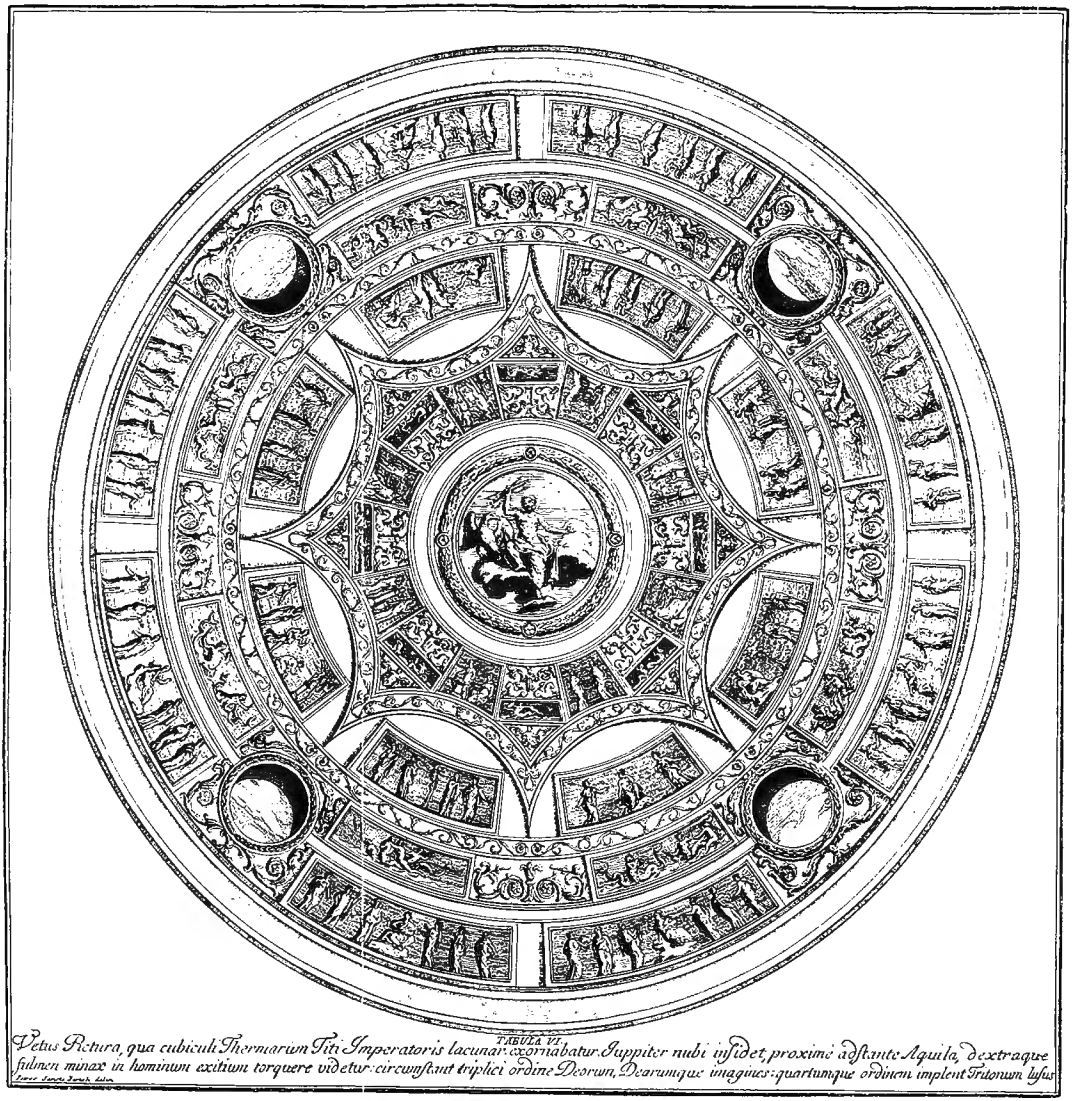
[6] The stone, which is circular and plano-convex (here figured to a scale of $\frac{3}{4}$), possibly served as a pendant or ear-ring. On such purely ornamental phalerae see E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iv. 427. This one is from the Wyndham Cook and Sir Francis Cook collections. It does not appear in the privately printed Catalogue of the Wyndham Cook Collection, but was in the Sale of Humphry W. Cook (July 1925), who inherited from Sir Francis Cook. There is an impression of the same intaglio in the Museum of Classical Archaeology, Cambridge, no. 472 in the Impressions of Engraved Gems (Ancient and Modern) got together by John Wilson (1790—1876). It is described in the MS. Catalogue as 'Jupiter between Juno & Minerva to witness a Chariot Race'!

Plate V



A frescoed ceiling from a room in the Golden House : Zeus enthroned in heaven, surrounded by gods, goddesses, Tritons, etc.

See page 39.

The convex circular field is admirably suggestive of a cosmic scene. Above a thick stratum of cloud sit the Capitoline three. Iupiter in the centre, with a himátion draped round his knees and over his left shoulder, has a small twisted thunderbolt in his right hand[1] and a long sceptre in his left. At his right side Minerva, in chitón,

Fig. 11.

Fig. 12.

Fig. 10.

Fig. 13.

Fig. 14.

himátion, and helmet, holds a short sceptre in one hand and raises the other as if she grasped a spear[2]. At his left side is Iuno, in

[1] The thunderbolt, though present in the position indicated supra ii. 754 ff., is minimised and liable to confusion with the lines of the arm and hand.

[2] Cp. e.g. a terra-cotta lamp of s. iii. A.D., which figures the Capitoline deities all seated and puts a spear in the raised right hand of Minerva (Brit. Mus. Cat. Lamps p. 167 no. 1110 fig. 234). The motif is normal in the standing type of the Capitoline Minerva (e.g. supra i. 44 fig. 13, 45 fig. 14). The omission of the spear on the onyx may imply that the pose was modified into a gesture of entreaty or the like (C. Sittl Die Gebärden der Griechen und Römer Leipzig 1890 pp. 51, 188 ff.).

chitón, himátion, and veil. She too holds a short sceptre in one hand and with the other extends a patera towards Iupiter. The triad is flanked by a pair of nude beardless wind-gods blowing conch-shells[1] as they emerge from the cloudy band. Beneath the clouds Sol in a quadriga pursues Luna in a biga: he is distinguished by his chlamýs and radiate crown, she by her arched drapery and crescent. Lowest of all reclines Oceanus portrayed as an elderly river-god with water flowing from his urn[2]. The Capitoline group as here represented resembles so closely—even to the modified gesture of Minerva's hand—the same group as it appears on bronze medallions of Antoninus Pius (fig. 11)[3] and of Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus (fig. 12)[4] that we may fairly attribute the intaglio to a period not much later than the middle of the second century A.D. Similar in age and motif are two, if not three, gems in our national collection[5]. Ultimately the deities, seated or standing, are accompanied by their favourite birds—graphic labelling of the usual sort (figs. 13, 14).[6] It is interesting to observe that the whole subject was used with happy effect in the decoration of a terra-cotta lamp, now at Berlin (fig. 15)[7], which—to judge from its heart-shaped nozzle—can be referred to the third century A.D.[8]

[1] F. Piper Mythologie und Symbolik der christlichen Kunst Weimar 1851 i. 2. 437, H. Steinmetz in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1910 xxv. 37 ff.

[2] P. Weizsäcker in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 817 f. fig. 1, O. Navarre in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iv. 144.

[3] Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 49 fig. (Paris) = Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] ii. 380 f. no. 1134 fig. (= my fig. 11) (Paris) (Minerva 'porte la main droite à sa tête') = E. Aust in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 758 fig., Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 16 no. 66 pl. 50, 5 a bronze medallion of Antoninus Pius (140—143 A.D.) with obv. legend ANTONINVS AVG PIVS P P TR P COS III (Milan).

[4] Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] iii. 130 no. 5 ('Autrefois M. Carpentier') (Minerva 'porte la main droite à sa tête') = Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 43 no. 6 pl. 71, 6 (= my fig. 12) a medallion, in two bronzes, of Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus (161—165 A.D.) with obv. legend IMP ANTONINVS AVG COS II[I] IMP VERVS COS II (Berlin).

[5] (1) a sapphirine chalcedony (Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems[2] p. 143 no. 1257 pl. 18, Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen i pl. 44, 48, ii. 215, H. B. Walters Art of the Romans London 1911 pl. 48, 21). (2) a sard (Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems[2] p. 143 no. 1258 pl. 18). (3) a fragmentary sard, minus the upper part of Minerva (Brit. Mus. Cat. Gems[2] p. 143 no. 1259).

[6] Nos. 7228 and 8889 in the Wilson Collection of Gem-impressions (supra p. 39 n. 6). Scale $\frac{3}{4}$.

[7] In the Berlin Museum terra cotta no. 871 figured by L. Beger Thesauri Regii et Electoralis Brandenburgici vol. iii (Coloniæ Marchicæ s.a.) p. 439 f. fig. H, P. S. Bartoli—G. P. Bellori Le antiche lucerne sepolcrali figurate Roma 1704 Pt. ii. p. 4 f. pl. 9 (= my fig. 15), H. Moses A Collection of Vases... London 1814 pl. 81 (after Bartoli), cp. O. Jahn Archäologische Beiträge Berlin 1847 p. 83, F. Piper op. cit. i. 2. 435.

[8] J. Fink in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1900 p. 685 ff. 'Formen und Stempel römischer Thonlampen' (Class iv), Brit. Mus. Cat. Lamps pp. xxv, 167 ff.

In Greece and Italy the belief that the gods were enthroned above the cloud-belt goes back, through a long line of literary tradition, to Homer and the Homeric Olympos[1]. Further east even earthly monarchs laid claim to a like exaltation. Thus Kushāṇa kings of the Kābul valley, during the first two centuries of our era, issued numerous gold coins on which their supramundane position was duly indicated. V'ima Kadphises, son of Kujūla Kadphises and conqueror of northern India, whose reign ended in 78 A.D.[1], appears either half-emergent from a pile of clouds (fig. 16)[2] or sitting cross-legged upon them as on comfortable cushions (fig. 17)[3]. Kanishka, his successor from 78 A.D. onwards[4], raises his head proudly above a thick mass of clouds (fig. 18)[5]. Huvishka, who probably followed Kanishka on the throne c. 111—129 A.D.[6], repeats the types of V'ima Kadphises and either emerges half his height above the clouds (figs. 19, 20)[7] or sits cross-legged on the top of them (fig. 21)[8].

Fig. 15.

[1] Supra i. 101 f. pl. ix, 1 and 2.

Finally, in mediaeval times, the cloud-stratum was stylised into the nebuly of ecclesiastical[9] and heraldic[10] art.

Fig. 16.

Fig. 17.

Fig. 18

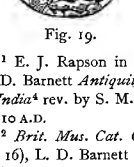

Fig. 19.

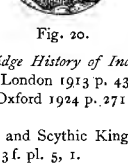

Fig. 20.

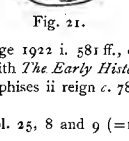

Fig. 21.

[1] E. J. Rapson in The Cambridge History of India Cambridge 1922 i. 581 ff., cp. L. D. Barnett Antiquities of India London 1913 p. 43. V. A. Smith The Early History of India[4] rev. by S. M. Edwardes Oxford 1924 p. 271 makes Kadphises ii reign c. 78—c. 110 A.D.

[2] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Greek and Scythic Kings p. 124 f. pl. 25, 8 and 9 (=my fig. 16), L. D. Barnett op. cit. p. 213 f. pl. 5, 1.

[3] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Greek and Scythic Kings p. 124 pl. 25, 7 (=my fig. 17), Ç. J. Brown The Coins of India Calcutta 1922 p. 35 pl. 4, 3 ('the king seated cross-legged on a couch').

[4] E. J. Rapson loc. cit. V. A. Smith op. cit.[4] pp. 274, 286 makes Kanishka succeed Kadphises ii and reign c. 120—c. 160 A.D. L. D. Barnett op. cit. p. 42 had placed Kanishka's reign 58—c. 34 B.C.

[5] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Greek and Scythic Kings p. 132 pl. 26, 16 (=my fig. 18) and 17.

[6] Supra ii. 791 n. 2. V. A. Smith op. cit.[4] p. 286 ff. dates Huvishka's reign c. 160—c. 182 A.D. L. D. Barnett op. cit. p. 42 had placed it c. 25 B.C.—c. 2 A.D.

[7] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Greek and Scythic Kings p. 136 ff. pl. 27, 9 (=my fig. 19), 11, 16, pl. 28, 9, V. A. Smith op. cit.[4] p. 76 coin-pl. figs. 4, 5. Fig. 20 is from a specimen in my collection.

[8] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Greek and Scythic Kings p. 145 pl. 28, 10 (=my fig. 21).

[9] Supra ii. 137 n. 0 pl. viii.

[10] O. Barron in The Encyclopædia Britannica[11] Cambridge 1910 xiii. 317, A. C. Fox-Davies A complete Guide to Heraldry London 1925 pp. 79 f., 91 f. fig. 47, G, H, 94.

(c) Nephelokokkygia[1].

It remains to consider in greater detail the most famous conception of Cloud-land bequeathed to us by classical antiquity, the Nephelokokkygia of Aristophanes' Birds. That remarkable drama raises many problems, some of which we must attempt to solve. Why did the poet choose Birds for his theme? Why lay such stress on the Hoopoe, the Woodpecker, the Cuckoo? Who is Pisthetairos? Who is Basileia? And what light does the whole fantasia throw on the relation between Zeus and the Clouds? I begin by passing in review the relevant incidents of the play.

Two typical Athenians, Pisthetairos and Euelpides, tired of Athens and its perpetual lawsuits, set out, under the guidance of a crow and a jackdaw, to seek the hoopoe Tereus. They would learn from him, since he too had been a man and suffered like troubles, where they may find peaceful quarters—

> Fleecy as a rug and soft to lie upon[2].

They want something more comfortable than their own Rock Town, but scout his suggestions of the Red Sea in the east, Lepreos down south, Opous up north. Euelpides thinks there is much to be said for staying where they are, with the Birds. And Pisthetairos is struck by a grand idea. If Tereus and the Birds would but hearken to him, they might take possession of the Clouds—why not?—and transform the very pólos into a pólis. This would enable them to starve out the gods, who could receive no savoury sacrificial smoke without first paying tribute to them! Hereupon Tereus and his mate, Prokne the nightingale, summon an assembly of the Birds, a suspicious and hostile crowd[3].

To allay their fears, Pisthetairos in a persuasive speech develops his scheme[4]. He tells them that the Birds were formerly lords of creation, being of older lineage than Kronos, the Titans, or Earth herself—witness Aesop's fable of the Lark which, before earth existed, had to bury her father in her own head[5]. Clearly then the Birds are [1] The first draft of this section appeared as 'Nephelokokkygia' in Essays and Studies presented to William Ridgeway Cambridge 1913 pp. 213—221 with pl. It is here republished with considerable alterations and additions.

[2] Aristoph. av. 121 f.

[3] Id. ib. 1—450.

[4] Id. ib. 451—538.

[5] This fable, which is of a type still common in the Balkans (cp. M. Gaster Rumanian Bird and Beast Stories London 1915 p. 236 f. no. 78 'Why has the lark a tuft?', p. 238 f. no. 79 'Why is the tuft of the lark dishevelled?'), is not found in any ancient collection of Aisopika. F. de Furia (Lipsiae 1810) fab. 415 and C. Halm (Lipsiae 1860) fab. 211 more ancient than the gods, and Zeus ought to relinquish his sceptre to the Woodpecker[1]. Again, the Birds are the rightful rulers of mankind. The Cock with his upright tiara was once king of Persia, and still summons men to their labours[2]. The Kite lorded it over merely paraphrase or transcribe Aristophanes. Galen de simplicium medicamentorum temperamentis et facultatibus 11. 37 (xii. 360 f. Kühn) likewise cites Aristophanes and rightly cp. the ἐπιτυμβίδιαι κορυδαλλίδες of Theokr. 7. 23 (see O. Crusius on Babr. 72. 20 κορυδαλλὸς οὖν τάφοις παίζων). Ail. de nat. an. 16. 5 (copied by the paroemiographers Apostol. 7. 74, Arsen. viol. p. 239 Walz s.v. ἔποπος 'Ινδοῦ στοργή) thinks that the Greeks got their story of the Lark from one told by the Brachmanes about the Hoopoe, a bird which the Indians deem the right pet for royalty. The story is as follows. A certain Indian king had a son, whose [two?] elder brothers grew up lawless and violent. They scorned their brother as too young and scoffed at their father and mother as too old. So the parents took their youngest boy and fled. Their journey was too much for them and they died. But the boy, far from despising them, split his own head with a sword and buried them in it. The Sun, who sees all, amazed at this remarkable instance of filial piety, turned the boy into a beautiful and long-lived bird. On his head is a crest, which keeps his exploit in memory.... An Ogygian length of time has elapsed since the Indian Hoopoe was a boy and treated his parents thus. A. Hausrath in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 1727, 1730 f. makes it probable that the simple Greek tale is not actually derived from the more rhetorical Indian tale. Nevertheless the two are so similar that they cannot be regarded as wholly unrelated. There is of course a superficial resemblance between the crested lark (e.g. R. Lydekker The Royal Natural History London 1894—95 iii. 420 f. with fig. on p. 418) and the hoopoe (id. ib. 1895 iv. 57 ff. with col. pl.), and it is reasonable to suppose that Greeks and Indians, distant cousins by race, elaborated analogous stories to account for parallel features. But D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 97 is in danger of going too far when he says: 'The κορυδός and ἔποψ (both crested birds) are frequently confused: the very word Alauda is possibly an Eastern word for the Hoopoe, Arab. al hudhud.' This etymology, first found in, or rather implied by, the Pandectarius Arabicus Matthaei Sylvatici (an Arab commentator on the Pandectae of Matthaeus Sylvaticus, physician of Salerno, published at Naples in 1474) quoted by S. Bochart Hierozoïcon rec. E. F. C. Rosenmüller Lipsiae 1796 iii. 115, is nowadays commonly rejected in favour of a Celtic origin (Plin. nat. hist. 11. 121 Gallico vocabulo, Suet. Iul. 24 vocabulo...Gallico, Marcell. de medicamentis 28. 50 p. 299, 1 Helmreich Gallice): see L. Diefenbach Origines Europaeae Frankfurt am Main 1861 pp. 219—222, C. W. Glück in the Jahrb. f. class. Philol. 1866 xii. 166 f., A. Holder Alt-celtischer Sprachschatz Leipzig 1896 i. 75 f., Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] p. 23.

[1] Supra ii. 697 n. 0. May we infer that the woodpecker, like the wren (first in Aristoph. av. 569 βασιλεύς ἐστ' ὄρχιλος ὄρνις, cp. its later names βασιλίσκος (Aisop. ap. Plout. praec. gerend. reipubl. 12, alib.), τύραννος (Aristot. hist. an. 8. 3. 592 b 23), regaliolus (Suet. Iul. 81 regaliolum with v.l. regaviolum, on which see De Vit Lat. Lex. s.v. 'regaliolus'), regulus (carm. de philomel. 43 in Poet. Lat. min. v. 366 Baehrens), 'kinglet' (C. Swainson The Folk Lore and Provincial Names of British Birds London 1886 p. 25)) and sundry other birds (Plin. nat. hist. 10. 203 dissident...aquila et trochilus, si credimus, quoniam rex appellatur avium, cp. 8. 90 parva avis, quae trochilos ibi vocatur, rex avium in Italia, with the remarks of D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 171 f.), was popularly held to be a king? Keleos the Green Woodpecker (supra i. 226) was one of the 'kings' at Eleusis (supra i. 211).

[2] F. Baethgen De vi ac significatione galli in religionibus et artibus Graecorum et Romanorum Gottingae 1887 pp. 6, 8, 11 (somewhat slight). The best account of the cock in Persian religion is still that of K. Schwenck Die Mythologie der Perser Frankfurt am Main 1850 pp. 304—307. See also F. Orth in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 2521 ff.

Hellas: Hellenes grovel yet at the sight of him[1]. The Cuckoo was sovereign of Egypt and Phoinike, and his cry sent the circumcised to reap their plains: young stalwarts still follow their example[2]. Tragedy-kings bear a bird-tipped sceptre[3]. Zeus himself has an eagle on his head, Athena an owl, Apollon a hawk[4]. No wonder men swear 'by the Goose[5].'

[1] The kite was in general a bird of ill omen (L. Hopf Thierorakel und Orakelthiere in alter und neuer Zeit Stuttgart 1888 p. 94 f. ('Weihen')), whose advent shortly before the vernal equinox (Gemin. calendarium: Pisces p. 228, 1 f. Manitius ἐν δὲ τῇ ιζ (March 9) Εὐδόξῳ χειμαίνει· καὶ ἱκτῖνος φαίνεται, 6 f. ἐν δὲ τῇ κβ (March 14) Εὐκτήμονι ἱκτῖνος φαίνεται· ὀρνιθίαι πνέουσι μέχρις ἰσημερίας, 10 f. ἐν δὲ τῇ λ (March 22) Καλλίππῳ τῶν Ἰχθύων ὁ νότιος ἐπιτέλλων λήγει· ἱκτῖνος φαίνεται· βορέας πνεῖ with the observations of D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 68 f. Cp. Aristoph. av. 713 f.) might well be greeted by the superstitious with grovelling prostration (schol. Aristoph. av. 501 προκυλινδεῖσθαι· ἔαρος ἀρχομένου (ἐρχομένου cod. R.) ἱκτινος φαίνεται εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα. ἐφ' ᾧ ἡδόμενοι κυλίνδονται (ὡς ἐπὶ γόνυ. παίξας οὖν ὡς βασιλεῖ φησι τὸ κυλινδεῖσθαι). ἴδιον γὰρ βασιλέως τὸ γονυπετεῖσθαι ὑπὸ ἀνθρώπων. ἄλλως. (τοὺς ἀνθρώπους δηλονότι. τὸ διὰ μεταβολὴν δὲ καιροῦ γινόμενον εἰς βασιλικὴν ἐπέτρεψε τιμήν.) οἱ γὰρ ἱκτινοι τὸ παλαιὸν ἔαρ ἐσήμαινον. οἱ πένητες οὖν ἀπαλλαγέντες τοῦ χειμῶνος ἐκυλινδοῦντο καὶ προσεκύνουν αὐτούς. Souid. s.v. ἱκτινος merely copied this scholion, prefixing the words καὶ παροιμία· προκυλινδεῖσθαι ἱκτίνοις. No such saying, however, appears in the paroemiographers). There is no doubt tbat Aristophanes has here preserved for us a genuine scrap of ancient folk-custom. W. Mannhardt Wald- und Feldkulte[2] Berlin 1904 i. 483 adduces an interesting parallel: 'Beim ersten Kukuksruf wälzt sich der Meininger, hessische, westfälische Bauer ein paarmal auf der Erde, um das Jahr hindurch frei von Rückenschmerzen zu bleiben[5]. ([5] Zs. f. D. A. III, 362, 13. XII, 400. Zs. f. D. Myth. IV, 447. Kuhn, Westfäl. Sag. II, 74, 221.) Gradeso warf sich im alten Griechenland rücklings (ὕπτιος) nieder und wälzte sich auf dem Boden, wer zum erstenmale im Frühling eines Weihen (ἱκτινος) ansichtig ward[6]. ([6] Aristophan. av. 498 ff. c. schol.)' See further Seemann in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1933 v. 713, 721 n. 170.

[2] We have no reason to think that Egyptians and Phoenicians were specially devoted to the Cuckoo. But it is likely enough that they regarded his cry in the spring-time as a signal for returning to work in the fields (cp. J. Hardy 'Popular History of the Cuckoo' in The Folk-Lore Record 1879 ii. 56 ff.). Aristophanes uses words with a double meaning: κόκκυ suggests at once 'cuckoo' and 'cuckold' (W. Mannhardt 'Der Kukuk' in the Zeitschrift für deutsche Mythologie und Sittenkunde 1855 iii. 246 ff. 'Vor allem stand der kukuk den functionen der zeugung vor.' Etc.); ψωλοί means both circumcisi and verpi; πεδίον is not only 'plain' but also pudendum (schol. Aristoph. av. 507 ἄλλως. τὸ αἰδοῖον, cp. λειμών, κῆπος, hortus, and the like).

[3] E.g. supra i. 251 pl. xxii (Kreon).

[4] The type is so unusual that the scholiast ad loc. is reduced to saying δέον εἰπεῖν ἐπὶ τοῦ σκήπτρου εἶπεν ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς! His alternative explanation ἐπειδὴ εἰώθεσαν τὰ ἀφιερωμένα ἑκάστῳ θεῷ ὄρνεα ἐπὶ κεφαλῆς ἱδρύεσθαι is simply untrue. Hieratic effigies of the sort are all pre-Hellenic, e.g. the faience goddesses surmounted by snake and lioness (?leopard) from the temple-repository of 'Middle Minoan iii' date at Knossos (Sir A. J. Evans in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1902—1903 ix. 74 ff. figs. 54—57, id. The Palace of Minos London 1921 i. 500 ff. with col. Frontispiece and figs. 359—362, H. T. Bossert Altkreta[2] Berlin 1923 pp. 22, 72 ff. figs. 103—106) or the terra-cotta goddess with a dove on her head from the small shrine of 'Late Minoan iii' date on the same site (supra ii. 536 fig. 406 c). We need not suppose that such archaic forms had survived into classical Greece. If a bird on the head was modified into a bird on the helmet, that would lend point enough to Aristophanes' lines. And of this usage we have some few traces. There was a chryselephantine statue of Athena with a cock on her helmet, said to be the work of Pheidias, on the akrópolis of Elis (Paus. 6. 26. 3, cp. Plin. nat. hist. 35. 54 where the same (?) statue is attributed to Kolotes the pupil of Pheidias: see further H. Hitzig—H. Blümner on Paus. loc. cit.). A bronze formerly in the cabinet of St Germain des Prez represents Athena wearing a helmet the crest of which is supported by a cock (Montfaucon Antiquity Explained trans. D. Humphreys London 1721 i. 82 f. pl. 39, 19 ('Hermathena'!) = Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 276 no. 10). Another bronze at Agram makes her crest-support an owl (J. Brunšmid 'Monuments du Musée d'Agram' in the Viestnik 1914 [Vjesnik N. S. xiii 1913/1914] p. 212 cited by Reinach Rép. Stat. v. 120 no. 9). A third, in the Bammeville collection, repeats the motif (W. Fröhner Collection de feu M. Joly de Bammeville Paris 1893 pl. 19 = Reinach Rép. Stat. ii. 278 no. 9).

[5] E. von Lasaulx Der Eid bei den Griechen Würzburg 1844 p. 27 f. and R. Hirzel Der Eid Leipzig 1902 pp. 96 n. 2, 100 n. 3 collect most of the passages that bear on this curious practice. From them we learn (a) that Rhadamanthys would not suffer his subjects to take an oath by the gods, but bade them swear by goose, dog, ram, etc., and (b) that Sokrates conformed to the same usage, swearing by dog, plane-tree, etc. Cp. Plat. apol. 21 E, Gorg. 466 C, Phaedr. 228 B, rep. 399 E, Phaed. 98 E νὴ τὸν κύνα, Gorg. 461 A μὰ τὸν κύνα, Gorg. 482 B μὰ τὸν κύνα τὸν Αἰγυπτίων θεόν, Phaedr. 236 D—E ὄμνυμι... τὴν πλάτανον ταυτηνί.

Sosikrates (on whom see Laqueur in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii A. 1160—1165) Κρητικά frag. 5 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 501 Müller) ap. schol. Aristoph. av. 521 Λάμπων δ' ὄμνυσι: (τῶν εἰκῆ δαιμόνων. ὅτι (F. Dübner cj. οὐ) πρῶτοι οἱ Σωκρατικοὶ ἐπετήδευσαν οὕτως ὀμνύναι. Σωσικράτης (so J. Meursius and L. Küster for Σωκράτης) γὰρ ἐν τῷ β' (so W. Dindorf for τῷ β') τῶν Κρητικῶν οὕτως φησὶ "'Ραδάμανθυς δὲ δοκεῖ διαδεξάμενος τὴν βασίλειαν δικαιότατος γεγενῆσθαι πάντων ἀνθρώπων. λέγεται δὲ αὐτὸν πρῶτον οὐδένα ἐᾶν ὅρκους ποιεῖσθαι κατὰ τῶν θεῶν, ἀλλ' ὀμνύναι κελεῦσαι χῆνα καὶ κύνα καὶ κριὸν καὶ τὰ ὅμοια") (goose, dog, ram). This is abridged by Souid. s.v. Λάμπων ὄμνυσι τὸν χῆν', ὅταν ἐξαπατᾷ τινα (goose, dog, ram) and s.v. χῆνα ὀμνύναι (goose, ram).

Schol. Plat. apol. 21 E νὴ τὸν κύνα· 'Ραδαμάνθυος ὅρκος οὗτος ὁ κατὰ κυνὸς ἢ χηνὸς ἢ κριοῦ ἢ τινος ἄλλου τοιούτου· "οἷς ἦν μέγιστος ὅρκος ἅπαντι λόγῳ κύων, | ἔπειτα χήν· θεοὺς δ' ἐσίγων," Κρατῖνος Χείρωσι (frag. 11 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 155 f. Meineke, who with T. Gaisford would divide the lines λόγῳ | κύων, not κύων, | ἔπειτα)). κατὰ τούτων δὲ νόμος ὀμνύναι, ἵνα μὴ κατὰ θεῶν οἱ ὅρκοι γίγνωνται. τοιοῦτοι δὲ καὶ οἱ Σωκράτους ὅρκοι (dog, goose, ram). This is copied by the schol. V.G. Loukian. vit. auct. 16 (dog, goose, plane, ram), Phot. lex. s.v. 'Ραδαμάνθυος ὅρκος (goose, dog, plane, ram), Souid. s.v. 'Ραδαμάνθυος ὅρκος (goose, dog, plane, ram), Apostol. 15. 17 (goose, dog, plane, ram), Arsen. p. 423 f. Walz (goose, dog, plane, ram), and in part by Zenob. 5. 81 (goose, dog), Hesych. s.v. 'Ραδαμάνθυος ὅρκος (goose, dog) and s.v. χῆνα ὀμνύειν (goose), Makar. 7. 49 (ram, swan, vegetables), cp. Append. prov. 2. 91 Εὐριπίδειος ὅρκος· ἴσως ὁ κατὰ κυνὸς ἢ χηνός (where E. L. von Leutsch notes: 'Euripides Socraticus hoc imitatus est') (dog, goose).

Further allusions in Loukian. vit. auct. 16 ΣΩ. καὶ μὴν ὀμνύω γέ σοι τὸν κύνα καὶ τὴν πλάτανον οὕτω ταυτ' ἔχειν. ΩΝΗΤΗΣ. Ἡράκλεις τῆς ἀτοπίας τῶν θεῶν. ΣΩ. τί σὺ λέγεις; οὐ δοκεῖ σοι ὁ κύων εἶναι θεός; οὐχ ὁρᾷς τὸν Ἄνουβιν ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ ὅσος; καὶ τὸν ἐν οὐρανῷ Σείριον καὶ τὸν παρὰ τοῖς κάτω Κέρβερον; (dog, plane), Icarom. 9 οἱ δὲ κατὰ κυνῶν καὶ χηνῶν καὶ πλατάνων ἐπώμνυντο (dog, goose, plane), Theophil. ad Autol. 3. 2 p. 152 Humphry τί ὠφέλησεν...Σωκράτην τὸ ὀμνύειν τὸν κύνα καὶ τὸν χῆνα καὶ τὴν πλάτανον καὶ τὸν κεραυνωθέντα Ἀσκληπιὸν καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια ἃ ἐπεκαλεῖτο; (dog, goose, plane), Tert. apol. 14 taceo de philosophis, Socrate contentus, qui in contumeliam deorum quercum et hircum et canem deierabat (oak, goat, dog) = ad nat. 1. 10 taceo de philosophis, quos... nonnullus etiam afflatus veritatis adversus deos erigit: denique et Socrates in contumeliam eorum quercum et canem et hircum iurat (oak, dog, goat), Athen. 370 A—C (Nik. frag. 11 a description of the κράμβη) "ἦν μάντιν λαχάνοισι παλαιόγονοι ἐνέπουσιν." μήποτε δὲ ὁ Νίκανδρος μάντιν κέκληκε τὴν κράμβην, ἱερὰν οὖσαν, ἐπεὶ καὶ παρ' Ἱππώνακτι ἐν τοῖς ἰάμβοις (frag. 37 Bergk[4], 40 Diehl) ἐστί τι λεγόμενον τοιοῦτον "ὁ δ' ἐξολισθὼν ἱκέτευε τὴν κράμβην | τὴν ἐπτάφυλλον, ἣ θύεσκε Πανδώρη | Θαργηλίοισιν (T. Bergk prints ἣν θύεσκε Πανδώρῃ from his own cj. and Ταργηλίοισιν from that of F. W. Schneidewin) ἔγχυτον πρὸ φαρμακοῦ (so Schneidewin for φαρμάκου)." καὶ Ἀνάνιος δέ φησι (frag. 4 Bergk[4], 3 Diehl) "καὶ σὲ πολλὸν ἀνθρώπων | ἐγὼ φιλέω μάλιστα, ναὶ μὰ τὴν κράμβην." καὶ Τηλεκλείδης Πρυτάνεσι (frag. 4 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 368 Meineke)) "ναὶ μὰ τὰς κράμβας" ἔφη. καὶ Ἐπίχαρμος ἐν Γᾷ καὶ Θαλάσσᾳ (frag. 25 Kaibel) "ναὶ μὰ τὰν κράμβαν." Εὔπολις Βάπταις (frag. 13 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 451 Meineke) ap. Priscian. de metr. Ter. 23 (ii. 427, 25 f. Hertz)) "ναὶ μὰ τὴν κράμβην." ἐδόκει δὲ Ἰωνικὸς εἶναι ὁ ὅρκος. καὶ οὐ παράδοξον εἰ κατὰ τῆς κράμβης τινὲς ὤμνυον, ὁπότε καὶ Ζήνων ὁ Κιτιεὺς ὁ τῆς Στοᾶς κτίστωρ (apophthegm. 48 Pearson, de vita testim. 32 a von Arnim) μιμούμενος τὸν κατὰ τῆς κυνὸς ὅρκον Σωκράτους καὶ αὐτὸς ὤμνυε τὴν κάπραν, ὡς Ἐμπεδός (so Kaibel and J. von Arnim, after C. Müller, for Ἔμποδος cod.) φησιν ἐν Ἀπομνημονεύμασιν (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 403 f. Müller) (cabbage; dog; caper), Diog. Laert. 7. 32 ὤμνυε δέ (sc. Zenon), φασί, καὶ κάπραν, καθάπερ Σωκράτης τὸν κύνα (dog; caper), Philostr. v. Apoll. 6. 19 p. 232 Kayser πρὸς ταῦτα ὁ Θεσπεσίων, "ἐγένετό τις," ἔφη, "Σωκράτης Ἀθηναῖος ἀνόητος, ὥσπερ ἡμεῖς, γέρων, ὃς τὸν κύνα καὶ τὸν χῆνα καὶ τὴν πλάτανον θεούς τε ἡγεῖτο καὶ ὤμνυ." "οὐκ ἀνόητος," εἶπεν (sc. Apollonios), "ἀλλὰ θεῖος καὶ ἀτεχνῶς σοφός, ὤμνυ γὰρ ταῦτα οὐχ ὡς θεούς, ἀλλ' ἵνα μὴ θεοὺς ὀμνύοι" (dog, goose, plane), Porph. de abst. 3. 16 Σωκράτης δὲ καὶ ὤμνυεν κατ' αὐτῶν (sc. τῶν ζῴων), καὶ ἔτι πρὸ αὐτοῦ Ῥαδάμανθυς... Κρησὶ δὲ νόμος ἦν Ῥαδαμάνθυος, ὅρκον ἐπάγεσθαι πάντα τὰ ζῷα. οὐδὲ Σωκράτης τὸν κύνα καὶ τὸν χῆνα ὀμνὺς ἔπαιζεν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὸν τοῦ Διὸς καὶ Δίκης παῖδα (sc. Rhadamanthys) ἑποιεῖτο τὸν ὅρκον, οὐδὲ παίζων ὁμοδούλους αὐτοῦ ἔλεγεν τοὺς κύκνους (dog, goose, swan?), Lact. div. inst. 3. 20 p. 247, 10 f. Brandt verum idem (sc. Socrates) per canem et anserem deierabat (dog, goose), Lact. inst. epit. 32 p. 708, 7 f. Brandt quam (sc. religionem) quidem Socrates non modo repudiavit, verum etiam derisit per anserem canemque iurando (goose, dog), Aug. de vera religione 2 (i. 1207 B ed.[2] Bened.) Socrates tamen audacior cæteris fuisse perhibetur iurando per canem quemlibet, et lapidem quemlibet, et quidquid iuraturo esset in promptu, et quasi ad manum occurrisset (dog, stone), Prokop. of Gaza epist. 63 p. 554 f. Hercher νυνὶ δὲ ὄμνυμι οὐ τὴν πλάτανον τὴν Σωκράτους ἀλλὰ τοὺς λόγους αὐτούς, μήπω γε τετυχηκέναι τοῦ κτήματος (plane), Eustath. in Od. p. 1871, 4 ff. Ῥαδάμανθυς δέ, φασιν, ὑπὲρ τοῦ μὴ θεὸν ὀνομάζειν ἐπὶ πᾶσιν ἐκέλευσέ, φασι, κατὰ χηνὸς καὶ κυνὸς καὶ κριοῦ ὀμνύναι. ὤμνυε δέ, φασι, χῆνα καὶ Σωκράτης· ἄλλος δέ τις κράμβην· ὃν ζηλώσας ὕστερον ὁ χυδαΐζων ὄχλος διόμνυται κατὰ λαχάνων (cp. the late glosses in Souid. s.v. λαχάνοις· ὅτι πολλὴν εὐορκίαν ἐπιδεικνύμενοι πρὸς λάχανα ὀμνύουσι, μὰ τὰ λάχανα καὶ μὰ τὰ καλὰ λέγοντες and s.v. μὰ τὰ λάχανα· σημεῖον τοῦτο περὶ ὅρκου· ὃ καὶ νῦν ἐπιχωριάζει. πολλοὶ γὰρ πρὸς λάχανα ὀμνύουσιν, εὐορκίαν ἐπιδεικνύμενοι. ἐπιχωριάζει δ' εἰσέτι καὶ τοῖς ἑλλογίμοις Ἀρμενιακοῖς τὸ μὰ τὰ καλά). ὅτι δὲ καὶ γυναῖκες ὤμνυον ἐπὶ οἴῳ Ξέναρχος παίζων δηλοῖ ἐν τῷ "ὅρκον δ' ἐγὼ γυναικὸς εἰς οἶνον γράψω" (leg. γράφω: Xenarch. πένταθλος frag. 3 (Frag. com. Gr. iii. 620 f. Meineke) ap. Athen. 441 E, cp. Hellad. ap. Phot. bibl. p. 530 a 15 ff. Bekker, Phrynich. praep. soph. p. 95, 16 ff. I. de Borries) (goose, dog, ram; goose; cabbage; vegetables; wine?). G. Ménage in his note on Diog. Laert. 2. 40 ends a similar string of extracts with a bon mot: 'Cum autem frequenter ei (sc. Socrati) uxor adversaretur, dissidiumque sit feles inter et canes, Italus quidam, cuius excidit mihi nomen, Xanthippen per felem iurare scripsit'!

But we have yet to determine the origin and significance of the oath by goose, dog, ram, etc. No one nowadays is likely to share the view of Tertullian and Lactantius (locc. citt.) that Sokrates was deliberately making a mock of the gods by his appeal to some trumpery substitute. Nor, on the other hand, shall we rest satisfied with the contention of L. Preller (Preller—Plew Gr. Myth. ii. 130 n. 4) that the said substitutes were originally sacred trees and animals. The Platonic Sokrates, to be sure, says μὰ τὸν κύνα τὸν Αἰγυπτίων θεόν (Plat. Gorg. 482 B). But then the Platonic Phaidros can retort ὦ Σώκρατες, ῥᾳδίως σὺ Αἰγυπτίους καὶ ὁποδαποὺς ἂν ἐθέλῃς λόγους ποιεῖς (Plat. Phaedr. 275 B). The Lucianic Sokrates, who identifies the 'dog' with Anoubis or Seirios or Kerberos (Loukian. vit. auct. 16), would presumably have interpreted the 'ram' as Ammon. A mántis like Lampon might swear by the 'goose' as a mantic bird (schol. Aristoph. av.

521 ὁ δὲ Λάμπων θύτης ἦν καὶ χρησμολόγος καὶ μάντις· ... ὤμνυε δὲ κατὰ τοῦ κηνὸς ὡς μαντικοῦ ὀρνέου). And a little mythological ingenuity could doubtless discover some spark of sanctity in the 'plane-tree,' the 'cabbage,' the 'poppy' (Souid. s.v. μὰ μήκωνος κλόην· "ναὶ ναὶ μὰ μήκωνος κλόην" and s.v. ναὶ ναὶ μὰ μήκωνος κλόην· ὅρκος ἐπὶ χλευασμῷ), and what not? All the same, there was sound sense in the dictum of Apollonios that Sokrates swore by these things οὐχ ὡς θεούς, ἀλλ' ἵνα μὴ θεοὺς ὀμνύοι (Philostr. loc. cit.). Finally, we shall not subscribe to the well-meant but unconvincing claim of St Augustine, that Sokrates' attribution of divinity to natural objects was an expedient intended to deter men from the worship of artificial objects and to direct their thoughts toward the one true God (Aug. de vera religione 2 (i. 1207 C ff. ed.[2] Bened.) credo, intelligebat qualiacumque opera naturae, quae administrante divina providentia gignerentur, multo quam hominum et quorumlibet opificum esse meliora, et ideo divinis honoribus digniora, quam ea quae in templis colebantur. non quod vere lapis et canis essent colenda sapientibus, sed ut hoc modo intelligerent qui possent, tanta superstitione demersos esse homines, ut emergentibus hic esset tam turpis demonstrandus gradus, ad quem venire si puderet, viderent quanto magis pudendum esset in turpiore consistere. simul et illos qui mundum istum visibilem, summum deum esse opinabantur, admonebat turpitudinis suae, docens esse consequens ut quilibet lapis tanquam summi dei particula iure coleretur. quod si exsecrarentur, mutarent sententiam, et unum deum quaererent, quem solum supra mentes nostras esse, et a quo omnem animam et totum istum mundum fabricatum esse constaret. etc.).

What then, after all, is the explanation of these strange oaths? J. Vendryes Language trans. P. Radin London 1925 p. 221 observes: 'In many languages oaths undergo a conventional alteration which allows them to be introduced into the best society; thus, for example, bigre, or fichtre. The French say: palsambleu, parbleu, pargnieu, pardienne instead of par le sang de Dieu or par Dieu, just as the English turned "By Mary" into "Marry," "By God's Little Body" into "Odds Boddikins".' Similarly E. Weekley The Romance of Words London 1912 p. 60: 'In drat, formerly 'od rot, zounds, for God's wounds, 'sdeath, odsbodikins, etc., there is probably a deliberate avoidance of profanity. The same tendency is seen in Gogs (Shrew, iii. 2), Fr. parbleu, and Ger. Pots in Potztausend, etc.' Accordingly W. A. Becker long since conjectured that χῆνα in this connexion was a distorted form of Ζῆνα (W. A. Becker Charikles[2] Leipzig 1854 i. 154 'Es kann fast scheinen, als ob man ausweichend τὸν χῆνα statt τὸν Ζῆνα gesagt habe, wie auch bei uns dergleichen Verdrehungen nicht ungewöhnlich sind'). The same view was advocated by K. Lehrs Platos Phädrus und Gastmahl Leipzig 1870 p. 142. R. Hirzel Der Eid Leipzig 1902 p. 96 n. 2 objects that nobody said νὴ τὸν Ζῆνα (despite Il. 23. 43 and Od. 20. 339 οὐ μὰ Ζῆν', Soph. Trach. 1188 ὄμνυμ' ἔγωγε, Ζῆν' ἔχων ἐπώμοτον, Phil. 1324 Ζῆνα δ' ὅρκιον καλῶ, Eur. Hipp. 1025 f. νῦν δ' ὅρκιόν σοι Ζῆνα καὶ πέδον χθονὸς | ὀμνυμι κ.τ.λ.) and consequently nobody would have altered it into νὴ τὸν χῆνα. But this objection ignores the fact that in Crete—the very home of Rhadamanthys—oaths were regularly taken at Dreros by τὸν Δῆνα (Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 463 (ib.[3] no. 527), 14 ff. cited supra i. 729 n. 2), at Priansos, Gortyna and Hierapytna by Τῆνα (F. Blass in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 301 ff. no. 5024, 59 ff. cited supra ii. 723 n. 0), at Hierapytna and one of its colonies by Τῆνα (F. Blass ib. iii. 2. 311 f. no. 5039, 11 f. cited supra ii. 723 n. 0), at Lyttos by Τῆνα (F. Blass ib. iii. 2. 380 f. no. 5147 b, 5 cited supra ii. 934 n. 0) and hy Ζῆνα (Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 29, 13 f. cited supra ii. 723 n. 0).

I conclude, therefore, that in Crete, where men swore officially by τὸν Δῆνα or Τῆνα or Τῆνα or Ζῆνα—so many ways of representing the initial Δ- in the name of Zeus (É. Boisacq Les dialectes doriens Paris 1891 p. 153, G. Meyer Griechische Grammatik[3] Leipzig 1896 p. 338, C. D. Buck Introduction to the Study of the Greek Dialects Boston 1910 pp. 31, 67, 86)—a popular distortion νὴ τὸν χῆνα arose and was in due course fathered upon Rhadamanthys. R. Hirzel loc. cit. aptly observes that in Crete people still say μὰ τὸ θεριό, 'by the beast, dragon, giant,' or μὰ τὸ χυλό, 'by the sap,' for μὰ τὸ θεό, 'by God' (A. Jeannaraki [= A. N. Jannaris] ΑΙΣΜΑΤΑ ΚΡΗΤΙΚΑ Leipzig 1876 p. 327 'μὰ τὸ θεριό, statt μὰ τὸ θεό, bei Gott, ἀνάλεμα statt ἀνάθεμα, verflucht etc.,' ib. p. 379 'Da sich das Wort χυλός mit dem Worte θεός reimt, so sagt man sehr oft μὰ τὸ χυλό statt μὰ τὸ θεό um die Gotteslästerung zu vermeiden. Gleichfalls sagt man μὰ τὸ θεριό, μὰ τὸ νιό, auch διάβοντρος statt διάβολος (vgl. hole mich der Kukuk)'). Perhaps κύνα in turn was a substitute for χῆνα, if not κριόν for Κρόνον (supra ii. 548 ff.). But successive links soon become impossible to trace.

The Birds, flattered and fluttered by this speech, are willing to accept the plan of Pisthetairos, to build a great wall[1] round the air,

[1] The notion of a cosmic wall is found in the teaching of Parmenides (Aët. 2. 7. 1 (H. Diels Doxographi Graeci Berolini 1879 p. 335 a 11 ff., b 8 ff.) ap. Plout. de plac. phil. 2. 7 καὶ τὸ περιέχον δὲ πάσας (sc. τὰς στεφάνας) τείχους δίκην στερεὸν ὑπάρχειν and ap. Stob. ecl. 1. 22. 1[a] p. 195, 7 f. Wachsmuth = H. Diels Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker[3] Berlin 1912 i. 144, 16 f. καὶ τὸ περιέχον δὲ πάσας τείχους δίκην στερεὸν ὑπάρχειν, ὑφ' ᾧ πυρώδης στεφάνη). It reappears in the Epicureanism of Lucretius (Lucr. 1. 73 flammantia moenia mundi, cp. 1. 1102, 2. 1045, 1148, 3. 16, 5. 119, 454, 1213, 6. 123), and as a Lucretian touch in the poems of Ovid (Ov. met. 2. 401 f. at pater omnipotens ingentia moenia caeli | circuit) and Manilius (Manil. 1. 150 f. summaque complexus stellantis culmina caeli | flammarum vallo naturae moenia fecit, 486 f. qui primus moenia mundi | seminibus struxit minimis inque illa resolvit). Hence the imitations of later poets, e.g. Milton Paradise Lost 3. 721 'The rest in circuit walls this universe,' R. Browning Easter-Day 15 fin. 'Leaving exposed the utmost walls | Of time, about to tumble in | And end the world,' Epilogue to Dramatis Personæ 3. 11 'Why, where's the need of Temple, when the walls | O' the world are that?'

Analogous conceptions are found here and there in the religious imaginings of the ancient world. R. Eisler Weltenmantel und Himmelszelt München 1910 ii. 627 notes that the cosmic wall figures in a cuneiform text (an astronomical document of 138 B.C. published hy J. Epping and J. N. Strassmaier in the Zeitschrift für Assyriologie und verwandte Gebiete 1891 vi. 243 Sp. i. 131, 30). The Manichaeans recognised a whole series of such walls (Epiphan. adv. haer. 2. 66. 31 (iii. 52 f. Dindorf) αἱ δὲ προβολαὶ πᾶσαι, ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὁ ἐν τῷ μικρῷ πλοίῳ, καὶ ἡ μήτηρ τῆς ζωῆς, καὶ οἱ δώδεκα κυβερνῆται, καὶ ἡ παρθένος τοῦ φωτός, καὶ ὁ πρεσβύτης ὁ τρίτος ὁ ἐν τῷ μεγάλῳ πλοίῳ, καὶ τὸ ζῶν πνεῦμα, καὶ τὸ τεῖχος τοῦ μεγάλου πυρός, καὶ τὸ τεῖχος τοῦ ἀνέμου καὶ τοῦ ἀέρος καὶ τοῦ ὕδατος καὶ τοῦ ἔσωθεν πυρὸς τοῦ ζῶντος πρὸς τὸν μικρὸν φωστῆρα οἰκοῦσιν, ἄχρις ἂν τὸ πῦρ καταναλώσῃ τὸν κόσμον ὅλον ἐν ποσοῖς ποτε ἔτεσιν, ὧν οὐκ ἔμαθον τὴν ποσότητα = Hegemonios acta Archelai 13. 2 (p. 21 f. Beeson) prolationes autem omnes Iesus est in modica navi, et mater vitae et duodecim gubernatores et virgo lucis et senior tertius. unde et maiori in navi vivens spiritus adhibetur, et murus ignis illius magni, et murus venti et aëris et aquae et interioris ignis vivi, quae omnia in luna habitabunt, usquequo totum mundum ignis absumat; in quot autem annis numerum non didici. On this Latin version C. H. Beeson ad loc. remarks 'eine ziemlich ungenaue Paraphrase' and F. Legge Forerunners and Rivals of Christianity Cambridge 1915 ii. 326 n. 1 'which appears to be nonsense')—five in number, according to the fragments in Estrangelo script from Turfan, which mention one of aithér, one of wind, one of light, one of water, and one of fire, together with twelve or fourteen heavenly gates (F. W. K. Müller in the Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1904 Phil.-hist. Classe p. 38 f. frag. M. 98, 7 ff. 'Sie ferner auf zur Grenze und | dem Obersten des Lichtes führte er hinauf und | aus Wind und Licht, Wasser und Feuer, | welches aus der Mischung geläutert war, hat er Licht- | Fabrzeuge? zwei jenes der Sonne aus | Feuer und Licht mit fünf Mauern, | einer ätherischen, windigen, leuchtenden, wässerigen | und einer feurigen und zwölf Toren und | Häusern fünf und Thronen drei und | seelensammelnden Engeln fünf sc. in | der feurigen Mauer, und jenes [Fahrzeug] | des Mond-Gottes aus Wind und Wasser | mit fünf Mauern, einer ätherischen, windigen | leuchtenden, feurigen und wässerigen und | vierzehn Toren und Häusern fünf und | Thronen drei und seelensammelnden Engeln | fünf, sc. in der wässerigen Mauer, | hat er gemacht und angeordnet'). Somewhat similar is the vision of 'the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God' (Rev. 21. 2, cp. 21. 10), 'having a wall great and high; having twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels' etc. (Rev. 21. 12).

Later the church fell to a lower level and was content with would-be scientific speculation. So Kaisarios, brother to Gregorios of Nazianzos, in his πεύσεις καὶ ἀποκρίσεις (on which see W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1924 ii. 2. 1415 n. 6) dialogus 1 interrogatio 99 (xxxviii. 964 Migne) πῶς οὖν δύνει ὁ ἥλιος, εἰ μὴ ὑπὸ γῆν φέρεται; καὶ τίς τόπος ὁ τὰς ἀκτῖνας αὐτοῦ σκιάζων; responsio ὠκυποδήσας τὸς οὐράνια τέρματα, καὶ ὑπό τινα τοῖχον, τὸ βόρειον γενόμενον κλῖμα, ὑπερανεστῶτος τοῦ Καππαδοκῶν ἐδάφους, ἀποσκιάζεται μὲν τὴν ἀστραπὴν τῶν ἀκτίνων ταῖς λόχμαις καὶ τοῖς ὕδασι, τῷ ὑπερτεροῦντι πιεσμῷ τοῦ στερεώματος, διακλωμένων τῶν μαρμαρυγῶν ἐπὶ τὰ πλάγια, καὶ τῇ ὑπεροχῇ τῆς χέρσου τὴν φαῦσιν εἰργόμενος, κατὰ τὴν προεκδοθεῖσαν εἰκόνα τῆς παρ' ἡμῖν λαμπάδος and Severianus of Gabala (on whom see Lietzmann in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii A. 1930 ff., W. Christ op. cit.[6] ii. 2. 1467 ff.) de mundi creatione 3. 5 (lvi. 452 f. Migne) ἥλιος ἀνατέλλων καὶ μέλλων δύνειν οὐχ ὑπὸ γῆν δύνει ἀλλ' ἐξελθὼν τὰ πέρατα τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τρέχει εἰς τὰ βορρινὰ (βορρινὰ cod. Vat. Sir H. Savile cj. βόρεια) μέρη, ὥσπερ ὑπό τινα τοῖχον κρυπτόμενος, μὴ συγχωρούντων τῶν ὑδάτων φανῆναι αὐτοῦ τὸν δρόμον, καὶ τρέχει κατὰ βορρινὰ (βορρινὰ cod. Vat. Sir H. Savile cj. βόρεια) μέρη καὶ καταλαμβάνει τὴν ἀνατολήν. Cp. Kosmas Indikopleustes top. Christ. 4. 189 (lxxxviii. 188 D Migne) τοῦτο πάλιν τὸ μέρος τῆς γῆς, τὸ ἐπέκεινα τοῦ βορρᾶ, ἐστὶ τὸ ἀοίκητον, ἐνθα διατρέχουσιν ἀπὸ δύσεως διὰ τοῦ βορρᾶ ἐπὶ ἀνατολάς, ὀρθὸν ὡς ἐπὶ τοίχου ὑπάρχον· ἐν ᾧ γινόμενος ὁ ἥλιος εἰς τὸ ἄλλο μέρος αὐτῆς τὸ οἰκούμενον νύκτα ἀπεργάζεται and the whole structure of the world as indicated ib. 4. 187 f. (lxxxviii. 185 A—C Migne) εἰς ταύτην τὴν γῆν τὴν πέραν τοῦ 'Ωκεανοῦ πανταχόθεν ἄκρα τοῖς ἄκροις ὁ οὐρανὸς ὁ πρῶτος ὁ καμαροειδὴς συνδέδεται, κατὰ μὲν τὸ δυτικὸν μέρος καὶ ἀνατολικὸν τοῖχος ὄρθ[ι]ος ὡς ἄνω ἐμβαίνων εὑρίσκεται, κατὰ δὲ τὸ νότιον καὶ βόρειον τοῖχος μὲν ἴσος τὸ κάτωθεν, ἕως φανεροῦ κατὰ τὸν τύπον ὄντος καμάρας· ἄνωθεν δὲ ὑψηλότατος ἑλισσόμενος, ὡς θόλος λουτροῦ μεγάλη, κάτωθεν πέλμα ἔχουσα, αὐτός τε τοῖχος καὶ καμάρα ὑπάρχων. εἶτα καὶ πρώην ἔφημεν πολλάκις, τὸ στερέωμα μέσα μέσοις ἐξηπλωμένον κατὰ τὸ ὕψος, συνδέδεται αὐτῷ τῷ οὐρανῷ, ἵνα γένωνται δύο χῶροι ἀνάγαιον (sic) καὶ κατάγαιον. ἔστι δὲ ὁ χῶρος ὁ εἷς τουτέστι τὸ κατάγαιον, ἔνθα εἰσὶν ἡ γῆ καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ στοιχεῖα καὶ ἄστρα, ὁ κόσμος οὗτος ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ἕως τοῦ στερεώματος· γῆν μὲν ἔχων ἔδαφος, τοίχους δὲ ἐκ τοῦ πρώτου οὐρανοῦ, στέγην δὲ τὸ στερέωμα· καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ στερεώματος ἕως τῆς καμάρας τοῦ πρώτου οὐρανοῦ, χῶρος δεύτερος, τουτέστιν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν· ἔνθα καὶ ὁ Δεσπότης Χριστὸς ἀναστὰς ἀπὸ τῶν νεκρῶν ἀνελήλυθε, καὶ οἱ δίκαιοι μετὰ ταῦτα μέλλουσιν ἀνιέναι· οὐρανὸν μὲν ἤτοι τὸ στερέωμα ἔχων ἔδαφος, καὶ οὐρανὸν τὸν πρῶτον τοίχους καὶ στέγην καμαροειδῆ. See further a valuable section in R. Eisler op. cit. ii. 619 ff. ('Die Himmelsmauer,' 'Das Welthaus in der syrischen Kosmographie,' etc.).

The cosmic walls of philosophy, religion, and so-called science presuppose mythopoeic attempts to explain the construction of the visible world. More frankly mythological is Pindar's 'road of Zeus' leading up 'to Kronos' tower' (supra ii. 36, 52), which—like its Celtic counterpart the 'castle of Gwydion' (supra ii. 52)—appears to be the poetic survival of some otherwise forgotten myth.

It seems possible that in the west, if not also in the east, the belief in a celestial city was partly based upon popular interpretations of cloudland. E. H. Meyer Germanische Mythologie Berlin 1891 p. 88 f. collects a whole series of relevant folk-names from the Germanic area. Thus at Glandorf near Iburg in Prussia a black storm-cloud that rears itself above the horizon is called a grommeltorn or 'rumbling tower' (A. Kuhn Sagen, Gebräuche und Märchen aus Westfalen Leipzig 1859 ii. 89 no. 277 a, cp. eund. in the Zeitschrift für deutsche Mythologie und Sittenkunde 1855 iii. 378 'noch heut begegnet man nicht selten der bezeichnung grummel- oder grommelthurm für gewitter'), while on the Moorhausmoor in Thüringen the witte tôrn or 'white tower' seen in the sky is a sign of bad weather (A. Kuhn—W. Schwartz Norddeutsche Sagen, Märchen und Gebräuche Leipzig 1848 p. 458 no. 428, W. Mannhardt Germanische Mythen Berlin 1858 p. 186). In Oldenburg the northern lights are also known as Turm, the 'tower,' and taken to be a vivid red cloud (L. Strackerjan Aberglaube und Sagen aus dem Herzogthum Oldenburg Oldenburg 1867 ii. 63 f.); in the same locality heavy, white clouds are called Mauern, and to demand the submission of Zeus. If he refuses, they will proclaim a holy war against him and forbid the gods to traverse their realm in search of fresh amours. A herald will be sent to inform men that in future all must worship birds before gods—the coot[1] before Aphrodite, the duck[2] before Poseidon, the sea-gull[3] before Herakles, the wren[4] before Zeus. Birds have wings, good evidence

'walls' (id. ib. ii. 64). P. Sébillot Le Folk-lore de France Paris 1904 i. 128 f. adduces French examples. Sailors in the Channel regard certain big black clouds as dangerous and speak of them as les Châteaux (id. in the Archivio per lo studio delle tradizioni popolari v. 521). In Provence black clouds brushing past the horizon are called an emparo or 'wall.' A long stretch of emparo is termed bèrri, 'ramparts.' A small coloured cloud rising above these 'ramparts' is dubbed tourello, a 'turret.' A big cloud may tower up charged with thunder and hail; it is then called tourrougat a 'keep.' Finally, when black threatening clouds begin to break up, with their towers and ramparts, they are known as castèu, 'castles' (G. de Montpavon 'Mistral' in Armana Prouvençau 1877 p. 45).

This was at least one reason for the first element in Aristophanes' Nephelo-kokkygia—a typical 'castle-in-the-air.'

[1] φαληρίς, though a derivative of φαλός, 'white' (Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 481, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 1013 f.), hints at φαλλός (Athen. 325 B καὶ Ἀφροδίτῃ φαλαρίδα, ὡς Ἀριστοφάνης ἐν Ὄρνισι (av. 565), κατὰ συνέμφασιν τοῦ φαλλοῦ, schol. Aristoph. av. 565 ἐσχημάτισε δὲ παρὰ τὸν φαλλόν) or Φαλῆς (J. van Leeuwen ad loc. cp. Aristoph. Ach. 263): D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 176 is unusually obtuse.

[2] This is not religion, but common sense. Athen. 325 B καὶ τὴν νῆτταν δὲ καλουμένην Ποσειδῶνί τινες οἰκειοῦσι, as is clear from the previous clause (cited supra n. 1), depends on Aristoph. av. 566.

[3] The λάρος is assigned to Herakles merely because of its notorious greed (schol. Aristoph. av. 557 τὸν λάρον διὰ τὴν ἀδηφαγίαν Ἡρακλεῖ προσανάπτει, cp. Aristoph. eq. 956, nub. 591).

[4] Aristoph. av. 567 ff. κἂν Διὶ θύῃ Βασιλεῖ κριόν, βασιλεὺς ἐστ' ὀρχίλος ὄρνις, | ᾧ προτέρῳ δεῖ τοῦ Διὸς αὐτοῦ σέρφον ἐνόρχην σφαγιάζειν. | ΕΤΕΑΠ. ἤσθην σέρφῳ σφαγιαζομένῳ· "βροντάτω νῦν ὁ μέγας Ζάν" with schol. ad loc. ὀρχίλος ὄρνις· διὰ τὰς μοιχείας τοῦ Διὸς τὸν ὄρνιν παρέλαβεν (the clause διὰ—παρέλαβεν is absent from codd. R.V.). ἐπλάσατο τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ ὄρνιθος. ἐπεὶ κατωφερὴς ὁ Ζεὺς καὶ μοιχός, διὰ τοῦτο ὀρχίλον παρείληχεν διὰ τοὺς ὄρχεις. τὸ δὲ σέρφον ἔνορχιν, ὡς κριὸν ἔνορχιν. This again is not a case of ritual usage, but of comic invention. There is no special link between Zeus and the wren beyond the fact that, as Zeus was Βασιλεύς, so the wren was βασιλεύς or βασιλίσκος (supra p. 45 n. 1). On the wren as king of birds see further C. Swainson The Folk Lore and Provincial Names of British Birds London 1886 p. 36: 'The tradition of the sovereignty of the wren over the feathered race is widely spread. Hence we find the Latin name for the bird to be Regulus, the Greek βασιλίσκος, the French Roitelet, Roi des oiseaux, Roi de froidure, Roi de guille, Roi Bertaud, the Spanish Reyezuelo, the Italian Reatino or Re di siepe (king of the hedge), the Swedish Kungs fogel, the Danish Fugle Konge or Elle Konge (alder king), the German Zaunkönig (hedge king), Schneekönig (snow king).' E. Rolland Faune populaire de la France Paris 1879 ii. (Les oiseaux sauvages) 288 ff., 301 f. collects a vast number of such names applied to the wren (both the Troglodytes Europaeus and the Regulus cristatus) in the various districts of France. It would seem reasonable to suppose that the kingship in question properly belonged to the fire-crest (Regulus ignicapillus) or gold-crest (Regulus cristatus). Both species occur in Greece (D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 174) and both on the crown of the head have a conspicuous streak of reddish orange bordered by bright lemon yellow (good illustrations in J. L. Bonhote Birds of Britain London 1907 p. 50 f. col. pl. 15). The flame-coloured of their divinity, and are obviously competent to harm or help mankind.

Tereus next invites the two friends into his nest, promising to find them a magic root[1] which will enable them too to grow wings. Meantime his wife Prokne comes out and together with the Choros chants the parábasis, a brilliant vindication of the claims put forward by the Birds. It tells the old Orphic tale[2], how Eros sprang from the wind-egg laid by black-winged Night, the egg which split into Ouranos and Ge, primaeval parents of all the gods. Birds declare the seasons, birds utter oracles, birds give omens; birds in short are manifestly divine and must be worshipped as such without more ado.

That conclusion reached, out come Pisthetairos and Euelpides in their fine feathers and at once set about naming the new town—no Sparta this, but something splendid and sonorous, say Nephelokokkygia[3]. Heralds are despatched to gods and men. Euelpides must lend a hand in the actual building. Pisthetairos will fetch a priest to sacrifice to the newfangled gods.

The novel foundation of course attracts the usual influx of busybodies—a needy lyrical poet, an itinerant soothsayer, the astronomer Meton, a pompous commissioner, a statute-seller. At last they are all got rid of and Pisthetairos quits the stage to sacrifice the goat within.

Then follows a second parábasis, in which the Birds appropriate epithets formerly belonging to Zeus[4] and justifiably put a price on the head of the bird-catcher Philokrates.

crest at any rate accounts for the belief in the wren as a fire-bearer (E. Rolland op. cit. ii. 293 f., C. Swainson op. cit. p. 42).

[1] Aristoph. av. 654 ἔστι γάρ τι ῥίζιον κ.τ.λ. Cp. Ail. de nat. an. i. 35 (many birds use magic herbs as prophylactics) οἱ δὲ ἔποπες τὸ ἀδίαντον, ὅπερ οὖν καὶ καλλίτριχον καλοῦσί τινες, Horapoll. hierogl. 2. 93 ἄνθρωπον ὑπὸ σταφυλῆς βλαβέντα καὶ ἑαυτὸν θεραπεύοντα βουλόμενοι σημῆναι ἔποπα ζωγραφοῦσι καὶ ἀδίαντον τὴν βοτάνην· οὗτος γὰρ βλαβεὶς ὑπὸ σταφυλῆς ἀδίαντον ἀποτιθέμενος εἰς τὸ ἑαυτοῦ στόμα περιοδεύεται, Geopon. 15. 1. 19 (birds place curative herbs in their nests) ἔποπες ἀδίαντον (so H. Beckh, after Gronovius, for ἀμίαντον codd.), Philes de an. propr. 724 ἄγρωστιν ἔποψ (apparently a blundering transcript of Ail. de nat. an. 1. 35 or Geopon. 15. 1. 19). On the hoopoe liberating its imprisoned young by means of a certain herb (Ail. de nat. an. 3. 26 πόαν ἐκόμισε κ.τ.λ.), sc. the springwort, see S. Bochart Hierozoicon rec. E. F. C. Rosenmüller Lipsiae 1796 iii. 112 f., D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 56, Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Balder the Beautiful ii. 70 n. 2.

[2] Supra ii. 1020, 1034, 1050 f.

[3] Aristoph. av. 818 ff.

[4] Ib. 1058 ff. ἤδη 'μοὶ τῷ παντόπτᾳ (cp. supra i. 459, 461 f., ii. 1130) | καὶ παντάρχᾳ (Aristophanes has in mind Soph. O.C. 1085 f. ἰὼ πάνταρχε θεῶν παντ|όπτα Ζεῦ) θνητοὶ πάντες|θύσουσ' εὐκταίαις εὐχαῖς. | πᾶσαν μὲν γὰρ γᾶν ὀπτεύω, | σώζω δ' εὐθαλεῖς καρποὺς | κ.τ.λ.

Pisthetairos announces that the sacrifice has proved to be most auspicious, and a Messenger brings word that the great wall is now completely built—six hundred feet high and broad enough for two chariots to pass.

After this, enter Iris. She has been sent by Zeus to bid men sacrifice to the gods[1]. But Pisthetairos scares her off with threats reminiscent of Zeus himself[2]:

> Knowest thou this? If Zeus keeps bothering me,
> His halls palatial, yea Amphion's house,
> Will I burn down with eagles bearing fire[3],
> And up against him to the sky I'll send > Six hundred stout Porphyrion-gallinules[4],
> All clad in leopard-skins. Yet I remember
> When one Porphyrion gave him toil enough[5].

[1] Aristoph. av. 1230 ff. Earlier and cruder is the conception of 'the Brygos painter,' who on a kýlix in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 87 ff. no. E 65 Mon. d. Inst. ix pl. 46, 1 (coloured and gilded), Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei i. 238 ff. pl. 47, 2, Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art x. 560 ff. fig. 323, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 110 f. no. 4 fig., P. Ducati Storia della ceramica greca Firenze s.a. ii. 318 ff. fig. 242, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 176 no. 5) represents Iris ambushed by the Silenoi Echon, Lepsis (Nepsis?), and Dromis (on these names see Charlotte Fränkel Satyr- und Bakchennamen auf Vasenbildern Halle a. S. 1912 pp. 23, 25 ff.) just as she has collected an oxtail from the altar of Dionysos. The scene, which recurs in abbreviated form on a red-figured skýphos from Nola, now at Berlin (Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin ii. 732 no. 2591, Gerhard Ant. Bildw. p. 294 ('Irene'!) pl. 48, Welcker Alt. Denkm. iii. 243 ff. ('Eirene'!) pl. 16, 2, J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 131 (attributed to 'the Penthesilea painter'), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 337 f. no. 4, G. von Lücken Greek Vase-Paintings The Hague 1921 pl. 10, 1 (cyclographic), J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 276 no. 58), was presumably taken from some Satyric drama, though hardly from the Iris of Achaios (W. Helbig in the Bull. d. Inst. 1872 p. 41, F. Matz in the Ann. d. Inst. 1872 xliv. 299 f., C. Robert Bild und Lied Berlin 1881 p. 28 n. 29) or the Inachos of Sophokles (K. L. von Urlichs Der Vasenmaler Brygos Wuerzburg 1875 p. 5 on the strength of Soph. Inachos frag. 250 Nauck[2], 272 Pearson ap. schol. Aristoph. av. 1203), these plays being of later date (Furtwängler—Reichhold op. cit. i. 241, L. Séchan Études sur la tragédie grecque dans ses rapports avec la céramique Paris 1926 p. 41).

[2] Aristoph. av. 1246 ff. ἆρ' οἶσθ' ὅτι Ζεὺς εἴ με λυπήσει πέρα, | μέλαθρα μὲν αὐτοῦ καὶ (F. Wieseler cj. κατὰ) δόμους 'Αμφίονος | καταιθαλώσω πυρφόροισιν αἰετοῖς; J. van Leeuwen, observing 'alienum hinc est nomen Amphionis, quod ante me sensit qui δόμους 'Ολυμπίους proposuit,' rewrites καὶ ἀμφικίονας δόμους, cp. Soph. Ant. 285 f. But G. Setti in the Rivista di filologia 1903 xxxi. 112 f. justly defends the text in view of Soph. Ant. 1155 Κάδμου πάροικοι καὶ δόμων 'Αμφίονος = dwellers in Thebes. Aristophanes, according to his scholiast, is quoting Aisch. Niobe frag. 160 Nauck[2]. Apparently in that play Zeus threatened to burn the palace and walls of Amphion, husband of Niobe (H. W. Stoll in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 314, K. Wernicke in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1946, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 509, 1251 n. 0), whose house had notoriously come to a bad end (Paus. 2. 21. 10 οὗτος μὲν δὴ (sc. Homer) τὸν οἶκον τὸν 'Αμφίονος ἐκ βάθρων ἀνατραπέντα οἶδε). Here Pisthetairos threatens to turn the tables on Zeus by burning his 'palace and Amphionian walls.' The whole phrase μέλαθρα...καὶ δόμους 'Αμφίονος must be taken with the possessive αὐτοῦ, sc. Διός.

[3] Supra ii. 777.

[4] On the πορφυρίων or 'purple gallinule' (Porphyrio hyacinthinus or veterum) see D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 150, A. Newton A Dictionary of Birds London 1896 p. 591, and the enthusiastic description in O. Keller Die antike Tierwelt Leipzig 1913 ii. 209: 'Wenn die wundervoll metallglänzenden blauen Hühner truppweise durch die reifen goldigblonden Ährenfelder streifen, entsteht eine ganz einzige Farbenwirkung.' Dionys. de avib. i. 25 (prose paraphrase in Didot's Poetæ Bucolici et Didactici p. 111) ἔστι δὲ καὶ πορφυρίων ἀπὸ τῆς χροιᾶς καλούμενον ὄρνεον· ἐρυθρὸν αὐτῷ τὸ ῥάμφος ἐστί, καὶ κατὰ κεφαλῆς ἔχει ὥσπερ τινὰ πῖλον, ὁποίους οἱ τοξόται Περσικοὶ φοροῦσι· κ.τ.λ. Despite this warlike appearance, the bird is easily captured (id. ib. 3. 21 (p. 124 Didot))—a piquant contrast to the Πορφυρίων of verse 1252, cp. Mart. ep. 13. 78. 1 nomen habet magni volucris tam parva gigantis?

[5] The villagers of Athmonon (Steph. Byz. s.v. "Αθμονον) or Athmonia (Harpokr. s.v. Ἀθμονεύς, Bekker anecd. i. 349, 30 s.v. Ἀθμονεύς, Souid. s.v. Ἀθμωνία (sic)), an Attic deme, identified with the modern Marousi (from Artemis Ἀμαρυσία: see O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1743, K. Wernicke ib. ii. 1380, 1402 with W. Judeich's map ib. ii. 2204) on the way from Athens to Marathon, declared that Porphyrion, who was king in the days before Aktaios, had founded a sanctuary of (Aphrodite) Οὐρανία in their midst (Paus. 1. 14. 7). From this local legend C. Wachsmuth Die Stadt Athen im Alterthum Leipzig 1874 i. 413 f. inferred that Porphyrion, the prehistoric introducer of an oriental cult, was 'identisch mit Phoinix, und gleich diesem Repräsentant der Phönikier.' This inference, even if supported by the plea that Πορφυρίων means the 'Purpurmann' (E. Curtius Peloponnesos Gotha 1852 ii. 517), is very precarious and has been definitely rejected by U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff Aus Kydathen Berlin 1880 p. 134 n. 57. There is more to be said for the view (J. Ilberg in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2779) that Porphyrion's connexion with Athmonon points to his pedigree as the son (Nonn. Dion. 9. 317) or brother (schol. B.L. Il. 2. 511, cp. schol. D. Il. 2. 499, schol. Ap. Rhod. 3. 1094) of Athamas. It is possible too that Porphyrion's relation to Aphrodite hangs together with the belief that she was his opponent in the Gigantomachy (schol. Aristoph. av. 553, 1252).

But the outstanding fact is that Porphyrion, like Periphas (supra ii. 1121 ff.), was a very ancient Attic king. If he was son or brother of Athamas, he too was one of those kings descended from Aiolos who played the rôle of Zeus (supra ii. 1088, 1122). And his name, 'the Purple-clad,' may well have been an epithet of Zeus himself (supra i. 56 ff.). Naevius frag. 20 Baehrens, 10 Vahlen ap. Priscian. 6. 6 (i. 199, 1 Hertz) calls him Purpureus (so the second hand in cod. B. pur cod. R. with pureus added in margin by second hand. purporeus codd. B.H. porpureus codd. G.L.K.), and we have already met with a Iupiter Purpurio (supra i. 58, 782). On this showing, Zeus Πορφυρίων gave rise to Zeus versus Porphyrion just as Athena Ἐγκέλαδος (Hesych. s.v. Ἐγκέλαδος· ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ) gave rise to Athena versus Enkelados (Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 69 n. 5 'Nach dem Giganten ist angeblich Athena ἐγκέλαδος genannt' inverts cause and effect).

If Porphyrion was thus ab origine a prehistoric king who claimed to be Zeus incarnate, we can understand better the curious tradition that in the Gigantomachy Zeus inspired Porphyrion with love for Hera and slew him with a thunderbolt when he made an amorous attempt upon her (Apollod. 1. 6. 2 Πορφυρίων δὲ Ἡρακλεῖ κατὰ μάχην ἐφώρμησε καὶ "Ηρᾳ. Ζεὺς δὲ αὐτῷ πόθον "Ηρας ἐνέβαλεν, ἥτις καὶ καταρρηγνύντος αὐτοῦ τοὺς πέπλους καὶ βιάζεσθαι θέλοντος βοηθοὺς ἐπεκαλεῖτο· καὶ Διὸς κεραυνώσαντος αὐτὸν Ἡρακλῆς τοξεύσας ἀπέκτεινε, Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 63 Πορφυρίωνι δὲ Ζεὺς "Ηρας ἐπιθυμίαν ἐμβάλλει καὶ τοῦτον Ἡρακλῆς ἐν τῷ καταρρηγνύειν "Ηρας τὰ πέπλα (τοὺς πέπλους codd. sec. class., sc. Johannis Tzetz.) τοξεύσας καὶ τοῦ Διὸς κεραυνῷ πλήξαντος ἀναιρεῖ). We can understand also Pindar's description of Porphyrion as king of the Giants (Pind. Pyth. 8. 12 Πορφυρίων, 17 βασιλεὺς Γιγάντων. But see Welcker Gr. Götterl. i. 793 n. 18): Typhos and he 'were laid low by the thunderbolt and by the bow of Apollon' (id. ib. 16 ff. Cp. Claud. carm. min. 52 (37) Gigantomachia 34 f., 114 ff.).

Representations of the Gigantomachy from the close of the fifth century onwards make Porphyrion the main antagonist of Zeus: (1) a kýlix by the potter Erginos and the painter Aristophanes, found at Vulci and now at Berlin (Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin ii. 709 ff. no. 2531, E. Gerhard Trinkschalen und Gefässe des Königlichen Museums zu Berlin und anderer Sammlungen Berlin 1848 i. 3 ff. pl. 2—3 (coloured), Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 363 f. no. 16 Atlas pl. 5, 3 a, 3 b, 3 c, F. Hauser in Furtwängler—Reichhold—Hauser Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 38—41 pl. 127 (=my pl. vi), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 50 f. no. 1 fig., P. Ducati Storia della ceramica greca Firenze s.a. ii. 394 ff. fig. 287, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 589, 600, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 465 no. 1), on which the combatants are grouped in symmetric pairs as on the paryphé of Athena's péplos (F. G. Welcker in K. O. Müller Handbuch der Archäologie der Kunst[3] Breslau 1848 p. 639 § 396, F. Hauser op. cit. iii. 40). (2) An amphora with twisted handles, found in Melos and now in the Louvre (no. S 1677, F. F. Ravaisson in the Monuments grecs publiés par l'Association pour l'encouragement des Études grecques en France No. 4 1875 p. 1 ff. fig. 1 and pls 1, 2 =A. Conze Wien. Vorlegebl. viii pl. 7, Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei ii. 193—200 pls 96 (=my pl. vii), 97 (attributed to the painter of the Talos-vase (supra i. 721 pl. xli)), P. Ducati in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1907 x. 256, ib. 1908 xi. 135—141 figs. 35 a, 35 b, H. Bulle Der schoene Mensch im Altertum[2] Muenchen—Leipzig 1912 p. 640 f. figs. 198, 199, P. Ducati Storia della ceramica greca Firenze s.a. ii. 420—423 figs. 301, 302 (first quarter of s. iv B.C.), J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 184 (later than 'the Meidias painter'), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 450 no. 3, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 588 f., iii. 234 fig. 584). (3) Fragments of a kratér or amphora from Ruvo, now at Naples (Heydemann Vasensaml. Neapel p. 425 ff. no. 2883 (Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 371 denies that Heydemann op. cit. p. 365 no. 2664 belonged to the same vase), O. Jahn in the Ann. d. Inst. 1869 xli. 184 ff., Mon. d. Inst. ix pl. 6, Overbeck op. cit. p. 369 ff. no. 25 Atlas pl. 5, 8 and 8 a, P. Ducati in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1907 x. 255 figs. 83—85 (photographs), Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei ii. 195 ff. fig. 72 and figs. 73—75 (photographic), E. Buschor Greek Vase-painting trans. G. C. Richards London 1921 p. 150 pl. 90 figs. 149—151, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 449 f. no. 2, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 588, 600, iii. 235 fig. 585), which appears to be more careful work by the same artist (Furtwängler—Reichhold op. cit. ii. 196). Vases (2) and (3) presuppose a famous original, probably the Gigantomachy painted inside the shield of Athena Parthénos (eid. ib.). The semicircular band of bákchoi, which on vase (3) denotes the arch of heaven, may well perpetuate the rim of Athena's shield (Sir C. Smith in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1896—1897 iii. 135 ff., Pfuhl op. cit. ii. 588). (4) A red-figured kratér (amphora?) with volute handles from Ruvo, now at Petrograd (Stephani Vasensamml. St. Petersburg i. 263 ff. no. 523, G. Minervini in the Bull. Arch. Nap. 1844 ii. 105 ff. pls 5, 6 (=my pl. viii), 7, 1=Reinach Rép. Vases i. 467, 1 f., Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 367 ff. no. 24 Atlas pl. 5, 4, H. Heydemann Zeus im Gigantenkampf (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Halle i) Halle a/S. 1876 p. 9, P. Ducati in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1908 xi. 141), which again shows the sky as an arch, yellow-painted and radiate, but represents Zeus in a four-horse chariot (cp. supra ii. 84 fig. 46) with Nike as charioteer and Porphyrion already blasted beneath him. (5) The great altar of Pergamon (supra i. 118 ff. pl. x figs. 87, 88) has as the culminating scene of its eastern side a magnificent composition, in which Zeus contends with Porphyrion and Athena with Alkyoneus (H. Winnefeld in Pergamon iii. 2 Atlas pl. 24). Zeus with wide stride brandishes a thunderbolt in his right hand, while a serpent-fringed aigís, scaly without and leathery within, is wrapped about his left. Porphyrion, a stalwart stiff-necked giant, as yet unvanquished, advances his left fist outlined beneath a lion's skin against the aigís. His eye, of some glittering substance, was separately inlaid. His legs are serpentiform—an innovation which dates from the beginning of s. iv B.C. (first on a gilded aryballos at Berlin (inv. no. 3375) published by H. Winnefeld in the Festschrift für Otto Benndorf Wien 1898 pp. 72—74 pl. 1, O. Waser in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. Suppl. iii. 690 f. no. 132, 735 f.)—and the left serpent winds up till its head rises above the giant's left

A

B

C

Kylix from Vulci, now at Berlin:

(A) Poseidon attacks Polybotes in the presence of Ge.

(B) Ares v. Mimon, Apollon v. Ephialtes, Hera v. Phoitos.

(C) Artemis v. Gaion, Zeus v. Porphyrion, Athena v. Enkelados.

See page 56 n. o (1).

[From Furtwängler-Reichhold Griechische Vasenmalerei pl. 127 by permission of Messrs F. Bruckmann A.-G., Munich.]

A kratér (amphora?) from Ruvo, now at Petrograd: the Gigantomachy—Porphyrion blasted by the thunderbolts of Zeus.

See page 56 n. o (4).

Reliefs from the eastern frieze of the great Altar at Pergamon, now in Berlin:
Zeus contends with Porphyrion, Athena with Enkelados.

See page 56 n. o (5), cp. page 534.

Hydria from Vulci, now in the British Museum :
Athena v. Enkelados, Zeus v. Porphyrion (?).

See page 57 n. 0.

The herald sent to men now returns with a golden crown voted by the states to Pisthetairos; for every one has gone bird-mad and is eager to obtain wings. Accordingly, in comes a second group of visitors, bent on getting them,—a father-beater, Kinesias, an informer, and lastly Prometheus, who wants to know whether Zeus is Clearing the clouds off, or collecting them[1].

He is desperately anxious to escape notice from above and produces an umbrella, under cover of which he explains that Zeus is ruined by the Birds' blockade, that the Triballian gods, yet higher up, are threatening to come down upon him, and that envoys are now on their way to treat for peace. But the Birds must make no peace unless Zeus restores the sceptre to them and hands over Basíleia, the 'Queen,' a beautiful girl who keeps his thunderbolts and other belongings, to be the bride of Pisthetairos.

The envoys in due course arrive—Poseidon, Herakles, and the uncouth Triballian[2]. Pisthetairos is busy preparing a savoury stew shoulder, where it is gripped by the claws of Zeus' eagle (H. Winnefeld in Pergamon iii. 2. 48 ff. Atlas pl. 10=my pl. ix, Die Skulpturen des Pergamon-Museums in Photographien Berlin 1903 pl. 15, Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 520 ff. pl. 12, H. Bulle Der schoene Mensch im Altertum[2] Muenchen—Leipzig 1912 p. 599 pl. 296, A. von Salis Der Altar von Pergamon Berlin 1912 p. 54 ff. fig. 3, F. Winter Hellenistische Skulptur (Kunstgeschichte in Bildern[2] I Das Altertum xi—xii) Leipzig 1925 p. 352 fig. 6).

A comparison of these representations will show that Porphyrion is normally (so in (1), (2), (3), (5)) conceived as a sturdy antagonist, full of fight and seen from the back as he stands up to Zeus (Hor. od. 3. 4. 54 minaci Porphyrion statu), but that on occasion (so in (4)) he borrows the type of a vanquished giant (cp. the youthful figure in the centre of (5)). His leopard-skin or lion-skin is of course parodied in Aristoph. av. 1249 f. πορφυρίωνας...παρδαλᾶς ἐνημμένους.

The giant defeated by Zeus on a red-figured hydría from Vulci, now in the British Museum (Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 149 f. no. E 165, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 8 f. pl. 3, O. Jahn in the Ann. d. Inst. 1869 xli. 183, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 365 f. no. 20, J. D. Beazley in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1916 xx. 149 no. 9 (assigned to 'the Tyszkiewicz painter'), id. Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 55, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 460 no. 8, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 116 no. 29. My pl. x is from a photograph taken by the Official Photographer), appears to be wearing a wolf-skin (J. Overbeck loc. cit. says 'das Fell eines wilden Thieres, eines Wolfes oder Luchses (?)') and, as he collapses, is heaving a rock on which is a vine-leaf (Lenormant—de Witte loc. cit. suppose 'une feuille de platane'). This would constitute an earlier type of Porphyrion, if we could but be sure that it is he.

[1] Supra p. 35.

[2] Triballos (on whom see J. Schmidt in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1102 f.) could claim some connexion with the Birds, for a Thracian myth told how his granddaughter Polyphonte had been transformed into an owl (στρύξ), her two sons by the bear—Agrios and Oreios—into a vulture (γύψ) and a sort of swallow(?) (λαγῶς) respectively, and their maid into a woodpecker (ὕπνη) (Ant. Lib. 21 after Boios ὀρνιθογονίας β). Not improbably Aristophanes regarded Τριβαλλός as the north-Greek form of Τρι-φαλλός*, cp. Souid. s.v. Τριφάλης, Τριφάλητος· ὄνομα κύριον παρὰ Ἀριστοφάνει with Gell. 2. 19. 6 Naevius in Triphallo (Com. Rom. frag. p. 27 Ribbeck), Non. Marc. p. 191, 27 f. Lindsay Varro and will listen to no proposals, unless Zeus consents to restore the sceptre to the Birds. In that case, he invites all the envoys to his feast. Herakles, greedy as usual, jumps at the offer and interprets in his own sense the Triballian's barbarous growl. Poseidon gives in, but when Pisthetairos claims Basileia too, is for walking off and wants Herakles to go with him as the prospective heir of Zeus. Pisthetairos, however, proves by Attic law that Herakles as a bastard has no right of inheritance and undertakes to feed him all his days on 'birds' milk.' Upon this, Herakles agrees to hand over Basileia and once more puts his own construction on the doubtful utterance of the Triballian. Poseidon is silenced, and Herakles invites Pisthetairos to ascend to heaven with them and claim Basileia as his own. The feast in preparation will serve as his wedding banquet.

The play ends with the appearance of the new bridal pair in a blaze of glory. The Birds, parting on either hand, greet them with a chorus of exuberant delight[1]:

Chor. Back with you! out with you! off with you! up with you!
Flying around
Welcome the Blessèd with blessedness crowned.
O! O! for the youth and the beauty, O!
Well hast thou wed for the town of the Birds.
Great are the blessings, and wondrous, I ween,
Which through his favour our nation possesses.
Welcome them back, both himself and his Queen,
Welcome with nuptial and bridal addresses.

Mid just such a song hymenaean
Aforetime the Destinies led
The King of the thrones empyréan,
The Ruler of Gods, to the bed
Of Hera his beautiful bride.
Hymen, O Hymenaeus!

And Love, with his pinions of gold,
Came driving, all blooming and spruce,
As groomsman and squire to behold
The wedding of Hera and Zeus,
Of Zeus and his beautiful bride.
Hymen, O Hymenaeus!
Hymen, O Hymenaeus!

Triphallo, περὶ ἀρρενότητος, Charis. 1 p. 80, 11 f. Keil Varro...in Triphallo, carm. Priap. 83. 6 Priape, 9 o Triphalle, 15 Priape, and the gloss Πρίαπος cited in Steph. Thes. Gr. Ling. vii. 2479 A. To this there is an ornithological parallel in τριόρχος or τριόρχης the 'buzzard' (?) (Plin. nat. hist. 10. 21 triorchem a numero testium, cp. schol. Aristoph. av. 1206 ἐπεὶ ἐταίρα ἦν, ἔπαιξε τὸ τριορχος): see further D'Arcy W. Thompson A Glossary of Greek Birds Oxford 1895 p. 170.

[1] Aristoph. av. 1720—1765. I quote the lively lyrics of Mr B. B. Rogers, altering a Pisth. I delight in your hymns, I delight in your songs;

Your words I admire.

Chor. Now sing of the trophies he brings us from Heaven,
The earth-crashing thunders, deadly and dire,
And the lightning's angry flashes of fire,
And the dread white bolt of the levin.
Blaze of the lightning, so terribly beautiful,
Golden and grand!
Fire-flashing javelin, glittering ever in Zeus's right hand!
Earth-crashing thunder, the hoarsely resounding, the Bringer of showers!
He is your Master, 'tis he that is shaking the Earth with your powers!
All that was Zeus's of old
Now is our hero's alone;
His the Queen, fair to behold,
Partner of Zeus on his throne,
Now and for ever his own.
Hymen, O Hymenaeus!

Pisth. Now follow on, dear feathered tribes,
To see us wed, to see us wed;
Mount up to Zeus's golden floor,
And nuptial bed, and nuptial bed.
And O, my darling, reach thine hand,
And take my wing and dance with me,
And I will lightly bear thee up,
And carry thee, and carry thee.

Chor. Raise the joyous Paean-cry,
Raise the song of Victory.
Io Paean, alalalae,
Mightiest of the Powers, to thee!

Throughout this splendid éxodos Pisthetairos is clearly conceived as the new Zeus. He is no longer referred to by his old name, but always by some phrase descriptive of the Olympian king. He comes Wielding the wingèd thunderbolt of Zeus[1].

The chorus at his approach sing of 'the fiery lightnings of Zeus[2],' 'the immortal spear of Zeus[3],' etc., and salute their leader himself as line or two to avoid his rendering 'Miss Sovereignty,' which, I fear, implies a confusion of βασίλεια, 'queen,' with βασιλεία, 'kingdom.' That the former, not the latter, word was intended by the poet is clear from the metre of verses 1537, 1753. The same slip is made by G. Caramia in his article on Βασίλεια in the Birds of Aristophanes (Rivista indo-greco-italica di filologia—lingua—antichità 1925 ix. 3—4. 51 ff. cited by H. J. Rose in The Year's Work in Class. Stud. 1925–1926 p. 59).

[1] Aristoph. av. 1714 πάλλων κεραυνόν, πτεροφόρον Διὸς βέλος. Supra ii. 777 ff.

[2] Id. ib. 1746 f. τάς τε πυρώδεις | Διὸς ἀστεροπάς.

[3] Id. ib. 1749 Διὸς ἄμβροτον ἔγχος (supra ii. 704 n. 5).

'having won all that belonged to Zeus[1].' The scholiast is puzzled, and comments on the verse—

> He is your Master, 'tis he that is shaking the > Earth with your powers!—

'He means Zeus of course, or Pisthetairos now that he has got Basileia[2].' But the meaning of the chorus is quite unmistakable. When Pisthetairos, bride in hand, is escorted 'to Zeus' floor and marriage-bed[3],' they acclaim him with all the emphasis of a farewell line as 'highest of the gods[4].'

Pisthetairos is Zeus. And Basileia is—who? Scholars ancient and modern have given a variety of answers to the question[5]. An

[1] Id. ib. 1752 Δῖα δὲ πάντα κρατήσας | κ.τ.λ.

[2] Schol. Aristoph. av. 1751 ὁ Ζεὺς δηλονότι, ἢ ὁ Πεισθέταιρος λαβὼν τὴν Βασιλείαν (sic).

[3] Aristoph. av. 1757 f. ἐπὶ πέδον Διὸς | καὶ λέχος γαμήλιον.

[4] Id. ib. 1765 δαιμόνων ὑπέρτατε.

[5] (1) Schol. Aristoph. av. 1536 σωματοποιεῖ τὴν Βασιλείαν αὐτὸ τὸ πρᾶγμα ὡς γυναῖκα in defiance of metre (supra p. 59 n. o) made her a personification of Royalty.

(2) Euphronios the Alexandrine grammarian of s. iii B.C. (L. Cohn in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 1220 f., W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1920 ii. 1. 150) ap. schol. Aristoph. av. 1536 regarded her as a daughter of Zeus—probably an inference from Aristoph. av. 1537 ff.

(3) Others held that she dispensed immortality, as Athena in Bakchyl. frag. 45 Jebb was about to dispense it to Tydeus; and some actually called her Athanasia (schol. Aristoph. av. 1536). This was perhaps one of the many (Cornut. theol. 20 p. 36, 1 ff. Lang) etymologies suggested for Athena (so even in Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 11).

(4) F. Wieseler Adversaria in Aeschyli Prometheum Vinctum et Aristophanis Aves Gottingae 1843 p. 124 ff. contends that she was Athena, cp. Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 111 Ἀθηνᾷ τινι βασιλίδι τῇ καὶ Βαλενίκῃ λεγομένῃ, θυγατρὶ δὲ Βροντέου (supra ii. 833 n. 7).

(5) Others cite Dionysios Skytobrachion (E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 673) ap. Diod. 3. 57, who in his romantic vein told how Basileia, a daughter of Ouranos by Titaia (Ge) and a sister of Rhea (Pandora), brought up her brothers the Titans and hence was known as the Megale Meter, inherited her father's kingdom, and ultimately became by her brother Hyperion the mother of Helios and Selene.

(6) Others again equate the Aristophanic Basileia with the goddess worshipped at Athens under the name Βασίλη or Βασίλεια (O. Kern in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 41 ff., Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 1081 n. 5, 1521 n. 1), whom some take to be a 'Queen' of Heaven (H. Usener Götternamen Bonn 1896 p. 227 ff.), some a 'Queen' of the Underworld (G. Loeschcke Vermutungen zur griechischen Kunstgeschichte und zur Topographie Athens Dorpati Livonorum 1884 pp. 14—24).

(7) C. Pascal Dioniso Catania 1911 pp. 99—110 argues that the Basileia of the play is 'Queen' of the Underworld and at the same time goddess of the mysteries and of fertility, in fact a variant of Kore. Marriage with her means death (supra ii. 1163 ff.). Pisthetairos the pretender, after a career of hitherto unbroken success, is thus at the last politely handed over to the other world (E. Wüst in the Jahresbericht über die Fortschritte der klassischen Altertumswissenschaft 1916—1918 clxxiv. 135).

(8) J. T. Sheppard 'τίς ἐστιν ἡ Βασίλεια;' in the Fasciculus Ioanni Willis Clark dicatus Cantabrigiae 1909 pp. 529—540, after rightly insisting that the solemnity of the final scene in the Birds implies a clear reference to the sacred marriage of Zeus and Hera, Athenian audience in the days of Aristophanes could hardly have hesitated. The partner of Zeus must needs be Hera. And Hera in that very capacity was often called Basíleia[1]. Besides, on the present occasion there was a special reason for picking out just this title and no other as appropriate to the goddess. For it would seem that the political circumstances in which the play was first planned prompted the author to the better part of its nomenclature—Euelpides, Pisthetairos, Nephelokokkygia, and finally Basileia.

Aristophanes brought out his Birds at the City Dionysia of the year 414 B.C.[2] But B. B. Rogers has shown that in all probability the play had been 'long in incubation,' indeed that it had been taken turns aside to the sacred marriage of Dionysos and the βασίλισσα (supra i. 672 n. 0, 686, 709 f. pl. xl, 3), and concludes that Βασίλεια is an imaginary goddess, whose name suggests the consort of the god of comedy. 'Peithetairos, on this hypothesis, recalls to the audience Zeus, with a touch of Dionysos. Basileia recalls the Basilissa, not without a touch of Hera' (J. T. Sheppard op. cit. p. 540). The ἱεροκῆρυξ and the γεραραί attendant on the βασίλισσα (Dem. c. Neaer. 78) may be found in the messenger of Aristoph. av. 1706 ff. and in the conjectural bridesmaids of Basileia. Mr Sheppard's article marks a real advance in the interpretation of this difficult scene; but—to quote his own words —'That Basileia has been caught in her true shape at last would be a bold assertion.'

[1] Zeus Βασιλεύς is associated with Hera Βασίλεια in a federal oath of the Phocians and Boeotians (H. G. Lolling in the Ath. Mitth. 1878 iii. 19 ff. line 14 f. cited supra ii. 731 n. 0 (1)). Zeus Βασιλεύς at Lebadeia (supra ii. 899 n. 2, 1073 f., 1076) appears to have had as his consort Hera Βασιλίς (W. Dittenberger in Inscr. Gr. sept. i no. 3097, 1 ff. "Ηρᾳ Βασιλίδι | καὶ τῇ πόλει Λεβαδέων | Μένανδρος Χρησίμου | ἱερητεύσας πενταετηρίδα | ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων ἀνέθηκεν | ἱερητευούσης τῆς γυναικὸς | αὐτοῦ Παρησίας τῆς Ὀνασιμβρότου—a series of well-omened names): so Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 78 n. 17, supra ii. 900 n. 0. There was a cult of Hera Βασίλεια at Lindos (P. Foucart in the Rev. Arch. 1867 ii. 30 ff. no. 71, 13 ff. = F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Inscr. Gr. ins. i no. 786, 13 ff. Τίτος Φλα(ΐϝιος) Τίτου Φλα(ΐϝου) | Λέοντος ἱερέως υἱὸς Κυρείνα (cp. Orelli—Henzen Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5793) Θρα|σύλοχος Κλά(σιος) ἀπὸ γένους τετει|μημένος ἐς τὸ διενεκὲς ὑπὸ τῶν | ἐν θεοῖς Αὐτοκρατόρων καὶ τῶν τῆς | ἱερᾶς βουλῆς συγκλήτου δογμάτων (sc. senatus consultis), | ὑπατικῶν [καὶ] συνκλητικῶν συνγεν[ῆς] | "Ηρᾳ Βασιλεί[ᾳ] ἐ[πὶ] το[ῦ] βωμο[ῦ] | τὰ[ς] (σ)τιβάδας ἐκ[δσμησεν]. On such στιβάδες or στιβάδεια see A. Wilhelm in the Ath. Mitth. 1892 xvii. 190 f. and Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 1109, 52 f. n. 36), and perhaps at Sikinos (F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Inscr. Gr. ins. v. 1 no. 30, 2 f. in lettering not older than s. iii A.D. εἶδος μὲν πα[ρόμοιος ἕφυς "Ηρῃς] | βασιλείῃς); and there was another of Hera Βασιλίς in Pisidia (A. H. Smith in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1887 viii. 256 f. no. 41, 1 ff. from Pogla (Fovla) ἡ βουλὴ καὶ ὁ δῆμος | ἐτείμησεν Αὐρηλί[αν] | Ἀρμ[ά]σταν, [τ]ὴν καὶ | Τε[ρ]τίαν, Μ€[δ]ον[τ]ος, | Ἀρτεμέους γυναῖκα | σώφρονα, γένους | τοῦ πρωτεύοντος, | ἱερασαμένην Ἥρᾳ Βα|σιλίδος, δημιουργή|σασαν, ἀρχιαιρασαμένην, | καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐπὶ τούτοις | νενομισμένα ποιήσα|σαν. κ.τ.λ., cp. Corp. inscr. Gr. iii no. 4367 f.).

Literary allusions include the following: h. Her. 1 ff. "Ηρην... | ἀθανάτην βασίλειαν... | Ζηνὸς ἐριγδούποιο καισυγνήτην ἄλοχόν τε, Ap. Rhod. 4. 382 μὴ τό γε παμβασίλεια Διὸς τελέσειεν ἄκοιτις, Orph. h. Her. 16. 2 "Ηρη (so J. G. J. Hermann for "Ηρα) παμβασίλεια, Διὸς σύλλεκτρε μάκαιρα, 9 μάκαιρα θεά, πολυώνυμε, παμβασίλεια, Prokl. in Plat. Tim. iii. 191, 12 f. Diehl διὰ δὴ τοῦτο τῷ Διὶ συνέζευκται ἡ βασιλὶς "Ηρα. See further Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1132 n. 2.

[2] Schol. Aristoph. av. argum. 1 and 2. W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 426.

in hand soon after the production of the Peace in 421[1]. Now the events of the period immediately succeeding the peace of Nikias had turned all eyes towards Argos, which then became the centre

[1] B. B. Rogers The Birds of Aristophanes London 1906 p. v f.: 'It is by far the longest of the extant comedies; and dealing as it does with a subject outside the ordinary range of the poet's thoughts and language...it is obviously a comedy which must have been long in incubation, and could not (as was the case with the Peace) have been hastily put together to meet a particular emergency. Indeed there are not wanting indications from which we may surmise that it was taken in hand, if not immediately after the production of the Peace, at all events whilst the mind of Aristophanes was still filled with the topics and ideas which possessed it while he was engaged in the composition of the earlier play. In the vagrant Oracle-monger (χρησμολόγος) of the Birds, with his prophecies of Bakis, his lust for a share of the σπλάγχνα, and finally his ignominious expulsion, we cannot fail to recognize the exact counterpart of Hierocles, the χρησμολόγος of the Peace. The description which Cinesias gives of the sources from whence the dithyrambic poets derived their inspiration is merely an amplification of a sarcasm placed previously in the mouth of Trygaeus; whilst the whole scheme of the proposed sacrifice on the stage, its preparation, interruption, and final abandonment, with the allusion to the predatory habits of the Kite, and to the unwelcome pipings of Chaeris, is substantially identical in the two plays.

So again the two plays have an idyllic character which belongs to no other of the poet's comedies: the innocent charms of a country life are depicted as they are depicted nowhere else; in each of them, and in them only, we hear the "sweet song" of the τέττιξ, and in each it is designated by its Doric name ὁ ἀχέτας, the chirruper. Here too, and nowhere else in Aristophanes, the coaxing address ὦ δειλακρίων is employed; and although the Aeschylean phrase ξουθὸς ἱπταλεκτρυὼν is found also in the Frogs, yet it there occurs in its natural place as part of a criticism on the style and the language of Aeschylus, while in each of these two plays it is introduced, apropos of nothing, in the Parabasis, as the sarcastic description of a showy military officer. And possibly the germ of the present drama may be discovered in the determination of Trygaeus μετ' ὀρνίθων ἐς κόρακας βαδίζειν [cp. av. 155, 753]. Minor coincidences, such as ποδαπὸς τὸ γένος, are very numerous, but are hardly worthy of mention.

So again, although the Athenian dependencies on the coasts of Macedonia and Thrace were in a chronic state of disturbance, and were giving some trouble at this very time, yet the advice to the reckless young Athenian to "fly off to Thrace-ward regions and fight there" would seem more naturally adapted to a time when those regions were the chief seat of Athenian warfare, than to a time when the entire attention of the Athenian people was directed to the military operations in Sicily. And the very remarkable verbal allusions to the History of Herodotus would seem more suitable to a period when that History was still fresh in the hands and thoughts of the poet and his audience.

But whatever weight may be due to these considerations, the comedy would of course not receive its final touches until it was about to be sent in to the Archon, in the winter of 415—414 B.C.'

I have quoted at length the wise words of Mr Rogers because they form the best reply to an objection raised by E. Wüst in the Jahresbericht über die Fortschritte der klassischen Altertumswissenschaft 1923 cxcv. 151, who urges against me the contention of A. Ruppel Konzeption und Ausarbeitung der Aristophanischen Komödien Darmstadt 1912 'dass der Dichter immer nur 3—4 Monate mit der Ausarbeitung eines Stückes beschäftigt war' (E. Wüst loc. cit. 1916—1918 clxxiv. 133). But such a rule was obviously open to exceptions. U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff 'Über die Wespen des Aristophanes' in the Sitzungsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin 1911 p. 460 ff., rightly holding that the Kyon v. Labes trial of vesp. 894 ff. travestied the Kleon v. Laches trial of the year 425 B.C., infers that the play was planned three years before its performance in 422 (E. Wüst loc. cit. 1916—1918 clxxiv. 132, 155).

of more than one new political combination[1]. The Argives in a sense held the balance between Athens and Sparta, a fact that the playwright fully appreciated[2]. And at Argos there had been a deal of wobbling. The successive alliances of the Argives with the Athenians (420), with the Spartans (418), and with the Athenians again (417) must have been received at Athens with alternate outbursts of enthusiasm and disgust. What the Athenian 'optimist,' the Euelpídes of the moment, really wanted was a staunch and loyal ally, a 'trusty comrade,' a Pisthétairos[3].

More than that. If, while the play was being drafted, popular attention was thus directed to Argos, it may fairly be surmised that Aristophanes' castle-in-the-air Nephelokokkygía contained—inter alia[4], no doubt—an allusion to the Argive Mount Kokkygion[5] with its myth of Zeus the cuckoo[6]. Aristotle[7] tells the story.

[1] See e.g. J. B. Bury A History of Greece London 1900 p. 458 ff., W. S. Ferguson in The Cambridge Ancient History Cambridge 1927 v. 256 ff.

[2] Aristoph. pax 475 ff.

[3] That this is the true form of the name appears from Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1723 on an architrave of Pentelic marble in the church of St Theodoros near the village of Marousi ΠΙΣΤΟΚΛΗΣ : ΠΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟ : ΑΘΜΟΝΕΥΣ (K. Meisterhans Grammatik der attischen Inschriften[3] Berlin 1900 p. 54). E. Wüst loc. cit. 1923 cxcv. 151 deems this evidence 'nicht zwingend.' He is hard to please.

[4] A. Todesco 'KOKKTΣ' in Philologus 1914—1916 lxxiii. 563—567 (an article which Prof. A. D. Nock kindly brought to my notice) thinks that Νεφελοκοκκυγία was a name invented by Aristophanes (Loukian. ver. hist. 29), in accordance with Greek usage, to denote a chaos of clouds (av. 178) and a babble of political intriguers (Ach. 598). 'Ganz vernünftig würde auch diese neue Erklärung sein: Νεφελοκοκκυγία sei die Idealstadt der schlauen Feiglinge, welche auf Kosten des Nächsten leben wollen. Wenn man besonders den Begriff der Schlauheit betont, so sind diese κόκκυγες die Demagogen, und wir sehen im Hintergrund die anderen Leute, die Athener, welche κεχηνότες alle Prahlereien ernst nehmen.'

[5] A similar allusion to Argive topography occurs in Aristoph. av. 399 ἀποθανεῖν ἐν Ὀρνεαῖς, where again the name is selected partly because it suggests birds (ὄρνεα) and partly because the town was uppermost in the thoughts of the people owing to its capture by Athenians and Argives in 416 B.C. Miss R. E. White (Mrs N. Wedd) in the Class. Rev. 1904 xviii. 100 f. finds the same point in av. 15 f. ὃς τώδ' ἔφασκε νῷν φράσειν τὸν Τηρέα | τὸν ἔποφ', ὃς ὄρνις ἐγένετ' ἐκ τῶν ὀρνέων and aptly defends the variation in the use of the article by citing Thouk. 6. 7 τοὺς ἐν Ὀρνεαῖς...οἱ ἐκ τῶν Ὀρνεῶν.

Does the oracle in av. 967 f. ἀλλ' ὅταν οἰκήσωσι λύκοι πολιαί τε κορῶναι | ἐν ταὐτῷ τὸ μεταξὺ Κορίνθου καὶ Σικυῶνος,—| κ.τ.λ. refer to the alliance of Argos, whose symbol was the wolf, with Corinth (Κόρινθος—κορώνη)?

F. Creuzer Symbolik und Mythologie[3] Leipzig and Darmstadt 1841 iii. 248 n. 2 saw that Nephelokokkygia stood in some relation to Mt Kokkygion or Thornax in Argolis (supra i. 135, ii. 893 n. 2), but thought that the topic might have been suggested to Aristophanes by the existence of another Mt Thornax near Sparta (supra ii. 893 n. 2).

[6] Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. p. 481 contributes an acute surmise: 'Zeus often appears as a lover in the guise of a bird. As a swan he begot the Dioscuri at Sparta, at Argos it was said that in the shape of a cuckoo he deceived Hera and won her love on the Mountain of the Cuckoo. I venture to guess that these myths, which appear in old Mycenaean centres, are remains of the Minoan belief that the gods appeared in the shape of birds.'

It must not, however, be forgotten that in the Old Slavonic area there was, or is said to have been, a fairly close parallel to the cuckoo-Zeus of Mt Kokkygion. J. Grimm Teutonic Mythology trans. J. S. Stallybrass London 1883 ii. 679 cites from the Polish chronicle of Prokosz the following remarkable account of a Slavic god Zywie: Chronicon Slavo-Sarmaticum...Procossii ed. H. Kownacki Varsaviae 1827 p. 113 'divinitati Zywie fanum exstructum erat in monte ab ejusdem nomine Zywiec dicto, ubi primis diebus mensis Maji innumerus populus pie conveniens precabatur ab ea, quae vitae auctor habebatur, longam et prosperam valetudinem. Praecipue tamen ei litabatur ab iis qui primum cantum cuculi audivissent, ominantes superstitiose tot annos se victuros quoties vocem repetiisset. Opinabantur enim supremum hunc universi moderatorem transfigurari in cuculum ut ipsis annuntiaret vitae tempora: unde crimini ducebatur, capitalique poena a magistratibus afficiebatur, qui cuculum occidisset.' This chronicle, which professed to be the work 'Procossii sec. X scriptoris,' was denounced by Dobrowski in the Wiener Jahrbücher d. Liter. xxxii. 77—80 as a pure fabrication and is described by A. Potthast Bibliotheca historica medii aevi[2] Berlin 1896 ii. 940 as 'Ein nnsauberes Machwerk des Przybysław Dyamentowski (saec. XVIII).' But J. Grimm op. cit. ii. 679 n. 1 protested that Dobrowski had gone too far: the chronicle, though not so old as s. x, 'is at any rate founded on old traditions.' Partial confirmation of the alleged statements of Prokosz may be found in those of J. Długosz, a canon of Cracow who died in 1480 A.D. and has left what purports to be an account of the ancient Polish pantheon. According to the careful critique of A. Brückner in the Archiv für slavische Philologie 1892 xiv. 170 ff., Długosz did not invent the names of his divinities, but took them from old ritual folk-songs still current in the fifteenth century, dignifying inferior powers with the rank of gods and comparing them with the gods of Greece and Rome. Thus Jesza = Iupiter, Lyada = Mars, Daydzilelya = Venus, Nya = Pluto, Pogoda = Temperies, Żywye = deus vitae, Daewana = Diana, Marzyana = Ceres (L. Niederle Manuel de l'antiquité slave Paris 1926 ii. 152). Other Polish chroniclers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries complete the list by adding from a similar source the names Lel and Polel, which M. de Miecbow Chronica Polonorum a Lecho usque ad annum MDvi Cracoviae 1521 equated with Castor and Pollux (L. Niederle op. cit. ii. 153 n. 1). The relevant passages in Długosz are as follows: Io. Długossus historia Polonica Lipsiæ 1711 i (i. 34 A) 'BABA, mons altissimus supra fluvium Sola, herbas multiferas germinans, & oppido Zyvviec imminens' (sc. Zywiec on the Sola, some 40 miles south-west of Cracow), ib. i (i. 37 B) 'Item Deus vitæ, quem vocabant Zywie.' The fuller, but less authoritative, account of Prokosz is quoted, with various comments, by W. Mannhardt in the Zeitschrift für deutsche Mythologie und Sittenkunde 1855 iii. 230, J. Hardy in The Folk-Lore Record 1879 ii. 85, C. Swainson The Folk Lore and Provincial Names of British Birds London 1886 p. 121, O. Keller Die antike Tierwelt Leipzig 1913 ii. 66. C. de Kay Bird Gods New York 1898 p. 116 speaks of 'a goddess Zywie' etc.: he has misconstrued the Latin of Prokosz.

Other considerations, which deserve to be weighed before the testimony of the chroniclers is rejected, are these. The name Żywye, which is akin to ζῆν, vivere (Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 120, Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] p. 846 f., F. Muller Jzn Altitalisches Wörterbuch Göttingen 1926 p. 211 f.), recalls the Thracian or Thraco-Phrygian Erikepaios, whose name was interpreted as meaning ζωοδοτήρ (supra ii. 1024 f.). Again, the notion that the cuckoo is an ominous bird, which declares to men how many years they have to live etc., is wide-spread in Europe (see W. Mannhardt loc. cit. p. 231 ff., J. Grimm op. cit. ii. 676 ff., J. Hardy loc. cit. p. 86 ff., C. Swainson op. cit. p. 115 ff., L. Hopf Thierorakel und Orakelthiere in alter und neuer Zeit Stuttgart 1888 p. 154 f., O. Keller op. cit. ii. 66). Typical are the folk-lines of Lower Saxony Kukuk vam hâven, | wo lange sall ik leven? (J. F. Schuetze Holsteinisches Idiotikon, ein Beitrag zur Volkssittengeschichte Hamburg 1801 ii. 363), or those of Guernsey Coucou, cou-cou, dis mé | Combien d'ans je vivrai (Sir E. MacCulloch Guernsey Folk Lore ed. Miss E. F. Carey London 1903 p. 505, P. Sébillot Le Folk-lore de France Paris 1906 iii. 200), or those of Zeus, seeing Hera all by herself, was minded to consort with her. To secure her by guile, he transformed himself into a cuckoo and perched on a mountain, which had previously been called Thrónax, the 'Throne,' but was thenceforward known as Kókkyx, the 'Cuckoo.' He then caused a terrible storm to break over the district. Hera, faring alone, came to the mountain and sat on the spot where there is now a sanctuary of Hera Teleía. The cuckoo flew down and settled on her knees, cowering and shivering at the storm. Hera out of pity covered it with her mantle. Thereupon Zeus changed his shape and accomplished his desire, promising to make the goddess his wedded wife. Pausanias[1] adds that Mount Kokkygion and Mount Pron over against it were topped by sanctuaries of Zeus and Hera respectively. Further[2], he brings the myth into connexion with the famous cult of Hera at Argos. The temple-statue was a chryselephantine masterpiece by Polykleitos. The goddess sat enthroned. On her head was a band decorated with figures of the Charites and the Horai. In one hand she held a pomegranate, about which a tale not rashly to be repeated was told; in the other she had a sceptre surmounted by a cuckoo, the subject of the foregoing myth. Strabo[3] says of this statue that, though in point of costliness and size it fell short of the colossal works of Pheidias, yet for sheer beauty it surpassed all others. Maximus Tyrius[4] in a few well-chosen epithets records the the modern Greek κοῦκο μου, κουκάκι μου, | κι ἀργυροκουκάκι μου, | πόσους χρόνους θὲ νὰ ζήσω; (J. Grimm op. cit. ii. 676 n. 3). Étienne de Bourbon, a thirteenth-century Dominican, states that the cuckoo-oracle was consulted on the first of May (A. Lecoy de la Marche Anecdotes historiques légendes et apologues tirés du recueil inédit d'Étienne de Bourbon Paris 1877 § 52 p. 59 f., § 356 p. 315). Prokosz therefore may, after all, be right in what he tells us of the May-day celebration on Mt Żywiec. His further assertions, that the ruler of the world was believed to take the form of a cuckoo and that the killing of a cuckoo was a capital offence, cannot be controlled, but are at least consistent with one another and not per se wholly incredible. Yet the cautious enquirer would do well to digest what Seemann in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1933 v. 749—751 has to say against e.g. W. Mannhardt's attempt to treat the cuckoo as an animal form of Donar or Frô and C. L. Rochholz' contention that St Gertrude with her cuckoo was 'eine Stellvertreterin Freyas oder Idunas.'

[7] Aristot. frag. 287 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 190 f. Müller) ap. schol. vet. Theokr. 15. 64 = Eudok. viol. 414[h] cited supra ii. 893 n. 2.

[1] Paus. 2. 36. 2 quoted supra ii. 893 n. 2.

[2] Paus. 2. 17. 4 τὸ δὲ ἄγαλμα τῆς Ἥρας ἐπὶ θρόνου κάθηται μεγέθει μέγα, χρυσοῦ μὲν καὶ ἐλέφαντος, Πολυκλείτου δὲ ἔργον· ἔπεστι δέ οἱ στέφανος Χάριτας ἔχων καὶ Ὥρας ἐπειργασμένας, καὶ τῶν χειρῶν τῇ μὲν καρπὸν φέρει ῥοιᾶς, τῇ δὲ σκῆπτρον. τὰ μὲν οὖν ἐς τὴν ῥοιὰν —ἀπορρητότερος γάρ ἐστιν ὁ λόγος—ἀφείσθω μοι· κόκκυγα δὲ ἐπὶ τῷ σκήπτρῳ καθῆσθαί φασι λέγοντες τὸν Δία, ὅτε ἥρα παρθένου τῆς Ἥρας, ἐς τοῦτον τὸν ὄρνιθα ἀλλαγῆναι, τὴν δὲ ἅτε παίγνιον θηρᾶσαι. Supra ii. 893 n. 2.

[3] Strab. 372.

[4] Max. Tyr. 14. 6 τὴν Ἥραν, οἵαν Πολύκλειτος Ἀργείοις ἔδειξε, λευκώλενον, ἐλεφαντόπηχυν, εὐῶπιν, εὐείμονα, βασιλικήν, ἱδρυμένην ἐπὶ χρυσοῦ θρόνου.

effect produced by the ivory arms, the exquisite face, the gorgeous drapery, the queenly bearing, and the golden throne. Greek and Roman writers vied with each other in praising the sculptor's creation. To cite but a single epigram, Martial[1] wrote:

> Thy toil and triumph, Polykleitos, stands—
> Hera, beyond the reach of Pheidias' hands.
> Had Paris this sweet face on Ida seen,
> The judge convinced, the rivals scorned had been.
> Loved he not his own Hera's form divine,
> Zeus might have loved the Hera that is thine.

I need not labour the point. The myth was well known, and the statue immensely famous. What concerns us at the moment is the fact that the Argive Hera herself was worshipped expressly as Hera Basileia[2]. Aristophanes, true to a long-established tendency of the mythopoeic mind, has split off the cult-title Basileia and transformed it into a new and brilliant personality—the quasi-Hera of Athens[3]. This bold stroke of genius[4] was necessitated and justified by the [1] Mart. ep. 10. 89.

[2] W. R. Paton—E. L. Hicks The Inscriptions of Cos Oxford 1891 p. 88 ff. no. 38, 5 f. = J. de Prott Leges Graecorum sacrae Lipsiae 1896 Fasti sacri p. 25 ff. no. 6, 5 f. = P. Müllensiefen in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 1. 361 ff. no. 3637, 5 f. = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 717, 5 f. = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 1026, 5 f. a liturgical calendar on a marble slab in lettering of s. iv—s. iii B.C. δεκάται· Ἥραι Ἀργείαι Ἐλείαι Βασιλείαι δάμιαλις κριτά· κ.τ.λ. (Ἐλεία = ἐν ἕλει, 'in the marsh,' cp. Alexis of Samos frag. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 299 Müller) ap. Athen. 572 F Ἄλεξις δ' ὁ Σάμιος ἐν δευτέρῳ Ὥρων Σαμακῶν· 'τὴν ἐν Σάμῳ Ἀφροδίτην, ἣν οἱ μὲν ἐν Καλάμοις καλοῦσιν, οἱ δὲ ἐν Ἕλει,' κ.τ.λ., Paus. 8. 36. 6 at Megalopolis Δήμητρος καλουμένης ἐν ἕλει ναός τε καὶ ἄλσος. Hesych. s.v. ἑλεία (ἔλεια cod.)·... καὶ Ἥρα ἐν Κύπρῳ. καὶ Ἄρτεμις ἐν Μεσσήνῃ (Μεσίνῃ cod.). See further O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 2819).

The title as attached to the Argive Hera appears to be of long standing: Phoronis frag. 4 Kinkel ap. Clem. Al. strom. 1. 24 p. 102, 23 f. Ὀλυμπιάδος βασιλείης, | Ἥρης Ἀργείης (context cited supra i. 453 n. 8), Aisch. suppl. 296 f. ΠΕΛ. πῶς οὖν τελευτᾷ βασιλέων νείκη τάδε; | ΧΟ. βοῦν τὴν γυναῖκ' ἔθηκεν Ἀργεία θεός. | κ.τ.λ., Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 172, 5 ff. on a taurobolic altar of Pentelic marble, to be dated c. 361—363 A.D. οὗτος Κεκροπίην αὐχεῖ πόλιν, οὗτος ἐν Ἄργει | ναιετάει, βίοτον μυστικὸν εὖ διάγων· | αὐτόθι γὰρ κλειδοῦχος ἔφυ βασιληΐδος Ἥρης, | κ.τ.λ., 9 f. δαδοῦχός με Κόρης, βασιλ[ηΐ]δος ἱερὰ σηκῶν | Ἥρας κλείθρα φέρων, βωμὸν ἔθηκε Ῥέῃ | κ.τ.λ. = Kaibel Epigr. Gr. no. 822, 5 ff., 9 f. = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 1. 283. 5 ff., 9 f. (reading 7 αὐτόθι γὰρ κλειδοῦχος ἔφυ βασιληΐδος Ἥρης but 9 δαδοῦχός με κόρης Βασιλῆς Διὸς ἱερὸς ἦκων | κ.τ.λ.). So in Latin Sen. Ag. 349 ff., Apul. met. 6. 4.

[3] There appears to have been no temple of Hera at Athens till the time of Hadrian (Paus. 1. 18. 9), unless we reckon the ruined temple on the way from Phaleron to Athens, said to have been fired by Mardonios (Paus. 1. 1. 5, 10. 35. 2).

[4] Possibly not so original as we might suppose. I incline to think that Kratinos had hit upon a very similar idea. He is known to have dubbed Perikles Ζεύς (supra i. 280, iii. 32 f., cp. ii. 816 n. 1) and Aspasia Ἥρα, if not also Τύραννος or Τυραννοδαίμων (Meineke Frag. com. Gr. ii. 61 f., 147 ff., supra iii. 32 n. 5). When, therefore, we read in schol. Aristoph. av. 1536 ἔστι δὲ καὶ παρὰ Κρατίνῳ ἡ Βασίλεια, it is tempting to conclude that Kratinos spoke of Perikles and Aspasia as the Zeus and the Hera Βασίλεια of Athens.

A lékythos from Ruvo, now in the British Museum: the Judgment of Paris with the Argive Hera as prize-winner.

See page 67 f.

whole plot of the bird-comedy. The bird-Zeus was the mate of Hera Basíleia: Pisthetairos must follow suit. The sceptre, of which we hear so much in the course of the play[1], was perhaps directly suggested by the cuckoo-sceptre of the Argive Hera[2].

I end by anticipating an objection. Aristophanes (it may be urged), lover of old-fashioned Athens as he was, would not have appealed to an Athenian public by thus dwelling on a virtually foreign cult. Still less (I shall be told) could he have assumed in his work-a-day audience familiarity with or appreciation of a cult-statue carved by an alien sculptor for a Peloponnesian town. The objection may be met, or at least minimised, by the consideration of a certain red-figured lékythos from Ruvo, now in the British Museum[3], which—if I am not in error—makes it probable that this very statue was known and admired by ordinary folk at Athens in the days of Aristophanes. The vase-painting (pl. xi)[4], which is contemporary or nearly contemporary with our play, represents a frequent subject—the judgment of Paris. To our surprise, however, the central goddess is not Aphrodite but Hera, who sits on a throne raised by a lotos-patterned base. As befits a 'Queen,' she wears a high decorated stephánе and holds in her left hand a long sceptre tipped by a cuckoo with spread wings. Her feet rest on a footstool, and beside the further arm of her throne is an open-mouthed panther sitting on its hind legs[5]. Advancing towards her comes Nike with

G. Loeschcke Vermutungen zur griechischen Kunstgeschichte und zur Topographie Athens Dorpati Livonorum 1884 pp. 14—24, followed by O. Kern in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 44 f., would identify the Βασίλεια of Kratinos and Aristophanes with the Meter of the Athenian market-place, protectress of the Bouleutérion.

[1] Aristoph. av. 480, 635 f., 1534 f., 1600 f., 1626 f., 1631.

[2] Cp. Aristoph. av. 508 ff. ἦρχον δ' οὕτω σφόδρα τὴν ἀρχὴν ὥστ', εἴ τις καὶ βασιλεύοι | ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν τῶν Ἑλλήνων Ἀγαμέμνων ἢ Μενέλαος, | ἐπὶ τῶν σκήπτρων ἐκάθητ' ὄρνις μετέχων ὅ τι δωροδοκοίη with ib. 504 Αἰγύπτου δ' αὖ καὶ Φοινίκης πάσης κόκκυξ βασιλεὺς ἦν. It is important to note that both Egypt (Epaphos, Memphis, Libye, Belos, Anchinoe, Aigyptos, Danaos, etc.) and Phoinike (Agenor, Kadmos, Phoinix, etc.) play a large part in the mythology of the early kings of Argos.

[3] Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iv. 61 no. F 109, Gerhard Ant. Bildw. p. 289 f. pl. 43, Welcker Alt. Denkm. v. 410 no. 61 pl. B, 3, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Hera p. 140 ff. (B) Atlas pl. 10, 1 and 1 a.

[4] The vase, when I first saw it, had been very skilfully repainted so as to appear quite complete. My friend Mr H. B. Walters kindly had it cleaned for me with ether (Sept. 29, 1910), and thus fixed the exact limits of the restoration. I was therefore enabled to publish in the Ridgeway volume (supra p. 44 n. 1) for the first time an accurate drawing of the design by that excellent draughtsman, the late Mr F. Anderson. The present plate is reproduced from his coloured drawing to a larger scale.

[5] The panther appears to be a variant of the lion, which on other vases representing the judgment of Paris precedes (Welcker Alt. Denkm. v. 388 no. 22) or is carried by Hera (id. ib. v. 398 f. no. 52 pl. B, 2, Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin ii. 716 ff. no. 2536, a palm-branch[1]. In front of her sits Paris; behind stands Hermes; above are Athena and Aphrodite—all with their usual attributes. It seems clear that the vase-painter, wishing to give an individual turn to a common type[2], has made Paris award the prize of beauty, not—as tradition prescribed—to Aphrodite, nor even—as patriotism might suggest—to Athena, but to Hera, the Hera of Polykleitos. The rival goddesses are relegated to the far corners of the scene, and the chef-d'œuvre of the sculptor queens it in the centre. Doubtless the vase-painter showed his ingenuity by treating the pomegranate in Hera's hand as if it were the apple of discord that Paris had just presented to the fairest. In short, the vase as a whole forms an amusing parallel to the epigram by Martial already quoted.

But whether the second half of the name Nephelo-kokkygia was or was not inspired by the Argive cult, it is certain that the first half owed much to the common Greek conception of Zeus enthroned above the clouds. Above them rather than upon them. Prometheus, arriving in Cloudland, is terribly afraid that Zeus will see him 'from above[3].' Hence his ludicrous umbrella. And Pisthetairos, aspiring to the home and the very couch of Zeus, must needs bear his bride upwards from the celestial city on pinions that soar to yet higher heights[4]. After all, that is as it should be. The clouds, if strictly described, are of the aér; and the aér is a lower stratum than the aithér[5]. The realm of the sky-god was rightly pictured by Homer as > Broad heaven in the aithér and the clouds[6].

(d) The Clouds personified in Cult and Myth.

From the ritual of Zeus Aktaîos we have inferred that in early days Greek rain-makers clothed themselves in sheep-skins by way Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Hera p. 141 ff. (M) Atlas pl. 10, 7, Türk in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1615 fig. 6) and is usually explained as symbolising the sovereignty of Asia (Eur. Tro. 927 f., Isokr. Hel. 41, alib.). These adjuncts recall another statue of Hera at Argos: Tert. de cor. mil. 7 Iunoni vitem Callimachus induxit (perhaps the seated Hera Νυμφευομένη at Plataiai, made by Kallimachos (Paus. 9. 2. 7)). ita et Argis signum eius palmite redimitum, subiecto pedibus eius corio leonino, insultantem ostentat novercam de exuviis utriusque privigni (sc. Dionysos and Herakles).

[1] Mr H. B. Walters in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iv. 61 says: 'Before Hera hovers Iris or Nikè, with wings spread,' etc. But, if Nike were hovering in the air, her feet would point downwards: see e.g. F. Studniczka Die Siegesgöttin Leipzig 1898 pl. 3, 19 ff.

[2] Cp. P. Gardner A Grammar of Greek Art London 1905 pp. 244—253=id. The Principles of Greek Art New York 1914 pp. 297—309.

[3] Aristoph. av. 1551 ἄνωθεν, cp. ib. 1509.

[4] Id. ib. 1759 ff.

[5] Supra i. 101 f. pl. ix, 2.

[6] Il. 15. 192 (cited supra i. 25 n. 5, iii. 34).

of copying the fleecy clouds[1]. Such a usage goes some way towards explaining another drama of exceptional brilliance[2], the Clouds of Aristophanes; for he, in common with all the writers of old Attic comedy, was largely indebted for his choruses to the mimetic dances of the past[3]. The Clouds, however, to whom the Aristophanic Sokrates would introduce his elderly pupil and initiate, Strepsiades, are not mere masses of vapour that the magician can coax into sending a shower, but rather august, and indeed divine, personifications of the same:

> Old man sit you still, and attend to my will, and hearken in peace to my prayer,
> O Master and King, holding earth in your swing, O measureless infinite Air;
> And thou glowing Ether, and Clouds who enwreathe her with thunder, and lightning, and storms, > Arise ye and shine, bright Ladies Divine, to your student in bodily forms[4].

Sokrates speaks of them as 'our deities[5],' and again as 'heavenly Clouds, great goddesses[6].' Strepsiades, taking his cue, salutes them

[1] Supra p. 31 f.

[2] When first exhibited at the Dionysia of 423 B.C. the Νεφέλαι of Aristophanes gained only the third prize, being beaten by the Πυτίνη of Kratinos and the Κόννος of Ameipsias—a judgment hard to understand. We have the play in part rewritten, a second edition which was never staged (W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 422 f.), being either 'composed to be read and not to be acted' (B. B. Rogers in his ed. 1916 p. xii), or planned for performance some time after 421 B.C. (G. M. Bolling 'The two recensions of The Clouds' in Class. Philol. 1920 xv. 83 ff., reported in the Berl. philol. Woch. Juli 30, 1921 p. 736).

[3] So at least I have argued in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1894 xiv. 163 ff. Note that the choreutaí impersonating the Clouds are likened to spread fleeces (nub. 343 εἴξασιν γοῦν ἐριοισιν πεπταμένοισι). Why attention is drawn to their noses (ib. 344 αὗται δὲ ῥῖνας ἔχουσιν), is not quite clear. The schol. ad loc. says εἰσεληλύθασι γὰρ οἱ τοῦ χοροῦ προσωπεῖα περικείμενοι μεγάλας ἔχοντα ῥῖνας καὶ ἄλλως γελοῖα καὶ ἀσχήμονα. The sequel (nub. 346 ff.) of course shows that the Greeks, like other children, formed fancy-pictures in the sky and took the clouds to be a Centaur, a leopard, a wolf, a bull—in fact, as Lowell puts it, 'Insisted all the world should see | camels or whales where none there be!' But that is hardly the import of ῥῖνες. I should rather suppose that the Nephelai are entirely wrapped in fleeces except for their nostrils. Cp. the use of νεφέλη in Greek (Hesych. s.v. φάρη) and nebula in Latin (De Vit Lat. Lex. s.v. 'nebula' § 9) for a thin, flowing garment, or of 'cloud' in English for a voluminous woollen scarf (J. A. H. Murray A New English Dictionary Oxford 1893 ii. 526 s.v. 'Cloud' § 8).

[4] Aristoph. nub. 263 ff. trans. B. B. Rogers ΣΩ. εὐφημεῖν χρὴ τὸν πρεσβύτην καὶ τῆς εὐχῆς ἐπακούειν. | ὦ δέσποτ' ἄναξ, ἀμέτρητ' Ἀήρ, ὃς ἔχεις τὴν γῆν μετέωρον, | λαμπρός τ' Αἰθήρ, σεμναί τε θεαὶ Νεφέλαι βροντησικέραυνοι, | ἄρθητε, φάνητ', ὦ δέσποιναι, τῷ φροντιστῇ μετέωροι.

[5] Id. ib. 252 f. ΣΩ. καὶ ξυγγενέσθαι ταῖς Νεφέλαισιν ἐς λόγους, | ταῖς ἡμετέραισι δαίμοσιν;

[6] Id. ib. 315 f. ΣΤ. μῶν ἠρῶναί τινές εἰσιν; | ΣΩ. ἥκιστ', ἀλλ' οὐράνιαι Νεφέλαι, μεγάλαι θεαὶ ἀνδράσιν ἀργοῖς.

as 'Queens over all[1].' Sokrates outdoes even this by declaring that the Clouds are 'the only goddesses', the rest being pure rubbish[2]. Zeus? There's no such person[3]. But the Clouds themselves are more orthodox, and in their parábasis begin by invoking four gods with whom they are specially concerned—Zeus, Poseidon, Aither their father, and Helios[4]. It would seem that Aristophanes, who throughout the play is presenting the grossest caricature of Sokrates, has foisted upon him a worship of the Clouds more properly belonging to Orphic votaries. The comedian of course accounts that way for Sokrates' nebulous notions and shifty morals[5]. But the Orphists, who from of old had been devotees of nature, were perfectly serious. Their hymns to Zeus Keraúnios and to Zeus Astrápios are immediately followed by another to the Clouds, which is prefaced by the rubric that the proper burnt-offering to be made is myrrh, and continues:

> Clouds of the air, that nurture the crops, and that roam in the sky,
> Parents of rain, driven wide o'er the world by the blasts of the wind,
> Brimful of thunder and fire, loud-roaring, of watery ways,
> Ye that make horror of sound in the echoing bosom of air,
> Rent by the winds or charging amain with a crash and a clap,
> You I beseech, that are clad in the dew, and that breathe in the breeze,
> Send us the showers to nurture the crops of our Mother the Earth[6].

Adoration of the Clouds, though perhaps connectible with other

[1] Id. ib. 356 f. ΣΤ. χαίρετε τοίνυν, ὦ δέσποιναι· καὶ νῦν, εἴπερ τινὶ κἄλλῳ, | οὐρανομήκη ῥήξατε κάμοὶ φωνήν, ὦ παμβασίλειαι.

[2] Id. ib. 365 ΣΩ. αὗται γάρ τοι μόναι εἰσὶ θεαί· τἄλλα δὲ πάντ' ἐστὶ φλύαρος.

[3] Id. ib. 366 f. ΣΤ. ὁ Ζεὺς δ' ἡμῖν, φέρε, πρὸς τῆς Γῆς, οὐλύμπιος οὐ θεός ἐστιν; | ΣΩ. ποῖος Ζεύς; οὐ μὴ ληρήσεις· οὐδ' ἔστι Ζεύς. Supra ii. 2. Cp. nub. 380 f. ΣΤ. Δῖνος; τουτί μ' ἐλελήθει, | ὁ Ζεὺς οὐκ ὤν, ἀλλ' ἀντ' αὐτοῦ Δῖνος νυνὶ βασιλεύων, 818 f. ΣΤ. ἰδοὺ γ' ἰδοὺ Δί' Ὀλύμπιον· τῆς μωρίας· | τὸν Δία νομίζειν, ὄντα τηλικουτονί, 827 ΣΤ. οὐκ ἔστιν, ὦ Φειδιππίδη, Ζεύς. ΦΕΙ. ἀλλὰ τίς; | ΣΤ. Δῖνος βασιλεύει, τὸν Δί' ἐξεληλακώς, 1469 ff. ΦΕΙ. ἰδού γε Δία Πατρῷον· ὡς ἀρχαῖος εἶ. | Ζεὺς γάρ τις ἔστιν; ΣΤ. ἔστιν. ΦΕΙ. οὐκ ἔστ', οὔκ, ἐπεὶ | Δῖνος βασιλεύει, τὸν Δί' ἐξεληλακώς.

[4] Id. ib. 563 ff. ὑψιμέδοντα μὲν θεῶν | Ζῆνα τύραννον ἐς χορὸν | πρῶτα μέγαν κικλήσκω· | τόν τε μεγασθενῆ τριαίνης ταμίαν, | γῆς τε καὶ ἁλμυρᾶς θαλάσσης ἄγριον μοχλευτήρ· | καὶ μεγαλώνυμον ἡμέτερον πατέρ', | Αἰθέρα σεμνότατον, βιοθρέμμονα πάντων· | τόν θ' ἱππονώμαν, ὃς ὑπερλάμπροις ἀκτῖσιν κατέχει | γῆς πέδον, μέγας ἐν θεοῖς | ἐν θνητοῖσί τε δαίμων. The antistrophé (595 ff.) invokes Apollon of Mt Kynthos, Artemis of Ephesos, Athena of the Akropolis, and Dionysos of Mt Parnassos—another quartet of deities likely to be interested in Clouds.

[5] Id. ib. 316 ff.

[6] Orph. h. Neph. 21 ΝΕΦΩΝ, θυμίαμα σμύρναν. 1 ff. ἠέριαι (so E. Abel for ἠέριοι) νεφέλαι, καρποτρόφοι, οὐρανόπλαγκτοι, | ὁμβροτόκοι, πνοιῇσιν (so G. Hermann for πνοιαῖσιν) ἐλαυνόμεναι κατὰ κόσμον, | βρονταῖαι, πυρόεσσαι, ἐρίβρομοι, ὑγροκέλευθοι (so Hermann for ὑδροκέλευθοι), | ἠέρος (so Hermann for ἀέρος) ἐν κόλπῳ πάταγον φρικώδε' (so Hermann for φρικώδη) ἔχουσαι, | πνεύμασιν ἀντίσπαστοι ἐπιδρομάδην παταγεῦσαι, | ὑμᾶς νῦν λίτομαι, δροσοείμονες, εὔπνοοι αὖραις, | πέμπειν καρποτρόφους ὄμβρους ἐπὶ μητέρα γαῖαν.

points of Orphic doctrine[1] and apt to recrudesce in popular practice[2], was naturally ridiculed as fatuous and futile[3]. But that was a reproach which it shared with the highest conception of the Hebrews[4]. Christianity itself has cherished, not only the recollection of 'a cloud that overshadowed them[5]' and 'a cloud' that 'received him out of their sight[6],' but also the anticipation of 'another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud[7],' and the final vision of 'a white cloud, and upon the cloud one...like unto the Son of man[8].'

[1] The Rhapsodic theogony spoke of the world-egg as 'the cloud' (Orph. frag. 60 Kern ap. Damask. quaest. de primis principiis 123 (i. 317, 2 f. Ruelle) quoted supra ii. 1024, where P. R. Schuster's cj. κελύφην for νεφέλην is clever, but improbable). The Justinian recension of the Orphic Διαθῆκαι (Orph. frag. 245 Kern ap. pseudo-Iust. Mart. de monarchia 2. 105 A—B (i. 116 Otto)=pseudo-Iust. Mart. cohortatio ad gentiles 15. 15 E (i. 50, 52 Otto)) has the following impressive passage: 13 ff. οὐδέ τις ἔσθ' ἕτερος χωρὶς μεγάλου βασιλῆος (so Clem. Al. strom. 5. 14 p. 416, 4 Stählin and most codd. of the cohortatio. μεγάλοιο ἄνακτος most codd. of the de monarchia and codd. C. E. of the cohortatio). | αὐτὸν δ' οὐχ ὁρόω· περὶ γὰρ νέφος ἐστήρικται. | πᾶσιν γὰρ θνητοῖς θνηταὶ κόραι εἰσὶν ἐν ὄσσοις, | ἀσθενέες δ' ἰδέειν Δία τὸν πάντων μεδέοντα. The Aristobulian recension of the work (Orph. frag. 247 Kern ap. Aristoboul. in Euseb. praep. ev. 13. 12. 5=the 'Theosophia Tubingensis' of Aristokritos (?) (see W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1924 ii. 2. 976) published by K. Buresch Klaros Leipzig 1889 p. 112 ff.) has line 20 αὐτὸν δ' οὐχ ὁρόω· περὶ γὰρ νέφος ἐστήρικται in a different context. Another passage of the Διαθῆκαι (Orph. frag. 248 a Kern ap. Clem. Al. strom. 5. 14 p. 411, 4 and 10 Stählin=Euseb. praep. ev. 13. 13. 52) invokes the supreme deity 6 ὃς κινεῖς ἀνέμους, νεφέλῃσι δὲ πάντα καλύπτεις, and again 12 σὸς χειμὼν ψυχραῖσιν ἐπερχόμενος νεφέλαισιν. The Δωδεκαετηρίδες (Orph. frag. 256 Kern) state that, when Iupiter is in Virgo, the year will bring pestilence etc. καὶ κεραυνοβόλοι νεφέλαι τὰ σπέρματα κατακαύσουσι (the MSS. read κεραυνοβόλαι and κατακαύσει. J. Heeg cj. ἠδὲ κεραυνοβόλοι νεφέλαι<κατὰ καρπὸν>ἔκαυσαν). The same poem elsewhere, in an imitation of Hes. o.d. 504 ff., says: πολλαὶ δ' οὐρανόθεν καὶ ἑπαρτέες ἐκ νεφελάων | τῆμος ἐπόρνυνται φηγοῖς καὶ δένδρεσιν ἄλλοις | οὔρεσί τε σκοπέλοις τε καὶ ἀνθρώποιν (Heinsius cj. ἀνθρώποις) ἐριθύμοις | πηγυλίδες καὶ ἔσονται ἀμειδέες (Orph. frag. 270 Kern ap. Tzetz. in Hes. o.d. 502).

[2] Tert. apol. 24 colat alius deum, alius Iovem, alius ad caelum manus supplices tendat, alius ad aram Fidei, alius, si hoc putatis, nubes numerat orans, alius lacunaria, alius suam animam deo suo voveat, alius hirci. Cp. ib. 40 caelum apud Capitolium quaeritis, nubila de laquearibus exspectatis.

[3] Hor. ars poet. 230 aut, dum vitat humum, nubes et inania captet, Pers. sat. 5. 7 grande locuturi nebulas Helicone legunto.

[4] Iuv. 14. 96 f. quidam sortiti metuentem sabbata patrem | nil praeter nubes et caeli numen adorant. J. Rendel Harris St. Paul and Greek Literature (Woodbrooke Essays, No. 7) Cambridge 1927 p. 17 f. would correct Col. 2. 23 ἐν ἐθελοθρησκείᾳ καὶ ταπεινοφροσύνῃ καὶ ἀφειδίᾳ σώματος: 'if we restore ἐν νεφελοθρησκείᾳ we shall have an expression capable of explanation from Aristophanes; the worship of angels is, like the new religion in the Greek comedy, a worship of the clouds.' Infra p. 432 n. 9. See further Ducange Gloss. med. et inf. Graec. i. 994 s.v. νεφομαντεία, who cites from Damask. v. Isid. ap. Phot. bibl. p. 340 b 13 ff. Bekker the queer tale of the cloud-seer Anthousa, of Aigai in Kilikia, who saw a cloud like a Goth swallowed up by a cloud like a lion and divined that Asper leader of the Goths would be slain by Leon.

[5] Mark 9. 7. [6] Acts 1. 9.

[7] Rev. 10. 1. Cp. Verg. Aen. 10. 633 f. (Iuno) caelo se protinus alto | misit agens hiemem nimbo succincta per auras.

[8] Rev. 14. 14.

For, after all, a cloud may symbolise mystery as well as mystification; and what began as a nimbus may end as a glory[1].

Nephele, the personified Cloud, figures in one or two Greek myths which deserve attention. Pherekydes of Athens (or Leros[2]), the earliest Attic prose-writer (floruit 454/3 B.C.), tells the tale of Kephalos and Prokris in the following form[3]:

Kephalos, the son of Deïoneus, married Prokris, the daughter of Erechtheus, and dwelt at Thorai[4]. Wishing to make trial of his wife, he went abroad—it is said—and left her for the space of eight years[5] while she was yet a bride. After that, he adorned and disguised himself and, coming to his house thus tricked out, persuaded Prokris to receive him and consort with him. Prokris, eyeing his adornment and seeing that Kephalos was a very handsome man, lay with him. Thereupon Kephalos revealed himself and took Prokris to task. However, he made it up with her, and sallied forth to the chase. As he did this repeatedly, Prokris suspected that he had intercourse with another woman. So she summoned the serving-man and asked if he knew aught of it. The thrall said he had seen Kephalos repair to the top of a certain mountain and often exclaim 'O Nephele[6], come to me!'—that was all he knew. Prokris on hearing it went to that mountain-top and hid herself. Then, when she heard him saying the same words, she ran towards him. Kephalos, seeing her, was seized with sudden madness and, on the spur of the moment, struck Prokris with the javelin in his hand and slew her. Then he sent for Erechtheus and gave her a costly burial.

Schwenn[7] in a recent discussion of the myth very justly observes that Nephele here must be a flesh-and-blood personification, not a mere amorphous vapour. Ovid[8] goes off on a wrong tack, when he

[1] The nimbus of Christian art has a long history of its own, on which see L. Stephani Nimbus und Strahlenkranz St Petersburg 1859 pp. 1—140 (extr. from the Mémoires de l'Académie des Sciences de St.-Pétersbourg. vi Série. Sciences politiques, histoire, philologie. ix. 361—500), E. Venables in Smith—Cheetham Dict. Chr. Ant. ii. 1398—1402, H. Mendelsohn Der Heiligenschein in der italienischen Malerei seit Giotto Berlin 1903 pp. 1—23 with figs., A. Krücke Der Nimbus und verwandte Attribute in der frühchristlichen Kunst Strassburg 1905 pp. 1—145 with 7 photographic pls (=Zur Kunstgeschichte des Auslandes Heft 35), G. Gietmann 'Nimbus' in The Catholic Encyclopedia New York 1911 xi. 80—83. Older monographs are Behmius De Nimbis Sanctorum (cited by Venables) and J. Nicolai Disquisitio de Nimbis antiquorum, Imaginibus Deorum, imperatorum olim, & nunc Christi, Apostolorum & Mariæ Capitibus adpictis (Jena) 1699 pp. 1—151.

[2] W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 454 f.

[3] Pherekyd. frag. 77 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 90 f. Müller)=frag. 34 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 71 Jacoby) ap. schol. M.V. Od. 11. 321, cp. Eustath. in Od. p. 1688, 20 ff.

[4] Schol. Od. 11. 321 has ἐν τῇ Θοριέων (sc. φυλῇ). F. G. Sturz cj. ἐν τῷ Θοριέων (sc. δήμῳ). C. Müller, after P. K. Buttmann, would read ἐν τῷ Θορικῷ (sc. δήμῳ). U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff, followed by F. Jacoby, prints ἐν τῇ Θορ<α>ιέων.

[5] A significant period, one 'great year' (supra i. 540 n. 1, ii. 240 ff.).

[6] Codd. M. V[2]. of schol. Od. 11. 321 read ὦ νεφέλα, which is accepted by F. Jacoby. Eustath. in Od. p. 1688, 27 has ὦ νεφέλη, and so P. K. Buttmann in schol. Od. 11. 321. C. Müller prints ὦ Νεφέλα.

[7] Schwenn in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 218.

[8] Ov. ars am. 3. 697 ff., met. 7. 811 ff.

Kratér in the British Museum : the death of Prokris.

See page 73 n. 5.

substitutes aura, the cool breeze beloved by the hunter. And Hyginus[1] makes confusion more confounded by importing Aurora from the myth of Heos. Schwenn, however, has not perceived that the story as a whole involves a modified mixture of two folk-tale motifs. J. G. von Hahn[2] long since pointed out that Prokris, who first succumbs to the trinkets of a stranger and later lives with him as his wife, illustrates one variety of weibliche Käuflichkeit. This has been crossed with the 'Melusine'-formula[3] of a mortal man, who is unfaithful to a more-than-mortal woman and is therefore deserted by her and punished for his offence. Such stories ultimately go back to a very primitive type of tale which, according to Sir James Frazer[4], has its roots in a totemic taboo. Be that as it may, it certainly seems probable that in the original version Nephele the cloud-goddess bestowed her favours upon Kephalos and was jealous of his relations to the mortal wife Prokris. Her death was his punishment—a scene graphically portrayed on a red-figured kratér with columnar handles now in the British Museum (pl. xii)[5].

Essentially similar is the myth of Athamas[6]. He too deserted the goddess Nephele for a mortal wife, and was punished by a drought for his desertion. Again the tale has come down to us with [1] Hyg. fab. 189.

[2] J. G. von Hahn Griechische und albanesische Märchen Leipzig 1864 i. 47 gives as his sixth formula: 'Eine Jungfrau giebt für Kostbarkeiten in dreimaliger Steigerung ihre Reize Preis und verliert dabei ihr Magdthum α) durch Ueberlistung, β) bewusster Weise, und muss sich mit dem Käufer vermählen.'

[3] J. G. von Hahn op. cit. i. 45 second formula: 'Der Mann fehlt, und die nicht zum Menschengeschlecht gehörende Frau verlässt ihn entweder: a) für immer, ohne dass er ihr zu folgen versucht. b) oder er sucht sie in ihrer fernen Heimath auf und verbindet sich mit ihr,' C. S. Burne The Handbook of Folklore London 1914 p. 344 no. 2, P. Saintyves Les contes de Perrault et les récits parallèles: leurs origines Paris 1923 pp. 420—427.

[4] Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Dying God pp. 129—131.

[5] Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 294 no. E 477, Inghirami Vas. fitt. iii. 18 ff. pl. 205, J. Millingen Ancient Unedited Monuments Series i London 1822 p. 35 ff. pl. 14, Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. lxix f. fig. 14, A. Rapp in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1103 fig. 3, G. Weicker Der Seelenvogel Leipzig 1902 p. 167 fig. 86, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 416 no. 7 (attributed to the painter of the Naples Hephaistos-kratér (Heydemann Vasensamml. Neapel p. 285 f. no. 2412)). My pl. xii is from a photograph by the Official Photographer. In the centre Prokris collapses on the mountain-side. She wears a short chitón, and attempts to pluck the unerring javelin from her bare breast. As her eyes close in death, a soul-bird escapes from her into the air. From the right advances her father Erechtheus, wearing himátion and wreath, one hand holding a long sceptre, the other outstretched in dismay. On the left stands Kephalos with chlamýs and pétasos. He raises his left hand to his forehead with a gesture of despair, and rests his right on a club, while he holds his hound Lailaps by a leash. No other representation of the scene is known.

[6] Supra i. 414 ff.

much admixture and amplification. A. H. Krappe[1] has analysed it, in my opinion successfully, and has shown that it combines, not only the old Greek belief in the king's responsibility for the crops and the old Greek custom of sacrificing him or his son in time of famine, but also a whole bunch of folk-tale motifs—the jealousy of the heavenly wife ('Melusine[2]'), the wicked step-mother ('Brüderchen und Schwesterchen[3]'), and the helpful animal ('Einäuglein, Zweiäuglein und Dreiäuglein[4]').

A curious modification of this union between a mortal man and the cloud-goddess may be detected in sundry other myths. It would seem that the ancient mating of man with goddess struck the later Greeks as blasphemous. They therefore said that such and such a hero had become enamoured of such and such a goddess, but that Zeus had substituted for her a phantom made out of cloud. Thus Endymion, in the Hesiodic poem entitled The Great Eoiai[5], was raised to heaven by Zeus and fell in love with Hera, but was deluded by a cloud-phantom and cast down to Hades[6]. Similarly, when Ixion paid court to Hera, Zeus, according to the usual version[7], or

[1] A. H. Krappe 'The Story of Phrixos and Modern Folklore' in Folk-Lore 1923 xxxiv. 141—147. Id. 'La légende d'Athamas et de Phrixos' in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1924 xxxvii. 381—389 discusses some remaining difficulties in this complex tale and proposes (ib. p. 385) to reconstitute its final form as follows: 'Athamas répudie Néphélè et épouse une femme mortelle, qui lui donne plusieurs enfants. Jalouse de sa rivale qu'elle hait, Néphélè provoque une famine, sachant que par ce moyen le fils de sa rivale sera immolé à l'autel. Pour sauver son enfant d'une mort terrible, la pauvre mère se suicide et devient une divinité bienveillante.'

[2] Supra p. 73 n. 3.

[3] A. Aarne Verzeichnis der Märchentypen (Communications edited for the Folklore Fellows by J. Bolte, K. Krohn, A. Olrik, C. W. v. Sydow. No. 3) Helsinki 1910 p. 19 f. no. 450, J. Bolte—G. Polívka Anmerkungen zu den Kinder- u. Hausmärchen der Brüder Grimm Leipzig 1913 i. 79 ff. no. 11.

[4] A. Aarne op. cit. p. 23 no. 511, J. Bolte—G. Polívka op. cit. Leipzig 1918 iii. 60 ff. no. 130.

[5] A. Rzach in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 1204 f., W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 123 f.

[6] Hes. frag. 160 Kinkel, 148 Rzach, ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. 4. 57 ἐν δὲ ταῖς μεγάλαις Ἠοίαις λέγεται τὸν Ἐνδυμίωνα ἀνενεχθῆναι ὑπὸ τοῦ Διὸς εἰς οὐρανόν. ἐρασθέντα δὲ Ἥρας εἰδώλῳ παραλογισθῆναι [τὸν ἔρωτα (om. H. Keil)]] νεφέλης καὶ ἐκβληθέντα κατελθεῖν εἰς Ἅιδου = Eudok. viol. 344.

[7] P. Weizsäcker in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 766 ff., R. Wagner ib. iii. 180 f. The principal sources are: Pind. Pyth. 2. 25 ff. εὐμενέσσι γὰρ παρὰ Κρονίδαις | γλυκὺν ἐλὼν βίοτον, μακρὸν οὐχ ὑπέμεινεν ὄλβον, μαινομέναις φρασὶν | Ἥρας ὅτ' ἐράσσατο, τὰν Διὸς εὐναὶ λάχον | πολυγαθέες· ἀλλά νιν ὕβρις εἰς ἀνάταν ὑπεράφανον | ὤρσεν, 36 ff. ἐπεὶ νεφέλᾳ παρελέξατο, | ψεῦδος γλυκὺ μεθέπων, ἄϊδρις ἀνήρ· | εἶδος γὰρ ὑπεροχωτάτᾳ πρέπεν οὐρανιᾶν (so A. Boeckh, C. A. M. Fennell, Sir J. E. Sandys with codd. D. E. cett. T. Bergk, followed by B. L. Gildersleeve and W. Christ, cj. Οὐρανιδᾶν. T. Mommsen, followed by O. Schröder, reads Οὐρανίδα, cp. schol. vet. ad loc. τοῦ οὐρανίου Κρόνου) | θυγατέρι Κρόνου· ἄντε δόλον αὐτῷ θέσαν | Ζηνὸς παλάμαι, καλὸν πῆμα. κ.τ.λ., schol. Ap. Rhod. 3. 62 ἐλεήσας οὖν ὁ Ζεὺς

Hera herself, according to some[1], fashioned a cloud-figure, by whom Ixion became the father of Kentauros[2].

An instructive case is that of the hero[3] Iasion, who lay with ἀγνίζει αὐτόν· καὶ ἀγνισθεὶς ἡράσθη τῆς Ἥρας. ὁ δὲ Ζεὺς νεφέλην ὁμοιώσας Ἥρᾳ παρακοιμίζει αὐτῷ, Diod. 4. 69 τέλος δ' ὑπὸ τοῦ Διὸς κατὰ τοὺς μύθους ἀγνισθείς, ἡράσθη μὲν τῆς Ἥρας καὶ κατετόλμησεν ὑπὲρ συνουσίας λόγους ποιεῖσθαι. ἔπειτα τὸν μὲν Δία εἴδωλον ποιήσαντα τῆς Ἥρας νεφέλην ἐξαποστεῖλαι, τὸν δὲ Ἰξίονα τῇ νεφέλῃ μιγέντα γεννῆσαι τοὺς ὀνομαζομένους Κενταύρους ἀνθρωποφυεῖς, ὃ τινὲς δὲ λέγουσι τοὺς ἐκ Νεφέλης καὶ Ἰξίονος γεννηθέντας Κενταύρους πρώτους ἱππεύειν ἐπιχειρήσαντας Ἱπποκενταύρους ὠνομάσθαι κ.τ.λ., Loukian. dial. deor. 6. 4 (Zeus to Hera) εἴδωλον ἐκ νεφέλης πλασάμενοι αὐτῇ σοι ὅμοιον ... παρακατακλίνωμεν αὐτῷ φέροντες κ.τ.λ. with schol. ad loc. (i. 216 T. Hemsterhuys—J. F. Reitz) οὗτος δὲ ἀκόλαστος ὢν ἠράσθη Ἥρας, ἢ ἀνήγγειλε τῷ Διΐ. ὁ < δὲ (ins. M. du Soul) > δοκιμάζων αὐτὸν ἀπείκασε νεφέλην τῇ Ἥρᾳ, ᾗ μίγνυται Ἰξίων, καὶ ποιεῖ παῖδα τὰ μὲν ἀνθρώπου ἔχοντα τὰ δὲ ἵππου, ἀφ' οὗ Ἱπποκένταυροι, schol. V. Od. 21. 303 Ἰξίων ὁ Διὸς παῖς ... διὰ τῆς ἐμφύτου κακίας ἐπείραζε τὸν τῆς Ἥρας γάμον. ὑποπτεύσασα δὲ ἡ θεὸς ἀνήγεγκε τῷ Διὶ τὴν Ἰξίονος λύσσαν. ὁ δὲ ἐνθυμούμενος ζήλῳ πάλιν τοῦτο ταύτην δρᾶν διαβάλλουσαν τοὺς ἐξ αὐτοῦ γεγενημένους, ἓκ τινος ὄμως ἐπιτεχνήσεως τῆς Ἰξίονος ἐπειρᾶτο γνώμης. σκοπῶν δὲ εὗρε τὸ ἀληθές. νεφέλην γὰρ Ἥρᾳ παρεικάσας μόνην ἐν τῷ θαλάμῳ τοῦ Ἰξίονος κατέλιπεν, ὁ δὲ ὡς Ἥραν ἐβιάσατο ... γίνεται δὲ ἐκ τῆς νεφέλης παῖς Ἰξίονος διφυὴς τὰ μὲν κατώτερα μέρη τῆς μητρὸς ἔχων· αἱ γὰρ νεφέλαι ἵπποις ἐοίκασι· τὰ δὲ ἀνώτερα μέρη ἀπὸ τοῦ ὀμφαλοῦ μέχρι τῆς κεφαλῆς τοῦ πατρὸς Ἰξίονος. κ.τ.λ.

[1] Hyg. fab. 62 Iuno Iovis iussu nubem supposuit, quam Ixion Iunonis simulac[h]run esse credidit. ex ea nati sunt Centauri, Myth. Vat. 1. 162 Centauri autem Ixionis et nubis filii sunt; quae nubes ipsi a Iunone in sui forma est opposita, 2. 106 Ixion, Phlegyae filius, ... Iunonem de stupro interpellare ausus est. quae de audacia eius conquesta Iovi, suadente ipso, pro se nubem ei opposuit, cum qua Ixion concubuit; unde geniti sunt Centauri, 3. 4. 6 Ixion Iunonis coniugium petiit; illa nubem in speciem suam ornavit, cum qua Ixion coiens Centauros genuit, schol. C. Eur. Phoen. 1185 ὁ Ἰξίων ... ὕβριστε τὴν τοῦ Διὸς φιλίαν. ἐπεθύμησε γὰρ τῆς Ἥρας καὶ λόγους προσήγαγεν αὐτῇ· ἡ δὲ θεὰ νεφέλην αὐτῷ παρεκόλμισεν εἰς ἑαυτὴν σχηματίζουσα, ᾗ δὴ συγκαθευδήσας ὁ Ἰξίων ἐπεκαυχήσατο τῇ συνουσίᾳ (but other scholia on the same line give the more usual account: schol. A. C. M. δς ἀκολασταίνων ἰδὼν τὴν Ἥραν ἠράσθη αὐτῆς· μὴ φέρουσα δὲ ἡ Ἥρα τὴν μανίαν αὐτοῦ φησι τῷ Διΐ· ἐφ' ᾧ ἀγανακτήσας ὁ Ζεύς, βουλόμενός τε γνῶναι (so cod. M. δοκιμάσαι codd. A. C.) εἴ γε ἀληθές ἐστιν, ἀπείκασε τῇ Ἥρᾳ νεφέλην, ἣν ἰδὼν ὁ Ἰξίων, νομίσας τὴν Ἥραν εἶναι, μίγνυται αὐτῇ καὶ ποιεῖ παῖδα διφυῆ, τὰ μὲν ἀνθρώπου ἔχοντα τὰ δὲ ἵππου, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ Κένταυροι γεγόνασιν, schol. Gu. Bar. οὗτος ὁ Ἰξίων ... ἐφωράθη τῆς Ἥρας ἐρῶν. θέλων οὖν ὁ Ζεὺς γνῶναι τὸν ἔρωτα νεφέλην παρεικάζει τῇ Ἥρᾳ, εἰς ἣν ὁρμήσας ὁ Ἰξίων δῆλον ἐποίησε τῷ Διὶ τὸν ἔρωτα ... ἐκ δὲ τῆς πρὸς τὴν νεφέλην τοῦ Ἰξίονος μίξεως γέγονεν ὁ Ἱπποκένταυρος, κεφαλὴν μὲν καὶ στῆθος καὶ χεῖρας ἀνθρώπου ἔχων, τὸ δὲ λοιπὸν σῶμα ἵππου, κ.τ.λ.), schol. Loukian. pisc. 12 p. 132, 23 ff. Rabe φασὶ γὰρ τὸν Ἰξίονα τῆς Ἥρας ἐρασθῆναι, ἐρασθέντι δὲ τὸν Ἥραν χαριζομένην αὐτῷ νεφέλην εἰς ἑαυτὴν ἀπεικάσασαν ἐᾶν Ἰξίονι χρῆσθαι ὡς ἑαυτῇ. ἀφ' οὗ καὶ οἱ Κένταυροι ἀρχὴν τῆς γενέσεως ἔσχον. καὶ τὸ σύμπτωμα εἰς ὄνομα ἔλαβον· παρὰ γὰρ τὸ τὴν αὖραν κεντεῖν τὸν Ἰξίονα ἐπὶ τῇ γενέσει Κένταυρος τὸ ἀπὸ τούτου ἐκλήθη—an effort of etymological imagination which it would be hard to beat!

But it is a serious mistake to infer from such passages that Hera was a rain- or cloud-goddess (Wide Lakon. Kulte p. 26 'Eine alte Vorstellung von der Hera als Regen- bez. Wolkengöttin birgt sich in dem Mythos von Hera-Nephele und Ixion').

[2] Cp. Aristoph. nub. 346 νεφέλην Κενταύρῳ ὁμοίαν, supra p. 69 n. 3.

[3] There is not the least reason for supposing that Iasion was a heroïsed sky-god (Gilbert Gr. Götterl. p. 337 n. 1 'Die Verbindung der Dem. mit Jasion ... stellt diese Ehe der Erde mit dem Himmelsgotte dar, da beide ... hier heroisirt erscheinen,' ib. p. 473 n. 1 'ich halte Ἰασίων für einen heroisirten Poseidon Ἰατρός') or a form of Zeus (E. Thraemer Pergamos 1888 p. 102 n. 2 'e 125 wird Jasion, der Buhle der Demeter, von Zeus aus

Demeter on a thrice-ploughed field in Crete, became by her the father of the infant Ploutos, and was thunder-struck by Zeus (fig. 22)[1] for his presumption[2]. This ancient myth, though it had the sanction Eifersucht getödtet. Der Dichter des ε ahnt nicht, dass Jasion mit Zeus wesensgleich ist').

Fig. 22.

[1] G. Kieseritzky 'Iasios' in the Strena Helbigiana Lipsiae 1900 pp. 160—163 with fig. (= my fig. 22) published a fragmentary red-figured kratér of late style, from Chersonesos Taurike, now in the Hermitage at Petrograd, which appears to represent the scene. A young man (ΙΑΣΣΟΣ) in oriental garb flings up both arms with a gesture of despair and looks back in terror towards the left, where just beyond a neighbouring hill Nike is seen driving the chariot of Zeus (?). On the right sits a bearded god holding a long staff (trident? sceptre??). Beside him was a goddess, whose arm with its arm-band is visible leaning on his left shoulder. They are probably Poseidon and Amphitrite. Beneath the necks of the horses appears the corner of some squared structure. Above it the letters ...ΣΟΣ suggest comparison with the ΧΡΥΣΟΣ and ΠΛΟΤΟΣ, who flank the chariot of ΝΙΚΗ on a gilded oinochóe from Athens, now at Berlin (Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin ii. 761 f. no. 2661, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 307 ff. pl. 97, O. Jahn Ueber bemalte Vasen mit Goldschmuck Leipzig 1865 p. 13 no. 23, T. Eisele in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 2582, J. Toutain in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iv. 518).

On the variants Ἰασίων, Ἰάσων, Ἰάσιος, Ἴασος, see W. Gundel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 752 f. Ἴασσος is not elsewhere attested; but cp. Ἰασσός for Ἰασός, the Carian town (L. Bürchner ib. ix. 785 f.). The suffix -σος or -σσος seems to be characteristic of prehistoric Greece (P. Kretschmer Einleitung in die Geschichte der griechischen Sprache Göttingen 1896 p. 401, G. Glotz La civilisation égéenne Paris 1923 p. 440, A. Debrunner in Ebert Reallex. iv. 2. 520 f., J. B. Haley in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1928 xxxii. 144 (full list and map), M. P. Nilsson Homer and Mycenae London 1933 p. 64 ff. (list and map)).

[2] By far the fullest and best account of the myth is that given by W. Gundel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 752—758.

of both Homer[1] and Hesiod[2], and was almost certainly based on actual agrarian usage[3], nevertheless could not escape the charge of derogating from the dignity of the goddess and was therefore modified by the later Greeks in one of two directions. Either, as the logographer Hellanikos[4], the historian Idomeneus[5], and the geographer who passes under the name of Skymnos[6] agree, the hero had outraged a statue (ágalma) of Demeter; or, as the rhetorical mythographer Konon[7] preferred to put it, the hero had consorted with a mere phantom (phásma) of the goddess.

Konon's expedient was in all probability suggested by Stesichoros' solution of a similar problem. Having penned an ode about Helene on the traditional Homeric lines he, like Homer, had lost his eyesight. But, unlike Homer, he recovered it when, realising the nature of his offence, he wrote his famous palinode:

> The tale's untrue!
> Thou didst not go on board the well-planked ships,
> Nor ever camest to the towers of Troy[8].

[1] Od. 5. 125 ff. ὣς δ' ὁπότ' Ἰασίωνι ἐυπλόκαμος Δημήτηρ, | ᾧ θυμῷ εἴξασα, μίγη φιλότητι καὶ εὐνῇ | νειῷ ἔνι τριπόλῳ· οὐδὲ δὴν ἦεν ἄπυστος | Ζεύς, ὅς μιν κατέπεφνε βαλὼν ἀργῆτι κεραυνῷ.

[2] Hes. theog. 969 ff. Δημήτηρ μὲν Πλοῦτον ἐγείνατο δῖα θεάων, | Ἰασίων' ἥρωι μιγεῖσ' ἐρατῇ φιλότητι | νειῷ ἔνι τριπόλῳ, Κρήτης ἐν πίονι δήμῳ, | κ.τ.λ.

[3] Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Spirits of Corn and Wild i. 208 f. compares 'the West Prussian custom of the mock birth of a child on the harvest-field [ib. p. 150 f.]. In this Prussian custom the pretended mother represents the Corn-mother (Żytniamatka); the pretended child represents the Corn-baby, and the whole ceremony is a charm to ensure a crop next year.' See also Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. p. 346.

[4] Hellanik. frag. 129 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 63 Müller) = frag. 23 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 112 f. Jacoby) ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. i. 916 ἐγέννησε δὲ (sc. Ἠλεκτρυώνη) τρεῖς παῖδας, Δάρδανον τὸν εἰς Τροίαν κατοικήσαντα, ὃν καὶ Πολυάρχη φασὶ λέγεσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν ἐγχωρίων, καὶ Ἑτεῖωνα, ὃν Ἰασίωνα ὀνομάζουσι, καὶ φασὶ κεραυνωθῆναι αὐτὸν ὑβρίζοντα ἄγαλμα τῆς Δήμητρος. τρίτην δὲ ἔσχεν Ἁρμονίαν, ἣν ἠγάγετο Κάδμος· καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς μητρὸς αὐτῆς Ἠλεκτρίδας πύλας τῆς Θήβης ὠνομάσθαι ἱστορεῖ Ἑλλάνικος ἐν πρώτῳ Τρωικῶν καὶ Ἰδομενεὺς [ἐν πρώτῳ Τρωικῶν (om. K. H. F. Sintenis)]. Cp. Hellanik. frag. 58 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 53 Müller) = frag. 135 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 139 Jacoby) ap. schol. Od. 5. 125 οὗτος (sc. ὁ Ἰασίων) Κρὴς τὸ γένος, Κατρέος (so G. Kramer for κρατ(ρ)έος) καὶ Φρονίας υἱός. ὡς δὲ Ἑλλάνικος, Ἠλέκτρας καὶ Διὸς υἱός. παρ' ᾧ μόνῳ μετὰ τὸν κατακλυσμὸν εὑρέθη σπέρματα. οὗ καὶ Δήμητρος ὁ Πλοῦτος κατὰ Ἡσίοδον (supra n. 2).

[5] Idom. frag. 18 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 494 Müller) ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. i. 916 (cited supra n. 4). F. Jacoby in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ix. 910 says: 'Danach gehört er frühestens ins 4. Jhdt., wahrscheinlicher erst in hellenistische Zeit.'

[6] Skymn. Chi. per. 681 ff. (Geogr. Gr. min. i. 223 Müller) πρότερον γὰρ εἶναί φασιν ἐν ταύτῃ (sc. τῇ Σαμοθρᾴκῃ) τινὲς | τοὺς Τρῶας, Ἠλέκτρας τεκούσης Δάρδανον | τῆς λεγομένης Ἄτλαντος Ἰασιωνά τε, | ὧν τὸν μὲν Ἰασίωνα δυσσέβημά τι | πρᾶξαι περὶ Δήμητρος λέγουσ' ἄγαλμα καὶ | πληγῆ κεραυνωθέντα δαιμονίῳ θανεῖν, | τὸν Δάρδανον δὲ κ.τ.λ. F. Gisinger in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii A. 674 f. dates this pseudepigraphic poem c. 100 B.C.

[7] Konon narr. 21, writing between 36 B.C. and 17 A.D. (E. Martini in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 1335), says: Δάρδανος καὶ Ἰάσων παῖδες ἦσαν Διὸς ἐξ Ἠλέκτρας

Stesichoros now asserted that Greeks and Trojans fought one another for the sake of a mere wraith (eidolon), in ignorance of the genuine Helene[1]. What, in his reconstruction, the genuine Helene was doing all the time, we do not know: perhaps she never left Sparta[2]. Herodotos[3] gives a different turn to the story. According to him, Helene was stolen from Menelaos at Sparta by Alexandros, driven by a storm out of the Aegean to Egypt, and there taken from her paramour by Proteus and kept at Memphis for the coming of her lawful husband. Euripides in his Helene combines the two versions. Like Stesichoros, he preserves the innocence of Helene by making the truant a wraith (eidolon), fashioned of ouranós or cloud or aithér and substituted by Hera for the faithful wife[4]. Like Herodotos, he sends the real Helene to Egypt, whither she is conducted by Hermes τῆς Ἀτλαντίδος, καὶ ᾠκουν Σαμοθράκην τὴν νῆσον. ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν Ἰάσων φάσμα Δήμητρος αἰσχῦναι βουληθεὶς ἐκεραυνώθη, Δάρδανος δὲ κ.τ.λ.

[8] Stes. frag. 32 Bergk[4], 11 Diehl, 18 Edmonds ap. Plat. Phaedr. 243 A—B. The Platonic passage is expounded on allegorical lines by the neo-Platonist Hermeias of Alexandreia in Plat. Phaedr. p. 75 ff. P. Couvreur.

[1] Plat. rep. 586 C ὥσπερ τὸ τῆς Ἑλένης εἴδωλον ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν Τροίᾳ Στησίχορός φησι γενέσθαι περιμάχητον ἀγνοίᾳ τοῦ ἀληθοῦς.

[2] The passages relating to Stesichoros' παλινῳδία are collected and discussed by T. Bergk in his note on frag. 32 (Poet. lyr. Gr. iii. 217—219 Bergk[4]). To his bibliography add R. Hirzel 'Die Homonymie der griechischen Götter nach der Lehre antiker Theologen' in the Ber. sächs. Gesellsch. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1896 xlviii. 290 f. (the resolution of a self-contradictory mythical figure into self and shade goes back to Homer, cp. Od. 11. 601 ff. for a similar treatment of the ἥρως θεός (Pind. Nem. 3. 22)), W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 212 ('Den Helenastoff hat er zuerst in der Ἑλένα auf Grund der rein ästhetischen, religiös indifferenten homerischen Vorlage, dann in der Παλινῳδία mit Rücksicht auf die Überlieferung und den Glauben der Dorer dargestellt, denen Helena eine Kultgöttin war').

That the genuine Helene never left Sparta may be inferred from Dion Chrys. or. 11 p. 323 Reiske καὶ τὸν μὲν Στησίχορον ἐν τῇ ὕστερον ᾠδῇ λέγειν ὅτι τὸ παράπαν οὐδὲ πλεύσειεν ἡ Ἑλένη οὐδαμόσε· ἄλλοι δέ τινες (sc. Herodotos) ὡς ἁρπασθείη μὲν Ἑλένη ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἀλεξάνδρου, δεῦρο δὲ παρ' ἡμᾶς εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἀφίκοιτο. The schol. Aristeid. iii. 150 Dindorf (A. C. Στησίχορος ἐν τῇ ποιήσει λέγει ὡς ἡρπακὼς τὴν Ἑλένην Ἀλέξανδρος καὶ διὰ τῆς Φάρου ἐρχόμενος ἀφῃρέθη μὲν ταύτην παρὰ Πρωτέως, ἔλαβε δὲ παρ' αὐτοῦ (παρ' αὐτοῦ om. C.) ἐν πίνακι τὸ εἴδωλον αὐτῆς γεγραμμένον, ἵνα ὁρῶν παραμυθοῖτο τὸν αὐτοῦ ἔρωτα. B. D. εἰς Στησίχορον αἰνίττεται· λέγει γὰρ ἐκεῖνος ὅτι ἑλθὼν ὁ Ἀλέξανδρος ἐπὶ ταύτης τῆς νήσου, τῆς Φάρου, ἁφῃρέθη παρὰ τοῦ Πρωτέως τὴν Ἑλένην καὶ εἴδωλον αὐτῆς ἐδέξατο· κ.τ.λ.) and Eudok. viol. 43=753 (Στησίχορος δέ φησιν ὅτι, διερχομένου Ἀλεξάνδρου δι' Αἰγύπτου, ὁ Πρωτεὺς Ἑλένην ἀφελόμενος εἴδωλον Ἑλένης αὐτῷ ἔδωκε, καὶ οὕτως ἐπλευσεν εἰς Τροίαν) are attributing to Stesichoros the Herodotean version plus sundry rationalising additions of their own.

[3] Hdt. 2. 112—115.

[4] Eur. Hel. 31 ff. (ΕΛ.) Ἥρα δὲ μεμφθεῖσ' οὔνεκ' οὐ νικᾷ θεὰς | ἐξηνέμωσε τἄμ' Ἀλεξάνδρῳ λέχη, | δίδωσι δ' οὐκ ἔμ', ἀλλ' ὁμοιώσασ' ἐμοὶ | εἴδωλον ἔμπνουν οὐρανοῦ ξυνθεῖσ' ἄπο (so J. J. Reiske for ὕπο codd.), | Πριάμου τυράννῳ παιδί, 582 ff. ΕΛ. οὐκ ἦλθον ἐς γῆν Τρῳάδ', ἀλλ' εἴδωλον ἦν. | ΜΕ. καὶ τίς βλέποντα σώματ' ἐξεργάζεται; | ΕΛ. αἰθήρ, θθεν σὺ θεοπόνητ' ἔχεις λέχη. | ΜΕ. τίνος πλάσαντος θεῶν; ἄελπτα γὰρ λέγεις. | ΕΛ. Ἥρας (so Scaliger for ἥρα codd.) διάλλαγμ', ὡς Πάρις με μὴ λάβοι, 1135 f. νεφέλαν ἐπὶ ναυσίν ἄγων, | εἴδωλον ἱρὸν (so K. W. Dindorf for ἱερὸν codd.) Ἥρας, 1218 f. ΘΕ. ποῦ δὴ τὸ πεμφθὲν ἀντὶ σοῦ Τροίᾳ at the command of Zeus[1]. Menelaos, escorting the phantom home from Troy, arrives in Egypt and is there confronted with the true Helene. He is desperately puzzled. But, just as he begins to think himself either a bedlamite or a bigamist, the misty Helene evaporates[2]—a sufficiently whimsical situation.

If Euripides' Hera outwitted Paris by making a phantom Helene of aithér, Euripides' Zeus outwitted Hera by means of a similar trick—witness a curious passage of the Bacchae[3] in which Teiresias attempts to explain the story of Dionysos being sewn up in the thigh of Zeus as due to a verbal confusion of hómeros, 'hostage,' with merós, 'thigh':

> And dost deride the tale that he was sewn
> I' the thigh of Zeus? I'll tell it all aright.
> When Zeus had caught him from the lightning-fire
> And borne him, babe divine, to Olympos' height,
> Hera was fain to cast him forth from heaven.
> But Zeus, a very god, met plot with plot:
> Breaking a portion of the aithér off,
> Which rings the earth, he made that same a hostage
> Against the strifes of Hera and sent out
> Dionysos elsewhere[4]. Thus in course of time
> Man said that he was sewn i' the thigh of Zeus—
> Changing the word, since once he served as hostage
> To Hera, god to goddess,—such their tale.

κακόν; | ΕΛ. νεφέλης λέγεις ἄγαλμ'; ἐς αἰθέρ' οἴχεται. Cp. Eur. El. 1282 f. Ζεὺς δ', ὡς ἔρις γένοιτο καὶ φόνος βροτῶν, | εἴδωλον Ἑλένης ἐξέπεμψ' ἐς (so A. Nauck for εἰς codd.) Ἴλιον.

On the plot see further A. von Premerstein 'Ueber den Mythos in Euripides' Helene' in Philologus 1896 lv. 634—653, A. C. Pearson in his edition of the play (Cambridge 1903) p. x ff., A. W. Verrall Essays on four Plays of Euripides Cambridge 1905 pp. 43—133 ('Euripides' Apology. (Helen.)'), H. Steiger 'Wie entstand die Helena des Euripides?' in Philologus 1908 lxvii. 202—237, V. Pisani 'Elena e l' εἴδωλον' in the Rivista di Filologia 1928 vi. 476—499 (summarised in Class. Quart. 1929 xxiii. 215).

[1] Eur. Hel. 44 ff. λαβὼν δέ μ' Ἑρμῆς ἐν πτυχαῖσιν αἰθέρος | νεφέλῃ καλύψας, οὐ γὰρ ἠμέλησέ μου | Ζεύς, τόνδ' ἐς οἶκον Πρωτέως ἱδρύσατο, | κ.τ.λ.

[2] Eur. Hel. 557 ff. The wraith's disappearance is reported ib. 605 f. ΑΓ. βέβηκεν ἄλοχος σὴ πρὸς αἰθέρος πτύχας | ἀρθεῖσ' ἄφαντος· οὐρανῷ δὲ κρύπτεται, | κ.τ.λ., 612 ff. (the wraith speaking) ἐγὼ δ' ἐπειδὴ χρόνον ἔμεινʼ ὅσον μ' ἐχρῆν, | τὸ μόρσιμον σώσασα, πάλιν (so A. Nauck for πατέρ' codd.) εἰς οὐρανὸν | ἄπειμι. Cp. Lyk. Al. 822 φάσμα πτηνόν, εἰς αἴθραν φυγόν. Hence later Helene appears ἐν αἰθέρος πτυχαῖς (Eur. Or. 1631, 1636).

[3] Eur. Bacch. 286 ff. καὶ καταγελᾷς νιν, ὡς ἐνερράφη Διὸς | μηρῷ; διδάξω σ' ὡς καλῶς ἔχει τόδε. | ἐπεί νιν ἥρπασ' ἐκ πυρὸς κεραυνίου | Ζεύς, εἰς δ' Ὄλυμπον βρέφος ἀνήγαγεν θεόν, | Ἥρα νιν ἤθελ' ἐκβαλεῖν ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ· | Ζεὺς δ' ἀντεμηχανήσαθ' οἷα δὴ θεός, | ῥήξας μέρος τι τοῦ χθόν' ἐγκυκλουμένου | αἰθέρος, ἔθηκε τόνδ' ὄμηρον, ἐκδιδοὺς | Διόνυσον, Ἥρας νεικέων· χρόνῳ δέ νιν | βροτοὶ ῥαφῆναί (so J. Pierson, followed by F. A. Paley, for τραφῆναί codd.) φασιν ἐν μηρῷ Διός, | ὄνομα μεταστήσαντες, ὅτι θεᾷ θεὸς | Ἥρᾳ ποθ' ὁμήρευσε, συνθέντες λόγον with the notes of Sir J. E. Sandys ad loc.

[4] Cp. supra i. 707 n. 2 fig. 524 a vase now attributed to 'the Syleus Painter' (c. 480 B.C.) (Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 438 no. 9, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 162 no. 23).

The real explanation of the story is of course very different from the sophisms of Teiresias. The pretended birth from the thigh of Zeus[1], which from the sixth, if not the seventh, century onwards is attested by vases[2], frescoes[3], reliefs[4], and other works of art[5],

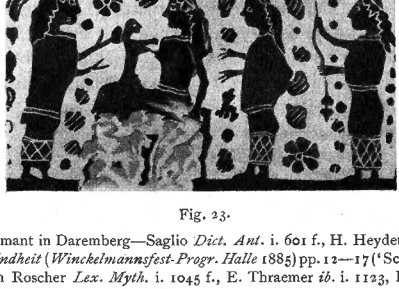

Fig. 23.

[1] F. Lenormant in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 601 f., H. Heydemann Dionysos' Geburt und Kindheit (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Halle 1885) pp. 12—17 ('Schenkelgeburt'), F. A. Voigt in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1045 f., E. Thraemer ib. i. 1123, Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 661 f., Farnell Cults of Gk. States v. 110.

I see no probability in the suggestion that Hesych. s.v. ἄκαρα· τὰ σκέλη· Κρῆτες and et. mag. p. 45, 16 f. ἄκαρα· τὰ σκέλη Κρῆτες. Ἄκαρα· πόλις τῆς Ἀσίας, ἡ νῦν καλουμένη Νύσσα. κ.τ.λ. (Nysa in Lydia, near which is Acharaka : supra i. 503) imply a localised myth of the birth of Dionysos from the leg of Zeus.

[2] (1) R. Rochette Choix de peintures de Pompéi Paris 1848—1856 p. 76 ff., with coloured design on p. 73 (part of which = my fig. 23), published a yellow-ground Corinthian pyxis of c. 600 B.C., found in a tomb between Corinth and Sikyon, on which he thought to recognise the earliest extant representation of Zeus bearing Dionysos from his thigh. This view, accepted by F. Lenormant loc. cit. i. 602 and by E. Thraemer loc. cit. i. 1123, was called in question by H. Heydemann op. cit. p. 4 ('die altkorinthische Vase mit einfachen Genrescenen'). E. Wilisch Die altkorinthische Thonindustrie Leipzig 1892 p. 49 f. apparently reverts to R. Rochette's explanation (cp. ib. pp. 62 '"Bakchusgeburt",' 63 'Bakchusgeburt,' 97 n. 353 'Bacchusgeburt,' 143 'die sogenannte Bakchusgeburt'). The vase is now in the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris (P. Milliet—A. Giraudon Vases peints du Cabinet des Médailles & Antiques (Bibliothèque Nationale) Paris 1891 i. pl. 10 IIe Classe, IVe Série, E, De Ridder Cat. Vases de la Bibl. Nat. i. 42 ff. no. 94 'Scène d'enfantement (?)' etc.). The hair and the girdle of the central figure prove it to be female. Unless, therefore, we are prepared to hold that Zeus in labour was represented as a woman, this cannot be he. To left and right of the seated woman are the Eileithyiai. Another female on the right holds a distaff and spindle, less probably a branch of ivy (?): Klotho?

(2) A black-figured amphora from S. Maria di Capua, likewise in the Bibliothèque Nationale (no. 219), shows Dionysos (ΔΙΟΣΦΟΣ = Διὸς φώς) as a naked boy, with two torches, standing on the lap of a seated Zeus (supra ii. 273 with fig. 177, infra § 9 (h) ii (θ) (4)).

(3) A red-figured lékythos at Boston (no. 95. 39) is described and illustrated by J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 134 ff. fig. 83 (= my fig. 24): 'Zeus, naked, very tall, his long hair and beard curiously neat, is sitting out of doors on a stone, which is covered by his clothes, and carefully easing the small god out of his thigh: his trusted Hermes stands beside him, watching, and holding his master's sceptre.' The vase is referred by the same authority to 'the

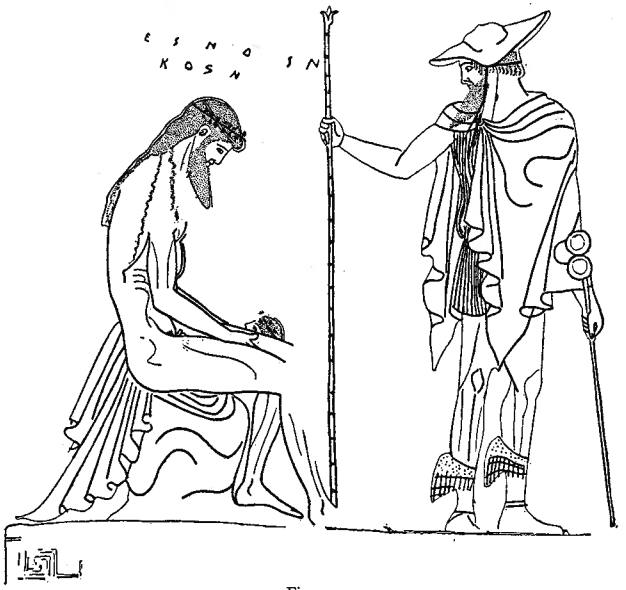

Fig. 24.

Fig. 25.

Alkimachos painter' of the late archaic period (Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 18 no. 2, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 298 no. 25).

(4) A south-Italian vase, now lost, but seen by A. L. Millin at Naples in private possession ('Vaso che si trova in casa del S^re^ d. Genn. Patierno, restauratore, alla salita de' Reggj Studj, n. 63: altezza, palmi 2½; diametro, 1 palmo, 3½ oncie') and drawn for him (drawing extant in the Cabinet des Estampes of the Bibliothèque Nationale), is described by R. Rochette Choix de peintures de Pompéi Paris 1848—1856 p. 81 with n. 4, recorded by L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1861 p. 13, and published by F. Lenormant in the Gaz. Arch. 1880 vi. 72—74 with two figs. (of which the first = my fig. 25). In the upper register is Zeus, seated on a throne with a footstool. He wears a himátion (scaled aigís?) and a bay-wreath, and holds a thunderbolt in his right hand, an eagle-tipped sceptre in his left. From his right thigh emerges a diminutive Dionysos. The boy stretches out his arms to Eileithyia, who bends towards him, holding in readiness a cloth or garment. Behind Zeus stand a Bacchant (thýrsos) and a Maenad (panther-skin, torch (?))—hardly Apollon and Artemis. In the lower register, on rocky ground, is Athena (Gorgóneion, helmet (?), shield, spear) conversing with two Maenads (thýrsos, torch)—hardly Demeter and Hekate. Athena was perhaps made out of a third Maenad (timbrel (?), thýrsos). The reverse of the same vase depicts the madness of Lykourgos, who brandishes a club (?) in the midst of four Satyrs. Both designs have been copied 'par une main singulièrement maladroite et inexpérimentée'.

(5) A volute-kratér of c. 415 B.C. from Caelia (Ceglie), now at Taranto, fully published in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1934 liv. 175 ff. pls. 8 and 9 by A. D. Trendall, to whose kindness I owe my pl. xiii.

(6) A red-figured fragment at Bonn (inv. no. 1216. 19) (Trendall loc. cit. fig. 1 = my pl. xiii, 3).

[3] Plin. nat. hist. 35. 140 Ctesilochus, Apellis discipulus (but cp. Souid. s.v. 'Απελλῆς,...ἀδελφὸς Κτησιόχου, καὶ αὐτοῦ ζωγράφου), petulanti pictura innotuit, Iove Liberum parturiente depicto mitrato et muliebriter ingemescente inter obstetricia dearum. H. Heydemann Dionysos' Geburt und Kindheit (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Halle 1885) p. 5 f. regards this curious effort as 'ein humoristisches oder vielmehr parodisches Bild' and would date it c. 300 B.C. See also Miss E. Sellers (Mrs A. Strong) on Plin. loc. cit.

The precise part played by Zeus in Philostratos' picture of Semele (supra ii. 28, 828) is not clear (Philostr. mai. imagg. 1. 14. 2 f. πυρὸς νεφέλη περισχοῦσα τὰς Θήβας εἰς τὴν τοῦ Κάδμου στέγην ῥήγνυται κωμάσαντος ἐπὶ τὴν Σεμέλην τοῦ Διός, καὶ ἀπόλλυται μέν, ὡς δοκοῦμεν, ἡ Σεμέλη, τίκτεται δὲ Διόνυσος οἶμαι (O. Benndorf cj. οἶμαι, < καὶ >) νὴ Δία πρὸς τὸ πῦρ. καὶ τὸ μὲν τῆς Σεμέλης εἶδος ἀμυδρὸν διαφαίνεται ἰούσης ἐς οὐρανόν, καὶ αἱ Μοῦσαι αὐτὴν ἐκεῖ ᾄσονται, ὁ δὲ Διόνυσος τῆς μὲν μητρὸς ἐκθρῴσκει ῥαγείσης τὴν γαστέρα, τὸ δὲ πῦρ ἀχλυῶδες ἐργάζεται φαιδρὸς (C. L. Kayser cj. φαιδρὸν) αὐτὸς οἷον ἀστὴρ τις ἀπαστράπτων (so codd. F. P. ἀστράπτων vulg.). διασχοῦσα δὲ ἡ φλὸξ ἄντρον τι τῷ Διονύσῳ σκιαγραφεῖ παντὸς ἡδιον 'Ασσυρίου τε καὶ Λυδίου· κ.τ.λ.). A. Bougot Philostrate l'ancien Paris 1881 p. 265 f. cites for comparison and contrast a fresco said to have been found in Rome and formerly owned by Prince Gagarin (Memorie Romane di Antichità e di Belle Arti ed. L. Cardinali Roma 1824—1827 iii pl. 13): Zeus, with gray beard and hair, sits enthroned on a cloud. His head is surrounded by a halo of rays; his legs are wrapped in an ample wind-swept himátion of flame-coloured fabric. His eagle is perched beside him. With his right hand he grasps a thunderbolt, with his left he reaches towards the undersized babe ('als Embryo gekrümmt,' says Gerhard) of Semele, who half-clad in a yellow robe lies dead on the couch before him. This painting, accepted without hesitation by E. Gerbard (Hyper-

Fig. 26.

2

3

1

(1) Kratér from Ceglie, now at Taranto.
(2) Detail of same vase: the birth of Dionysos.
(3) Vase-fragment at Bonn: the birth of Dionysos.

See page 82 n. o (5 f.).

boreisch-römische Studien für Archäologen Berlin 1833 i. 105—107, written from Rome on Oct. 8, 1823 after careful inspection of the original) and by F. Lenormant (in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 601 fig. 677 (= my fig. 26), on the strength of Gerhard's testimony), was doubted by F. Wieseler (in C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835—1856 ii. 2. 13 pl. 34, 391) and L. Stephani (Nimbus und Strahlenkranz St Petersburg 1859 p. 14 no. 3 (extr. from the Mémoires de l'Académie des Sciences de St.-Pétersbourg. vi Série. Sciences politiques, histoire, philologie. ix. 361 ff.), id. in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1861 p. 13), and decisively rejected by J. Overbeck (Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 418 with n.[e] 'Man beachte nur den einen Umstand, dass Zeus' Haar und Bart grau gemalt sind und vergl. Anmerkung 71 zu S. 68.' Yet see infra § 9 (h) ii (κ) The superannuation of Zeus) and H. Heydemann (loc. cit. p. 4).

Long. past. 4. 3 εἶχε δὲ καὶ ἔνδοθεν ὁ νεὼς Διονυσιακὰς γραφάς, Σεμέλην τίκτουσαν, κ.τ.λ. may or may not be purely imaginary, and in any case says nothing of Zeus.

[4] (1) A marble frieze, found in front of the Porta Portese at Rome and now preserved in the Vatican (W. Helbig Führer durch die öffentlichen Sammlungen klassischer Altertümer in Rom[3] Leipzig 1912 i. 168 f. no. 259), has the following scene (Visconti Mus. Pie-Clém. iv. 165 ff. pl. 19 (= my fig. 27), A. L. Millin Galerie Mythologique Paris 1811 i. 51 no. 223 (wrongly described) pl. 53, H. Brunn in the Bull. d. Inst. 1858 p. 128, Welcker Gr. Götterl. ii. 580 n. 20, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus pp. 171 no. X, 178, H. Heydemann Dionysos' Geburt und Kindheit (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Halle 1885) p. 15 f., Baumeister Denkm. iii. 1289 vignette, F. Hauser Die neu-attischen Reliefs Stuttgart 1889 p. 72 no. 102, id. in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1903 vi. 103 n. 22, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 362 no. 2). Zeus, with bent head, is seated on a rock. He leans heavily, not to say painfully, on his right hand and grasps a long sceptre with his left. His himátion is so arranged as to leave bare the further leg, from the upper part of which emerges the infant Dionysos and leaps with outstretched arms towards Hermes. That god (pétasos, chlamýs, boots, but no caduceus) advances with a panther-skin in which to wrap the babe. Behind him are three stately female figures bearing long sceptres and variously interpreted as Eileithyia, Kore, and Demeter (E. Q. Visconti, A. L. Millin, and S. Reinach locc. citt.), as the Charites (H. Brunn loc. cit.), as Nymphs (H. Heydemann loc. cit.), or as the Fates (F. Hauser locc. citt.). The identification of the third female with Demeter is borne out by the bunch of corn-ears held stiffly in her right hand. Heydemann's conjecture that all three are the Nymphs of Nysa ready to receive their nursling might claim the support of Nonn. Dion. 9. 16 ff. καί μιν ἔσω Δρακάνοιο (E. Maass in Hermes 1891 xxvi. 189 n. 2 equates Δράκανον here with τὸ Δρέκανον in the south of Kos (Strab. 657, cp. Agathem. geogr. 18 (Geogr. Gr. min. ii. 479 Müller), L. Bürchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 1646, xi. 1471), and loc. cit. p. 178 ff. explains in like manner h. Dion. 1 Δρακάνῳ, Theokr. 26. 33 ἐν Δρακάνῳ νιφόεντι. Others have supposed that Nonnos was alluding to Δράκανον a town and promontory (now Cape Phanari) at the north-east end of the island Ikaros (Nikaria) (R. Köhler Über die Dionysiaka des Nonnus von Panopolis Halle 1853 p. 17 f., Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 677 n. 5), or to Δρέπανον (Trapani) the promontory in the north-west of Sicily (B. Graef De Bacchi expeditione Indica monumentis expressa Berolini 1886 p. 10 f. n. 15)) λεχώιον ἀμφὶ κολώνῃ | πήχεϊ κολπωθέντι λαβὼν Ματίμος Ἑρμῆς | ἠερόθεν πεπότητο· λοχευομένῳ δὲ Δυαίῳ | πατρῴην ἐπέθηκεν ἐπωνυμίην τοκετοῖο | κικλήσκων Διόνυσον, ἑτεὶ ποδὶ φόρτον ἀείρων | ἦιε χωλαίνων Κρονίδης βεβριθότι μηρῷ, | νῦσος ὅτι γλώσσῃ Συρακοσαΐδι χωλὸς ἀκούει (νῦσος, 'hobbled' (?) might be akin to Schnur etc., cp. Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] p. 530 f. s.v. 'nurus') · | καὶ θεὸν ἀρτιλόχευτον ἐφήμισαν Βίραφιώτην, | ὅττι μιν εὐώδινι πατὴρ ἐρράψατο μηρῷ (lines 17, 19—24 are quoted in et. mag. p. 280, 13 ff.). | καί μιν ἀχυτλώτοιο διαΐσσοντα λοχείης | πήχεϊ κοῦρον ἄδακρυν ἐκούφισε σύγγονος Ἑρμῆς, | καὶ βρέφος εὐκεράοιο φυῆς ἐνδαλμα Σελήνης (sc. horned like the Moon) | ὥπασε θυγατέρεσσι Λάμου τοταμηίσι Νύμφαις (= the Hyades: see H. W. Stoll and W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1832, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1435 n. 1), | παῖδα Διὸς κομέειν σταφυληκόμον· αἱ δὲ λαβοῦσαι | βάκχον ἐπηχύναντο, καὶ εἰς στόμα παιδὸς ἑκάστη | ἀθλιβέων γλαγέεσσαν ἀνέβλυεν ἱκμάδα μαζῶν. But the corn-ears are ill-suited to Nymphs. Besides, Hauser rightly insists on the points of similarity between this relief and that of the Madrid puteal (infra § 9 (h) ii (η)). Dionysos springs from the seated Zeus much as Nike does on the puteal; and here, as there, the three females grouped on the right must be the Fates. If so, the corn-ears are a later modification of the lots held by Lachesis (pace Helbig loc. cit.: 'Indes hat eine erneute Untersuchung ergeben, dass an den Ähren von Überarbeitung keine Spur zu finden ist'). What purpose was served originally by this frieze (Visconti loc. cit.: 'Haut. trois palmes, un tiers; longueur dix palmes moins deux onces'), and whether it was continued by means of other figures to the right, we cannot say.

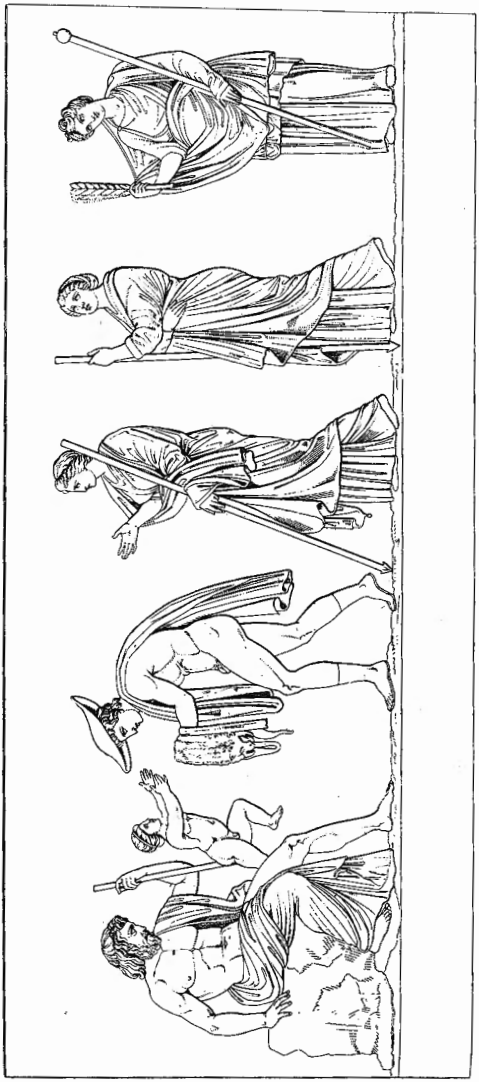

Fig. 27.

(2) A child's sarcophagus of late Roman date (White marble. Height 0·29^{m}: length 0·69^{m}), in the collection formed by Field-marshal Count Lavall Nugent, was found at Minturnae (?), was exhibited at the Palazzo Pisani in Venice, and is now preserved in Tersatto Castle near Fiume. Its front represents the birth of Dionysos in a series of three scenes separated by herms (E. Wolff in the Bull. d. Inst. 1831 p. 67, C. Lenormant in the Ann. d. Inst. 1833 v. 210—218, Mon. d. Inst. i pl. 45, A (=my fig. 28), F. Wieseler in C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835—1856 ii. 2. 13 f. pl. 34, 392, Welcker Gr. Götterl. ii. 580 n. 20, F. Lenormant in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 602 fig. 679, O. Benndorf in Wien. Vorlegebl. A pl. 12, 8, R. Schneider in the Arch.-ep. Mitth. 1881 v. 167—169 no. 36, H. Heydemann Dionysos' Geburt und Kindheit (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Halle 1885) pp. 8 f., 16 f., P. V. C. Baur Eileithyia (The University of Missouri Studies i. 4) University of Missouri 1902 p. 86). To the right Semele lies exhausted on a couch, her left hand propping her head, her right drooping as if she held flowers (Schneider, Heydemann). Beneath the couch a jug and bowl are in readiness for the bath of the expected infant. Zeus appears above a wall in the background, lays his left arm on Semele's neck (Schneider, Heydemann), and brandishes a thunderbolt in his right hand. To the left Zeus sits erect on a chair with a footstool, upon which is set a large urn. His right hand presses hard on the chair; his left grasps a long sceptre. A winged goddess, presumably Nike playing the part of Eileithyia (E. Gerhard in the Bull. d. Inst. 1831 p. 67 n. 1, followed by Wieseler, Schneider, Heydemann, Baur, was content to describe her as a winged Eileithyia), touches with her outstretched left hand the right leg of Zeus, which is bandaged (Schneider, Heydemann), not bare: the god has been already delivered. In the centre Hermes, looking round towards Zeus, carries off the newborn babe to the Nymphs, one of whom is seen reclining behind him (so E. Wolff loc. cit. C. Lenormant, Wieseler, and Schneider would recognise Gaia).

Fig. 28.

Similar in type, but with sides reversed, is a fragmentary relief (Luna marble. Height 1·20^{m}: length 0·54^{m}) found on the Esquiline in 1874 and now in the Palazzo dei Conservatori at Rome (C. L. Visconti 'Frammento di rilievo rappresentante la nascita di Bacco' in the Bull. Comm. Arch. Comun. di Roma 1874 ii. 89—96 pl. 1, 3 (=my fig. 29), H. Heydemann op. cit. p. 17, G. Lafaye in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. ii. 982 fig. 2884, P. V. C. Baur op. cit. p. 86, Stuart Jones Cat. Sculpt. Pal. d. Conserv. Rome p. 85 Galleria no. 16 pl. 31). Zeus is seated to the left. His left leg, covered by a himátion, uses a globe as a footstool (cp. supra i. 47 ff.). His right leg is bare and is being bandaged by the same winged goddess (wings broken away), on whose shoulder he rests his hand. This relief too perhaps formed part of a sarcophagus. C. L. Visconti loc. cit. p. 94 describes the work as mediocre and dates it about the end of s. ii A.D.

Fig. 29.

A less considerable fragment of the same design, which has been worked into a patchwork sarcophagus now in the Loggia Scoperta of the Vatican, shows the veiled head and powerful body of Zeus sitting on a rock to the right and leaning hard on his right hand (Visconti Mus. Pie-Clém. iv. 269 ff. pl. 37 ('le fleuve Isménus'), A. L. Millin Galerie Mythologique Paris 1811 ii. 20 f. no. 429 pl. 109 ('le fleuve Ismenius'), J. G. Zoëga in the Zeitschrift für Geschichte und Auslegung der alten Kunst Herausg. von F. G. Welcker 1818 i. 402 f. (first critical account: 'Okeanos'), F. Matz in the Bull. d. Inst. 1870 p. 70 f. (first identification as 'Giove nell' atto di sgravarsi da Bacco bambino'), H. Heydemann op. cit. pp. 10 n. 28, 12, 17).

H. Heydemann op. cit. p. 15 draws attention to a lost relief, of which a cast has been for over a century at Bonn. F. G. Welcker Das akademische Kunstmuseum zu Bonn[2] Bonn 1844 p. 115 no. 353 describes it as follows: 'Eileithyia, die Lende des Zeus vom Dionysos entbindend. Nur das eine Bein des Zeus bis an das Knie ist erhalten und ein Flügel des Adlers, der über ihm schwebte, vielleicht angstvoll ihn umflatterte [? the wing of a winged Eileithyia. A.B.C.], und von dem Kinde nur das Händchen angelegt an dem Knie der Eileithyia. Hermes, als Kinderwärter der Götter und insbesondre des Dionysos bekannt, steht seines Berufes gewärtig daneben und sieht aufmerksam und wie verlegen zu.' R. Kekulé Das akademische Kunstmuseum zu Bonn Bonn 1872 p. 113 no. 452 adds: 'Das Bruchstück, welches mit dem Relief bei Müller—Wieseler II, 34, 392 zu vergleichen ist, ist in dem jetzigen Zustand mindestens in der Figur des Hermes schwerlich durchaus antik.'

This second series of reliefs is perhaps derived, though not without modification, from the painting by Ktesilochos (supra p. 82 n. 3). The rebirth of the infant was a subject admirably suited to a child's sarcophagus and, doubtless, often repeated (cp. supra ii. 309, 417).

[5] An Etruscan mirror, of unknown provenance, at Naples (A. Sogliano in the Guida del Mus. Napoli p. 358 no. 1525), long cited under the misleading name of the 'Patera Borgia,' represents the actual birth-scene in early fourth-century style (A. (H. L.) Heeren Expositio fragmenti tabulae marmoreae...Musei Borgiani Velitris Romae 1786 p. 9 n. (c), L. Lanzi Saggio di lingua Etrusca e di altre antiche d' Italia per servire alla storia de' popoli, delle lingue, e delle belle arti Roma 1789 ii. 195—198, Visconti Mus. Pie-Clém. iv. 362 ff. pl. B 1, 1 and 2, A. L. Millin Galerie Mythologique Paris 1811 i. 50 f. no. 222 pl. 71, F. Inghirami Monumenti etruschi o di etrusco nome Poligrafia Fiesolana 1824 ii. 277—297 pl. 16 (good), id. Storia della Toscana Poligrafia Fiesolana 1841 ii. 519, 522, 524, 529 pl. 39, 1, B. Quaranta in the Real Museo Borbonico Napoli 1839 xii pl. 57 with text pp. 1—5, Gerhard Etr. Spiegel iii. 84—87 pl. 82 (=my fig. 30), id. Über die Gottheiten der Etrusker Berlin 1847 pp. 40 n. (96), 58 n.*) (=Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1845 Phil.-hist. Classe pp. 556 n. (96), 574 n.*)), F. Wieseler in C. O. Müller Denkmäler der alten Kunst Göttingen 1835—1856 ii. 2. 14 f. pl. 34, 394, A. Fabretti Corpus inscriptionum Italicarum Aug. Taurinorum 1867 p. ccxiv no. 2470, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Zeus p. 187 f. no. (c) Atlas pl. 1, 37, H. Heydemann Dionysos' Geburt und Kindheit (Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Halle 1885) p. 14 f., C. Pauli in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 460 f.). In the centre sits Zeus (Tinia) wearing a wreath of lilies (supra i. 622 f., 736 n. o, ii. 740) and a himátion, which leaves his right leg bare. He leans with his right hand on a long sceptre surmounted by an eagle (Gerhard wrongly took this to be a Dodonaean dove) and holds a winged thunderbolt in his left. From his right thigh emerges Dionysos as a nude baldish infant with a string of bullae across his chest. The child carries in his left hand a narthex with umbelliferous head (so Heydemann. Gerhard made it a ferule and grape-bunch; Visconti, followed by Wieseler, a small pedum) and raises his right to greet the birth-goddess (Thalna) who, arrayed in Ionic chitón and himátion with stephánē, ear-ring, and necklace, stoops forward to receive him. Behind Zeus is a winged goddess (M[e]an, on whom see W. Deecke in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2481) wearing an Ionic chitón with girdle and cross-bands; she too has stephánē, ear-ring, and necklace. She uplifts a dipper in one hand and grasps an alábastron with the other (not a pen and ink-bottle, as though about to inscribe the child's destiny). To the left of the group stands Apollon (Apulu), his long hair rolled round a fillet, a chlamýs over his shoulders, a bay-branch in his left hand, and a doe behind him. To the right, room is found beneath the wings of Mean for the infant's cradle or, more probably, swaddling-clothes (so Heydemann. Inghirami had spoken of a vannus, Gerhard of a mystic cista). The whole composition, probably derived from some Greek vase-painting, is enclosed between two purely decorative figures—above, a wild bearded head with streams or streamers flowing from the mouth (Gerhard thought of Phobos, or of the Dodonaean Zeus! Visconti saw a lion's head and a snake!!); below, a winged goddess swathed in a himátion. Over her runs an inscription, which has lately been read by C. Pauli loc. cit. as [illegible] Fufluns Semleal, 'Dionysos son of Semele.' The reverse of the handle shows a pair of scantily draped dancers, male and female.

Fig. 30.

C. Lenormant in the Ann. d. Inst. 1833 v. 215 ff. and J. de Witte in the Nouv. Ann. 1836—1837 i. 369—371 pl. A 1837, 1—2 published two bullae of thin gold foil (diameter c. 1⅝ inches), found in a tomb at Vulci and preserved in the Cabinet des Médailles at Paris. They are both decorated with a repoussé design representing the birth of Dionysos (cp. the series of sarcophagus-reliefs described supra p. 85 n. o (2)). Zeus with bowed head sits to the left on a rock (?). He wears a himátion round his loins and over his left shoulder. His right hand clasps his right knee. His left hand rests on the rock. From his right thigh emerges the infant god, uplifting both arms. He is received by a winged Athena, clad in a Doric péplos with long overfold, aigís, and Gorgóneion. Between Zeus and Athena is a lotiform thunderbolt (?). J. de Witte's description of the scene is full of bad blunders. My pl. xiv, 1 is from a fresh photograph by Giraudon. Another gold bulla from Italy, of third-century work, shows Zeus in labour flanked by two winged Eileithyiai (Brit. Mus. Cat. Jewellery p. 262 f. no. 2285 pl. 46 with fig. 75 (=my pl. xiv, 2)).

Lastly, a bronze coin of Nysa Skythopolis, the ancient Beth-Shan and modern Beisán, struck by Gordianus Pius in the year 304, i.e. some year between 240/1 and 243/4 A.D., has for reverse type Zeus standing to the left and the city-goddess standing to the right. Zeus is clad in a himátion, which passes like a veil over the back of his head. His right foot is raised on some uncertain object (? a rock), while the head and shoulders of the infant Dionysos emerge from his right thigh. He rests his left hand on a long sceptre and extends his right towards the goddess. She is dressed in chitón and himátion, and wears a turreted crown and a veil (?). She holds a long sceptre in her right hand and the babe Dionysos in her left. The legend is [NV] CCKV IЄPAC and in the exergue [Δ]T (G. F. Hill in

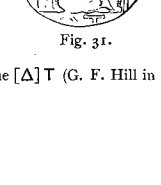

Fig. 31.

1

2

(1) Gold bulla from Vulci, now at Paris: Birth of Dionysos.
(2) Gold bulla from Italy, now in the British Museum: Birth of Dionysos.

See page 88 n. o.

reflects a very ancient ritual of adoption[1]. The detail of the sewing (erráphthai) is probably to be connected with the office of the birth-the Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Palestine pp. xxxvi, 77 pl. 8, 5. Fig. 31 is from a cast kindly supplied by Dr Hill).

[1] So first J. J. Bachofen Das Mutterrecht Basel 1897 pp. 243, 256, 259, though he confused the issue by importing a reference to the couvade (hence Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 904 goes off on a wrong path). Farnell Cults of Gk. States v. 110 keeps a clearer head: 'The old attempts to interpret this as nature-symbolism have failed ludicrously. The first to strike the right track was Bachofen, who, following the anthropological method, explained the myth as the reflex of some primitive social institution; but his suggestion that we have here a divine example of the couvade was not altogether happy, though the couvade was practised by primitive peoples of the Mediterranean area. The travail of Zeus is more naturally explained by him as a primitive mode of adoption, wherein the father pretends to actually [(sic)] give birth to the adopted son; and this would be the natural method for a people passing from the rule of the matrilinear to that of the patrilinear descent[b]. [[b]We hear of the same fashion of adoption among the Haidas of North America who are in the transition-state between the two systems.] Dionysos, therefore, was accepted and affiliated in this wise to Zeus by some Hellenic tribe who were still in that stage, and whom we cannot discover, for we do not know whence the story first radiated, though we may surmise that it arose in Boeotia.' The latter part of this statement, however, will have to be modified by those who accept the recent attempts of H. J. Rose ('On the alleged Evidence for Mother-right in Early Greece' in Folk-Lore 1911 xxii. 277—291, 'Prehistoric Greece and Mother-Right' ib. 1926 xxxvii. 213—244) to disprove the existence of mother-right in early Greece.

Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art i. 74 f. illustrates 'Simulation of birth at adoption' from a wide area, including one classical myth: Diod. 4. 39 (from an older handbook of mythology (E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 674)) προσθετέον δ' ἡμῖν τοῖς εἰρημένοις ὅτι μετὰ τὴν ἀποθέωσιν αὐτοῦ Ζεὺς Ἥραν μὲν ἔπεισεν υἱοποιήσασθαι τὸν Ἡρακλέα καὶ τὸ λοιπὸν εἰς τὸν ἅπαντα χρόνον μητρὸς εὐνοιαν παρέχεσθαι (παρέξεσθαι cod. D.), τὴν δὲ τέκνωσιν γενέσθαι φασὶ τοιαύτην· τὴν Ἥραν ἀναβᾶσαν ἐπὶ (ἐπὶ τὴν vulg.) κλίνην καὶ τὸν Ἡρακλέα προσλαβομένην πρὸς τὸ σῶμα διὰ τῶν ἐνδυμάτων ἀφεῖναι πρὸς τὴν γῆν, μιμουμένην τὴν ἀληθινὴν γένεσιν· ὅπερ μέχρι τοῦ νῦν ποιεῖν τοὺς βαρβάρους ὅταν θετὸν υἱὸν ποιεῖσθαι βούλωνται, Lyk. Al. 39 ὁ δευτέραν τεκοῦσαν κ.τ.λ. with Tzetz. ad loc. τὴν Ἥραν λέγει· διὰ τοῦ κόλπου γὰρ αὐτὸν ἦγεν (ἤνεγκεν cod. a) ὡς τίκτουσα καὶ τεκνοποιουμένη. Cp. three important mirrors which represent Hera suckling a full-grown Herakles: (a) An early fourth-century mirror in the Museo Civico at Bologna (F. Schiassi De Pateris, ex sententia J. T. Biancani sermo Bononiæ 1808 pl. 10, Gerhard Etr. Spiegel iii. 125 pl. 126 (=my fig. 32), E. Brizio in the Guida del Museo Civico di Bologna Bologna 1882 p. 24 Sezione antica, Sala viii, E Vetrina di fronte, Sezione di mezzo, J. Bayet Hercle Étude Critique des principaux monuments relatifs à l'Hercule Étrusque Paris 1926 p. 150 ff. no. D) shows Herakles as a well-grown youth, with his lion-skin round his neck and a smooth club at his side, bending forward to be suckled by Hera. She sits on a throne, the footstool of which is seen in perspective, and holds up her bared right breast to the hero's lips. Behind her and leaning on her shoulder is Iolaos (Gerhard says Ares), with chlamýs and lance. The whole is surrounded by a beautiful ivy-wreath; and the reverse has a frilled(=rayed) solar (?) head. A similar design on a terra-cotta medallion in relief was reported by W. Helbig in the Bull. d. Inst. 1866 p. 65 f. It was found probably at Palestrina and was then in the possession of Castellani. Helbig took the medallion to be a model for a bulla. But A. Kluegmann in the Ann. d. Inst. 1871 xliii. 21 regarded it with more likelihood as the centre of a bowl. The group of Hera suckling Herakles was flanked by two standing youths clad in chlamýdes—apparently a duplication of Iolaos. (b) A fourth-century mirror from Volaterrae (Volterra), now in the Museo Archeologico at Florence, elaborates the subject (G. Körte in Gerhard Etr. Spiegel v. 73—78 pl. 60 (=my fig. 33), A. B. Cook in the Class. Rev. 1906 xx. 416 f. fig. 4, J. Bayet op. cit. p. 150 ff. no. E

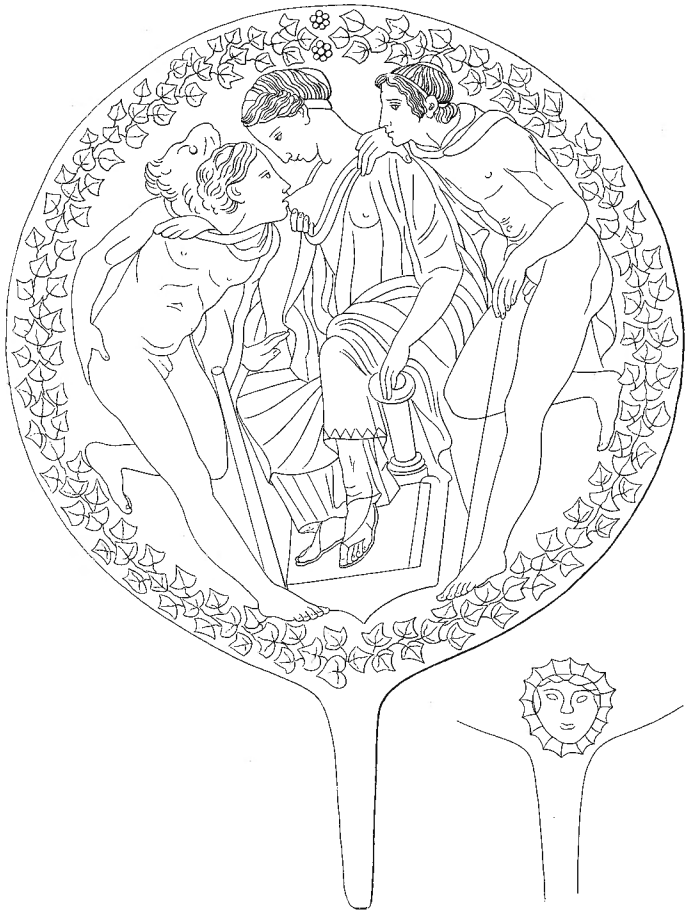

Fig. 32.

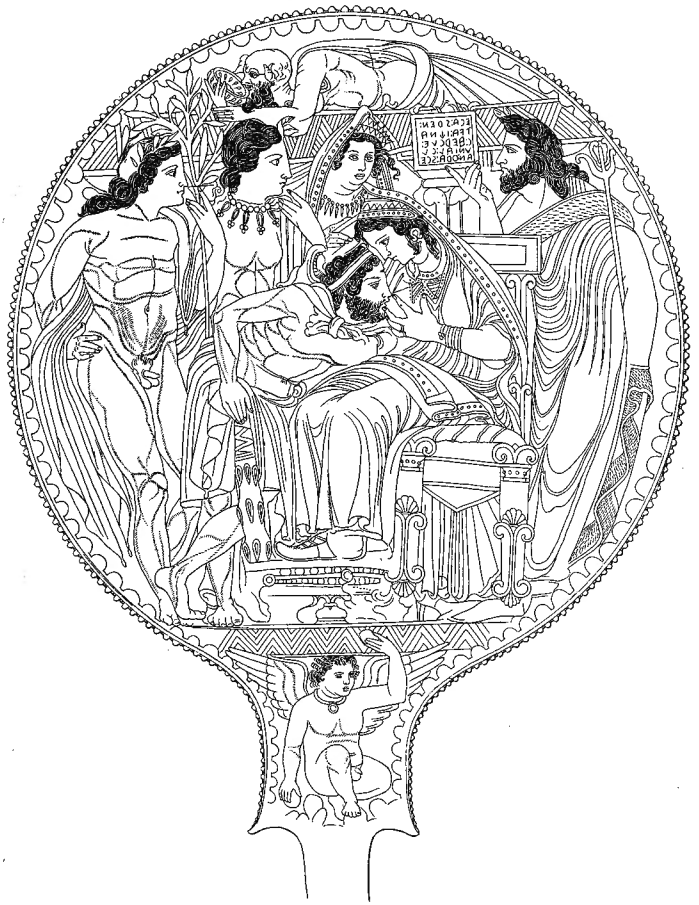

Fig. 33.

pl. 4). In the centre sits Hera on a handsome throne, the seat of which is seen from below (cp. supra ii. 738 fig. 668), with a footstool. She is attired in an Ionic chitón and a himátion drawn over her head. She has a profusion of trinkets (stephánе, ear-ring, finger-rings, necklace, bracelet) and is shod with strap-work shoes. Her right hand pulls forward her himátion; her left, with spread fingers, presses her naked breast, which is being sucked vigorously by Herakles. He is a bearded man with a broad fillet on his hair, a lion-skin round his neck, a short chitón about his waist, and a knotty club in his right hand. He leans over the goddess' lap to play the infant's part. To the right of these two stands Zeus, with himátion, shoes, and sceptre, signing to a young undraped goddess, who wears a large necklace with pendants of three drops (cp. Il. 14. 183, Od. 18. 298 τριγλυφα μορόεντα) and, like Zeus, displays two leaves stuck in her hair. To the left stands Apollon with chlamýs, bay-wreath, and bay-branch. In the background an older goddess appears in three-quarter position: she wears a stephánе, a necklace with pendants, and a himátion like that of Hera (there is indeed some confusion between the two) drawn over her head. Behind Hera's throne is an Ionic pillar supporting a tablet inscribed eca : sren : | tva : ιχna | c : hercle : | unial : clan : θra : sce. The only words at present intelligible to us, hercle : unial : clan, denote 'Hercules son of Uni (Iuno)' and certainly suggest that the inscription is a label explaining the scene rather than a votive dedication involving other names. They do not of course justify Ptolemy Chennos of Alexandreia (c. 100 A.D.) in his paradoxical notion that Herakles was the son of Zeus and Hera (Ptol. nov. hist. 3 p. 186, 28 ff. Westermann ap. Phot. bibl. p. 148 a 38 ff. Bekker τινος ἐστιν ὁ ὕμνος ὁ ᾀδόμενος ἐν Θηβαίοις (I. Bekker cj. Θήβαις) εἰς Ἡρακλέα, ἐν ᾧ λέγει (either read λέγεται or, less probably, supply the author Μάτρις ὁ Θηβαῖος ὑμνογράφος from the context and suppose a direct quotation of the following words) Διὸς καὶ Ἥρας υἱός). The whole composition is enclosed between an upper and a lower band of herring-bone pattern. Above is a bald Silenos, with pig's ears, drinking from a phiále. He sprawls along the upper line, and from his incredibly clumsy neck I should infer that the artist had at first intended him to be an upright head (cp. Gerhard Etr. Spiegel pl. 212) or one of two (cp. ib. pl. 291, A), but had later altered him into a recumbent figure (cp. ib. pl. 323). Below is Eros, crouching almost en face, with a bulla slung round his throat and an ovoid object (egg ? ball ?) in either hand. (c) An early third-century mirror from Vulci, now at Berlin, introduces some variations and adds names (C. Robert in the Arch. Zeit. 1882 xl. 173, A. Furtwängler ib. 1883 xli. 271, Gerhard Etr. Spiegel v. 72 f. pl. 59 (=my fig. 34), J. Bayet op. cit. p. 151 ff. no. F). Herakles (Hercle) sits on a low stool, beardless but adult and equipped with lion-skin and club. He is about to suck the right nipple of Hera (Uni), who stoops towards him with bared breast, clasping him with her right hand and holding a horn (cp. supra ii. 347 fig. 241) in her left. Behind Herakles sits Mean raising two sprigs of olive, bent to form a wreath for the hero. In the background stands Zeus (Tinia), his head surrounded by two streamers and a lotiform bolt visible at his right side. He is flanked on his right by Aphrodite (Turan), on his left by Athena (Menrva, a mistake for Menrva) with aigís, Gorgóneion, and shield bearing a star. Below is a large female head between two stars. These three mirrors clearly postulate a common original, perhaps a fifth-century fresco, from which is also descended—with sundry important modifications—a lékythos of 'Apulian' style found at Anxia (Anzi di Basilicata) and now in the British Museum (G. Minervini in the Bull. d. Inst. 1842 p. 160, id. in the Bull. Arch. Nap. 1842—1843 i. 6 f., id. Il mito di Ercole che succhia il latte di Giunone Napoli 1854 pp. 1—34 with pl. (extr. from the Memorie della Regale Accademia Ercolanense Napoli 1853 vi. 317 ff.), Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Hera p. 141 no. L, G. Körte in Gerhard Etr. Spiegel v. 76 ff., Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iv. 60 no. F 107). Herakles is here reduced to the proportions of a boy and has lost his lion-skin and club. But that he and no other is meant appears from the presence of his patroness Athena (aigís, spear), who offers Hera a lily—not, as Minervini thought, in allusion to the later legend of the Milky Way (supra i. 624 n. 5), but merely as the favourite flower of the goddess (supra i. 624 n. 2, ii. 515 n. 10) and a fitting reward for her services. Hera herself is a queenly figure, seated with a floral stephánе on her head and a lily-topped sceptre in her hand. She presses goddess Rhapso[1], but was presumably stressed as a means of explaining the obscure appellative Eiraphiótes[2]. The same etymologising tendency dates the whole hostage-episode, with its play on the boy to her right breast, where he drinks his fill. Behind her stands Iris in short chitón and high boots. She has wings on her shoulders, and a knotted or studded staff by way of caduceus. She talks with a seated wreath-bearing goddess, who is difficult to identify,—probably not Peitho (G. Körte), certainly not Alkmene (G. Minervini, H. B. Walters). This couple is balanced by a standing Eros (wreath, sphendónē) and a seated Aphrodite (mirror) on the left. A. D. Trendall cp. a lékythos of 'early Apulian' style, by the same hand, at Taranto (my pl. xv, 2), which substitutes Aphrodite and Ἐρωτύλοι for Athena and Herakles.

Fig. 34.

It is noteworthy that in the case of Dionysos the simulated birth is from the god (Zeus), in the case of Herakles from the goddess (Hera). Parallels to both forms of the rite can be adduced.

[1] Supra ii. 184 n. 3.

[2] Supra i. 674 n. 2, ii. 957 n. 2. See further O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2119 f., Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 661 n. 2, 714 n. 5, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 822 n. 4.

Expert philologists have advanced widely different explanations. W. Sonne in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1861 x. 103 connected εἰραφιώτης, Aeolic ἐρραφαώτη-ς, with the Sanskrit ṛshabha 'bull,' so that the word would mean 'Befruchter.' R. Meister Die griechischen Dialekte Göttingen 1882 i. 146 followed suit. W. Prellwitz in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1897 xxii. 99 was still inclined to agree ('Sonne...vielleicht mit recht,' etc.), and F. Solmsen in the Indogermanische Forschungen 1897 vii. 46 ff. definitely accepted the same view, not only connecting Lesbian Ἔρραφεύτας, Ionic Εἰραφιώτης, with the Old Indian ṝṣabhás 'bull,' but (after A. Meillet ib. 1895 v. 328 f.) bringing into relation with them ἔρραος, which meant either 'ram' (Lyk. Al. 1316 with Tzetz. ad loc.) or 'boar' (Kallim. frag. 335 Schneider ap. Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 1316, Hesych. s.v. ἔρραος (so M. Schmidt for ἐρράς cod.)· κριός), and drawing attention to Ἀρράβαιον τὸν Βρομεροῦ, Λυγκηστῶν Μακεδόνων βασιλέα (Thouk. 4. 83), a man who was τοῦ Βακχιαδῶν γένους (Strab. 326)—an obviously Dionysiac group of names. F. Froehde in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1896 xxi. 199, while not doubting the possibility of Εἰραφιώτης, Ἔρραφιώτας being related to the Sanskrit ṛṣabhá 'bull,' regarded the word as another form of Ἐρίφιος, the goat too being a 'Verkörperung des lehenerzeugenden Numens des Gottes' (F. A. Voigt in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1079). G. Legerlotz in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1859 viii. 53 had long since derived Εἰραφιώτης 'von einem εἴρ-α-φος=ἔρ-ι-φος (vgl. στρατιώτης, ἡλικιώτης)' and had noted the Laconian cult of Dionysos Ἔριφος. H. Ehrlich ib. 1906 xxxix. 567 f. likewise dwells on the connexion of Dionysos with the goat (supra i. 674 ff.) and remarks: 'Daher denken Wieseler, Philol. 10, 101 und Wide Lakonische Culte p. 168 an ἔριφος, und eine nebenform *ἔριαφος = *εἔραφος *ἔρραφος wäre wohl annehmbar. Da -αφος tiersuffix ist (cf. ἔλαφος ἀσκάλαφος κιδάφη κόραφος Hes.), könnte man *ἔραφος auch mit εἴρων "listig" (*ἔρ̣ων; zu errare st. er-sā* eigentlich "der in die irre führt") zusammenbringen und darin ein altes wort für den "fuchs" sehen...vgl. auch Philemon fr. 89[6] ll p. 504 K.: οὐκ ἔστ' ἀλώπηξ ἡ μὲν εἴρων τῇ φύσει, | ἡ δ' αὐθέκαστος,...Die adjectivischen ableitungen *εἰραφιο- *ἐρραφεο- bezeichneten dann "das zum fuchs gehörige, das fuchsfell," und Εἰραφιώτης Ἔρραφεύτας wäre sozusagen die griechische übersetzung von Βασσαρεύς, "dem fuchsfellträger" nach alter überlieferung, die recht haben kann.' A. Fick in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1894 xx. 179 f. cp. Hermes σπαργανιώτης (h. Herm. 301), μηχανιώτης (ib. 436), Dionysos βακχειώτης (Sapph. frag. 147 Bergk[4], 172 Edmonds=Simon. frag. 210 A Bergk[4] ap. Him. or. 13. 7), Pan ὀρειώτης (Anth. Pal. 9. 824. 2 (Erykios)). As σπαργανιώτης meant 'wrapped in the σπαργάνιον or "swaddling-band",' so εἰραφιώτης, Aeolic ἐρραφιώτας, must have meant 'wrapped in the *εἰράφιον or "tufted skin"—a word related to εἶρος, Aeolic ἔρρος "wool" as χρυσάφιον to

1

2

(1) Lékythos of early Apulian style from Anxia, now in the British Museum: Herakles suckled by Hera.

See page 92 n. o and page 94 n. o.

(2) Lékythos of early Apulian style, now at Taranto: Herakles suckled by Hera.

See page 94 n. o.

hómēros and mērós[1], as the effort of Prodikos[2] or some other fifth-century sophist, though the particular incident of the aithér-phantom, with its further play on méros, 'portion', is attributable to Euripides himself[3].

χρυσός. Dionysos elραφιώτης "in the tufted skin" was a kid, cp. Hesych. s.v. elραφιώτης·... καὶ ἔριφος παρὰ Λάκωσιν. [Observe, however, that elραφιώτης 'wrapped in a tufted garment' might equally well, or even better, describe the Bacchant garbed in an artificial skin (Eur. Bacch. 111 ff. στικτῶν τ' ἐνδυτὰ νεβρίδων | στέφετε λευκοτρίχων πλοκάμων | μαλλοῖς with Sir J. E. Sandys ad loc.). A. B. C.]. F. Bechtel Die griechischen Dialekte Berlin 1921 i. 128 f. approves this derivation, but notes two difficulties: 'Die eine ist die, dass, wenn ἐρΓάφιον die Grundlage des Gottesnamens bildet, dieser bei den Lesbiern die Gestalt Ἐραφιώτας haben müsste, da, wie speciell ἔπερος lehrt, f hinter Consonanten spurlos untergegangen ist. Man kann ihr mit dem Einwande begegnen, dass die Verdopplung des ρ die metrische Dehnung der ersten von drei auf einander folgenden Kürzen bezeichne, wie in πέρρυσιν Theokr. 29_{98}. Nicht beseitigen aber lässt sich die zweite Schwierigkeit. Nach den Ausführungen Wackernagels Glotta IV 243 f. kommt den Deminutiven auf -άφιον langes α zu, dem im Ionisch-Attischen η entspricht: ξυλήφιον im Corpus der Hippokratischen Schriften und bei Alexis. Also müsste die Namenform bei den Lesbiern Ἐραφώτας, bei den Ioniern Ἐρηφιώτης lauten. Hier kann man nur mit einer auf unsichrer Grundlage ruhenden Hypothese helfen: da das Erscheinen der Länge in -ᾱφιον von Wackernagel selbst als "Rätsel" bezeichnet wird, darf man vielleicht annehmen, dass neben ihr die Kürze gelegen habe, die kein Rätsel sein würde.' K. Brugmann Griechische Grammatik[4] München 1913 p. 232 pronounces the verdict: 'Ἐλραφιώτης lesb. Ἐρραφεώτᾱς ..ist zweifelhaften Ursprungs.' Possibly fresh evidence may yet be forthcoming—from Hittite sources?

The month Ἐλραφιών at Arkesine in Amorgos (Inscr. Gr. ins. vii no. 62, 28 = F. Bechtel in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2 558 f. no. 5371, 28 = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 531, 28, ib.[3] no. 963, 28 ἐμ μηνὶ Ἐλραφιῶνι) probably corresponds with the Ionic Lenaion and the Attic Gamelion (J. Delamarre in the Rev. Philol. N.S. 1901 XXV. 180 f., W. Dittenberger in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2118 f.).

[1] ὁ μηρός = ὅμηρος.

[2] Euripides is said to have been a pupil of Prodikos (v. Eur. 1 in schol. Eur. i. 2, 7 f. Dindorf, Souid. s.v. Εὐριπίδης ter, Gell. 15. 20. 4), who was interested on the one hand in linguistic discussions (E. Zeller A History of Greek Philosophy trans. S. F. Alleyne London 1881 ii. 489 ff., 512), on the other in the origins of Dionysiac worship (id. ib. p. 482 f.).

[3] The foregoing paragraph must not be taken to imply that mythical birth from the thigh always betokens the ritual of adoption. F. Liebrecht Zur Volkskunde Heilbronn 1879 p. 490 f. (= id. in Germania 1860 v. 479 f.) compiles a list of such births from the leg, the foot, the hand, etc., each of which calls for separate investigation. They include the following:

(1) A. Kuhn Die Herabkunft des Feuers und des Göttertranks[2] Gütersloh 1886 pp. 13 f., 148 f. draws attention to Aurva, son of Cyavana (son of Çukra son of Bhṛgu) by Ârushî daughter of Manu, who was sprung from his mother's thigh (Mahabharata trans. M. N. Dutt Calcutta 1895 i. 93 = Mahabh. 1. 66. 47 'Arushi, the daughter of Manu, became the wife of the wise Chyavana, and the greatly illustrious Aurva was born in her, ripping open her thighs,' ib. 1896 iii. 453 = Mahabh. 3. 314. 17 'O sinless one, you have further heard how the Brahmanic sage Aurva at one time remaining concealed in his mother's thighs served the purpose of the celestials.' On Aurva see further S. Sörensen An Index to the Names in the Mahabharata London 1904 p. 100 f.).

(2) A. Kuhn op. cit.[2] p. 149 ff. compares the case of Vena, son of Anga and Sunîthâ, who produced Nishâda from his thigh and Pṛthu from his arm (Mahabharata trans. M. N. Dutt Calcutta 1903 xii 86 = Mahabh. 12. 59. 94 'Vena, a slave of anger and malice, became impious and tyrannical towards all creatures. The Brahmavadin Rishis killed him with Kusha blades inspired with Mantras. 95—96. Uttering Mantras all the while, those Rishis pierced the right thigh of Vena. Thereupon, from that thigh, sprang a short-limbed person on earth, resembling a charred brand, having blood-red eyes and black hair. Those Brahmavadins said to him,—Nishida (sit) here. 97. From him have originated the Nishadas, viz., those wicked tribes who live in the hills and the forests, as also those hundreds and thousands of Mlecchas, living on the Vindhya ranges. 98. The great Rishis then pierced the right arm of Vena. Thence originated a person who was a second Indra in form' (sc. Prithu). H. H. Wilson Works London 1864 vi. 181 ff. = Vishńu Puráńa I. 13 'And they fell upon the king, and beat him with blades of holy grass, consecrated by prayer, and slew him, who had first been destroyed by his impiety towards god....The sages, hearing this, consulted, and together rubbed the thigh of the king, who had left no offspring, to produce a son. From the thigh, thus rubbed, came forth a being of the complexion of a charred stake, with flattened features (like a negro), and of dwarfish stature. "What am I to do?" cried he eagerly to the Munis. "Sit down" (nishída), said they: and thence his name was Nisháda. His descendants, the inhabitants of the Vindhya mountain, great Muni, are still called Nishádas, and are characterized by the exterior tokens of depravity. By this means the wickedness of Vena was expelled; those Nishádas being born of his sins, and carrying them away. The Brahmans then proceeded to rub the right arm of the king, from which friction was engendered the illustrious son of Vena, named Pŕithu, resplendent in person, as if the blazing deity of Fire had been manifested. There then fell from the sky the primitive bow (of Mahádeva) named Ájagava, and celestial arrows, and panoply from heaven. At the birth of Pŕithu, all living creatures rejoiced; and Vena, delivered, by his being born, from the hell named Put, ascended to the realms above.' H. H. Wilson ad loc. cites the parallel passage in the Bhágavata-puráńa 4. 14. 43—46 with the rendering of E. Burnouf Le Bhâgavata Purâṇa Paris 1844 ii. 2. 78: 'Ayant pris cette résolution, les Ŕíchis secouèrent rapidement la cuisse du roi qu'ils avaient tué, et il en sortit un nain. Noir comme un corbeau, ayant le corps d'une extrême petitesse, les bras courts, les mâchoires grandes, les pieds petits, le nez enfoncé, les yeux rouges et les cheveux cuivrés. Prosterné devant eux, le pauvre nain s'écria: Que faut-il que je fasse? et les Brâhmanes lui répondirent: Assieds-toi, ami. De là lui vint le nom de Nichâda. C'est de sa race que sont sortis les Nâichâdas qui habitent les cavernes et les montagnes; car c'est lui dont la naissance effaça la faute terrible de Vêna,' ib. 4. 15. 1—6 (ii. 2. 79 Burnouf) 'Mâitrêya dit: Les Brâhmanes ayant ensuite agité les bras du roi Vêna, qui était mort sans postérité, en firent sortir deux enfants, un fils et une fille. A la vue de ces deux enfants, les Ŕíchis qui expliquent le Vêda, y reconnaissant une portion de la substance de Bhagavat, s'écrièrent, pleins d'une extrême joie: Celui-ci est une portion de la substance du bienheureux Vichṇu, qui est faite pour purifier le monde; celle-là est une création de Lakchmí, la compagne fidèle de Purucha. De ces deux enfants, le mâle deviendra le premier roi; ce sera le Mahârâdja, nommé Pŕithu, dont la gloire et la renommée seront répandues au loin. Celle-ci sera sa royale épouse; douée d'une taille parfaite et de belles dents, faite pour rehausser les ornements et la vertu elle-même, elle sera, sous le nom d'Artchis, inviolablement attachée à Pŕithu. Cet enfant est sans contredit une portion de Hari, qui est né dans le désir de sauver le monde; et cette fille est certainement Çrí son épouse dévouée, compagne inséparable du Dieu qu'elle a suivi [sur la terre].' H. H. Wilson op. cit. vi. 182 n. 1 further remarks: 'The Padma (Bhúmi Khańda) has a similar description [of Nishádas]; adding to the dwarfish stature and black complexion, a wide mouth, large ears, and a protuberant belly. It also particularizes his posterity as Nishádas, Kirátas, Bhillas, Bahanakas, Bhrahmaras, Pulindas, and other barbarians or Mlechchhas, living in woods and on mountains.' A. Kuhn op. cit.[2] p. 149 f. refers to the Harivaṁśa, a supplement to the Mahabharata, for the same tale.

(3) Mándhátṛ, an ancient king, son of Yuvanáçva, was born from his father's side. Yuvanáçva, when hunting, had drunk sacrificial butter and so become pregnant (Mahabharata trans. M. N. Dutt Calcutta 1896 iii. 187 = Mahabh. 3. 126. 24—31 'O great king, as you, being very thirsty, have drunk the water prepared with sacred hymns which was filled with the virtue of my religious labours, you must bring forth out of your own body a son as described above. We shall perform for your sake a sacrifice of wonderful effect, so that you will bring forth a son equal to Indra. You will not feel any pain at the time of the delivery. When one hundred years passed away, a son, as effulgent as the sun, came out by riving the left side of that high-souled king. The greatly effulgent child came out, but king Yuvanashwa did not die,—it was no doubt a great wonder. Then greatly effulgent Indra came there with the desire of seeing him. Thereupon the celestials asked Indra, "What is to be sucked by this boy?" Then Indra gave his own fore finger into his mouth (to suck), and the wielder of thunder said, "he will suck me." Thereupon the dwellers of heaven with Indra gave him the name "Mandhatta",' H. H. Wilson op. cit. London 1866 viii. 267 = Vishńu Puráńa 4. 2 'When the Munis rose, and found that the water had been drunk, they inquired who had taken it, and said: "The queen that has drunk this water shall give birth to a mighty and valiant son." "It was I," exclaimed the Raja, "who unwittingly drank the water": and, accordingly, in the belly of Yuvanáśwa was conceived a child. And it grew; and, in due time, it ripped open the right side of the Raja, and was born: and the Raja did not die. Upon the birth of the child, "Who will be its nurse?" said the Munis; when (Indra,) the king of the gods appeared, and said, "He shall have me for his nurse" (mám ayaṁ dhásyati); and, hence, the boy was named Mándhátŕi. Indra put his fore-finger into the mouth of the infant, who sucked it, and drew from it (heavenly) nectar.'

(4) The Buddha-karita of Aśvaghosha (c. 100 A.D.) narrates the birth of Buddha from the side of queen Mâyâ: Buddha-karita trans. E. B. Cowell 1. 25, 26, 29 (The Sacred Books of the East Oxford 1894 xlix. 5 f.) 'At that time the constellation Pushya was auspicious, and from the side of the queen, who was purified by her vow, her son was born for the welfare of the world, without pain and without illness. Like the sun bursting from a cloud in the morning,—so he too, when he was born from his mother's womb, made the world bright like gold, bursting forth with his rays which dispelled the darkness.... As was Aurva's birth from the thigh, and Pŕithu's from the hand, and Mândhâtŕi's, who was like Indra himself, from the forehead [but see supra (3)], and Kakshîvat's from the upper end of the arm,—thus too was his birth (miraculous).' The Fo-sho-hing-tsan-king, a translation of the Buddha-karita into Chinese made by the Indian priest Dharmaraksha (c. 420 A.D.), repeats the narrative: Fo-sho-hing-tsan-king trans. S. Beal 1. 1. 9—11 (The Sacred Books of the East Oxford 1883 xix. 2 f.) 'While she (thus) religiously observed the rules of a pure discipline, Bodhisattva was born from her right side, (come) to deliver the world, constrained by great pity, without causing his mother pain or anguish. As king Yu-liu [sc. Aurva] was born from the thigh, as king Pi-t'au [sc. Pŕithu] was born from the hand, as king Man-to [sc. Mândhâtŕi] was born from the top of the head [but see supra (3)], as king Kia-k'ha [sc. Kakshîvat] was born from the arm-pit, So also was Bodhisattva on the day of his birth produced from the right side; gradually emerging from the womb, he shed in every direction the rays of his glory.'

(5) F. Liebrecht Des Gervasius von Tilbury Otia Imperialia Hannover 1856 p. 72 notes that, according to an Old French legend, Phanuel once peeled an apple and wiped the knife on his thigh. The juice soaked into and impregnated his thigh, from which nine months later a girl—the mother of the Virgin Mary—was born (J. von Lassberg Ein schoen alt Lied von Grave Friz von Zolre, dem Oettinger, und der Belagerung von Hohen Zolren, nebst noch etlichen andern Liedern (Constanz 1842) p. 76 f.: 'Sainz fanoel se sist un Jour | Emmi sa sale ala froideur | Seur vn coulstes de cendaul | Il apela son senechaul | Des pomes li fit apourter | Es melades en veut doner | Ses seneschauz laut apourta | Et a ses piez sa genoilla | Trois des pomes et un coutel | Mit en la main sainz fanoel | Ly rois les prit sy les tailla | Et es melades en dona | Quant ly rois ot taille la pome | De la seue qui tant fut bone | Entint vn poy a son coutel | Or oiez de saint fanoel | Quant il vit son coutel moille | De la pome quil ot taille | A sa cuisse le ressuia | Et la seue ly engenra | Vne mout gentil demoiselle | Qui mout parfut cortoise et belle. ‖ Qvant ly rois vit la grand meruoille | A cui nulle ne sa peroille | Il hamende tous ses amis | Et les mires de son pais | Il ny vint mires tant senez | Ne feciein tant letrez | Qui sehut dire la doleur | De la Jambe lempereur | Tant furent esbahy ly mire | Ly plus saige ne sot que dire | Quant vint au iour que dieux imit | Sy commen lescriture dit | Ly rois melades acoucha | Et de la cuisse deliura | Iceille gentil demoiseille | Qui tant fut cortoise et belle | Ce fut sainte anne don ie dy | D la meire ihesu nasqui'). Liebrecht loc. cit. thinks that this may conceivably be 'eine Reminiscenz der Dionysius[sic]-sage.' Hardly so.

(6) S. Baring-Gould Legends of Old Testament Characters London and New York 1871 p. 20 f. 'The inhabitants of Madagascar have a strange myth touching the origin of woman. They say that the first man was created of the dust of the earth, and was placed in a garden, where he was subject to none of the ills which now affect mortality; he was also free from all bodily appetites, and though surrounded by delicious fruit and limpid streams, yet felt no desire to taste of the fruit or to quaff the water. The Creator had, moreover, strictly forbidden him either to eat or to drink. The great enemy, however, came to him, and painted to him in glowing colours the sweetness of the apple, the lusciousness of the date, and the succulence of the orange. In vain: the first man remembered the command laid upon him by his Maker. Then the fiend assumed the appearance of an effulgent spirit, and pretended to be a messenger from Heaven commanding him to eat and drink. The man at once obeyed. Shortly after, a pimple appeared on his leg; the spot enlarged to a tumour, which increased in size and caused him considerable annoyance. At the end of six months it burst, and there emerged from the limb a beautiful girl. The father of all living was sorely perplexed what to make of his acquisition, when a messenger from heaven appeared, and told him to let her run about the garden till she was of a marriageable age, and then to take her to himself as his wife. He obeyed. He called her Bahouna, and she became the mother of all races of men.' The relation of this and similar Malagasy tales to Biblical teaching is discussed by J. A. MacCulloch in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1912 v. 708 b. F. Liebrecht Zur Volkskunde Heilbronn 1879 p. 490 n. (=id. in Germania 1860 v. 479) cites a variant from J. W. Wolf Deutsche Märchen und Sagen Leipzig 1845 p. 599 (on no. 198): 'Die Einwohner von Madagaskar erzählen, Adam habe stark gegessen und in Folge dessen einem natürlichen Bedürfnisse genügen müssen, was sich aber gleich im Paradiese durch den Geruch verrathen. Daroh sei er vom Teufel verklagt worden und Gott habe ihn aus dem Paradiese geworfen. Einige Zeit nachher wäre sein Bein aufgeschwollen und man habe ein jung Mädchen heraus geholt, welches er geheirathet.'

(7) In Norse cosmogony Ymir, ancestor of all the giants, went to sleep, fell into a sweat, and brought forth a female-child and a male-child from under his arm-pit, while from the union of his two feet he produced a six-headed son (G. Vigfusson—F. York Powell Corpus Poeticum Boreale Oxford 1883 i. 66=Vafþrúðnis-mal 2. 31 'Woden. Seventhly, tell me, etc., How did this sturdy giant beget sons, since he knew not giantess? —Wafthr. A maid-child and man-child grew together from under his arm-pit. Foot begat with foot a six-headed son to that wise giant,' K. Simrock Die Edda[7] Stuttgart 1878 p. 252=Gylfaginning 5 'Da antwortete Har: Wir halten ihn mit nichten für einen Gott: er war böse wie alle von seinem Geschlecht, die wir Hrimthursen nennen. Es wird erzählt, als er schlief fing er an zu schwitzen: da wuchs ihm unter seinem linken Arm Mann und Weib und sein einer Fuss zeugte einen Sohn mit dem andern. Und von diesen kommt das Geschlecht der Hrimthursen; den alten Hrimthurs aber nennen wir Ymir'). See further J. Grimm Teutonic Mythology trans. J. S. Stallyhrass London 1883 ii. 559, K. Simrock Handbuch der Deutschen Mythologie[5] Bonn 1878 pp. 17, 35, E. H. Meyer Germanische Mythologie Berlin 1891 p. 145, P. D. Chantepie de la Saussaye The Religion of the Teutons Boston and London 1902 p. 342, P. Herrmann Nordische Mythologie Leipzig 1903 p. 574.

(8) Persephone Χειρογονία (Hesych. Χειρογονία· ἡ Περσεφόνη) has been variously explained. I. Vossius in the notes to J. Alberti's edition of Hesychios (Lugduni Batavorum 1766) ii. 1546 n. 30 asks: 'An quod manuum labore nascantur fruges?' M. Schmidt in Philologus 1858 xiii. 220 replies: 'Vielmehr Χειρογένεια, was aus 'Αχειρογένεια entstanden sein könnte; doch hängt vielleicht 'Αχειρώ mit 'Εγγήρυς Eccere Ceres

Hydria at Queens' College, Cambridge:
Apollon visits the Lesbian oracle of Orpheus.

See page 99 f.

Phantoms were in fashion. The Platonic Phaidros, perhaps taking a hint from Stesichoros[1] or Euripides[2], tells how the gods, indignant that Orpheus was unwilling to die for love, sent him back empty-handed after showing him a mere phantom of his wife, not her very self[3].

In this connexion the design on a red-figured hydría in my possession is deserving of notice (pl. xvi)[4]. It is Attic work dating from the last quarter of the fifth century B.C. In the centre stands a slender, youthful Apollon. He wears a bay-wreath on his flowing locks and a chlamýs with weighted corners over his left arm. In his right hand he holds a long bay-branch; in his left, a lyre. Both hands are lowered, and the god looks downwards at the head of Orpheus, which with parted lips and upturned face is zusammen [Hesych. s.v. 'Αχηρώ ('Αχειρώ cod.)].' G. J. Vossius De theologia Gentili, et physiologia Christiana[2] Amsterdami 1668 i. 224=lib. 2 cap. 28, F. Creuzer Symbolik und Mythologie[3] Leipzig and Darmstadt 1842 iv. 330, Gerhard Gr. Myth. i. 452, Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 781 n. 3 take the appellative to describe Persephone as a goddess of birth. E. Maass De Aeschyli Supplicibus commentatio Gryphiswaldiae 1890 pp. xix, xxxvi f. suggests that Χειρογονία must be daughter of a Zeus *Χειρογόνος, 'qui ut infans nascatur manu efficit.' He compares, not only the Zeus Αχεάτης of Aliphera in Arkadia (Paus. 8. 26. 6 καὶ Διός τε ἱδρύσαντο Αχεάτου βωμόν, ἅτε ἐνταῦθα τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν τεκόντος) and the Zeus εὐώδυν of Nonnos (Dion. 48. 974 f. καὶ θεὸς ἀμπελόεις πατρώιον αἰθέρα βαίνων | πατρὶ σὺν εὐώδυνι μιῆς ἕψανσε τραπέζης. See further Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. iii. 2532 B), but also (Zeus) Agamemnon *'Ορσίλοχος assumed to account for Iphigeneia 'Ορσιλοχία (Ant. Lib. 27) and Zeus *"Επαφος assumed to account for Dionysos 'Επάφιος (Orph. h. Lys. Len. 50. 7 and h. triet. 52. 9 cited supra p. 4 n. o). Id. Aratea Berlin 1892 p. 349 adds: 'Ac fortasse de Dactylorum etymo hac eadem ratione edocebimur quid sibi velit. Quid? si χειρογόνοι credebantur et digitis placide ventri immissis contrectando efficere, ut parerent parturientes? Essent igitur Δάκτυλοι = Δακτυλογόνοι.... Coniectura haec est, nihil amplius.' Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 860 n. 2 concludes: 'Orsilocheia und Persephone Cheirogonia ... sind selbst Geburtsgöttinnen gewesen, nicht nach (Zeus) Agamemnon *Orsilochos oder Zeus *Cheirogonos ... genannt.' F. Liebrecht locc. citt. would bring Persephone into line with Prithu (supra (2)): 'Persephone heisst die Fingergeborene (χειρογονία) und deshalb auch wieder aus den Fingern Gebärende.' This is attractive, but cannot claim the support of any actual myth. The preceding statement 'die Paliken erscheinen als Fingergeburten' is erroneous, the whole context being presumably copied from J. J. Bachofen Versuch über die Gräbersymbolik der Alten Basel 1859 p. 174 'Darum erscheinen die Paliken auf bekannten Vasenbildern als Fingergeburt; darum heisst auch Persephone selbst Χειρογονία, die Fingergeborne, und deshalb auch wieder aus den Fingern Gebärende.'

[1] O. Kern in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 1323, citing A. Hug's commentary on Plat. symp. p. 43.

[2] O. Gruppe in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1158.

[3] Plat. symp. 179 D 'Ορφέα δὲ τὸν Οἰάγρου ἀτελῆ ἀπέπεμψαν ἐξ "Αιδου, φάσμα δείξαντες τῆς γυναικὸς ἐφ' ἣν ἦκεν, αὐτὴν δὲ οὐ δόντες, ὅτι μαλθακίζεσθαι ἐδόκει, ἅτε ὢν κιθαρῳδός, καὶ οὐ τολμᾶν ἕνεκα τοῦ ἔρωτος ἀποθνήσκειν ὥσπερ "Αλκηστις, ἀλλὰ διαμηχανᾶσθαι ζῶν εἰσιέναι εἰς "Αιδου.

[4] The vase (height 8¾ inches) was found in Attike, and was acquired by me in 1933.

chanting an oracle from the ground[1]. Behind Orpheus stands a young woman, presumably the Pythia. She too looks down, and holds her right hand with a deprecatory gesture above the head. She has a beaded fillet and upright bay-leaves in her hair, and she is clad in a péplos with long overfold and girdle. Behind Apollon stands another woman, closely swathed in chitón and himátion. She also gazes at the head of Orpheus, but with loosened hair and a look of such obvious distress that we must surely identify her with Eurydike[2]. I take the whole design to portray the visit of Apollon to the Lesbian oracle of Orpheus—a scene graphically described by Philostratos[3] the Athenian early in s. iii A.D.:

'He (sc. Apollonios of Tyana) put in at Lesbos and made his way to the ádyton of Orpheus. The story goes that once on a time Orpheus here practised seercraft with pleasure, until Apollon took notice of him. For men no longer resorted to Gryneion for oracles, nor to Klaros, nor yet to the Apolline tripod[4]; but Orpheus alone gave oracles, his head having lately arrived from Thrace. Wherefore the god came upon him as he was chanting an oracular strain and said: "Leave my business to me: I have borne long enough with your singing".'[5]

Hitherto the only available illustration of this narrative was the design on a red-figured kýlix now in the Lewis collection at Cambridge, published many years ago by G. Minervini (fig. 35) and noted by A. Furtwängler as Attic work referable to the time of the Peloponnesian War[6]. The obverse of this vase shows Apollon's

[1] Philostr. her. 6. 4 ἡ κεφαλὴ γὰρ μετὰ τὸ τῶν γυναικῶν ἔργον ἐς Λέσβον κατασχοῦσα ῥῆγμα τῆς Λέσβου ᾠκησε κἀν κοίλῃ τῇ γῇ ἐχρησμῴδει. ὅθεν ἐχρῶντό τ' αὐτῇ τὰ μαντικὰ Λέσβιοί τε καὶ τὸ ἄλλο πᾶν Αἰολικὸν καὶ Ἴωνες Αἰολεῦσι πρόσοικοι, χρησμοὶ δὲ τοῦ μαντείου τούτου καὶ ἐς Βαβυλῶνα ἀνεπέμποντο. πολλὰ γὰρ καὶ ἐς τὸν ἄνω βασιλέα ἡ κεφαλὴ ᾖδε, Κύρῳ τε τῷ ἀρχαίῳ χρησμὸν ἐντεῦθεν ἐκδοθῆναι λέγεται, "τάμά, ὦ Κῦρε, σά," κ.τ.λ.

[2] The only other possibility would be to regard her as 'the Muse herself that Orpheus bore,' whether Kalliope or another (O. Gruppe in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1073 f.). But this is not the type of any known or recognisable Muse.

[3] Philostr. v. Apoll. 4. 14 p. 133 f. Kayser.

[4] Sc. Delphoi.

[5] The concluding words are ἐφίστανται οἱ χρησμῳδοῦντι ὁ θεὸς καὶ "πέπαυσο" ἔφη "τῶν ἐμῶν, καὶ γὰρ δὴ (καὶ) ᾄδοντά σε ἱκανῶς ἤνεγκα." Possibly the original source of the story (Damis of Nineveh? Maximus of Aigai? see Philostr. v. Apoll. 1. 3 p. 3 f. Kayser) had a hexameter passage such as χρησμῳδοῦντι θεός ποτ' ἐφίστατο καὶ προσέειπε | 'παῦσαι ἐμῶν, καὶ γάρ σ' ἱκανῶς ᾄδοντ' ἤνεγκα' or 'τῶν δ' ἄρ' ἐμῶν—καὶ γάρ σ' ἱκανῶς ἤνεγκα—πέπαυσο.' But the later oracles of Apollon tend to drop verse for prose (Frazer Pausanias v. 238). It is curious, if no more, that the words τὰ ἐμά occur again in the oracle spoken by Orpheus' head to Kyros the Elder (Philostr. her. 6. 4 τάμά, ὦ Κῦρε, σά.)

[6] G. Minervini 'Oracolo di Orfeo e dell' Apollo Napeo in Lesbo: vaso dipinto di fabbrica nolana' in the Bull. Arch. Nap. 1858 vi. 33—39 pl. 4, 1 (= my fig. 35) held that on one side Pelops is taking down an oracle pronounced by the head of Orpheus under the protection of Apollon Ναπαῖος (schol. Aristoph. nub. 144), and that on the other Kalliope has picked up her son's lyre and a second Muse the strap from which it was hung. Reinach Rép. Vases i. 493, 2 is more cautious: '(A) La tête coupée d'Orphée rend des visit to the oracle of Orpheus' head; its reverse, the finding of Orpheus' lyre by a couple of Lesbian women (hardly Muses). The new vase also amplifies the oracular visit by the addition of two women, but lends a far greater significance to them by making one the devotee of Apollon, the other the wife of Orpheus. And, if that is the case, Eurydike must necessarily be present in phantom form—a figure comparable with the ghost of Klytaimestra as she appears on more than one Greek vase[1]. Mr C. T. Seltman further points out to me that both these Orpheus-vases presuppose an interest at Athens in the sacra of Lesbos and handle the theme with a light-hearted semi-humorous touch understandable enough during the Athenian domination of the island in 427—412 B.C.[2]

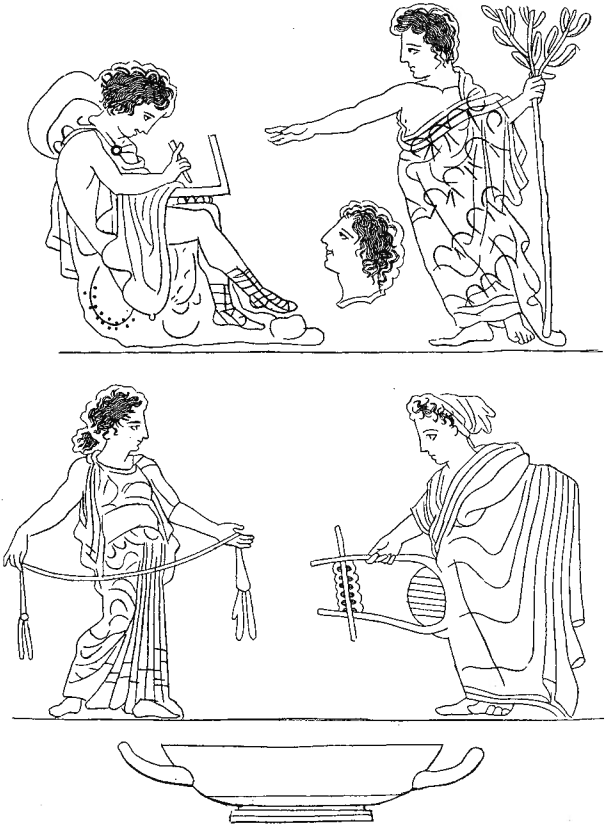

Fig. 35.

Lastly, there is the phantasmal Aeneas, whom Iuno in Virgil's epic fashions out of 'hollow cloud' and decks with Dardanian armour oracles, qu'un éphèbe (Pélops?) transcrit sur un diptyque en présence d'Apollon (?). (B) Deux femmes, tenant l'une la lyre d'Orphée, l'autre le baudrier auquel elle était suspendue.' A. Furtwängler in the Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Berlin l. 163 'eine ausgezeichnete Schale im Stile der Zeit des peloponnesischen Krieges zeigt den abgeschlagenen Kopf des Orpheus, der singend Orakelsprüche ertheilt, welche ein Jüngling in ein Diptychon aufzeichnet, während Apollon als Orpheus Beschützer mit ausgestreckter Hand hinter dem Kopfe steht' is followed by O. Gruppe in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1177 f. fig. 3. But Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen iii. 247 ff. fig. 139 has more to say: 'Als Beschützer des Kopfes [Ov. met. 11. 50 ff., cp. Stob. flor. 64. 14 Phanokles (ed. Gaisford ii. 418 f., Wachsmuth—Hense iv. 1. 461 f.)] und Herr des Ortes erscheint Apollon offenbar auch auf dem Vasenbilde. Auf der Rückseite derselben Schale scheint die Lyra des Orpheus in den Händen einer Muse dargestellt, während eine zweite eine Tänie bereit hält, um die Leier damit als Weihgeschenk zu umschlingen. Das Bild scheint darauf anzuspielen, dass die Leier dem Apollon geweiht ward [Loukian. adv. indoct. 11].' C. Robert 'Das orakelnde Haupt des Orpheus' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1917 xxxii. 146 f. fig. 1 rightly holds that the vase-painter, like Philostratos, is depicting the myth of Apollon's protest. See further C. D. Bicknell in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1921 xli. 230 pl. 12, H. Philippart in L'Antiquité Classique 1935 iv. 209 pl. 27, 1.

Fig. 36.

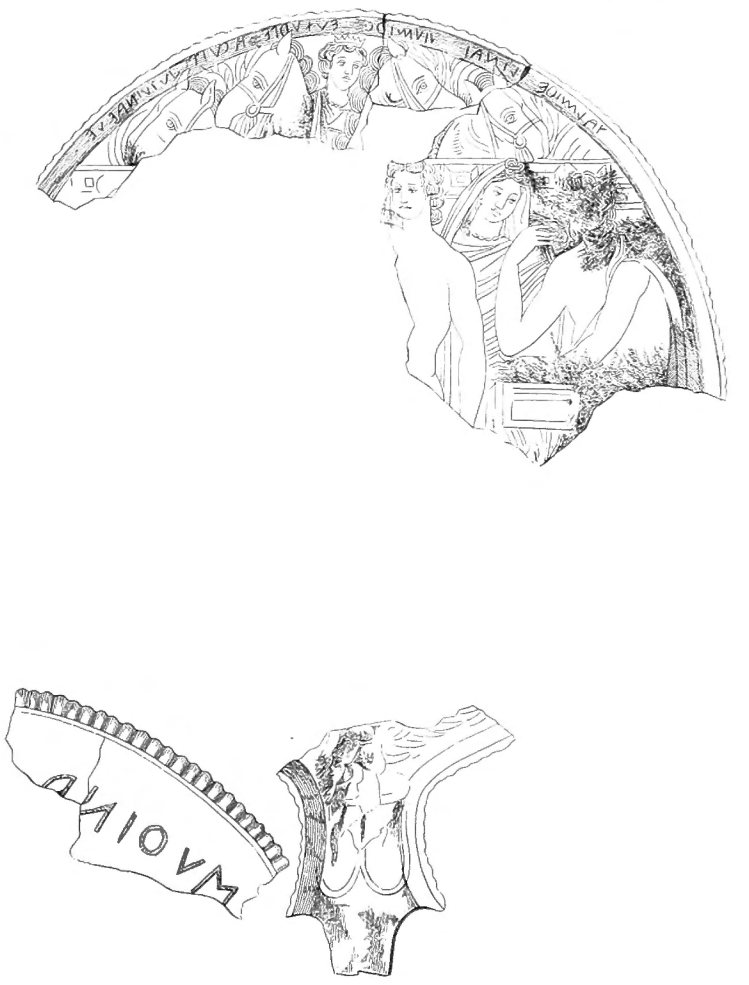
To the gems discussed by Furtwängler Ant. Gemmen iii. 245 f. add a sliced chalcedony in my collection (fig. 36 scale ⅔), which resembles his 1 pl. 20, 53 = pl. 22, 5, cp. 6, ii. 100, 107. A chip above the young man's head has been crudely altered by some later hand into a would-be pétasos. See too the Etruscan mirrors figured on my pl. xvii, and a 'Campanian' amphora of c. 450—425 B.C., now in the Musée Borély at Marseille, interpreted by Prof. P. P. Jacobsthal, to whom I am greatly indebted for my pl. xviii, as a youth consulting the oracular head of Orpheus.

[1] O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 1244 ('Das Schattenbild Klytaimestras'). The greatest resemblance to our Eurydike is shown by the phantom Klytaimestra of a kratér from Armento (c. 420 B.C.), now in the Louvre (J. de Witte in the Ann. d. Inst. 1847 xix. 413 ff., Mon. d. Inst. iv. pl. 48 = Reinach Rép. Vases i. 132, 2, Overbeck Gall. her. Bildw. i. 714 f. Atlas pl. 29, 7, F. Hauser in Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei ii. 330 ff. pl. 120, 4, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 576, 597 f., iii. 356 fig. 798, L. Séchan Études sur la tragédie grecque dans ses rapports avec la céramique Paris 1926 p. 97 ff. pl. 1, 2), who likewise occupies a position on the extreme left of the group.

[2] Mr Seltman also suspects that the story told by Philostratos about Kyros the Elder (supra p. 100 n. 1) belongs more properly to Kyros the Younger. If the former captured Babylon in 538, the latter had designs upon it in 401. If the corpse of the one was beheaded by Tomyris, that of the other was beheaded by Artaxerxes. Confusion might result, and some points of the story suit the Younger better than the Elder. Be that as it may, Philostratos' mention of Babylon suggests that he may here be indebted to Damis of Nineveh.

(1)

(2)



(3)

Etruscan mirrors representing the oracular head of Orpheus.

(1) A mirror from Clusium, now in the Casuccini collection (no. 176), Villa Marcianella, Chiusi. The head of Orpheus (ƎΦ⊕ꓤV) looks up from the ground with parted lips, while a young man on the right takes down the oracle (B. Bandinelli in the Mon. d. Linc. 1925 xxx. 542—552 fig. 10, W. K. C. Guthrie Orpheus and Greek Religion London 1935 p. 35 f. fig. 6).

(2) A mirror, now in Paris (De Ridder Cat. Bronzes du Louvre ii. 50 no. 1724), of similar design, but without names (E. Gerhard in the Abh. d. berl. Akad. 1861 Phil.-hist. Classe p. 407 f. pl. 2, id. Etr. Spiegel iii. 275 f., 325 ff. pl. 257 A, B. Bandinelli loc. cit. p. 547 f.).

(3) A fragmentary mirror, formerly in the Borgia collection and now presumably at Naples, which had once a similar design (E. Gerhard Etr. Spiegel iii. 190 pl. 196, B. Bandinelli loc. cit. p. 548).

See page 102 n. 0.

Early 'Campanian' amphora in the Musée Borély at Marseilles:
a youth consulting the oracle of Orpheus' head (?).

See page 102 n. 0.

in order to lure Turnus from the fight[1]. The Roman poet probably based his figment on a passage of the Iliad, in which Apollon rescues Aineias from Diomedes by carrying off his protégé and substituting a phantom resembling him in person and equipment[2]. We are not, however, told that the Homeric phantom was made of cloud; indeed, it would appear that in genuine Greek myth, as distinct from the inventions of a Euripides or a Virgil, the cloud-effigy was always female, since the cloud itself was feminine.

§ 7. Zeus and the Wind.

(a) Men believed to control the winds.

The Greeks, like other imperfectly civilised nations[3], credited certain persons with the power of controlling the winds. At Athens the Heudánemoi or 'Lull-winds' had an altar near the Metroön[4]: they seem to have been a clan tracing their descent from an eponymous founder Heudánemos, who was revered as an angel in Christian times[5]. At Eleusis too there was a well-known altar of [1] Verg. Aen. 10. 633 ff. haec ubi dicta dedit, caelo se protinus alto | misit agens hiemem nimbo succincta per auras, | Iliacamque aciem et Laurentia castra petivit. | tum dea nube cava tenuem sine viribus umbram | in faciem Aeneae (visu mirabile monstrum) | Dardaniis ornat telis, clipeumque iubasque | divini adsimulat capitis, dat inania verba, | dat sine mente sonum gressusque effingit euntis; | etc. After enticing Turnus to follow him on board the ship of Osinius, the phantom disappears: ib. 663 f. tum levis haud ultra latebras iam quaerit imago, | sed sublime volans nubi se immiscuit atrae.

[2] Il. 5. 449 ff. αὐτὰρ ὁ εἴδωλον τεῦξ' ἀργυρότοξος Ἀπόλλων (interp. Serv. in Verg. Aen. 2. 601 says inadvertently: Aeneas a Neptuno opposita nube liberatur) | αὐτῷ τ' Αἰνείᾳ ἴκελον καὶ τείχεσι τοῖον, | ἀμφὶ δ' ἄρ' εἰδώλῳ Τρῶες καὶ δῖοι Ἀχαιοὶ | δῄουν ἀλλήλων ἀμφὶ στήθεσσι βοείας | ἀσπίδας εὐκύκλους λαισήϊά τε πτερόεντα. W. Leaf ad loc. comments: 'The mention of the "wraith" is not like Homer, nor does it appear on other occasions when a hero is snatched away by a god. It plays no further part in the action, nor does there seem to be the least surprise shown at the reappearance of the original Aineias in the field, l. 514. Thus 449—453 are probably interpolated; the last two lines come bodily from M 425—6.'

On heroes etc. wrapped in a cloud and carried off by god or goddess see F. von Duhn De Menelai itinere Aegyptio Bonnae 1874 p. 38, A. von Premerstein in Philologus 1896 lv. 636, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 996 n. 1, 1153.

[3] Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art i. 319—331 ('The Magical Control of the Wind'), The Scapegoat pp. 176, 178 ff., Balder the Beautiful ii. 232 f.

[4] Arrian. an. 3. 16. 8 καὶ ταύτας (sc. Antenor's group of Harmodios and Aristogeiton) Ἀθηναίοις ὀπίσω πέμπει Ἀλέξανδρος, καὶ νῦν κεῖνται Ἀθήνησιν ἐν Κεραμεικῷ αἱ εἰκόνες, ᾗ ἄνιμεν ἐς πόλιν, καταντικρὺ μάλιστα τοῦ Μητρῴου, <οὐ (ins. N. Blancardus post B. Facii 'non procul') > μακρὰν τῶν Εὐδανέμων τοῦ βωμοῦ· ὅστις δὲ μεμύηται ταῖν θεαῖν ἐν Ἐλευσῖνι (G. Loeschcke, followed by J. Töpffer, cj. ἐν Ἐλευσινίῳ. But K. Wachsmuth in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2335 notes other examples of Ἐλευσῖνι wrongly altered to Ἐλευσινίῳ), οἶδε τοῦ (so A. G. Roos for τὸν cod. A.) Εὐδανέμου τὸν βωμὸν (B. Vulcanius reads τὸν Εὐδανέμου βωμὸν) ἐπὶ τοῦ δαπέδου ὄντα.

[5] Hesych. Εὐδάνεμος· ἄγγελος, παρὰ Ἀθηναίοις. H. Usener Götternamen Bonn 1896 p. 259 n. 28 cj. γένος for ἄγγελος. Alii aliter: see C. Wachsmuth Die Stadt Athen im

Heudánemos[1]; and that the Heudánemoi had something to do with Eleusinian ritual appears from the title of a speech fathered upon Deinarchos, viz. 'The Heudánemoi v. the Kérykes in re the Basket[2]'—presumably the sacred basket of Demeter[3]. At Corinth there was a similar clan of Anemokoîtai or 'Wind-layers,' whose business was to hush the winds to sleep[4]. Even in the days of Constantine Sopatros of Apameia, a pupil of Iamblichos[5], was accused of having bound the south winds and so prevented the corn-ships of Egypt, Syria, and Phoinike from reaching Byzantion: his enemies actually induced the emperor to order his execution[6].

With regard to the precise rites practised by the wind-layer there is a dearth of evidence. Perhaps the harmful gale was conjured into a jar[7] or bag[8]. Empedokles of Akragas was surnamed Alterthum Leipzig 1890 ii. 1. 441 n. 3. Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 209 n. 0 concludes: 'Hesych. v. Εὐδάνεμος bleibt uns dunkel. Ob der Glossator Εὔδανεμος geschrieben, das für εὔδιος ἄνεμος genommen und nach Anleitung von Hebr. 1, 7 ὁ ποιῶν τοὺς ἀγγέλους αὐτοῦ πνεύματα interpretiert hat, oder wie er sonst zu seiner Glosse gelangt ist, lässt sich nicht sagen.' Hesychios seems to imply that the pagan eponym became a Christian angel without losing his special function of tempering the wind.

[1] Supra p. 103 n. 3.

[2] Dion. Hal. de Dinarch. 11 (=J. G. Baiter—H. Sauppe Oratores Attici Turici 1850 ii. 323 b 9 f.) Διαδικασία Εὐδανέμων πρὸς Κήρυκας ὑπὲρ τοῦ κανοῦ· κ.τ.λ.

[3] Infra Append. P, cp. i. 530 n. 2. J. Töpffer Attische Genealogie Berlin 1889 p. 112 would detect 'eine Anspielung auf irgendwelche mit den Heudanemen in Beziehung stehende liturgische Handlungen' in Hermesianax frag. 2, 17 ff. Diehl, 7, 17 ff. Powell, ap. Athen. 597 D ἥ τε πολὺν μύστησιν (so C. J. Blomfield for πολυμνηστησιν cod. A. E. Diehl prints πολὺ<μ>μύστησιν) Ἐλευσῖνος παρὰ πέζαν | εὐσαμὸν κρυφίων ἐξεφόρει λογίων, | Ῥάριον ὀργίων ἀνέμῳ διαποιπνύουσα | Δημήτρᾳ· γνωστὴ δ' ἔστι καὶ εἰν Ἀΐδῃ. But in the crucial line 19 the reading of cod. A. ὀργωνανεμωι was corrected by J. G. J. Hermann into ὀργειῶνι νόμῳ, by C. J. Blomfield into ὀργειῶνα νόμῳ. Hermann is followed by Diehl, Blomfield by J. U. Powell: in either case the allusion to wind-laying disappears.

[4] Hesych. Ἀνεμοκοῖται· οἱ ἀνέμους κοιμίζοντες. γένος δὲ τοιοῦτόν φασιν ὑπάρχειν ἐν Κορίνθῳ = Souid. s.v. Ἀνεμοκοῖται, cp. Eustath. in Od. p. 1645, 41 f. χρήσιμον δὲ εἰς τὸ ἀνέμους πανέμεναι (Od. 10. 22) καὶ τὸ Ἀνεμοκοῖται, γένος ἐν Κορίνθῳ ἀνέμους κοιμίζοντες.

[5] O. Seeck in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii A. 1006 f.

[6] Eunap. v. Aedes. 41 καὶ οἱ πάλαι βασκαίνοντες, εὑρηκέναι καιρὸν ἡγούμενοι κάλλιστον, "ἀλλὰ Σώπατρός γε," ἔφασαν, "ὁ παρὰ σοῦ τιμώμενος κατέδησε τοὺς ἀνέμους δι' ὑπερβολὴν σοφίας, ἣν καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπαινεῖς, καὶ δι' ἣν ἔτι τοῖς βασιλείοις ἐγκάθηται θρόνοις." καὶ ὁ Κωνσταντῖνος ταῦτα ἀκούσας καὶ συμπεισθεὶς κατακοπῆναι κελεύει τὸν ἄνδρα, καὶ ἐγίνετο διὰ τοὺς βασκαίνοντας ταῦτα θᾶττον ἢ ἐλέγετο.

[7] Cp. the Indian 'jar of the winds' (infra § 7 (b)). It was believed that a toad emprisoned in a new jar and buried in the field would safeguard the crops against stormy weather (Plin. nat. hist. 18. 294 Archibius (on whom see M. Wellmann in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 466) ad Antiochum Syriae regem scripsit, si fictili novo obruatur rubeta rana in media segete, non esse noxias tempestates). The same remedy served to protect millet against sparrows and worms (Plin. nat. hist. 18. 158 multi ad mili remedia rubetam noctu arvo circumferri iubent, priusquam sariatur, defodique in medio inclusam fictili. ita nec passerem nec vermes nocere, sed eruendam, priusquam metatur; alioquin amarum fieri, Geopon. 2. 18. 14 Ἀπουλήϊος δέ φησι (see L. von Schwabe in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 249, E. Oder ib. vii. 1221 f.), πρὶν σκαφῆναι τὴν ἄρουραν, φρῦνον, τουτέστι βάτραχον χερσαῖον, νυκτὸς περὶ αὐτὴν περιενεγκόντα κατακλεῖσαι ἐν σκεύει κεραμιαίῳ καὶ ἐν μέσῳ

Alexanémas, 'Averter of Winds[1],' or Kolysanémas, 'Preventer of Winds,' because once, when the Etesian Winds were spoiling the crops, he had asses flayed and bags made of their skins: these bags he proceeded to set round the hills and mountain-tops in order to catch the wind[2]. His choice of the ass was certainly not accidental, for at Taras a sacred ass was allowed to run wild till it was sacrificed καταχῶσαι τῆς ἀρούρας· κατὰ δὲ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦ σπόρου ἀνορύξαι τὸ σκεῦος, καὶ ἐκβαλεῖν τῆς ἀρούρας, ἵνα μὴ πικρὸς ὁ καρπὸς γένηται, ib. 2. 18. 15 ὁ αὐτὸς δὲ 'Απουλήϊός φησι, τοῖς σπειρομένοις χρῆναι παραμυγνύναι ὀλίγην φακῆν· φύσει γὰρ ἀντιστατεῖ πρὸς τὸ χαλεπὸν τῶν ἀνέμων). And very similar beliefs on French soil are noted by P. Sébillot Le Folk-lore de France Paris 1906 iii. 264 f. In Italy toads are said to spring from the first large raindrops of a storm (A. de Gubernatis Zoological Mythology London 1872 ii. 379 n. 2), and in France to announce the coming downpour by repeated croaks (P. Sébillot op. cit. iii. 260) or leaps (id. ib. iii. 267). In Switzerland a toad crawling across the road betokens rain (H. Bächtold-Stäubli in the Handwörterbuch des deutschen Aberglaubens Berlin—Leipzig 1933 v. 609). 'Eine "Dreissgenkröte" im Estrich aufgehängt, zieht in Tirol alle "bösen Winde," an einem Faden in der Stube aufgehängt, im Kt. Bern alle giftigen Dünste in sich' (id. ib. p. 619).

[8] Infra § 7 (b).

[1] Porph. v. Pyth. 29 'Αλεξάνεμος μὲν ἦν τὸ ἐπώνυμον 'Εμπεδοκλέους = Iambl. v. Pyth. 136 'Αλεξάνεμος μὲν ὂν τὸ ἐπώνυμον 'Εμπεδοκλέους. Cp. Eustath. in Od. p. 1645, 42 f. εἰς ὅπερ (supra p. 104 n. 4) δεξιῶς λέγεται διακεῖσθαι καὶ 'Εμπεδοκλῆς. L. C. Valckenaer in his note on Eur. Phoen. 120 restored ἀλεξανέμας as the right reading in Iambl. loc. cit.

[2] Timaios frag. 94 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 215 f. Müller) ap. Diog. Laert. 8. 60 φησὶ δὲ καὶ Τίμαιος ἐν τῇ ὀκτωκαιδεκάτῃ κατὰ πολλοὺς τρόπους τεθαυμάσθαι τὸν ἄνδρα. καὶ γὰρ ἐτησίων ποτὲ σφοδρῶς πνευσάντων ὡς τοὺς καρποὺς λυμήνασθαι, κελεύσας ὄνους ἐκδαρῆναι καὶ ἀσκοὺς ποιεῖσθαι περὶ τοὺς λόφους καὶ τὰς ἀκρωρείας διέτεινε πρὸς τὸ συλλαβεῖν τὸ πνεῦμα· κἠξαντος δέ, Κωλυσανέμαν κληθῆναι. Souid. s.v. ἄπνους cites the same passage, but reads Κωλυσάνεμον. The incident is said to have happened at Akragas (Clem. Al. strom. 6. 3 p. 445, 11 ff. Stählin 'Εμπεδοκλῆς τε ὁ 'Ακραγαντῖνος Κωλυσανέμας ἐπεκλήθη. λέγεται οὖν ἀπὸ τοῦ 'Ακράγαντος ὄρους, πνεόντός ποτε ἀνέμου βαρὺ καὶ νοσῶδες τοῖς ἐγχωρίοις, ἀλλὰ καὶ ταῖς γυναιξὶν αὐτῶν ἀγονίας αἰτίου γινομένου, παῦσαι τὸν ἄνεμον· διὸ καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν τοῖς ἔπεσι γράφει (frag. 111, 3 ff. Diels)· παύσεις δ' ἀκαμάτων ἀνέμων μένος οἵ τ' ἐπὶ γαῖαν | ὀρνύμενοι θνητοῖσι καταφθινύθουσιν ἀρούρας· | καὶ πάλιν, εὖτ' ἐθέλησθα, παλίντιτα πνεύματα θήσεις, Souid. s.v. ἀμύκλαι· ...'Εμπεδοκλῆς... ἑκαλεῖτο δὲ Κωλυσανέμας διὰ τὸ πολλοὺς ἀνέμους ἐπιθεμένους τῇ 'Ακράγαντι ἐξελάσαι αὐτόν, δοραὶς ὄνων περιθέντα τῇ πόλει—a note re-inserted with the variation ἀνέμου πολλοῦ ἐπιθεμένου s.v. 'Εμπεδοκλῆς and thence transcribed s.v. δορά, where it is omitted by codd. V.C.). Here and there, in less credulous quarters, we observe a tendency to minimise the marvel. Plutarch substitutes a practical wall for the bag-magic (Plout. de curiositate 1 ὁ δὲ φυσικὸς 'Εμπεδοκλῆς ὄρους τινὰ διασφάγα βαρὺν καὶ νοσώδη κατὰ τῶν πεδίων τὸν νότον ἐμπνέουσαν ἐμφράξας λοιμὸν ἔδοξεν ἐκκλεῖσαι τῆς χώρας, adv. Colot. 32 'Εμπεδοκλῆς δὲ... τὴν τε χώραν ἀπῆλλαξεν ἀκαρπίας καὶ λοιμοῦ, διασφάγας ὄρους ἀποτειχίσας, δι' ὧν ὁ νότος εἰς τὸ πεδίον ὑπερέβαλλε); Philostratos, as passing cloud for the persistent gales (Philostr. v. Apoll. 8. 7. 8 p. 313 Kayser ἀκηκοὼς δὲ τὰ 'Εμπεδοκλέους, ὃς νεφέλης ἀνέσχε φορὰν ἐπ' 'Ακραγαντίνους ῥαγείσης); Hesychios, promise for performance (Hesych. Κωλυσανέμας· ὁ 'Εμπεδοκλῆς οὕτω καλεῖται, ὡς ὑπισχνούμενος ἐφέξειν τοὺς ἀνέμους). But the fame of the exploit lasted on into the twelfth century (Tzetz. chil. 4. 524 ff. τῷ παύειν δ' ὄμβρους καὶ αὐχμοὺς καὶ προγινώσκειν πάντα | Θαλῆς καὶ Πυθαγόρας τε σὺν τῷ 'Αναξαγόρᾳ· | 'Εμπεδοκλῆς Μελίτωνος ὁ καὶ Κωλυσανέμας).

In the corrupt passage Plout. symp. 8. 8. 1 καὶ τὸν ὁμώνυμον ἐμοὶ τῷ παυσανέμῳ Πυθαγορικῶς περαίνειν τὰ δόγματα στέγουσαι φρενὸς κ.τ.λ. it is probable that we should read καὶ τὸν ὁμώνυμον ἐμοὶ τὸν παυσάνεμον (cp. Aisch. Ag. 214 παυσανέμου... θυσίας) Πυθαγορικῶς παραινεῖν τὰ δόγματα στέγειν ἔσω φρενὸς κ.τ.λ. or the like (see D. Wyttenbach ad loc.).

to the Winds[1]. And his employment of bags recalls the methods used by unsophisticated folk to capture souls[2].

The same power of controlling violent winds was ascribed by the Greeks to Pythagoras, Epimenides, and Abaris[3]. Indeed, any and every wonder-worker could claim the prerogative—even Sophokles[4]. Nowadays, it would seem, the mere mention of the great man's name will suffice. In the Macedonian district of Liakkovikia, during an anemospláda or 'whirlwind,' people often mutter the charm: 'Alexander the Great liveth, aye he doth live and reign[5].'

(b) Aiolos Hippotades.

A figure interesting in this connexion is that of Aiolos Hippotades. He appears in the Odyssey[6] as Lord of Aiolie, a floating island[7] with sheer rocky sides crowned by a wall of unbreakable bronze. Here he feasted with his six sons, whom he had united in wedlock with his six daughters. Here too he entertained Odysseus for a month, at the end of which time he slew an ox, made a bag of its skin, bound the blustering winds within it, and gave it as a parting gift to the hero, fastening it with a silver cord on board his ship. He also supplied him with a west wind to waft him on his way homewards. But later, while Odysseus slept, his comrades, under the belief that the bag was full of treasure, untied it and, to their own discomfiture, let loose the warring winds.

Now Aiolos is said to have been established as keeper, or king,

[1] Hesych. ἀνεμώτας· ὄνος ἄφετος (so Salmasius for ὄνομα ἀφεκτός cod.), ἱερός, τοῖς Ἀνέμοις θυόμενος ἐν Ταραντίνοις, et. mag. p. 103, 33 f. ἀνεμώτας (sic)· παρὰ Ταραντίνοις ὁ ὄνος ὁ Ἀνέμοις θυόμενος. Supra ii. 464. Cp. the sacrifice of asses to Apollon among the Ὑπερβόρεοι 'at the back of the North Wind' (supra ii. 463 f., 494 ff., 843).

[2] Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Taboo pp. 46 ff., 52 f., 64, 67, 75 f., id. Folk-lore in the Old Testament ii. 510 ff.

[3] Porph. v. Pyth. 29 προρρήσεις τε γὰρ ἀπαράβατοι σεισμῶν διαμνημονεύονται αὐτοῦ (sc. τοῦ Πυθαγόρου) καὶ λοιμῶν ἀποτροπαὶ σὺν τάχει καὶ ἀνέμων βιαίων χαλαζῶν τ' ἐκχύσεως καταστολαὶ καὶ κυμάτων ποταμίων τε καὶ θαλαττίων ἀπευδιασμοὶ πρὸς εὐμαρῆ τῶν ἑταίρων διάβασιν. ὧν μεταλαβόντας Ἐμπεδοκλέα τε καὶ Ἐπιμενίδην καὶ Ἄβαριν πολλαχῆ ἐπιτετελεκέναι τοιαῦτα. κ.τ.λ. = Iambl. v. Pyth. 135 προρρήσεις τε σεισμῶν ἀπαράβατοι καὶ λοιμῶν ἀποτροπαὶ σὺν τάχει καὶ ἀνέμων βιαίων χαλαζῶν τε χύσεως παραυτίκα κατευνήσεις καὶ κυμάτων ποταμίων τε καὶ θαλασσίων ἀπευδιασμοὶ πρὸς εὐμαρῆ τῶν ἑταίρων διάβασιν. ὧν μεταλαβόντας Ἐμπεδοκλέα τε τὸν Ἀκραγαντῖνον καὶ Ἐπιμενίδην τὸν Κρῆτα καὶ Ἄβαριν τὸν Ὑπερβόρεον πολλαχῆ καὶ αὐτοὺς τοιαῦτά τινα ἐπιτετελεκέναι. κ.τ.λ.

[4] Philostr. v. Apoll. 8. 7. 8 p. 313 Kayser ἐννοήσας δὲ Σοφοκλέα τὸν Ἀθηναῖον, ὃς λέγεται καὶ ἀνέμους θέλξαι τῆς ὥρας πέρα πνεύσαντας. A. von Blumenthal in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii A. 1047 comments: 'Hier hat wohl das Empedoklesbild eingewirkt.'

[5] G. F. Abbott Macedonian Folklore Cambridge 1903 p. 250 f. Ζῇ, ζῇ καὶ βασιλεύει ὁ Μέγας Ἀλέξανδρος (from A. Δ. Γουσίου ''Η κατὰ τὸ Πάγγαιον Χώρα' p. 79). Possibly Αλέξανδρος has acquired the virtues of Ἀλεξανέμας.

[6] Od. 10. 1 ff.

[7] Infra Append. P (1).

of the winds by Zeus[1]. And Aëthlios, son of Aiolos, was reputed to be the son of Zeus[2]. There is therefore something to be urged for Usener's suggestion that Aiolos himself was 'a sort of Zeus[3].' Perhaps the same thought occurred to Ovid, when he made Iupiter shut Aquilo in the caves of Aeolia and send forth Notus to cause a deluge[4].

Others, however, have rightly insisted that the Homeric Aiolos is not as yet fully deified[5]. Hence his description as 'dear to the immortal gods[6].' Rather, he is a subordinate power, not improbably a dead tribal chieftain, who lives on in his Otherworld island[7] and is conceived as a superhuman magician, the wind-controller par excellence. His bag of winds recalls an odd superstition recorded by Tzetzes and the scholiast on the Odyssey[8]:

'Artful contrivers and those who write on infamous practices declare that, if a man flays a dolphin and makes its skin into a bag and then keeps it at home, he will cause to blow whatever wind he may choose.'

Somewhat similar is Philostratos' account of Indian weather-magic[9]. Apollonios of Tyana and his party are visiting the cloud-capped hill of the Brachmanes, four days' journey from the city Parax:

'And they say that they saw two jars of black stone, filled with rains and winds respectively. The jar of the rains is opened, if India should be oppressed

[1] Od. 10. 21 ταμίην ἀνέμων ποίησε Κρονίων,. Verg. Aen. 1. 52 rex Aeolus, 65 f. divom pater atque hominum rex | et mulcere dedit fluctus et tollere vento.

[2] Paus. 5. 8. 2 εἶναι γάρ φασι καὶ Αἰθλιον Αἰόλου, Διὸς δὲ ἐπίκλησιν. It is clear from the context that this Aiolos was the father of Kretheus. It is an assumption that he was one with Aiolos Hippotades.

[3] H. Usener in the Rhein. Mus. 1898 liii. 346 ff. (=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 275 ff.): 'wie eine Art Zeus' (p. 346 (=p. 276)). We need not, of course, subscribe to Usener's view that Αἴολος was the 'Zig-zag' lightning of Zeus (cp. Pind. Ol. 9. 42 αἰολοβρόντα Διὸς αἴσᾳ), or that his six pairs of children were the twelve months of the year. G. Libertini Le isole Eolie nell' antichità greca e romana Firenze 1921 p. 61 f. argues that Hippotes was a degraded form of Poseidon Ἵππιος, Aiolos an ex-appellative of Zeus (Pind. Ol. 9. 42 αἰολοβρόντα, Orph. h. Zeus 15. 10 αἰολόμορφε) or perhaps rather of Poseidon, the ever-changeful.

[4] Ov. met. 1. 262 ff.

[5] A. H. Keane in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1908 i. 255, G. Foucart ib. 1917 ix. 782.

[6] Od. 10. 2.

[7] Cp. supra i. 239, 243.

[8] Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 738=schol. Od. 10. 2 φασὶ γὰρ οἱ μηχανικοὶ (J. Potter cj. μαγικοὶ G. F. Thryllitzsch cj. μαθηματικοὶ M. C. G. Müller prints μάγοι, but notes: 'Vtrumque tamen, μάγοι et μηχανικοί, bene se habet') καὶ οἱ τὰ ἀρρητουργικὰ γράφοντες ὡς, ἐάν τις δελφῖνα ποιήσῃ ἀσκὸν ἐκδείρας αὐτὸν καὶ ἔχων παρ' ἑαυτῷ, ποιήσει πνεῖν ὃν ἂν βούλοιτο ἄνεμον. E. Scheer ad loc. cp. Eustath. in Od. p. 1645, 59 f. παρ' οἷς καὶ ᾄδεται ὁ ῥηθεὶς τοῦ Αἰόλου ἀσκὸς δελφῖνος εἶναι δέρμα, ib. p. 1646, 8 ff. ὅτι δὲ ἀσκοὶ οὐ μόνον οἱ συνήθως ἐξ αἰγῶν καὶ βοῶν ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐξ ἑτέρων δῆλόν ἐστι. δελφῖνός τε γὰρ ὁ ῥηθεὶς ἀσκὸς τετελεσμένος εἴτουν γεγοητευμένος κ.τ.λ.

[9] Philostr. v. Apoll. 3. 14 p. 92 f. Kayser καὶ διττὼ ἑωρακέναι φασὶ πίθω λίθου μέλανος ὄμβρων τε καὶ ἀνέμων ὄντε. κ.τ.λ. Euseb. πρὸς τοὺς ὑπὲρ Ἀπολλωνίου τοῦ Τυανέως Ἱεροκλέους λόγους 22 p. 388 Kayser scoffs at βροντὰς καὶ ἀνέμους ἐν πίθοις. But the incident is by no means incredible.

by drought, and sends up clouds to moisten the whole country; but if rains should be in excess, it is shut up and puts a stop to them. The jar of the winds, I suppose, plays the same part as the bag of Aiolos; for they open the jar ever so little and let one of the winds blow in season, whereby the country is refreshed.'

Other parallels to Aiolos Hippotades are collected by Sir James Frazer[1]. The closest hails from the Slavonic area:

'It is said that Perdoytus, the Lithuanian Aeolus, keeps the winds enclosed in a leathern bag; when they escape from it he pursues them, beats them, and shuts them up again[2].'

Certain features in the myth of Aiolos invite further investigation. His bag full of winds, opened by the prying followers of Odysseus, bears at least a superficial resemblance to the pithos or 'jar' containing evils opened by the inquisitive woman in Hesiod's Works and Days[3], or to the pithos of Zeus containing good things opened by the over-curious man in a fable of Babrios[4]. The resemblance is increased if, with Miss J. E. Harrison[5], we accept O. Gruppe's[6] conjecture that the pithos in question was that

[1] Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art i. 326 f.

[2] Id. ib. i. 326 n. 5 after E. Veckenstedt Die Mythen, Sagen und Legenden der Žamaiten (Litauer) Heidelberg 1883 i. 153. Sir James Frazer adds: 'The statements of this writer, however, are to be received with caution.'

H. Usener Götternamen Bonn 1896 p. 97: '"Perdoytus gott der kaufleute, von perdout verkaufen" P 27 [i.e. Matthaeus Praetorius Deliciae Prussicae oder Preussische schaubühne ed. W. Pierson Berlin 1871 p. 27] vgl. Sl 91 (18) [i.e. A. Schleicher 'Lituanica' in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. Akad. d. Wiss. in Wien Phil.-hist. Classe 1853 xi. 91 (= extr. p. 18)]. das ist Pardůtojis, nomen agentis von pardůti verkaufen. Doch Bardoayts Ag [i.e. Kirchenagende von 1530 ed. J. Bender in der Altpreussischen monatsschrift iv. 97 f.] unter Gardoaeten. Ist Perdoytus und seine bedeutung erst von P [i.e. Matthaeus Praetorius] um der etymologie willen construiert? vgl. Voigt, Gesch. Pr. 1, 593 anm. 1 [i.e. J. Voigt Geschichte Preussens Königsberg 1827 i. 593 n. 1 Gardetis nach Oftermeyer S. 18 von gardas eine Schaafheerde... Perdoytos vom Altpreuß. perdauns verkaufen, im Lettisch. pahrdoht verkaufen, Handel treiben. Lucas David B. I. S. 86 verändert den Namen in Gardiaito und Hartknoch S. 142 behauptet, daß Gardoaetos und Perdoytos ein und derselbe Gott sey].'

If Perdoytus was really a wind-god, his name might be related to the Russian perdĕti, Slovenian prdĕti, πέρδομαι, etc. (Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 362, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 771, Walde Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] p. 569) and imply a very crude and primitive conception of the wind as 'flatus ventris.'

[3] Hes. o.d. 94 ff.

[4] Babr. 58. 1 ff. Ζεὺς ἐν πίθῳ τὰ χρηστὰ πάντα συλλέξας | ἔθηκεν αὐτὸν πωμάσας παρ' ἀνθρώπῳ. | ὁ δ' ἀκρατὴς ἄνθρωπος εἰδέναι σπεύδων | τί ποτ' ἦν ἐν αὐτῷ, καὶ τὸ πῶμα κινήσας, | διῆκ' ἀπελθεῖν αὐτὰ πρὸς θεῶν οἴκους, | κἀκεῖ πέτεσθαι τῆς τε γῆς ἄνω φεύγειν. | μόνη δ' ἔμεινεν ἐλπίς, ἣν κατειλήφει | τεθὲν τὸ πῶμα. τοιγὰρ ἐλπὶς ἀνθρώποις | μόνη σύνεστι, τῶν πεφευγότων ἡμᾶς | ἀγαθῶν ἕκαστον ἐγγυωμένη δώσειν. This rewriting of the Hesiodic myth was obviously prompted by the later estimate of ἐλπίς as a good, not an evil.

For the concept of a celestial store-house or treasury see H. Usener Die Sintfluthsage Bonn 1899 p. 182 ff.

[5] Miss J. E. Harrison in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1900 xx. 99 ff., ead. Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] pp. 169 f., 279 ff.

[6] Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 94, 761 n. 9, id. Myth. Lit. 1908 p. 585 ff.

of the earth-goddess Pandora opened once a year at the festival of the Pithoigia for the temporary release of souls. For winds are notoriously akin to souls[1]. Indeed, Greeks of the mythopoeic age would probably have assented to the direct equation winds are souls. It may even be that the very name Aiolos is cognate with the Gothic saiwala and the English soul[2]. The island of Aiolos would on this showing too be an island of souls[3]—a typical Otherworld island, as we had already seen reason to suspect.

Aiolos Hippotades has both in ancient[4] and in modern[5] times been identified with Aiolos, the eponymous ancestor of the Aeolians. K. Tümpel[6] thinks that the Hesiodic Catalogue[7] described the latter

[1] See e.g. Rohde Psyche[3] i. 248 n. 1, ii. 122 n. 2, 264 n. 2, K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 2176 ff., R. v.d. Meulen 'Über die litauischen Vēlēs' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1914 xvii. 125 ff., L. Weber 'Androgeos' ib. 1926 xxiii. 249 ff., supra ii. 62 n. 1 (the Furious Host), and the history of such words as ἄνεμος, animus, anima; πνοή, πνεῦμα; ψύχω, ψυχή, etc.

[2] So R. Koegel in the Gött. gel. Anz. 1897 clix. 655 (relates west-German saiwala sēula sēla to αἰόλος, for σαιϝόλος*, 'beweglich, regsam,' and cp. Αἴολος), C. C. Uhlenbeck in the Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen Sprache und Literatur 1905 xxx. 305 (accepts saiwala: αἰόλος), J. Scheftelowitz in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1905 xxix. 44 ('got. saiwala "seele": gr. αἰ(ϝ)ολος "beweglich"'), Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 26 ('αἰόλος "mobile, agité" < αἰολός* < αἰελος* cf. αἰέλουρος J. Schmidt KZ. 32, 324. Cf. got. saiwala "âme".' Etc.), and as a tenable alternative K. Brugmann—A. Thumb Griechische Grammatik[4] München 1913 p. 47. See, however, T. von Grienberger in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. Akad. d. Wiss. in Wien Phil.-hist. Classe 1900 cxlii. 179, A. Walde in Indogermanische Forschungen 1901 xii. 382 f. and in his Lat. etym. Wörterb.[2] p. 669 f. s.v. 'saevus,' W. van Helten in Indogermanische Forschungen 1906 xix. 198; P. Persson in the Beiträge zur kunde der indogermanischen sprachen 1893 xix. 276 ff.

[3] G. Gerland Altgriechische Märchen in der Odyssee Magdeburg 1869 p. 38 ff., F. Hommel Die Insel der Seligen in Mythus und Sage der Vorzeit München 1901, infra Append. P.

[4] Hyg. fab. 125 ad Aeolum Hellenis filium, cui ab Iove ventorum potestas fuit tradita. M. Schmidt ad loc. obelizes Hellenis, remarking 'imo Hippotae.' Euripides in his Melanippe desmōtis (Hyg. fab. 186), if not also in his Melanippe sophē (Greg. Kor. in Hermog. περὶ μεθόδου δεινότητος 28 in C. Walz Rhetores Graeci Stuttgartiae et Tubingae 1834 vii. 2. 1313, 6 ff.), made Melanippe the daughter of one Aiolos and the mother of another. Diod. 4. 67 went further in the same direction. His Aiolos, son of Hippotes and Melanippe, was great-grandson of Aiolos son of Hellen, and in turn grandfather of Aiolos brother of Boiotos. On these fictitious genealogies see further W. H. Roscher in his Lex. Myth. i. 192 ff., K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1037, 1040, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 398 n. 3, 1323 n. 2.

[5] K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1040 f.

[6] Id. ib. i. 1036, 1039, 1041.

[7] Hes. frag. 25, 1 f. Kinkel, 7, 1 f. Rzach ap. Plout. symp. 9. 15. 2, schol. Lyk. Al. 284, Tzetz in Lyk. Al. 284, exeg. Il. pp. 63, 14 f., 134, 22 f. Hermann (printed at the end of Draco Stratonicensis liber de metris poeticis ed. G. Hermann Lipsiae 1812) "Ἕλληνος δ' ἐγένοντο φιλοπτολέμου βασιλῆος (so schol. Lyk.: for variants see A. Rzach ad loc.) | Δῶρός τε Ξοῦθός τε καὶ Αἴολος ἱππιοχάρμης. The second line is quoted also by schol. Thouk. 1. 3 (p. 5, 20 Hude), and in part by Herodian. περὶ μονήρους λέξεως 2. 42 (ii. 647, 24 Lentz). Cp. schol. V. Od. 10. 2, Iambl. v. Pyth. 242 with schol. ad loc. (p. 197, 2 f. Nauck).

as hippiochármes, 'fighting with chariot and horses,' in obvious imitation of the patronymic Hippotádes applied in the Odyssey to the former[1]. And both epithets might conceivably have reference to the frequent conception of the winds as horses[2]. I should, however, prefer to stress another point of contact between Aiolos Hippotades and Aiolos son of Hellen, I mean the abnormal endogamic character of the marriage-custom that obtained among their descendants.

According to Homer, the six sons of Aiolos Hippotades married their six sisters[3]. Greeks of the Hellenistic age, perhaps jibbing at the idea, felt it necessary to invent some explanation. Thus Parthenios, Virgil's tutor[4], making a précis of Philetas' Hermes for the benefit of Virgil's friend Cornelius Gallus[5], told how Odysseus in the course of his wanderings round Sicily had reached the island of Meligounis (later called Lipara[6]) and there fallen in love with Polymele, one of Aiolos' daughters; how, after his departure with the bag of winds, she had been found in love-sick plight weeping over certain spoils of Troy; how Aiolos had reviled the absent Odysseus and resolved to take vengeance on Polymele; and finally how her brother Diores, who was enamoured of her, had begged her off and persuaded his father to give her to him as his wife[7].

Now the same peculiar usage occurs again in connexion with the other Aiolos, eponym of the Aeolians. For he was king of Thessaly[8]; and the marriage of brother with sister is expressly stated to have been an ancient custom among the Thessalians[9]. Moreover, Makedon the ancestor of the Macedonians was, in the opinion of Hellanikos[10], a son of Aiolos. Hence the fact that the

[1] Supra p. 106.

[2] W. H. Roscher Hermes der Windgott Leipzig 1878 p. 107, E. H. Meyer Indogermanische Mythen Berlin 1887 ii (Achilleis). 451 ff., H. W. Stoll in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 2691, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 838 f., 1148, H. Steinmetz 'Windgötter' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1910 xxv. 33 n. 5.

[3] Supra p. 106.

[4] Macrob. Sat. 5. 17. 18 with L. Jan ad loc.

[5] Parthen. narr. am. praef. 1 f.

[6] Kallim. h. Artem. 47 f., Strab. 275, Steph. Byz. s.vv. Λιπάρα, Μελιγουνίς.

[7] Parthen. narr. am. 2, περὶ Πολυμήλης (ἱστορεῖ Φιλητᾶς Ἕρμῃ (on which poem see A. Meineke Analecta Alexandrina Berolini 1843 p. 348 ff., K. Kuiper 'De Philetae Coi Mercurio' in H. van Herwerden's Album Gratulatorium Trajecti ad Rhenum 1902 pp. 143—149, J. U. Powell Collectanea Alexandrina Oxonii 1825 p. 91 f.)).

[8] Apollod. 1. 7. 3, cp. Konon narr. 27.

[9] Archinos Θεσσαλικά frags. 1, 2 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 319 Müller) ap. schol. T. Od. 10. 7 ἀρχαῖον ἔθος, ὡς Ἀρχῖνος (so W. Dindorf for Ἀρχίνου cod.) ἐν Θεσσαλικοῖς. πρῶτα δὲ Αἴολον ὁμομητρίας κόρας ἀδελφοῖς συνοικίσαι (so W. Dindorf for συνοικῆσαι cod.). Cp. schol. B. Q. Od. 10. 7 ἀρχαῖον ἔθος τὸ συνοικίζειν ἀδελφούς, καὶ ὁ Ζεὺς ἀδελφῇ οὔσῃ συνοικεῖ τῇ Ἥρᾳ. κ.τ.λ. For Archinos see E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 541.

[10] Hellanik. frag. 46 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 51 Müller)=frag. 74 (Frag. gr. Hist. i. 126

Ptolemies married their own sisters is probably to be explained, not merely as a concession to Egyptian feeling[1], but also as a survival or revival of a practice proper to an old Macedonian family of Aeolic extraction. It will be observed that the spelling of the Ptolemies' name—Ptolemaîos, not Polemaîos—certifies their Aeolic descent[2]. Finally, H. D. Müller sought to prove that Hera was originally a goddess of the Aeolians[3]. If so, the conception of her as sister and yet wife of Zeus may have arisen on Aeolic ground.

Be that as it may, I am disposed to conclude that Aiolos Hippotades was in pre-Homeric days[4] none other than Aiolos Jacoby) ap. Const. Porphyrog. de thematibus 2. 2 (iii. 48 Bekker) ἄλλοι δ' (sc. derive the name Μακεδονία) ἀπὸ Μακεδόνος τοῦ Αἰόλου, ὡς Ἑλλάνικος Ἱερειῶν πρώτῃ τῶν ἐν Ἄργει· 'καὶ Μακεδόνος <τοῦ (ins. A. Meineke)> Αἰόλου, <ἀφ' (ins. C. Müller)> οὗ (οὕτω cod. F., whence C. Müller prints τοῦν) νῦν Μακεδόνες καλοῦνται, μόνοι μετὰ Μυσῶν τότε οἰκοῦντες.'

[1] This explanation is advanced by Paus. 1. 7. 1 and defended by Miss R. E. White (Mrs N. Wedd) in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1898 xviii. 238 ff. For the prevalence of Geschwisterehe in Egypt see Diod. 1. 27, Philon de specialibus legibus 4 (v. 68 Richter); A. Erman Life in Ancient Egypt trans. H. M. Tirard London 1894 p. 153 f., Sir G. Maspero The Dawn of Civilization[4] London 1901 p. 50 f., E. Bevan A History of Egypt under the Ptolemaic Dynasty London 1927 p. 158. Examples of it there and elsewhere are collected by Sir J. G. Frazer on Paus. 1. 7. 1 (ii. 84 f.), E. Westermarck The History of Human Marriage[3] London 1901 p. 290 ff., P. Wilutzky Vorgeschichte des Rechts Breslau 1903 i. 55 ff., F. v. Reitzenstein Urgeschichte der Ehe[4] Stuttgart 1908 p. 70 f., H. Ploss—M. Bartels Das Weib in der Natur- und Völkerkunde[10] Leipzig 1913 i. 713, W. H. R. Rivers in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1915 viii. 425 b, F. Ll. Griffith ib. viii. 444 a.

Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Dying God p. 193 f. comments: 'On this hypothesis we can understand why the custom of marriage with a full or a half sister has prevailed in so many royal families. It was introduced, we may suppose, for the purpose of giving the king's son the right of succession hitherto enjoyed, under a system of female kinship, either by the son of the king's sister or by the husband of the king's daughter; for under the new rule the heir to the throne united both these characters, being at once the son of the king's sister and, through marriage with his own sister, the husband of the king's daughter. Thus the custom of brother and sister marriage in royal houses marks a transition from female to male descent of the crown[1] [[1]This explanation of the custom was anticipated by McLennan. ...(The Patriarchal Theory, based on the Papers of the late John Ferguson McLennan, edited and completed by Donald McLennan (London, 1885), p. 95)]. In this connexion it may be significant that Cronus and Zeus themselves married their full sisters Rhea and Hera, a tradition which naturally proved a stone of stumbling to generations who had forgotten the ancient rule of policy which dictated such incestuous unions, and who had so far inverted the true relations of gods and men as to expect their deities to be edifying models of the new virtues instead of warning examples of the old vices[2] [[2]Compare Cicero, De natura deorum, ii. 26. 66; [Plutarch], De vita et poesi Homeri, ii. 96; Lactantius, Divin. Inst. i. 10; Firmicus Maternus, De errore profanarum religionum, xii. 4].'

[2] O. Hoffmann Die griechischen Dialekte Göttingen 1891 i. 123, 224, ib. 1893 ii. 344 f., 502 f., id. Die Makedonen, ihre Sprache und ihr Volkstum Göttingen 1906 p. 173, A. Thumb Handbuch der griechischen Dialekte Heidelberg 1909 pp. 207, 240, K. Brugmann Griechische Grammatik[4] München 1913 p. 174.

[3] H. D. Müller Mythologie der griechischen Stämme Göttingen 1857 i. 251 ff.

[4] E. Forrer 'Vorhomerische Griechen in den Keilschrifttexten von Boghazköi' in the eponym of the Aeolians, a great tribal chief who after his death was believed by his people to live on in his island of souls. Such an one might well supply the hero of the Otherworld visit[1] with the souls or winds that he needed to waft him back to Ithake[2].

(c) The Tritopatores or Tritopatreis.

The results of the last section throw a new and welcome light on one of the outstanding problems of Greek religion—the true character of the mysterious powers known to the ancients as Tritopátores or Tritopatreîs[3].

Phanodemos, a Hellenistic historian interested in religious Mitteilungen der Deutschen Orient-Gesellschaft zu Berlin März 1924 Nr. 63 pp. 1—22 makes out a strong case for an Aeolian occupation of Pamphylia in Hittite times: p. 10 'Der dritte Name ist der Name des Volkes, dem Tavag(a)lavas angehört; er wird nämlich einmal genannt: a-ja-va-la-as-König und dies ist offensichtlich aiFolos "Äolier-König".' p. 21 'Fassen wir zum Schluss zusammen, was uns die Keilschrifttexte aus Boghazköi an grundlegenden Angaben über die Griechen liefern: 1. Der König des Landes Aḫḫijavā = Ἀχαιϝα war seit etwa 1330 vor Chr. als Grosskönig und damit als "Bruder" des Ḫatti-Königs anerkannt. 2. Er war zugleich als Vasall des Ḫatti-Königs mit Pamphylien belehnt. 3. Er war ein Ajavalas = Äolier. 4. Aḫḫijavā = Achaia und Lazpas = Lesbos waren seine Kernländer. 5. Ant(a)ravas = Andreus war rund 1350—1325 vor Chr. König von Aḫḫijavā und Lazbas, vgl. Punkt 1. 6. Tava-g(a)lavas = Eteokles war sein Sohn und Nachfolger seit etwa 1325 vor Chr. 7. Um 1250 vor Chr. vertreibt Attarissijas, König von Āḫḫijā, den Madduvattas, den Fürsten des südlichen Kariens.' Etc.

[1] Supra i. 239 f.

[2] A. D. Fraser 'The origin of Aeolus' in The Classical Journal 1933 xxviii. 364—366 cites inter alia a parallel from the north-east coast of Scotland (D. A. Mackenzie Tales from the Moors and the Mountains Glasgow 1931 pp. 62—67 'A weather witch, Stine Veg, supplies a party of fishermen with a collection of winds confined in a water jar whose mouth is stopped with a wisp of straw. Like the Ithacans, they are a prey to curiosity and, upon unstopping the jar, are blown back to their starting-point'). Prof. Fraser concludes: 'The tradition apparently accompanied the Achaeans in their wanderings from some point near the Baltic to the Mediterranean, while a somewhat different version was carried by another branch of Indo-European speaking people into the heart of India.'

[3] P. Kretschmer in Glotta 1920 x. 41 showed that Τρῑτοπατρεῖς was originally a verse-form of Τρῑτοπάτορες ('Wenn Τριτοπάτορες in daktylischem Versmaass gebraucht werden sollte—möglicherweise wurde der Name in Hymnen, Gebeten oder Epigrammen genannt—so war diese Form mit ihren fünf Kürzen selbst bei metrischer Dehnung der ersten Silbe noch nicht anwendbar und mag daher durch Τρῑτοπατρῆες Τρῑτοπατρεῖς ersetzt worden sein, wobei man die auch im Epos nicht ganz seltene Kürze vor Muta cum Liquida mit in Kauf nehmen musste').

The attempt of M. Budimir, a Serbian scholar, to invalidate this conclusion, reported by L. Radermacher in the Berl. philol. Woch. März 4, 1922 p. 199 f. ('Dass diese Form nur eine epische Bildung aus τριτοπάτωρ sei des Hexameters wegen, wie P. Kretschmer meint, ist nicht anzunehmen, da Cicero und attische Inschriften, die Prosa schreiben, ausschliesslich die Form Τριτοπατρεύς—Τριτοπατρεῖς [sic] kennen. Es ist also auch aus diesem Grunde der Name der attischen ἄνακες von dem gutbürgerlichen Verwandtschaftsnamen τριτοπάτωρ zu trennen... und die attischen Τριτοπατρεῖς haben mit τριτοπάτορες nichts zu tun'), fails to reckon with the fact that an epic appellative may pass into popular parlance and acquire ritual (e.g. Γαιήοχος: supra p. 10 ff.) or mythical (e.g. Ἰφιγένεια) importance. The point is one deserving of further investigation.

antiquities[1], states that the Athenians alone offered sacrifices and prayers to the Tritopatores, when about to marry, for the procreation of children[2]. This statement is, in part at least, confirmed by tangible traces left by the cult in question.

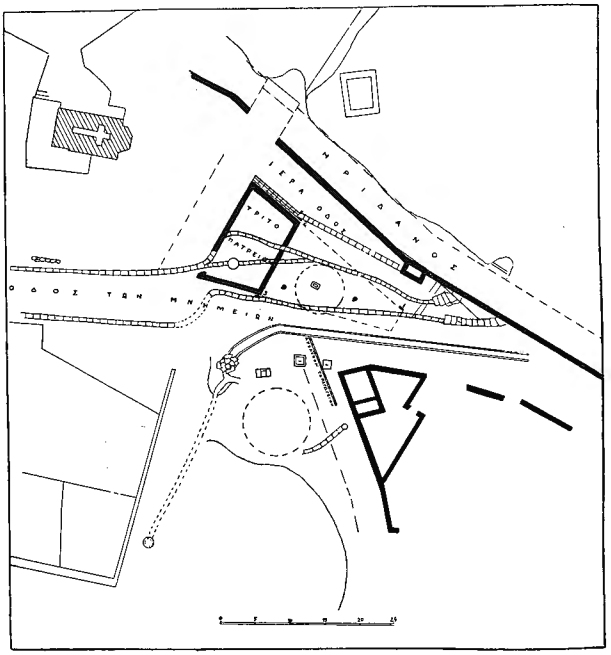

Fig. 37.

Excavations in the Kerameikos at Athens, conducted by A. Brückner and G. Oikonomos from February 1909 to September 1910[3], led to the discovery of an important group of remains in the angle between the Road to Eleusis and the Street of Tombs. A broken boundary-stone, found at the north-eastern corner of the truncated triangle (fig. 37, no. 1) and inscribed showed that the spot was taboo[1]. Behind it were vestiges of a low circular tomb marked out by large stones. Beyond that in turn was a four-walled enclosure roughly trapezoidal in shape. In front of its two eastern corners stood a pair of similar boundary-stones (fig. 37, nos. 2 and 3), both inscribed in lettering of c. 450—400 B.C.

[1] W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1920 ii. 1. 110 n. 3.

[2] Phanodem. frag. 4 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 367 Müller) ap. Harpokr. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες·... Φανόδημος δὲ ἐν 5ῳ φησὶν ὅτι μόνοι Ἀθηναῖοι θύουσί τε καὶ εὔχονται αὐτοῖς ὑπὲρ γενέσεως παίδων, ὅταν γαμεῖν μέλλωσιν· κ.τ.λ. = Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες = Souid. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες = et. mag. p. 768, 5 ff. = Favorin. lex. p. 1775, 45 ff.

[3] A. Brückner 'ΑΝΑΣΚΑΦΑΙ ΚΕΡΑΜΕΙΚΟΥ' in the Πρακτ. ἀρχ. ἑτ. 1910 pp. 101—111 with figs. 1—3 and pl. A' (= my fig. 37).

[HAB]ATON 'Not to be trodden,'

HOPOΣ : HIEPO 'Boundary of the sanctuary
TPITOΠATPEON of the Tritopatreis.
HABATON Not to be trodden.'

Yet another ancient stone, built into the southern wall of the precinct, reads:

HIEPON [TPITOΠA]TPEON 'Sanctuary of the Tritopatreis.'

Here, then, in immediate juxtaposition with the Street of Tombs, was the simple ábaton of the fifth-century Tritopatreis. Within a stone's throw of it stood till recently the modern Church of the Hagia Trias (fig. 37), which by a curious coincidence, if no more[2], recalls the triple character of the local numina.

U. Köhler[3] in 1879 published a similar but somewhat later boundary-stone, which he had copied years before in the Central Museum at Athens. It is inscribed in letters of c. 400—350 B.C.

OPOΣIE 'Boundary of the sanct-
POTPITO uary of the Trito-
ΠATPEΩN patreis
ΠAKYAΔΩ[N] of the Zakyadai.'

[1] A. Brückner loc. cit. p. 104 suggests that the actual apex, where the road forked, was probably consecrated to Hekate.

[2] A. Struck Griechenland Wien u. Leipzig 1911 i. 131 f. (supra i. 171).

The Church of the Hagia Trias was removed in 1931. Excavations conducted by the German Archaeological Institute in the mound beneath it and in some neighbouring areas proved that the whole site had been used as a cemetery from the Protogeometric period down to the Byzantine Age (K. Kübler, R. Eilmann, and W. Kraiker 'Ausgrabungen im Kerameikos' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1932 xlvii. Arch. Anz. pp. 183—208 with plan, sections, and figs., K. Kübler and W. Kraiker ib. 1934 xlix Arch. Anz. pp. 196—245 with plan and many figs., E. P. Blegen in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1932 xxxvi. 351—357, H. G. G. Payne in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1932 lii. 238, 1933 liii. 269).

[3] U. Köhler 'Horosstein der Zakyaden' in the Ath. Mitth. 1879 iv. 287, id. in the Corp.

Whether the Zakyadai, whose name does not occur elsewhere, formed a génos or a phratría, has been disputed[1]. But it is clear that the addition of the last word was meant to limit the circle of worshippers to members of a specified tribal division, bound together by real or fictitious community of descent.

The sacrificial calendar from Koukounari in the Epakria district, which again belongs to the earlier part of s. iv B.C.[2], mentions among the annual rites of Marathon that in Skirophorion before the Skira a sheep was offered to the Tritopatreis and another to the Akamantes[3], also among the trieteric rites of the same place that at the same time of year a table was set for the Tritopatreis[4]. The context in both cases is suggestive of fertility and fertilisation. P. Maas[5] claims that the Tritopateres are again connected with the Akámantes in an important ritual text of s. iv B.C. found at Kyrene and first published by S. Ferri in 1927 (fig. 38)[6]; and inscr. Att. ii. 2 no. 1062 = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 741 = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 443 = id. ib.[3] no. 925 δρος ἱε|ρὸ Τριτο|πατρέων | Ζακυαδ[ῶν].

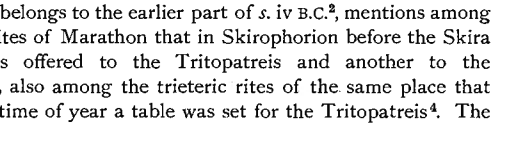

Fig. 38.

[1] J. Töpffer Attische Genealogie Berlin 1889 p. 313 says: 'Die Wahrscheinlichkeit, dass letztere ein γένος waren, ist meiner Meinung nach mindestens ebenso gross, wie die, dass sie eine Phratrie bildeten.' G. Lippold in the Ath. Mitth. 1911 xxxvi. 106 n. 1 decides for a γένος on the ground that the Πυρρακίδαι (infra p. 118) certainly were such. On the other hand, U. Köhler locc. citt., U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff Aristoteles und Athen Berlin 1893 ii. 268 n. 11, W. Larfeld Handbuch der griechischen Epigraphik Leipzig 1898 ii. 1. 187 ('wohl einer Phratrie'), and W. Dittenberger locc. citt. prefer to assume a φρατρία.

[2] R. B. Richardson in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1895 x. 220 f.

[3] J. de Prott Leges Graecorum sacrae Lipsiae 1896 Fasti sacri p. 46 ff. no. 26 B, 30 ff. Σκιροφοριῶνος· πρὸ Σκίρων· Τ̣τ̣τ̣ηνίωι τὰ ὡρα[ῖ]α οἷς Δ̣Η̣Η̣. Κοροτρόφωι χοῖρος ΗΗΗ, ἱερώσυνα ΗΗ|. | Τριτοπατρεῦσι οἷς, ἱερώσυνα Η̣Η̣. Ἀκάμασιν | οἷς Δ̣Η̣Η̣, ἱερώσυνα Η̣Η̣.

[4] Id. ib. p. 46 ff. no. 26 B, 51 ff. Σκιροφοριῶνος· πρὸ Σκίρων· Γαλίωι κριὸς Δ[ΗΗ,]| ἱερώσυνα ΗΗ, φρέατος ΠΗ. Τριτοπατρεῦσι | τράπεζα Η.

[5] P. Maas in the Deutsche Literaturzeitung 1927 xlviii. 1953 ('Ακαμαντίων von Heiligtümern der 'Ακάμαντες?').

[6] Reading and rendering are alike in dispute. S. Ferri 'La "Lex Cathartica" di Cirene' in the Notiziario Archeologico 1927 iv. 91—145 with pls. 14—17 and a facsimile (part of which = my fig. 38) § 4, 21 ff. [αἴ] κα μαντίων ὁσία παντὶ καὶ ἀγνῶι καὶ βαβάλω[ι·]| πλὰν ἀπ' ἀνθρώπω Βάττ[ω] τῶ τῶ 'Αρχαγέτα κα[ὶ] | τριτοπατέρων καὶ ἀπὸ 'Ονυμάστω τῶ

K. Latte[1] suggests that these 'Unwearied Ones' might be either wind-spirits[2] or else a euphemistic[3] expression for the dead (kamóntes).

One other example of actual cult has been furnished by the French excavations in Delos[4]. Close to the south-east angle of the great precinct of Apollon, at a spot where three roads meet, G. Leroux in 1906 uncovered a paved triangular place of small size (25^{m} by 12^{m}). Towards its southern end was a circular structure of white marble consisting of curved slabs (0·54^{m} high), which rest on a raised course of masonry and carry a projecting cornice with bevelled top (fig. 39). The ring-wall is broken on the north-west by an aperture (0·80^{m} wide). Inside is a pavement of gneiss, from which sundry slabs are missing. Above this pavement were found sherds of coarse vases, a piece of stag's antler, ashes and fragments of carbonised wood. Below it, excavations pursued down to the Δελφῶ[ν] (?), | ἀπ' ἄλλω ὅπη ἄνθρωπος ἔκαμε οὐκ ὁσία ἀγνῶ[ι]· | τῶν δὲ ἰαρῶν ὁσία παντί, '(Alla domanda) se (in materia) di oracoli (esista ugual) religio per ognuno, e per il puro e per l'impuro, (Apollo rispose): tranne che (per gli oracoli provenienti) dall' uomo Batto, quello dell' Archegeta e dei Tritopateres e da Onymastos, quello di Delfi, da qualunque altro (libro) dove uomini hanno lavorato non vi è religio per il puro (cioè: il puro non è obbligato a conformarvisi; oppure: deriva empietà al puro che se ne serva). In materia di sacrifici (?) vi è invece ugual religio per tutti indistintamente.'

G. De Sanctis 'Le decretali di Cirene' in the Rivista di filologia e di istruzione classica 1927 lv. 185—212 gives § 4, 21 ff. [αἰ] κα μαντίων ὁσία παντὶ καὶ ἀγνῶι καὶ βαβάλω[ι·] | πλὰν ἀπ' ἀνθρώπω Βάττ[ω] [[τῶ]] τῶ 'Αρχαγέτα κα[ὶ] | τριτοπατέρων καὶ ἀπὸ 'Ονυμάστω τῶ Δελφῶ | ἀπ' ἄλλω ὅπη ἄνθρωπος ἔκαμε οὐκ ὁσία ἀγνῶ[ι,] | τῶν δὲ ἰαρῶν ὁσία παντί, 'Se vi è liceità sacra di oracoli (presi nelle tombe) e pel puro e per l' impuro. Salvo che dall' uomo Batto, l' Archegeta, e dai Tritopateri e salvo che da Onimasto di Delfi, da altro (oracolo) ove un uomo morì (cioè dove è un morto) non vi è liceità sacra (di far consulto) al puro. Di sacrifizî (alle tombe) vi è liceità sacra per tutti.'

U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff 'Heilige Gesetze. Eine Urkunde aus Kyrene' in the Sitzungsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin Phil.-hist. Classe 1927 pp. 155—176 prints § 4, 21 ff. αἰ κα μαντίων ὁσία, παντὶ καὶ ἀγνῶι καὶ βαβάλω[ι], | πλὰν ἀπ' ἀνθρώπω, Βάττω τω τῶ ἀρχαγέτα κα[ὶ] | τριτοπατέρων καὶ ἀπὸ 'Ονυμάστω τῶ Δελφῶ [καὶ] | ἀπ' ἄλλω, ὅπη ἄνθρωπος ἔκαμε, οὐκ ὁσία ἀγνῶ[ι]. | τῶν δὲ ἱερῶν ὁσία παντί, and translates 'Wenn ὁσία der Seher ist, ist sie es für jeden, den Reinen und Profanen; nur von einem Menschen, Battos dem Könige, und den Urahnen und von dem Delpher Onymastos und jedem anderen, wo ein Mensch Ruhe gefunden hat, ist keine ὁσία für einen Reinen; aber von den Tempeln ist ὁσία für jeden.'

See further G. Oliverio in the Rivista di filologia e di istruzione ciassica 1928 lvi. 222 ff.

[1] K. Latte 'Ein sakrales Gesetz aus Kyrene' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1928 xxvi. 41—51.

[2] Cp. Emped. frag. 111, 3 Diels παύσεις δ' ἀκαμάτων ἀνέμων μένος κ.τ.λ., Soph. Trach. 112 πολλὰ γὰρ ὥσπ' ἀκάμαντος ἢ νότου ἢ βορέα τις κ.τ.λ.

[3] Supra ii. 1112 n. 7, 1125 n. 1.

[4] Pending the full publication in Délos vii. 2, there is an interim-report by M. Holleaux in the Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1907 pp. 353—356 with a photographic cut. The general lie of the land can be well seen from the chart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1906 xxx pl. 9; but the only plan hitherto published that marks the sekós of Tritopator is that by J. Replat given in Délos vii. 1 opposite p. 2.

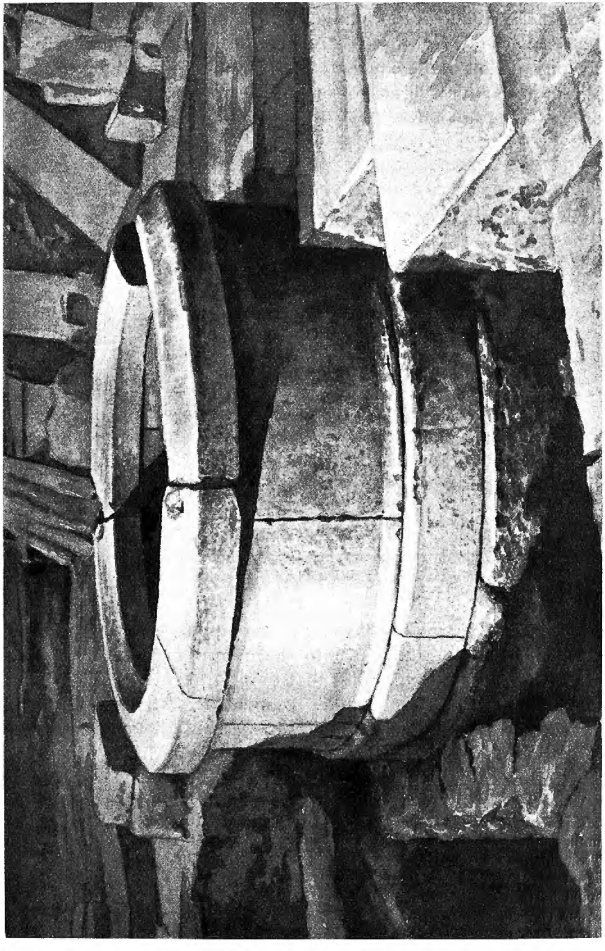

Fig. 29.

level of the virgin soil discovered not only ashes and charcoal, but also the bones of small cattle. Trial pits sunk outside the ring-wall beneath the paving of the triangular place brought similar débris to light. It was obvious that the cult here celebrated was older than the construction of the circular edifice. And an inscription (fig. 40) incised on the inner surface of one of the curved slabs, beneath the cornice, reads as follows[1]:

Τριτοπάτωρ	'Tritopator
Πυρρακιδῶν	of the Pyrrhakidai
Αἰγιλιῶν	from Aigilia.'

The first two lines are engraved stoichedón in careful lettering of

Fig. 40.

c. 400 B.C. The third line is less well cut and appears to have been crowded, as an afterthought, into the narrow margin left by the other two. M. Holleaux notes that the Pyrrhakidai were an Attic génos, familiar to us from Delphic records of the Athenian Pythaïs[2], and P. Roussel points out that their archegétes Pyrrhakos is described as a contemporary of Erysichthon[3], who went from Athens to [1] M. Holleaux loc. cit. p. 354: 'Des huit lettres qui la composent, on n'a pu jusqu'à présent déchiffrer sûrement que la première et les trois dernières.' But P. Roussel 'Deux familles athéniennes à Délos' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1929 liii. 166 ff. (167—179 Pyrrhakidai, 179—184 Erysichthonidai) gives fresh photographs of the monument (figs. 1—4, of which 2 and 4 = my figs. 39 and 40) and makes it clear that the inscription should be read as here printed. He rightly connects the génos with the Attic deme Αἰγιλιά (v. Schoeffer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 39 f.). Τριτωπάτωρ in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 179 is a mere blunder.

[2] See Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 711 D[1], 30 f. n. 13.

[3] Hesych. Πύρρακος· ἥρως κατ' Ἐρυσίχθονα γεγονώς.

Delos[1] and there set up the first wooden statue of Apollon[2]. On this showing the circular structure found by Leroux would be in the nature of a Delian family herôon[3]. Immediately to the south of it are the remains of a Byzantine church. Was this another case of the pagan Tritopatores being replaced by the Christian Trinity?

Putting together these various indications of popular worship, we perceive that the Tritopatores from the fifth century onwards had been established at the cross-roads (Kerameikos, Delos), where a hypaethral enclosure, either trapezoidal (Kerameikos) or circular in plan (Delos), was set apart for them in a roughly triangular space. The cult there carried on might be limited to members of a particular clan (the Zakyadai at Athens, the Pyrrhakidai in Delos) and involved the sacrifice of sheep etc. (Marathon, Delos). In some respects, therefore, the Greek Tritopatores recall the Lares Compitales, who were likewise worshipped at the cross-roads—that immemorial rendez-vous of family-ghosts[4]. This disposes us to see in the former, as in the latter[5], ancestral spirits watchful over the welfare of their descendants.

Literary evidence with regard to the nature of the Tritopatores follows two lines of tradition, one supporting, the other supplementing, the inferences drawn from the monuments.

[1] Phanodemos frag. 1 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 366 Müller) ap. Athen. 392 D.

[2] Plout. ap. Euseb. praep. ev. 3. 8. 1.

[3] P. Roussel in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1929 liii. 177: 'D'après les observations faites par G. Leroux, un culte était célébré depuis longtemps sur l'emplacement où s'éleva le monument du Tritopator. Tout le quartier a été si profondément remanié jusqu'à la basse époque romaine qu'il est difficile de déterminer l'aspect qu'il pouvait présenter au V^e^ siècle ou précédemment; mais l'hypothèse n'est point exclue qu'il ait jadis fait partie d'une vaste nécropole dont on a retrouvé des traces, d'une part dans la région à l'Ouest de la partie septentrionale de la rue du Théâtre, d'autre part dans la partie Sud-Est du sanctuaire même d'Apollon, près de l'autel de Zeus Polieus. On imaginerait volontiers que les Pyrrhakidai eurent la tombe réelle ou fictive d'un ancêtre en cette région et qu'au moment de la purification de 426, on y substitua le monument d'un culte héroïque.'

Id. Délos colonie athénienne Paris 1916 p. 158 n. 5 had already commented on the fact that a similar structure, discovered in 1912 to the south of the lower reservoir of the Inopos, was dedicated to the Νύμφαι Πυρρακιδῶν. In the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1929 liii. 171 ff. he adds fig. 5 plan, fig. 6 inscription, and fig. 7 restoration of this second monument.

[4] See J. A. MacCulloch 'Cross-roads' in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1911 iv. 330 b—335 b, R. Wünsch 'Cross-roads (Roman)' ib. 335 b—336 b, K. F. Smith 'Hecate's suppers' ib. Edinburgh 1913 vi. 565 a—567 a, Schrader Reallex.[2] p. 335.

[5] Supra ii. 1159 with n. 1. See further E. Samter Familienfeste der Griechen und Römer Berlin 1901 p. 105 ff., id. 'Der Ursprung des Larenkultes' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1907 x. 368—392, A. von Domaszewski ib. 1907 x. 336 f. (=id. Abhandlungen zur römischen Religion Leipzig und Berlin 1909 p. 174 f.), Miss M. C. Waites 'The nature of the Lares and their representation in Roman art' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1920 xxiv. 241—261.

On the one hand, the Tritopatores are described as remote and mythical ancestors. The author of the work known as the Exegetikón, who has been plausibly identified[1] with Kleidemos or 'Kleitodemos, the oldest of all writers on the local customs of Athens[2],' and would thus be referable to the middle of the fourth century B.C.[3], stated that the Tritopatores were sons of Ouranos and Ge, named Kottos, Briareos, and Gyges[4]. Philochoros, the most important of the Atthidographers, followed suit with the assertion that the Tritopatreis were the earliest offspring of Ge and Ouranos, and the first to begin generation[5]. Elsewhere he gave a slightly divergent account. The Tritopatreis were the first of all. At that time men believed that the earth and the sun, Ge and Apollon as they called them, were their parents, and that the offspring of these were Tritoi Pateres[6]. The meaning of these two passages is not over-clear. But C. A. Lobeck[7] makes it probable that, in Philochoros' view, the earth fructified by the sun produced the Tritopatreis, who acting as procreators for the first time thereby became the parents of all mortal men. Cicero, quoting from a Greek Catalogue of the gods which seems to have been drawn up in the second or first century B.C.[8], makes Zeus, 'a very ancient king,' the father by Persephone of the first Dioskouroi—a triad of brothers known as Anaktes at Athens and named Tritopatreus, Eubouleus, and Dionysos[9]. These varying versions agree in attributing the names Tritopatores, Tritopatreis, Tritopatreus to prehistoric progenitors of a more or less superhuman sort. It is possible that behind them

[1] See A. Tresp Die Fragmente der griechischen Kultschriftsteller Giessen 1914 p. 110 f.

[2] Paus. 10. 15. 5.

[3] F. Jacoby in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 591.

[4] Harpokr. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες = Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες = Souid. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες·...ὁ δὲ τὸ Ἐξηγητικὸν ποιήσας Οὐρανοῦ καὶ Γῆς φησιν αὐτοὺς εἶναι, ὀνόματα δὲ αὐτῶν Κόττον, Βριάρεων καὶ Γύγην. Cp. et. mag. p. 768, 10 ff. = Favorin. lex. p. 1775, 49 ff.

[5] Philochor. frag. 3 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 384 Müller) ap. Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτοπάτωρ· Τριτοπάτρεις...Φιλόχορος δὲ τοὺς πρώτους ἐκ Γῆς καὶ Οὐρανοῦ, ἄρξαντας δὲ γενέσεως.

[6] Philochor. frag. 2 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 384 Müller) ap. Harpokr. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες = Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες = Souid. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες·...Φιλόχορος δὲ τοὺς Τριτοπάτρεις πάντων γεγονέναι πρώτους· τὴν μὲν γὰρ γῆν καὶ τὸν ἥλιόν φησιν, ὃν καὶ Ἀπόλλωνα τότε καλεῖν, γονεῖς αὐτῶν ἐπίστασθαι οἱ τότε ἄνθρωποι, τοὺς δ' ἐκ τούτων τρίτους πατέρας. Cp. et. mag. p. 768, 1 ff. (Selene substituted for Ge), Favorin. lex. p. 1775, 45.

If this passage is rightly assigned by C. Müller to the Atthis, it may be surmised in view of the inscription from Epakria (supra p. 115) that the other passage (supra n. 5) occurred in Philochoros' treatise on the Attic Tetrapolis (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 410 f. Müller).

[7] Lobeck Aglaophamus i. 761 f.

[8] Supra ii. 1135 n. 4.

[9] Cic. de nat. deor. 3. 53 cited supra ii. 1135 n. 4.

all lay the greater authority of Aristotle, who is said to have used the word tritopátor in the sense of 'great-grandfather[1].'

On the other hand, somewhat to our surprise, the Tritopatores are identified with, or at least brought into close connexion with, the winds. Demon in his Atthís (c. 300 B.C.) roundly declared that the Tritopatores were the winds[2]—a statement implicitly traversed by his critic and rival Philochoros[3]. The author of the Orphic Physiká, which was attributed (no doubt, wrongly[4]) to Brontinos[5] of Metapontum[6], explained that the Tritopatores were 'door-keepers and guardians of the winds[7]' and gave their names as Amalkeides, Protokles, and Protokreon[8]—a trio well adapted for hexameter

[1] Aristot. frag. 376 Rose ap. Poll. 3. 17 ὁ δὲ πάππου ἢ τήθης πατὴρ πρόπαππος, ὡς 'Ισοκράτης· τάχα δ' ἂν τοῦτον τριτοπάτορα 'Αριστοτέλης καλοῖ. H. Steuding in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1209 assumes that the name 'Αριστοτέλης has here displaced that of 'Αριστοφάνης ὁ Βυζάντιος—a view put forward by G. Kaibel and U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff (Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 473 n. 4). See further G. Lippold in the Ath. Mitth. 1911 xxxvi. 106 n. 2 'Übrigens hat bei Pollux eine Handschriftenklasse (II bei Bethe) τριπάτωρα. Ebenso Hesych. Τριπατρεῖς· οἱ πρῶτοι γεννώμενοι und das 5. Bekkersche Lexikon (Anecdota Graeca I 307, 16): Τριπάτορες: οἱ μὲν τοὺς πρώτους ἀρχηγέτας, οἱ δὲ τρίτους ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρός, ὅ πέρ ἐστι προπάππους (vgl. Schmidt zur Hesychstelle). Nun ist τριπάτωρ (vgl. τρίπαππος tritavus Corpus Glossariorum Latinorum II 459, 31) die Form, die man für ein Wort mit der Bedeutung πρόπαππος (dritte Generation vom Vater an) erwarten sollte, und Wilamowitz (Aristoteles und Athen II 268 Anm. 11) hat die Gleichung πρόπαππος=τριτοπάτωρ für grammatisch unmöglich erklärt. Es ist also sehr gut denkbar, dass das jetzt nur schwach bezeugte τριπάτωρ in der Bedeutung πρόπαππος bestanden hat und erst in der lexikalischen Überlieferung mit Τριτοπάτωρ, mit dem sich wegen seiner dunklen Etymologie die Lexikographen viel beschäftigten, zusammengeworfen wurde. Dann würde Aristoteles als Zeuge für Τριτοπάτωρ ausscheiden. Über den mutmasslichen Zusammenhang der Aristotelesstelle vgl. Rose, Aristoteles pseudepigraphus p. 428, 52 (θεσμοθετῶν ἀνάκρισις, εἰ 'Αθηναῖοί εἰσιν ἑκατέρωθεν ἐκ τριγονίας' [Aristot. frag. 374 Rose ap. Poll. 8. 85]). But M. Budimir, the Serbian scholar reported by L. Radermacher in the Berl. philol. Woch. März 4, 1922 p. 199, comes to a very different conclusion: 'Demnach kann τριτοπάτωρ "tertium patrem, das heisst πρόπαππον" und "eum cui tertius pater superest" bezeichnen, ebenso τριπάτωρ "eum cui tres patres sunt" (wie τριάνωρ), was aber keinen Sinn hat, und wie τριγέρων τρίδουλος trifur triparcus triscurria, den Erzvater, προπάτωρ, ἀρχηγὸς γενέσεως, ὁ πρῶτος ἀρχηγέτης.' On which showing Aristotle's name may stand.

[2] Demon frag. 2 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 378 Müller) ap. Harpokr. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες= Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες=Souid. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες· Δήμων ἐν τῇ 'Αθθίδι φησὶν ἀνέμους εἶναι τοὺς Τριτοπάτορας. Cp. et. mag. p. 768, 1=Favorin. lex. p. 1775, 44 f. Τριτοπάτορες· Δήμων ἀνέμους εἶναι φησί, and Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτοπάτωρ· Τριτοπάτρεις οἱ μὲν ἀνέμους, κ.τ.λ.

[3] Harpokr. s.v. 'Ηετιώνεια, Souid. s.v. Φιλόχορος: see E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 142.

[4] W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1924 ii. 2. 984.

[5] Souid. s.v. 'Ορφεύς (p. 1175, 11 Bernhardy). [6] Iambl. v. Pyth. 267.

[7] Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτοπάτωρ·...ἐν δὲ τοῖς 'Ορφικοῖς ἀνέμων παῖδας is presumably a blunder for ἀνέμων φύλακας.

[8] Orph. Φυσικά frag. 240 Abel, 318 Kern ap. Harpokr. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες=Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες=Souid. s.v. Τριτοπάτορες·...ἐν δὲ τῷ 'Ορφέως Φυσικῷ ὀνομάζεσθαι τοὺς Τριτοπάτορας 'Αμαλκείδην καὶ Πρωτοκλέα καὶ Πρωτοκρέοντα (Πρωτοκλέοντα Souid.), θυρωροὺς verse[1]. Others went on to compare them with Aiolos Hippotades[2], and in so doing all but reached the only satisfactory solution of the whole problem.

For, if the Tritopatores on the one hand are ancestral spirits and on the other hand are winds, that is but another proof of our contention that to naïve Greek thinking winds are souls and souls are winds[3]. The Tritopátores, the 'Great-grandfathers,' were naturally invoked 'for the procreation of children[4].' It was they who gave life to each succeeding generation in the form of wind or breath[5]. Nay more, it was they who were the life of each generation. Every infant lived just because there had entered into its body the breath or wind that was the soul of some long-buried ancestor[6]. That—I take it—was the original function of the Tritopatores, dimly remembered in fifth-century Athens, but still lingering in the background of popular belief, and strong enough to assert itself here and there, in a suburb like the Kerameikos, in a country-town like Marathon, in a distant island like Delos.

καὶ φύλακας ὄντας τῶν ἀνέμων. Cp. et. mag. p. 768, 6 ff. = Favorin. lex. p. 1775, 47 ff. ἐν δὲ τοῖς Ὀρφέως Φυσικοῖς τοὺς τρίτους πατέρας Ἀμαλκείδην, Πρωτοκλείαν, καὶ Πρωτοκρέοντα, θυρωροὺς καὶ φύλακας ὄντας τῶν ἀνέμων. Other forms of the names: Ἀμαλκείδην cj. S. Eitrem, Ἀμακλείδην Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 738 = schol. Od. 10. 2, Ἀμακλείδην (?) noted by Lobeck Aglaophamus i. 773 ('Hamaclides'), Ἀνακλείδην cj. A. Fick, Ἀλακλείδην cj. L. Radermacher. Πρωτοκλῆ Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 738 = schol. Od. 10. 2. Πρωκρέοντα (sic) schol. P. Od. 10. 2.

[1] E.g. ἀνέμων δὲ θυρωροῖς καὶ φυλάκεσσιν | <εὖξαθ'> Ἀμαλκείδῃ, Πρωτοκλεῖ, Πρωτοκρέοντι.

[2] Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 738 = schol. Od. 10. 2 καὶ τούτου ἕνεκα ἐμυθεύσαντο αὐτὸν (sc. Αἴολον τὸν Ἱππότου) δεσπότην εἶναι ἀνέμων. ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ τὸν Ἀμακλείδην καὶ Πρωτοκλῆ καὶ Πρωτοκρέοντα, ὥς φησιν Ὀρφεύς.

[3] Supra ii. 1039, iii. 109.

[4] Supra p. 113.

[5] Rohde Psyche[3] i. 248 n. 1 'Entschlagen wir uns aller Speculation, so erkennen wir in den Tritopatoren Ahnenseelen, die zu Windgeistern geworden sind und mit anderen ψυχαί (die ja auch vom Windhauche benannt sind) im Winde fahren, von denen, als von wahren πνοιαὶ ζῳογόνοι [see Lobeck Aglaophamus i. 760], ihre Nachkommen Hilfe erhoffen, wenn es sich um Lebendigwerden einer neuen ψυχή handelt. Seelen als Windgeister sind sehr wohl verständlich; bei den Griechen ist diese Vorstellung nur vereinzelt erhalten und ebendarum werden solche vereinzelt im Glauben lebendig gebliebene Windseelen zu besonderen Dämonen, die Tritopatoren nicht anders als die Harpyien (s. Rhein. Mus. 50, 3 ff.).' Cp. B. Schweitzer Herakles Tübingen 1922 p. 72 ff. (summarised by E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1209 f.), who takes the Tritopatores to be ancestral spirits conceived as winds (p. 75 f. 'Bei der Begattung tritt sie [sc. πνεῦμα] aus dem Munde der Eltern aus und vermischt sich mit der wachsenden Frucht...Der Name bedeutet dasselbe wie πρόπαππος It. tritavus = "Drittvater"...also einfach Ahne, ἀρχηγέτης des Geschlechts, der "rechte Vorfahr").

[6] On the reincarnation of ancestors in their descendants see E. B. Tylor Primitive Culture[3] London 1891 ii. 3—5, Frazer Golden Bough[2]: Taboo pp. 365—372. Evidence drawn from Greek and Roman burial customs, Greek nomenclature, etc. is collected by F. B. Jevons 'Greek Law and Folk Lore' in the Class. Rev. 1895 ix. 248 f., J. E. King 'Infant Burial' ib. 1903 xvii. 83 f. (supra ii. 1059), Frazer Totemism and Exogamy iii. 298 f.

So much for the main point. Sundry side-issues have yet to be settled. If tritopátor meant strictly a 'father in the third (ascending) generation' and so, more generally, a 'lineal ancestor,' its correlatives would be represented by such words as tritogenés[1] and tritokoúre[2]. G. Lippold[3] has ingeniously suggested that an echo of the prayer addressed before marriage to the Tritopatores[4] may be heard in the first half[5] of the proverbial line:

Grant me a child that is tritogenés, not tritogéneia[6]— in other words, a boy of true descent in preference to a girl of true descent. In this connexion the old problem as to the meaning of Athena Tritogenés[7] or Tritogéneia[8] simply solves itself. The epithet

[1] Mostly found as an epithet of Athena (infra n. 7).

[2] Hesych. τριτοκούρη· ἢ πάντα συν(τε)τέλεσται τὰ εἰς τοὺς γάμους· τινὲς δὲ γνησία παρθένος. Cp. eund. τρητοκουρήτας· γνησίας γυναῖκας. οἱ δὲ παρθένους, from which L. Dindorf in Steph. Thes. Gr. Ling. vii. 2473 B restored τριτοκούρη· τὰς γνησίας κ. τ. λ.

[3] G. Lippold 'ΤΡΙΤΟΠΑΤΡΕΙΣ' in the Ath. Mitth. 1911 xxxvi. 105.

[4] Supra p. 113.

[5] G. Lippold loc. cit.: 'Die beiden letzten Worte sind vielleicht nur eine spätere Ergänzung, um einen vollständigen Hexameter herzustellen; derartige Ergänzungen sind bei Sprichwörtern und sprichwörtlichen Redensarten etwas sehr häufiges (vgl. Usener, Altgriechischer Versbau 49 ff.).' But M. Budimir, as reported by L. Radermacher in the Berl. philol. Woch. März 4, 1922 p. 198, rightly retorts: 'Die Worte "μὴ τριτογένεια" sind kein späterer Zusatz,...denn sie geben dem Gebet die notwendige Pointe und bilden mit dem Vorherigen einen Hexameter.'

[6] Schol. B. L. T. V. Il. 8. 39 ἢ ὅτι τρίτῃ φθίνοντος ἐτέχθη· καὶ παροιμία 'παῖς μοι τριτογενὴς εἴη, μὴ τριτογένεια.' ἀρρενώδεις γὰρ αἱ τοιαῦται γυναῖκες. The scholiast's explanation of τριτογένεια is, of course, late and worthless (G. Lippold loc. cit. p. 107 f.), but his citation of the proverb is important.

P. Kretschmer in Glotta 1920 x. 42 f. 'Wie erklären sich nun aber hierbei τριτογενής und Τριτογένεια?—Das ist eine Schwierigkeit, die im ersten Augenblick unüberwindlich scheint; denn τριτογενής müsste den in der 3. Generation geborenen bedeuten, und so konnte der junge Ehemann doch nicht den Sohn nennen, den er sich wünscht, und auch die Tochter des Zeus konnte so nicht heissen. Die Lösung des Rätsels ergibt sich aus jenem Prinzip, das Sommer "Konträrbildung" genannt hat und das ich kürzlich in der Anzeige seines Aufsatzes, Glotta VIII 266 f. erörtert habe. Nach τριτοπάτωρ, das nicht mehr wörtlich, sondern nur als Stammvater verstanden wurde, wurde τριτογενής im Sinne von 'Stammsohn,' τριτογένεια oder τριτοκούρη 'Stammtochter' gebildet' (cp. proavus—pronepos, Grossvater—Grosssohn, grandfather—grandson, etc.).

G. Lippold's attempt in the Ath. Mitth. 1911 xxxvi. 106 to explain the element τριτο- in Τριτοπατρεῖς, τριτογενής, Τριτογένεια, Τριτοκούρη as = γνήσιος, γνησία breaks down through lack of any etymological cognates.

[7] Τριτογενής as an epithet of Athena is not Homeric (T. W. Allen and E. E. Sikes on h. Ath. 4 Τριτογενῆ), but becomes fairly frequent in later verse (Bruchmann Epith. deor. p. 15). The earliest examples of it are Aristoph. eq. 1189 ἡ Τριτογενής (where Τριτογένεια is a not very probable conjecture: see F. H. M. Blaydes ad loc.) and oracl. ap. Hdt. 7. 141 = Anth. Pal. 14. 93. 6 Τριτογενεῖ.

[8] Τριτογένεια is an appellation of Athena, used normally without her name. It is frequent in Homeric and post-Homeric verse (not, however, in tragedy) (Bruchmann Epith. deor. p. 15), and occasional even in prose (Stephanus Thes. Gr. Ling. vii. 2472 C—D).

The significance of the titles Τριτογένεια, Τριτογενής as applied to Athena is discussed by T. Bergk in the Jahrb. f. Philol. u. Pädag. 1860 lxxxi. 305—309 = id. Kleine philo- claims that the goddess was the genuine descendant of Zeus, Kronos, and Ouranos—a claim whose validity we shall later have occasion to test.

Again, the use of such a term as Tritopátores to signify a line of remote ancestors implies the primitive view that 'three' is a typical plurality[1]. And the successive 'three' (= many) generations naturally enough leads to the simultaneous 'three' (= many) generators. Accordingly, when names are given to the Tritopatores, they are a triad such as Kottos, Briareos, Gyges[2], or Amalkeides, Protokles, Protokreon[3], or Tritopatreus, Eubouleus, Dionysos[4]. But this last and latest specification offers quite inadequate support to S. Eitrem's hypothesis that the Tritopatores were originally, like the Dioskouroi, two in number, the addition of a third being due to a mere misconception of their name[5].

Misconception, however, of a sort there certainly was, and indeed still is. For as soon as the prose Trĭtopátores became the poetic Trītopatreis, the way was open for the whole group of Trīto- names to overlap and get entangled with an entirely different group of Trīto- names, represented by the sea-god Triton, the sea-goddess Amphitrite, a river Triton, a spring or lake Tritonis, etc. These names presuppose trīton or the like as an early word for 'water.' É. Boisacq[6], for example, following in the steps of E. Windisch[7], H. Osthoff[8], A. Fick[9], K. Brugmann[10], and H. Pedersen[11], relates logische Schriften Halle a. S. 1886 ii. 653—657, J. Escher Triton und seine Bekämpfung durch Herakles Leipzig 1890 pp. 14—19 ('Tritogeneia und verwandtes'), W. Schulze Quaestiones epicae Gueterslohae 1892 p. 177 f., Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 266—270, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 1143 n. 1, 1212 n. 2, 1219 n. 3, M. Budimir 'Atena Tritogenija i' atički Tritopatreiji' in the Glasnik zem. Muzeja 1920 xxxii. 295—328 reported by L. Radermacher in the Berl. philol. Woch. März 4, 1922 pp. 198—203. E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1146—1150 sets out impartially the competing interpretations, but ends with a non liquet.

[1] Supra ii. 893 n. 0.

[2] Supra p. 120.

[3] Supra p. 121.

[4] Supra p. 120.

[5] S. Eitrem Die göttlichen Zwillinge bei den Griechen (Videnskabsselskabets Skrifter. II. Historisk-filos. Klasse 1902 No. 2) Christiania 1902 pp. 60 n. 3, 118, Gruppe Myth. Lit. 1908 p. 628.

[6] Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 986.

[7] E. Windisch in the Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen Sprache und Literatur 1877 iv. 268, id. Kurzgefasste irische Grammatik mit Lesestücken Leipzig 1879 p. 39 § 155.

[8] H. Osthoff—K. Brugmann Morphologische Untersuchungen auf dem Gebiete der indogermanischen Sprachen Leipzig 1881 iv. 195.

[9] A. Fick Vergleichendes Wörterbuch der indogermanischen Sprachen Göttingen 1894 ii[4]. 137.

[10] K. Brugmann Grundriss der vergleichenden Grammatik der indogermanischen Sprachen Strassburg 1906 ii[2]. 1. 298.

[11] H. Pedersen Vergleichende Grammatik der keltischen Sprachen Göttingen 1909 i. 179.

Trîton the god to the Old Irish triath, genitive trethan, the 'sea.' This formidable array of philologists may be supposed to have fixed with some certainty the derivation of the names in question. And their assumption, that a word once existing in common speech may have survived only in a handful of proper names, is fully justified by analogous examples[1]. Confusion between the stems Trīto- and Trīto- undoubtedly modified the meaning of the appellative Tritogéneia, which ceased to be thought of as 'Great-granddaughter,' the pendant of Tritopátor, 'Great-grandfather[2],' and was re-interpreted as 'Born beside the Triton,' a river variously located in Libya[3], Crete[4], Arkadia[5], Boiotia[6], and Thessaly[7]. This [1] E.g. bach or bache, a variant of beck, in the place-names Bacup, Comberbach, Sandbach, etc. (J. B. Johnston The Place-Names of England and Wales London 1915 pp. 120, 211, 431) and the surnames Bache, Batch, Bage, Greatbatch, Huntbach (E. Weekley Surnames London 1916 p. 53). Similarly Old High German aha, Middle High German ahe, 'running water' (cp. Lat. aqua), survives as a, aa, ach, ache, etc. in a great variety of place-names (W. Sturmfels Etymologisches Lexikon deutscher und fremdländischer Ortsnamen Berlin—Bonn 1925 p. 1).

[2] Supra p. 123.

[3] This is the usual version in lexicographers, scholiasts, mythographers, etc.: e.g. Phot. lex. s.v. Τριτογενής = Souid. s.v. Τριτογενής· ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ·...ἢ ὅτι παρὰ < τῷ (inserui A. B. C.) > Τρίτωνι τῷ ποταμῷ Λιβύης ἐγεννήθη,...ἢ ἐπεὶ παρὰ Τρίτωνι ἐγένετο·...ἢ ὅτι ἀπελούσατο ἐν τῷ Τρίτωνι τῷ Λιβύης ποταμῷ. Cp. Hesych. s.v. Τριτογενής· ἐπιθετικῶς ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ·...ἢ τῷ παρὰ Τρίτωνι, τῷ ποταμῷ Λιβύης, ἐμφανισθῆναι, et. mag. p. 767, 40 ff. Τριτογένεια, ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ·...ἢ ὅτι παρὰ τῷ Τρίτωνι ποταμῷ γέγονεν, et. Gud. p. 535, 32 f. Τριτογένεια, ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ, ἀπὸ τοῦ ποταμοῦ, ὅπου γεννηθεῖσα ἀπελούσατο, Orion p. 151, 10 f. Τριτογένεια· ἤτοι ἡ παρὰ τῷ Τρίγωνι (P. H. Larcher corr. Τρίτωνι) ποταμῷ γεννηθεῖσα,....

Schol. Aristoph. eq. 1189 ἐνετριτώνισεν·...ἢ ὡς ἀπὸ Τρίτωνος ποταμοῦ Λιβύης, παρ' ᾧ ἐτέχθη ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ, Eustath. in Dionys. per. 267 ὅτι ἡ Τριτωνίς, εὐρεῖα λίμνη, μέσῃ Λιβύῃ ἔλκεται· περὶ ἣν καί τι νησίδιον ἱστοροῦσιν εἶναι. ἀπὸ ταύτης ὁ μῦθος τὴν Τριτογένειαν Ἀθηνᾶν παρωνομάσθαι βούλεται, ὡς γεννηθεῖσαν περὶ αὐτήν, id. in Il. p. 696, 38 f. (= Favorin. lex. p. 1775, 30 f.) ὡς δὲ καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ Τρίτωνος Λιβυκοῦ ποταμοῦ καλεῖται οὕτω (sc. Τριτογένεια), ἀλλαχοῦ δηλοῦται, id. p. 1265, 7 ff. Τριτογένεια δὲ κάνταῦθα ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ. καὶ διὰ τί μὲν οὕτω καλεῖται, ἀλλαχόθι δεδήλωται. ὅτι δὲ καὶ παρὰ τὸν Τρίτωνα ποταμὸν ἡ λέξις λέγεται, ὡς ἐκεῖ γεννηθείσης τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς, ῥητέον εἰς τοῦτο νῦν ἐκεῖνο καὶ μόνον, ὡς κ.τ.λ., id. in Od. p. 1473, 11 f. Τριτογένεια δὲ...ἢ ἐκ Τρίτωνος Λιβυκοῦ ποταμοῦ, schol. A.D. Il. 8. 39 οἱ δὲ νεώτεροί φασι τὴν παρὰ τῷ Τρίτωνι ποταμῷ γεννηθεῖσαν, ὃς ἐστι τῆς Λιβύης. A fine effort of scholiastic harmonism will be found in schol. T. (cp. schol. B. L. V.) Il. 8. 39 Μῆτιν τὴν Ὠκεανοῦ ἀμείβουσαν εἰς πολλὰ τὴν μορφὴν Ζεὺς βουλόμενος παρ' ἑαυτῷ ἔχειν κατέπιεν ἔγκυον οὖσαν ὑπὸ Βρόντου τοῦ Κύκλωπος· τελεσφορηθείσης δὲ τῆς παιδός, ὁ Ζεὺς διὰ τῆς κεφαλῆς τεκὼν δίδωσι τῷ Τρίτωνι τῷ ποταμῷ τρέφειν· ὅθεν Τριτογένεια ἐκλήθη ὡς ἐκ τριῶν συναυξηθεῖσα, Βρόντου Διὸς Τρίτωνος! This is largely based on Apollod. 1. 3. 6—a passage discussed infra § 9 (h) ii (κ).

Apollod. 1. 3. 6 ὡς δὲ ὁ τῆς γενέσεως ἐνέστη χρόνος, πλήξαντος αὐτοῦ (sc. τοῦ Διὸς) τὴν κεφαλὴν πελέκει Προμηθέως ἢ καθάπερ ἄλλοι λέγουσιν Ἡφαίστου, ἐκ κορυφῆς, ἐπὶ ποταμοῦ Τρίτωνος, Ἀθηνᾶ σὺν ὅπλοις ἀνέθορε, 3. 12. 3 φασὶ γεννηθεῖσαν τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν παρὰ Τρίτωνι τρέφεσθαι, ᾧ θυγάτηρ ἦν Παλλάς, κ.τ.λ. (quoted by Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 355), Mela 1. 36 super hunc (sc. Syrtim minorem) ingens palus amnem Tritona recipit, ipsa Tritonis, unde et Minervae cognomen inditum est, ut incolae arbitrantur, ibi genitae; faciuntque ei fabulae aliquam fidem, quod quem natalem eius putant ludicris virginum inter se decer-tantium celebrant, Lact. Plac. in Stat. Theb. 2. 722 Tritone: fluvius vel palus in Libya, in qua Minerva dicitur nata, sicut Lucanus (Lucan. 9. 354) affirmat. unde Graeci eam Minervam Tritogeniam vocant, Myth. Vat. 1. 124 haec et Tritonia dicitur quia circa Tritonium lacum dicitur apparuisse in virginali aetate, 3. 10. 1 nam quod a Libyca palude hoc nomen (sc. Tritonia) meruerit, quia illic a caelo descensum et ad caelum ascensum celebraverit, poëticum esse constat. nam legitur (Lucan. 9. 354): 'et se dilecta Tritonia (leg. Tritonida) dixit ab unda.'

Sometimes a rival version is noted: schol. Paris. Ap. Rhod. 1. 109 Τριτωνὶς δὲ ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ, ὅτι ἐν τῷ Τρίτωνι ἐγεννήθη τῷ Διβυκῷ. εἰσὶ δὲ καὶ ἄλλοι δύο Τρίτωνες, εἷς μὲν Βοιωτικός, ἕτερος δὲ Θεσσαλικός. Cp. schol. Paris. Ap. Rhod. 4. 1311 (= Favorin. lex. p. 1776, 5 ff.) Τρίτων δὲ πόλις (R. F. P. Brunck corr. ποταμὸς) Διβύης. ἔστι δὲ καὶ Βοιωτίας. παρὰ θατέρῳ δὲ τούτων δοκεῖ γεγενῆσθαι ἡ Ἀθηνᾶ· διὸ καὶ Τριτογένεια λέγεται, interp. Serv. in Verg. Aen. 2. 171 a Tritone amne Boeotiae, aut a Tritonide palude Africae, iuxta quam nata dicitur.

[4] Diod. 5. 72 μυθολογοῦσι δὲ καὶ (sc. as well as Zeus: see Diod. 5. 70 cited supra ii. 190 n. 2) τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν κατὰ τὴν Κρήτην ἐκ Διὸς ἐν ταῖς πηγαῖς τοῦ Τρίτωνος ποταμοῦ γεννηθῆναι· διὸ καὶ Τριτογένειαν ὀνομασθῆναι. ἔστι δὲ καὶ νῦν ἔτι περὶ τὰς πηγὰς ταύτας ἱερὸν ἄγιον τῆς θεοῦ ταύτης, ἐν ᾧ τόπῳ τὴν γένεσιν αὐτῆς ὑπάρξαι μυθολογοῦσι (for Diodoros' Cretan sources see E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 678).

Diod. 3. 70 (Ammon hid Dionysos, his son by Amaltheia, in a (Cretan?) cave) πρὸς δὲ τὰς ἀπὸ τῆς μητρυιᾶς Ῥέας ἐπιβουλὰς φύλακα τοῦ παιδὸς καταστῆσαι τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν, μικρὸν πρὸ τούτων τῶν χρόνων γηγενῆ φανεῖσαν ἐπὶ τοῦ Τρίτωνος ποταμοῦ, δι' ὃν Τριτωνίδα προσηγορεῦσθαι (the source here is the 'Phrygian poem' of Thymoites (Diod. 3. 67), on which see J. Carcopino La Basilique pythagoricienne de la Porte Majeure Paris 1927 p. 301 ff.).

These Cretan legends are of little or no authority. They were possibly prompted by the fact that coins of Itanos from c. 460 to the beginning of s. iv B.C. have for obverse type a sea-god, probably one with the 'Dagon' of Arados (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia pp. xx f., 1 ff. pl. 1, 1—10, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides Paris 1893 p. 123 ff. pl. 22, 1—9, id. Monn. gr. rom. ii. 2. 511 ff. pl. 116, 4—18), since the eponym Itanos is described as a Phoenician (Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἰτανός· πόλις ἐν Κρήτῃ, ἀπὸ Ἰτάνου Φοίνικος, ἢ τῶν Κουρήτων ἑνὸς μιγάδος), but in aspect indistinguishable from Triton (J. N. Svoronos Numismatique de la Crète ancienne Mâcon 1890 i. 201 ff. pls. 18, 21—37, 19, 1—9, Babelon Monn. gr. rom. ii. 3. 895 ff. pl. 244, 1—16, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 469 f. fig. 251, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Crete etc. p. 51 pls. 12, 6—8, 13, 1—4, Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 189, McClean Cat. Coins ii. 499 pl. 241, 3 f., Weber Cat. Coins ii. 532 nos. 4499—4503 pl. 163, Bement Sale Catalogue 1924 ii. 19 no. 1306 f. pl. 45), while from c. 376 to the middle of s. iv B.C. the sea-god is replaced by the head of Athena, surviving only as an adjunct on the reverse side (J. N. Svoronos op. cit. i. 204 ff. pl. 19, 10—27, Babelon Monn. gr. rom. ii. 3. 901 ff. pls. 244, 17—20, 245, 1—11, Head op. cit.[2] p. 470, Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Crete etc. p. 52 pl. 13, 5—8, Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 189 f. pl. 42, 8 f., McClean Cat. Coins ii. 499 f. pl. 241, 5—10, Weber Cat. Coins ii. 533 f. nos. 4504 f. pl. 163, 4506—4512 pl. 164, Michailovitch Sale Catalogue 1922 p. 42 no. 629 pl. 24, Bertier de la Garde Sale Catalogue 1923 p. 92 nos. 2276—2280 pl. 64). I show a representative series, of which fig. 41 = J. N. Svoronos op. cit. pl. 18, 23 Paris, fig. 42 = Babelon Monn. gr. rom. pl. 244, 4 Jameson collection, fig. 43 = a specimen, from unpublished dies, in my own collection, fig. 44 = Photiades Sale Catalogue 1890 i. 104 no. 1293 pl. 7, fig. 45 = J. N. Svoronos op. cit. pl. 19, 6 de Luynes collection, fig. 46 = J. N. Svoronos op. cit. pl. 19, 9 Paris, fig. 47 = Babelon Monn. gr. rom. pl. 245, 4 de Luynes collection.

A somewhat similar deity on an unpublished bronze coin of Karystos in my collection (fig. 48) is presumably Glaukos, from whom the athlete Glaukos of Karystos traced his descent (Paus. 6. 10. 1). Obv. head of Zeus; rev. ΚΑ Sea-god to right, grasping fish (holed).

[5] Paus. 8. 26. 6 Ἀλιφηρεῦσι δὲ τὸ μὲν ὄνομα τῇ πόλει γέγονεν ἀπὸ Ἀλιφήρου Δυκάονος παιδός, ἱερὰ δὲ Ἀσκληπιοῦ τέ ἐστι καὶ Ἀθηνᾶς, ἣν θεῶν σέβονται μάλιστα, γενέσθαι καὶ τραφῆναι παρὰ σφίσιν αὐτὴν λέγοντες· καὶ Διός τε ἱδρύσαντο Λεχεάτου (Gédoyn cj. Λοχεάτου) βωμὸν ἅτε ἐνταῦθα τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν τεκόντος, καὶ κρήνην καλοῦσι Τριτωνίδα, τὸν ἐπὶ τῷ ποταμῷ τῷ Τρίτωνι οἰκειούμενοι λόγον. κ.τ.λ. (supra ii. 782). W. M. Leake Travels in the Morea London 1830 ii. 79 with plan on p. 73 identified this Tritonis with a spring on the north-eastern side of the hill of Aliphera.

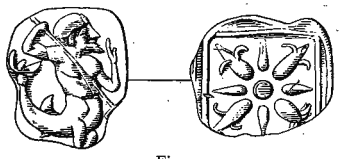

Fig. 41.

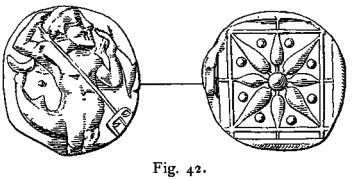

Fig. 42.

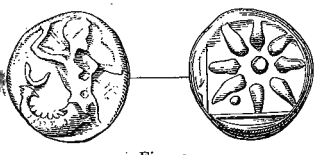

Fig. 43.

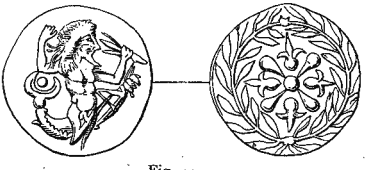

Fig. 44.

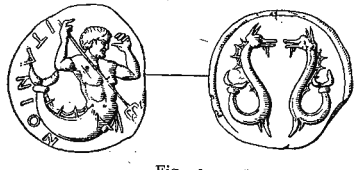

Fig. 45.

Fig. 46.

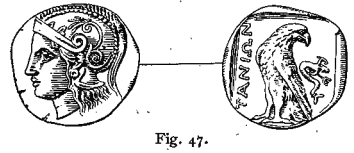

Fig. 47.

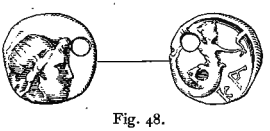

Fig. 48.

[6] Paus. 9. 33. 7 ῥεῖ δὲ καὶ ποταμὸς ἐνταῦθα (sc. near Alalkomenai) οὐ μέγας χείμαρρος· ὀνομάζουσι δὲ Τρίτωνα αὐτόν, ὅτι τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν τραφῆναι παρὰ ποταμῷ Τρίτωνι ἔχει λόγος, ὡς δὴ τοῦτον τὸν Τρίτωνα ὄντα καὶ οὐχὶ τὸν Λιβύων, ὃς ἐς τὴν πρὸς Λιβύῃ (so F. Sylburg for Λιβύην codd.) θάλασσαν ἐκδίδωσιν ἐκ τῆς Τριτωνίδος λίμνης. See also schol. Paris. Ap. Rhod. 1. 109, 4. 1311 (= Favorin. lex. p. 1776, 5 ff.), interp. Serv. in Verg. Aen. 2. 171, all cited supra p. 126 n. 0. The Boeotian towns Athenai and Eleusis (Paus. 9. 24. 2, Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἀθῆναι) were situated on the banks of the Triton (Strab. 407), which W. M. Leake Travels in Northern Greece Cambridge 1835 ii. 135 f. identifies with the stream near the village of Sulinari. K. O. Müller Orchomenos und die re-interpretation, a commonplace of classical mythology, is not expressly recorded till the Graeco-Roman period, though there are stray hints of it as early as the fifth century B.C.[1].

Whether the same confusion of Trīto- with Trīto- ever brought the Tritopatores or Tritopatreis into relation with the water-powers seems to me more problematic. M. Budimir, who claims that the Tritopatreis had something to do with wells, quotes from the Epakria calendar certain 'priestly dues on account of the well for the Tritopatreis[2].' Unfortunately—as may be seen from J. von Prott's edition of the text[3]—the priestly dues and the well belong to one clause, the Tritopatreis to another. The two are juxtaposed, but not connected. Apart from this, Budimir has to fall back on the somewhat remote analogy of the Vedic god Trita, who sits in wells and presses soma[4].

No doubt, the deities of wind and water do draw together in late classical belief. Horace[5] describes the South-wind as the > Mightiest power that Hadria knows,

> Wills he the waves to madden or compose.

Minyer[2] Breslau 1844 p. 349 ff. argued that the 'Ursitz' of Athena Τριτογένεια was Boiotia, whence the myth spread with the Minyai to Libya. Similarly Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 266 ff. holds that Athena Τριτογένεια originated in Thessaly or Boiotia, and thence passed to Kyrene.

[1] Schol. Paris. Ap. Rhod. 1. 109 cited supra p. 126 n. 0. There are traces of the name even further north, cp. Steph. Byz. s.v. Τρίτωνος· πολίχνιον Μακεδονίας.

[1] Aisch. Eum. 292 ff. ἀλλ' εἴτε χώρας ἐν τόποις Λιβυστικῆς (so Auratus for Λιβυστικοῖς codd.) | Τρίτωνος ἀμφὶ χεῦμα γενεθλίου πόρου | τίθησιν ὀρθὸν ἢ κατηρεφῆ πόδα (sc. Ἀθηνᾶ), | κ.τ.λ., Hdt. 4. 180 τούτων δὲ ἔχονται τῶν Μαχλύων Αὐσέες· οὗτοι δὲ καὶ οἱ Μάχλυες πέριξ τὴν Τριτωνίδα λίμνην οἰκέουσι, τὸ μέσον δέ σφι οὐρίζει ὁ Τρίτων...ὀρτῇ δὲ ἐνιαυσίῃ Ἀθηναίης αἱ παρθένοι αὐτῶν δίχα διαστᾶσαι μάχονται πρὸς ἀλλήλας λίθοισί τε καὶ ξύλοισι, τῷ αὐθιγενέι θεῷ λέγουσαι τὰ πάτρια ἀποτελέειν, τὴν Ἀθηναίην καλέομεν. τὰς δὲ ἀποθνῃσκούσας τῶν παρθένων ἐκ τῶν τρωμάτων ψευδοπαρθένους καλέουσι. πρὶν δὲ ἀνεῖναι αὐτὰς μάχεσθαι, τάδε ποιεῦσι κοινῇ· παρθένον τὴν καλλιστεύουσαν ἑκάστοτε κοσμήσαντες κυνέῃ τε Κορινθίῃ καὶ πανοπλίῃ Ἑλληνικῇ καὶ ἐπ' ἅρμα ἀναβιβάσαντες περιάγουσι τὴν λίμνην κύκλῳ. ὀτέοισι δὲ τὸ πάλαι ἐκόσμεον τὰς παρθένους πρὶν ἢ σφι Ἕλληνας παροικισθῆναι, οὐκ ἔχω εἰπεῖν, δοκέω δ' ὦν Αἰγυπτίοισι ὅπλοισι κοσμέεσθαι αὐτάς·...τὴν δὲ Ἀθηναίην φασὶ Ποσειδέωνος εἶναι θυγατέρα καὶ τῆς Τριτωνίδος λίμνης, καί μιν μεμφθεῖσάν τι τῷ πατρὶ δοῦναι ἑωυτὴν τῷ Διί, τὸν δὲ Δία ἑωυτοῦ μιν ποιήσασθαι θυγατέρα, Eur. Ion 871 ff. καὶ τὴν ἐπ' ἐμοῖς σκοπέλοισι θεὰν | λίμνης τ' ἐνύδρου Τριτωνιάδος | πότνιαν ἀκτάν, Aristoph. Lys. 346 ff. καί σε καλῶ σύμμαχον, ὦ | Τριτογένει', ἥν τις ἐκείνας ὑποπίμπρησιν ἀνήρ, | φέρειν ὕδωρ μεθ' ἡμῶν.

[2] M. Budimir reported by L. Radermacher in the Berl. philol. Woch. März 4, 1922 p. 202 'ἱερώσυνα φρέατος Τριτοπατρεῦσι.'

[3] The text is given supra p. 115 n. 4.

[4] J. Escher Triton und seine Bekämpfung durch Herakles Leipzig 1890 pp. 9—13 ('Vorgeschichte des Triton und Ableitung des Namens,' dealing fully with Vedic Trita, Zend Thrita, etc.), E. W. Hopkins The Religions of India Boston etc. 1895 pp. 104, 431 n. 3, M. Winternitz A concise Dictionary of Eastern Religion Oxford 1910 p. 589, A. A. Macdonell in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1921 xii. 604 b.

[5] Hor. od. 1. 3. 15 f. trans. J. Conington.

In art, as H. Steinmetz[1] pointed out, wind-gods approximate to the Tritonian type. Lucian[2] touches in the portrait of Thrasykles the philosopher with a few effective phrases:

'Here he comes—beard all a-spread, eyebrows arched, arrogance in the air, an up-against-Olympos look, the tresses waving over his forehead, a very Boreas or Triton in the manner of Zeuxis.'

En revanche Triton, blowing a blast with his sonorous conch, easily takes on the duties of a wind-god. A mosaic[3] found in 1833 at Saint Rustice, north-west of Toulouse, among the ruins of a Roman bath, represents a huge head of Okeanos[4] surrounded by various marine subjects. These include sea-divinities mounted on Tritons, all labelled in Greek lettering of the third century A.D.[5] Adjacent bays on the right show Thétis carried by Trîton, Panópea by Bórios; on the left, Dotó by Nynphogenés, Palémon and Inó by Glaûkos. The artist's signature is incomplete—...génios Sikiliótes. Here then we have a genuine Triton wearing a fish-skin as a chlamýs, but actually bearing the name of a wind-god Bór(e)ios. More than that, one interesting monument made Triton in a sense the ruler of all the winds that blow. The Horologion of Andronikos Kyrrhestes[6], built at [1] H. Steinmetz 'Windgötter' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1910 xxv. 35 n. 13, F. R. Dressler in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1203.

[2] Loukian.-Tim. 54 ἀλλὰ τί τοῦτο; οὐ Θρασυκλῆς ὁ φιλόσοφος οὗτός ἐστιν; οὐ μὲν οὖν ἄλλος· ἐκπετάσας γοῦν τὸν πώγωνα καὶ τὰς ὀφρῦς ἀνατείνας καὶ βρενθυόμενός τι πρὸς αὐτὸν ἔρχεται, τιτανῶδες βλέπων, ἀνασεσοβημένος τὴν ἐπὶ τῷ μετώπῳ κόμην, Αὐτοβορέας τις ἢ Τρίτων, οἷους ὁ Ζεῦξις ἔγραψεν.

[3] J. de Witte in the Bull. d. Inst. 1834 pp. 157—159, A. L. C. A. Du Mège in the Histoire et Mémoires de l'académie royale des sciences, inscriptions et belles-lettres de Toulouse 1834—1836 (Toulouse 1837) iv. 2. 30—51, id. Archéologie pyrénéenne Toulouse 1858 Atlas i pl. 14, Reinach Rép. Peint. Gr. Rom. p. 38 no. 1.

[4] P. Gauckler in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. iii. 2115 n. 10.

[5] Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 2519 a ΓΕΝ|ΙΟC || CIK|ΛIΩ|THC, b ΠΑΝΟΠΗΑ || BOPIoC, c ΘΕΤIC || ΤΡΙΤΩΝ, d ΔΩΤΩ || ΝΥΝΦΟ|ΓΕΝΗC, ΓΛΑΥΚoC || ΠΑΛΕΜΩΝ || ΙΝΩ.

[6] J. Stuart and N. Revett The Antiquities of Athens London 1762 i. 13—25 with pls. 1 (view), 2 (plan), 3 (restoration), 4 (vertical section), 5—9 (architectural detail), 10 f. (sundials), 12—19 (wind-gods), J. Matz in Baumeister Denkm. iii. 2112—2115 figs. 2365 (chart), 2366 (restoration), 2367 (vertical section), 2368 (plan), 2369 (klepsýdra), Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. pp. 200—203 fig. 9, Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 615 f. fig. 324 (Boreas), Frazer Pausanias ii. 187 f., E. A. Gardner Ancient Athens London 1902 pp. 24, 488—491 (date either s. ii or early in s. i B.C.) with fig., W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 pp. 92 n. 11 (date s. i B.C.), 333 f. with fig. 41, ib.[2] 1931 pp. 97, 374 f., Reinach Rép. Reliefs i. 57.

P. Graindor in Le Musée Belge 1906 x. 353 ff. and in Byzantion 1926 iii. 29 ff. notes the discovery in Tenos, about the year 1906, of a tower like that of the Winds at Athens. This new tower has an inscription (Inscr. Gr. ins. v. 2 no. 891, cp. A. Rehm in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 2427) which shows that Andronikos, the constructor of both, was a native of Kyrrhos in Makedonia (not Kyrrhos in Syria) and that the tower at Athens must be dated in the time of Iulius Caesar.

Athens in the first century B.C. and better known to us as the 'Tower of the Winds,' was an octagonal structure of white marble containing a water-clock. The upper part of its exterior was decorated with eight reliefs of the wind-gods, arranged in accordance with the wind-rose of Eratosthenes[1],—Boreas, Kaikias, Apeliotes, Euros,

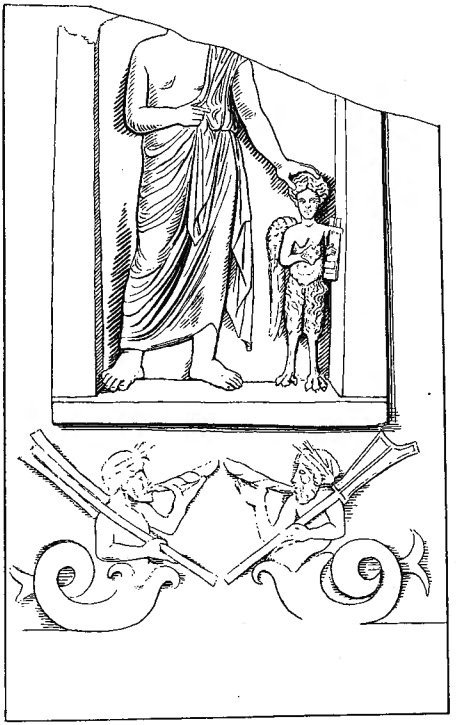

Fig. 49.

Notos, Lips, Zephyros, Skiron. And the roof was crowned by the bronze figure of a Triton, who swung round in the wind and pointed with his rod to the appropriate deity[2].

[1] H. Steinmetz De ventorum descriptionibus apud Graecos Romanosque Gottingae 1907 pp. 42 ff., 80, id. 'Windgötter' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1910 xxv. 34 f.

[2] Vitr. 1. 6. 4, cp. Varr. rer. rust. 3. 5. 17.

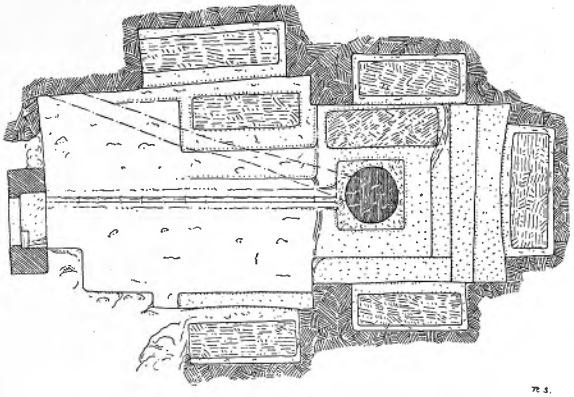

Fig. 50.

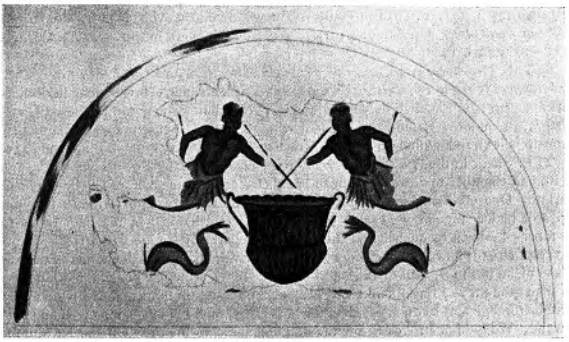

Fig. 51.

If Triton thus played the part of Aiolos, can we go further and maintain that the former, like the latter, was a keeper of souls in some island of the Otherworld? It must, I think, be admitted that Tritons on occasion were viewed as protectors of the dead. A stêle of Pentelic marble in the Peiraieus Museum (fig. 49), assigned by A. Brückner[1] to the end of the second or the beginning of the first century B.C., represents the dead man standing in an architectural niche (naïskos?) with his left hand on the head of a Siren at his side. Below this group are carved in slight relief two bearded Tritons, wreathed with reeds (?), who confront one another, each blowing a conch and shouldering a paddle. Why are they there? Brückner describes them as 'das mythologische Ornament,' which is true but not particularly helpful. I take it that Triton with his echoing horn, like the cock with his lively din[2], was believed to keep maleficent spirits at a distance. And this may well account for the persistent popularity of Tritons on sarcophagi and other sepulchral monuments of Graeco-Roman and Etruscan art[3]. They are often accompanied by a train of Nereids and sea-beasts, with diminutive Erotes here, there, and everywhere. I figure a couple of sarcophagi, one made for a Roman lady in the third century A.D. (fig. 52)[4], the other made

[1] A. Brückner in the Ath. Mitth. 1888 xiii. 377—382 pl. 4 (=my fig. 49), F. R. Dressler in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1174 with fig. 13.

[2] See E. Baethgen De vi ac significatione galli in religionibus et artibus Graecorum et Romanorum Gottingae 1887 pp. 20—23 ('De galli vi averruncanti'), P. Perdrizet in the Revue des études anciennes 1904 pp. 12—17, S. Seligmann Der böse Blick und Verwandtes Berlin 1910 i. 125 f., 319, ii. 82, 120, 140, 151, 153, 155, 311, O. Keller Die antike Tierwelt Leipzig 1913 ii. 141, F. Orth in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 2532 f., Mrs A. Strong Apotheosis and After Life London 1915 p. 257, C. T. Seltman in the Ann. Brit. Sch. Ath. 1923—1925 xxvi. 100 f.

[3] F. R. Dressler Triton und die Tritonen in der Litteratur und Kunst der Griechen und Römer Wurzen 1892/3 ii. 13—23 (§ 25 'Tritonen (auch Tritoniden) in Reliefs an Sarkophagen hauptsächlich in Verbindung mit Nereiden, Eroten und Seetieren'), 23—25 (§ 26 '...in anderen Sepulcralmonumenten'), 26 (§ 27 'Fischschwänzige Daimonen an etruskischen Grabdenkmälern'), id. in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1193—1198, 1198 f., 1199 f.

T. L. Shear in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1931 xxxv. 428 ff. figs. 5—10 reports the finding of Roman chamber-tombs cut out in the hard clay of a hillside S.E. of Cheliotomylos near Corinth. One of these, originally constructed towards the end of s. i A.D. (fig. 5=my fig. 50), had a circular well-shaft (0·95^{m} across, 2·30^{m} deep) in the floor of its inner chamber—perhaps to quench the thirst of the departed (Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 831 n. 1, infra § 9 (d) ii (α))—and was decorated with several paintings. That on the tympanum of the niche in the S. wall of the outer chamber (fig. 6=my fig. 51) shows a large kratêr (orange ground, red lines) flanked by a pair of plunging dolphins, above which are two Tritons (orange and red bodies, greenish-blue tails), each blowing a long reed and holding a wand. Wavy blue strokes below the dolphins indicate the sea. On the N. wall of the outer chamber, at the E. end of the grave is a large trident painted on the transverse wall.

[4] Clarac Mus. de Sculpt. pl. 207 fig. 196 (=Reinach Rép. Stat. i. 95 no. 3) with Texte ii. 502, Fröhner Sculpt. du Louvre i. 405 f. no. 440, F. R. Dressler in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1194 f. fig. 25. A sarcophagus-front of Luna marble. Height 0·55^{m}. Length 2·15^{m}.

about the same time but used for a Christian burial perhaps two centuries later (fig. 53)[1].

The significance of this marine cortège has been differently conceived by different critics. F. Buonarroti[2] in 1698 held that graceful Oceanic figures were believed to escort deserving souls to the Islands of the Blest. His view, accepted by archaeologists of the eighteenth century, was extended by E. Q. Visconti[3], who remarked that sea-processions of the sort were suggestive of a Bacchic thiasos. E. Petersen[4] caught at the notion and regarded the riot of sea-creatures as an attempt to symbolise the joyous revels of pious souls on entering the Otherworld. He observed that the movement of such groups is centripetal, not processional, and consequently abandoned the idea of an escort to the Islands of the Blest. He failed, however, adequately to explain why ordinary mortals should thus suffer a sea-change. Neither Ino[5] nor Enalos[6] is typical of commonplace humanity. W. H. Roscher[7] suspected that the clue lay in the Samothracian mysteries. Sundry myths of the

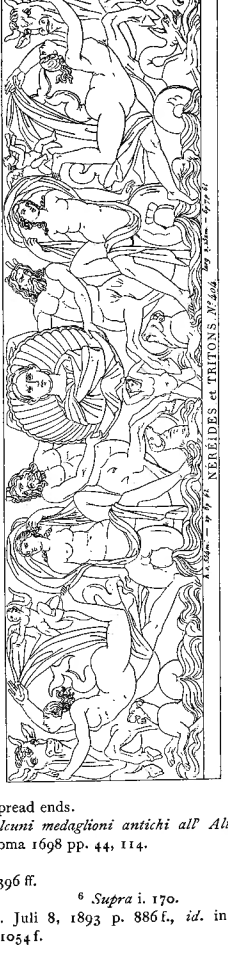

Fig. 52.

[1] C. L. V(isconti) 'Sarcofago con rappresentanza di Nereidi e Tritoni' in the Bull. Comm. Arch. Comun. di Roma 1873 i. 192—200 pl. 4 (=my fig. 53). Found near the western side of the large square porticus to the right of the Basilica of S. Lorenzo at Rome. Height 0·65^{m}. Length 2·10^{m}. The acclamation PROMOTE | HABEAS (for Promote, aveas) is followed by a Latin cross with spread ends.

[2] F. Buonarroti Osservazioni istoriche sopra alcuni medaglioni antichi all' Altezza serenissima di Cosimo III, gran duca di Toscana Roma 1698 pp. 44, 114.

[3] Visconti Mus. Pie-Clém. iv. 240 ff. pl. 33.

[4] E. Petersen in the Ann. d. Inst. 1860 xxxii. 396 ff.

[5] Pind. Ol. 2. 28 ff., cp. supra i. 674.

[6] Supra i. 170.

[7] W. H. Roscher in the Berl. philol. Woch. Juli 8, 1893 p. 886 f., id. in the Literarisches Zentralblatt für Deutschland 1893 p. 1054 f.

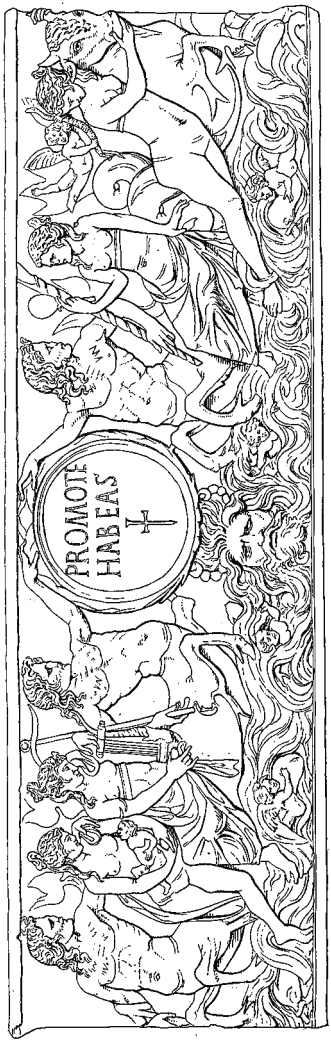

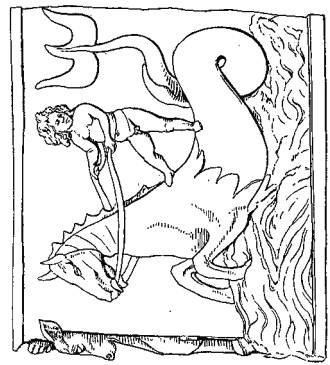

Fig. 53.

A stucco-relief in the semi-dome of the subterranean basilica at Rome :
the last voyage of the soul over the waters of death to the Islands of the Blest.

See page 135 ff.

A stucco-relief in the ~~semi-dome of the subterranean~~ basilica at Rome:
the last voyage of the soul over the waters of death to the Islands of the Blest.

See page 135 ff.

Tyrsenian Pelasgoi, who founded these mysteries, told how mortals were transformed into sea-deities or sea-creatures—witness Ino Leukothea, Halia, Kombe, Palaimon, Glaukos Pontios, Enalos, and the Tyrsenian pirates metamorphosed into dolphins. Accordingly Roscher conjectured that any Samothracian mystic drowned at sea was said to have become a deity or a denizen of the deep. Hence the frequency of these 'Samothracian' designs. H. Steuding[1] replied that, if so, we ought to see the deceased himself portrayed as one of the marine powers rather than his effigy borne aloft in their midst. The matter is still in dispute. Personally, I am impressed by F. G. Welcker's[2] claim that these sarcophagi are descended from the famous group by Skopas, of which Pliny[3] says:

'But most highly esteemed of all his works is the group in the temple built by Gnaeus Domitius in the Circus of Flaminius: it comprises Poseidon himself with Thetis and Achilles, Nereids riding on dolphins and sea monsters or on sea horses, and Tritons and the train of Phorkos, with sea beasts and a tumult of creatures of the deep, the whole by the same hand, a wondrous work, even were it that of a life-time.'

If, as is commonly supposed[4], the Scopaic group—almost certainly a pedimental group—represented the passing of Achilles to the Islands of the Blest, or more precisely to Leuke or Borysthenis in the Black Sea[5], it is at least legitimate to interpret the scene on the sarcophagi as that of a safe and superhuman convoy moving forward[6] to some Otherworld island[7]. And here it will be remembered that the magnificent stucco-relief, which fills the semi-dome of the subterranean basilica outside the Porta Maggiore at Rome, depicts an analogous scene (pl. xix)[8]. Before us lies a stormy

[1] H. Steuding in the Woch. f. klass. Philol. Nov. 29, 1893 p. 1307.

[2] Welcker Alt. Denkm. i. 204—206.

[3] Plin. nat. hist. 36. 26 trans. Miss K. Jex-Blake.

[4] L. Urlichs Skopas Leben und Werke Greifswald 1863 p. 132 ff., id. Griechische Statuen im republikanischen Rom Würzburg 1880 p. 17 ff., Overbeck Gr. Plastik[4] ii. 19 f., 420, J. Sieveking 'Der sogenannte Altar des Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus' in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1910 xiii. 95—101, G. Lippold in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii A. 573 f.

[5] Fleischer in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 53—58, J. Escher-Bürkli in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 240 f., W. Tomaschek ib. iii. 739, Farnell Gk. Hero Cults p. 286, Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. ii. 1194 f.

[6] This escapes E. Petersen's objection that the movement of the group is centripetal, not processional (supra p. 133).

[7] Mrs A. Strong Apotheosis and After Life London 1915 p. 215 'The dolphins and marine monsters, another frequent decoration, form a mystic escort of the dead to the Islands of the Blest, and at the same time carry with them an allusion to the purifying power of water and to the part assigned to the watery element in Mithraic and solar cults.' I am not satisfied that we need to assume any such further implications.

[8] Good photographs of the relief were published by E. Strong and N. Jolliffe in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1924 xliv. 103 ff. pl. 4 and by J. Carcopino La basilique pythagoricienne de la Porte Majeure Paris 1927 p. 371 ff. pl. 24. Better still is the definitive publication sea with threatening breakers. A rock-bound coast looms up on either hand. From the headland on the right, where a tree is growing, a veiled woman with a lyre steps down towards the water, attended by Eros. In front of her a Triton, or perhaps rather a personification of the Wind, holds a mantle to serve as her ferry-boat across the flood. On the cliff to the left sits a man, who leans his head on his hand in an attitude of deep dejection. In front of him a second and unmistakable Triton turns away, blowing a blast on his horn. Finally, in the distance is seen a rocky island, on which stands Apollon holding out his hand as if to welcome the woman. F. Fornari[1], one of the two scholars first privileged to publish this wonderful composition, saw at once that the subject must be the last voyage of the soul over the waters of death to the Islands of the Blest. Much has been written on the relief since then[2], and, though various points of content[3] and style[4] remain uncertain, it by G. Bendinelli in the Mon. d. Linc. 1926 xxxi pls. 11 (= my pl. xix), 12 (centre), 13 (right side), 14 (drawing). To photograph well an apsidal relief in such a position is something of a technical triumph.

[1] F. Fornari in the Not. Scavi 1918 p. 49, being part of the initial publication (E. Gatti and F. Fornari 'Brevi notizie relative alla scoperta di un monumento sotterraneo presso Porta Maggiore' in the Not. Scavi 1918 pp. 30—39 and 39—52).

[2] The bibliography given by J. Carcopino La basilique pythagoricienne de la Porte Majeure Paris 1927 pp. 388—391 mentions thirty-nine articles, paragraphs, and letters dealing directly with the basilica. And the end is not yet. The most important accounts are the following: F. Cumont 'La basilique souterraine de la Porta Maggiore' in the Rev. Arch. 1918 ii. 52—73, R. Lanciani 'Il santuario sotterraneo recentemente scoperto ad Spem Veterem' in the Bull. Comm. Arch. Comun. di Roma 1920 pp. 69—84, R. Leopold 'La basilique souterraine de la Porta Maggiore' in the Mélanges d'Archéologie et d'Histoire 1921 xxxix. 165—192, G. Bendinelli 'Il mausoleo sotterraneo altrimenti detto Basilica di Porta Maggiore' in the Bull. Comm. Arch. Comun. di Roma 1922 pp. 85—126, H. Lietzmann 'Orphisch-neupythagoräische Katakombenkunst in Rom' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1922 xxxvii. Arch. Anz. pp. 348—351, id. 'Der unterirdische Kultraum von Porta Maggiore in Rom' in the Bibliothek Warburg: Vorträge 1922—1923 ii. 66—70, J. Hubaux 'Le plongeon rituel' in the Musée Belge 1923 p. 5 ff., E. Strong and N. Jolliffe 'The Stuccoes of the Underground Basilica near the Porta Maggiore' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1924 xliv. 65—111. To these must be added the clear-headed and well-documented monograph of J. Carcopino op. cit. pp. 1—414 with 24 plates and 6 plans, and finally the sumptuous publication of G. Bendinelli 'Il monumento sotterraneo di Porta Maggiore in Roma' in the Mon. d. Linc. 1926 xxxi. 601—860 with 54 figs. and 43 pls.

[3] It is à priori probable that the conch of the apse represented a myth rather than a belief. There was therefore something to be said for the suggestion of C. Densmore Curtis 'Sappho and the "Leucadian Leap"' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1920 xxiv. 146—150 that the stucco portrays 'a well-known story, namely the famous "Leucadian Leap" of Sappho in her attempt to be freed from her hopeless love for Phaon' (Ov. her. 15. 157—184). F. Cumont 'La basilica sotterranea presso Porta Maggiore a Roma' in the Rassegna d'Arte 1921 pp. 37—44 held that this explanation of the scene was possibly compatible with his own Pythagorean hypothesis. J. Carcopino 'Encore la Basilique de la "Porta Maggiore"' in the Rev. Arch. 1923 ii. 1—23 turned possibility into something very like certainty by pointing out that the Pythagoreans were much concerned with the myth of Sappho and Phaon (Plin. nat. hist. 22. 20 ob hoc (sc. male root of white eryngo) et Phaonem Lesbium dilectum a Sappho, multa circa hoc non Magorum solum vanitate, sed etiam Pythagoricorum). E. Strong and N. Jolliffe 'The Stuccoes of the Underground Basilica near the Porta Maggiore' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1924 xliv. 65—111 justly observe (p. 103 f.): 'It is true that Pliny says nothing about the death or leap of Sappho, nothing therefore bearing on the subject of the apse stucco, yet we may now reasonably assume that the whole Sappho legend entered into Pythagorean lore, and that M. Carcopino by this timely discovery has disposed of any doubt as to the Pythagorean character of the basilica, or as to Sappho's leap being the subject of the apse stucco.' They themselves go further and, taking a hint from H. Stuart Jones (ib. p. 103 n. 124 a), interpret the relief as a scene of apotheosis by water (cp. G. Glotz L'ordalie dans la Grèce primitive Paris 1904 pp. 34—50 ('Le saut de Leucade'))—'the root idea of baptism.' See further P. Boyancé 'Leucas' in the Rev. Arch. 1929 ii. 211—219—an interesting discussion of Pliny's candida eryngе=Γοργόνειον, μῶλυ, ἱμερτός, etc. (Dioskor. 3. 21 (24) p. 363 f. Sprengel), δείζωον (Mart. Cap. 141, where cod. A has λευκως with gloss herba albula ut quidam lilium).

Fig. 54.

Whatever be thought of this catena of interpretations, it can hardly be denied that Ovid's description of Sappho and the Leap does fit the design of the relief with remarkable aptitude. The single tree overlooking the water (Ov. her. 15. 159 f. quem supra ramos expandit aquatica lotos, | una nemus), Apollon on his rock (165 Phoebus ab excelso, quantum patet, adspicit aequor), the woman stepping down from the cliff (172 nec saxo desiluisse time), the personification of wind with a mantle for a boat (177 f. aura, subito: | et mea non magnum corpora pondus habent), the attendant Eros (179 tu quoque, mollis Amor, pennas suppone cadenti), the lyre carried by the woman (181 inde chelyn Phoebo, communia munera, ponam),—almost every point in the picture can be paralleled from the poem.

[4] The art-type of Sappho stepping off the rock for love of Phaon was, I think, derived from the earlier art-type of Aphrodite stepping on to the ferry-boat of Phaon, as shown by a red-figured krατήr found in 1909 'nella proprietà Tamburini fuori Porta Castiglione' and now at Bologna (Pellegrini Cat. vas. gr. dipint. Bologna pp. 133—135 no. 288[bis] fig. 77 (=my fig. 54).

Apollon, according to C. Densmore Curtis in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1920 xxiv. 150, appears to be the Apollon Λευκάτης of a coin of Nikopolis struck by Trajan (supra i. 345 n. 8).

The dejected man on the rocks to the left has been compared by F. Cumont in the Rassegna d'Arte 1921 p. 39 with analogous figures on Attic sepulchral stêlai.

But much has yet to be done by way of investigating the antecedents of these and other individual motifs.

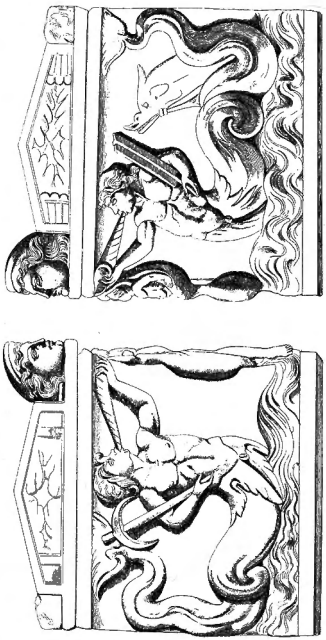

Fig. 55.

is now generally admitted that the whole design illustrates the entrance of the soul into the Otherworld as conceived by some Pythagorean sect in the middle of the first century A.D. But we are concerned with the Tritons only, who here as on the sarcophagi are present to control the winds and waves, thereby averting the perils of the last dread voyage. If on the sarcophagus in the Galleria Corsini at Rome (fig. 55)[1] they are exceptionally equipped with the thunderbolt of Zeus[2], the helmet sword and shield of Ares, the arrows and torch of Eros, etc., that is tantamount to saying that Tritons and the like in this connexion are not merely graceful gambollers but the equivalent of a whole heavenly host.

To sum up, it would seem that the Tritons came to be regarded as, like the Tritopatores, at once controllers of the wind and guardians of the soul. But this was a matter of similarity, not of identity. If Tritogéneia meant first 'Great-granddaughter' and then 'Born beside the Triton[3],' that was a case of sheer verbal confusion. Nor have we the right to infer from it a real relationship between the Tritopatores and the Tritons. And, in the absence of any inward identity, I find no sufficient reason for thinking that the Tritopatores were ever outwardly figured as Tritons with fishy tails; still less, for supposing that they already had the Tritonian type in the sixth century B.C. Accordingly, I definitely reject the view of Furt-

Fig. 56.

[1] O. Jahn 'Sarcofago della Galleria Corsini a Roma' in the Ann. d. Inst. 1859 xxxi. 27—32, Mon. d. Inst. vi pl. 26 (=my fig. 55), C. Cavedoni in the Bull. d. Inst. 1860 p. 206, E. Petersen in the Ann. d. Inst. 1860 xxxii. 402 f., 412 n. 1, L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1860 p. 11 n. 2, Matz—Duhn Ant. Bildw. in Rom ii. 368 f. no. 3164, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 223 nos. 1—3.

[2] E. Vinet in the Rev. Arch. 1853 p. 100 ff. with fig. (=my fig. 56) published a gem-impression, obtained from T. Cades, which shows a Triton equipped with thunderbolt and trident. Vinet thought him Aigaion.

[3] Supra p. 125.

wängler[1], who gave the name of Tritopatores to the three-bodied snake-tailed giant of the earliest Hekatompedon at Athens. That view, though it has commended itself to M. Budimir[2], B. Schweitzer[3], and others, seems to me far less probable than the older identification of the giant with the 'three-bodied Typhon' of Euripides[4].

(d) Zeus Oúrios, tkmenos, Euánemos, Bóreios.

The primitive fancy that winds are the souls of ancestors dead and buried was followed, and largely superseded, by the more intelligent notion that winds are atmospheric forces controlled by a sky-god.

This transition from a lower to a higher view was, it would seem, facilitated by long-standing local beliefs. The Aeolians held that the winds were kept by an eponymous forefather Aiolos[5], who dwelt in Aiolie a floating island[6] perhaps originally located in the Black Sea[7], like Leuke or Borysthenis the final abode of Achilles[8]. Further,

[1] A. Furtwängler in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe 1905 p. 433 f.

[2] M. Budimir 'Atena Tritogenija i' atički Tritopatreiji' in the Glasnik zem. Muzeja 1920 xxxii. 295—328 (reported by L. Radermacher in the Berl. philol. Woch. März 4, 1922 pp. 198—203).

[3] B. Schweitzer Herakles Tübingen 1922 p. 72 ff. (summarised by E. Fehrle in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 1209 f.), supra p. 122 n. 5.

[4] Eur. H.f. 1271 f. τρισωμάτους | Τυφῶνας, where P. Elmsley would not have conjectured Γηρυόνας, had he lived to see the triple monster of the Hekatompedon (supra ii. 805 n. 6) or that of the black-figured kýlix at Florence (T. Wiegand Die archaische Poros-Architektur der Akropolis zu Athen Cassel and Leipzig 1904 p. 76 f. fig. 84 a and b).

[5] Supra p. 106 ff. [6] Infra Append. P (1).

[7] This is nowhere stated. But the early connexion of Aeolians with Asia Minor (V. G. Childe The Aryans: A Study of Indo-European Origins London 1926 p. 47 f., supra p. 111 n. 4) and that of Achilles with Leuke (first in the Aithiopis of Arktinos ap. Prokl. chrestomath. gramm. 2 in Epic. Gr. frag. i. 34 Kinkel—a source referred by W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 63 and 97 to s. viii B.C.) combine to give the surmise some measure of probability. Later, of course, Aiolie was located in the west, being identified with one of the Liparenses Insulae. But K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1032 ff. makes it clear that this transference from Aegean to Sicilian waters was the work of Chalcidian colonists.

W. W. Merry in his note on Od. 10. 3 writes: 'May not the whole story of the floating island with its precipitous sides be a poetical reproduction of the story of some Phoenician sailors, who had voyaged far enough to the north to fall in with an iceberg? The sheer face of ice and the glittering summit seem to be perfectly described by the words χάλκεον τεῖχος and λισσὴ ἀναδέδρομε πέτρη.' When it comes to the interpretation of an ancient myth, rationalism is usually wrong (supra i. 418). Nevertheless Merry's suggestion should not be scouted; for a perusal of Append. P will suffice to show that the floating islands of the Greeks and Romans have almost invariably some foundation in fact. Moreover, icebergs in the Black Sea are not beyond the pale of possibility. W. B. Carpenter in The Encyclopædia Britannica[9] Edinburgh 1875 iii. 797 says: 'It is reported...that in 401 A.D. the surface of the Euxine was almost entirely frozen over, and that when the ice broke up enormous masses were seen floating in the Sea of Marmora for thirty days [Chron. Pasch. 307 B (i. 568 Dindorf)]. In 762 A.D., again, the sea is said to have been frozen from the there is good reason to think that Aeolian kings (Salmoneus, Keyx, Ixion, etc.) were at one time regarded as human embodiments of Zeus[1]. Indeed, modern mythology is inclined to conjecture that Aiolos himself began life as an appellative of the same god[2]. It would not, therefore, be surprising to find that in saga expanded from Aeolian lays a favouring wind was deemed the special gift of Zeus, or that the cult of Zeus as sender of such a wind persistently clung to the Aeolian coast-line.

In point of fact both expectations are justified. It is often and, in my opinion, rightly supposed that the Homeric poems were essentially the dactylic lays of Aeolian Thessaly put together in hexameter form by a poet or poets who somewhere on the fringe of Asiatic Aiolis, not improbably at Chios, used an Ionic dialect with an inevitable admixture of Aeolisms[3]. Hence Homer, true to Aeolic terminal cliffs of the Caucasus to the mouths of the Dniester, Dnieper, and Danube; and contemporary writers assert that the quantity of snow which fell on the ice rose to the height of from 30 to 40 feet, completely hiding the contour of the shores, and that on the breaking up of the ice in the month of February, the masses of it carried by the current into the Sea of Marmora reunited in one immense sheet across the Hellespont between Sestos and Abydos [Theophan. chron. i. 670 Classen, Zonar. 15. 7, Glykas ann. 4 p. 527 Bekker]. No similar occurrence has been subsequently recorded.' According to Chambers's Encyclopædia London and Edinburgh 1923 ii. 206 s.v. 'Black Sea,' 'All the coasts are high, with good harbours, except between the mouths of the Danube and the Crimea; there the land is low, and the danger of navigation greatly increased in winter by the presence of floating ice.... The shores from Odessa to the Crimea are ice-bound during January and February; and although the harbour of Odessa is never frozen up, yet the drift-ice frequently renders the entrance to it dangerous.' See further Hdt. 4. 28 (cited Gell. 17. 8. 16, Macrob. Sat. 7. 12. 31), Verg. georg. 3. 349 ff., Strab. 73 and 307, Ov. trist. 3. 10. 31 f., ex Pont. 3. 1. 15 f., 4. 9. 85 f., Sen. H.f. 539 f., Mela 1. 19. 115, Macrob. Sat. 7. 12. 32 f.

[1] Supra ii. 1088, 1122 f. [2] Supra p. 107 n. 3. [3] Supra p. 135.

[3] Literature on the subject is cited and in part criticised by W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 68 f., K. Witte in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 2220 f., Lübker Reallex.[8] p. 473, P. Cauer Grundfragen der Homerkritik[3] Leipzig 1921 i. 136—179. The topic is dealt with here and there by D. Mülder 'Bericht über die Literatur zu Homer (Höhere Kritik) für die Jahre 1912—1919' in the Jahresbericht über die Fortschritte der klassischen Altertumswissenschaft 1920 clxxxii. 1—164 and 'Bericht über die Literatur zu Homer (Höhere Kritik) aus den Jahren 1920—1924' ib. 1926 ccvii. 1—90, 171—255. I follow the lead of my friend Dr P. Giles in the Cambridge University Reporter for March 9, 1915 p. 696, as does that trenchant critic T. W. Allen Homer: the Origins and the Transmission Oxford 1924 p. 103 (who, however, will not admit any 'Aeolic lays'). But see now M. P. Nilsson Homer and Mycenae London 1933 p. 167 ff., who argues afresh that the Homeric language is a 'Kunstsprache' and concludes a most temperate discussion thus: 'We may surmise that the first Ionic minstrels took over Aeolic epics—but not the songs which we read to-day—perhaps rather mechanically substituting their own dialect and admitting chiefly such Aeolic stock expressions, words, and forms, for which metrically equivalent Ionic forms were wanting. As the songs were constantly rehandled and even new songs composed, the close fusion of Aeolic words and forms with an Ionic basis was the ultimate result. It is impossible to guess how long a time such a process may have taken. We can only be certain that it must have been long, tradition, recognises Zeus as natural lord and master of the winds. The Odyssey speaks of ships 'delighting in the fair breeze of Zeus'[1] or 'driven by the fair breeze of Zeus[2],' and tells how 'Zeus sent a fair breeze' to certain Phoenician mariners[3]. Similar expressions occur in later poetry[4], sometimes with special reference to a westerly gale[5] or to the etesian winds[6].

Again, Zeus as sender of the fair breeze (oúros) bore the cult-title Oúrios at least as early as 475 B.C. For, writing about that date, Aischylos makes the suppliant Danaïdes appeal to Zeus Oúrios[7]. They had travelled far and would fain reach the haven of their desires. Who should waft them on their way, if not the great Argive[8] god from whom through Epaphos they traced their descent[9]?

Zeus Oúrios had a sanctuary on the Asiatic side of the Thracian Bosporos[10]. This was known to the Greeks as Híeron, the 'Sanctuary' par excellence[11]. The tabula Peutingeriana at Vienna, a road-map of the Roman world drawn and painted at the beginning of the because the evolving of such an artificial language is a slow process. We have further to admit that this formation of a traditional epic language took place twice, first in Aeolic dialect and for a second time in the Ionic dialect, the creation of the fundamentally Ionic language of Homer with an Aeolic admixture.' Etc.

[1] Od. 5. 176 ἀγαλλόμεναι Διὸς οὔρῳ.

[2] Od. 15. 297 ἐπειγομένη Διὸς οὔρῳ. Strab. 350 quotes the passage as reading ἀγαλλομένη Διὸς οὔρῳ, in which form the line recurs in h. Ap. 427.

[3] Od. 15. 475 ἐπὶ δὲ Ζεὺς οὖρον ἴαλλεν.

[4] Ap. Rhod. 4. 1223 f. ἦλυθε δ' οὖρος | ἀκραὴς ἠῶθεν ὑπὲκ Διός, Tzetz. antehom. 97 ἐς Σπάρτην ἐπαγαλλόμενος Διὸς ἦλυθεν οὔροις.

[5] H. Ap. 433 f. ἦλθ' ἄνεμος ζέφυρος μέγας αἴθριος, ἐκ Διὸς αἰσης, | λάβρος ἐπαιγίζων ἐξ αἰθέρος, κ.τ.λ.

[6] Ap. Rhod. 2. 498 f. ἦρι δ' ἐτήσιαι (so G. W. Mooney with one of the Paris codd. ἐτήσιοι vulg.) αὖραι ἐπέχραον, αἵ τ' ἀνὰ πᾶσαν | γαῖαν ὀμῶς τοιῇδε Διὸς πνείουσιν ἀρωγῇ (A. H. Matthiae's cj. ἀνωγῇ can claim the support of four Vatican codd.), 2. 524 ff. τοῖο δ' ἕκητι | γαῖαν ἐπιψύχουσιν ἐτήσιαι (so G. W. Mooney for ἐτήσιοι vulg.) ἐκ Διὸς αὖραι | ἤματα τεσσαράκοντα.

[7] Aisch. suppl. 591 ff. αὐτὸς ὁ πατὴρ φυτουργὸς αὐτόχειρ ἄναξ, | γένους παλαιόφρων μέγας | τέκτων, τὸ πᾶν μῆχαρ, οὔριος Ζεύς.

[8] The word μῆχαρ in Aisch. loc. cit. hints at the Argive cult of Zeus Μηχανεύς (supra ii. 1144 n. 2).

[9] So the context definitely asserts. For detailed proof see the stemmata in Gerhard Gr. Myth. ii. 234.

[10] Arrian. peripl. Pont. Eux. 37 (Geogr. Gr. min. i. 401 Müller) ἐκ δὲ Κυανέων ἐπὶ τὸ Ἱερὸν τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Οὐρίου, ὅπερ τὸ στόμα τοῦ Πόντου, στάδιοι τεσσαράκοντα.

[11] Marcian. Heracleens. epit. peripl. Menipp. 7 f. (Geogr. Gr. min. i. 568 f. Müller) κατὰ τὸν Θρᾴκιον Βόσπορον καὶ τὸ στόμα τοῦ Εὐξείνου Πόντου ἐν τοῖς δεξιοῖς τῆς Ἀσίας μέρεσιν, ἅπερ ἐστὶ τοῦ Βιθυνῶν ἔθνους, κεῖται χωρίον Ἱερὸν καλούμενον, ἐν ᾧ νεώς ἐστι Διὸς Οὐρίου προσαγορευόμενος. τοῦτο δὲ τὸ χωρίον ἀφετήριόν ἐστι τῶν εἰς τὸν Πόντον πλεόντων... ἀπὸ Ἱεροῦ Διὸς Οὐρίου εἰς Ῥήβαν ποταμὸν εἰσὶ στάδιοι ζ′ = anon. peripl. Pont. Eux. 1 and 3 (Geogr. Gr. min. i. 402 f. Müller). See further E. Oberhummer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 752 f. with large-scale map ib. 749 f.

thirteenth century, but based on an archetype of 130—150 A.D.[1], duly records the place as iouis urius (fig. 57)[2]. The cosmographer of Ravenna, whose seventh-century work, perhaps composed in Greek, is extant in a ninth-century Latin version[3], terms it both Ieron[4] and Urion[5], while the Italian geographer Guido in 1119 A.D. borrows from him the name Ieron[6] or Hieron[7]. P. Gilles (Gyllius) in his learned commentary on Dionysios of Byzantion, whose Voyage up the Bosporos[8] he had discovered c. 1549, gives for the first time a detailed description and history of the spot[9]. E. D. Clarke in 1816 notes that a town in the vicinity bears the name Joro or Joroń[10]. And the Genoese castle at Anatoli Kavaghi is still called

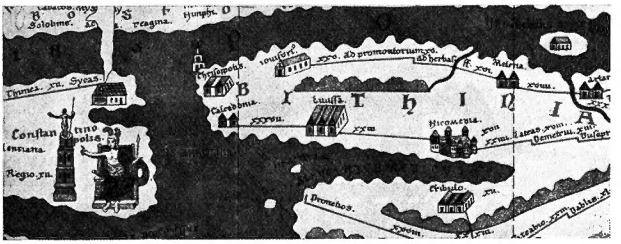

Fig. 57.

[1] M. Schanz Geschichte der römischen Litteratur[2] München 1899 ii. 1. 288 f.

[2] K. Miller Die Weltkarte des Castorius genannt Die Peutingersche Tafel: Einleitender Text Ravensburg 1887 p. 96, id. Weltkarte des Castorius genannt Die Peutinger'sche Tafel Ravensburg 1888 segmentum ix. 2 (a full-sized reproduction in the original colours, from which my fig. 57 is taken). Note the proximity, in segmentum ix. 3, of the Ins. Achillis sive Leuce dicta.

[3] H. Funaioli in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i A. 305—310, M. Schanz Geschichte der römischen Litteratur München 1920 iv. 2. 126. The Thes. Ling. Lat. Index p. 89 says: 'saec. fere IX ex exemplo graeco saec. VII versa.'

[4] Ravenn. anon. cosmogr. 1. 17 p. 38, 1 Pinder—Parthey.

[5] Id. ib. 5. 9 p. 364, 1 Pinder—Parthey.

[6] Guido geogr. 100 p. 529, 21 Pinder—Parthey.

[7] Id. ib. 121 p. 548, 13 Pinder—Parthey.

[8] A work formerly believed to have been written before 196 A.D. (E. Oberhummer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 755), but more probably of later date (H. Berger ib. v. 971).

[9] Gyllius in Dionys. Byz. frag. 47 (Geogr. Gr. min. ii. 57 Müller) and frags. 58, 59 (Geogr. Gr. min. ii. 75—81 Müller). The same fragments are printed in the editions of Dionysios the Byzantine by C. Wescher (Parisiis 1874 p. 27, 5 ff. (lxxv) and p. 29, 16 ff. (xcii, xciii)) and by R. Güngerich (Berolini 1927 p. 27, 16 ff. (75) and p. 29, 30 ff. (92, 93)) without the remarks of Gyllius.

[10] E. D. Clarke Travels in various countries of Europe Asia and Africa[4] London 1816 i. 439 n. 4.

by the Turks Ioros Kalessi[1]. Here on a bold promontory, commanding both the sequestered bay of Beuyukdere and the broad waters of the Black Sea, J. Millingen brought to light substantial remains of Greek architecture, which he attributed to the temple

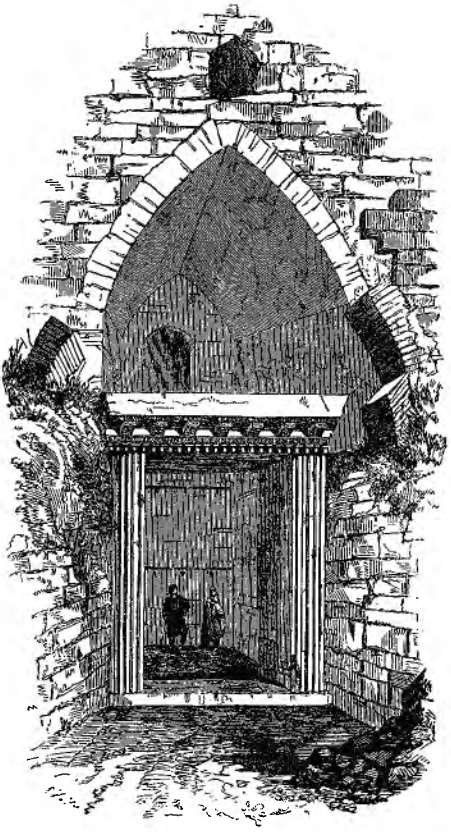

Fig. 58.

[1] E. Oberhummer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 752.

(fig. 58)[1]. These comprise a fine gateway of Parian marble flanked by two columns some 18 ft high; they rest on a great marble threshold and are spanned by a lintel 12 ft 6 ins long and 6 ft broad. Above this rises an archway in the castle-wall, topped by a Byzantine cross; and finally a marble slab on the right-hand tower is inscribed with the ancient formula 'The light of Christ shineth over all[2].' It is possible that a large Ionic capital found by E. D. Clarke on the neighbouring headland of Argyronion came, as he supposed[3], from the same site. Philostratos of Lemnos in the first half of the third century A.D. describes a picture of the Bosporos, and bids us notice various details of its coast-scenery 'until we reach Hieron. And'—he continues—'I think you can see the temple there and stêlai set round it and the beacon at the mouth of the straits, hung aloft as a signal to ships sailing from the Pontos[4].' One at least of the said stêlai[5] has come down to us—a marble base found by J. Spon and G. Wheler on their Levantine tour (1675—1676) in a house near the church of Kâdi-Kioi (Kalchedon), and now preserved

[1] J. Millingen in The Illustrated London News for Dec. 12, 1863 p. 592 f. with woodcut (=my fig. 58). See further Sir J. E. Sandys' n. on Dem. Lept. 36.

[2] R. A. S. Macalister The Excavation of Gezer 1902—1905 and 1907—1909 London 1912 p. 357 pl. 104, 3 (tomb 147), p. 366 f. pl. 110, 10 (tomb 160), p. 376 f. pl. 118, 16 (tomb 196) and C. M. Kaufmann Handbuch der christlichen Archäologie[2] Paderborn 1913 p. 606 publish lamps from Gezer, Jerusalem, etc. with the liturgical phrase φῶς Χριστοῦ φένι (=φαίνει) πᾶσιν ἡμῖν variously distorted, abbreviated, and amplified. Cp. F. Miltner in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1929 xxiv Beiblatt p. 175 f. no. 77 fig. 74 (φῶς Χριστοῦ φαίνει πᾶσιν ἐν οἴκῳ). This legend is accompanied by a stylised form of the seven-branched candlestick. I add two similar lamps in my possession, one (fig. 59, a, b, c) said to have come from Samaria, the other (fig. 60) from Ain el Sultan on the site of Jericho. Such lamps suggest that the inscription recorded by Millingen had reference to a cresset or beacon—perhaps the πυρσός mentioned by Philostr. mai. imagg. 1. 12. 5 (infra n. 4) and handsomely illustrated in the tabula Peutingeriana (supra p. 143 fig. 57).

[3] E. D. Clarke op. cit.[4] ii. 440 f.: 'We there found the capital of a very antient column, of the Ionic order, not less than two feet and an half in diameter. It had been hollowed; and it now serves as a vase, near to the residence of the Dervish, who relates the idle superstitions of the country concerning the mountain, and the giant supposed to be there buried' [sc. Amykos, as Clarke notes, citing Val. Flacc. 4. 200 gigans. See further H. W. Stoll in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 327, K. Wernicke in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 2000, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 320 n. 5, 570 n. 2, Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. ii. 842 ff.]. Clarke ib.[4] p. 441 n. 6: 'During a subsequent visit to the same place, the author was accompanied by Mons. Preaux, artist in the service of Mr. Spencer Smith, late Minister at the Porte. Mons. Preaux made a drawing of this Ionic capital; which is now in Mr. Smith's possession.'

[4] Philostr. mai. imagg. 1. 12. 5—ἔστ' ἂν ἐφ' Ἱερὸν ἀφικώμεθα. καὶ τὸν ἐκεῖ νεὼν οἶμαι ὁρᾷς καὶ στήλας, αἳ περίδρυνται (so C. L. Kayser for περίδρυνται Lugd. alt. παρίδρυνται cet.) αὐτῷ, καὶ τὸν ἐπὶ τῷ στόματι πυρσόν, ὃς ἥρτηται (J. J. Reiske and H. A. Hamaker cjj. ἦρται) ἐς φρυκτωρίαν τῶν νεῶν, αἳ πλέουσιν ἐκ τοῦ Πόντου.

[5] For another see Michaelis in the Arch. Zeit. 1864 xxii. 198—202 pl. 192. This slab is now at Berlin (Ant. Skulpt. Berlin p. 383 f. no. 945 fig., R. Kekulé von Stradonitz Die griechische Skulptur[2] Berlin 1907 p. 173 fig.).

Fig. 59, a

Fig. 59, b.

Fig. 59, c.

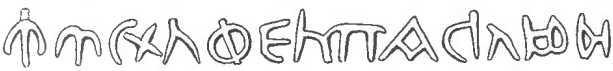

Fig. 60.

in the British Museum (fig. 61)[1]. It once supported a votive statue of Zeus Oúrios, and still sings his praises in passable elegiacs:

The mariner who sets his sail
For the Blue Eddies, where the gale
Rolls a big breaker on the sand,
Or backward bound for fatherland
Would cross the Aegean—let him call
From poop to Pilot of us all,
Zeus of the Fair Breeze, aye and put
His cakes before this statue's foot;
For here above the watery waste
Antipatros' son Philon[2] placed
The god who meets us as we roam
With promise of safe voyage home.

ΟΥΡΙΟΝΕΚΠΡΥΜΝΗΣΤΙΣΟΔΗΓΗΤΗΡΑΚΑΛΕΙΤΩ
ΞΗΝΑΚΑΤΑΠΡΟΤΟΝΩΝΙΣΤΙΟΝΕΚΠΕΤΑΣΑΣ
ΕΙΤΕΠΙΚΥΑΝΕΑΣΔΙΝΑΣΔΡΟΜΟΣΕΝΘΑΠΟΣΕΙΔΩΝ
ΚΑΜΠΥΛΟΝΕΙΑΙΣΣΕΙΚΥΜΑΠΑΡΑΨΑΜΑΘΟΙΣ
ΕΙΤΕΚΑΤΑΙΓΑΙΗΝΠΟΝΤΟΥΠΛΑΚΑΝΟΣΤΟΝΕΡΕΥΝΑΙ
ΝΕΙΣΩΤΩΙΔΕΨΑΛΩΝΨΑΙΣΤΑΠΑΡΑΞΟΑΝΩΙ
ΩΔΕΤΟΝΕΥΑΝΤΗΤΟΝΑΕΙΘΕΟΝΑΝΤΙΠΑΤΡΟΥΠΑΙΣ
ΣΤΗΣΕΦΙΛΩΝΑΓΑΘΗΣΣΥΜΒΟΛΟΝΕΥΠΛΟΙΗΣ

Fig. 61.

As to the foundation of this popular cult, tradition was twofold. Polybios (c. 201—c. 120 B.C.) describing the Asiatic shore of the Bosporos begins with 'Hieron, at which place they say that Iason

[1] Corp. inscr. Gr. ii no. 3797 = Kaibel Epig. Gr. no. 779 = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. i. 108 = F. H. Marshall The Collection of Ancient Greek Inscriptions in the British Museum iv. 2. 156 f. Oxford 1916 no. 1012 with fig. (= my fig. 61) Οὔριον ἐκ πρύμνης τις ὁδηγητῆρα καλείτω | Ζῆνα κατὰ πρωτόνων ἱστίον ἐκπετάσας· | εἴτ' ἐπὶ κυανέας δίνας δρόμος, ἔνθα Ποσειδῶν | καμπύλον εἰλίσσει κῦμα παρὰ ψαμάθοις, | εἴτε κατ' Αἰγαίην πόντου πλάκα νόστον ἐρευνᾶι, | νείσῳ τῷιδε βαλὼν ψαιστὰ παρὰ ξοάνωι. | ὧδε τὸν εὐάντητον ἀεὶ θεὸν Ἀντιπάτρου παῖς | στῆσε Φίλων, ἀγαθῆς σύμβολον εὐπλοΐης.

[2] F. Bücheler in the Rhein. Mus. 1881 xxxvi. 338 ff. identifies this Philon with the Philon Antas of a sepulchral inscription at Brundisium published by G. Fiorelli in Not. Scavi 1880 p. 255, a : Philon | Antas Antipatri | Tyri filius v(ixit) a(nnos) LX | h(ic) s(itus) | Marcia C. l. Syntyche. His father, Antipatros of Tyre, was presumably the Stoic philosopher who died at Athens shortly before 44 B.C. (H. von Arnim in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 2516). He in turn appears to have been descended from Antipatros of Sidon, the epigrammatist, who was born at Tyre (Anth. Pal. 7. 428. 11 f. Meleagros) and flourished c. 150—120 B.C. (W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1920 ii. 1. 327). On this showing the inscription from Chalkedon may be dated at the end of s. i B.C. or the beginning of s. i A.D. Hence too the poetic merits of Philon, who perhaps—as Bücheler conjectured—chose to describe Zeus by the rare epithet εὐάντητος on account of his own name Ἀντᾶς.

on his return from Kolchis first sacrificed to the twelve gods'[1]. Pomponius Mela (c. 43/4 A.D.) puts it more curtly: 'The god of the temple is Zeus, its founder Iason[2].' But Timosthenes of Rhodes, who commanded the fleet of Ptolemy ii Philadelphos, makes the altar to the twelve gods a dedication of Phrixos[3]. And Dionysios of Byzantion recognises two sanctuaries, one on the European, the other on the Asiatic, side of the strait. Of the former he notes: 'They say that here Iason sacrificed to the twelve gods'[4]. Of the latter he states: 'Hieron, the "Sanctuary," was built by Phrixos, son of Nephele and Athamas, on his voyage to Kolchis'[5]. The founder, then, was either Iason or Phrixos. Both attributions amount to much the same thing. For Iason was son of Aison, son of Kretheus, son of Aiolos; while Phrixos was son of Athamas, son of Aiolos[6]. The cult was essentially Aeolian, and Zeus Oúrios was but a later religious manifestation of Aiolos himself.

If Zeus Oúrios may thus be traced back to a buried tribal ancestor, we can understand an otherwise puzzling feature of his art-type—its markedly heroic character. The Zeus Oúrios whose statue Verres carried off from Syracuse was known to the Romans as Imperator[7], and is almost certainly represented on a Syracusan coin as a dignified male figure leaning upon his spear[8]. As such he closely resembles the Zeus Strategós of Amastris in Paphlagonia[9]. We divine that the old warrior-king, who had led his Aeolians to victory during life, continued to supply them with favouring winds after death, and sent the same from his island-home in the Black Sea.

[1] Polyb. 4. 39.

[2] Mela 1. 101.

[3] Timosthenes ap. schol. Ap. Rhod. 2. 532 (Τιμοσθένης cod. Paris. Δημοσθένης vulg.), cp. Harpokr. s.v. ἐφ' Ἱερόν (Τιμοσθένης vulg. Δημοσθένης codd. B.G.), Souid. s.v. Ἐφίερον (leg. ἐφ' Ἱερόν, cp. [Dem.] c. Polycl. 17, 18, 58).

[4] Dionys. Byz. frag. 47 (Geogr. Gr. min. i. 57 Müller).

[5] Dionys. Byz. frag. 58 (Geogr. Gr. min. i. 75 Müller).

[6] Stemmata in Gerhard Gr. Myth. ii. 223 f.

[7] Cic. in Verr. 2. 4. 128 quoted supra ii. 917 n. 0. Cic. in Verr. 2. 4. 129 f. knew of three statues representing Zeus Οὔριος=Iupiter Imperator: (1) a statue brought from Makedonia c. 197 B.C. by T. Quinctius Flamininus and dedicated on the Capitol at Rome (Liv. 6. 29 makes it brought from Praeneste to Rome in 380 B.C. by T. Quinctius Cincinnatus—an obvious blunder copied by the so-called P. Victor de regionibus urbis Romae reg. 8. 49 signum Iovis imperatoris a Praeneste devectum (in H. Jordan Topographie der Stadt Rom im Alterthum Berlin 1871 ii. 308)); (2) the statue on the shore of the Bosporos; (3) that stolen by Verres from Syracuse.

The cjj. Iovis Imbricitoris (cp. Apul. de mundo 37), Imp. (=Impuberis!), Temperatoris, and Induperatoris, recorded by A. Drakenborch on Liv. 6. 29, are all examples of ingenuity misplaced.

[8] Supra ii. 708 fig. 643.

[9] Supra ii. 707 figs. 639—641, ii. 918 n. 0.

It is not difficult to imagine the prayers that would be addressed to this helpful deity. Somewhere in his precinct stood the bronze effigy of a boy with outstretched arms, about which gathered a variety of idle tales[1]. It is probable that a copy of it, if not the original, has come down to us in the 'Praying Boy' of the Berlin Museum (fig. 63)[2]—a masterpiece justly identified[3] with the adorans by [1] Dionys. Byz. frag. 59 (Geogr. Gr. min. ii. 78 f.) 'in fano...statua aerea est antiquae artis, aetatem puerilem prae se ferens, tendens manus. causae multae afferuntur, cur haec statua sit in hanc figuram conformata. quidam...aiunt audaciae signum esse navigantium, deterrens temeritatem navigationis periculis plenam, atque ostendens redeuntium salutis felicitatem et pietatem: non enim sine terrore utrumque est. alii dicunt puerum in littore errantem aliquanto post venisse quam e portu navis soluta esset, salutisque desperatione affectum manus ad caelum tendere; pueri autem preces deum exaudientem reduxisse navem in portum. alii aiunt in magna maris tranquillitate, omni vento silente, nave diu retardata, nautas inopia potus laborasse; navarcho autem visionem insedisse iubentem ut navarchus filium suum sacrificaret, non enim alio modo posse assequi commeatum et ventos: navarcho necessitate coacto et parato puerum sacrificare, manus quidem puerum tetendisse, deum vero misericordia motum ob absurdum pueri supplicium obque pueri aetatem sustulisse puerum et ventum secundum immisisse. haec quidem et his contraria, ut cuique placuerit, credibilia existimentur.' Dionysios' gossiping explanations run from bad to worse. The third, and worst, works in reminiscences of Agamemnon at Aulis, Abraham and Isaac, Zeus and Ganymedes!

Gyllius ad loc. cp. Philostr. mai. imagg. 1. 12. 3. But the passage (καὶ ὁ Ἔρως ἐπὶ τῇ πέτρᾳ τείνει τὴν χεῖρα ἐς τὴν θάλατταν, κ.τ.λ.) alludes to a wholly different figure (B. Sauer in Philologus 1908 lxvii. 306 f., H. Lucas in the Neue Jahrb. f. klass. Altertum 1912 xxix. 119). E. Oberhummer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 752 ('anscheinend dieselbe' etc.) is definitely wrong.

[2] Ant. Skulpt. Berlin p. 2 ff. no. 2 with fig. (bibliography to 1891). Good illustrations are given by Brunn—Bruckmann Denkm. der gr. und röm. Sculpt. pl. 283, H. Bulle Der schöne Mensch im Altertum[2] München und Leipzig 1912 p. 122 pl. 64, F. Winter Kunstgeschichte in Bildern[2] Leipzig (1925) i. 340 fig. 3. See also Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 483 f. fig. 252, R. Kekulé von Stradonitz Die griechische Skulptur[2] Berlin 1907 p. 269 ff. fig., C. Picard La sculpture antique Paris 1926 ii. 200 with figs. 82, 229. My fig. 63 is from the Brunn—Bruckmann photograph, but a fresh restoration of the arms (infra p. 151 n. 4) is needed, which should square with J. D. Ramberg's drawing of the unrestored statue as published by A. Conze in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1886 i. 9 fig. (=my fig. 62).

Figure antique qu'on croit être Ganimède.

Fig. 62.

[3] L. Stephani Parerga archaeologica St Petersburg 1851—1876 no. 2, B. Sauer 'Der Betende des Boedas' in Philologus 1908 lxvii. 304—310, H. Lucas 'Der betende Knabe des Boidas' in the Neue Jahrb. f. klass. Altertum 1912 xxix. 112—123 with pl. of 9 figs., H. Lechat 'Boédas (ou Boïdas)' in the Revue des études anciennes 1913 pp. 153—155.

The history of the Berlin bronze is discussed by A. Conze 'Der betende Knabe in den königlichen Museen zu Berlin' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1886 i. 1—13 with 3 figs., id. 'Zum betenden Knaben' ib. p. 223, A. Furtwängler 'Zum betenden Knaben' ib. pp. 217—219 with fig. (=my fig. 64), O. Puchstein 'Zum betenden Knaben' ib. pp. 219—

Fig. 63.

Plate XX

A NUBIAN
WORSHIPPER?
FROM EPHESUS

Bronze statuette from Ephesos, now at Queens' College, Cambridge: a praying Negro.

See page 151 n. 4.

Boïdas[1] of Byzantion[2], son and pupil of Lysippos[3]. The boy uplifts his face towards Zeus and, with hands turned outwards in the customary attitude of prayer[4], asks for the fair breeze to speed him on his way. This, the most spiritual of all extant Greek bronzes[5], is of course a votive offering, public or private, and stands for the success of some venturesome quest. One thinks of Pindar's Iason[6]:

> A golden bowl he took, and at the stern
> Called on the Father of the Sons of Heaven—
> Zeus of the Lightning-Lance,
> Called on quick waves and winds' advance,
> Called on the nights and tracks thro' deep seas driven,
> For friendly days and fortune-blest return.

Nevertheless it would be rash to identify the 'Praying Boy' with Iason, or—as L. Stephani suggested[7]—with Phrixos. He is a Lysippian modification of an earlier athletic type[8]. More than that 223; its technique, by E. Pernice in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1908 xi. 223—225 fig. 97.

[1] H. Lucas loc. cit. p. 118, H. Lechat loc. cit. p. 154.

[2] Vitr. 3 praef. 2. [3] Plin. nat. hist. 34. 66, cp. 73.

[4] E. Voulliéme (sic) Quomodo veteres adoraverint Halis Saxonum 1887 p. 26 ff. ('De gestu manuum sublatarum') gives a very full collection of literary passages and concludes: 'Precantes brachiis in eandem regionem ita ad caelum sublatis, ut palmae inter se aspiciant, eas pariter resupinabant, quo modo ita vertuntur, ut ad caelum spectent.' Id. ib. p. 36 ff. adds a survey of the monumental evidence and a pl. of the Berlin 'Praying Boy' with arms correctly restored. See also C. Sittl Die Gebärden der Griechen und Römer Leipzig 1890 p. 305 ff. and the hronze statuette (height 4⅝ ins) of a Praying Negro, from Ephesos, now in my collection (pl. xx).

[5] The interpretation of it as a ball-player about to catch a ball (J. J. Cornelissen 'Archaeologica' in Mnemosyne N.S. 1878 vi. 424—431, W. Raabe The Hunger-Pastor trans. Arnold London 1885 ii. 34, A. Mau 'Der betende Knabe' in the Röm. Mitth. 1902 xvii. 101—106) is incompatible with the position of the arms (M. Goepel in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1904 xix Arch. Anz. p. 187, id. 'Zum betenden Knaben und zur springenden Amazone' ib. 1905 xx. 108 ff., H. Lucas in the Neue Jahrb. f. klass. Altertum 1912 xxix. 113) and grotesquely inadequate. Some critics have no souls.

To group the statue as a suppliant with that of a warrior brandishing lance and shield (A. Herzog Studien zur Geschichte der griechischen Kunst Leipzig 1888 p. 40, cp. two bronzes represented on the kýlix by 'the Foundry Painter' (Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin ii. 593 ff. no. 2294, Furtwängler—Reichhold—Hauser Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 81—86 pl. 135, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 454 f. no. 1, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 187 no. 2)), or as Taras with that of a colossal Poseidon (H. Willers Studien zur griechischen Kunst Leipzig 1914 pp. 125—159 with pls. 9—13 ('Der betende Knabe vor Poseidon')), is a risky, not to say a reckless, expedient.

[6] Pind. Pyth. 4. 193 ff.

[7] L. Stephani Parerga archaeologica St Petersburg 1851—1876 no. 2 cited by A. Conze in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1886 i. 11 n. 25 and B. Sauer in Philologus 1908 lxvii. 304 n. 1.

[8] A. Furtwängler 'Zum betenden Knaben' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1886 i. 217—219 with fig. (= my fig. 64) of a beautifully cut, but badly flaked, cornelian at Berlin (id. Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 257 no. 6905 pl. 51, id. Ant. Gemmen i pl. 44, 32, ii. 214), we do not know. Yet it may be permitted us to wonder whether the fame of this solitary figure standing with outstretched arms on the shore of the strait reached the ears of Virgil and prompted one of the most wonderful couplets in the Aeneid, his description of the souls on the banks of Acheron:

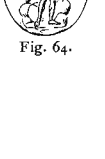

Fig. 64.

> stabant orantes primi transmittere cursum > tendebantque manus ripae ulterioris amore[1].
> They stood and prayed to be first ferried o'er,
> Yearning with outstretched hands for the further shore.

Be that as it may, there was inspiration both literal and metaphorical about Zeus Oúrios, and the poets were duly impressed. The epigram of Philon[2] can be capped by another of Meleagros[3]:

> Sea-going ships that thread the Dardanelles
> Deep-laden, while the north your canvass swells,
> If on the Coan shore ye chance to see
> My Phanion looking o'er bright waves for me,
> Say this to her, good ships,—Love speeds me fast:
> I come afoot, waiting no other blast.
> Should you thus bear my message without fail,
> Zeus of the Fair Breeze fill your every sail.

Merchants trading with the Euxine introduced the cult of Zeus Oúrios to Delos[4], where it acquired an almost cosmopolitan character. Worshippers from far and near linked the name of this Zeus with those of their own special deities and recorded their vows in primis to him. Thus a citizen of Askalon, who had escaped from pursuing pirates[5], attested his gratitude by erecting a neat little cylindrical altar inscribed in lettering of s. i B.C. (fig. 65)[6]:

which gives us 'die Vorstellung von einer älteren Stufe derselben Composition.' Scale: rather less than $\frac{1}{2}$.

[1] Verg. Aen. 6. 313 f.

[2] Supra p. 147.

[3] Anth. Pal. 12. 53. 1—8 Meleagros. In the last two lines W. R. Paton prints εἰ γὰρ τοῦτ' εἴποιτ', εὐάγγελοι (so N. Piccolos for εὖ τέλοι cod. with space after εὖ), αὐτίκα καὶ Ζεὺς | οὔριος ὑμετέρας πνεύσεται εἰς ὀθόνας. Other emendations are discussed by F. Dübner ad loc.

[4] P. Roussel Les cultes égyptiens à Delos du IIIe au Ier siècle av. J.-C. Nancy 1916 p. 152, id. Délos, colonie athénienne Paris 1916 p. 275.

[5] On the prevalence of these pests in the Aegean during s. ii—i B.C. see J. M. Sestier La piraterie dans l'antiquité Paris 1880.

[6] C. Clermont-Ganneau in the Comptes rendus de l'Acad. des inscr. et belles-lettres 1909 pp. 307—317 with fig., G. Leroux in Délos ii. 1. 58 fig. 81 (= my fig. 65). The altar (height 0·53m: lower diameter 0·41m), found during August 1907 in a Byzantine wall to the south of the 'Hypostyle Hall,' is inscribed: Διὶ Οὐρίωι καὶ Ἀστάρτηι Παλαιστίνηι, | (Clermont-Ganneau here wrongly inserts καί) Ἀφροδίτηι Οὐρανίαι, θεοῖς ἐπηκόοις, | Δάμων Δημητρίου Ἀσκαλωνίτης, | σωθεὶς ἀπὸ πειρατῶν, | εὐχήν and in smaller lettering οὐ θεμιτὸν δὲ προσάγειν | αἴγειον, ὑϊκόν, βοὸς θηλείας.

To Zeus Oúrios and Astarte Palaistíne,
Aphrodite Ourania, Hearers of Prayer,
Damon, son of Demetrios, an Askalonite, being saved from pirates
(paid) this vow.

It is not lawful here to bring goat's flesh, swine's flesh, or aught of the cow.

Fig. 65.

The associates of Zeus Oúrios are two goddesses, who in function must have borne a rough resemblance to each other, Astarte Palaistíne and Aphrodite Ourania. The former appears for the first time in this inscription: she was perhaps the patron-deity of the port (Iamneia? Ioppe?) to which Damon's ship belonged, or possibly the figure-head of the good ship herself. The latter goddess had a celebrated temple at Askalon[1], Damon's native city.

Dedications to Zeus Oúrios, which date from the closing years of the second century B.C., have been found in the Egyptian sanctuary on a terrace to the north-west of Mount Kynthos[2]. There two Athenian brothers, about the year 112—111 B.C., erected a cylindrical base to Zeus Oúrios, Sarapis, [Isis,] Anoubis, Harpokrates[3]. Of greater interest was another dedication[4]—

> To Zeus Oúrios on behalf of King > Mithradates Eupator > and his brother
> Mithradates Chrestos > and their > fortunes.

The bluish marble slab thus inscribed was discovered, in front of a small marble pedestal or altar of irregular shape, to the east of the paved way leading through the precinct[5]. Mithradates vi Eupator (120—63 B.C.) was associated in the government of Pontos first with his mother Laodike and then, for a short while in 111 B.C.[6], with his younger brother Mithradates Chrestos. But being of a bloodthirsty and cruel disposition he let his mother die in prison and murdered his brother[7]. The prayer to Zeus 'of the Fair Breeze' for one who was heading straight towards family shipwreck sounds to us almost grimly ironical. A third dedication, by a native of Velia in Lucania, is a white marble base of the year 107—106 (?) B.C., which was found on the eastern slope of the Inopos ravine,

[1] Hdt. i. 105, Paus. i. 14. 7.

[2] A. Hauvette-Besnault 'Fouilles de Délos. Temple des dieux étrangers' in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1882 vi. 295—352 with plate 11 (ground-plan, etc.), L. Bürchner in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 2473, P. Roussel Les cultes égyptiens à Délos du IIIe au Ier siècle av. J.-C. Nancy 1916, id. Délos, colonie athénienne Paris 1916 pp. 249–252, id. Délos Paris 1925 p. 33 f. We still await the definitive publication of this important precinct.

[3] P. Roussel Les cultes égyptiens à Délos du IIIe au Ier siècle av. J.-C. Nancy 1916 p. 152 no. 129 ['A]θη[ναγό]ρα[s] καὶ Λε[ωνίδης] | [οἱ 'A]θηναγόρ[ου] 'Aθ[ηναῖοι] | Διὶ Οὐρίωι, Σαράπι[δι, Ἴσιδι,] | ['A]νούβιδι, Ἁρποκράτε[ι].

[4] A. Hauvette-Besnault in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1882 vi, 343 no. 57 = T. Reinach Mithridate Eupator roi de Pont Paris 1890 p. 457 no. 5 = Michel Recueil d' Inscr. gr. no. 1160 = Dittenberger Orient. Gr. inscr. sel. no. 368 = P. Roussel Les cultes égyptiens à Délos du IIIe au Ier siècle av. J.-C. Nancy 1916 p. 156 f. no. 134 Διὶ Οὐρίωι ὑπὲρ βασι[λέως] | Μιθραδάτου Εὐπάτορος | καὶ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ | Μιθραδάτου Χρηστοῦ | καὶ τῶν πραγμάτων | αὐτῶν.

[5] The pedestal is K, the paved way V, on the plan (Bull. Corr. Hell. 1882 vi. 301 ff. pl. 11).

[6] T. Reinach Mithridate Eupator roi de Pont Paris 1890 p. 457 n. 1.

[7] Memnon περὶ Ἡρακλείας 15 frag. 30 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 541 Müller) ap. Phot. bibl. p. 230 b 1 ff. Bekker, Appian. Mithr. 112.

below the sanctuary of the foreign gods[1]. A fourth is a small base of white marble with a square hole for insertion or attachment. It is dated to the year 105—104 or 104—103 B.C.[2], and was set up by a citizen of Nymphaion (Eltegen) on the western shore of the Bosporos Kimmerios[3] as a thank-offering to Zeus Oúrios, Sarapis, Isis, Anoubis, and Harphokrates (sic)[4] on behalf of himself, his son, and—a noteworthy touch of altruism—all that go down to the sea in ships.

At a point near the south-west angle of the 'Hypostyle Hall' was found the fragment of a circular altar, bearing a dedication to Zeus Oúrios in letters of c. 100 B.C.[5] Lastly, a wall of late date built against the south wall of the 'Hypostyle Hall' contained a quadrangular block of white marble with two square holes for insertion on its upper surface. The front of the block bore a carefully cut bilingual dedication of c. 110 B.C. by the Hermaïstai, Apolloniastai, and Poseidoniastai to Zeus Oúrios or—as his name was translated by the Roman merchants—Iupiter Sequndanus[6].

[1] P. Roussel in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1908 xxxii. 426 f. no. 32, id. Les cultes égyptiens à Délos du III^e au I^er siècle av. J.-C. Nancy 1916 p. 163 no. 148 (revised reading) – – – – – – – – σι . . λ – – | – – – – – ους Ἑλεάτη[ς] | [Διὶ] Οὐρίωι ε[ὐχ]ήν, [ἐπὶ] | [ἰε]ρέως Ἀπ[ο]λλο[δω]ρου τοῦ Ἀπ[ο]λλο[δω]ρου Κρωπίδου, [κλει]δουχοῦ[ν]τος [Πoσει]δωνίου τοῦ [Γ'ηρο]|στράτου Πει[ραιέως,]| ζακ[ο]ρεύ[ντος]|[Ν]ικίου.

[2] A. Hauvette-Besnault in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1882 vi. 328 no. 22 = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 758, ib.[3] no. 1126 = P. Roussel Les cultes égyptiens à Délos du III^e au I^er siècle av. J.-C. Nancy 1916 p. 165 f. no. 153 Εὔτυχος Ἀπολ[λ]ων(ί)ου Νυμφαίτη[ς]| ὑπὲρ ἑαυτοῦ καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ Εὐβο(ὐ)λο[υ]| καὶ ὑπὲρ τῶν πλοϊζομένων πάντων | Διὶ Οὐρίωι, Σαράπιδι, Ἴσιδι, Ἀνούβιδι, Ἁρ|φοκράτει, θεοῖς συννάοις καὶ συμ|βώμοις, ἐπὶ ἱερέως Θεομνήστου | τοῦ Θεογένου Κυδαθηναιέως, | ζακορεύοντος Νυσίου, | χαριστήριον.

[3] E. H. Minns Scythians and Greeks Cambridge 1913 p. 560 f.

[4] Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[2] no. 559, 12 n., ib.[3] no. 977[a], 12 n. points out that the aspirate properly belonging to the latter part of the Egyptian Harpechrat (E. Meyer in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 2746) or Har-pe-chrod (M. Pieper in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 2410) and recognised in the variants Ἁρποχράτα (Inscr. Gr. sept. iii. 2 no. 591, 1 Larissa in Thessaly), Ἁρποχράτει (Inscr. Gr. Deli iv no. 1260, 4, alib.) has here and elsewhere been transferred to the former part of Ἁρφοκράτης in order to assimilate the divine name to the frequent termination -κράτης. Further changes produced the normal Ἁρποκράτης and even the abnormal Καρποκράτης (E. Sittig in the Zeitschrift für vergleichende Sprachforschung 1913 xlv. 242—245).

[5] P. Roussel and J. Hatzfeld in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1909 xxxiii. 510 no. 26 Διὶ Οὐρίωι | – – – τον ΔΙΑ (? τὸν Δία).

[6] P. Roussel and J. Hatzfeld in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1909 xxxiii. 496 ff. no. 16 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 9237

C. Heius T.f. Libo	L. Pompilius [L.f.]
Q. Saufeius P.f. Treb.	A. Cottius N.f.
L. Veturius P.f.	M. Umbricius M.f.
D. Ampius Q. l.	L. Aufidius L.C. l. Dorot. minor
L. Paconius L.l. Trup.	C. Seius Cn. l. Heracleo
Ti. Maecius L.l.	Cn. Tutorius P. l. Olumpiod.

magistreis de sua pecunia Iovei Sequndano.

This curious title was known already from a passage of Martianus Capella[1], which assigns Iupiter Secundanus together with Iovis Opulentia and Minerva to the third of the sixteen regions of the sky recognised in Etruscan lightning-lore[2]. Since the series commences with the north, the third division of the first quarter[3] would correspond with the sector N.E. to E.N.E. of our mariner's compass, and this (north-east by east) is just the direction of a wind blowing down the Dardanelles. The inscription equating Iupiter Sequndanus with Zeus Oúrios explains in fact Capella's epithet, which had previously puzzled the commentators[4].

Moreover, it adds point to a well known phrase of Catullus[5]. He is telling how his yacht brought him safely from Bithynia to Italy in 56 B.C.:

> And thence through all the seas that break
> She bore her master well,
> Whether the breeze her sail would shake
> And left or right compel,
> Or Jove who followed in her wake
> Full on the canvas fell.

The poet's use of Iupiter Secundus is obviously a variation on the more prosaic and technical Iupiter Secundanus. The homeward journey through the Bosporos[6] was sped, appropriately enough, by the god whom we have seen identified with Zeus Oúrios[7]. And the Γάιος Ἥιος Τίτου υἱὸς Λίβων, | Λεύκιος Πομπίλιος Λευκίου υἱός, | Κόιντος Σαυφήιος Ποπλίου υἱὸς Τρεβιανός, | Αὖλος Κόττιος Νεμερίου υἱός, | Λεύκιος Οὐετόριος Ποπλίου υἱός, | Μάαρκος Ὀμβρίκιος Μαάρκου υἱός, | Δέκμος Ἄμπιος Κοίντου, | Λεύκιος Αὐφίδιος Λευκίου καὶ Γαίου Δωρόθεος νεώτερος, | Λεύκιος Πακώνιος Λευκίου Τρύφων, | Γάιος Σήιος Γναίου Ἡρακλέων, | Τεβέριος Μαίκιος Λευκίου, | Γναῖος Τουτώριος Ποπλίου Ὀλυμπιόδωρος, |

οἱ Ἑρμαισταὶ καὶ Ἀπολλωνιασταὶ καὶ Ποσειδωνιασταὶ (Dessau reads Ποσιδωνιασταὶ) | ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων Διὶ Οὐρίωι ἀνέθηκαν.

[1] Mart. Cap. 47 nam Iovis Secundani et Iovis Opulentiae Minervaeque domus illic (sc. in tertia regione caeli) sunt constitutae. sed omnes circa ipsum Iovem fuerant in praesenti.

[2] C. O. Thulin Die etruskische Disciplin i. Die Blitzlehre Göteborg 1906 p. 16 ff. ('Die 16 Himmelsregionen'), id. Die Götter des Martianus Capella und der Bronzeleber von Piacenza Gieszen 1906 p. 62 ff. ('Das System der 12 Loci,' cp. A. Bouché-Leclercq L'astrologie grecque Paris 1899 p. 280 ff.).

[3] Plin. nat. hist. 2. 143.

[4] See U. F. Kopp's n. on Mart. Cap. 47. He cp. Mart. Cap. 51 sed etiam Liber ac Secundanus Pales vocantur ex septima (sc. regione caeli).

[5] Cat. 4. 18 ff. et inde tot per impotentia freta | erum tulisse, laeva sive dextera | vocaret aura, sive utrumque Iupiter | simul secundus incidisset in pedem.

[6] The stages marked are Mt Kytoros (11 ff.), Amastris in Paphlagonia (13), the Pontos (9), the Propontis (8 f.), Rhodes (8), the Kyklades (7), and the Adriatic (6 f.). But we know that Catullus en route for home made offerings at his brother's tomb in the Troad (Cat. 65. 5 ff., 68^a. 19 ff., 68^b. 49 ff., 101. 1 ff.).

[7] Supra p. 155.

religious interest of the passage lies in the fact that the wind astern is distinctly conceived as Zeus or Iupiter in person. The wind is his spirit, the spirit—let us say—of a tribal chief, long since dead and buried, but rightly named Aiolos[1].

It is possible that some such conception underlies the remarkable epithet of Zeus tkmenos, 'who follows in our wake'[2]. The Homeric poems apply this participle exclusively to the oûros or 'fair breeze' sent by Apollon[3], Athena[4], and Kirke[5], which is on occasion personified and described as 'a good companion'[6]. But Eustathios goes further and quotes from an unspecified source the significant expression 'Zeus tkmenos'[7], perhaps the product of some late epic poet, who had in mind Iupiter Sequndanus or Secundus.

Again, a parallel may be found in the case of Androgeos. L. Weber[8] has drawn attention to the very ancient character of this mythical figure, whom he believes to have been originally a Cretan god, transplanted to Attike and there transformed, first into a hero possessed of chthonian powers, and last into a human prince affiliated to Minos. I should prefer to invert the sequence god, hero, man, and to regard Androgeos as ab initio a mortal, heroified after death and worshipped in the Kerameikos under the name Eurygýes[9]. Such an appellative was, not improbably, employed from the outset, as a means of avoiding the actual name of the dead[10]. After all,

[1] Supra pp. 141, 148.

[2] On the relation of ἵκμενος to ἵκω, ἱκνέομαι, etc. see Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 195, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 370 f., K. Brugmann Griechische Grammatik[4] München 1913 p. 365, F. Bechtel Lexilogus zu Homer Halle a. d. S. 1914 p. 175.

[3] Il. 1. 479.

[4] Od. 2. 420=15. 292, cp. 15. 34 f.

[5] Od. 11. 6 ff. = 12. 148 ff.

[6] Od. 11. 7=12. 149 ἵκμενον οὖρον ἴει πλησίστιον, ἐσθλὸν ἑταῖρον.

[7] Eustath. in Il. p. 964, 63 f. ὅθεν ἄνεμος ἔσται, ὃς ἐξ ἱκμάδος καὶ τοιαύτης ὕλης τὴν σύστασιν ἔχει. ὅθεν καὶ ἵκμενος οὖρος καὶ Ζεὺς φασιν ἵκμενος. It is tempting to infer from the first sentence that Zeus ἵκμενος is a mere blunder for Zeus Ἰκμαῖος (infra § 8 (c)). But in view of Iupiter Sequndanus or Secundus the inference would be precarious.

[8] L. Weber 'Androgeos' in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 34—44, 229—251, id. 'Kerameikos-Kulte' in the Ath. Mitth. 1925 l. 145.

[9] Hesych. s.v. ἐπ' Εὐρυγύῃ ἀγῶν· Μελησαγόρας (Amelesagoras frag. 3 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 22 Müller)) τὸν Ἀνδρόγεων Εὐρυγύην (so Musurus for ἀνδρόγεον εὐρύην cod.) εἰρῆσθαι φησι τὸν Μίνωος, ἐφ' ᾧ τὸν ἀγῶνα τίθεσθαι <τὸν (inseruit)> ἐπιτάφιον Ἀθήνησιν ἐν τῷ Κεραμεικῷ. καὶ Ἡσίοδος (frag. 106 Flach, 104 Rzach)· Εὐρυγύης δ' ἔτι κοῦρος (K. W. Goettling cj. ἐπίκουρος, R. Peppmüller cj. ἐπίουρος cp. Il. 13. 450) Ἀθηνάων (so J. G. Hermann for Ἀθηναίων cod.) ἱεράων (cp. Od. 11. 323). Melesagoras was a legendary Eleusinian seer (Max. Tyr. diss. 38. 3), on whom was fathered an Atthis perhaps composed as early as s. v B.C. (E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1822, W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1912 i. 454 n. 1).

[10] Frazer Golden Bough[3]: Taboo p. 349 ff. ('Names of the Dead tabooed'), E. Clodd Magic in Names London 1920 p. 121 ff. ('Mana in Names of the Dead').

Andrógeos, 'The man of earth'[1], might fairly be dubbed Eurygýes, 'He of the broad acres'[2]. It should also be noticed that the names Andrógeos and Eurygýes are Greek, not pre-Greek; which means that we have to do with a genuine Hellenic, not 'Minoan,' hero. It is therefore interesting to find that at Phaleron, where he had an altar, he was worshipped not only as a nameless 'hero'[3], but also more definitely as 'the hero astern'[4]. This expression might no doubt be taken to imply that an actual effigy of Androgeos was fixed on the vessel's poop[5], like that of the bifrontal Lithuanian Wejopatis[6] or those of the dwarfish Phoenician Pátaikoi[7] (figs. 68, 69)[8].

[1] W. Pape—G. E. Benseler Wörterbuch der griechischen Eigennamen[3] Braunschweig 1875 i. 87 'Erdmann.'

[2] Eid. ib. i. 420 'Breitefeld, wo nicht *Breitwirbel, wie Breitkopf,' F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 1328 'Der Besitzer des weiten Saatfeldes (ἡ γύα) ist der Unterweltsgott oder sein heroischer Stellvertreter.' But F. Bechtel—A. Fick Die Griechischen Personennamen[2] Göttingen 1894 p. 385: '–γήης zu γύα "Hand"? Vgl. ἐγγύη, γύαλον; ἐγγυαλίζω. Εὐρυ-γύης hiess auch 'Ανδρό-γεως (-γηΓος?).'

[3] Paus. 1. 1. 4 ἔστι δὲ (sc. at Phaleron) καὶ 'Ανδρόγεω βωμὸς τοῦ Μίνω, καλεῖται δὲ "Ηρωος· 'Ανδρόγεω δὲ ὄντα ἴσασιν οἷς ἐστιν ἐπιμελὲς τὰ ἐγχώρια σαφέστερον ἄλλων ἐπίστασθαι.

[4] Clem. Al. protr. 2. 40. 2 p. 30, 20 Stählin τιμᾶται δέ τις καὶ Φαληροῖ κατὰ πρύμναν ἥρως with schol. ad. loc. p. 309, 13 ff. Stählin Φαληρεὺς λιμὴν τῆς 'Αττικῆς· ὁ δὲ κατὰ πρύμνας ἥρως 'Ανδρόγεώς ἐστιν, υἱὸς Μίνωος, οὕτως ὀνομασθεὶς ὅτι κατὰ τὰς πρύμνας τῶν νηῶν ἵδρυτο. καὶ Καλλίμαχος ἐν δ' τῶν Αἰτίων μέμνηται (frag. 33[b] Schneider = Αἴτια 4 frag. 3 Schneider, A. W. Mair).

[5] So schol. Clem. Al. loc. cit. (supra n. 4). [6] Supra ii. 445 n. 1.

[7] Hdt. 3. 37 ἔστι γὰρ τοῦ 'Ηφαίστου (sc. Ptaḥ at Memphis: supra i. 433, ii. 34 n. 1) τῶγαλμα τοῖσι Φοινικηίοισι Παταΐκοισι ἐμφερέστατον, τοὺς οἱ Φοίνικες ἐν τῇσι πρῴρῃσι τῶν τριηρέων περιάγουσι. ὃς δὲ τούτους μὴ ὄπωπε, ὧδε σημανέω· πυγμαίου ἀνδρὸς μίμησις ἐστί. The lexicographers place these little figures on the poop, not the prow (Hesych. s.v. Πάταικοι (so M. Schmidt for Παταϊκοί cod., cp. Herodian. περὶ καθολικῆς προσῳδίας 6 (i. 151, 9 Lentz) Πάταικος, id. περὶ ὀρθογραφίας (ii. 424, 18 Lentz) Πάταικος, Theognost. Byz. can. 326 in Cramer anecd. Oxon. ii. 60, 25 f. Πάταικος)· θεοὶ Φοίνικες, οὓς ἱστᾶσι κατὰ τὰς πρύμνας τῶν νεῶν, Souid. s.v. Πάταικοι· θεοὶ Φοινικικοὶ ἐν ταῖς πρύμναις ἱδρυμένοι). But Herodotos' statement is borne out by the numismatic evidence (infra n. 8).

Pataikos appears to have been the Phoenician form of the Egyptian Ptaḥ (see J. Ilberg in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1675 ff.) in the misshapen, but negrillo rather than 'embryonic,' type Ptaḥ-Seker (Lanzone Dizion. di Mitol. Egiz. p. 243 ff. pls. 98, 1, 99, 1—4, 100, 1—5, 101, 2, Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art iii. 418 ff. fig. 293), which from the eighteenth dynasty down to Ptolemaic times often occurs as an amulet (A. Erman A Handbook of Egyptian Religion trans. A. S. Griffith London 1907 p. 76 fig. 51, Sir W. M. Flinders Petrie Amulets London 1914 p. 38 pl. 31 fig. 176 a—m, pl. 46 fig. 176 n, p, pl. 47 fig. 176 o. I illustrate a single and a double amulet of Ptaḥ-Seker, in green glaze, from my collection (figs. 66, 67)) and presumably served a prophylactic purpose. On Ptaḥ-Seker as a dwarfish deified ancestor see further H. R. Hall in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1908 i. 441 b, D. MacRitchie ib. 1912 v. 123 a, 126 a, Sir W. M. Flinders Petrie ib. 1912 v. 249 a, G. Foucart ib. 1912 v. 855 a, 856 a. Such an apotrópaion would be useful on land as well as at sea, cp. Hesych. s. vv. Γιγγρών (so M. Schmidt for Γιγνῶν cod., cp. Eustath. in Od. p. 1599, 1 Γιγγρών, p. 1880, 64 Γιγρών), οἱ δὲ Γιγῶν· Πάταικος ἐπιτραπέζιος (so J. Selden for παταϊκὸς ἐπισταϊκὸς τραπέζιος cod.). οἱ δὲ Αἰγύπτιον 'Ηφαιστέα and Εὐφράδης· Πάταικος ἐπιτραπέζιος (so M. Musurus for παταϊκὸς ἐπιτραπέζειος cod.).

[8] Double shekels of Sidon, struck in s. iv B.C., show as their obverse type a Phoenician war-galley with a small armed figure at the prow (good specimens are Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 145 pl. 19, 5, p. 150 pl. 20, 2, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides Paris 1893 p. 38 pl. 6, 15, p. 53 pl. 9, 2 f., id. Monn. gr. rom. ii. 2. 597 f. pl. 121, 7, 601 f. pl. 121, 17, Weber Cat. Coins iii. 2. 782 no. 8057 pl. 297). But a more certain representation of the dwarf Pataikos is seen on statêres of Arados, struck in s. iv B.C., which have for reverse type a galley with a small effigy on the prow (e.g. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 6 pl. 2, 1, p. 9 pl. 2, 11 f., Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 225 pl. 75, 11, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides Paris 1893 p. 130 pl. 22, 20 = Perrot—Chipiez Hist. de l'Art iii. 419 fig. 292, Babelon Monn. gr. rom. ii. 2. 523 f. pl. 116, 23 f., 527 f. pl. 117, 2 and 4. I give Babelon Monn. gr. rom. ii. 2. 527 f. pl. 117, 2 (= my fig. 68) and a specimen in my possession (fig. 69)). On coins of Arados struck in s. iii—ii B.C. this

Fig. 66.

Fig. 67.

Fig. 68.

Fig. 69.

is replaced by a figure-head of Athena fighting (Brit. Mus Cat. Coins Phoenicia p. 13 ff. pl. 3, 1, 3—8, 16 f., Hunter Cat. Coins iii. 226 f. pl. 75, 15 f., 228, 231 ff. pl. 75, 20—22, E. Babelon Les Perses Achéménides Paris 1893 p. 132 ff. pl. 23, 1, 3, 5—7, 13, 15—17, 19, 22 f., pl. 24, 4, 7, cp. pl. 24, 16 and 20). Figure-heads of this sort would be gilded (see F. H. M. Blaydes' n. on Aristoph. Ach. 547 Παλλαδίων χρυσουμένων)—a fact which perhaps explains the comic fragment χρυσί' ἔστ' ἄπεφθα τοῖς Παταίκοις ἐμφερῆ (frag. com. anon. 364 (Frag. com. Gr. iv. 695 Meineke) ap. Souid. s.v. ἀπέφθου χρυσίου).

Much material with regard to apotrópaia on ships will be found in D. Ruhnkenii Opuscula varii argumenti, oratoria, historica, critica[2] Lugduni Batavorum 1823 i. 412—456 ('Disputatio de tutelis et insignibus navium'), C. Torr Ancient Ships Cambridge 1894 pp. 65—69, M. Hoernes Urgeschichte der bildenden Kunst in Europa Wien 1898 p. 383 ff., H. Usener Die Sintflutsagen Bonn 1899 p. 248 ff., Ch. Tsountas in the 'Εφ. 'Αρχ. 1899 p. 90 ff. figs. 16—21 = Schrader Reallex.[2] ii. 301 pl. 81 fig. 1, J. N. Svoronos in the Journ. Intern. d'Arch. Num. 1914 xvi. 81—152, H. Diels 'Das Aphlaston der antiken Schiffe' in the Zeitschrift des Vereins für Volkskunde 1915 xxv. 61 ff., A. Köster Das antike Seewesen Berlin 1923 p. 58 f. fig. 10 f., p. 64 fig. 18, G. Contenau La civilisa-

But to my ear it suggests rather that Androgeos unseen followed the ship's trail and supplied her with a steady breeze, much as Boreas with puffed cheeks blows along the raft of Odysseus on a grotesque vase from the Theban Kabeirion (fig. 70)[1]. In either case it is clear that in the Ionian, as in the Aeolian, area the wind following aft might be attributed to, nay more, might be identified with, an ancestral spirit.

Nor were the Dorians wholly untouched by the same superstition, for at Sparta there was a sanctuary of Zeus Euánemos, the 'Giver of a Good Wind[2].' But here an obvious difficulty must be met. How comes it that this deity, appropriate to a seafaring folk, was worshipped so far inland? A reasonable answer is given by S. Wide[3], who observes that beside the sanctuary of Zeus Euánemos tion phénicienne Paris 1926 p. 295 f., L. Deubner in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1927 xlii. 180 ff. figs. 12—15, F. Behn in Ebert Reallex. xi. 238 with pl. 60, 242 with pl. 62, 248 with pl. 64.

Fig. 70.

[1] P. Gardner Cat. Vases Oxford p. 18 f. no. 262 pl. 26 (=my fig. 70), M. Bieber Die Denkmäler zum Theaterwesen im Altertum Berlin und Leipzig 1920 p. 154 fig. 134, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 717. The subject is a parody of Od. 5. 291 ff.; but note that here the trident is transferred from Poseidon to Odysseus!

[2] Gerhard Gr. Myth. i. 169, Welcker Gr. Götterl. ii. 195, Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 118, H. Usener Götternamen Bonn 1896 p. 260, id. 'Göttliche Synonyme' in the Rhein. Mus. 1898 liii. 346 (=id. Kleine Schriften Leipzig—Berlin 1913 iv. 276), Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 834 n. 9, O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 843.

Εὐάνεμος, the appellative of Zeus, =εὐήνεμος (Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 264 f. Ἐπίθετα Διός...no. 38 (37) εὐηνέμου, 266 Ἐπίθετα Διός...no. 37 (38) εὐηνέμου).

A modern parallel to Zeus Euánemos may be found in Buenos Aires, 'Good Winds' (W. Sturmfels Etymologisches Lexikon deutscher und fremdländischer Ortsnamen Berlin—Bonn 1925 p. 28). The town owes its name to 'Our Lady of the Favourable Wind' (A. J. Lamoureux in The Encyclopædia Britannica[11] Cambridge 1910 iv. 754 notes that it was first founded by P. de Mendoza in 1535 as Santa Maria de Buenos Ayres).

[3] Wide Lakon. Kulte p. 10.

stood a shrine of the hero Pleuron[1], eponym of Pleuron in Aitolia[2], and infers that the cult of Zeus the wind-god had been brought from Pleuron, a town adjoining the Calydonian Gulf, to Sparta. I accept Wide's explanation, but go one step further. When we remember that Pleuron stood in a district called Aiolis[3], it becomes at least possible that the original 'Giver of a Good Wind' was, in accordance with Aeolian thinking[4], none other than Pleuron the local hero. It is tempting, though perhaps over-venturesome, to suppose that his very name meant, or was taken to mean, the 'Wind-Blower[5]'. Be that as it may, a happy coincidence led Theokritos, writing in the Aeolic dialect, to say of his journey from Syracuse to Miletos:

> For hither we pray Zeus grant the way with a capful of good wind (euánemos)[6].

Zeus Euánemos, then, like Zeus Oúrios, was on this showing an Aeolian god evolved out of an Aeolian hero. But though Zeus as a wind-god thus presupposes the primitive conception of wind as the soul of a tribal ancestor, we must not imagine that the civilised Greek of the classical period was mindful of origins. He thought of Zeus as a sky-god. The wind blew in the aér or lower sky[7]. Clearly therefore Zeus was responsible for the wind. Accordingly the rock-cut inscription from Thera which commemorates Boreaîos[8] may well be understood of Zeus Boreaîos, god 'of the North Wind.' Indeed, an altar dedicated to Zeus Bóreios has actually come to light near Seleukeia in Kilikia (fig. 71)[9]. When Herodes Attikos

[1] Paus. 3. 13. 8 τοῦ Διονύσου δὲ οὐ μακρὰν Διὸς ἱερόν ἐστιν Εὐανέμου, τούτου δὲ ἐν δεξιᾷ Πλευρῶνος ἡρῷον, γεγόνασι δὲ οἱ Τυνδάρεω παῖδες τὰ πρὸς μητρὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ Πλευρῶνος· Θέστιον γὰρ τὸν Ἀήδας πατέρα Ἄσιός (so Palmerius for Ἀρεϊός codd. = Asios frag. 6 Kinkel) φησιν ἐν τοῖς ἔπεσιν Ἀγήνορος παῖδα εἶναι τοῦ Πλευρῶνος.

[2] Daïmachos of Plataiai (on whom see E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iv. 2008 f.) frag. 8 (Frag. hist. Gr. ii. 442 Müller) ap. schol. Il. 13. 218, Apollod. 1. 7. 7.

[3] Thouk. 3. 102, cp. Strab. 464 f. See further G. Hirschfeld in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 1035 and 1115.

[4] Supra pp. 106 ff., 140 f., 148, 157.

[5] Πλευρών is certainly a cognate of πλευρόν, πλευρᾶ, 'side', and πλευρόν, πλευρᾷ are possibly related to πλεύμων, 'lung' (Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 374 f., F. Muller Altitalisches Wörterbuch Göttingen 1926 p. 345. Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 794 disagrees: 'Un rapport avec πλεύμων...se justifie mal'). Presumably in the first instance Πλευρών meant 'Seitler' (W. Pape—G. E. Benseler Wörterbuch der griechischen Eigennamen[3] Braunschweig 1875 ii. 1211), but it is conceivable that the name was re-interpreted as 'Wind-Blower.'

[6] Theokr. 28. 5 τυίδε γὰρ πλόον εὐάνεμον αἰτήμεθα πὰρ Διός.

[7] Supra i. 101 ff. For philosophical views see O. Gilbert Die meteorologischen Theorien des griechischen Altertums Leipzig 1907 pp. 511—539 ('Windgenese').

[8] Supra i. 142 n. 10.

[9] R. Heberdey and A. Wilhelm in the Denkschr. d. Akad. Wien 1896 vi. Abh. p. 102 no. 182 on a round altar (height 1·17^{m}, circumference 2·27^{m}) in the village of Budshukli, about a mile from Seleukeia up stream on the right bank of the Kalykadnos Διὶ | Βορείῳ | Θεόδοτ[ο]ς | Αἰνέου [τ]οῦ | Θεοδότου | εὐχ[ή]ν with facsimile = my fig. 71, E. Maass in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1910 xiii. 121.

lost his wife Annia Regilla (160 A.D.), he constructed a precinct known as the Triopion on the Appian Road[1], and there set up the ambitious inscription in which Marcellus of Side[2] described the lady, neither a mortal nor a goddess[3], as dwelling with the heroines in the Islands of the Blest[4]:

Fig. 71.

Zeus bade the Elysian breezes of the West
Bear that proud consort to her ocean rest[5].

Scattered allusions to Zeus as a power controlling the winds may be found throughout Greek literature, even as late as Byzantine times. Eumathios Makrembolites[6] in his Romance of Hysmine and Hysminias makes the lovers, eloping from Eurykomis[7], pray both Zeus and Poseidon to favour their voyage:

'So to the harbour we came, and stretching our hands toward the bright sky said—"Father Zeus, yielding to thee and thy mystic omens we embark on this journey. Thy son Eros has laid siege to our hearts and is dragging us as his booty away from our fatherland. And do thou, Poseidon, blow from our back, not in our face. Oppose not with thy breath the calm breath of Zeus, oppose not the west wind of Eros, whose well-tempered help has brought us to the haven[8]."'

Finally, there is some slight reason to suppose that whirlwinds (stróbiloi by land and dínoi by sea[9]) were specially connected with Zeus. His approach at the close of Aischylos' Prometheus Bound[10] is heralded by an earthquake, a roar of thunder, spiral flashes of lightning, spinning dust-storms[11], and a windy warfare that confuses

[1] K. Münscher in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 936 ff.

[2] W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1924 ii. 2. 678 n. 6.

[3] Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 1389 Marcell. 1. 43 = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 1. 264. 43 οὐ μὲν γὰρ θνητή, ἀτὰρ οὐδὲ θέαινα τέτυκται.

[4] Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 1389 Marcell. 1. 8 f. = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 1. 264. 8 f. αὐτὴ δὲ μεθ' ἡρώῃσι νέναται | ἐν μακάρων νήσοισιν, ἵνα Κρόνος ἐνβασιλεύει.

[5] Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 1389 Marcell. 1. 21 f. = Cougny Anth. Pal. Append. 1. 264. 21 f. Ζεὺς μὲν ἐς ὠκεανὸν θαλερὴν ἔστειλε γυναῖκα | αὔρῃσι Ζεφύροιο κομιζέμεν Ἠλυσίῃσιν. Marcellus is thinking of Od. 4. 563 ff. Cp. also Hyg. fab. 140 at Latonam Iovis iussu ventus Aquilo sublatam ad Neptunum pertulit.

[6] Eumath. 7. 6.

[7] Supra ii. 1141.

[8] The passage ends thus: σὺ δ', ὦ Πόσειδον, ἐκ μεταφρένου πνεῦσον, μὴ κατὰ μέτωπον· μὴ πρὸς πνεῦμα πανεύδιον ἀντιπνεύσοις (sic) Διός, μὴ πρὸς Ἔρωτος ξέφυρον, οἷς ἡμεῖς εὐκραῶς περὶ τὸν λιμένα γεγόναμεν. The sequel shows that Poseidon is not so accommodating: ib. 7. 9 Ἔρως ἀλλήλους (an ἀλλήλοις legendum?) ἡμᾶς ἐδουλογράφησε, καὶ Ζεὺς ἐν θύμασι τὴν ἁρπαγὴν ὑπηνίξατο· ὁ δέ γε θρασὺς καὶ ἄγριος Ποσειδῶν ὄρη κυμάτων ἐγείρει καὶ πρὸς αἴνιγμα Διὸς ἀντιπνεῖ καὶ ὅλον δουλογραφεῖον ἐρωτικὸν ἐκπλύνει τοῖς κύμασιν.

[9] Epikour. epist. 2. 105 καὶ ἕως μὲν γῆς τοῦ πηστήρος καθιεμένου στρόβιλοι γίγνονται. ἕως δὲ θαλάττης δῖνοι ἀποτελοῦνται. With the context cp. Lucr. 6. 423 ff., O. Gilbert Die meteorologischen Theorien des griechischen Altertums Leipzig 1907 pp. 564, 632.

[10] Aisch. P.v. 1080 ff.

[11] Id. ib. 1085 στρόμβοι δὲ κόνιν εἰλίσσουσιν. Nikephoros Basilakes progymn. 7. 10 (i. 489, 12) στρόμβος πνευμάτων is a Byzantine (c. 1150 A.D.) echo.

sky with sea. Aristophanes in the Clouds personifies Dînos in a manner highly suggestive of Zeus[1]. Nay more, in the Lysistrate[2] he virtually identifies Zeus with the tornado that is to sweep the perfidious Myrrhine to perdition:

> Sweet, sweet, do you call her? Vile, vile, I repeat.
> Zeus, send me a storm and a whirlwind, I pray,
> To whisk her away, like a bundle of hay,
> Up, up, beyond human aid,
> And toss her and swirl her, and twist her and twirl her,
> Till, tattered and torn, to the earth she is borne,
> Astride of an unsheathed blade.

In many parts of the globe whirlwinds have been regarded as demons or witches or wandering souls[3]. And not least in modern Greece, where they are commonly attributed to the Nereids[4] or

[1] Supra ii. 2 n. 4.

[2] Aristoph. Lys. 971 ff. ΧΟ. ΓΕ. ποία γλυκερά; | μιαρὰ μιαρὰ δῆτ'. ὦ Ζεῦ Ζεῦ (supra ii. 727 n. 3 (1)), | εἰθ' αὐτήν, ὥσπερ τοὺς θωμούς, | μεγάλῳ τυφῷ καὶ πρηστῆρι | ξυστρέψας καὶ ξυγγογγυλίσας | οἴχοιο φέρων, εἶτα μεθείης, | ἡ δὲ φέροιτ' αὖ πάλιν εἰς τὴν γῆν, | κᾆτ' ἐξαίφνης | περὶ τὴν ψωλὴν περιβαίη. I have adopted the translation of B. B. Rogers, but have altered his rendering of lines 976 and 979. In the parallel passage, thesm. 56 ff., the diction again suits a whirlwind or waterspout (56 γογγύλλει, 57 χοανεύει, 61 συγγογγυλίσας καὶ συστρέψας, 62 χοανεῦσαι), though of course other meanings are attached to every phrase. It may be suspected that Aristophanes had recently (?411 B.C.) witnessed some striking example of a στρόβιλος or δῖνος.

[3] Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art i. 331 n. 2, J. Grimm Teutonic Mythology trans. J. S. Stallybrass London 1882 i. 203 (Zio or Ziu), 229 n. 1 (the Devil, Herodias, Pfol), 285 n. 1 (Ziu or Zio, Herodias), 1883 ii. 632 (Zio, Phol, the Devil, witches), 1888 iv. 1798 (the Evil One), 1799 (witches), 1847 (evil spirits), E. H. Meyer Germanische Mythologie Berlin 1891 Index p. 353 s.vv. 'Wirbelwind,' 'Wirbelwindselbinnen,' 'Wirbelwindsriesinnen,' P. Sébillot Le Folk-lore de France Paris 1904 i. 81 (démon, Satan, diable), 82 f. (damnés, farfadets, Héroguias, sorcier, loups-garous), 112 (foultot ou lutin).

[4] B. Schmidt Das Volksleben der Neugriechen Leipzig 1871 i. 123 ff. ('Die Neräiden gelten gemeiniglich auch als Urheberinnen des alles mit sich fortreissenden Wirbelwindes, ἀνεμοστρόβιλος,[4] ([4]Auf Zakynthos ist das Wort corrumpirt in ἀνεμοστρούφιλος und ἀνεμοστρούφουλας, auf Kephalonia in ἀνεμορούφουλας...) welcher in Griechenland zumal im Sommer häufig ist. In diesem Winde schreiten sie einher, und wen sie auf ihrer Bahn antreffen, den heben sie auf und führen ihn mit sich durch die Lüfte. Auf Zakynthos sagt man beim Wehen des Wirbelwindes: "die Neräiden tanzen," χορεύουνε ἡ 'Νεράϊδες, und hält die Kreise, welche derselbe im Staube oder im Sande bildet, für die Spuren ihrer Füsse. Die Kinder werden zu solcher Zeit ängstlich gehütet und nicht aus dem Hause gelassen. Wer vom Wirbelwinde überrascht wird, muss sich ducken, um von den daher stürmenden Unholdinnen verschont zu bleiben.[5] ([5]Vgl. die epirotische Sage bei Hahn Nr. 81, wo ein Mädchen, das sich nicht ducken will, von den Neräiden hinweggerafft wird.) Auch hat man für diesen Fall bestimmte Beschwörungsformeln. In Athen pflegen alte Frauen bei entstehendem Wirbelwind den Kopf erdwärts zu beugen und leise zu murmeln: μέλι καὶ γάλα στὸν δρόμο σας, d. i. Honig und Milch auf euern Weg![6] ([6]Pittakis in der 'Εφημ. 'Αρχαιολ. 1852, φ. 30, p. 647 s. Derselbe fügt hinzu, dass dies namentlich in der Nähe des sogenannten Nymphenhügels beobachtet werde: ein Umstand, dem eine dunkle Erinnerung an den ehemaligen Cultus der Nymphen auf der Höhe dieses Hügels... zu Grunde zu liegen scheint.) Ganz ähnlich in anderen Gegenden. Auf Kephalonia, im Bezirk Samos, wird folgender Spruch gesagt, der seine Erklärung in dem hier bestehenden, Nymphs[1] or other supernatural agencies[2]. Indeed, the word Anemos, 'Wind,' is nowadays a frequent synonym of the Devil[3]. But the most remarkable parallel to the ancient Greek equation of Zeus with the whirlwind has yet to be stated. The vocabularius sancti Galli, a vellum manuscript of the seventh or eighth century in the Library of Saint-Gall[4], glosses the Latin turpines, that is turbines, 'whirlwinds,' by the Old High German ziu. If this word has been rightly transcribed[5], it must—as J. Grimm long since pointed schon oben von mir erwähnten Glauben findet, nach welchem die Oberste der Neraïden die Schwester Alexanders des Grossen ist: Χαιράμεναις, καλόκαρδαις, | μέλι καὶ γάλα | σ' τοῦ βασιλέα τὴν τάβλα! | Στὴ ψυχὴ τοῦ βασιλέως τοῦ 'Αλέξανδρου, | κακὸ μὴ μοῦ κάμετε!'), N. G. Polites Παραδόσεις Athens 1904 i. 406 no. 691 Τάνεμοσίφουνο τῶν Νεράιδων.

[1] J. C. Lawson Modern Greek Folklore and Ancient Greek Religion Cambridge 1910 p. 150 ('The habit of travelling on a whirlwind, or more correctly perhaps of stirring up a whirlwind by rapid passage, has gained for the nymphs in some districts secondary names—in Macedonia ἀνεμικαίς, in Gortynia ἀνεμογαξούδες[4] (4 Παρνασσός, IV. p. 765. The origin of the second part of the compound is unknown.)—which might almost seem to constitute a new class of wind-nymphs. But so far as I know the faculty of raising whirlwinds, though most frequently exercised by Oreads, is common to all nymphs').

[2] G. F. Abbott Macedonian Folklore Cambridge 1903 p. 250 f. cited supra p. 106.

[3] F. L. W. Schwartz Der Ursprung der Mythologie Berlin 1860 p. 30 n. 2 ('Auch den Neugriechen ist ἄνεμος der Teufel, z. B. entsprechen die Redensarten ἄγε εἰς ἄνεμον, πήγαινε εἰς ἄνεμον ganz unserem "Geh' zum Teufel"'), B. Schmidt Das Volksleben der Neugriechen Leipzig 1871 i. 175 ('Sicher ist dieses Wort in einer Anzahl von Redensarten, wie νὰ πᾶς στὸν ἄνεμο, ἄγε στὸν ἄνεμο (Arachoba. Kallipolis), ganz gleichbedeutend mit διάβολος').

[4] G. Scherrer Verzeichniss der Handschriften der Stiftsbibliothek von St. Gallen Halle 1875 p. 331 ff. cod. 913.

[5] On this point there has been divergence of opinion. J. C. H. Büchler SG. 913. Vocabularius St. Galli auch Wörterbuch des heil. Gallus aus dem 8. Jahrhundert Brilon 1869 transcribes p. 36 turpines zui and comments p. 81 turbines, turpines, zui? R. Henning Über die sanctgallischen Sprachdenkmäler Strassburg 1874 transcribes p. 18, 232 turpines zui and conjectures p. 57 zui[rbila] 'weil eine frühere Handschrift hier am Rande beschädigt war.' E. Steinmeyer—E. Sievers Die althochdeutschen Glossen Berlin 1895 transcribe iii. 4, 41 Turpines zui, adding the note 'Henning ergänzte zu zuirbila; mir wenig wahrscheinlich.'

E contra J. Grimm Teutonic Mythology trans. J. S. Stallybrass London 1882 i. 203: 'A remarkable gloss in the old Cod. sangall. 913, p. 193, has "turbines=ziu" (we have no business to write zui), which may mean the storm of war, the Mars trux, saevus, or possibly the literal whirlwind, on which mythical names are sometimes bestowed; so it is either Zio himself, or a synonymous female personification Ziu, bearing the same relation to Zio as diu (ancilla) to dio (servus).' Id. ib. i. 285 n. 1, à propos of the story that the head of John the Baptist, when Herodias would have covered it with tears and kisses, blew hard at her and whirled her off into empty space (Reinardus Vulpes (c. 1150 A.D., ed. F. J. Mone Stuttgart—Tübingen 1832) i. 1153 f. oscula captantem caput aufugit atque resufflat, | illa per impluvium turbine flantis abit): 'This reference to the turbo (the whirlwind of his blast), looks mythical and of high antiquity. Not only did Ziu or Zio, once a deity, become with the christians a name for the whirlwind, p. 203... but to this day such a wind is accounted for in Lower Saxony (about Celle) by the dancing Herodias whirling about in the air.' Id. ib. 1883 ii. 632: 'The OHG. ziu, turbines, we have traced to Zio, pp. 203. 285.'

Dr B. F. C. Atkinson kindly consulted on my behalf Dr A. Fäh, the librarian of Saint-Gall, who reports (Nov. 1, 1928): 'In Cod. Ms. 913 p. 193 lautet die Glosse ganz deutlich zui nicht ziu.'

out[1]—be connected with Ztu* or Zto* the early Germanic sky-god[2], and presumably implies that Ziu in popular fancy took shape as the whirling wind-storm—a perfect parallel to the case of Zeus.

§ 8. Zeus and the Dew.

(a) The Arrhephóroi.

Like most atmospheric phaenomena, dew had for the Greeks a certain sanctity. The wide-spread belief that, if gathered on the first of May (May Day) or the twenty-fourth of June (Midsummer Day), it beautifies or cures the human body, makes the cattle yield more milk and butter, multiplies the hay, etc.[3], will serve to explain a somewhat mysterious Athenian rite known as the Arrhephoría[4]. The fullest account of this rite is given by Pausanias[5], who after discoursing on the Erechtheion at Athens continues:

'What surprised me very much, but is not generally known, I will describe as it takes place. Two maidens dwell not far from the temple of the Polias: the Athenians call them Arrephoroi. These are lodged for a time with the goddess; but when the festival comes round they perform the following ceremony by night. They put on their heads the things which the priestess of Athena gives them to carry, but what it is she gives is known neither to her who gives nor to them who carry. Now there is in the city an enclosure not far from the sanctuary of Aphrodite called Aphrodite in the Gardens, and there is a natural underground descent through it. Down this way the maidens go. Below they leave their burdens, and getting something else, which is wrapt up, they bring it back. These maidens are then discharged, and others are brought to the Acropolis in their stead.'

Now the Arrhephoría took place in the month Skirophorion[6], which corresponds roughly with our June-July. Moreover, there can be little doubt[7] that the name Arrhephóroi means the 'Dew-

[1] See the preceding note. [2] Supra ii. 50 ff.

[3] J. Brand—Sir H. Ellis Popular Antiquities of Great Britain London 1849 i. 218 f., W. Henderson Folk-lore of the Northern Counties London 1879 pp. 85, 199 f., J. Grimm Teutonic Mythology trans. J. S. Stallybrass London 1883 ii. 786 (cp. ib. 1883 iii. 1073, 1888 iv. 1533, 1624), W. Mannhardt Wald- und Feldkulte[2] Berlin 1904 i. 384, 390, 1905 ii. 312, P. Sébillot Le Folk-lore de France Paris 1904 i. 94 f., 1906 iii. 84 f., 476 f., 479, 490, Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art ii. 54 (Isle of Man), 67 (Northumberland), 127 (South Slavonia), ib.[3]: Adonis Attis Osiris[3] i. 246 f. (Abruzzi), 248 (Spain, Normandy, Périgord), ib.[3]: Balder the Beautiful i. 208 n. 1 (Spain, Normandy, Périgord, Abruzzi), ii. 74 (South Slavonia).

For similar usages at the Parilia (April 21) and on St George's Day (April 23) see Frazer Golden Bough[3]: The Magic Art ii. 327 (Ov. fast. 4. 778), 333 (White Russia, Little Russia, Bulgaria), 335 (Bukowina, Galicia), 339 (Bulgaria).

[4] A. E. Crawley in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1911 iv. 700 a—701 a.

[5] Paus. 1. 27. 3 trans. Sir J. G. Frazer.

[6] Et mag. p. 149, 13 f.

[7] Some have regarded 'Αρρηφορία as a clipped form of 'Αρρητοφορία (so schol. Aristoph. Lys. 642, Hesych. and Souid. s.v. 'Αρρηφορία, et. mag. p. 149, 15, Bekker anecd. i. 446, bearers.' Inscriptions show that the earlier form of the word was Errhephóroi or Ersephóroi rather than Arrhephóroi, and that the cognate verb was errhephoreîn far more often than arrhephoreîn[1]. This enables us to derive the terms in question from érse or hérse, 'dew.' And conformably with this derivation the ancient grammarians state, on the authority of Istros of Kyrene (c. 200 B.C.), that the Ersephoría was a procession for Érse or Hérse, the daughter of Kekrops[2], while Moiris the Atticist (c. 200 A.D.) expressly declares that the Errhephóroi are 'those who bear dew for Érse, one of Kekrops' daughters[3].'

But, if the business of the Arrhephóroi was only to carry dew, why did the Greeks make such a song about it? At Athens four girls of noble birth were elected by show of hands. Of these four two were chosen to start the weaving of Athena's péplos. Their own garments were white, and any gold worn by them ipso facto became the property of the goddess[4]. The final selection of the girls was made by the 'king[5],' who is known to have had special responsibilities in connexion with the mysteries[6]. Once appointed, these 28 f., Favorin. lex. p. 287, 53 f., and even L. Meyer Handb. d. gr. Etym. i. 266). But this is a piece of false etymology, perhaps occasioned by the fact that the Θεσμοφόρια in Pyanopsion were called also Σκιροφόρια (schol. Loukian. dial. mer. 2. 1 p. 275 f. Rabe) and Ἀρρητοφόρια (Clem. Al. protr. 2. 17. 1 p. 14, 4 ff. Stählin): see Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 510 n. 1, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 34 n. 2.

Lobeck Aglaophamus ii. 872 f. held that ἀρρηφόροι meant 'basket-bearers,' the first part of their name being connected with the root of ἄρριχος, 'hasket.' This view too has found defenders, e.g. F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 551. But it is altogether too hypothetical.

Miss J. E. Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. xxxiv derived the name from ἔρση, in the sense of a 'young animal,' and compared the use of δρόσοι in Aisch. Ag. 141. But later, in her Proleg. Gk. Rel.[1] p. 122 n. 2, she abandoned this ingenious suggestion and ib.[2] p. 131 speaks of 'the Arrephoria or Arretophoria'... 'The Arretophoria or Arrephoria.' See also her Themis[2] p. 266.

Personally, I see no sufficient reason for discrediting the explicit statements of Istros, Moiris, etc.

[1] K. Meisterhans Grammatik der attischen Inschriften[3] Berlin 1900 p. 15 n. 67, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 34 n. 2, F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 550.

[2] Istr. frag. 17 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 420 Müller) ap. schol. Aristoph. Lys. 642. The same thing is said, without a mention of Istros, by Hesych. and Souid. s.v. 'Αρρηφορία, et. mag. p. 149, 15 ff., Favorin. lex. p. 287, 52 f.

[3] Moir. 141 p. 104 Pierson Ἐρρηφόροι, Ἀττικῶς, αἱ τὴν δρόσον φέρουσαι τῇ Ἕρσῃ· ἦτις ἦν μία τῶν Κεκροπίδων.

[4] Deinarch. κατὰ Πυθέου frag. 4 (Orat. Attic. ii. 328a Baiter—Sauppe) ap. Harpokr. s.v. ἀρρηφορεῖν = Souid. s.v. ἀρρηνοφορεῖν (G. Bernhardy cj. ἀρρηφορεῖν) = Bekker anecd. i. 446, 18 ff. = et. mag. p. 149, 18 ff.

[5] Souid. s.v. ἐπιώψατο· κατέλεξεν, ἐξελέξατο. ἔστι δ' Ἀττικόν. ὁ βασιλεὺς ἐπιώψατο ἀρρηφόρους. οἷον, κατέλεξεν, ἐξελέξατο. Πλάτων ἐν Νόμοις (Plat. legg. 947 c. J. Pierson wrongly supposed an allusion to Platon the comedian ἐν Νήσοις) = et. mag. p. 362, 38 f.

[6] Aristot. Ἀθ. πολ. 57. 1, Harpokr. s.v. ἐπιμελητὴς τῶν μυστηρίων (Dem. in Mid. 171).

little maids, who were mere children from seven to eleven years of age[1], enjoyed sundry peculiar privileges. They were housed near the Erechtheion[2]. They had a tennis-court (sphairístra) on the Akropolis, which could boast a bronze figure of Isokrates as a boy on horseback[3]. And they were fed on cakes that were specially 'risen' (anástatoi)[4]—possibly[5] in view of the Arrhephoría, that great ritual for the proper performance of which they had been set apart. Again, an Athenian inscription of Hellenistic date (c. 137/6 B.C.) tells how a certain priest of Asklepios and Hygieia gave his own daughter to serve as Arrhephóros at the Epidauria[6], which had by that time become a recognised part of the Eleusinian mysteries[7]. Finally, an Aeolic inscription from Mytilene, referred to s. iii A.D., commemorates Aurelia Artemisia as 'priestess of the goddesses Etephilai (that is, Demeter and Persephone[8]) and Karissai[9] and Ersóphoros of the most holy mysteries[10].'

[1] Et. mag. p. 149, 19 f. τέσσαρες δὲ παῖδες ἐχειροτονοῦντο κατ' εὐγένειαν ἀρρηφόροι ἀπὸ ἑτῶν ἑπτὰ μέχρις ἐνδεκα, cp. Aristoph. Lys. 641 f. ἑπτὰ μὲν ἔτη γεγῶσ' εὐθὺς ἠρρηφόρουν· | εἶτ' ἀλετρὶς ἦ δεκέτις οὖσα τἀρχηγέτι.

[2] Paus. 1. 27. 3 παρθένοι δύο τοῦ ναοῦ τῆς Πολιάδος οἰκοῦσιν οὐ πόρρω, καλοῦσι δὲ Ἀθηναῖοι σφᾶς ἀρρηφόρους· αὗται χρόνον μέν τινα δίαιταν ἔχουσι παρὰ τῇ θεῷ, κ.τ.λ. (supra p. 165).

[3] Plout. v. dec. orat. 4 Isocr. 839 C.

[4] Athen. 114 A—B τὸν ἀνάστατον (so J. Pierson for ναστὸν cod. P. ed. V. νάστον edd. Basil. L.) καλούμενον, ὃς ταῖς ἀρρηφόροις γίνεται, cp. Souid. s.v. ἀνάστατοι, Hesych. s.v. ἀνάστατοι, Paus. Gramm. frag. 94 Schwabe ap. Eustath. in Il. p. 1165, 10 f., Favorin. lex. p. 384, 33 f.

[5] Leaven is symbolic of rapid growth in Matthew 13. 33=Luke 13. 20 f. More often it is regarded as a type of corruption and therefore forbidden in ritual (e.g. Gell. 10. 15. 19 farinam fermento inbutam adtingere ei (sc. flamini Diali) fas non est). See C. F. Kent in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1914 vii. 889 a—890 a. But O. Broneer in Hesperia 1935 iv. 128 cp. Poll. 6. 73 ὁ γὰρ ὀρθοστάτης ἱεροῦ ἄρτου τι εἶδος and perhaps rightly assumes that such cakes were of phallic shape.

[6] Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 1 Add. no. 453 b, 13 f. = Inscr. Gr. ed. min. ii—iii. 2 no. 974, 18 f. = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 687, 18 f. ἔδωκε δὲ καὶ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ θυγατ[έρα ------- εἰς τὰ] | Ἐπιδαύρια ἀρρηφορο̣ῦσαν κ.τ.λ.

[7] O. Kern in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 45 f.

[8] Hesych. Ἑταιφίλη· (so W. R. Paton for Ἑται...· φίλη. cod.) ἡ Περσεφόνη. F. Hiller von Gaertringen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 712: 'Die Ἐτηφίλαι wären also Demeter und Kore. Sicherlich bezeichnet sie der Name als freundliche Göttinnen, wie Εὐμενίδες u. a. wohlbekannte. Dies wird auch in dem ersten Namenselement enthalten sein, das zu ἕται Angehörige (vgl. J. Schmidt bei L. Meyer Handb. d. gr. Etymol. 1 374 oben) zu stellen ist; sie beschützen also die Sippschaft. Wenn die Form Ἑταιφίλη bei Hesych. neben dem inschriftlichen Ἐτηφίλα richtig ist, haben wir eine Parallele zu den gleichzeitig auf Thera vorkommenden Personennamen Πραται- und Πρατη-μένης.'

[9] C. H. Oldfather in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. x. 1950.

[10] F. Bechtel in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. i. 92 no. 232, 3 f. = Inscr. Gr. ins. ii no. 255, 3 f. ἱέρεα{ν} τᾶν θέαν Ἐτ(η)φίλαν καὶ Καλ̣ρίσσαν καὶ ἐρ(σ)όφορον τ(ῶ)ν ἁγιωτάτων μυ(στ)αρίων. The inscription, which is throughout ill-spelt, actually reads ΕΤΙΦΙΛΑΝ and ΕΡΓΟΦΟΡΟΝ.

To understand these honours and prerogatives we must, I think, bear in mind the general similarity subsisting between the Thesmophoria and the Arrhephoria. The latter, like the former, appears to have been a ceremony intended to promote fertility[1]. In the Thesmophoria we have the worship of Demeter and Kore, the two Thesmophóro[2]. The Arrhephóros at Eleusis[3] and the Ersóphoros at Mytilene[4] were at least connected with the cult of the same pair of deities. An Athenian inscription of Roman date commemorates 'Aristokles' daughter, who served as Errhephóros for Demeter and Kore[5].' Seats in the theatre at Athens were in imperial times reserved for two Hersephóroi of Ge Themis (fig. 72)[6] and, immediately behind them,

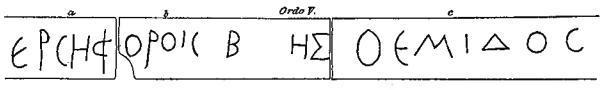

Fig. 72.

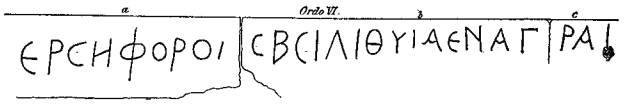

Fig. 73.

for two Hersephóroi of Eilithyia at Agrai (fig. 73)[7]. It would seem, therefore, that Dew-bearers stood in some relation to Mother Earth; and it is probable that they were regarded as fertilising agents. This squares with the fact that their rite took place near the sanctuary of Aphrodite in the Gardens[8]. The Thesmophoria too

[1] Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. xxxiv ff., ead. Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 131 ff., ead. Themis pp. 266, 275, Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 510.

[2] Aristoph. thesm. 83, 282, 295 f., 1156, 1230.

[3] Supra p. 167, n. 6 f.

[4] Supra p. 167, n. 10.

[5] Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 919 [τὴν δεῖνα] Ἀριστοκλέου ἐρρηφορήσασαν Δήμητρι καὶ Κόρῃ. W. Larfeld Handbuch der griechischen Epigraphik Leipzig 1898 ii. 1. 304 says: 'in Form einer W[eihung] an Demeter und Kore.' But, for the dative, cp. Moir. 141 p. 104 Pierson (supra p. 166, n. 3).

[6] Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 318 (with facsimile on pl. 1 = my fig. 72) ἑρσηφόροις β' [Γ]ῆς Θέμιδος in late careless script, W. Larfeld op. cit. ii. 1. 266 pl. 1.

[7] Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 319 (with facsimile on pl. 1 = my fig. 73) ἑρσηφόροις β' Εἰλιθυία[ς] ἐν Ἄγραι[ς] in late careless script, W. Larfeld op. cit. ii. 1. 266 pl. 1.

[8] Supra p. 165. The precise route followed by the Arrhephóroi is a matter for conjecture. If they lived 'not far from the temple of the Polias' and 'lodged for a time with the goddess' (Paus. 1. 27. 3), we may assume that their official quarters were in or near the Pandroseion. On the occasion of the Arrhephoria they may, no doubt, have quitted the Akropolis by way of the Propylaia and the western slope (A. Mommsen Heortologie Leipzig 1864 p. 447—an idea tacitly dropped by the same writer in his Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 509). But, in view of the close connexion between Aglauros, Pandrosos, and Herse (infra § 8 (b)), it is highly probable that the Arrhephóroi went viâ the Aglaurion. If so, their most direct and also most secluded exit would have been, not the pôros-walled stairway in an angle of the north wall 200 ft west of the north porch of the Erechtheion (J. H. Middleton Plans and Drawings of Athenian Buildings London 1900 pl. 1 no. 38), as has been maintained by various critics (W. Dörpfeld in the Ath. Mitth. 1887 xii. 59 pl. 1, H. G. Lolling 'Hellenische Landeskunde und Topographie' in I. Müller's Geographie und politische Geschichte des klassischen Altertums Nördlingen 1889 p. 351, Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. 163), but the stairway of later construction which led (by means of a hanging ladder?) right down into the cave at a point some 50 ft east of the pôros-stairway (J. H. Middleton op. cit. pl. 1 no. 42), as is urged by P. Kabbadias in the 'Εφ. 'Αρχ. 1897 p. 26 ff., M. L. D'Ooge (The Acropolis of Athens New York 1908 pp. 10, 297 with plan 7), and O. Broneer in Hesperia 1932 i. 51 f., 1935 iv. 129 with figs. 14 and 15. C. Belger 'Der Abstiegsweg der Arrhephoren, der Aufstieg der Perser' in the Berl. philol. Woch. Sept. 25, 1897 pp. 1212—1214 (followed by W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 p. 170 n. 4) is non-committal: 'Wir können also mit unseren Mitteln nicht konstatieren, welchen Weg die Arrhephoren wirklich gingen.'

Equally beset with uncertainties is the other end of their journey. Their destination, according to Paus. 1. 27. 3, was περίβολος ἐν τῇ πόλει τῆς καλουμένης ἐν Κήποις 'Αφροδίτης οὐ πόρρω. But Plin. nat. hist. 36. 16 (probably copying Varro, [? who copied Pasiteles (born c. 108 B.C.),] who copied Antigonos of Karystos (born c. 295 B.C.), who copied Douris of Samos (born c. 340 B.C.): see E. Sellers The Elder Pliny's Chapters on the History of Art London 1896 p. xlii f.) describes the same Aphrodite as being outside the city-wall: he speaks of Alkamenes 'cuius sunt opera Athenis complura in aedibus sacris praeclarumque Veneris extra muros, quae appellatur 'Αφροδίτη ἐν Κήποις. huic summam manum ipse Phidias inposuisse dicitur.' The discrepancy between ἐν τῇ πόλει and extra muros was explained by C. Wachsmuth Die Stadt Athen im Alterthum Leipzig 1874 i. 228 f., who pointed out that in the time of Pausanias the brick wall of Athens (Vitr. 2. 8. 9) had been cleared away to make room for the Hadrianic town (the novae Athenae of Corp. inscr. Lat. iii no. 549 = Orelli Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 511 = Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 337, cp. Ael. Spart. v. Hadrian. 20. 4 multas civitates Hadrianopolis appellavit, ut ipsam Karthaginem et Athenarum partem, Phlegon frag. 21 (Frag. hist. Gr. iii. 607 Müller) ap. Steph. Byz. s.v. 'Ολυμπίειον· τόπος ἐν Δήλῳ, ὃν κτίσαντες 'Αθηναῖοι χρήμασιν 'Αδριανοῦ νέας 'Αθήνας 'Αδριανὰς ἐκάλεσαν, ὡς Φλέγων ἐν 'Ολυμπιάδων πεντεκαιδεκάτῳ). The precinct, on this showing, adjoined the garden-quarter on the right bank of the Ilissos (H. Hitzig and H. Blümner on Paus. 1. 19. 2), and somewhere in that neighbourhood must have been the natural underground descent, through which the girls went to leave their burdens and bring back something wrapt up (Paus. 1. 27. 3 καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ (sc. τοῦ περιβόλου) κάθοδος ὑπόγαιος αὐτομάτη· ταύτῃ κατίασιν αἱ παρθένοι. κάτω μὲν δὴ τὰ φερόμενα λείπουσιν, λαβοῦσαι δὲ ἄλλο τι κομίζουσιν ἐγκεκαλυμμένον). The actual chasm or fissure has not yet been located. But E. A. Gardner Ancient Athens London 1902 p. 251 n. 1 throws out an interesting suggestion: 'It seems probable that the shrine in question may have been that of earth (Ge Olympia), and the cleft may be the same one by which the waters of Deucalion's deluge were said to have disappeared' (Paus. 1. 18. 7 ἔστι δὲ ἀρχαῖα ἐν τῷ περιβόλῳ Διὸς χαλκοῦς καὶ ναὸς Κρόνου καὶ 'Ρέας καὶ τέμενος Γῆς (so J. A. Letronne for τῆν codd. E. Clavier cj. γῆς τὴν, W. M. Leake cj. τῆς Γῆς) ἐπίκλησιν 'Ολυμπίας. ἐνταῦθα ὅσον ἐς πῆχυν τὸ ἔδαφος διέστηκε, καὶ λέγουσι μετὰ τὴν ἐπομβρίαν τὴν ἐπὶ Δευκαλίωνος συμβᾶσαν ὑπορρυῆναι ταύτῃ τὸ ὕδωρ, ἐσβάλλουσί τε ἐς αὐτὸ ἀνὰ πᾶν ἔτος ἅλφιτα πυρῶν μέλιτι μίξαντες (I. Bekker, followed by H. C. Schubart and H. Hitzig—H. Blümner, cj. μάξαντες cp. 5. 15. 10, 9. 39. 11)).

Recently O. Broneer of the American School at Athens has found on the N. slope of the Akrópolis, E. of the Erechtheion, 'directly below the point where the Acropolis wall makes the obtuse angle at which are the traces of the Mycenaean postern gate,' a small sanctuary of Eros and Aphrodite attested by numerous niches in the rock and two rock-cut inscriptions dating from the middle of s. V B.C. (Hesperia 1932 i. 31—55 with figs. 1—17, of which fig. 2 gives a ground-plan and figs. 10 and 11 facsimiles of the inscriptions on rock B: (1) τôι Ἔροτι ἒε εορτὲ | [τ]ετράδι ἱσταμέν[ο] | Μονιχιôν[ο]ς μεν[ός] and (2) Ἀφροδ[ί]τ[ει]). Adjoining the sanctuary, on the west was a small area (Z) which yielded a Hellenistic relief of Eros; on the east, a cave in which were found a small votive shield of painted stone and fragments of undecorated shields in terra cotta, also the figurine of a sleeping babe. North-east of the cave was a space dotted with small stuccoed altars(?) of various shapes (α—π), oval, rectangular, triangular, or like a low wall, poorly built and resting on loose earth. These had carried small stones (phalloí?) set upright in mortar—one was still in situ—and, further east, close to another group of niches (N) was a phallós of island marble (id. ib. 1933 ii. 329—417 with pl. xi (extended plan) and figs. 1—91, of which figs. 9, 14, 18=my fig. 74 a, b, c, id. ib. 1935 iv. 109—188 with pl. i (=my pl. xxi) and figs. 1—77, of which figs. 8 and 9 show the 'altars.' See further infra § 9 (h) ii (θ) sub fin.). It is highly probable that the relief-frieze with a procession of Erotes, c. 350—300 B.C. (Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 453 ff. nos. 1451, 1452 pl. 102), and the relief of a draped woman, with a child, sitting on a rock with a cave in it (National Museum no. 3257) came from the same sanctuary of Eros and Aphrodite (O. Broneer loc. cit. 1935 iv. 143 ff. no. 17 figs. 33—35 and 36).

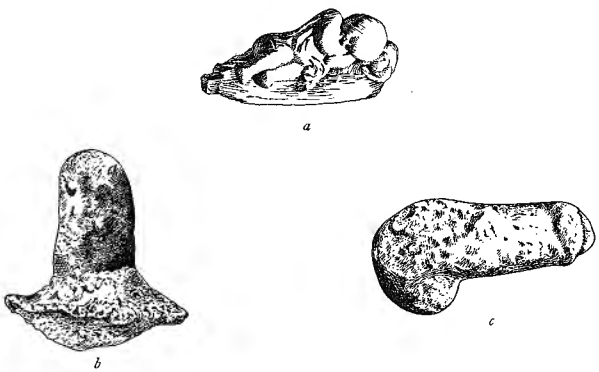

Fig. 74.

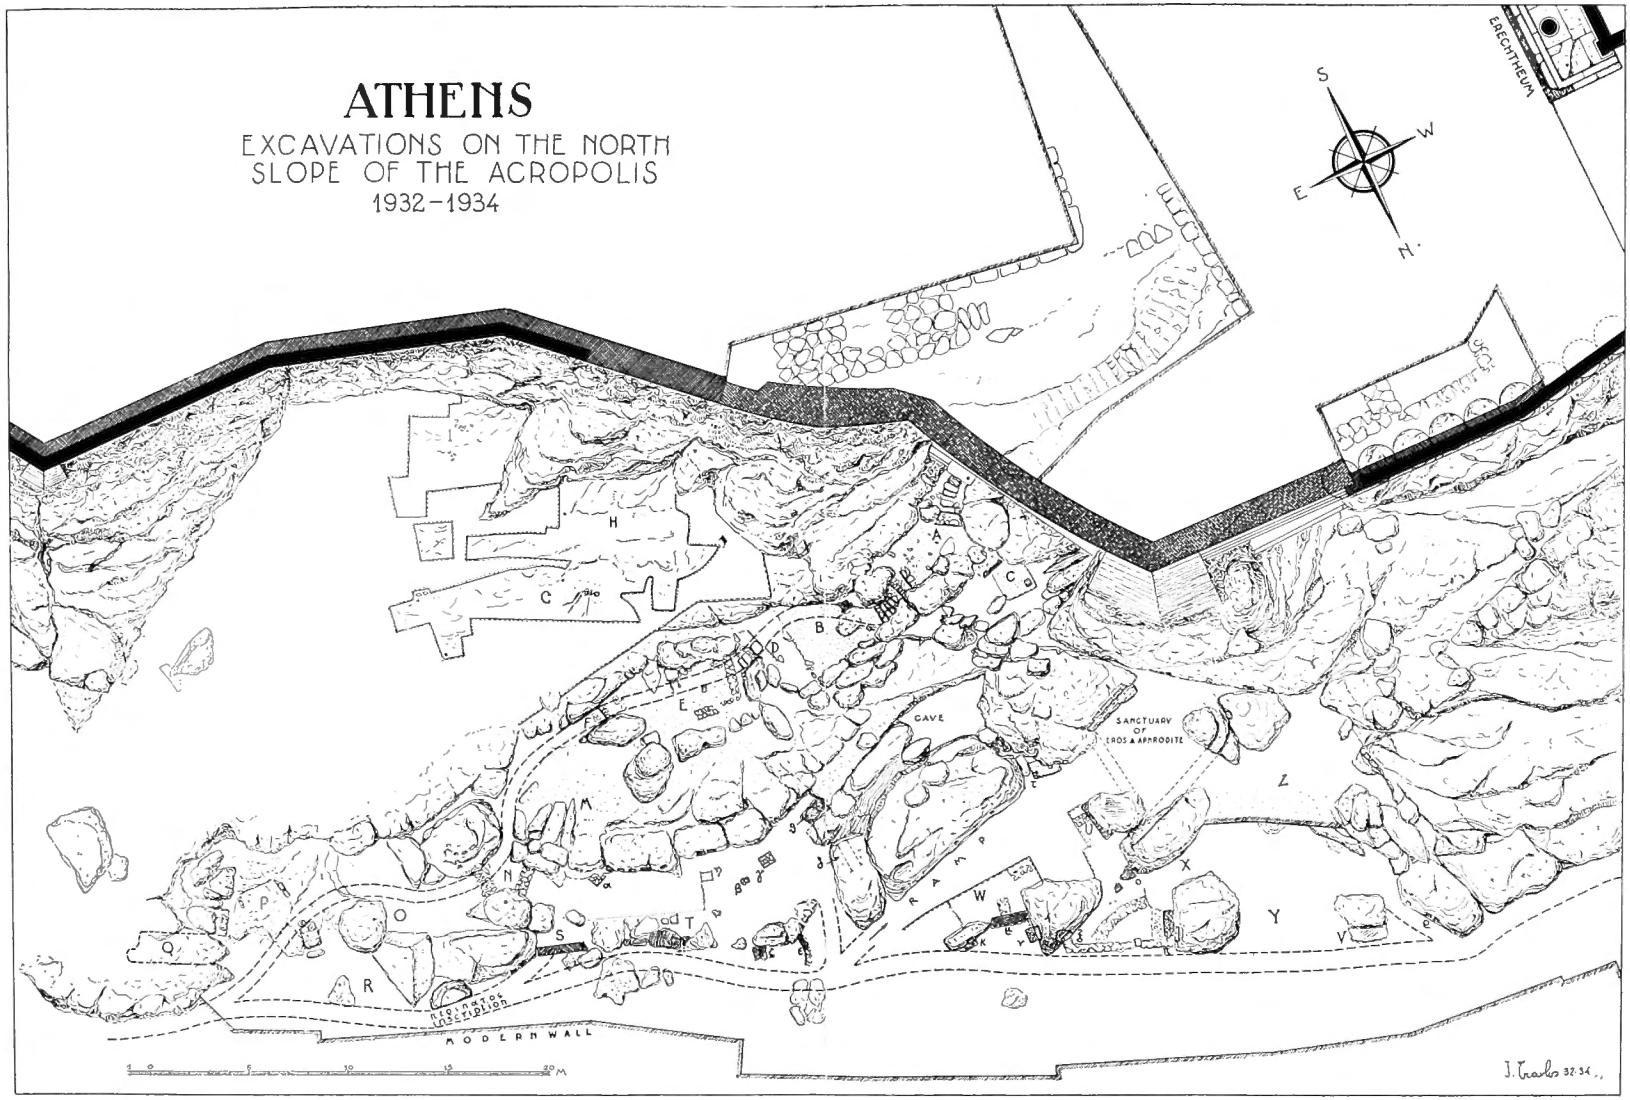
As to the bearing of these finds on the Arrhephoria, Broneer loc. cit. i. 52 (cp. iv. 126) writes: 'The whole action of the ceremony becomes clear if we admit that the sanctuary just discovered is the peribolos mentioned by Pausanias. Below the underground stairs to the Aglaurion a modern path leads eastward to the new sanctuary, and it is reasonable to suppose that the same path may have existed in ancient times, connecting with the rock-cut περίπατος below. The immense chasm, through which the descent from the Acropolis began, might well have lent color to Pausanias' weird description of the place. The only inaccuracy which remains is the impression which the Greek text gives that the subterranean passage and the sanctuary are immediately contiguous, while actually one must first pass through the one and thence by a short path reach the other[2] ([2]Doubtless the passage in the sanctuary itself was somehow used in the ceremony; but until we know how it connected with the cave to the east it is unsafe to make any definite statement about it). It can hardly be a coincidence that a sanctuary of Aphrodite which fits so well the account



Plan of the American excavations on the north slope of the Akropolis
(from Hesperia 1935 iv pl. i).

See page 169 ff. n. 0.

in Pausanias should be found close to the place where we would naturally expect the Arrephoroi to have descended. We can only conclude that there were two sanctuaries of Aphrodite ἐν Κήποις, a more ancient one, which we have just discovered on the Acropolis slope, and a later one, with a temple containing the famous statue of Alkamenes, near the Ilissus.' Broneer ib. p. 53 f. adds: 'The objection will naturally be raised that the text of Pausanias does not admit of such an interpretation.' He replies that most probably 'Pausanias himself confused the two sanctuaries.' Vix liquet.

Aphrodite ἐν Κήποις is seldom mentioned by the classical authors. But an inscription of c. 420—417 B.C. informs us that during the years 426/5—423/2 the expenses of the Peloponnesian War were in part met by money borrowed from her temple-treasury at a nominal rate of interest—$\frac{1}{100}$th of a drachmé per mnâ per day (Corp. inscr. Att. i no. 273 f, 12 f. = Michel Recueil d' Inscr. gr. no. 561, 78 = Roberts—Gardner Gk. Epigr. ii. 299 ff. no. 109, 78 [Ἀφροδί]τ̣ης ἐν Κήποις ΤΤ[Η][Δ]ΔΔΓ|. τόκος τούτου Γ[Η][ΗΗ |||||C], cp. W. Larfeld Handbuch der griechischen Epigraphik Leipzig 1898 ii. 1. 44). Near her temple stood a square herm of Aphrodite, which bore an inscription stating that Aphrodite Οὐρανία was the eldest of the Moirai (Paus. 1. 19. 2, cp. Loukian. dial. mer. 7. 1 τῇ Οὐρανίᾳ δὲ τῇ ἐν Κήποις δάμαλιν): some notion of this herm may be had from the Dareios-kratér (supra ii. 854 pl. xxxviii).

Of Alkamenes' masterpiece we know practically nothing (Plin. nat. hist. 36. 16, Paus. 1. 19. 2, Loukian. imagg. 4, 6). Sundry critics have somewhat carelessly assumed that it was none other than the herm just mentioned (J. Sillig Catalogus Artificum Dresdae et Lipsiae 1827 p. 31, H. Brunn Geschichte der griechischen Künstler Stuttgart 1857 i. 235, H. Hitzig—H. Blümner on Paus. 1. 19. 2). The ablest defence of this view is that put up by A. Trendelenburg in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1908 xxiii Arch. Anz. pp. 514—520 (Am. Journ. Arch. 1909 xiii. 494, A. de Ridder in the Rev. Ét. Gr. 1910 xxiii. 192, A. J. Reinach ib. p. 321), who cp. the herm from Pergamon inscribed in lettering of s. ii A.D. εἰδήσεις Ἀλκαμένεος | περικαλλὲς ἄγαλμα | Ἑρμᾶν τὸν πρὸ πυλῶν· | ἔδρατο Περγάμιος. || γνῶθι σαυτόν (bibliography in Mendel Cat. Sculpt. Constantinople ii. 234 ff. no. 527 fig. and in C. Picard La sculpture antique Paris 1926 ii. 57). But a half-length herm of Aphrodite (Loukian. imagg. 6 implies arms and hands) dating from the fifth century would be hard to parallel (? cp. Clarac Mus. de Sculpt. pl. 634 B fig. 1386 C = Reinach Rép. Stat. i. 347 no. 4 a herm in the Villa Albani on which see J. J. Bernoulli Aphrodite Leipzig 1873 p. 7). Others have sought to recover the aspect of the lost statue from the Aphrodite of Melos (Sir C. Walston (Waldstein) Alcamenes and the establishment of the classical type in Greek art Cambridge 1926 p. 211 'I am inclined to think it not improbable that the sculptor of the Aphrodite of Melos was inspired by the Aphrodite in the Gardens of Alcamenes'), or with more probability from the type of Aphrodite leaning, sometimes on an archaistic effigy of herself (A. Milchhöfer in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1892 vii. 208 n. 9, E. Reisch in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1898 i. 77 f.: e.g. Ant. Skulpt. Berlin p. 226 f. no. 586 fig.), sometimes on a pillar with a tree in the background (H. Schrader Phidias Frankfurt am Main 1924 pp. 205—210 with fig. 189 = Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. no. 1601 pl. 165, S. Wide in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1910 p. 52 no. 13, an inscribed votive relief from Daphni on the road between Athens and Eleusis), or again—and this is the most frequent contention—from the type best represented by the Aphrodite of Fréjus (?) (Mrs L. M. Mitchell A History of Ancient Sculpture London 1883 p. 320, S. Reinach Manuel de philologie classique Paris 1884 ii. 94, id. in the Gazette des Beaux-Arts 1896 ii. 326—328 = id. Monuments nouveaux de l'art antique Paris 1924 i. 258—260 ('Je pense que ce motif a été créé par Alcamène, rajeuni par Praxitèle et repris de nouveau par Arcésilas'), A. Furtwängler in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 412 f., id. in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1888 iii. 212, id. Masterpieces of Gk. Sculpt. pp. 19 f., 82, 275 n. 10, E. von Mach A Handbook of Greek and Roman Sculpture Boston 1905 p. 121 f. pl. 108, H. Bulle Der schöne Mensch im Altertum[2] München und Leipzig 1912 pp. 263 ff., 682 f. pl. 124. Other examples of the type are collected and discussed by J. J. Bernoulli Aphrodite Leipzig 1873 pp. 86—98 ('Der Typus der ungegürteten, ihren probably included a visit to the goddesses of Cape Kolias, that is, to Aphrodite and the Genetyllides[1]. Aphrodite in particular was the maker of morning dew[2]; and her altar (figs. 84, 85)[3] on Mount Mantel lüftenden Aphrodite'), S. Reinach 'La Vénus drapée au Musée du Louvre' in the Gaz. Arch. 1887 xii. 250—262, 271—285 pl. 30, A. Conze 'Zur sogenannten Venus Genetrix' in the Ath. Mitth. 1889 xiv. 199—204 pl. 4, Miss C. G. Harcum 'A statue of the type called the Venus Genetrix in the Royal Ontario Museum' in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1927 xxxi. 141—152 pl. 7 figs. 1—4).

Equally persistent, and hardly more encouraging, have been the attempts made to discover representations of the Arrhephóroi. Many have identified them with the two stool-bearing girls on the eastern frieze of the Parthenon (supra ii. 1135 f. pl. xliv. So J. Stuart—N. Revett The Antiquities of Athens London 1787 ii. 12 f. with ch. 1 pl. 24 ('The young figures are the two Arrephorœ, or Canephorœ,' etc.), C. O. Müller Minervae Poliadis sacra et aedem in arce Athenarum...Gottingae 1820 p. 14 ('Puellae sunt ersephoroe..., matrona sacerdos Poliadis'), E. Beulé L'Acropole d'Athènes Paris 1854 ii. 142 ('la grande prêtresse reçoit des deux vierges Errhéphores les objets mystérieux' etc.), E. Petersen Die Kunst des Pheidias am Parthenon und zu Olympia Berlin 1873 p. 304 f. ('Wo finden wir denn im athenischen Cultus überhaupt und speciell in demjenigen Athenas, an welchen hier jeder zu denken gehalten ist, halberwachsene Mädchen, wie die beiden Stuhlträgerinnen offenbar sind, die bei hohem Feste eine so bevorzugte Rolle spielen könnten? Es giebt keine ausser den Arrephoren. Auf diese aber passt alles;' etc.), Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 211 n. 0 ('Die beiden Errhephoren sind vielleicht auf dem Ostfries des Parthenon dargestellt'). See further A. Michaelis Der Parthenon Leipzig 1871 p. 264). Others have seen them in the processional figures of the olive-tree pediment (T. Wiegand Die archaische Poros-Architektur der Akropolis zu Athen Cassel and Leipzig 1904 p. 197 ff. col. pl. 14, G. Dickins Catalogue of the Acropolis Museum Cambridge 1912 i. 69 ff. fig., E. Buschor 'Der Oelbaumgiebel' in the Ath. Mitth. 1922 xlvii. 81 ff. pl. 6. So J. E. Harrison Primitive Athens as described by Thucydides Cambridge 1906 p. 56 f. fig. 20 ('We think instinctively of the Arrephorοi'), E. Petersen Die Burgtempel der Athenaia Berlin 1907 p. 21 ff. fig. 2 (ib. p. 27 'die zwei gleich gekleideten, nicht gleich geschmückten Mädchen mögen wir Kanephoren nennen, oder aber wegen ihrer Kleinheit und unentwickelten Formen lieber Errephoren'), G. W. Elderkin Problems in Periclean Buildings Princeton 1912 p. 13 f. (agrees with Petersen)). Others again have recognised them in the Caryatids of the Erechtheion (E. Beulé L'Acropole d'Athènes Paris 1854 ii. 254 ('Sont-ce les vierges errhéphores...? Leurs têtes portent-elles le fardeau de l'architrave en réminiscence du fardeau mystérieux que leur confiait la grande prêtresse? Tout me le ferait croire,' etc.), G. W. Elderkin Problems in Periclean Buildings Princeton 1912 p. 14 ff. ('The interpretation of the Caryatids as Arrephoroi is confirmed by a scene (Fig. 5) on an archaic amphora' (sc. a Boeotian relief-vase from Thebes, now in a private English collection, published in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1898 xxii. 458 ff. figs. 8—10 pls. 6 and 6 bis by A. de Ridder, who ib. p. 468 f. cp. 'les canéphores, et peut-être les arrhéphores')), H. N. Fowler in J. M. Paton The Erechtheum Cambridge, Massachusetts 1927 p. 235 n. 0 (non-committal)).

Personally, I suspect that the Arrhephóroi in attendance on Athena were an extremely ancient institution, dating back to 'Minoan' times and comparable with the two handmaidens of the 'Minoan' goddess (Sir A. J. Evans in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1925 xlv. 11—14 figs. 11—15).

[1] Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 319 f. On Genetyllis and the Genetyllides in relation to Aphrodite see W. H. Roscher in his Lex. Myth. ii. 1269—1273, O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 1150 f., Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 377, 513, Gilbert Gr. Götterl. p. 394, Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1356 n. 6.

[2] Pervig. Ven. 15 ff. ipsa roris lucidi, | noctis aura quem relinquit, spargit umentis aquas. | gutta praeceps orbe parvo sustinet casus suos, | et micant lacrimae trementes de caduco pondere (so F. Bücheler, transposing lines 17 and 18, and retaining et codd., for which E. C. F. Schulze, followed by E. Bährens, cj. en, while O. Müller, followed by J. W. Mackail, cj. emicant). | ... umor ille, quem serenis astra rorant noctibus, | mane virgines (so J. Lipsius, followed by J. W. Mackail, for virgineas codd.) papillas solvit umenti peplo. Cp. what is said of the planet Venus in Auson. append. 2. 17 f. Evelyn White (p. 410 Peiper) ros unus, color unus, et unum mane duorum; | sideris et floris nam domina una Venus.

A late red-figured hydría from Euboia (Collignon—Couve Cat. Vases d'Athènes p. 589 no. 1852, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 635 fig. 170 (from a sketch by Mrs Hugh Stewart)) shows Eros watering slender flowers that spring from the ground. A female figure with bare breast (Aphrodite?) directs his efforts. On the left sits a young man with a thýrsos. On the right stands a young woman with a týmpanon. Apparently Aphrodite and Eros are gardening with a Dionysiac entourage.

Differently conceived but somewhat similar in effect is the design found on a bronze medallion of Faustina Iunior (Brit. Mus. Cat. Medallions p. 16 no. 2 pl. 24, 1 ('Venus

Fig. 75.

Fig. 76.

Fig. 77.

Genetrix?...in a garden')=Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 40 no. 13 pl. 68, 1 ('Venere')=my fig. 75. The specimen has been retouched). Venus, half-draped, stands to the front, her right hand raised to hold a small tree, which rises from (behind?) a base. On the left of her two Cupids are playing, on the right four more, one of whom leans over the battlements of a wall or tower. Above it appear other trees. The scene recurs with some variations on a bronze medallion of Lucilla, daughter of Faustina Iunior (Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 95 f. fig. (=my fig. 76) ('Vénus dans un jardin'), Gnecchi op. cit. ii. 51 no. 11 pl. 76, 8 (=my fig. 77) Bologna ('Donna...in un giardino')). A girl is added, filling her pitcher from a stream in the foreground. These medallions are probably time-serving attempts to identify first Faustina and then her daughter with Venus. Faustina at least was actually worshipped along with her husband M. Aurelius in the temple of Venus and the Dea Roma (Dion Cass. 71. 31 τῷ δὲ Μάρκῳ καὶ τῇ Φαυστίνῃ ἐψηφίσατο ἡ βουλὴ ἐν τε τῷ Ἀφροδισίῳ τῷ τε Ῥωμαίῳ εἰκόνας ἀργυρᾶς ἀνατεθῆναι καὶ βωμὸν ἱδρυθῆναι, καὶ ἐπ' αὐτοῦ πάσας τὰς κόρας τὰς ἐν τῷ ἄστει γαμουμένας μετὰ τῶν νυμφίων θύειν), and had coins inscribed VENVS, VENVS FELIX, VENVS GENETRIX, VENVS VICTRIX or VENERI AVGVSTAE, VENERI FELICI, VENERI GENETRICI, VENERI VICTRICI (Rasche Lex. Num. iii. 921, Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] iii. 154 ff. nos. 226—283). Here are a few examples: fig. 78 from the Vautier—Collignon Sale Catalogue 1922 p. 52 no. 980 pl. 35, fig. 79 from the Bement Sale Catalogue 1924 iii. 59 no. 1066 pl. 39, fig. 80 from Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 39 no. 8 pl. 67, 6, fig. 81 from the Levis Sale Catalogue 1925 p. 40 no. 632 pl. 26, fig. 82 from the Bement Sale Catalogue 1924 iii. 59 no. 1068 pl. 39, fig. 83 from the Hirsch Sale Catalogue 1908 p. 10 no. 117 pl. 7. Since coins of this sort are apt to reproduce previous art-types (e.g. fig. 78 recalls the Aphrodite of Fréjus (?), fig. 83 is an adaptation from the Aphrodite of Capua, and fig. 80 owes something even to the Zeus of Olympia), I incline to think that the Eryx (figs. 86, 87)[1] was 'covered with dew and fresh grass[2]'— medallions representing Venus in the Garden presuppose a Greek fresco of Aphrodite ἐν Κήποις. The trees, the river, the wall or tower with battlements would all suit the famous sanctuary beside the Ilissos.

[3] Silver litrai of Eryx, struck c. 480—413 B.C., have obv. EPVKINON (retrograde) or ERVKAIIB (partly retrograde) a female figure (? hierodule) sacrificing, with or

Fig. 78.

Fig. 79.

Fig. 80.

Fig. 81.

Fig. 82.

Fig. 83.

Fig. 84.

Fig. 85.

without a phiale, at a lighted altar; the space behind her is sometimes filled by a floral pattern: rev. a hound beneath a four-spoked wheel, or ivy-branch, or honeysuckle ornament, once with volutes in exergue (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Sicily p. 62 nos. 6, 7 with fig. (=my fig. 84), 8, 9, G. F. Hill Coins of Ancient Sicily London 1903 p. 90 fig. 11, Weber Cat. Coins i. 274 no. 1305 pl. 50, Naville Sale Catalogue 1923 p. 36 no. 878 pl. 26 (=my fig. 85), Head Hist. num.[2] p. 138).

[1] A denarius struck by C. Considius Nonianus c. 60 B.C. shows obv. C · CONSIDI · NONIANI || S · C head of Venus Erycina to right, with ear-ring, stephane, and wreath; rev. mountain with fortified gateway, inscribed ERVC, below and tetrastyle temple above

(T. L. Donaldson Architectura numismatica London 1859 p. 110 ff. fig. 32, Babelon Monn. rép. rom. i. 375 f. fig., M. Bahrfeldt Nachträge und Berichtigungen zur Münzkunde Wien 1897 p. 87, Brit. Mus. Cat. Rom. Coins Rep. i. 473 nos. 3830 pl. 47, 21, 3831, 3832, H. Mattingly Roman Coins London 1928 p. 86 pl. 21, 17, Bement Sale Catalogue 1924 iii. 9 no. 126 pl. 5 (=my fig. 86)). Fig. 87 is from a specimen of mine. For the extant remains of ring-walls and temple-platform see C. Hülsen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi 604 and especially J. Kromayer 'Eryx' in Klio 1909 ix. 461—477 with map and figs. 1—4.

[2] This striking expression occurs in the remarkable account of Aphrodite's precinct included by Ail. de nat. an. 10. 50 ἀνὰ πᾶν ἔτος καὶ ἡμέραν πᾶσαν θύουσι τῇ θεῷ καὶ οἱ ἐπιχώριοι καὶ οἱ ξένοι. καὶ ὁ μὲν βωμὸς ὑπὸ τῷ οὐρανῷ ὁ μέγιστός ἐστι, πολλῶν δὲ ἐπ' αὐτοῦ καθαγιζομένων θυμάτων ὁ δὲ πανημέριος καὶ ἐς νύκτα ἐξάπτεται. ἕως δὲ ὑπολάμπει, καὶ ἐκεῖνος οὐκ ἀνθρακιάν, οὐ σποδόν, οὐχ ἡμικαύτων τρύφη δαλῶν ὑποφαίνει, δρόσου δὲ ἀνάπλεώς ἐστι καὶ πόας νεαρᾶς, ἥπερ οὖν ἀναφύεται ὅσαι νύκτες. τά γε μὴν ἱερεῖα ἑκάστης ἀγέλης αὐτόματα φοιτᾷ καὶ τῷ βωμῷ παρέστηκεν, ἄγει δὲ ἄρα αὐτὰ πρώτη μὲν ἡ θεός, εἶτα ἡ δύναμίς τε καὶ ἡ τοῦ θύοντος βούλησις. κ.τ.λ. We gather that every morning the open-air altar of the goddess, despite the numerous burnt-offerings of the previous day, was found—or was

Fig. 86.

Fig. 87.

Fig. 88.

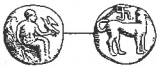

Fig. 89.

said to be found—overgrown with dewy verdure. Anent this miracle E. Ciaceri Culti e miti nella storia dell' antica Sicilia Catania 1911 p. 87 notes the beneficent influence of dew on Sicilian vegetation and adds: 'Nella divina rugiada si vedeva la protezione della dea; ed è forse degno di rilievo che sino ai nostri giorni nel popolo di Trapani si è serbata fede alla brezza notturna; onde si è creduto ch' essa scenda come benedizione del cielo sugli abiti e vestiti che si espongano all' aria aperta durante la notte[1]' ([1] Pitrè Bibliot. delle trad. pop. sic. XII (Palermo 1881) p. 261).'

That Aphrodite Ἐρυκίνη (Inscr. Gr. Sic. It. no. 281 Eryx [Κάρ]πιμος Ἀρίστωνο[ς] | [Ἀ]φροδίται Ἐρ(υ)κίν[αι], Diod. 4. 83, Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἔρυξ, cp. Paus. 8. 24. 6 and Strab. 272. For Venus Erycina see Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. nos. 939, 3163—3165, De Vit Onomasticon ii. 756, Carter Epith. deor. p. 101, O. Jessen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 562 ff.) was in some sense a goddess of vegetation appears also from the fact that on litrai of c. 413—400 B.C. she is seated with a dove on her hand and a tree behind her (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Sicily p. 62 f. nos. 10 f. and 12, G. F. Hill Coins of Ancient Sicily London 1903 p. 136 pl. 9, 10 (=my fig. 88), Hunter Cat. Coins i. 181 pl. 13, 8, Weber Cat. Coins i. 275 nos. 1310 pl. 50, 1312 pl. 50, 1313 pl. 50 (= my fig. 89), McClean Cat. Coins i. 263 no. 2234 pl. 72, 7, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 138). Note too the frequency of floral ornaments, volutes, etc. on the various litrai (e.g. figs. 85, 91). The plant λυχνίς, 'rose-campion,' which flourished on Mt Eryx, was said to have sprung from the bath of Aphrodite after sleeping with Hephaistos (Amerias ῥιζοτομικὸν ap. Athen. 681 F: on Amerias see O. Hoffmann Die Makedonen, ihre Sprache und ihr Volkstum Göttingen 1906 p. 2 ff.).

The dove had a special significance in this cult and was in all probability viewed as an embodiment of the goddess (F. Dümmler in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. i. 2765)—witness Ail. de nat. an. 4. 2 ἐν Ἔρυκι τῆς Σικελίας ἑορτή ἐστιν, ἣν καλοῦσιν Ἀναγώγια Ἐρυκίνοί τε αὐτοὶ καὶ μέντοι καὶ ὅσοι ἐν τῇ Σικελίᾳ πάσῃ. ἡ δὲ αἰτία, τὴν Ἀφροδίτην λέγουσιν ἐντεῦθεν ἐς Λιβύην ἀπαίρειν ἐν ταῖσδε ταῖς ἡμέραις. δοξάζουσι δὲ ἄρα ταῦτα ταύτῃ τεκμαιρόμενοι. περιστερῶν πλῆθός ἐστιν ἐνταῦθα πάμπλειστον. οὐκοῦν αἱ μὲν οὐχ ὁρῶνται, λέγουσι δὲ Ἐρυκῖνοι τὴν θεὸν δορυφοροῦσας ἀπελθεῖν· ἀθύρματα γὰρ Ἀφροδίτης περιστερὰς εἶναι ᾄδουσί τε ἐκεῖνοι καὶ πεπιστεύκασι πάντες ἄνθρωποι. διελθουσῶν δὲ ἡμερῶν ἐννέα μίαν μὲν διαπρεπῆ τὴν ὥραν ἔκ γε τοῦ πελάγους τοῦ κομίζοντος ἐκ τῆς Λιβύης ὁρᾶσθαι ἐσπετομένην, οὐχ οἵαν κατὰ τὰς ἀγελαίας πελειάδας τὰς λοιπὰς εἶναι, πορφυρᾶν δέ, ὥσπερ οὖν τὴν Ἀφροδίτην ὁ Τήιος ἡμῖν Ἀνακρέων ᾄδει, πορφυρέην που λέγων (frag. 2 Bergk[4], 2 Edmonds, 2 Diehl). καὶ χρυσῷ δὲ εἰκασμένη φανείη ἄν, καὶ τοῦτό γε κατὰ τὴν Ὁμήρου θεὸν τὴν αὐτήν, ἣν ἐκεῖνος ἀναμέλπει χρυσῆν (Il. 3. 64, 5. 427, 9. 389, 19. 282, 22. 470, 24. 699, Od. 4. 14, 8. 337, 342, 17. 37, 19. 54, h. Aphr. 93). ἕπεται δὲ αὐτῇ τῶν περιστερῶν τὰ νέφη τῶν λοιπῶν, καὶ ἑορτὴ πάλιν Ἐρυκίνοις καὶ πανήγυρις τὰ Καταγώγια, ἐκ τοῦ ἔργου καὶ τοῦτο τὸ ὄνομα.

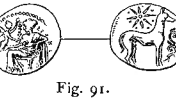

Fig. 90.

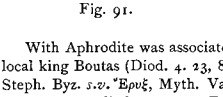

Fig. 91.

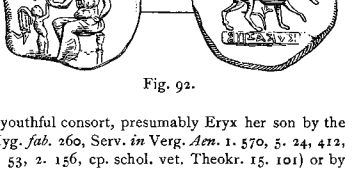

Fig. 92.

With Aphrodite was associated a youthful consort, presumably Eryx her son by the local king Boutas (Diod. 4. 23, 83, Hyg. fab. 260, Serv. in Verg. Aen. 1. 570, 5. 24, 412, Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἔρυξ, Myth. Vat. 1. 53, 2. 156, cp. schol. vet. Theokr. 15. 101) or by Poseidon (Apollod. 2. 5. 10, Dion Cass. frag. 4. 2 Bekker, Serv. in Verg. Aen. 5. 24, interp. Serv. in Verg. Aen. 1. 570, Myth. Vat. 1. 94, 1. 107, 2. 156, Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 866, 958, 1232), rather than Aineias (Diod. 4. 83, Strab. 608, Cic. in Verr. 2. 4. 72, Verg. Aen. 5. 759 ff., Fest. p. 340 b 3 ff. Müller, p. 458, 31 ff. Lindsay, Hyg. fab. 260, cp. Serv. in Verg. Aen. 5. 760): see F. Dümmler loc. cit. A rare litra of c. 413—400 B.C. shows Aphrodite drawing towards herself a naked youth, whom I take to be Eryx (H. Riggauer in the Zeitschr. f. Num. 1881 viii. 72 f. pl. 1, 2 'Sollten wir hier vielleicht Eryx zu erblicken haben ... oder haben wir hier den Nachklang einer früheren mythologischen Entwicklungsphase des Eros...?,' Imhoof-Blumer Monn. gr. p. 17 pl. A, 19 'figure virile,' Head Hist. num.[2] p. 138 'wingless Eros'. Fig. 90 is from a specimen in my collection). Another, of the same period, turns Eryx into Eros—an easy transformation (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Sicily p. 63 no. 13, Weber Cat. Coins i. 275 no. 1311 pl. 50, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 138. Fig. 91 is from a specimen of mine); and this type is comparable with that of a unique tetradrachm inscribed ΙRVkAΣIIB retrograde (G. F. Hill Coins of Ancient Sicily London 1903 p. 136 pl. 9, 11 (= my fig. 92), Head Hist. num.[2] p. 138).

A further point of interest in the cult was its ancient service of hierodules (Strab. 272 οἰκεῖται δὲ καὶ ὁ Ἔρυξ λόφος ὑψηλός, ἱερὸν ἔχων Ἀφροδίτης τιμώμενον διαφερόντως, ἱεροδούλων γυναικῶν πλῆρες τὸ παλαιόν, ἃς ἀνέθεσαν κατ' εὐχὴν οἵ τ' ἐκ τῆς Σικελίας καὶ ἔξωθεν πολλοί· νυνὶ δ' ὥσπερ αὐτὴ ἡ κατοικία λειπανδρεῖ καὶ τὸ ἱερόν (so the second hand in cod. B. ἡ τὸ ἱερόν codd. A. Koraës marked the whole phrase as suspicious. H. L. Jones simply omits ἡ), καὶ τῶν ἱερῶν σωμάτων ἐκλέλοιπε τὸ πλῆθος) and their later equivalents (Diod. 4. 83, Cic. in Q. Caecil. divin. 55).

Lastly it should be observed that Eryx, who is described as king of the Elymoi (Apollod. 2. 5. 10, Dion Cass. frag. 4. 2 Bekker, Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 1232) or Sikanoi (cp. Paus. 8. 24. 2) or at least of some part of Sicily (Diod. 4. 23, 83, Paus. 4. 36. 4, a phrase that reminds us of Demeter Chlóe, Demeter the 'Grass,' at Athens[1].

Myth. Vat. 1. 94, 1. 107), not only founded the town and temple of Eryx (Diod. 4. 83, Myth. Vat. 2. 156), but was also buried on the mountain (Hyg. fab. 260, Serv. in Verg. Aen. 1. 570, Myth. Vat. 2. 156).

All these traits are consistent with the view (R. v. Scala in the Historische Zeitschrift 1912 cviii. 18, Lübker Reallex.[8] p. 344) that Aphrodite Ἐρυκίνη was a mountain-mother of the 'Minoan' kind, who as such would have her sacred tree and doves and páredros. In a long-established cult sundry features may well have been imported from alien sources. The service of hierodules is suggestive of oriental influence (H. Hepding in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 1467, D. G. Hogarth in J. Hastings Encyclopædia of Religion and Ethics Edinburgh 1913 vi. 671 b—672 b), and many scholars have been content to regard this Aphrodite as a Hellenised form of the Phoenician Astarte (e.g. W. H. Roscher in his Lex. Myth. i. 396, T. G. Pinches in J. Hastings op. cit. 1908 i. 767 a, L. B. Paton ib. 1909 ii. 118 a, W. W. Baudissin Adonis und Esmun Leipzig 1911 pp. 18 f., 23 n. 1, 26, 38, 273); even Nilsson Gr. Feste p. 374 dismisses her as 'ganz semitisch.' But the hound on coins of Eryx should hardly be compared with the sacred dogs of Hephaistos (Hadran) on Mt Aitne (supra ii. 630): it is simply due to the dependence of Eryx on Segesta, whose city-badge was a similar hound (C. Hülsen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 603).

The tradition that the eponymous Eryx was defeated by Herakles (Hdt. 5. 43) in a wrestling-match for the kingdom (Paus. 3. 16. 4 f., 4. 36. 4), or for possession of the bull which had broken away from the cattle of Geryones (Apollod. 2. 5. 10, cp. Lyk. Al. 866 f.: see further K. Tümpel in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 604 ff.), appears later in a slightly different form. Eryx is a wrestler or pentathlete, who challenges strangers and slays them till he is himself slain by Herakles (Tzetz. in Lyk. Al. 866, 958). In any case this ranges him with Phorbas, Kyknos, Kerkyon, Antaios, Amykos, and other early kings (I have discussed the series in Folk-Lore 1904 xv. 376 ff.), whose primitive rule of succession is the starting-point of Sir J. G. Frazer's Golden Bough. It is not impossible that Eryx king of the Elymoi and Virbius the rex Nemorensis belonged to the same (? Ligurian: C. Hülsen in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. v. 2467) stratum of the population of Italy.

[1] At the western end of the southern slope of the Akropolis at Athens there was in the time of Pausanias a joint-sanctuary of Ge Κουροτρόφος and Demeter Χλόη (Paus. 1. 22. 3 ἔστι δὲ καὶ Γῆς Κουροτρόφου καὶ Δήμητρος ἱερὸν Χλόης. τὰ δὲ ἐς τὰς ἐπωνυμίας ἔστιν αὐτῶν διδαχθῆναι τοῖς ἱερεῦσιν ἐλθόντα ἐς λόγους). Originally, however, the two cults had been distinct. The enclosure of Ge Κουροτρόφος was called the Κουροτρόφιον, as we know from three boundary-stones, one early (Corp. inscr. Att. iv. 1 no. 555 c [Κ]ουρο[τ]ρόφ[ιον]), the others later (S. A. Koumanoudes in Ἀθήναιον 1877 vi. 147 f.). Adjoining it was the shrine of Blaute (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 411 εἴσοδος πρὸς σ|κὸν Βλαύτης καὶ| Κουροτρόφου ἀνει[μένη τῶ δήμωι, cp. Hesych. Βλαύτη· τόπος Ἀθήνησι and perhaps Poll. 7. 87 ἡ δὲ βλαύτη σανδαλίου τι εἶδος, καὶ ἥρως Ἀθήνησιν ὁ ἐπὶ βλαύτῃ· ἀνέθηκε γάρ τις σκυτοτόμος βλαύτης λίθινον τύπον: see further O. Kern in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 560 f. and Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. no. 2565 p. 484 ff. pl. 60 with figs. 231—235, no. 969 p. 509 pl. 184).

Demeter Χλόη had a sacred table (Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 1 no. 631, 16 ff. = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 673, 16 ff. = J. v. Prott and L. Ziehen Leges Graecorum sacrae ii no. 24, 16 ff. an inscription dating from the early part of s. iv B.C. and admitting of fairly certain restoration Δήμητρος Χλόης ἱερε[ῖαι ἱερεώσυνα: Γ : δεισί]ας κρεῶν, πυρῶν ἡμέκτεω: ||| : μέ[λιτος κοτύλης : ||| : ἐλαί]ο τρίῶν κοτυλῶν : C : φρυγάνων : ||: ἐ[πὶ δὲ τὴν τράπεζαν κ]ωλῆν, πλευρὸν ἰσχίο, ἡμίκραιρα[ν χορδῆς]. Cp. H. Mischkowski Die heiligen Tische im Götterkultus der Griechen und Römer Königsberg i. Pr. 1917 p. 29) and probably a small temple (Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 1 no. 375, 3 ff. an inscription from the end of s. iii B.C. [ἀ]ν[αγράψαι δὲ] | τόδε τὸ ψήφισμα τὸν γ[ρ]αμμα[τέα τ][ὸ]ν κατὰ πρυτανείαν ἐν στή[ληι λι]|θίνει καὶ στῆσαι πα[ρὰ] τὸν ν[εὼν τῆς] | Δήμητρος. U. Köhler in the Ath. Mitth. 1877 ii. 177 pointed out that this νεώς was probably that of Demeter Χλόη). A fragmentary inventory of her property at the end of s. iv B.C. is extant (Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 2 no. 722, 18=Inscr. Gr. ed. min. ii—iii. 2 no. 1472 B, 39 [Δήμη]τρος τῆ[ς] Χλόη[ς]). Her priestess had a reserved seat in the theatre (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 349 (with facsimile on pl. 3) (a) Δήμητρο[ς] Χλόης in part obliterated by (b) Διοφά[ν]του. So W. Dittenberger loc. cit. and W. Larfeld Handbuch der griechischen Epigraphik Leipzig 1898 ii. 1. 266 pl. 1).

Her festival in spring, when the fresh verdure began to appear, was an occasion of jesting and jubilation (Cornut. theol. 28 p. 55, 13 ff. Lang περὶ δὲ τὸ ἔαρ τῇ Χλόῃ Δήμητρι θύουσι μετὰ παιδιᾶς καὶ χαρᾶς, ἰδόντες χλοάζουσα (sc. τὸν σπόρον) καὶ ἀφθονίας αὐτοῖς ἐλπίδα ὑποδεικνύντα). She also received the sacrifice of a ram on Thargelion 6 in the early summer-time (Eupolis Μαρικᾶς frag. 7 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 502 f. Meineke) ap. schol. Soph. O.C. 1600 Εὐχλέου Δήμητρος ἱερὸν ἐστι πρὸς τῇ ἀκροπόλει· καὶ Εὔπολις Μαρικᾷ "ἀλλ' εὐθὺ πόλεως εἶμι· θῦσαι γάρ με δεῖ | κριὸν Χλόῃ Δήμητρι," ἔνθα δηλοῦται ὅτι καὶ κριὸς †θήλεια τῇ θεῷ ταύτῃ θύεται (F. Stoecker's cj. θηλείᾳ, though accepted by Mommsen Feste d. Stadt Athen p. 477 n. 4, does not cure the passage. R. F. P. Brunck prints οὐ θήλεια μόνον ὃϊς after θύεται), οὗτω δὲ τιμᾶται <ἐκ (ins. J. Lascaris)> τῆς κατὰ τῶν κήπων χλόης· θύουσί τε Θαργηλιῶνος ἕκτῃ, Philochoros (in a frag. omitted by Müller) ap. schol. Aristoph. Lys. 835 Χλόης Δήμητρος ἱερὸν ἐν ἀκροπόλει ἐν ᾧ οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι θύουσι μηνὸς Θαργηλιῶνος <$\overline{\varsigma}$ (ins. U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff)>, ὡς Φιλόχορός φησιν ἐν $\overline{\varsigma}$ (Mommsen loc. cit. cj. φησι, τῇ ἕκτῃ construing Θαργηλιῶνος...τῇ ἕκτῃ). This sacrifice may have been purificatory (cp. Apollod. χρονικά frag. 82 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 446 Müller) ap. Diog. Laert. 2. 44 ἐγεννήθη δέ (Sokrates), καθά φησιν Ἀπολλόδωρος ἐν τοῖς Χρονικοῖς, ἐπὶ Ἀψηφίωνος (so C. Müller for Ἀψεφίωνος codd.) ἐν τῷ τετάρτῳ ἔτει τῆς ἑβδομηκοστῆς ἑβδόμης Ὀλυμπιάδος, Θαργηλιῶνος ἕκτῃ, ὅτε καθαίρουσι τὴν πόλιν οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι, καὶ τὴν Ἄρτεμιν γενέσθαι Δήλιοι φασίν). Whether Athens, like Mykonos (infra), made a winter-offering to Demeter Χλόη, is not known.

The cult lasted into Roman times (P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1889 xiii. 167 f. no. 4, published more fully by H. G. Lolling in the Δελτ. Ἀρχ. 1889 p. 129 f. no. 4, a long slab of Pentelic marble with a dedication in red letters of Roman date Δήμητρι Χλόῃ ἡ ἱέρεια Ν[ι]κοβούλη ἡ καὶ Ἰλάρα Θεοτείμου ἐξ Ἐρμείου ἀνέθηκε, cp. Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 1030, 44 f. Ἕρμειοι | Θεότιμος Τρύφωνος | κ.τ.λ. a prytanis of 166/7—168/9 A.D.), when Kore was associated with Demeter (H. G. Lolling in the Δελτ. Ἀρχ. 1889 p. 130 no. 5 a small pillar of Hymettian marble, inscribed in red letters of Roman date and originally used as the base of a statuette Δήμητρι Χλόῃ | καὶ Κόρῃ | τὴν Κουροτρό[φον Εἰσίδοτος | ἀνέθηκεν | κατ' ὄνειρον). A Delphic oracle of s. ii A.D. speaks of their precinct as the spot where the forefathers of the Athenians first grew corn (O. Kern 'Demeter Chloe' in the Ath. Mitth. 1893 xviii. 192—198 two fragments of a small slab of Pentelic marble inscribed (A) Φοῖβος Ἀθηναίοις Δελφοὺς ναίων τάδε [εἶπεν·] | ἔστιν σοι παρ' ἄκρας πόλεως παρα[—⏑⏑ —×,] | οὗ λαὸς σύμπας κλήιζει γλαυκῶ[πιδα Ἀθήνην or κούρην,] | Δήμητρος Χλοίης ἱερὸν Κού[ρης τε μακαίρας,] | οὗ πρῶτον στάχυς εὐξή[θη ζειῶν ἱεράων (suppl. H. Diels),] | ἃς πρότεροι παπ[έρες—–] | ἱδρύσ[αντο—–]. (B) [—–] ἀπαρχάς | [—–]s ἀγνοῦ | [—–τ]έχναισιν | [—–ά]νιούσης | [—–δ]ρεπτά | [—–τόδε λώι]ον ἔσται. 'Es handelt sich um ἀπαρχαί (V. 8), um die Erstlinge des Feldes, welche die Athener der Chloe schuldig sind'). This identifies it with the site of the Βουζύγιος ἄροτος (Plout. praec. coniug. 42 Ἀθηναῖοι τρεῖς ἀρότους ἱεροὺς ἄγουσι· πρῶτον ἐπὶ Σκίρῳ, τοῦ παλαιοτάτου τῶν σπόρων ὑπόμνημα· δεύτερον ἐν τῷ Ῥαρίᾳ· τρίτον ὑπὸ πόλιν (so K. O. Müller for πέλιν codd.), τὸν καλούμενον Βουζύγιον): see C. Wachsmuth in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 1097 and W. Judeich Topographie von Athen München 1905 p. 256. Other references to Demeter Χλόη are Aristoph. Lys. 835 ΓΥ. Α. ποῦ δ' ἐστὶν ὅστις ἐστί; ΛΥ. παρὰ τὸ τῆς Χλόης, Semos of Delos (c. 230 B.C.) frag. 19 (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 495 Müller) ap. Athen. 618 D Σῆμος δ' ὁ Δήλιος ἐν τῷ περὶ παιάνων φησί· '...καὶ τὴν Δήμητρα ὁτὲ μὲν Χλόην, ὁτὲ δὲ Ἰουλώ (sc. προσηγόρευον),' Eustath. in Il. p. 772, 62 f. ἱστέον δὲ ὅτι οὐ μόνον χλόη ἡ γῆθεν φυομένη...ἀλλὰ καὶ ἡ Δημήτηρ ἐπιθετικῶς· Χλόης γάρ, φασι, Δήμητρος ἱερὸν παρά που τὴν Ἀττικήν.

There are one or two indications that the same cult was practised elsewhere in Attike. At Eleusis a festival Χλοῖα was observed in s. ii B.C. (D. Philios in the Ἐφ. Ἀρχ. 1890 p. 125 ff. no. 60, 6 ff. = Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 135, 6 ff. = Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 661, 6 ff. ὑπὲρ ὧν ἀπαγγέλλει ὁ δήμαρχος ὁ Ἐλευσινίων ὑπὲρ τῶν θυσι|ῶν, ὧν ἔθυσεν τοῖς τε Ἀλῴοις καὶ τοῖς Χλοίοις τῇ τε Δήμητρι καὶ τῇ | Κόρει καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις θεοῖς, οἷς

Perhaps we can go a step further. O. Gruppe[1] has conjectured with much probability that the Arrhephoria was performed on the night of the Diipolieia, that is, on the occasion of the last full moon in the Attic year. He recalls the Greek belief—a belief based upon accurate observation[2]—that the dew lies thickest on the night of a full moon[3], and Alkman's statement that Herse the 'Dew' was πάτριον ἦν, συνετέλεσεν δὲ καὶ τὴν τῶν | Καλαμαίων θυσίαν κ.τ.λ.). This accounts for Hesych. Χλοιά (Meursius cj. Χλοεία, A. Meineke cj. Χλόεια)· ἑορτὴ ἀπὸ τῶν κάλπων (Meursius and Meineke cjj. καρπῶν). Again, the sacrificial calendar from Koukounari (supra p. 115) notes among the trieteric rites of Marathon that in Anthesterion a pregnant sow is sacrificed to Ἐλευσινία and another to Χλόη παρὰ τὰ Μειδύλου, i.e. Χλόη 'next door to Meidylos' (J. de Prott Leges Graecorum sacrae Lipsiae 1896 Fasti sacri p. 46 ff. no. 26 B, 48 ff. Ἀνθεστηριῶνος· Ἐλευσινίαι ὗς κυοῦσα ΔΔ, | ἱερώσυνα ⊢|. Χλόηι *παρὰ τὰ Μειδύλου ὗς κυ*ῦ*σα*] | ΔΔ, ἱερώσυνα ⊢, ἀλφίτων ἑκτεὺς ||||, οἶνο χ[ὸς..]). In Mykonos a calendar of c. 200 B.C. fixes Poseideon 12 as the mid-winter day when a fine white ram must be sacrificed to Poseidon Τεμενίτης, a white male lamb to Poseidon Φύκιος, and two fine sows, one of them pregnant, to Demeter Χλόη (J. de Prott Leges Graecorum sacrae Lipsiae 1896 Fasti sacri p. 13 ff. no. 4, 11 ff.=Michel Recueil d'Inscr. gr. no. 714, 11 ff.=F. Bechtel in Collitz—Bechtel Gr. Dial.-Inschr. iii. 2. 577 ff. no. 5416, 11 ff.=Dittenberger Syll. inscr. Gr.[3] no. 1024, 11 ff. τῆι αὐτῆι ἡμέραι Δήμητρι Χλόηι ὗες | δύο καλλιστεύουσαι, ἡ ἑτέρα ἐγκύμ[ων·] κῶτογ κόπτεται[ι] | τῆς ἐγκύμονος. τὰς ὗς β[ουλ]ὴ κ[ρινέ]τ[ω·] μ[γ[ρωι ἄρχοντες | διδόντων ὀσφῦν καὶ κωλῆν τῆς ὑὸς τῆς ἑτέρης, ἀλφίτω[ν] | δύο χοίνικας, οἶνου τρεῖς κοτύλ[α]ς).

But the real interest of Demeter Χλόη lies, not so much in the details of her cult, as in the fact that her very name identifies the goddess with the verdure. Farnell Cults of Gk. States iii. 33 says of her worship: 'Its chief claim on our attention is that it seems to reveal a glimpse of the pre-anthropomorphic period when the natural object itself might be conceived as animate and divine, and the personal deity had not yet clearly emerged; thus such religious perceptions as "Demeter the Verdure" or "Zeus the Thunder" on the one hand, and Demeter the Verdure-giver or Zeus the Thunderer on the other, may be the products of widely different strata of religion.' The second stage is attested partly by the cult of Demeter Εὔχλοος at Kolonos (Soph. O. C. 1600 f. τὸν δ' Εὐχλόου Δήμητρος εἰς προσώπιον | πάγον μολοῦσαι with schol. ad loc. cited supra. On the topography of the site see Sir R. C. Jebb's ed. p. xxxi with map and Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. pp. 389 f., 392, 402, 405 pls. 124 (photographs) and 125 (plan). The broken base of Pentelic marble believed by the uncritical K. S. Pittakis to record a dedication to Demeter Εὐχλόη (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 191) is now known to contain no such record (U. Köhler in Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 1415). Her name should be struck out in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 2347, vi. 884), partly by the poetic usage of such epithets as χλοόκαρπος (Orph. h. Dem. Eleus. 40. 5 χλοόκαρπε, cp. Orph. h. Ge 26. 7 ἠδυπνόοις χαίρουσα χλόαις).

[1] Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 34.

[2] X. Landerer 'Zur Meteorologie Griechenlands' in the Zeitschrift für allgemeine Erdkunde N. F. 1857 ii. 163 observes: 'Der Thau nach Sonnenuntergang ist so bedeutend, dass man sich nur einige Augenblicke im Freien aufzuhalten braucht, um die Kleider und andere hygroskopische Gegenstände durch und durch feucht oder nass zu sehen.' C. Neumann—J. Partsch Physikalische Geographie von Griechenland mit besonderer Rücksicht auf das Alterthum Breslau 1885 p. 64 adds: 'In klaren, mondhellen Nächten, wo die Wärmeausstrahlung der Erdoberfläche besonders kräftig sich vollzieht, der Boden und seine Pflanzendecke recht stark erkalten, ist der Thaufall am reichlichsten.' Cp. Aisch. Ag. 12, 335 f., 560 f.

[3] Plout. symp. 3. 10. 3, quaestt. nat. 24, Macrob. Sat. 7. 16. 31. Cp. Theophr. de caus. plant. 4. 14. 3, Plin. nat. hist. 18. 292, Macrob. 7. 16. 21 and 24. See further W. H. Roscher Über Selene und Verwandtes Leipzig 1890 p. 49 n. 198, Nachträge über Selene und Verwandtes Leipzig 1895 p. 24 f., and in the Lex. Myth. ii. 3147 ff.

the daughter of Zeus by Selene the 'Moon[1].' Now Plutarch, commenting on the passage from Alkman, remarks that the meaning of the poet was as follows: Zeus, the air, under the influence of Selene, the moon, turned himself into dew[2]. Plutarch's comment is a physical speculation of the usual sort[3]; but it suggests a possibility. It may be that the dew was regarded as the actual means whereby the sky-father impregnated the earth-mother. Rain was certainly so regarded[4]; and dew was held to be a gentler form of rain[5]. Homer says that, when Zeus embraced Hera on the summit of Ide, 'glittering dew-drops' fell from the golden cloud that encompassed them and earth put forth 'the dewy lotus-bloom[6].' Pliny in plainer terms tells us that the planet Venus, called by others the star of Iuno or Isis or the Mother of the gods, makes the earth to conceive by means of generative dew and rouses the procreative powers of all living things[7]. Besides, it is a significant fact that érsen, ársen, árrhen, the Greek word for 'male,' is obviously related to érse, 'dew[8].' Perhaps, then, when the Dew-bearers brought dew down the underground descent, they were simply conveying the sacred seed of Father Sky into the womb of Mother Earth.

And, if so, it may well be that in the 'something wrapt up[9]',

[1] Supra i. 732 n. 5. Gruppe might have added Lucian's whimsical notion that the Moon-dwellers agreed to pay the Sun-dwellers by way of tribute 10,000 amphorae of dew (Loukian. ver. hist. 1. 20).

[2] Plout. de fac. in orb. lun. 25 διὸ πρὸς σὲ τρέφομαι μᾶλλον, ὦ φίλε Θέων· λέγεις γὰρ ἡμῖν ἐξηγούμενος ταῦτα τὰ Ἀλκμᾶνος 'Διὸς θυγάτηρ | ἔρσα τρέφει καὶ Σελάνας [δίας]' ὅτι νῦν τὸν ἀέρα καλεῖ καὶ Δία φησὶν αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τῆς Σελήνης καθυγραινόμενον εἰς δρόσους τρέπεσθαι.

[3] Supra i. 29 f. [4] Infra § 9 (c) i and ii.

[5] Plout. quaestt. nat. 24 ἡ γὰρ δρόσος ἀσθενής τις καὶ ἀδρανὴς ὄμβρος.

[6] Supra i. 154, iii. 35.

[7] Plin. nat. hist. 2. 36—38 ending with the words: 'itaque et in magno nominum ambitu est. alii enim Iunonis, alii Isidis, alii Matris Deum appellavere. huius natura cuncta generantur in terris. namque in alterutro exortu genitali rore conspergens non terrae modo conceptus inplet, verum animantium quoque omnium stimulat.' Cp. Plout. de Is. et Os. 41 οἱ δὲ τοῖσδε τοῖς φυσικοῖς καὶ τῶν ἀπ' ἀστρολογίας μαθηματικῶν ἕνια μιγνύντες Τυφῶνα μὲν οἴονται τὸν ἡλιακὸν κόσμον, Ὄσιριν δὲ τὸν σεληνιακὸν λέγεσθαι· τὴν μὲν γὰρ σελήνην, γόνιμον τὸ φῶς καὶ ὑγροποιὸν ἔχουσαν, εὐμενῆ καὶ γοναῖς ζώων καὶ φυτῶν εἶναι βλαστήσεσι· τὸν δὲ ἥλιον ἀκράτῳ πυρὶ κεκληρωκότα θάλπειν τε καὶ καταναίνειν τὰ φυόμενα καὶ τεθηλότα, κ.τ.λ., Nonn. Dion. 44. 220 ff. Γαῖα φυτῶν ὠδῖνα πεπαίνει | μαρμαρυγὴν δροσόεσσαν ἀκοιμήτοιο Σελήνης | δεχνυμένη.

[8] L. Meyer Handb. d. gr. Etym. i. 462, Prellwitz Etym. Wörterb. d. Gr. Spr.[2] p. 158, Boisacq Dict. étym. de la Langue Gr. p. 83. Cp. Apul. ἀνεχόμενος (printed as Anth. Lat. i. 2 no. 712 Riese: for date see De Vit Lat. Lex. Index p. cxxxi n. (10)) 21 eiaculent tepidum rorem niveis laticibus.

How are we to explain Souidas' ἀρρηνοφορεῖν (certified by the order of letters) in the sense of ἀρρηφορεῖν, ἐρρηφορεῖν? Two manuscripts of Harpokr. s.v. ἀρρηφορεῖν have the same reading.

[9] Supra p. 169 n. 0.

which they brought back, we should recognise a new-born babe, the fruit of that momentous union. Dare we call him Erichthónios 'very child of the Ground[1]'?

i. The birth of Erichthonios.

Where the texts are silent the monuments may be allowed to speak. A terra-cotta relief of the 'Melian' type, said to have been found in a grave beyond the Ilissos on the road to Halimous and now at Berlin[2] (fig. 93)[3], shows the head and shoulders of Ge emerging from the ground. She presents the infant Erichthonios to his foster-mother Athena, who, wearing a helmet but no aigís, approaches from the left. Kekrops, with snaky tail, faces her on the right: he raises the forefinger of one hand in token of respect[4] and with the other holds a spray of olive. Stylistic considerations would refer the relief to the first half of the fifth century, while the four olive-leaves in Athena's helmet suit some date after the fight at Marathon[5]. The [1] Not 'gewaltiger Erdherr' (L. Malten Kyrene Berlin 1911 p. 83 n. 4), der 'gewaltige Chthonios' (id. in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 351), or der 'gewaltige Herr der Chthon' (id. in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1914 xxix. 190): see Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. p. 491 n. 1. Nor 'Genius des fruchtbaren Erdbodens' (Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 200. Id. ib. n. 1 observes that Hermes too is ἐριχθόνιος in et. Gud. p. 208, 31 f. ἐριούνιος Ἑρμῆς καὶ χθόνιος Ἑρμῆς καὶ ἐριχθόνιος = et. mag. p. 371, 51 f. ἐριούνιος Ἑρμῆς καὶ χθόνιος καὶ ἐριχθόνιος Ἑρμῆς). Nor yet 'good earth'—an unhappy rendering of H. J. Rose A Handbook of Greek Mythology London 1928 p. 129, apparently borrowed from G. Curtius Grundzüge der griechischen Etymologie[5] Leipzig 1879 p. 144 'Gutland.' Still less, of course, etymologically akin to Erechtheus (J. B. Bury in the Class. Rev. 1899 xiii. 307 f. *Ἐρεχθόχθων > *Ἐρέχθων (short form Ἔρεχθεύς) > Ἐριχθόνιος (ι by false derivation from ἐρι- + χθόνιος)): see Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1320 n. 8, supra ii. 793 n. 10. Confusion arose early and lasted late (et. Gud. p. 207, 26 Ἔρεχθεύς, ὁ Ἐριχθόνιος, et. mag. p. 371, 29 Ἔρεχθεύς, ὁ Ἐριχθόνιος (so F. G. Sturz for Ἐπιχθόνιος) καλούμενος, Zonar. lex. s.v. Ἔρεχθεύς· ὁ Ἐριχθόνιος λεγόμενος. Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. lix 'the double personality, Erechtheus—Erichthonios,' ead. Primitive Athens as described by Thucydides Cambridge 1906 p. 60 'The name of Erechtheus or Erechthonios' (sic), J. Escher-Bürkli in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vi. 406 'der Doppelgänger des E[rechtheus], Erichthonios,' 440 'Der attische E[richthonios] ist die sekundäre Nebenfigur zu Erechtheus').

Cp. Harpokr. s.v. αὐτόχθονες· ὁ δὲ Πίνδαρος (frag. 253 Bergk[4]) καὶ ὁ τὴν Δαναΐδα ποιητικώς (frag. 2 Kinkel) φασιν Ἐριχθόνιον καὶ Ἥφαιστον ἐκ γῆς φανῆναι. In Nonn. Dion. 27. 322 Erichthonios is κοῦρος... Γαιήιος.

[2] No. 2537.

[3] E. Curtius 'Die Geburt des Erichthonios' in the Arch. Zeit. 1872 xxx. 51—57 pl. 63 (= my fig. 93), A. Flasch in the Ann. d. Inst. 1877 xlix. 425 f., Friederichs—Wolters Gipsabgüsse p. 65 f. no. 120, E. Kuhnert in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1578 fig. 2, O. Immisch ib. ii. 1019 fig., Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. xxix f. fig. 2, ead. Themis[2] p. 263 f. fig. 63.

[4] C. Sittl Die Gebärden der Griechen und Römer Leipzig 1890 pp. 162, 179. Cp. supra ii. 735 fig. 666, 736 fig. 667.

[5] C. T. Seltman Athens: its History and Coinage before the Persian Invasion Cambridge 1924 p. 103, G. F. Hill in The Cambridge Ancient History Cambridge 1926 iv. 130 with Plates i. 304, g, r.

design, if genuine[1], probably falls within the period 490—470 B.C. What purpose it served in the grâve is more doubtful. Possibly the rising of the boy from the depths of the dark earth to light and life was felt to be of good omen for the future of the buried dead[2].

Fig. 93.

Be that as it may, vase-painters of the fifth century took this old art-type and amplified it by the addition of other interested spectators. A red-figured hydria from Chiusi (?), now in the British Museum (pl. xxii)[3], makes a full-breasted Ge emerge waist-high from [1] P. Jacobsthal Die melischen Reliefs Berlin—Wilmersdorf 1931 p. 96 ff. pl. 75 a notes that the head, shoulder, and breast of the child, parts of Kekrops' fore-arm and of Athena's right hand, together with a bit of the base beneath the snaky tail, are due to a restorer (fig. 21 shows the relief unrestored). After frequent inspection R. Zahn and Jacobsthal decided 'es endgültig für eine Fälschung zu erklären, allerdings für eine sehr intelligente und für die siebenziger Jahre recht gelungene und gelehrte.' But could a forger over sixty years ago have been so successful?

[2] Cp. supra ii. 417.

[3] Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 159 f. no. E 182, Gerhard Auserl. Vasenb. iii. 3 ff. pl. 151, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 287 f. pl. 85, Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt.

Hydria from Chiusi (?), now in the British Museum:
Ge hands Erichthonios to Athena in the presence of Zeus, Nike, and Hebe (?).

See page 182 ff.

the ground, while Athena, armed with helmet, aigís, and spear, receives the babe in a striped mantle[1]. She is confronted, not by Kekrops, but by Zeus, who, clad in a himátion of like pattern and wearing a wreath, stands with his right hand resting on his hip, his left holding the thunderbolt. Behind Athena, Nike hastens forward with a large fillet in her outstretched hands. Behind Zeus and leaning familiarly on his shoulder is a female figure in a long chitón, over whose head is inscribed the name Oinanthe. The presence of this Dionysiac name[2] led E. Braun[3], F. Wieseler[4], C. Robert[5], and Sir C. H. Smith[6] to interpret the whole scene as the birth of Dionysos. But in this they were certainly wrong. The vase cannot be isolated from others of closely similar design, which beyond all question represent the birth of Erichthonios. And the name Oinánthe, accompanied as it is by the word kalé, is better explained by W. Klein[7], W. Drexler[8], and H. B. Walters[9] as a Lieblingsinschrift of a not very unusual sort[10]. After all, Oinanthe was a name occasionally borne by Attic women[11]. This leaves the youthful Kunst ii. 2. 17 pl. 34, 401, Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 405 f. fig. 127, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 252 no. 4 ('Der Oinanthemaler,' one of 'Die Manieristen ... die Vertreter eines verschnörkelten, archaisierenden Stils, der gegen Ende der archaischen Periode einsetzt und bis tief in die klassische Periode sich erhält' (ib. p. 237)). Pl. xxii is from a photograph.

[1] Cp. the fragment of an amphora or pelike from Gela (F. Hauser in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1896 xi. 190 with fig. 33 a, B. Sauer Das sogenannte Theseion Leipzig 1899 p. 60 f. fig.), which appears to reverse the design—Zeus (?) on the right, Athena on the left, of Ge.

[2] O. Höfer in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 750 f. records Oinanthe as a Bacchant on a red-figured kratér at Vienna (Gerhard Ant. Bildw. pp. 211, 222 n. 55 pl. 17 ΔΙΝΟΝΟΗ, Corp. inscr. Gr. iv no. 8381 Οἰνάνθη: see now C. Fränkel Satyr- und Bakchennamen auf Vasenbildern Halle a. S. 1912 p. 51 f.), and as a Bassarid, nurse of Dionysos, in Nonn. Dion. 14. 225 Οἰνάνθη ῥοδόεσσα, together with other more doubtful examples.

[3] E. Braun in the Ann. d. Inst. 1841 xiii. 92 ff.

[4] Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst ii. 2. 17 pl. 34, 401 ('den kleinen Dionysos, oder genauer: Iakchos').

[5] C. Robert Archaeologische Maerchen aus alter und neuer Zeit Berlin 1886 p. 190 ff. fig.

[6] Sir C. H. Smith in the Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 159 f. no. E 182 ('Type of birth of Erichthonios ... Dionysos?').

[7] W. Klein Die griechischen Vasen mit Lieblingsinschriften[2] Leipzig 1889 p. 129.

[8] W. Drexler in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 750 f.

[9] H. B. Walters History of Ancient Pottery London 1905 ii. 265 n. 5.

[10] Id. ib. ii. 265, Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. i. 34, iii. 978 (Καλλιστάνθη καλή), P. Kretschmer Die Griechischen Vaseninschriften Gütersloh 1894 p. 79 (Γλυκὼ καλά).

[11] F. Bechtel Die Attischen Frauennamen Göttingen 1902 p. 103 cites Corp. inscr. Att. ii. 3 no. 2124, 3 OINANΘH and no. 4044 = A. Conze Die attischen Grabreliefs Berlin 1893 i. 71 no. 313 pl. 77 OINANΘH. W. Pape—G. E. Benseler Wörterbuch der griechischen Eigennamen[3] Braunschweig 1875 ii. 1041 cite also Dem. c. Macart. 36; Polyb. 14. 11. 1 (ap. Athen. 251 E), 15. 25. 12, 15. 29. 8 and 10, 15. 33. 8; Plout. v. Cleom. 33, amat. 9.

goddess on the left anonymous. From her position and attitude I should judge her to be Hebe[1], whose title Día[2] might be adduced as a further justification of her proximity to Zeus[3].

A red-figured stámnos from Vulci, now at Munich (pl. xxiii)[4], repeats the central group of Ge presenting the babe to Athena in the [1] Cp. the pose of Hebe (inscribed) on two kratêres by 'Der Kadmosmaler' (J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 451), viz. (1) a kályx-krátér at Petrograd (Stephani Vasensamml. St. Petersburg ii. 339 ff. no. 1807, id. in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1861 p. 33 ff. Atlas pl. 3, 1 and 2 = Reinach Rép. Vases i. 7, 5 and 6, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 451 no. 5), figured infra §9(h) ii(θ) med., on which HBH standing furthest to the left rests her right hand on her hip and leans her left elbow on the shoulder of Hera; (2) a volute-krátér at Ruvo (Jatta collection no. 1093, F. Gargallo-Grimaldi in the Ann. d. Inst. 1867 xxxix. 160 ff., Mon. d. Inst. viii pl. 42 = Reinach Rép. Vases i. 175, A. Baumeister in his Denkm. ii. 890 f. fig. 965, Overbeck Gr. Kunstmyth. Apollon p. 426 ff no. 6 Atlas pl. 25, 5, O. Jessen in Roscher Lex. Myth. ii. 2454 with fig. 5, J. D. Beazley op. cit. p. 451 no. 1) on which HBH, again on the extreme left, stands with her right hand resting on her hip and her left raised towards the shoulder of Hera (so Overbeck op. cit. p. 429: Reinach loc. cit. says 'une Ménade,' while Baumeister loc. cit. makes her the mother of Marsyas conversing with [Κυβ]ήβη!). Somewhat similar, but unnamed, is the goddess standing on the left of another krátér in the Jatta collection (supra i. 459 n. 5 fig. 318. To the bibliography add O. Benndorf in the Wien. Vorlegebl. 1890—1891 pl. 12, 2), who rests her left hand on the shoulder of a seated Zeus: I took her, perhaps wrongly, to be Aphrodite.

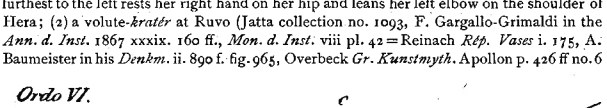

Fig. 94.

[2] Strab. 382 τιμᾶται δ' ἐν Φλιοῦντι καὶ Σικυῶνι τὸ τῆς Δίας ἱερόν· καλοῦσι δ' οὕτω τὴν Ἥβην. On Dia as consort of Zeus I have said my say in the Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 177 f., 1906 xx. 367, 377 f., 416, 419.

[3] Even if the name Oinanthe be interpreted as belonging to the personage above which it is placed, she need not be Dionysiac. Athena herself seems to have been worshipped at Athens as Oinánthe, the 'Vine-flower,'—an unremarked, but interesting, parallel to Demeter Chlóe (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 353 (with facsimile on pl. 3 = my fig. 94) ἱερήα[ς Ἀ]θην[ᾶς Οἰν]άνθη[ς], W. Larfeld Handbuch der griechischen Epigraphik Leipzig 1898 ii. 1. 266 pl. 1). The epithet, however, is at best uncertain.

[4] No. 2413 = Jahn Vasensamml. München p. 108 f. no. 345, T. Panofka in the Ann. d. Inst. 1829 i. 292—298, Mon. d. Inst. i pls. 10 and 11 (Reinach Rép. Vases i. 66, 1 and 2), Inghirami Vas. fitt. i. 115 ff. pls. 73 and 74, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 267 ff. pl. 84, iii. 34 ff. pl. 11, Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst i. 38 f. pl. 46, 211*a* and 211*b*, F. Hauser in Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei iii. 95—98 pl. 137 (= my pl. xxiii), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 32 no. 14, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 300 no. 16.

J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 123 f., followed by Hoppin loc. cit., identified this vase as the work of the late archaic painter Hermonax—indeed as that artist's masterpiece ('Sound and able as Hermonax's

Stámnos from Vulci, now at Munich:
Ge hands Erichthonios to Athena in the presence of Hephaistos.

See page 184 f.

[From Furtwängler-Reichhold Griechische Vasenmalerei pl. 137 (part) by permission of Messrs F. Bruckmann A.-G., Munich.]

presence of an interested god, but substitutes Hephaistos[1] for Zeus. In lieu of himátion, wreath, and thunderbolt Hephaistos has but a chlamýs and a long knobbed staff. Zeus[2] himself is accommodated on the other side of the vase, where he sits on a handsome folding stool, clad in chitón and himátion. In his left hand he holds a lotiform sceptre; in his right, a metal phiále, which Nike standing before him has just filled. On the tendrils that spring from the handle-palmettes are poised four of the daintiest Erotes to be found in the whole range of Greek art. Their presence may be taken to indicate that obverse and reverse form a single scene and one which has the multiplication of young life for its ultimate meaning.

Hephaistos is definitely established in the room of Zeus on a red-figured kýlix from Corneto, preserved in Berlin[3]. This magnificent vase (fig. 95), which has been attributed to 'the Kodros-painter[4],' fortunately adds names to all the persons concerned. The external design shows again the familiar type of Ge presenting Erichthonios to Athena. Behind Athena stands a dignified, not to say Zeus-like, Hephaistos wearing a bay-wreath on his head and a chlamýs over his shoulder: he holds a long staff in his right hand and rests his work generally is, he only once shows himself a remarkable artist, and that is not on any of his signed vases, but on the Munich stamnos with the Birth of Erichthonios'...).

[1] So most critics, including Panofka, Inghirami, Jahn, Müller—Wieseler, Hauser locc. citt. together with Welcker Alt. Denkm. iii. 422 n. 7, B. Sauer Das sogenannte Theseion Leipzig 1899 p. 58 f., etc. C. Lenormant op. cit. i. 276 sees 'Neptune frappant la terre avec son trident' (trident-head missing!). Gerhard Auserl. Vasenb. iii. 3 n. 2 hesitates between Hephaistos and Poseidon, but ib. p. 5 decides for Poseidon. A. Flasch in the Ann. d. Inst. 1877 xlix. 427 ff. is for Kekrops or Hephaistos, preferably the latter; C. Robert Archaeologische Maerchen aus alter und neuer Zeit Berlin 1886 p. 192 n. 2, for Kekrops. E. Braun in the Ann. d. Inst. 1841 xiii. 92 f., bent on recognising the birth of Dionysos (supra p. 183), is forced to interpret the standing god as Zeus.

[2] Almost all exponents from Inghirami loc. cit. onwards have identified the seated personage as Zeus. Yet Panofka loc. cit. says 'Neptune,' and C. Lenormant op. cit. i. 285, iii. 34 ff. 'Jupiter Polieus' or 'Zeus Éleuthérius' as a deity akin to 'Neptune Érechthée.' Jahn loc. cit. is content with 'ein bärtiger Mann.' And Müller—Wieseler loc. cit. suggest 'Erichthonios als Herrscher und Richter des Landes, neben ihm die Göttin Dike' (!).

[3] Furtwängler Vasensamml. Berlin ii. 718 f. no. 2537, W. Helbig in the Bull. d. Inst. 1876 p. 205 f., A. Flasch 'Tazza cornetana rappresentante la nascita di Erichthonios' in the Ann. d. Inst. 1877 xlix. 418—446, Mon. d. Inst. x pl. 39, 1—3 (=my fig. 95), Reinach Rép. Vases i. 208, R. Engelmann in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 1305 f. fig., M. Collignon in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 986 fig. 1278, Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. xxx f. with fig. 3.

[4] B. Graef 'Die Zeit der Kodrosschale' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1898 xiii. 66, 73, Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 153 no. 1 ('The artist belongs to the first period of the Free Style and may have been the teacher of Aristophanes'), J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 426 no. 6 ('Sehr feine Schalen mit Anklängen an Parthenonisches').

left hand on his side. Behind Ge is Kekrops with serpentine tail. Beyond Hephaistos we see Herse. Then—for the scene continues—, other figures likewise moving to the left, Aglauros followed by Erechtheus, Pandrosos full-front, next Aigeus, and lastly Pallas[1].

Fig. 95.

[1] Kekrops and his daughters Herse, Aglauros, Pandrosos supplement the theme of Erichthonios' birth by a suggestion of its sequel, the incident of the basket (infra p. 237 ff.). Erechtheus, Aigeus, and Pallas are later kings of Athens (Gerhard Gr. Myth. ii. 231 stemma H) 'here, by a pleasant anachronism, interested in the birth of their great ancestor' (Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. xxx).

Kratêr from Chiusi, now at Palermo:
Ge hands Erichthonios to Athena in the presence of Hephaistos and Kekrops.

See page 187 f.

The central medallion has Heos as a winged goddess bearing off Kephalos.

Finally Hephaistos ceases to be reminiscent of Zeus and appears in his own right on a kratér from Chiusi, now at Palermo, to be dated c. 400 B.C. (pl. xxiv)[1]. Ge, who emerges more and more from the soil, as usual hands Erichthonios to Athena. This takes place beneath a conspicuous olive-tree, three young shoots of which spring from the earth in the foreground[2]. Behind Athena is Kekrops with coiled tail. Behind Ge Hephaistos, with supported foot[3], shoulders

[1] T. Panofka in the Bull. d. Inst. 1837 p. 22, E. Braun ib. 1838 p. 82 f., id. 'Il nascimento d' Erittonio' in the Ann. d. Inst. 1841 xiii. 91—98, Mon. d. Inst. iii pl. 30 (= my pl. xxiv), Reinach Rép. Vases[2] i. 113, 4, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 272, 288—290 pl. 85 A.

The reverse design (inset on pl. xxiv) shows Heos in pursuit of Kephalos, one of whose brothers (Apollod. 1. 9. 4 παῖδες δὲ Αἰνετός, Ἄκτωρ, Φύλακος, Κέφαλος) escapes towards the left.

Fig. 96.

Fig. 97.

Fig. 98.

Fig. 99.

[2] Possibly the famous olive-tree on the Akropolis, called by the comedians the ἀστὴ ἐλαία (Poll. 9. 17, Hesych. s.v. ἀστὴ ἐλαία, Eustath. in Od. p. 1383, 7 f.) or πάγκυφος ἐλαία (Aristoph. fab. incert. frag. 234 (Frag. com. Gr. ii. 1217 Meineke) ap. Poll. 6. 163, Hesych. s.vv. ἀστὴ ἐλαία and πάγκυφος), together with the μορίαι, which were believed to be offshoots from it (Aristoph. nub. 1005 with schol. ad loc., Istros frag. 27 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 422 Müller) and Aristot. frag. 345 Rose ap. schol. Soph. O.C. 701, Apollod. frag. 34 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 434 Müller) = frag. 120 (Frag. gr. Hist. ii. 1076 Jacoby) ap. schol. Soph. O.C. 705 cited supra ii. 20 n. 4, Poll. 1. 241, 5. 36, Bekker anecd. i. 280, 16, Hesych. s.v. μορίαι, Phot. lex. s.v. μορίαι, Souid. s.v. μορίαι, et. Gud. p. 398, 23 ff., et. mag. p. 590, 42 ff., Zonar. lex. s.v. μορία, Favorin. lex. pp. 85, 7 f., 611, 31, 1273, 53, 1643, 18 ff.). See further Boetticher Baumkultus pp. 107—111, L. Stephani in the Compte-rendu St. Pét. 1872 p. 5 ff. with figs. 1—4 and Atlas pl. 1, Frazer Pausanias ii. 343 f., 393 f.

The sacred olive appears in various forms on the imperial bronze coinage of Athens (see e.g. Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Attica etc. p. 96 ff. pls. 16, 7, 8, 11, 17, 1, 2, 4—6, McClean Cat. Coins ii. 365 pl. 211, 1, 4, 5, Imhoof-Blumer and P. Gardner Num. Comm. Paus. iii. 129 ff. pl. Z, 8, 11—19, pl. AA, 16, 21, and for longer series J. N. Svoronos Les Monnaies d'Athènes Munich 1923—1926 pls. 84, 8, 36—40, 85, 32—37, 87, 15—43, 89, 1—25, 90, 1—34). Figs. 96—99 are from specimens in my collection.

[3] K. Lange Das Motiv des aufgestützten Fusses in d. antiken Kunst und dessen statuarische Verwendung durch Lysippos Leipzig 1879 pp. 1—64 with pl., E. Löwy Lysipp und seine Stellung in der griechischen Plastik Hamburg 1891 p. 9 ff. figs. 4 and 5, a—c, M. Collignon Lysippe Paris (1905) pp. 71, 116, W. Déonna in L'archéologie, sa valeur, ses méthodes Paris 1912 i. 278 ff., F. P. Johnson Lysippos Durham (North Carolina): Duke University Press 1927 pls. 6, 24, 30 f.

his tongs. A couple of little Victories, hovering in the air, offer wreaths to father and son; for it is as father of Erichthonios that Hephaistos has at length wholly dispossessed Zeus.

ii. Hephaistos and Athena.

So far we have seen reason to think that the Arrhephoria was an annual rite in which a couple of Dew-bearers conveyed the very seed of the sky-god down into the womb of the earth-goddess, and we have surmised that they brought up thence a new-born babe named Erichthonios. Moreover, a review of monuments known to represent the birth of Erichthonios[1] has made two points clear—that the group of Ge handing over the child to Athena was constant from first to last, and that Zeus as interested spectator was gradually ousted by Hephaistos. Vases distributed along the fifth century showed us in succession a Zeus of normal type, a Zeus-like personage probably to be called Hephaistos, a Zeus-like personage certainly called Hephaistos, and a Hephaistos of normal type.

How are these ritual and mythological data to be interpreted? I should infer (1) that the rite of the Arrhephoria as performed in the precinct (of Ge Olympía?[2]) near the Ilissos found apt expression in the Hellenic myth of Ge and Erichthonios, and (2) that in the course of the sixth and fifth centuries B.C. the Hellenic myth was forced (by popular pressure?[3]) to find room for the long-established persons of pre-Hellenic cult. Thus Ge the original mother must hand over her babe to Athena as foster-mother, while Zeus Olýmpios the natural consort of Ge Olympía is displaced by Hephaistos the primitive partner of Athena.

This reading of the story is of course in part conjectural, but it fits well with certain important facts in the history of Attic religion and it deserves to be weighed in relation to them.

[1] I have excluded from my survey the parallel, but later, series of vases and reliefs, which represent an Eleusinian (not Athenian) myth—the birth of the infant Ploutos, handed over by Ge to Demeter. On these see S. Reinach 'La naissance de Ploutos' in the Rev. Arch. 1900 i. 87—98 (= id. Cultes, mythes et religions Paris 1906 ii. 262—272), Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] pp. 524—526 fig. 151, Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. pp. 487—489, C. Picard in the Revue historique 1931 pp. 1—76 (especially 33—42), id. in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1931 lv. 34—38 pl. 3. [2] Supra p. 169 n. 0.

[3] The régime of Peisistratos and his successors did much to enhance the prestige of Athena (see e.g. C. T. Seltman Athens: its History and Coinage before the Persian Invasion Cambridge 1924 pp. 40 ff., 46 f., 61, 68, 94 and F. E. Adcock in The Cambridge Ancient History Cambridge 1926 iv. 63, 66 f.), and pride in the city-goddess would tend to make men jealous for the credit of her partner Hephaistos (infra pp. 200, 223, 236). The 'Theseion,' if that be his temple (infra p. 223 n. 6), was no unworthy sequel to the Parthenon.

a

b

Stámnos from Knossos, now at Candia:
the Snake-goddess repeated as a proto geometric motif.

See page 189 n. 1.

Painted terra-cotta plaque from Athens:
the Snake-goddess (Athena?) of late geometric art.

See page 189 n. 1.

The Athenian Akropolis had from time immemorial been the home of Athena, a goddess comparable with, if not actually descended from, the snake-goddess of the early Cretans[1]. Her

[1] This important fact was first firmly grasped and clearly enunciated by M. P. Nilsson Die Anfänge der Göttin Athene (Det Kgl. Danske Videnskabernes Selskab. Historisk-filologiske Meddelelser iv. 7) København 1921 pp. 1—20, id. A History of Greek Religion trans. F. J. Fielden Oxford 1925 pp. 26—28, id. Min.-Myc. Rel. pp. 417—431. I had already hinted at it in the Class. Rev. 1903 xvii. 410 n. 2. See also O. Weinreich in the Archiv f. Rel. 1925 xxiii. 61 f., C. Clemen Religionsgeschichte Europas Heidelberg 1926 i. 76 n. 2, 103, 231, H. J. Rose A Handbook of Greek Mythology London 1928 pp. 107, 128.

Others have stressed the connexion between Athena and the 'Minoan' or Mycenaean shield-goddess. So C. Blinkenberg 'Kretisk Seglring fra ældre mykenisk Tid' in the Aarbøger for nordisk Oldkyndighed og Historie 1920 pp. 308—322 fig. 1 f. and U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff 'Athena' in the Sitzungsber. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin 1921 pp. 950—965. See too O. Kern Die Religion der Griechen Berlin 1926 i. 24.

E. Kalinka in the Archiv f. Rel. 1922 xxi. 31 f. regards Athena as 'eine jener vorgriechischen Muttergottheiten, die sowohl in Kleinasien wie in vielen Landschaften Griechenlands verehrt wurden.'

In this context we cannot ignore the goddess twice figured on a stámnos from Knossos found by H. G. G. Payne and published by S. Marinatos in the Jahrb. d. Deutsch. Arch. Inst. 1933 xlviii Arch. Anz. p. 310 fig. 19. My pl. xxv is from fresh photographs of the jar kindly taken for me by J. D. S. Pendlebury. This personage has spirals like snakes starting from her hips, uplifted hands, and a pólos on her head—'offenbar eine Göttin, und zwar eine missverstandene Weiterbildung der spät- und submykenischen Schlangengöttinnen von Gurnià und Prinià.' She may be dated c. 700 B.C.

A kindred, but further developed, figure occurs on the remarkable terra-cotta plaque found by the American excavators of the Agorá at Athens and published by Dr T. L. Shear in The Illustrated London News for Sept. 3, 1932 p. 345 with a col. pl., Y. Béquignon in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1933 lvii. 243 f. fig. 7. My pl. xxvi is from a photograph obtained for me from Dr Shear by E. J. P. Raven, who tells me (Jan. 30, 1934) that a full publication with a col. pl. is shortly to appear in Hesperia. The plaque ($9\frac{1}{2} \times 5$ ins., with two holes above for suspension) formed part of a dump near the base of the N. slope of the Áreios Págos, and was associated with other objects in terra-cotta—primitive figurines, gaily coloured horses with their riders, votive shields, etc.—also with 'late Geometric' vases and a 'Proto-Corinthian' lékythos. It has therefore been referred to the latter part of s. viii B.C. and regarded as a votive offering brought from the adjacent shrine of the Eumenides. It shows a goddess facing the spectator, with raised arms and spread hands (cp. supra ii. 536 fig. 406, c). Her head and neck are in relief; the rest of her is on the flat, painted in dull red and blue. She stands between two snakes, rendered in the same colours amid a vertical framework of lotos-flowers and rosettes. Dr Shear finds it hard to say whether this unique figure should be interpreted as a snake-goddess ('possibly a survival of the Minoan tradition into later times in Athens') or more definitely as 'one of the Furies.' Perhaps the spotted transverse garment worn across her chest is meant for an aigís. If so, she is a primitive pre-warlike Athena. After all, Athena Γοργῶπις (Zwicker in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. vii. 1658) or Γοργώ (K. Zeigler ib. 1641 f.) is near akin to the original Γοργώ or Γοργών. Cp. Palaiph. 31 (32) καλοῦσι δὲ Κερναῖοι τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν Γοργώ, ὥσπερ τὴν Ἄρτεμίν Θρᾷκες μὲν Βένδιν, Κρῆτες δὲ Δίκτυναν (δίκτυνναν cod. x), Λακεδαιμόνιοι δὲ Ὄρθιαν. Athena in due course was Christianised and appears on medieval leaden seals as ΜΡ ΘΥ (sc. Μήτηρ Θεοῦ) Η ΑΘΗΝΑΙΑ ΓΟΡΓΟΕΠΗΚΟΟC (infra § 9 (h) ii (a) sub fin.). The Panagia Gorgoepékoos of modern Athens has a long and interesting pedigree.

snakes, her owl[1], her olive-tree[2], her relations to the priestly king Erechtheus[3], in whose palace she had from the outset been housed[4], are indefeasible proofs of her ancient lineage. Even in the Periclean age Pheidias' great statue of the Parthenos, with a snake at her side, snakes round her waist, a snaky aigís over her shoulders, and a pillar beneath her hand[5], still perpetuated the esssential traits of a 'Minoan' prototype[6].

Another pre-Greek deity of the Akropolis was Héphaistos, whose name[7], equally unintelligible with that of Athena[8], presumably [1] Infra § 9 (h) ii (λ). [2] Supra p. 187 n. 2. [3] Supra ii. 794.

[4] Od. 7. 80 f., cp. Il. 2. 546 ff. (of later origin? See now J. M. Paton in L. D. Caskey—H. N. Fowler—J. M. Paton—G. P. Stevens The Erechtheum Cambridge, Mass. 1927 pp. 431—433).

[5] Supra ii pl. xlv (in pocket at end).

[6] On coins of the Oxyrhynchite nome showing Athena with the double axe see supra ii. 625 f. figs. 529, 530. In fig. 100 I add another of these rare pieces from a specimen, struck by Antoninus Pius, now in my collection.

Fig. 100.

[7] The various forms of the name Ἥφαιστος and the various etymologies proposed for it by scholars ancient and modern are listed by Gruppe Cult. Myth. orient. Rel. i. 105 with n. 9, Gr. Myth. Rel. pp. 1304 n. 2, 1305 n. 1 and by L. Malten in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 340—342. The latter concludes: 'Eine Deutung des Namens zu geben, ist zur Zeit noch nicht möglich; in welcher Richtung sie zu suchen ist, lehrt die oben dargestellte Entwicklungsgeschichte des Gottes. Sie ergab zunächst, dass der Gott vorgriechisch ist; für vorgriechisch wird der Name H. jetzt auch von Fick Vorgriech. Ortsn. 66 erklärt so wie der lemnische Mosychlos, an dem der Gott in früher Zeit festsitzt. Da H. bei den karisch-lykischen Völkern Kleinasiens seinen Ursprung hat, muss die Deutung im Kreise dieser Sprachidiome gesucht werden. ...Darf man von der Art des Kults aus einen vorläufigen Rückschluss wagen, so liegt es am nächsten, eine Hindeutung auf das Erdfeuer, die ursprüngliche Erscheinungsform des Gottes, auch in dem Namen zu suchen.' See further L. Malten 'Hephaistos' in the Jahrb. d. kais. deutsch. arch. Inst. 1912 xxvii. 232—264 with 12 figs.

R. Pettazzoni 'Philoktetes—Hephaistos' in the Rivista di filologia e d' istruzione classica 1909 xxxvii. 170—189 (criticised by R. Wünsch in the Archiv f. Rel. 1911 xiv. 576 f.) holds that Philoktetes and Hephaistos were originally different forms of the same non-Hellenic deity (their identity had been already asserted by F. Marx 'Philoktet—Hephaistos' in the Neue Jahrb. f. klass. Altertum 1904 xiii. 673—685) and that the name of the former throws some light on the nature of the latter. Philoktetes was healed by Pylios son of Hephaistos (Ptol. Hephaist. ap. Phot. bibl. p. 152 b 13 f. Bekker), and the priests of Hephaistos in Lemnos had curative powers (Eustath. in Il. p. 330, 12). Philoktetes, like Hephaistos, went limping. Philoktetes, like Hephaistos (supra i. 328 fig. 259), wore the pîlos. The pre-Hellenic god, who lies behind Philoktetes and Hephaistos, was equated by the Phoenicians with their Ešmun-Kadmilos. The name Kadm(il)os covers a Semitic word for 'gold'—Kadmos discovered the gold-mines of Mt Pangaion (Plin. nat. hist. 7. 197, Clem. Al. strom. 1. 16 p. 49, 6 ff. Stählin, cp. Aristot. frag. 459 Rose; Strab. 680, Steph. Byz. s.v. Ἰλλυρία)—and the names Φιλοκτήτης and Χρύση both point in the same direction. Thus Philoktetes = Hephaistos = Kadm(il)os, and we can understand the equivalence of Hephaistos and Chrysor (supra ii. 715, 1037). In fact, Kadmilos : Kabeiro (supra ii. 314 n. o) = Philoktetes : Chryse = Hephaistos (Chrysor) : Aphrodite (χρυσῆ Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1367 n. 2).

A. Fick as a great philologist merits a more patient hearing. In his Vorgriechische Ortsnamen Göttingen 1905 p. 66 he quotes with approval Steph. Byz. s.v. Λῆμνος...ἀπὸ τῆς μεγάλης λεγομένης θεοῦ, ἣν Λήμνον φασι· ταύτῃ δὲ καὶ παρθένους θύεσθαι and continues: 'Ganz fremdartig klingt auch Μόσυχλος...ob der Name des Gottes "Αφαιστος griechisch ist, kann man stark bezweifeln, jedenfalls waren die grosse Göttin, der Feuergott und der Phallos (Hermes) die Hauptgottheiten der Tyrrhener.' In Hattiden und Danubier in Griechenland Göttingen 1909 p. 46 he returns to the charge: 'Hephaistos gehört durchweg den vorgriechischen Pelagonen—Pelasgern—Tyrsenern an. Mittelpunkte seines Dienstes sind Lemnos und Attika. Andere Namen des Gottes sind Palamaon und Palamedes, in Attika und Phokis heisst er Prometheus, in Boeotien als Wildfeuer Typhaon, dessen Kampf mit Zeus um die Weltherrschaft [supra ii. 448 n. 2, 731, 826] religionsgeschichtlich als Versuch der Verehrer des Feuergottes, diesen zum Allgott zu erheben, zu denken ist. Auch der Name Hephaistos ist wohl pelasgisch; gleichgeformt ist Geraistos, vielleicht der pelasgische Name des Wassergottes, der als Buhle der Demeter d. i. der Allmutter entschieden den Pelasgern Arkadiens angehört. Die Gottheiten der Pelasger waren also: Allmutter und Phallos, und die zwei elementaren Feuer- und Wassergötter, denen sich vielleicht Hermes als Luftgottheit zugesellt.'

[8] Attempts to explain the name, which appears in Ionic as 'Αθήνη 'Αθηναίη, in Aeolic and Doric as 'Αθάνα 'Αθαναία, in Attic as 'Αθηναία 'Αθηνᾶα 'Αθηνᾶ, are collected by Preller—Robert Gr. Myth. i. 185 f., F. Dümmler in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 2007 f., Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1194 nn. 1—5.

The most interesting hypothesis so far advanced is that of another famous philologist P. Kretschmer. In Glotta 1921 xi. 282—284 he treats the name as Pelasgian or Tyrsenian and relates it on the one hand to the place-name 'Αθανασσός 'Αθανασός 'Αταναασός 'Αττανασσός (Aidan) in Phrygia with the characteristic suffix -assos (Sir W. M. Ramsay The Historical Geography of Asia Minor (Royal Geographical Society: Supplementary Papers iv) London 1890 p. 136 no. 26, id. The Cities and Bishoprics of Phrygia Oxford 1895 i. 241 ff., 249 ('Bishops of...Attanassos...Philadelphius πόλεως 'Αθανασοῦ (Athanassi) Conc. Chalced. 451. Christophorus 'Αθανασσοῦ Conc. Nicaen. II 787. Philotheos 'Αθανασσοῦ Conc. 869 (?)'), ii. 355 ff., 395 ('Philadelphius 'Αναασσοῦ...451'), W. Ruge in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 2180), on the other hand to a group of Etruscan (?) words denoting a ritual vessel of terra cotta (Paul. ex Fest. p. 18, 11 Müller Athanuvium est poculi fictilis genus, quo in sacrificiis utebantur sacerdotes Romani (W. M. Lindsay p. 17, 9 prints Atanuvium with cod. L. Th. Mommsen in the Ephem. epigr. 1899 viii. 254 n. 2 gives athanulum), G. Goetz Corpus glossariorum Latinorum Lipsiae 1888 ii. 22, 25 ff. = 1899 vi. 108 f. Atena εἶδος ποτηρίου ὀστράκου (ὀστρακίνου?) ᾧ οἱ πρυτάνεις ἐν ταῖς θυσίαις χρῶνται, ii. 47 f. = vi. 108 Atanulus (atnanulus cod. A. Swoboda in his ed. of P. Nigidius Figulus (Vindobonae 1889) p. 16 n. 0 cj. athanulus, which is accepted by P. Kretschmer) ἄγιον (ἀγγεῖον cod. d, Vulcanius cj. σφάγιον) ἱερέως σκεῦος, κειμήλιον, 1889 iv. 406, 33 = vi. 108 atanulu genus vasis, 1894 v. 591, 18 = vi. 108 atanulum genus vasis, v. 591, 46 = vi. 108 attanabo genus vasis, Nigid. frag. 9 Swoboda ap. Non. Marc. p. 58, 15 f. Lindsay itaque ex re (aere Scaligeri marg. J. H. Onions cj. aereum) in Saliaribus adtanus (A. Swoboda cj. attanus) tintinat, id est sonat, Dessau Inscr. Lat. sel. no. 5050 (the acta of Augustus' ludi saeculares, 17 B.C.), 107 and 132 ad atallam fuerunt (followed by a list of the quindecimviri present. F. Bücheler and K. Zangemeister in the Ephem. epigr. 1899 viii. 254 took atalla to be the diminutive of atana, attana, attanus)) and perhaps to ἄτταvον an Asia Minor (?) word for 'pan' or 'pot' (Hesych. s.vv. ἄττανα, ἀτταvίδες, ἀτταvίτας from Hipponax frag. 36. 3 Bergk[4], frag. 39. 9 Diehl). Kretschmer suggests that the pre-Greek Αθανον* = ἄτταvον gave rise to 'Αθάνα 'Αθαναία as 'eine Töpfergöttin,' the later Athena 'Εργάνη (Paus. 1. 24. 3 πρῶτοι μὲν γὰρ 'Αθηνᾶν ἐπωνόμασαν 'Εργάνην sc. οἱ 'Αθηναῖοι). Further, he hints that the clay vessel from which the goddess got her name may well have been regarded 'als Fetisch und Symbol...Die Glosse athanulus ἄγιον ἱερέως σκεῦος, κειμήλιον lässt doch fast an ein gralartiges heiliges Gefäss denken.'

Fig. 106.

Fig. 107.

Fig. 108.

object, found in the Amenophis iii level (1411—1375 B.C.), seems to have been connected with the cult of the serpent-goddess Astoreth or Anaïtis, who at Beth-Shan bore the Egyptianised name Antit: the head presumably represents the goddess herself (L. B. Holland in the Am. Journ. Arch. 1929 xxxiii. 198 f. fig. 10=my fig. 109). Somewhat later are the bottomless tubular stands from the same site published by A. Rowe in the Museum Journal. University of Pennsylvania 1926 pp. 296, 297, 299. I figure one which has two handles surmounted by birds in the round and windows in its sides penetrated by snakes in relief (G. Contenau Manuel d'archéologie orientale Paris 1931 ii. 1049 f. fig. 729 after S. A. Cook in the Palestine Exploration Fund. Quarterly Statement for 1926 p. 30,

Fig. 109.

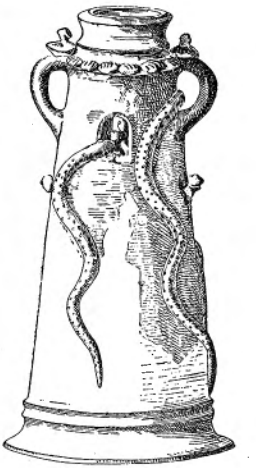

Fig. 110.

A. Rowe ib. 1927 p. 74, A. T. Olmstead History of Palestine and Syria New York—London 1931 p. 154 fig. 74). Professor S. A. Cook The Religion of ancient Palestine in the light of Archaeology London 1930 p. 98 comments: 'The name Shān (or Shĕ'ān) may be directly connected with Shaḥan or Sakhan, the Semitic name of an old Sumerian serpent deity. Upon a bowl is depicted an undulating serpent; and a pottery model of a serpent has female breasts, and a cup below for collecting the milk.' Etc. The burial pithoi from Beth-Shan (c. 1200 B.C.), which have their upper part adorned with the mask of the dead man or woman and a pair of rudimentary arms (C. L. Fisher in the Revue biblique internationale 1923 xxxii. 435 ff. fig. 9, P. Thomsen in Ebert Reallex. ii. 5 pl. 1, a, b), are hardly ad rem. A shrine of 'Middle Minoan' date (c. 2100—1580 B.C.) on one summit of Mt Korakies, a two-peaked hill at Koumasa in southern Crete, yielded four cylindrical clay vessels open at the bottom. Two of these have snaky handles formed of four loops vertically arranged on either side (S. Xanthoudides The Vaulted Tombs of Mesará trans. J. P. Droop Liverpool 1924 p. 50 pl. 33, of which nos. 5002 and 5005=my figs. 111 and 112, G. Karo in D. H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig—Erlangen 1925 vii p. viii fig. 52, Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. pp. 90 f. fig. 6, 271 f.). At Prinia in central Crete F. Halbherr in 1900 found two very similar vessels, one of which has an additional snake coiling upwards and encircling its mouth, together with a terra-cotta goddess emergent from a

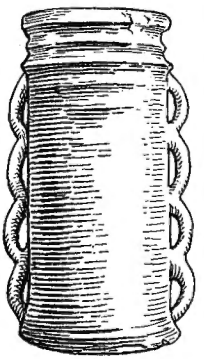

Fig. 111.

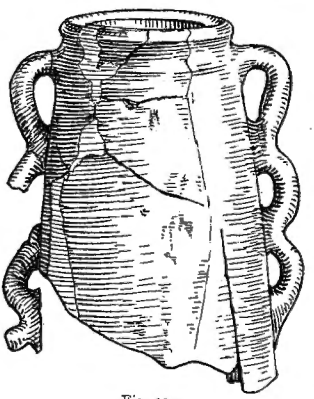

Fig. 112.

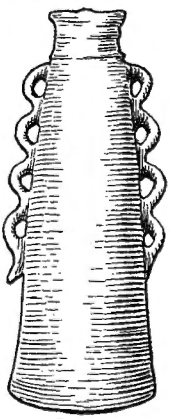

Fig. 113.

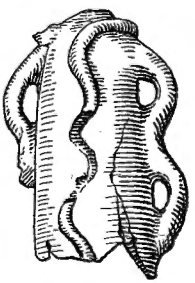

Fig. 114.

cylindrical base and the fragmentary arms of another entwined with snakes—clearly the contents of a small 'Minoan' shrine (S. Wide in the Ath. Mitth. 1901 xxvi. 247—257 figs. 1—5 (of which 4 and 5=my figs. 113 and 114) and pl. 12, Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. pp. 269 f., 271, 275, 385). Renewed excavations of the site by the Italians in 1906 led to further finds—the head of a terra-cotta figure and another tube-shaped vessel with vertical loops or handles, a ridge resembling a snake, and oval holes or apertures in the sides. But the objects associated with the new finds belong to the archaic Greek period and point to a local survival of the 'Minoan' cult (L. Pernier in the Bollettino d'arte 1908 ii. 455 ff. fig. 11 cited by R. Zahn in K. F. Kinch Fouilles de Vroulia (Rhodes) Berlin 1914 p. 28 and by Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. p. 386). The shrine of the snake-goddess at Gournia in eastern Crete (supra ii. 538), believed to be of the 'Late Minoan i' period, c. 1580—1475 B.C., had five tubular vessels still in situ. One, of which the base only remained, stood on the low plastered tripod. Round it were ranged four others. Three of these, practically complete, supplement the snaky loops by an extra handle surmounted by ritual horns; one adds a disk above the horns, another a pair of snakes crossing under the handle, the third a symbol now missing—possibly a bird (Mrs B. E. Williams in H. Boyd Hawes, B. E. Williams, R. B. Seager, and E. H. Hall Gournia, Vasiliki and other prehistoric sites on the Isthmus of Hierapetra, Crete Philadelphia 1908 p. 47 f. pl. 11,

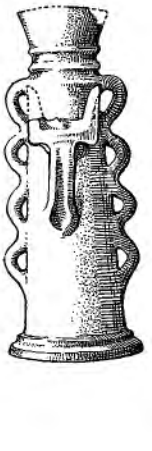

Fig. 115.

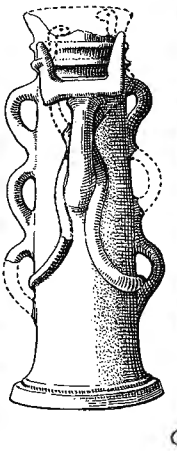

Fig. 116.

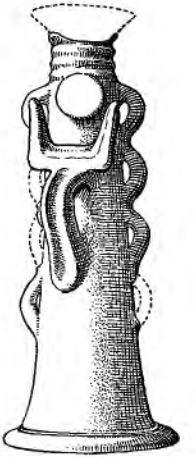

Fig. 117.

11—13=my figs. 115—117, L. Pernier in G. Mariaghiannis Antiquités Crétoises Vienne (1907) i p. vii pl. 36, 1, 2, and 4, R. Dussaud Les civilisations préhelléniques dans le bassin de la Mer Égée Paris 1910 p. 200 with fig. 142, G. Karo in D. H. Haas Bilderatlas zur Religionsgeschichte Leipzig—Erlangen 1925 vii p. viii fig. 51, Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. pp. 74 ff. fig. 3 B, 267, 271). Lastly, a tubular vessel, found in Rhodes, probably at Kameiros, and now in the Antiquarium at Berlin (inv. no. 4563), is of roughly similar shape. It is 0.285^{m} high, and again has no bottom. A ribbed handle on either side is flanked by four bosses and two snakes in relief. Three of these snakes have tongues serrated like an oak-leaf; the fourth has a tongue small and pointed. The neck of the vessel is decorated with a number of birds, separately modelled and attached, several of which are missing. The light brown clay is painted rather carelessly with maeanders, zig-zags, etc. of dark brown glaze in the geometric style—an indication that here too we have a 'Minoan' usage surviving into post-'Minoan' times (R. Zahn 'Kultgerät aus Rhodos' in K. F. Kinch Fouilles de Vroulia (Rhodes) Berlin 1914 pp. 26—34 fig. 13 a, b, and c (=my fig. 118 a, b, and c), E. Küster Die Schlange in der griechischen Kunst und

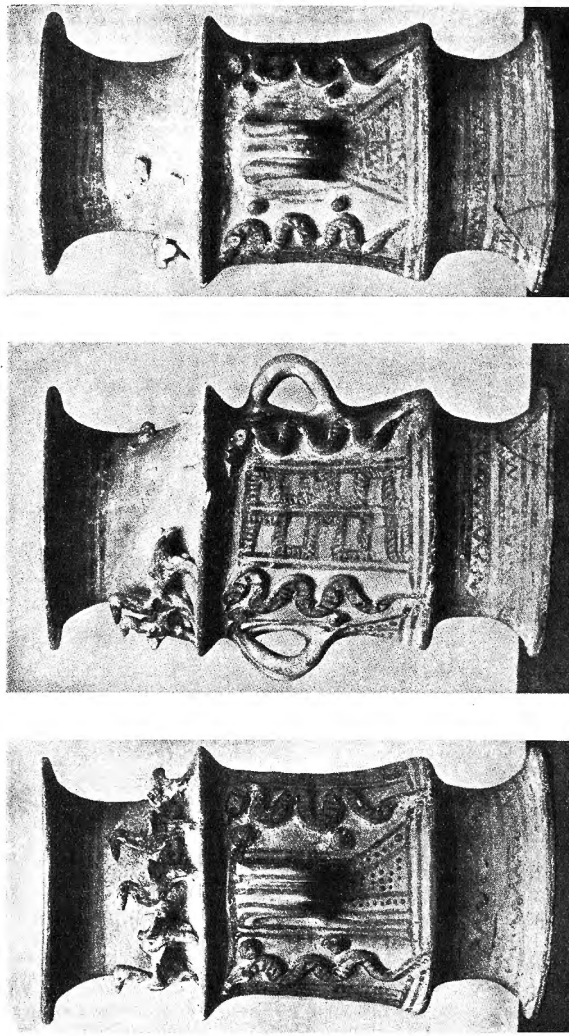

Fig. 118.

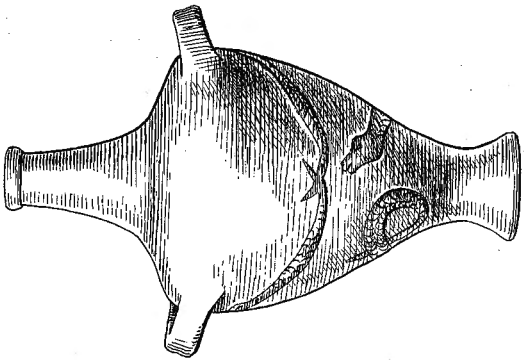

Fig. 121.

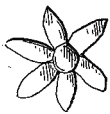

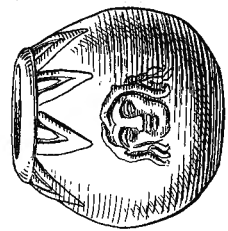

Fig. 120.

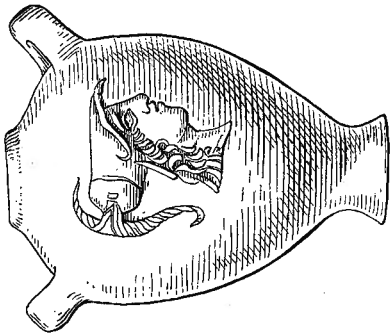

Fig. 119.

belongs to the same language as the place-name Phaistós[1]. Now if—as we have argued[2]—the 'Minoan' earth-goddess (Rhea) had for consort a 'Minoan' sky-god (Kronos) armed with a double axe, it is tempting to guess that Hephaistos, whose double axe of bronze is mentioned by Pindar as a 'holy axe[3]' and is often figured on sixth-century vases[4], was in the remote prehistoric past the veritable husband of Athena. On which showing Hephaistos and Athena Religion Giessen 1913 p. 41 f. fig. 31 (inexact), Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. pp. 273, 386 f.). Bottomless vases are in the nature of funnels, and sometimes certainly, as in the Dipylon cemetery at Athens, conveyed liquid offerings through the earth to the dead below (supra ii. 1056). It is therefore reasonable to think that the tubular vessels used in the cult of the 'Minoan' snake-goddess served a similar purpose and prove her to have been ab origine an earth-mother (R. Zahn loc. cit. p. 34, Nilsson Min.-Myc. Rel. pp. 271 ff., 386 f.). However, Sir A. J. Evans The Palace of Minos London 1935 iv. 1 pp. xii, 138 ff., having found in a 'Minoan' house at Knossos three clay tubes with cups attached to their sides, thinks that these were receptacles for domestic snakes, derived from common drain-pipes. He offers the same explanation of all the 'snake tubes' mentioned above, comparing their loops with the looped variety of water-pipe. Ingenious, but far from convincing.

(d) Hellenistic relief-ware of Graeco-Egyptian style has sometimes by way of prophylactic (?) decoration an emblem or emblems of Athena. I figure three small vases in my collection, which are made of salmon-coloured unglazed (?) clay and were found at Ephesos. They exhibit the following designs: (1) on the one side a helmeted head of Athena, on the other a Gorgóneion of beautiful type (fig. 119. Height $3\frac{1}{4}$ inches); (2) a Gorgóneion with dishevelled hair and a large six-rayed star beneath an inverted lotos-pattern round the rim (fig. 120. Height $1\frac{5}{8}$ inch); (3) two snakes with crossed tails above a single larger snake encircling the lower part of the vase (fig. 121. Height $4\frac{3}{8}$ inches).

It is perhaps not too hazardous to conjecture that Trojan Gesichtsurnen and the like point backwards to a primitive belief that earthen vessels should take the form of the earth-mother of whose very substance they were made. Be that as it may, in view of the varied types of these sacred or semi-sacred vases it is quite conceivable that—as Kretschmer supposed—Athena drew her name from a clay vessel used in her service, though I should prefer to conclude that the vessel drew its name from the goddess.

[1] I do not propose to treat Ἥφαιστος and Φαιστός as etymologically connected, though many years ago I toyed with the notion (Class. Rev. 1904 xviii. 85 n. 1). I now agree with Farnell Cults of Gk. States v. 390 n.[a]: 'There is no vraisemblance in the supposition.' Platon, who might be cited in its support, though a giant in philosophy, was but a dwarf in philology (Plat. Crat. 407 C ΕΡΜ. τί δὲ δὴ τὸν Ἥφαιστον*; πῇ λέγεις;* ΣΩ. ἢ τὸν γενναῖον τὸν φάεος ἵστορα ἐρωτᾷς; ΕΡΜ. ἔοικα. ΣΩ. οὐκοῦν οὗτος μὲν παντὶ δῆλος Φαῖστος ὤν, τὸ ἦτα προσελκυσάμενος;). Nevertheless it remains probable that the language which produced the word Φαιστός produced also the word Ἥφαιστος.

[2] Supra ii. 548 ff.

[3] Pind. Ol. 7. 35 ff. ἀνίχ' Ἀφαίστου τέχναισιν | χαλκελάτῳ πελέκει πα|τέρος Ἀθαναία κορυφὰν κατ' ἄκραν | ἀνορούσαισ' ἀλάλα|ξεν ὑπερμάκει βοᾷ and frag. 34 Bergk[4], 34 Schroeder ap. Hephaist. 15. 13 p. 51, 16 Consbruch ὃς καὶ τυπεὶς ἀγνῷ πελέκει τέκετο ξανθὰν Ἀθάναν (quoted also, less exactly, by Marius Plotius Sacerdos de metris in H. Keil Grammatici Latini vi. 545, 5). Later writers commonly use the term πέλεκυς (Apollod. 1. 3. 6, Loukian. dial. deor. 8, Philostr. mai. imagg. 2. 27. 1, Nonn. Dion. 27. 324, 42. 250, schol. Plat. Tim. 23 D—E p. 948 a 12), sometimes βουπλήξ in the sense of 'an axe for felling an ox' (Nonn. Dion. 8. 83, 27. 325, et. mag. p. 371, 41). Cp. the πέλεκυς presented by Hephaistos to Polytechnos of Kolophon (supra ii. 693).

[4] Infra § 9 (h) ii (θ).

Kýlix from Nola, now in the British Museum:
Anesidora fashioned by Hephaistos and adorned by Athena.

See page 201 n. 7.

would be but local equivalents of Kronos and Rhea[1]. Some such assumption at least accounts for their persistent juxtaposition in classical times. Homer's cunning craftsman, who overlays gold on silver, is 'the man that Hephaistos and Pallas Athene have taught all manner of art, and full of grace are the works of his hand[2].' The Homeric Hymn to Hephaistos[3] opens on the same note:

> Sing, tuneful Muse, Hephaistos and his craft,
> Who with bright-eyed Athena taught mankind
> All splendid work on earth, whereas of yore
> Men dwelt like brute beasts in their mountain-dens.

Solon's[4] description of the artificer owes something to these epic writers:

> Taught by Athena and Hephaistos' skill
> Another learns his trade and earns his meal.

Platon[5] too with curious frequency insists on the partnership of Hephaistos and Athena.

Their association is further attested by mythology, art, and actual cult. If Hephaistos fashioned woman, Athena adorned her—a story as old as Hesiod[6] and brilliantly illustrated by the Anesidora-cup (pl. xxvii)[7].

[1] This squares with the fact that in Crete, where Kronos and Rhea bulked big, Hephaistos (Farnell Cults of Gk. States v. 389 and L. Malten in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 314 f., 341: both rightly attach little weight to Diod. 5. 74 and Paus. 8. 53. 5) and Athena (U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorff in the Sitzungsb. d. Akad. d. Wiss. Berlin 1921 p. 952. On Athena Κυδωνία see Prehn in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. xi. 2308) were nobodies.

[2] Od. 6. 233 f. ὃν Ἥφαιστος δέδαεν καὶ Παλλὰς Ἀθήνη | τέχνην παντοίην, χαρίεντα δὲ ἔργα τελείει.

[3] H. Heph. 1 ff. Ἥφαιστον κλυτόμητιν ἀείδεο, Μοῦσα λίγεια, | ὃς μετ' Ἀθηναίης γλαυκώπιδος ἀγλαὰ ἔργα | ἀνθρώπους ἐδίδαξεν ἐπὶ χθονός, οἱ τὸ πάρος περ | ἄντροις ναιετάασκον ἐν οὔρεσιν, ἠύτε θῆρες.

[4] Sol. frag. 13. 49 f. Bergk[4], 1. 49 f. Diehl ἄλλος Ἀθηναίης τε καὶ Ἡφαίστου πολυτέχνεω | ἔργα δαεὶς χειροῖν ξυλλέγεται βίοτον.

[5] Plat. Prot. 321 D (Prometheus) κλέπτει Ἡφαίστου καὶ Ἀθηνᾶς τὴν ἔντεχνον σοφίαν σὺν πυρί (supra i. 324), polit. 274 C πῦρ μὲν παρὰ Προμηθέως, τέχναι δὲ παρ' Ἡφαίστου καὶ τῆς συντέχνου, Kritias 109 C—D Ἥφαιστος δὲ κοινὴν καὶ Ἀθηνᾶ φύσιν ἔχοντες, ἅμα μὲν ἀδελφὴν ἐκ ταὐτοῦ πατρός, ἅμα δὲ φιλοσοφίᾳ φιλοτεχνίᾳ τε ἐπὶ τὰ αὐτὰ ἐλθόντες, οὕτω μίαν ἄμφω λῆξιν τήνδε τὴν χώραν εἰλήχατον ὡς οἰκείαν καὶ πρόσφορον ἀρετῇ καὶ φρονήσει πεφυκυῖαν, ἄνδρας δὲ ἀγαθοὺς ἐμποιήσαντες αὐτόχθονας ἐπὶ νοῦν ἔθεσαν τὴν τῆς πολιτείας τάξιν, legg. 920 D Ἡφαίστου καὶ Ἀθηνᾶς ἱερὸν τὸ τῶν δημιουργῶν γένος, οἳ τὸν βίον ἡμῖν ξυγκατεσκευάκασι τέχναις.

[6] Hes. theog. 571 ff., o.d. 60 ff., 70 ff.

[7] Brit. Mus. Cat. Vases iii. 389 ff. no. D 4, A. S. Murray—A. H. Smith White Athenian Vases in the British Museum London 1896 p. 29 pl. 19, E. Gerhard in the Winckelmannsfest-Progr. Berlin i. 5—7 pl. 1 (in gold and colours), Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. iii. 149 ff., 159 f. pl. 44, A. Rapp in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 2057 f.

fig., Harrison Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. pp. 450—452 fig. 50. Pl. xxvii is from a fresh photograph.

Furtwängler—Reichhold Gr. Vasenmalerei i. 283, followed by Hoppin Red-fig. Vases ii. 342 no. 22, attributes this lýlix to the 'Meister der Penthesileia-Schale'; Pfuhl Malerei u. Zeichnung d. Gr. ii. 530 f., to E. Buschor's 'Pferdemeister.' But J. D. Beazley Attic red-figured Vases in American Museums Cambridge Mass. 1918 p. 129 denies the attribution, and in his Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 261 no. 6 describes the vase as in the 'Art des Pistoxenosmalers.'

Found at Nola in 1828 or 1829, this great lýlix (height 5 inches: diameter 12¼ inches) passed through the Hope and the Bale collections before being purchased in 1881 for the British Museum. The exterior is red-figured and shows scenes in the palaístra (?). The interior has black outlines on a white ground, with inner markings in brown. Anesidora's chitón and Hephaistos' himátion are brown with details in purple and white. Athena has a chitón with a purple girdle, and a dark brown aigís with purple border and Gorgóneion in white. The head-dresses and the top of the hammer are moulded and gilt on a raised ground. Substantial parts of the design are missing. The heads of Anesidora and Athena together with the right arm of the latter have been added in pencil, while part of the former's chitón has been restored in water-colour. The names are ΑΦΕΝΑΑ, [Α]ΝΕΣΙΔΟΡΑ, ΗΕΦΑ[Ι]ΣΤΟΣ (P. Kretschmer Die Griechischen Vaseninschriften Gütersloh 1894 p. 203 f. no. 187, correcting the Corp. inscr. Gr. iv no. 7416).

The moment represented is that described by Hes. theog. 573 ff. ζῶσε δὲ καὶ κόσμησε θεὰ γλαυκῶπις Ἀθήνη | ἀργυφέῃ ἑσθῆτι·... | ἀμφὶ δέ οἱ στεφάνην χρυσέην κεφαλῇφιν ἔθηκε, | τὴν αὐτὸς ποίησε περικλυτὸς Ἀμφιγυήεις | ἀσκήσας παλάμῃσι, χαριζόμενος Διὶ πατρί. And the composition as a whole is comparable with that of the Triptolemos-relief from Eleusis (Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 106 ff. pls. 24 and 25 with bibliography, Brunn—Bruckmann Denkm. der gr. und röm. Sculpt. pl. 7, Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 140 ff. fig. 68, Reinach Rép. Reliefs ii. 339 no. 3).

Ἀνησιδώρα, like Πανδώρα, was an epithet of the earth-mother (Hesych. Ἀνησιδώρα· ἡ γῆ, διὰ τὸ τοὺς καρποὺς ἀνιέναι, id. Πανδώρα· ἡ γῆ, ὅτι τὰ πρὸς τὸ ζῆν πάντα δωρεῖται. ἀφ' οὗ καὶ ζείδωρος καὶ ἀνησιδώρα=schol. Aristoph. av. 971 Πανδώρα· τῇ γῇ, ἐπειδὴ πάντα τὰ πρὸς τὸ ζῆν δωρεῖται. ἀφ' οὗ καὶ ζείδωρος καὶ ἀνησιδώρα, et. mag. p. 108, 31 Ἀνησιδώρα· ἡ γῆ, Eustath. in Il. p. 1057, 47 f. ἕτεροι δὲ Δωδώνην ἀλληγοροῦντες ἐνταῦθα τὴν γῆν φασι <τιμᾶσθαι (ins. A.B.C.)> παρὰ τῷ δῶ δώσω, ὡς δότειραν καὶ ἀνησιδώραν καὶ ζείδωρον (cp. the Dodonaean chant Γᾶ καρποὺς ἀνίει κ.τ.λ. cited supra i. 524 n. 8, ii. 350 n. 1). In Alkiphr. epist. 1. 3 χρηστὸν ἡ γῆ καὶ ἡ βῶλος ἀκίνδυνον. οὐ μάτην γοῦν ἀνεισιδώραν ταύτην ὀνομάζουσιν Ἀθηναῖοι ἀνιεῖσαν δῶρα, δι' ὧν ἐστι ζῆν καὶ σώζεσθαι R. Hercher omits the second sentence (as a gloss?)). From Ge it passed to her 'offshoot' (supra i. 396 f.) Demeter, who was likewise empowered γῆς καρπὸν ἀνήσειν (h. Dem. 332). Thus in the Attic deme Phlya the cult of Ge called Μεγάλη Θεός was supplemented by that of Demeter Ἀνησιδώρα and by that of Kore Πρωτογόνη (Paus. 1. 31. 4 cited supra ii. 251 n. 2 plus ii. 1066). Demeter Ἀνησιδώρα was perhaps worshipped in Melite, another deme of the tribe Kekropis (Plout. symp. 9. 14. 4 καὶ γὰρ ὑμῖν (sc. τοῖς Μελιτεῦσιν) ἐστι Δημήτηρ Ἀνησιδώρα), and her appellative figures in the lists drawn up by the grammarians (Schöll—Studemund anecd. i. 270 Ἐπίθετα Δημήτρας...3 ἀνησιδώρας, 277 Αἱ τῆς Δήμητρος κλήσεις·...ἀνησιδώρα, cp. 282 Κλήσεις Δήμητρος...ὀνησιδώρα (sic)).

Starting from this fact archaeologists, in primis C. Robert (Archaeologische Maerchen aus alter und neuer Zeit Berlin 1886 p. 194 ff. pls. 4 and 5, 'Pandora' in Hermes 1914 xlix. 17—38 with 2 figs.), J. E. Harrison (Myth. Mon. Anc. Ath. p. 451 f., 'Delphika' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1899 xix. 232 ff. figs. 11, 12, *Proleg. Gk. Rel.*² p. 276 ff. figs. 67—71), and P. Gardner ('A New Pandora Vase' in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1901 xxi. 1 ff. pl. 1), have gone far towards explaining the origin of the Anesidora-type. The story shapes itself as follows. The ancients seem to have regarded the earliest agricultural operations of the year as a kind of evocatio, by means of which the earth-powers were wakened from their winter's sleep and summoned to help the farmer in his work. When the ager Tarquiniensis was being ploughed and the furrow was driven deep, up came on a sudden Tages, a boy in appearance but an old man in wisdom, scared the ploughman and delivered his auguries to the Etruscans (Cic. de div. 2. 50, Ov. met. 15. 553 ff.: see further C. Pauli and W. Schultz in Roscher Lex. Myth. v. 3 ff.). Similarly in Greek belief, when the hard earth is broken up by men with mallets or mattocks,—and it must be remembered that the most primitive form of agriculture was Hackbau (E. Hahn in M. Ebert Reallexikon der Vorgeschichte Berlin 1926 v. 12 f. pl. 11)—up comes Mother Earth herself in answer to their summons. Her epiphany, though nowhere noted in literature, is given on a series of vases (C. Robert Archaeologische Maerchen pl. 5,

Fig. 122.

Fig. 123.

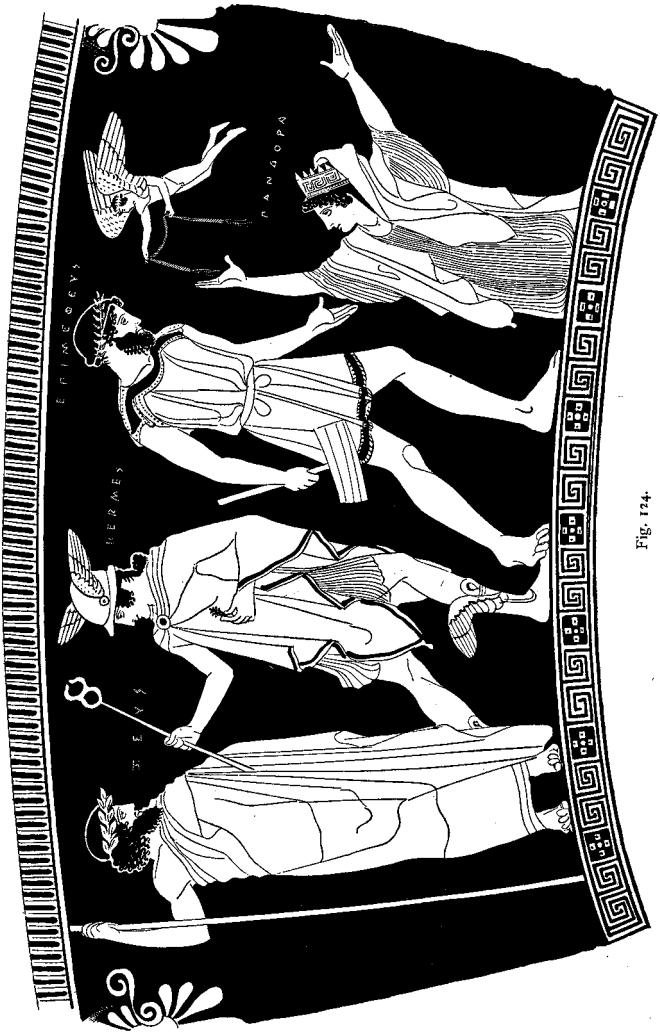

Fig. 124.

But the Anesidora-cup is not the only witness. The fact is that from the beginning of the fifth century[1] onwards classical art shows a well-marked tendency to bring together the craftsmen's god and the craftsmen's goddess. A fragmentary design from the outside of a red-figured kýlix painted in the style of Euphronios (fig. 125)[2] has Hephaistos seated with a phiále in his right hand and a double axe or hammer in his left. By his side stands Athena with helmet, aigís, and spear. Her hair and bracelet, like his phiále, are in gilded relief, and suggest that this is no trivial occasion. Equally impressive is the eastern frieze of the Parthenon (supra ii pl. xliv), which again shows Hephaistos seated, but this time with Athena seated too. He turns towards her, as Hera towards Zeus, the pre-Hellenic exactly balancing the Hellenic pair. A broken relief from Epidauros, carved in Pentelic marble c. 400 B.C. and now preserved in the National Museum at Athens (fig. 126)[3], has another masterly composition.

A, B, C). Of these I reproduce the earliest, a black-figured lékythos at Paris (De Ridder Cat. Vases de la Bibl. Nat. i. 197 f. no. 298, Lenormant—de Witte Él. mon. cér. i. 162 ff. pl. 52, Welcker Alt. Denkm. iii. 201 ff. pl. 15, 1, W. Fröhner Les Musées de France Paris 1873 p. 72 (L) col. pl. 22 (= my fig. 122)), which shows the head and lifted hands of Ge rising from the ground in response to the hammerers, and the most elaborate, a red-figured hydría in the Louvre (W. Fröhner Choix de vases grecs inédits de la collection du Prince Napoléon Paris 1867 p. 24 ff. pl. 6, id. Les Musées de France Paris 1873 p. 68 ff. col. pl. 21 = my fig. 123), which transforms the men with mallets into Silenoi with mattocks and makes Ge emerge from the broken soil as a great white head in three-quarter position, welcomed by a pair of hovering Erotes and a sudden growth of leaf and tendril. Such a scene could be easily re-interpreted as the making of a large female figure, cp. the title of Sophokles' Satyr-play Πανδώρα ἢ σφυροκόποι (Soph. frag. 441—445 Nauck[2], 482—486 Jebb). It was in fact modified to express the making of Pandora out of earth (Hes. theog. 571 γαίης, o.d. 61 γαῖαν ὕδει φύρειν, 70 ἐκ γαίης) or clay (Soph. frag. 441 Nauck[2], 482 Jebb καὶ πρῶτον ἄρχου πηλὸν ὀργάζειν χεροῖν, cp. Apollod. 1. 7. 2 ἔπλασαν, Hyg. fab. 142 ex luto), as may be seen from a red-figured volute-krátēr at Oxford (P. Gardner in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1901 xxi. 1 ff. pl. 1 (= my fig. 124), J. E. Harrison Proleg. Gk. Rel.[2] p. 280 f. fig. 71, C. Robert in Hermes 1914 xlix. 17 ff. fig.), on which Pandora emerges from the ground quite in the manner of Ge, and her maker Epimetheus—a somewhat cynical doublet of Prometheus (supra i. 329 n. 4)—still holds a large-sized mallet; the hovering Eros marks Pandora as Epimetheus' bride. All the figures named on this vase, Zeus, Hermes, Epimetheus, Pandora are Hellenic. The British Museum kýlix (pl. xxvii) is of interest because it transfers the Hellenic myth to the pre-Hellenic deities Athena and Hephaistos. In the process Pandora, re-named Anesidora, becomes less like the emergent Ge, while the gilded hammer of Hephaistos is less reminiscent of the countryman's rude tool.

[1] L. Malten in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. viii. 348 cites in this connexion a black-figured sherd from the Akropolis at Athens noted by W. Dörpfeld in the Ath. Mitth. 1888 xiii. 109 f. But this is not ad rem: see Graef Ant. Vasen Athen p. 67 no. 601 b pl. 28 ('wahrscheinlich von einer Athenageburt').

[2] P. Wolters in the Ath. Mitth. 1888 xiii. 104 f. fig. (= my fig. 125. Scale ½), Hoppin Red-fig. Vases i. 407 no. 18 bis, J. D. Beazley Attische Vasenmaler des rotfigurigen Stils Tübingen 1925 p. 61 no. 13.

[3] A. Furtwängler in the Sitzungsber. d. kais. bayr. Akad. d. Wiss. Phil.-hist. Classe

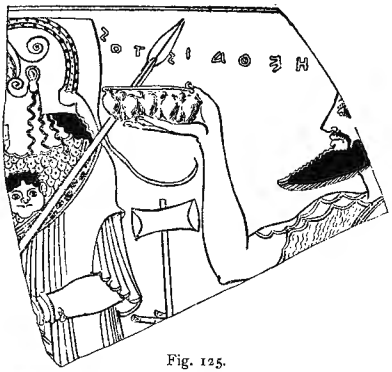

Fig. 125.

Fig. 126.

Hephaistos leaning on his staff presents a helmet to Athena, who stands before him in the pose of the Dresden 'Lemnia.' An archaistic relief from Greece now in the Jacobsen collection (fig. 127)[1] repeats the motif of Hephaistos presenting the helmet, but combines him awkwardly enough with an Athena in the 'Promachos'-attitude. A fresh turn is given to the kaleidoscope by the artist who designed a well-known sarcophagus in the Villa Albani[2]. A procession of deities bringing gifts for the marriage of Peleus and Thetis is 1897 p. 289 ff. with fig., E. Reisch in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1898 i. 79 ff. fig. 37 (= my fig. 126), B. Sauer Das sogenannte Theseion Leipzig 1899 p. 248 ff., E. Löwy in the text to Einzelaufnahmen v. 27 ff. no. 1256, Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. p. 369 ff. no. 1423 pl. 68 with bibliography.

Furtwängler took this relief to represent the Athena Lemnía of Pheidias receiving a helmet from Hephaistos the natural protector of Athenian klerouchoi in Lemnos. To account for the relief having been found at Epidauros, he suggested that it may have decorated the base of a stéle bearing some decree of the said klerouchoi.

Reisch and Sauer regard the subject as reflecting the Hephaistos and Athena Hephaistía made by Alkamenes for the Hephaisteion (the so-called 'Theseion') at Athens. See further E. A. Gardner in the Journ. Hell. Stud. 1899 xix. 6 ff.

Löwy holds that the god is not Hephaistos at all, but a common type of Asklepios. He thinks that Athena, paying a friendly visit to Asklepios, here doffs her armour in token of the guest-friendship enjoyed by Athenians at Epidauros, while Asklepios extends his right hand towards her with a gesture of greeting (cp. an Attic relief of 398/7 B.C. published by P. Foucart in the Bull. Corr. Hell. 1878 ii. 37 ff. pl. 10, Collignon Hist. de la Sculpt. gr. ii. 145 fig. 71, E. Löwy in the text to Einzelaufnahmen v. 2 f. no. 1212). But the absence of a snake (unless indeed it was added in paint, which is just conceivable) tells heavily against the identification of the god as Asklepios (contrast e.g. Svoronos Ath. Nationalmus. no. 2985 pl. 197, 1); and his right hand was certainly touching the helmet, not greeting the goddess.

Svoronos, ingenious as ever, agrees with Löwy in naming the god Asklepios, but argues that Athena is offering him her helmet and shield. In this we are to see a symbolic allusion to the events of the year 338 B.C., when Philip after the victory of Chaironeia marched against Sparta at the head of an irresistible force. In the nick of time Asklepios came to the rescue from Epidauros (Isyll. F 65 f. Powell, E 60 f. Diehl τοῖς 'Ασκληπιὸς <ἦ>λθε βοαθόος ἐξ 'Επιδαύρου | τιμῶν 'Ηρακλέος γενεάν· ἃς φείδετο ἅρα Ζεύς) and appeared to the boy Isyllos clad in golden armour (Isyll. F 68 f. Powell, E 63 f. Diehl τῶι τύγα ποστείχοντι συνάντησας σὺν ὅπλοισιν | λαμπόμενος χρυσέοισ', 'Ασκλαπιέ). Svoronos surmises that Athens sent arms to Sparta through the agency of Epidauros, and that this relief was set up in Epidauros to commemorate the fact as soon as the death of Alexander made an anti-Macedonian dedication possible. Accordingly he would date the relief c. 322 B.C., comparing a very similar relief of that year (Ath. Nationalmus. p. 246 f. no. 1331 pl. 36, 1). The whole hypothesis is clever, but frail.

[1] P. Arndt La Glyptothèque Ny-Carlsberg Munich 1896 p. 31 f. pl. 20, c (= my fig. 127), Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek i no. 35 pl. 3, E. Reisch in the Jahresh. d. oest. arch. Inst. 1898 i. 82.

[2] G. Winckelmann Monumenti antichi inediti Roma 1767 p. 151 ff. pl. 111, G. Zoega Li bassirilievi antichi di Roma Roma 1808 i. 249 pls. 52, 53, Overbeck Gall. her. Bildw. i. 201 f. Atlas pl. 8, 8, Müller—Wieseler Denkm. d. alt. Kunst ii. 4. 65 ff. pl. 75, 961, A. Baumeister in his Denkm. i. 700 f. fig. 759, A. Rapp in Roscher Lex. Myth. i. 2733, Robert Sark.-Relfs ii. 2 ff. pl. 1, 1, 1*a*, 1*b*, Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 143 no. 1, W. Helbig Führer durch die öffentlichen Sammlungen klassischer Altertümer in Rom[2] Leipzig 1913 ii. 436 f. no. 1887.

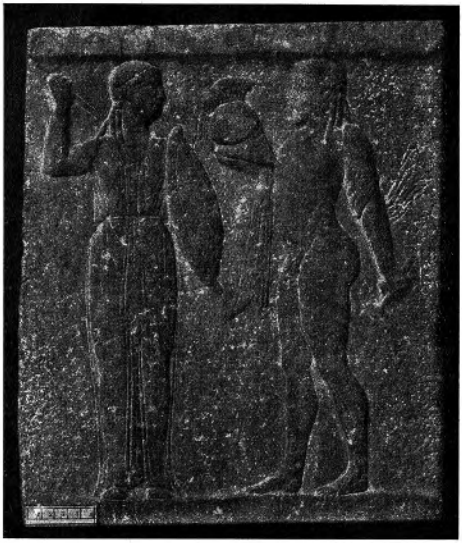

Fig. 127.

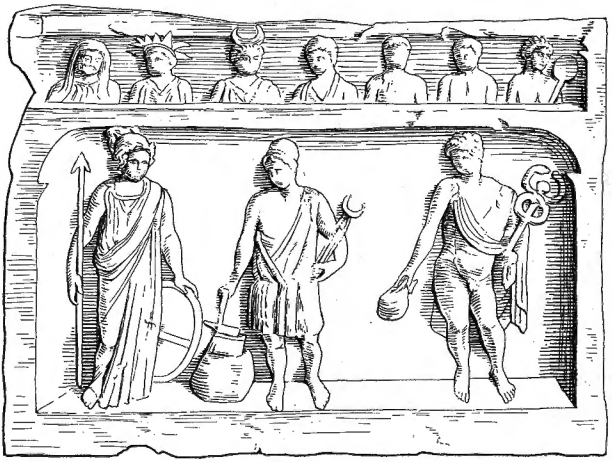

Fig. 128.

headed by Hephaistos and Athena, the former bearing sword[1] and shield, the latter helmet and spear[2]. Since the whole composition is ingeniously built up of pre-existing types[3], we must suppose that Hephaistos and Athena as armourers were already sufficiently familiar. In this capacity we can trace them further afield. Crude provincial reliefs from Heddernheim (figs. 128, 129)[4] show a group

Fig. 129.

[1] On the famous μάχαιρα made by Hephaistos for Peleus (Hes. frag. 110 Flach, 79 Rzach ap. schol. Pind. Nem. 4. 95; schol. Pind. Nem. 4. 88; schol. Aristoph. nub. 1063; Zenob. 5. 20, Makar. 5. 86; Souid. s.v. μέγα φρονεῖ μᾶλλον ἢ Πηλεὺς ἐπὶ τῇ μαχαίρᾳ) see L. Bloch in Roscher Lex. Myth. iii. 1832 f. Other Ἡφαιστότευκτα are listed by Gruppe Gr. Myth. Rel. p. 1309 f. and C. Picard in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. v. 998.

[2] Cheiron presented Peleus with a spear made of ash-wood from Mt Pelion (Il. 16. 143 f. = ib. 19. 390 f., Cypria frag. 2 Kinkel ap. schol. A.D. Il. 16. 140, Apollod. 3. 13. 5. The schol. A.D. Il. 16. 140 adds φασὶ δὲ Ἀθηνᾶν μὲν ξέσαι αὐτό, Ἥφαιστον δὲ κατασκευάσαι).

[3] W. Helbig op. cit. ii. 437.

[4] E. Maass Die Tagesgötter in Rom und den Provinzen aus der Kultur des Niederganges of three standing deities—Volcanus with Minerva at his right hand and Mercurius at his left—surmounted by busts representing the days of the week[1]. Volcanus is here possibly a Roman substitute for Donar[2], Minerva for Holda[3], Mercurius for Wodan[4]. In any case Volcanus and Minerva patronise arts and crafts, while Mercurius encourages trade. A contrast to these poor efforts is provided by the handsome numismatic types of Rome and Romanised Greece. Magnificent medallions issued by Antoninus Pius in his own name

Fig. 130.

(fig. 131)[5] and in that of his wife Faustina the Elder[6] portray the ambitious scene of Hephaistos forging a thunderbolt for the Thunderer's daughter. She stands before him, her right hand outstretched to take the bolt, her left resting on her hip. Behind der antiken Welt Berlin 1902 p. 233 f. with figs. 25 (= my fig. 128) and 26 (= my fig. 129), Reinach Rép. Reliefs iii. 526 no. 4, 528 no. 8, Germania Romana Bamberg 1922 p. xvi pl. 53, 3.

[1] Supra ii. 69 f.

[2] Supra ii. 63 n. 1. But see on the other side G. Wissowa in Roscher Lex. Myth. vi. 367.

[3] Supra ii. 65, 66 n. 0, 94 n. 1.

[4] Supra ii. 59, 63 n. 0, 69, 94 n. 1, 386 n. 6.

[5] Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 65 f. fig., Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] ii. 388 no. 1156 fig., Stevenson—Smith—Madden Dict. Rom. Coins p. 916, Kubitschek Röm. Medaillons Wien p. 3 no. 24 pl. 2, Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 18 nos. 77 and 78 (140—143 A.D.) pl. 52, 4, 18 no. 83 (155 A.D.) pl. 51, 3 (= my fig. 130).

[6] Brit. Mus. Cat. Medallions p. 12 no. 6 pl. 17, 3, Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 26 no. 18 pl. 59, 1.

her we perceive shield, snake, and olive-tree—the insignia of the Athenian goddess. Another medallion of Antoninus Pius (fig. 131)[1], followed by imperial coins of Samos[2], Thyateira (fig. 132)[3], and Magnesia ad Maeandrum[4], harks back to older models by combining the pillar of the Parthénos with the helmet of the 'Lemnia.' Yet another of Antoninus' numerous medallions (fig. 133)[5] shows Hephaistos holding a hammer and forging a shield on his anvil. Before him is a helmet set on a tall cippus, behind him a shield, and in the background uplifted on a pedestal the statue of Athena Parthénos. Finally, a white paste of the Graeco-Roman period (s. i B.C.—s. i A.D.) now at Berlin has the head of Hephaistos eclipsing that of Athena, both heads being in profile on disks resembling coins[6].

Fig. 131.

Fig. 132.

Fig. 133.

Of greater importance than these artistic variations of a common theme is the evidence supplied by definite religious usage. Hephaistos and Athena appear to have had a joint festival, the Chalkeia, on the last day of Pyanopsion[7] at the very beginning of [1] Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 51 fig., Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] ii. 384 f. no. 1144 fig. (= my fig. 131).

[2] Head Hist. num.[2] p. 606.

[3] Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Lydia p. 306 pl. 31, 5 (= my fig. 132) Commodus, Hunter Cat. Coins ii. 469 no. 14 Commodus, Rasche Lex. Num. xi. 946, 947.

[4] Imhoof-Blumer Monn. gr. p. 292 no. 92 Maximinus, Rasche Lex. Num. xi. 947, Head Hist. num.[2] p. 583.

[5] Fröhner Méd. emp. rom. p. 63 f. fig., Cohen Monn. emp. rom.[2] ii. 387 f. no. 1155 fig., Gnecchi Medagl. Rom. ii. 18 no. 82 (152 A.D.) pl. 52, 7 (= my fig. 133).

[6] Furtwängler Geschnitt. Steine Berlin p. 196 no. 4875 pl. 35, G. Winckelmann Monumenti antichi inediti Roma 1767 i. 208 ff. ('Ulisse e Telemaco'!) pl. 153.

[7] Harpokr. s.v. Χαλκεῖα· ...τὰ Χαλκεῖα ἑορτὴ παρ' Ἀθηναίοις < τῇ Ἀθηνᾷ (ins. Meursius) > ἀγομένη Πυανεψιῶνος ἐνῃ καὶ νέᾳ, χειρώναξι κοινή, μάλιστα δὲ χαλκεῦσιν, ὥς φησιν Ἀπολλώνιος ὁ Ἀχαρνεύς (Frag. hist. Gr. iv. 313 Müller, Apollonios of Acharnai (c. 100 B.C. according to E. Schwartz in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. ii. 134 no. 72) περὶ τῶν Ἀθήνησιν ἑορτῶν frag. 3 (Tresp Frag. gr. Kultschr. p. 99 f.)). Φανόδημος δὲ οὐκ Ἀθηνᾷ φησιν ἄγεσθαι τὴν ἑορτὴν ἀλλ' Ἡφαίστῳ (Phanodemos (on whom see W. Christ Geschichte der griechischen Litteratur[6] München 1920 ii. 1. 110) frag. 22 (Frag. hist. Gr. i. 369 Müller)).

winter[1]. Apollonios of Acharnai, a writer on Athenian festivals, states that the rite was observed by all the craftsmen, especially the coppersmiths, of Athens. Souidas remarks that some called it the Athenaia, while others described it as a festival of the whole folk[2]. It was, he adds, an ancient festival once celebrated by all the people, which had come to be viewed as an affair of the artisans only, since Hephaistos had wrought bronze in Attike. Phanodemos the Atticist even denied that Athena had any part or lot in it[3]. But here, as V. von Schoeffer[4] points out, he must have been mistaken, for this was the day on which the priestesses with the Arrhephóroi began to weave Athena's péplos[5]. Moreover, we have no sufficient γέγραπται δὲ καὶ Μενάνδρῳ δρᾶμα Χαλκεῖα. Souid. s.v. Χαλκεῖα· ἑορτὴ Ἀθήνησιν, ἃ τινες Ἀθήναια καλοῦσιν· οἱ δὲ Πάνδημον διὰ τὸ ὑπὸ πάντων ἄγεσθαι, Χαλκεῖα δὶς· ἑορτὴ ἀρχαία καὶ δημώδης πάλαι, ὕστερον δὲ ὑπὸ μόνων ἠγετο τῶν τεχνιτῶν, ὅτι ὁ Ἥφαιστος ἐν τῇ Ἀττικῇ χαλκὸν εἰργάσατο. ἔστι δὲ ἕνη καὶ νέα τοῦ Πυανεψιῶνος· ἐν ᾗ καὶ < αἱ (ins. A.B.C.) > ἱέρειαι μετὰ τῶν ἀρρηφόρων τὸν πέπλον διάζονται, Χαλκεῖα ter· ἑορτὴ παρ' Ἀθηναίοις κ.τ.λ. (from Harpokr. loc. cit.). Souid. Χαλκεῖα bis is repeated by the et. mag. p. 805, 43 ff. and in part by Eustath. in Il. p. 284, 36 f. Harpokr. Χαλκεῖα is transcribed in extenso by Favorin. lex. p. 1854, 27 ff.

[1] See the diagram supra i. 691 fig. 511.

[2] On the connotation of the word πάνδημος see W. Dittenberger 'ΔΙΟΝΤΣΟΣ ΔΗΜΟΤΕΛΗΣ' in Hermes 1891 xxvi. 474 ff. citing Zeus Πάνδημος (Corp. inscr. Att. iii. 1 no. 7, 17 f. [τοῦ Διὸς το]ῦ Ἐλευθερίου καὶ πρὸ|[τοῦ ἱεροῦ − − − τ]οῦ Διὸς τοῦ Παν[δήμου]. Cp. quasi-autonomous bronze coins of Synnada with obv. head of ΙϹVϹ ΠΑΝΔΗΜΟϹ, rev. CVNNAΔЄΩN IΩNΩN Mt Persis (?) (Imhoof-Blumer Choix de monn. gr.[1] pl. 6, 194 (= my fig. 134), id. Monn. gr. p. 413 no. 157, Weber Cat. Coins iii. 2 no. 7181 pl. 256) or CVNNA ΔЄΩN Amaltheia holding infant Zeus with goat at her feet (Imhoof-Blumer Monn. gr. p. 413 no. 158) and imperial bronze coins of the same town with rev. Zeus enthroned with Nike in right hand and sceptre in left [I]ЄVϹΠΑΝΔΗΜΟϹϹVNNAΔЄΩN (Brit. Mus. Cat. Coins Phrygia p. 399 no. 39 Domitian (= my fig. 135 from a cast)), ZЄVϹϹ ΠΑΝΔΗ[ΜΟϹ] CVNNAΔЄΩ N (Imhoof-Blumer Kleinas. Münzen i. 294 no. 14 Nerva, now at Berlin), or ΔΙΑ ΠΑΝΔΗΜΟΝ CVNNAЄIϹ (sic) (Mionnet Descr. de méd. ant. iv. 368 no. 987 Nerva) or CVNNAΔЄIϹ (id. ibid. and Suppl. vii. 622 no. 593 Nerva, after D. Sestini Descrizione di altre medaglie greche del Museo del Signore Carlo d'Ottavio Fontana di Trieste Firenze 1829 iii. 80. For the legend see supra ii. 950 f. fig. 842 ΔΙΑ ΙΔΑΙΟΝ ΙΛΙЄIϹ), Head Hist. num.[2] p. 686).

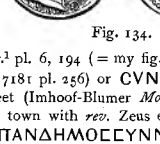

Fig. 134.

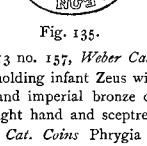

Fig. 135.

[3] Cp. Poll. 7. 105 Χαλκεῖα ἑορτὴ ἐν τῇ Ἀττικῇ Ἡφαίστου ἱερά.

[4] V. von Schoeffer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 2067.

[5] Souid. s.v. Χαλκεῖα bis (cited supra p. 212 n. 0) = et. mag. p. 805, 46 f.

reason to doubt Souidas' statement that the festival itself was sometimes called the Athenaia[1]. Indeed, a fragmentary inscription found on the Akropolis might be held to connect the goddess with the Chalkeia[2]. On the whole we are justified in concluding that the festival was common to both deities, but that Hephaistos bulked bigger at it than Athena. En revanche, in the Erechtheion, where Athena Poliás had the whole of the eastern chamber, Hephaistos was content with a mere altar[3]. The two obtained full and equal recognition in the Hephaisteion on the Market Hill[4], at the foot of which the coppersmiths plied their trade[5]. A decree[6] of the year 421/0 B.C. concerning the celebration of the Hephaistia mentions the sanctuary (?)' 'of Hephaistos and Athenaia' and enacts 'that the Council' set up 'the altar for Hephaistos' and 'make his' statue (?)[8].

[1] Souid. s.v. Χαλκεῖα (cited supra p. 212 n. 0). Souidas' statement is accepted e.g. by E. Saglio in Daremberg—Saglio Dict. Ant. i. 1098, A. Schmidt Handbuch der griechischen Chronologie Jena 1888 p. 280, Farnell Cults of Gk. States i. 314, v. 378 n.[b], C. Robert in the Gött. gel. Anz. 1899 clxi. 531, P. Stengel Die griechischen Kultusalterthümer[3] München 1920 p. 234. It is rejected by V. von Schoeffer in Pauly—Wissowa Real-Enc. iii. 2067.

